THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

AUDIO-VISUAL CONSERVATION at The LIBRARY of CONGRESS

Packard Campus for Audio Visual Conservation www.loc.gov/avconservation

Motion Picture and Television Reading Room www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center
www.loc.gov/rr/record

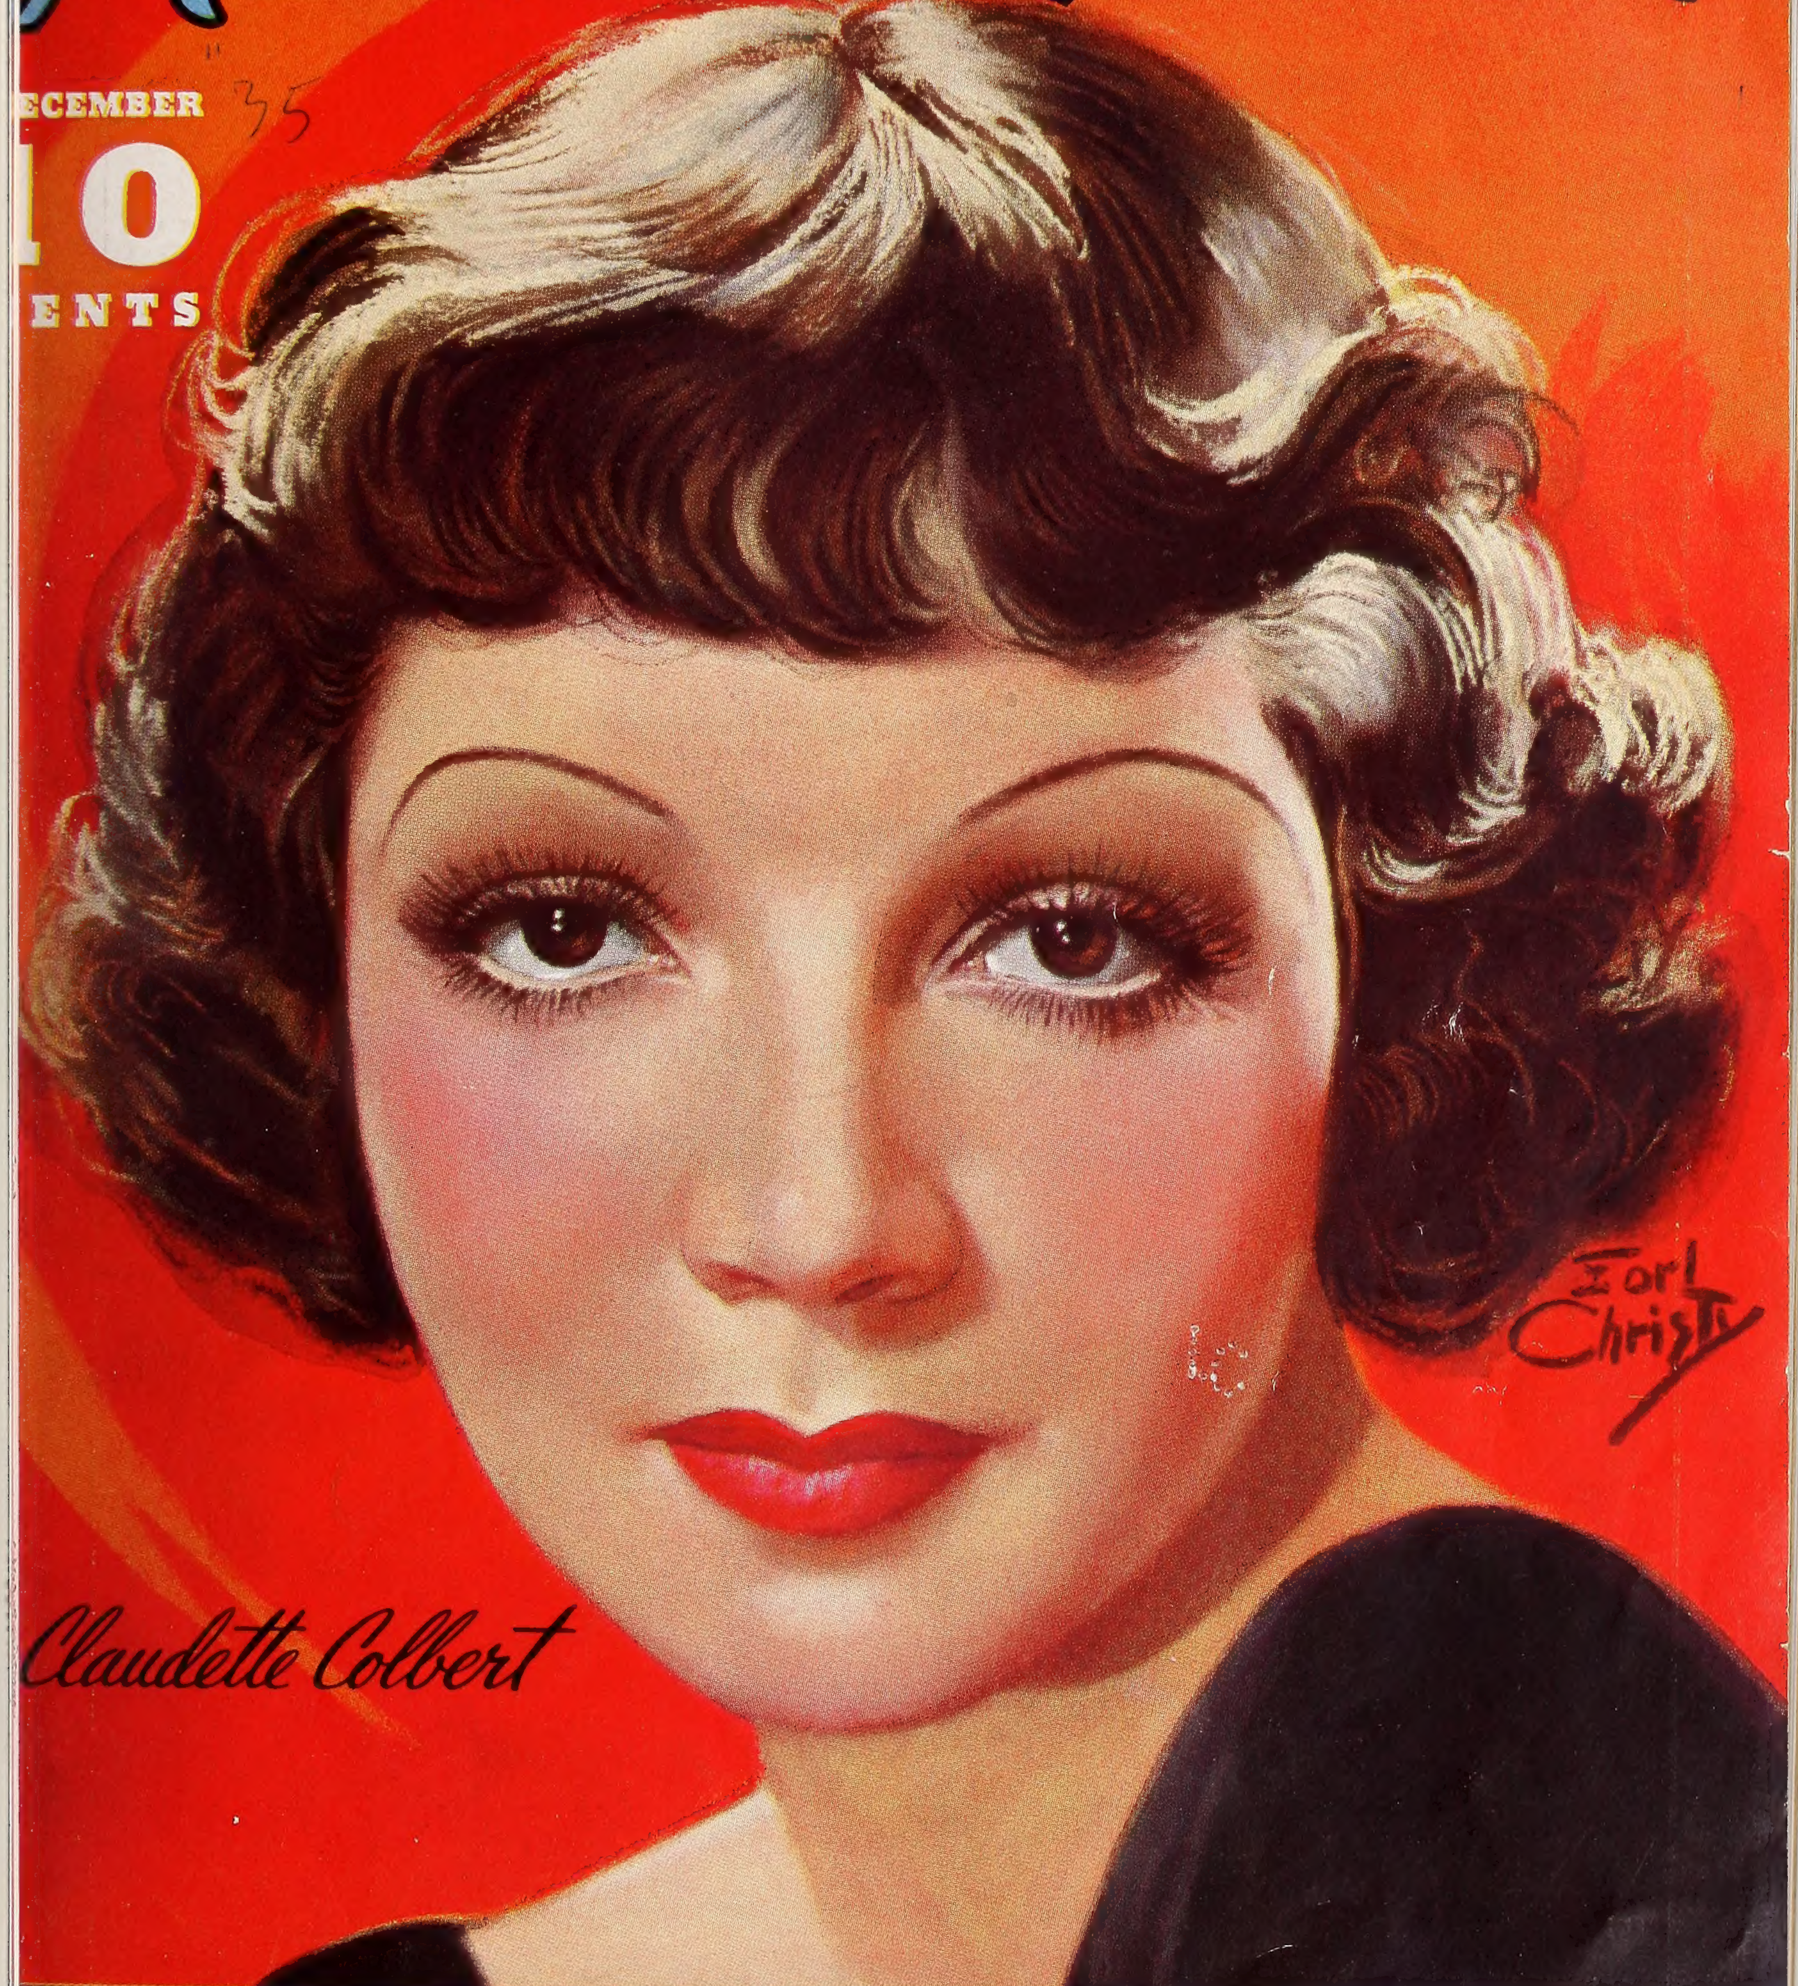
LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

Modern Screen

ECEMBER 35

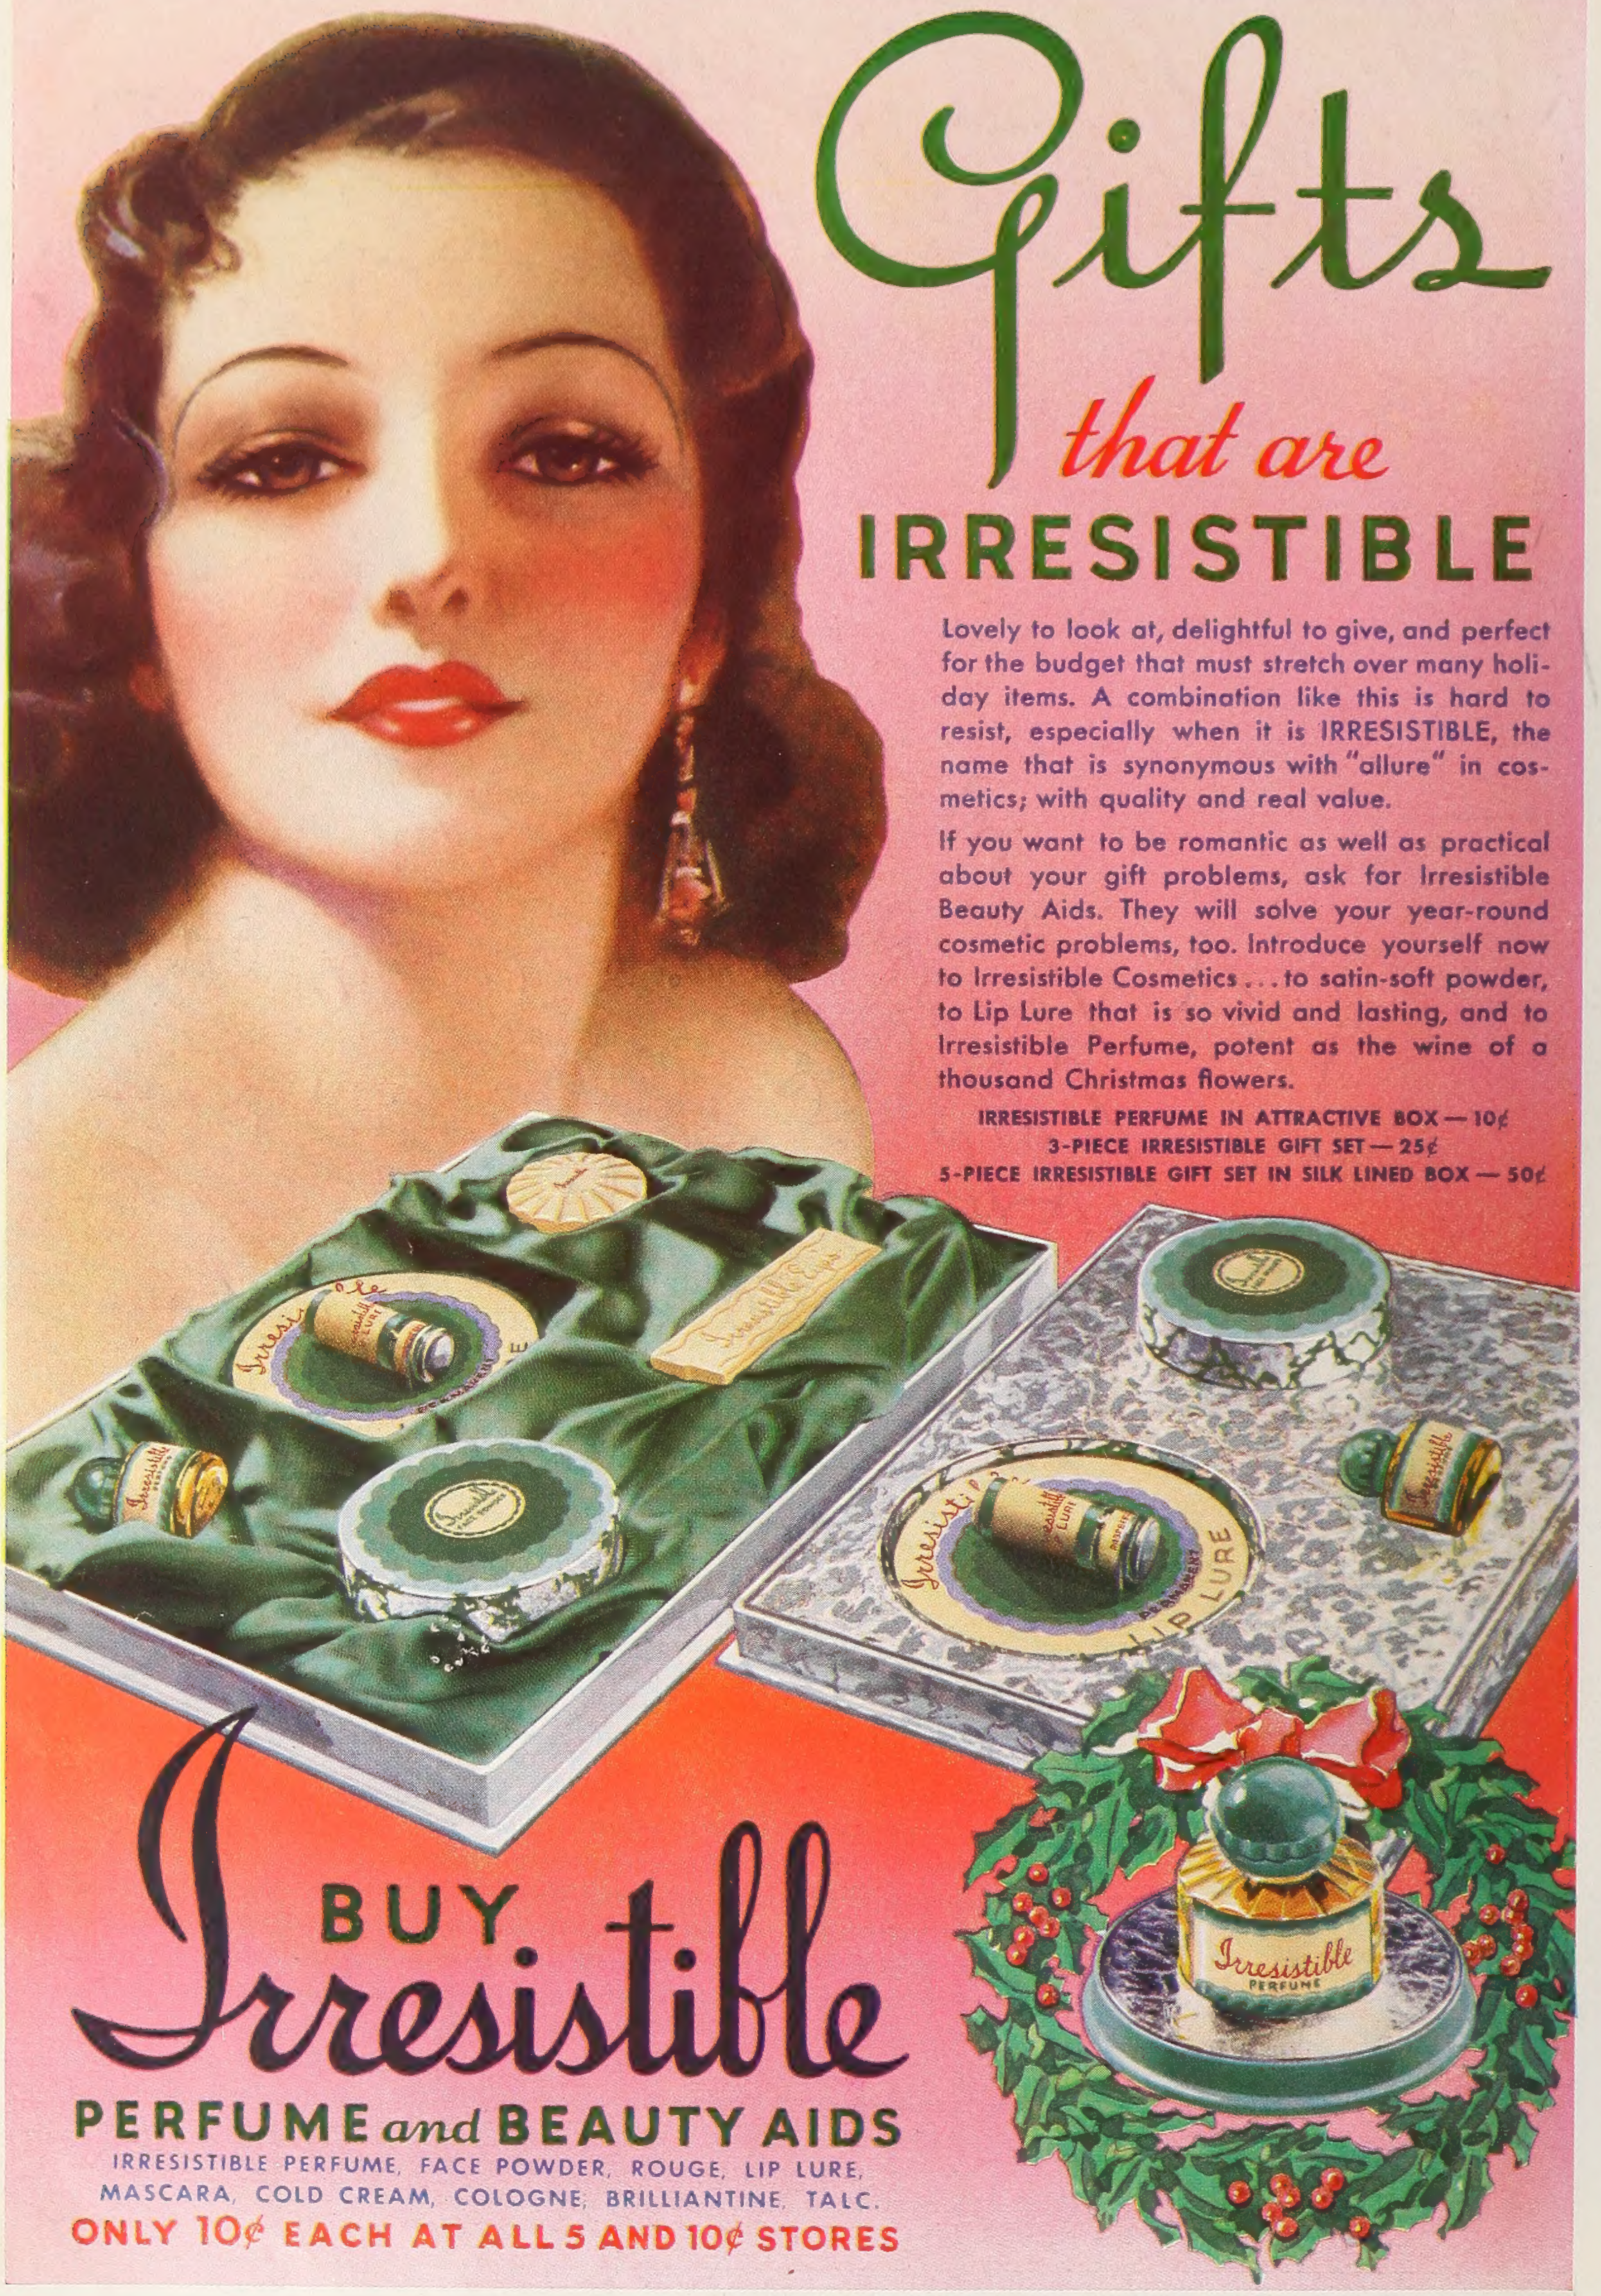
10

ENTS



Claudette Colbert
Earl Christy

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, SAVER OF LIVES!



Gifts that are IRRESISTIBLE

Lovely to look at, delightful to give, and perfect for the budget that must stretch over many holiday items. A combination like this is hard to resist, especially when it is IRRESISTIBLE, the name that is synonymous with "allure" in cosmetics; with quality and real value.

If you want to be romantic as well as practical about your gift problems, ask for Irresistible Beauty Aids. They will solve your year-round cosmetic problems, too. Introduce yourself now to Irresistible Cosmetics . . . to satin-soft powder, to Lip Lure that is so vivid and lasting, and to Irresistible Perfume, potent as the wine of a thousand Christmas flowers.

IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME IN ATTRACTIVE BOX — 10¢
3-PIECE IRRESISTIBLE GIFT SET — 25¢
5-PIECE IRRESISTIBLE GIFT SET IN SILK LINED BOX — 50¢

BUY Irresistible

PERFUME and BEAUTY AIDS

IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME, FACE POWDER, ROUGE, LIP LURE, MASCARA, COLD CREAM, COLOGNE, BRILLIANTINE, TALC.

ONLY 10¢ EACH AT ALL 5 AND 10¢ STORES

PN1993
.M334

Enchanted Moment

[UNTIL SHE SMILES]

"PINK TOOTH BRUSH" makes her avoid all close-ups—dingy teeth and tender gums destroy her charm

A MAN'S first swift look sometimes says . . . "You're a charming woman."

And a woman's eyes may answer . . . "You're a likeable person."

And then she smiles. Lucky for both of them if it's a lovely, quick flash of white teeth, in healthy gums.

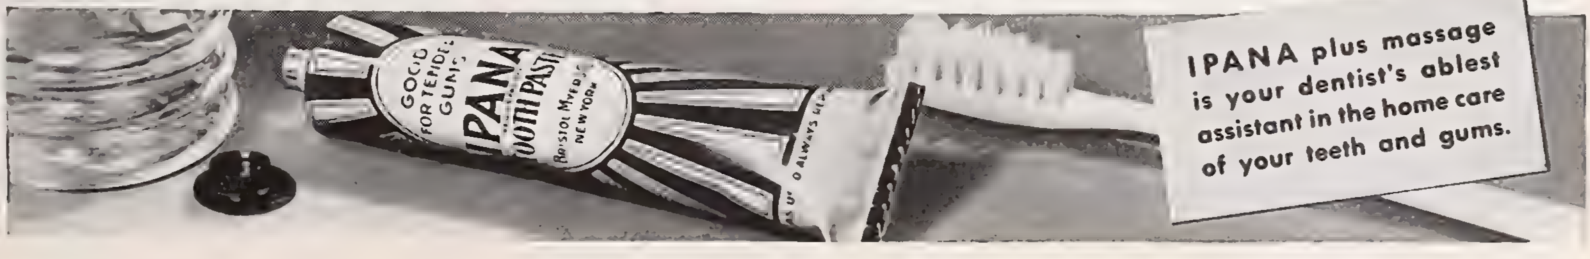
For a glimpse of dingy teeth and tender gums can blast a budding romance in a split second!

WHY IS "PINK TOOTH BRUSH" SO COMMON?

It's very simple. The soft foods that we all eat nowadays—almost exclusively—cannot possibly give teeth and gums enough work to do to keep them healthy. They grow lazy. Deprived of the natural stimulation of hard, coarse foods, they become sensitive, tender. And then, presently, "pink tooth brush" warns you that your gums are unhealthy—susceptible to infection.

Modern dental practice suggests Ipana plus massage for several good reasons. If you will put a little extra Ipana on brush or fingertip and massage your gums every time you brush your teeth, you will understand. Rub it in thoroughly. Massage it vigorously. Do it regularly. And your mouth will feel cleaner. There will be a new and livelier tingle in your gums—new circulation, new firmness, new health.

Make Ipana plus massage a regular part of your routine. It is the dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of the teeth and gums. For with healthy gums, you've ceased to invite "pink tooth brush." You are not likely to get gingivitis, pyorrhea and Vincent's disease. And you'll bring the clear and brilliant beauty of a lovely smile into any and every close-up.



IPANA plus massage is your dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of your teeth and gums.

OCT 31 1935 ©CIB 280018

MODERN SCREEN
NOW SHOWING

REGINA CANNON, EDITOR
ADELIA BIRD, Associate Editor
ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor
LEO TOWNSEND, Hollywood Editor

FEATURES

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, SAVER OF LIVES What her success gives others.....Franc Dillon 26
SPENCER TRACY SPEAKS HIS MIND And it's all praising Hollywood.....Gladys Hall 28
NEW STAR IN THE SKY Luise Rainer's fascinating story.....Dena Reed 30
TAKING CARE OF MAMA Hollywood husbands give tips.....Kay Osborn 32
TAKING CARE OF PAPA And some wives talk, too!.....Muriel Babcock 33
SILENT YOUNG MAN Henry Fonda talks little but gets places.....Martha Kerr 34
THE LONE WOLF OF HOLLYWOOD That's the real George Brent.....Gladys Hall 35
ROMANTIC—NEVER ROUTINE Del Rio discusses her marriage.....Hilary Lynn 36
A TALE OF TWO CITIES Fictionization of the Dickens epic.....Mary Mayes 38
MR. BOLES TAKES PEN IN HAND And answers fans' questions.....Kay Osborn 40
BIOGRAPHY OF BINNIE La Barnes has had a hectic life.....Charles Darnton 41
IF YOU WOULD HAVE A FIGURE LIKE CRAWFORD You work for it!.....Mme. Sylvia 42
PONS & CO. INVADE HOLLYWOOD The little diva's amusing interview.....Ramon Romero 44
"I'D BE A TERRIBLE HUSBAND!" Says romantic Francis Lederer.....Dorothy Donnell 45
CONFESSIONS OF AN EXTRA GIRL Part 5. Continuing her true experiences..... 46
THE MEN WHO MAKE YOUR MOVIES Electricians get the spotlight.....Katherine Albert 47
WARM FURS—GIDDY HATS Furs you can buy and hats to top them.....Adelia Bird 48

SHORT SUBJECTS

Modern Screen Scoreboard..... 6
Reviews..... 8
Good News..... 12
Beauty Advice..... 16
Exclusive Portraits..... 19
Love Game..... 54
Between You and Me..... 58
Modern Hostess..... 60
Information Desk..... 62

Published monthly and copyrighted 1935 by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 12, No. 1, December, 1935. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.75 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.50 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Post office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole Foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E. C. 4 England.

SIXTEEN MEN . . .

From the blood-drenched decks of a man o' war to the ecstasy of a sun-baked paradise isle . . . from the tyrannical grasp of a brutal captain to the arms of native beauties who brought them love and forgetfulness . . . came sixteen men from the "Bounty". Now their romantic story lives on the screens of the world . . . in one of the greatest entertainments since the birth of motion pictures!

Three of Hollywood's biggest stars head the notable cast

AMAZING FACTS ABOUT M-G-M's $2,000,000 PRODUCTION

Nearly two years in the making . . . Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at a cost in excess of two millions of dollars.

The good ships "Bounty" and "Pandora" rebuilt from original plans loaned by the British Admiralty.

On Catalina Island, picturesque Portsmouth Harbor duplicated exactly as it was in 1787 when the "Bounty" sailed.

A complete M-G-M production unit sent 14,000 miles to tropic waters to film scenes in the actual locale. Six villages erected; 5,000 natives appearing in the Tahitian scenes.

Nearly 25,000,000 have read the famous best-seller by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall . . . . . Now you see it on the screen in all its thrilling reality.

CHARLES CLARK

LAUGHTON · GABLE

In Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's greatest production

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY

with

FRANCHOT TONE

Herbert Mundin • Eddie Quillan • Dudley Digges • Donald Crisp

A FRANK LLOYD Production • Albert Lewin, Associate Producer

modern screen scoreboard

Name of Picture and Company	Modern Screen	N. Y. Times	N. Y. Herald Tribune	N. Y. American	N. Y. Evening Journal	N. Y. Post	N. Y. Sun	N. Y. Daily News	N. Y. Daily Mirror	World-Telegram	Chicago Herald-Examiner	Los Angeles Examiner	Variety	General Ratings
Accent on Youth (Paramount)	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★
Age of Indiscretion (M-G-M)	2★	2★	1★	1★	2★	1½★	2½★	3★	2★	1★			2★	2★
Alias Mary Dow (Universal)	2★	2★	1½★	2★	2★	2★	2★	2★	2★	1½★	2★		2★	2★
Alibi Ike (Warners)	3★	3½★	3★	3★	3★	2★	3½★	2★	2½★	3★	3★			3★
Alice Adams (RKO)	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★		4★	4★
Anna Karenina (M-G-M)	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	3★			4★	4★
The Arizonian (RKO)	3★	3★	2★	2★	3★	2★	2½★	2★	3★	3★			3★	3★
Becky Sharp (RKO)	3★	3½★	3½★	3½★	3½★	3½★	3★	3½★	3½★	3½★	4★	4★	3★	3★
The Big Broadcast of 1936 (Paramount)	4★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	4★	3★	3★	3★
Black Fury (Warners)	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	3½★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★
Black Sheep (Fox)	2★	2★	2½★	2½★		2★	2★	2½★	2½★	2★	2★		2★	2★
Break of Hearts (RKO)	3★	2★	2★	3★	2½★	2½★	2½★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★
Brewster's Millions (United Artists)	2★	2★	3★	3★	2★	2★	2½★	2★	2★	2★			2½★	2★
The Bride of Frankenstein (Universal)	1★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★
Bright Lights (First National)	3★	3½★	2★	3½★	3★	2½★	2½★	2½★	3★	2½★		3★	2½★	3★
Broadway Gondolier (Warners)	3★	2★	2★	4★	4★	3★	3½★	3½★	4★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★
Broadway Melody (M-G-M)	5★	4★	3½★	3½★	4★	3★	3★	3½★	4★	4★		4★	4★	4★
Call of the Wild (20th Century)	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★
Cardinal Richelieu (United Artists)	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	3★	4★	4★	3★	4★	3★	4★
Car 99 (Paramount)	3★	3★	3★	2★	3★	3★		2½★	3★	3★			3★	3★
The Case of the Curious Bride (1st Nat.)	3★	3★	3★	2★	2½★	2½★	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★		2½★	3★
Charlie Chan in Egypt (Fox)	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	2½★	3★	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★
China Seas (M-G-M)	4★	3★	4★	4★	3½★	4★	4★	3½★	4★	2★	4★	4★	4★	4★
The Clairvoyant (G-B)	2★	2★	1½★	2★	2★	2★	2½★	3★	2★	2★	3★	2½★	1½★	2★
Clive of India (20th Century)	4★	4½★	4★	4★	4★	4½★	4½★	3½★	4★	4½★	4½★	4★	4½★	4★
College Rhythm (Paramount)	2★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★		2★	3★		4★	3★
The Crusades (Paramount)	4★	4★	2½★	4★	4★	2★	4★	4★	4★	3★			4★	4★
Curly Top (Fox)	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★		3★	3★
Dante's Inferno (Fox)	2★	1½★	1½★	3★	2★	1½★	3★	3★	3★	1½★	1★		1½★	2★
The Dark Angel (Goldwyn)	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	3★	4★	3★	3	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★
The Daring Young Man (Fox)	2★	2½★	1★	2½★		2½★		2½★		3★			1½★	2★
David Copperfield (M-G-M)	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	4★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★

(Continued on page 70)

Critics' picture ratings—5*, extraordinary; 4*, very good; 3*, good; 2*, fair; 1*, poor; 0, review unavailable

Modern Screen
Regina Cannon

New York Daily News
Kate Cameron

New York Post
Thornton Delehanty

New York World-Telegram
William Boehnel

New York American
Regina Crewe

New York Evening Journal
Rose Pelswick

New York Sun
Eileen Creelman

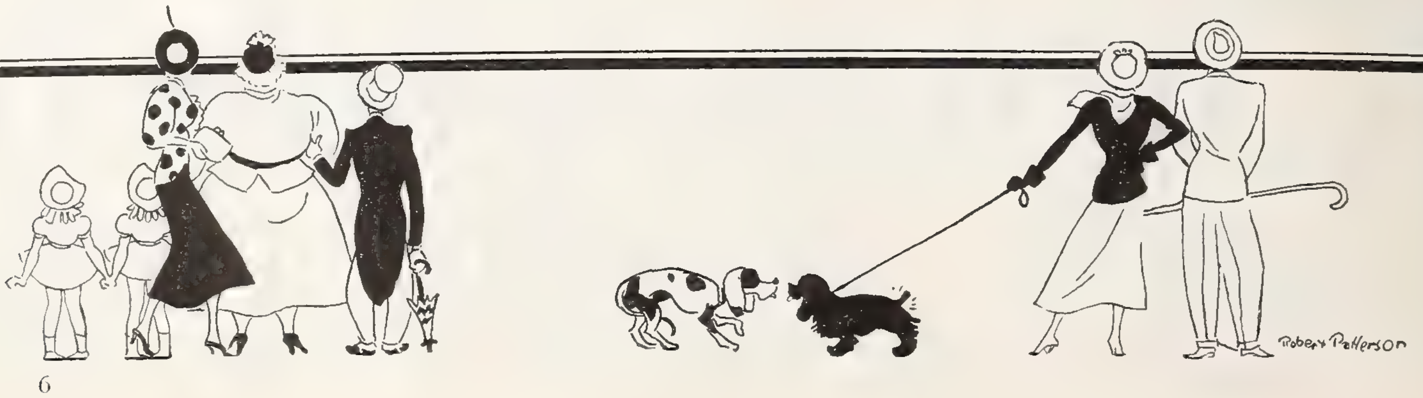
Chicago Herald-Examiner
Carol Frink

New York Daily Mirror
Bland Johaneson

New York Herald Tribune
Richard Watts, Jr.

New York Times
Andre Sennwald

Los Angeles Examiner
Louella Parsons



Coming Soon

to special theatres in leading cities . . . following its remarkable reception in New York and other world capitals . . .
the spectacle connoisseurs consider "the most important production ever done in talking pictures."

WARNER BROS. PRESENT

MAX REINHARDT'S

FIRST MOTION PICTURE PRODUCTION

"A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM"

By WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

Music by FELIX MENDELSSOHN

The Players

James Cagney
Anita Louise
Hugh Herbert
Verree Teasdale
Mickey Rooney
Joe E. Brown
Olivia de Havilland
Frank McHugh
Ian Hunter
Hobart Cavanaugh
Dick Powell
Jean Muir
Ross Alexander
Victor Jory
Grant Mitchell

And nearly one thousand Dancers and Supernumeraries

Owing to the production's exceptional nature and extraordinary length, it will be presented only twice daily, with all seats reserved.
To insure your early enjoyment of this picture it is advisable that you

Purchase Tickets in Advance

Reviews

. . . A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES—WHAT THE CINEMA MARKET HAS TO OFFER THIS MONTH

BY LEO TOWNSEND

Another Dick Powell-Ruby Keeler cinema triumph, "Shipmates Forever," in which Dick sings and Ruby dances.

You'll find grand characterizations by Edward G. Robinson, Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea in "Barbary Coast."

In "I Live My Life," Joan Crawford proves her ability to handle a dramatic role expertly. Brian Aherne is her leading man.

★★★★ I Live My Life (M-G-M)

After seeing Joan Crawford in a series of psuedo-sophisticated roles in which she spent the major part of her time indulging in smart talk with the Montgomerys and the Gables, it is a pleasant relief to find the young lady in an assignment which gives her an opportunity to use the dramatic talent she once showed such generous signs of possessing. Of course this newest Crawford opus has standard Crawford equipment—the idle rich and all the accessories—but W. S. Van Dyke, who knows his directions, has handled it in such a way that one actually views the dramatic Miss C. of several years ago, which should be good news to all of her clients. More good news is the fact that the cast includes Frank Morgan and Brian Aherne. Mr. Morgan as the wealthy father of Joan—although the wealth isn't really his, he married it—is excellent, and Brian Aherne, as an archaeologist who follows Joan from Greece to America, proves himself a swell actor with a light touch which could well be studied by a number of our younger Hollywood citizens. All of which adds up to the fact that "I Live My Life" is the best Crawford picture in several seasons.

Preview Postscripts

Old Sol held up production on this picture for a few days. The company had gone to Catalina Islands on location, and director Woody Van Dyke magnanimously gave them the first day off to bask on the beach and enjoy themselves. They did—the first day. But the second found most of the cast in bed with sunburn salves dripping from their bodies and ice-packs from their heads. It was Brian Aherne's first good dose of California sun, and after a lifetime spent in the fogs of England it hit him pretty hard. Brian comes from Worcestershire, one of the dampest spots on the English Isle. He made his stage debut in that town at the age of three, in an amateur production staged by his mother, who was determined, even at that date, to make an actor out of her son. She was one of the organizers of the Birmingham Repertory Company, and through this connection secured Italia Conti for her son's dramatic coach. But Aherne's only aim in life was to be a successful business man. It was only after getting down to his last five shillings following a try at the cold, cruel business woild that Brian turned to acting. This time the grease-paint got him for good. One of these days you'll be seeing Joan Crawford on Broadway, for she has her eye on the stage, and is devoting every spare moment to study. She's built her own Little Theatre in her Beverly Hills backyard, and with Franchot Tone and one or two other cronies, Joan writes, stages and acts in one play after another. . . . Frank Morgan started his professional life as a brush salesman, but ringing doorbells soon ceased to be fun, so he decided to follow in brother Ralph's footsteps to the stage.

★★★★ Barbary Coast (Samuel Goldwyn)

Produced with the skill and good taste which have accompanied most of Sam Goldwyn's recent pictures, this tale of California's boisterous youth emerges as one of the year's most colorful and exciting photoplays. In the first place, you have Miriam Hopkins in one of her best performances, as the gal from New York, who has come west to gather gold without going to the bother of digging around the hills for it. Next, there is Eddie Robinson, who is perfect as the owner of the gambling dive where Miriam decides to settle down. Eddie is boss of San Francisco, and Miriam teams up with him, runs his roulette wheels and finds (Continued on page 10)

Your Dreams Of Romance
Set To Music!

Dreams of gay, mad, exciting love! Dreams of glamorous beauty .. brought to life by the charm of the screen's loveliest singing star... and poured forth in an inspiring rhapsody of Jerome Kern's music by the glorious voice that thrilled the world!

LILY PONS
in
"I DREAM TOO MUCH"
an RKO-Radio Picture with HENRY FONDA
Osgood PERKINS · Eric BLORE
Directed by John Cromwell
A Pandro S. Berman Production

Music by JEROME KERN composer of "ROBERTA"

REVIEWS

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8)

(Above) "The Dark Angel" is a picture that no one should miss and one that women particularly will love. Sterling performances by Merle Oberon, Herbert Marshall and Fredric March. (Above, right) Warren William plays one of his lawyer roles in "The Case of the Lucky Legs," with Genevieve Tobin and Patricia Ellis in supporting roles. (Right) "The Bishop Misbehaves," a grand mystery tale with Norman Foster and Maureen O'Sullivan.

the boys only too glad to lose their gold. Complications arise when she meets Joel McCrea, a young prospector with the heart of a poet. More complications come when the law-abiding citizens band together to break Robinson's lawless control of the city. "Barbary Coast" sets a rapid tempo almost from its opening shot and maintains it to the fadeout. Incidentally, you'll be surprised at the excellent performance by Joel McCrea, and you'll welcome a new comedian named Walter Brennan, who'll have you in stitches.

Preview Postscripts

The United Artists lot had a wild and wicked look while this picture was being filmed. San Francisco's water-front of 1850 was faithfully reproduced down to every saloon, dance-hall and dive. The famous Barbary Coast was built around the studio's two-acre water tank, on which floated two genuine ocean schooners, transplanted from the Pacific piece by piece for the occasion. Mud and fog were the two props that caused the most trouble. Workmen were constantly busy stirring up barrels of mud to keep the "streets" covered with the two feet of mire which took the place of pavement in them thar days, while Paul Widlcza, Hollywood's famed fog-maker, worked day and night. There's not a cough in a carload of his product, for the old-time smoke and incense fogs are taboo with him. Paul's murky atmosphere comes from an apparatus that shoots live steam into mineral oil. The temperature was 140 degrees the first few days, but an air-cooling system was finally installed which saved considerable wear and tear on the cast. Not, however, before Director Hawks had lost 25 pounds, Joel McCrea 17, and the rest of the crew had lost plenty of pep if not pounds. Producer Samuel Goldwyn and Art Director Richard Day spent months scouting around San Francisco for material and old lithographs on the Coast of the old days. The pleasantest research job was on the old-time refreshments. "Blue Blazer" was a favorite in the days when men were men and whisky was the real stuff. They just set fire to a glass of whisky and downed it for an appetizer. "Prairie Oysters" were the approved pick-up for the following A. M. Into this concoction went a raw egg, salt, pepper, worcestershire sauce, tobasco and whiskey. This not only picked up the researchers but practically flung them through the roof.

★★★★ The Last Days of Pompeii (RKO)

As a spectacle, this production rates high in the month's ratings. As out-and-out dramatic fare, it is still above the average, although we believe the photographers and the technical department are the real stars of the picture. Sets are gorgeous, and the scenes of the destruction of Pompeii are actually breath-taking in their seeming reality. For those scenes alone the picture can be highly recommended. The story is not the tale we all know, for the producers have taken it upon themselves to make a complete change in that department. We now find "The Last Days of Pompeii" to be a story of a poor young blacksmith (Preston Foster) who decides, after his wife and son die, because he has no funds for their proper care, that money and power shall be his gods. He attains his ends only to find everything he has built up shattered before him, and the real truth coming to him. An excellent cast is headed by Basil Rathbone, David Holt, Louis Calhern, John Wood and Dorothy Wilson.

Preview Postscripts

Research on this picture took longer than any yet undertaken by RKO Studios. For a year and a half, experts waded through material on the ancient days of Pompeii, on costumes and customs of the people, and particularly on the architectural developments of the time. Meriam C. Cooper, the producer, took a special trip to that part of the globe where Pompeii formerly stood, in order to give it a first-hand once-over and capture the mood of the place. The magnificent sets which were built on the studio lot were beautiful enough for permanent buildings but were wrecked in order to show the final scene of the smoking ruins. The last scene in the picture is an exact replica of the famous painting from which the film takes its name. On the sets were reproduced the Temple of Jupiter, the market and forum, a section of the Arena with 75-foot statues surrounding it, a shopping section of the city, with the potters' shops, silversmith's stores, wine-shops, etc. There were also built on the lot two houses typical of that time. They were complete in every detail with the rooms opening off a central courtyard as in the good ol' days. Props for this picture ran up into Big Money. For wigs alone, $8,000 was spent, to say nothing of the cost of hundreds of suits of armor, chariots and costumes.

★★★★ Shipmates Forever

(Warner's)

The fleet's in again—and so are Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell. Since this romantic pair has already covered most branches of their government's service it seems only natural that they should now turn their attention to the Navy. There have been nasty rumors afloat that the U. S. Navy was plenty peeved at the way Ruby and Dick have ignored them, so the Warner Brothers swung into action, and we now have "Shipmates Forever." Directed by Frank Borzage, it turns out to be one of the better Powell-Keeler offerings. For one thing, Dick is learning how to act, and although we may be called old-fashioned for it, we always say acting helps a picture. Mr. P., incidentally, is a crooner whose father, a Navy Admiral, wants him to enter the Naval Academy. Dick doesn't want to, possibly because he only recently graduated from West Point in "Flirtation Walk," but he finally consents and from there on life at the Academy is depicted with humor and spirit. By now you may be a bit tired of watching actors in uniforms, but you'll enjoy "Shipmates Forever."

Preview Postscripts

Most of this picture was made on location —and interesting ones, too. Frank Borzage, Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Lewis Stone and Ross Alexander spent a month at Annapolis and five weeks on the flag-ship "Pennsylvania" at San Pedro for local color. The Navy Department evidently likes its activities glorified with Ruby and Dick, for they offered generous coöperation in every way, even to sending two technical experts to Warners for the length of shooting on the picture. . . . Ruby Keeler is still Mrs. Al Jolson and now she's the proud mama of an adopted son, Al, Jr. The Jolsons have bought a small ranch out San Fernando Valley way and are going to live the rural life in earnest between pictures. . . . Dick Powell is a native of Arkansas, but his "discovery" came when he was master of ceremonies for three years in a Pittsburgh theatre, where Jack Warner spied him. Before this Dick had lived a tranquil life back in Little Rock, where he sang in the church choir and worked for the telephone company, hoping some day that he might be the leader of one and vice-president of the other. He drifted into the theatre business after a kind old lady told him his voice was too jazzy for choir singing. . . . Frank Borzage is one of Hollywood's finest in the directing line. His first success was with "Seventh Heaven" and from then on he has done some of the best pictures in the business. Borzage is a quiet, low-spoken man, and remains that way even in the heat of a polo match.

(Contd. on p. 98)

A Big Smile-

and a little Chocolate Tablet

ONCE this lady fairly loathed the idea of taking a laxative. Postponed it as long as she could. Hated the taste; hated the effect; hated the aftermath. Then she found out about Ex-Lax.

It tastes just like smooth, velvety, delicious chocolate. Mild and gentle in action . . . approximating Nature. She found it thorough, too, without over-action.

There was no need for her to keep on increasing the dose to get results. On every count she found Ex-Lax the ideal laxative. It is the best in America . . . according to America's opinion of it. Because more people take Ex-Lax than any other laxative. 46 million boxes were bought last year alone. 10c and 25c boxes; at every drug store.

GUARD AGAINST COLDS! . . . Remember these common-sense rules for fighting colds — get enough sleep, eat sensibly, dress warmly, keep out of drafts, keep your feet dry, and keep regular—with Ex-Lax, the delicious chocolated laxative.

MAIL THIS COUPON—TODAY!
EX-LAX, Inc., P. O. Box 170
Times-Plaza Station, Brooklyn, N. Y.
MM125 Please send free sample of Ex-Lax.

Name

Address

(If you live in Canada, write Ex-Lax, Ltd., 736 Notre Dame St. W., Montreal)

When Nature forgets — remember

EX-LAX

THE ORIGINAL CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

Tune in on "Strange as it Seems", new Ex-Lax Radio Program. See local newspaper for station and time.

GOOD NEWS

by LEO TOWNSEND

All Photos by J. B. Scott

Colleen Moore's ex, Al Scott, and Janet Gaynor! This is the latest bulletin on the Gaynor lass and from their frequent datings it looks like big romance stuff.

One of the gayest breakfast parties around these parts was sponsored by the Eddie Robinsons a few Sundays ago. It was one of those affairs where, as someone once said, "fifty people were invited and all five hundred came." The spacious Robinson lawn took care of all the customers, however, and many a Saturday night hangover was whipped into submission by a combination of New Orleans Fizzes, scrambled eggs and sausages, and waffles served by a buxom colored lass who must have been a stand-in for Aunt Jemima.

* * *

You can check Jimmy Cagney off the list of Hollywood Admirals, because he has just gone out and sold his boat. It was really a sad parting, for Jimmy wanted to become a hardy old sea dog. Talking to us on the "Frisco Kid" set, he dolefully announced the sale and his renunciation of the open sea. It seems, says Jimmy, that one can't have a boat and a movie career all at the same time. You can't live on the boat when you're making a picture, and when your studio

YOUR CAGEY GOSSIP SLEUTH GETS THE

They will be married now. Sally Blane and Norman Foster beam happily after Claudette Colbert's mail divorce cleared the way.

Two old married steadies, Ruby Keeler and Al Jolson. Al looks proud after previewing Ruby's new opus, "Shipmates Forever."

Now you see them and now you don't—Jack Gilbert beauing the Dietrich! This billing is subject to change by the hour!

gives you only a week or two lay-off between pictures your vessel comes under the heading of superfluous scenery. So it's goodbye to the briny for the Cagneys until Jimmy decides to retire.

* * *

Practically the cream of Hollywood society turned out recently for the local opening of Ina Claire's stage success, "Ode to Liberty." The lovely Ina's performances are considered swell acting lessons in some quarters hereabouts, although most of the first-nighters were there primarily for entertainment. It was nice to see Ann Harding among those present, for since her legal battle with ex-hubby Harry Bannister over the custody of their child Ann's public appearances have been few. From all indications she made up her long absence by enjoying a big evening with Brian Aherne. And we mean immense!

* * *

Dr. Joel Pressman, who the gossips say will soon be Claudette Colbert's new hubby, must have been a football star back in his college days. Even if he wasn't, he gave a swell exhibition of broken field running at the "Dark Angel" preview. The doctor attended with Claudette and the Paul Lukases, and it seems he was opposed to being photographed. So when cameramen approached, the Lukases and Claudette formed a flying wedge while Miss Colbert's favorite physician neatly picked his way through the crowd and into the safety of the lobby. Score, at the end of the first quarter: Dr. Pressman, 7—Photographers, 0.

* * *

This month's leather medal for hard luck goes to "Riff Raff," the Spencer Tracy-Jean Harlow picture. Jean and Spencer took turns being ill for several weeks during production, with Spencer leading by a cold in the nose. The day we dropped in on them Spencer's cold was doing very well for itself, but that wasn't bothering him half as much as the fact that he was wearing make-up for the first time. He actually cowered at the approach of the make-up man with his powder puff, much to the amusement of director J. Walter Rubin and a collection of prop boys.

* * *

One of the current questions in Hollywood is: what are Janet Gaynor's plans for the future? Since the merger of Fox and 20th Century no picture has been announced for the Gaynor, although there is still a period to go on her contract. Her last picture was supposed to have been "Way Down East," but after the reported "head-on collision" with Henry Fonda on the set she left the picture and was replaced by Rochelle Hudson. That bump on the head must have gone to the little lady's heart, for she seems to have given up her former gentlemen friends and is now seen everywhere with Al Scott, the millionaire ex-hubby of Colleen Moore. It looks serious!

The Harlow family is having its troubles. First Jean's mother announced she was divorcing Marino Bello, whom she married in 1927. Mr. B., it seemed, spent too much money for clothes, among other things. And just a few days after the Bello divorce suit was announced, Jean whispered to friends that she and Bill Powell had decided that all marriage plans are off, but they're still to go out with each other when they're in the mood. All of which gives the Hearts and Flowers department a severe jolt, for Jean and Bill for the past several moons have been one of this town's most attractive matrimonial candidates. And here's more news! Bill has been escorting his ex-wife Carole Lombard, about town.

* * *

It's getting so a star can't look at another star without also coming face to face with one of those ever-alert cameras, as Joan Bennett and George Raft will gladly testify. Joan and George are good friends and have just finished co-starring in "She Couldn't Take It." Sooo, the other night Joan was stagging it at the Trocadero (hubby Gene Markey is in London) when she bumped into George. The gallant Mr. R., also alone, offered to escort Joan home, which was fine except that just as they reached the door a newspaper photographer snapped them. Now Joan didn't want Gene to think she was stepping out on him, and our George was averse to having Virginia Pine regard him as a two-timer, so a kind-hearted photographer agreed to destroy the print.

Ain't love swell? Maybe Franchot has made Joan Crawford "Mrs. Tone" by the time you see this devoted snap.

You had to look like a hayseed to get into Pinky Tomlin's party, so Jack Oakie is dressed up but Alice Faye carries her props.

Meet Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perry. The bride is Helen Vinson to you and she looks pretty happy as she and her husband cut cake.

As we go to press the score on the much touted Crawford-Tone nuptials stands at no hits, no runs and plenty of errors as far as the press and Joan are concerned. Joan hit New York and Grand Central in a blaze of glory the other a.m. Franchot, who was also on the Century, obligingly did a fadeout at Harmon to leave Joan alone with her public. But somehow, the press got mixed up with the public and asked some very impertinent questions about the rumored wedding and Joan didn't like it at all. However, M-G-M saved the situation for the harrassed fourth estate by letting them have a chummy get-together with Joan, still sans Tone, at the Waldorf the following day. Joan sat on the floor, waving white gloved hands and refusing prettily to mention the moot question while the press had a jolly time talking mere nothings, but "nothing," my dears. Score another five-star performance for Joan despite a thin plot!

■ ■ ■

Marlene Dietrich has just finished "Desire," her first picture away from the supervision of Josef Von Sternberg, and the whole town is anxiously awaiting the preview. Von Sternberg, who brought Marlene fame in "The Blue Angel" and directed all her American pictures, has given way to Frank Borzage. Incidentally, during the making of the picture Marlene saw a number of interviewers, and Paramount instructed them all not to ask her a single question about Von. The interviewers agreed, and everything was lovely except that Marlene talked on only one subject, and that was Von Sternberg.

■ ■ ■

Personal to Mae West: Remember the evening a few weeks ago when you dined out with a pair of gentlemen friends? And one of them paid the check and generously slapped down two dollar bills for a tip? Maybe you were impressed and maybe you weren't. Two dollars is a nice tip, but here's one we'll pass on to you. If you recall, the big-hearted boy friend was last to leave the table, and in a perfect example of timing and poise, he made one of those hand-is-quicker-than-the-eye gestures and rescued one of his bucks.

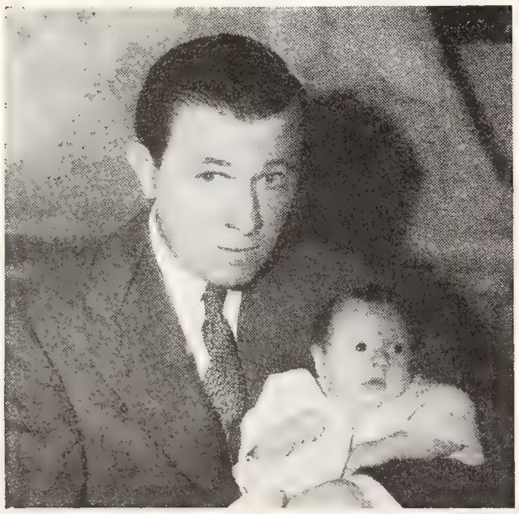
■ ■ ■

Connie Bennett is still the best offscreen actress in Hollywood, in spite of a lot of competition. We mean that when La Bennett makes an entrance in a public place it's so grand that one almost looks around for the cameras and the lights. Connie has a knack of arriving places at dramatic moments. At a tense moment in the tennis matches a few weeks ago, with everyone holding everyone's breath, the lovely Miss B. made her entrance. Full of "perze" and such, she strolled calmly all the way across the grandstand, paused momentarily, and strolled all the way back—she was looking for her private box. Finally, with a happy smile, she located it. It was the same one she had been sitting in every day for a week.

■ ■ ■

We've heard of busy people, but a new high in that sort of thing was established recently by Binnie Barnes. When a girl tosses a te-rrific cocktail party for a hundred or so guests and then finds she's so busy she can't attend it herself—well, that's what happened to Binnie. The party was in honor of her husband, Samuel Joseph, a British art dealer who was in Hollywood for a two-weeks' visit, and Binnie invited practically everyone in town. Just as things were about to start, comes a call from dat ol' davil studio, and Miss B., full of apologies, scampers out. The guests were extremely loyal, however, for some of them stayed on and on and still on.

Personal appearance and debut of June Dorothea Erwin. Isn't she a perky lass? Papa Stu holds her efficiently, being his second.



Just before Merle Oberon left for Europe she attended "The Dark Angel" preview with David Niven, her favorite Hollywood escort.

And what's this? Jeanette MacDonald without Bob Ritchie and with Gene Raymond? Mr. Ritchie was in England on business.

Just to show you how stories get their start in Hollywood, here's the dope on how the Bing Crosby divorce rumor got around. Bing's Toluca Lake home has only three bedrooms, and since the Crosbys are getting numerous Bing put the house up for sale, planning to build a home in Beverly Hills big enough to hold all the present and future crooners. The minute the house was offered for sale the rumors began, but they turned out to be falser than a dollar alarm-clock. Bing sold the house to Al Jolson, who gave it to Ruby's mama and all the Keelers. And Bing isn't going to build a home in Beverly Hills after all. His Toluca Lake neighbors, including Jack Oakie, Dick Powell and W. C. Fields, sent Bing a petition saying that Beverly Hills was too good for him. So the Crosby mansion is being erected at Toluca Lake, and Bing remains one of the lake's respected citizens, along with the aforementioned gentlemen, the Richard Arlens and Egbert, the swan.

■ ■ ■

It's becoming almost legendary with the Barrymores, but when one of them is in difficulty the rest of the clan rushes in to help. For instance, when John, after his highly-publicized pursuit across the continent, arrived in Los Angeles brother Lionel was on hand to meet him. All has not been well between the brothers B. of late, and it is to Lionel's credit that he can swallow the Barrymore pride when an emergency arises.

■ ■ ■

Since Henry Fonda scored such a tremendous hit in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," a couple of producers have been toying with the idea of co-starring him in a picture with his former wife, who happens to be Margaret Sullavan. The idea isn't as impossible as it may sound, for Henry and La Sullavan have co-starred in summer stock since their divorce and may well be talked into doing the same for the cameras. Just to complete the picture, perhaps Margaret's husband, Willy Wyler, could be persuaded to direct. And the blonde menace could be played by Shirley Ross, who is Henry's current heart-throb.

■ ■ ■

We imagine that no one was more surprised than Frances Dee, recently, when she opened the daily papers and read that she was in Reno to get a divorce from Joel McCrea. Not to mention the amazement of all Hollywood which had thought that Frances was down at the McCrea ranch awaiting a new offspring's arrival. Several editions later it came out that it was all a mistake and that Dorothy Lee was in Reno divorcing Marshall Duffield, the former football hero. Just how the fourth estate got so muddled with their Dees and Lees is a mystery—but everyone was glad that one of Hollywood's happier couples hadn't joined the friendly-divorcers.

■ ■ ■

The fashion queen of the tennis matches was undoubtedly Kay Francis. The day we saw her the gorgeous Francis arrived in something very special and very much beyond our masculine powers of description. All we know is that her arrival was accompanied by the proper number of "Ahs" and "Ohs," which is as it should be. The only unusual thing about her appearance was that she wasn't accompanied by Delmer Daves, who's her constant companion on her nights out. Delmer is a scenario scrivener

(Continued on page 56)

Why does NEMO tag its corsets:

WASH WITH IVORY FLAKES

NEMO foundation of silk batiste, Alençon lace and two-way stretch back with convenient talon closing. Light front boning. Very low back. Sold in fine stores everywhere.

"SHE WEARS A NEMO BECAUSE SHE'S SMART"

"Your corsets—since you wear them next to your skin—need frequent washings," declares Nemo. "Not only to preserve their looks and fit, but because perspiration when allowed to remain in fine corsets actually rots away the strength of the fabric!"

A DANGER. Your corsets are made of "live" fabric—need gentle treatment. Don't make the mistake of washing them with hot water or a strong soap! Any soap less pure than Ivory is apt to make the elastic flabby. Use chiffon-thin Ivory Flakes, made of pure Ivory Soap—"safe even for a baby's skin."

A PRECAUTION. "If you give your corsets Ivory Flakes care you can keep them looking as they did in the fitting room," promises Nemo. "Ivory Flakes are an absolutely pure soap—they preserve the elasticity and fit, prolong the life of fine corsets!"

DO's and DON'Ts in Corset-washing

DO use lukewarm water and pure Ivory Flakes.

DON'T use a less-pure soap—it weakens fabrics.

DO squeeze suds through, using a soft brush on soiled spots—Rinse in lukewarm water.

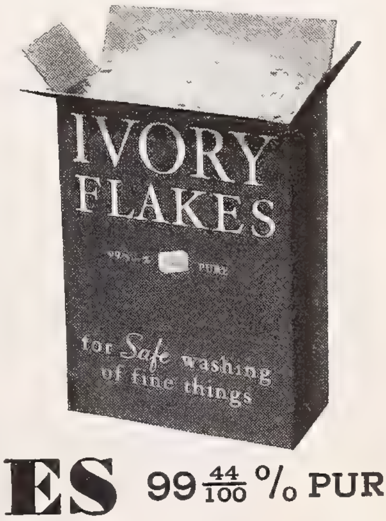
DON'T rub, wring or twist—it may distort the garment.

DO roll in towel and knead to remove excess moisture.

DON'T allow to remain rolled up.

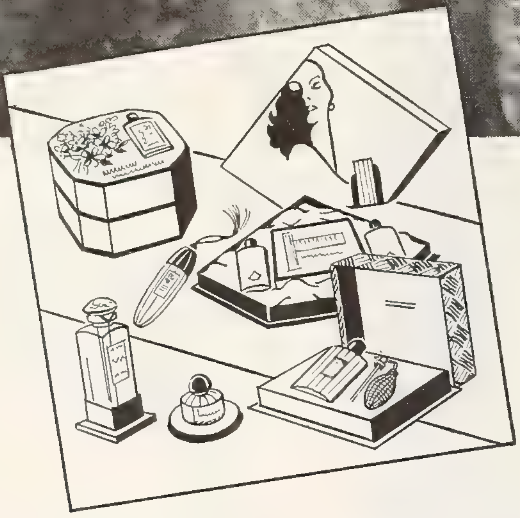
DO dry garment away from heat—Press fabric parts on wrong side with a moderately warm iron.

DON'T use hot iron—Don't iron elastic.



IVORY FLAKES 99$\frac{44}{100}$% PURE

BEAUTY ADVICE



Perfumes can do wonders for one, when applied properly and selected wisely. Notice Rita Cansino (above, left), applying a dash of her favored scent to her eyelids and Mary Carlisle (above) touching her ear lobes with the perfume bottle stopper. Nowadays, perfumes are done up so elegantly that they find their way into many a Christmas stocking. The sketch on the left may give you some gift suggestions.

BY MARY BIDDLE

LET YOUR PERFUME REFLECT YOUR PERSONALITY

IF PERFUMES were chosen to fit personalities, we would have to choose a brand new one for Merle Oberon in "The Dark Angel." It would have to be a sort of elusive perfume that would take wings when you were closest to it, that would never overwhelm you with the definiteness of its odor. It would have to be a blend of such richness and variety as to suit this amazing Merle, who can make real such widely varying roles as that of the young English girl in "The Dark Angel" and the poignant Japanese wife in "Thunder in the East." How different the perfume we would choose for her now than we would have chosen for her in her exotic era.

Before her part in "The Dark Angel," Merle Oberon always played purely exotic roles. The exotic has given way to the smartly wholesome, as represented by Merle Oberon and Myrna Loy, two of the most interesting women on the screen, who have been de-Orientalized for modern roles. And the exotic in perfume has given way to the light bouquet odors, blended of the fragrance of myriad flowers, as Merle and Myrna are blends of myriad personality types in one. Just as you are and as we all are.

Perfumes seem to run in cycles like films. For a while we had a regular run on Japanese and Chinese screen stories. Perhaps that was why my conversation with a film executive, who had just recently returned from Japan, turned to incense-guessing parties, of all things. They have them in Japan, you know.

CENSERS of incense are passed around, each guest smells dutifully of the fumes, and records his guess. As the game progresses, the sense of smell becomes so numbed that it is customary to rinse the mouth at intervals with pure vinegar. (And, come to think of it, a vinegar rinse ought to be excellent for the girl who sat next to me in the theatre last night. I practically drowned in her perfume.) It seems that instructions are very rigid where the guests are concerned at these incense-guessing parties. Etiquette demands that the guests wear no perfume themselves; further, that they must not have eaten any but the lightest and least odorous of foods before coming. It wouldn't do for them to stage a party, for example, after an American Thanksgiving dinner where the turkey is stuffed with sage and onions. But even further than that, they are expected to take a prolonged hot bath just before the party, and at the party they are expected to give their entire attention to the guessing, indulging in no unnecessary conversation.

Well, maybe an incense-guessing party wouldn't be so much fun, but how about a perfume-guessing party? Now I can't pass the perfumes under your noses and require you to take vinegar rinses, but I certainly can describe some perfumes that are worth while "guessing at." They make your mouth water in anticipation of your next party . . . and guess-who-will-be-the-belle-of-the-ball? I don't say that a perfume can transform you from a Lizzie Glutz into a Claudette Colbert, but I do say that it can give you an emotional lift, and a confident little thrill that will do wonders for you socially.

Um-m-m . . . smell the gardenia? And no Joan Crawford in sight. The fragrance comes from one of the smart little bottles pictured in the art spot on page 16. There are gardenia perfumes and gardenia perfumes—and most of them I have felt too awfully extravagant, even for perfume. But this is as inexpensive as it is delightful. Gardenia is a challenging fragrance, you know. That's why it does things to you, and for you.

HERE'S A perfume for you to smell only at a luncheon or breakfast guessing party. It's especially created for daytime wear. It is lightly unobtrusive. Even the hardest boiled boss couldn't object to it in his office. (Have you seen Claudette Colbert in "She Married Her Boss"?) When you leave the office and throw off your "office personality," or when you leave the house and want to throw off the shackles of the wife-housekeeper personality, then there's a special evening perfume for you, a twin to the daytime creation. They say that twins are generally less alike in most ways than sisters. That's why I call this evening perfume the twin of the daytime fragrance. You'll like them both, but I think the evening number will be your favorite.

It will be a long time before the lilacs bloom again. But you can catch the true essential fragrance of lilacs in this next perfume I'm waving provocatively under your very noses. A famous actress once said that she had two favorite fragrances in the whole wide world. One was the smell of lilacs in the warm spring rain, the other was the smell of fresh, warm gingerbread.

There's another perfume that makes you think of all the freshness of a garden in the warm, spring rain. It paints a perfume picture of romance in the rain. It comes in talcum powder, Eau de Cologne, and other (Continued on page 72)

"I do" . . says this California bride

"I do like Camay!"

I do like Camay. It cleanses so beautifully and thoroughly and yet so gently. It's the one soap that helped my skin.
Sincerely,
Margaret Wales
Pasadena, Calif.
September 15, 1935 (Mrs. Roger Barker Wales)

TALL—with honey-colored hair, gray eyes and a smooth, beautiful skin—Camay never had a fairer or more sincere advocate.

What she doesn't quite understand is why all women—everywhere—aren't just as devoted to Camay! And there is something in her viewpoint. Because if you, and you, and you would begin today with Camay—note how swiftly it lathers and how luxuriantly—how pleasant is its delicate fragrance—how soft and smooth it keeps your skin—what definite improvements follow its use—Camay would be your beauty soap, solely and exclusively!

Buy at least three cakes of Camay today. You'll find that its price is surprisingly low.

Let Camay bring your loveliness to light.

CAMAY
THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN
CAMAY
CAMAY

CAMAY
The Soap of Beautiful Women

The greatest thrill in sound..

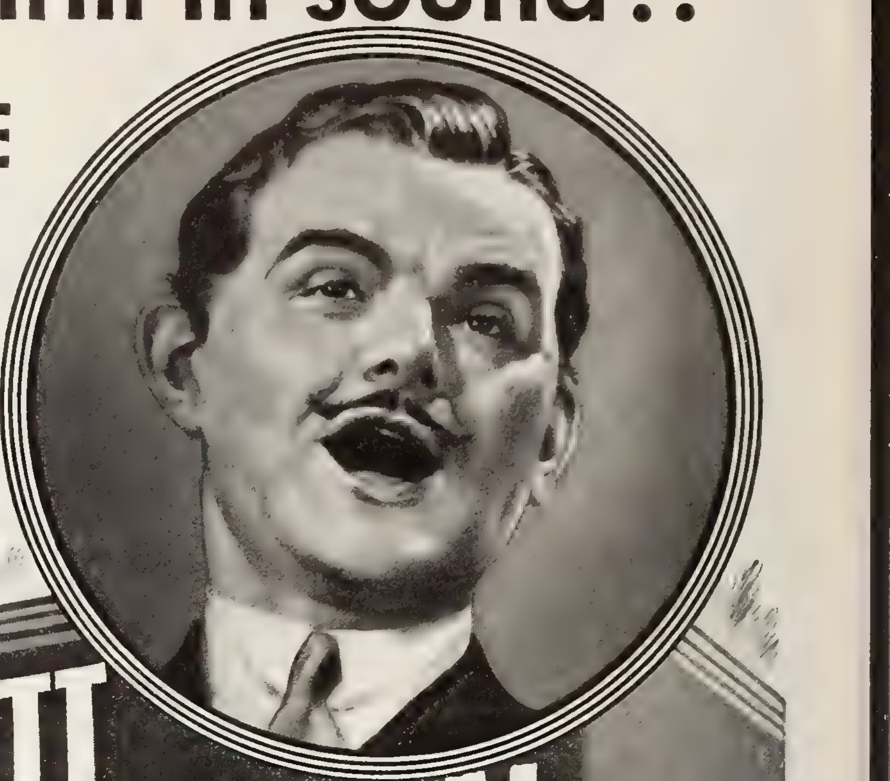
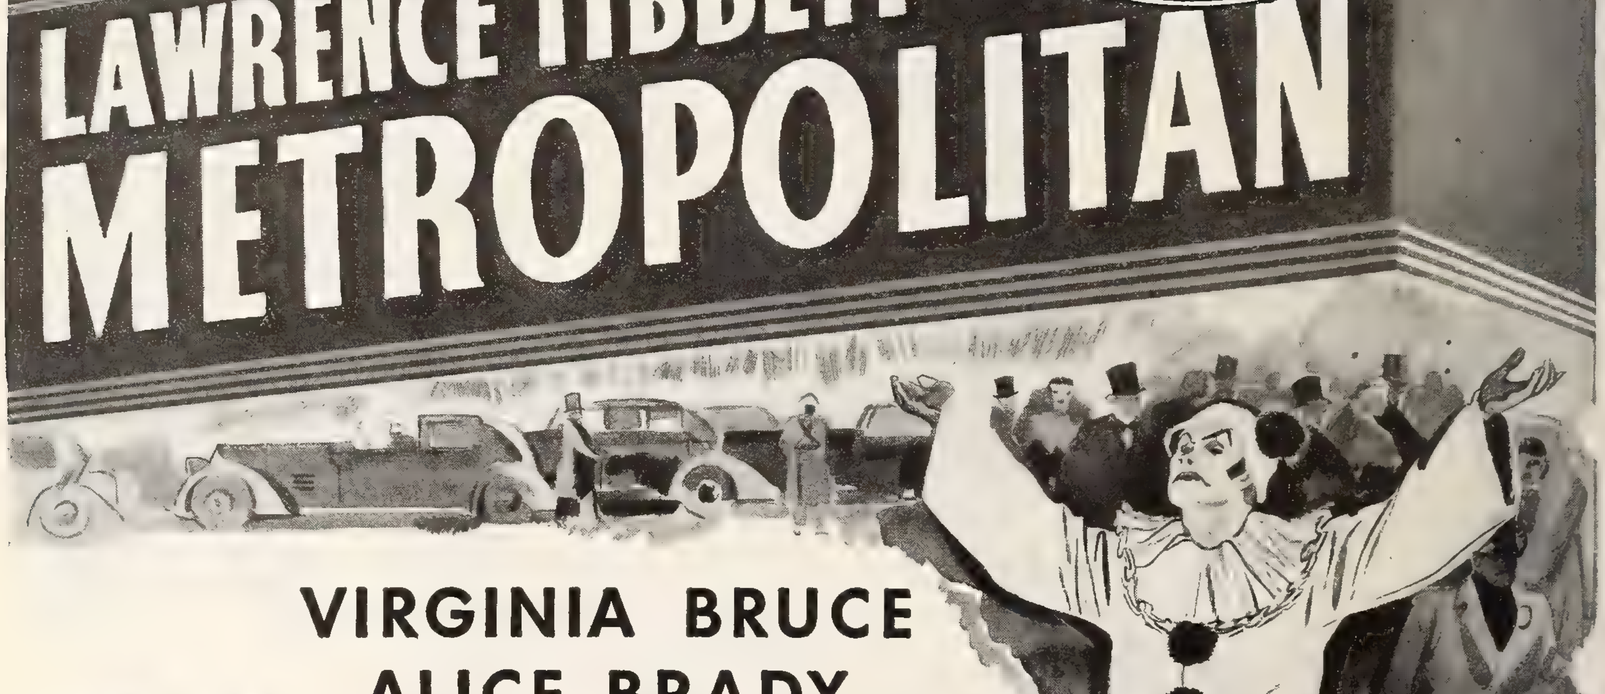
THE MIGHTY VOICE OF TIBBETT!



He stirs you as never before in this great picture, revealing the glamour and glory . . . comedy and caprice . . . rivalries and loves . . . behind the curtain of the world's most spectacular opera house!



VIRGINIA BRUCE
ALICE BRADY
CESAR ROMERO
THURSTON HALL

A
DARRYL F. ZANUCK
20th CENTURY PRODUCTION
Presented by Joseph M. Schenck
Directed by Richard Boleslawski

•

HEAR THE GREAT TIBBETT SING:
Pagliacci • The Road to Mandalay
The Toreador Song from Carmen
The Barber of Seville • Faust

20th CENTURY FOX

La Danseuse

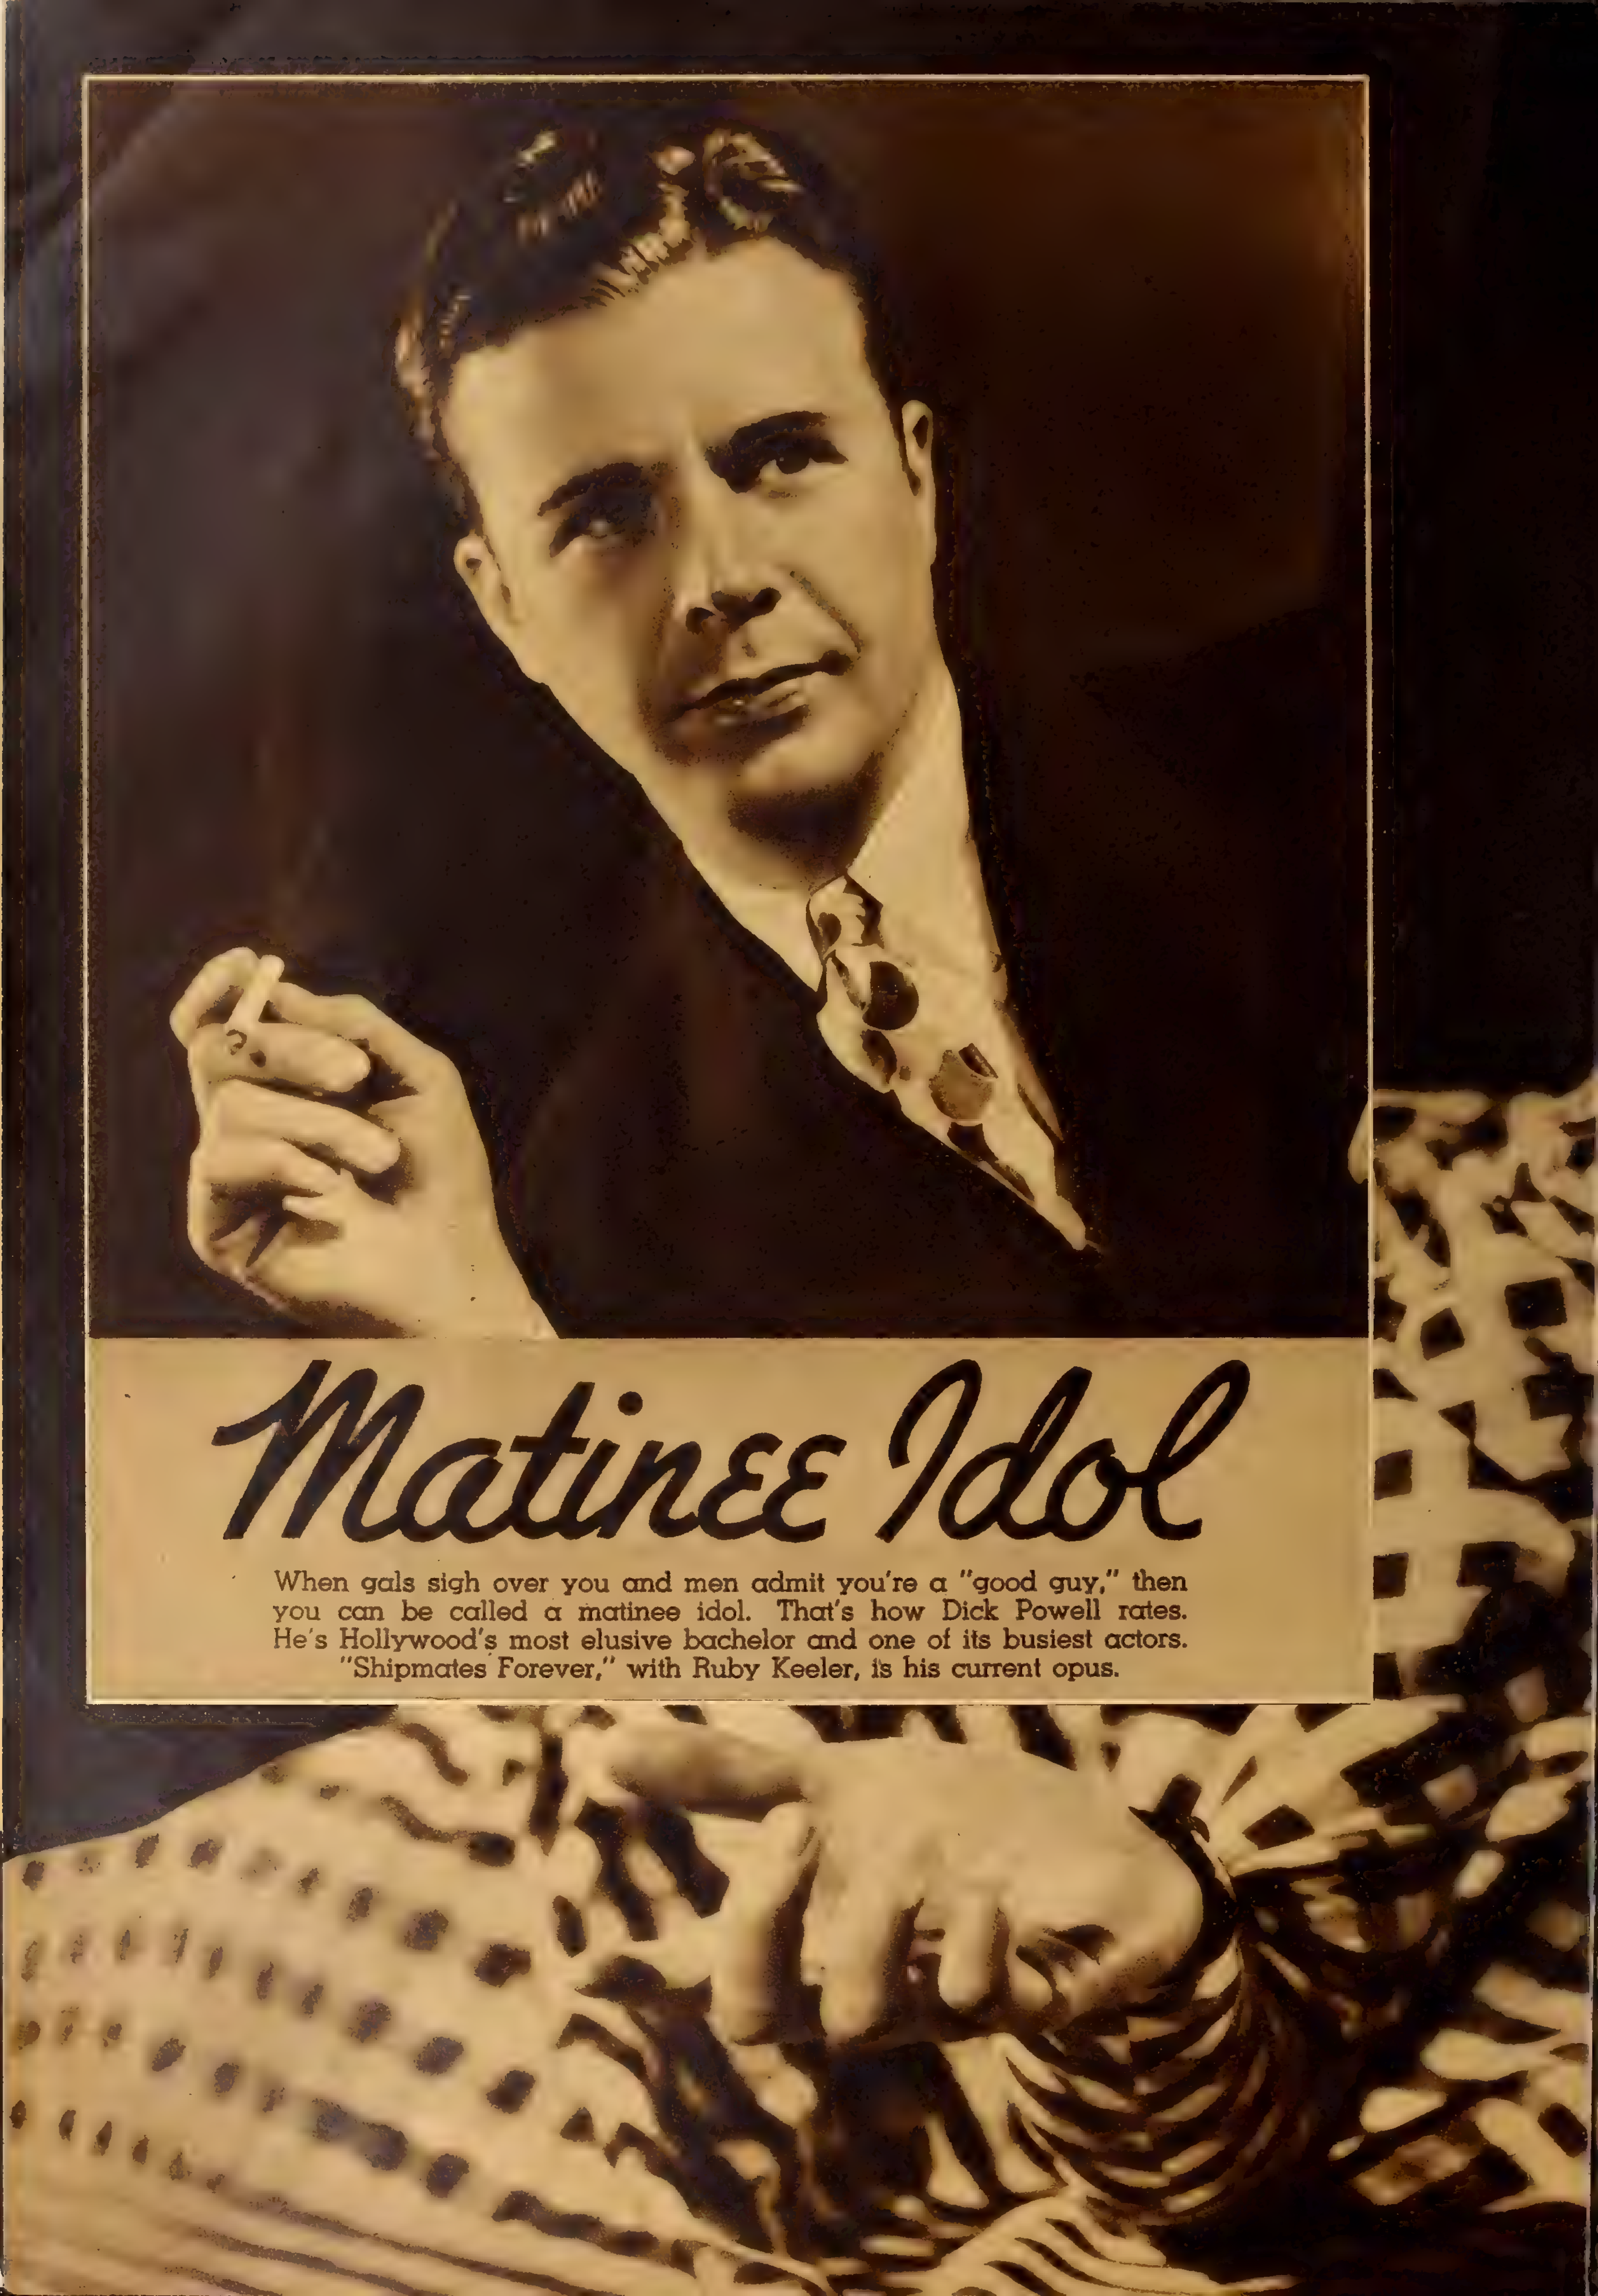
Everyone is busy dubbing Eleanor Powell "the female Fred Astaire"—but la Powell doesn't need any such helpful tags for she's something pretty darn exciting on her own laurels. You'll get what we mean when you've seen "Broadway Melody of 1936." Eleanor has just about everything plus the fastest tapping feet that ever graced a gal. What's more, she's regular. Sincere and real with a refreshingly naive attitude toward her own talents. She's a New England product but came right from Broadway to make herself a Hollywood name with lights and capitals!

Rough by Request

You've made him what he is today . . . well, it's true. The suave Gable is no more; he's a rough and ready gent who battles his way through "Mutiny on the Bounty" to "The Toughest Guy in the World." And all because you fans love him that way. What's more, he loves it, too. The smoothie roles were never to his taste for, he's a he-man, not a sassiety clothes horse. Off-screen, incidentally, Clark likes nothing better than roughing it on camping trips and such.

Warners' White Hope

Over at the Brothers Warner there's a dark-eyed little girl who is busy chalking up some excellent credit marks to her name. She's Olivia De Havilland who surprised you with her swell performance of Hermia in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." She's up to her pretty ears in pirates at the moment as you can guess by the trappings above. "Captain Blood" is the business in hand and it gives her another neat little part to prove how versatile she is.



Matinee Idol

When gals sigh over you and men admit you're a "good guy," then you can be called a matinee idol. That's how Dick Powell rates. He's Hollywood's most elusive bachelor and one of its busiest actors. "Shipmates Forever," with Ruby Keeler, is his current opus.

Tops Again

Those old meanies who whispered that the Hepburn crown was slipping have had to eat their words. After Kate's tender, sympathetic portrayal of poor silly, pathetic "Alice Adams," she can snatch back that seat on the top of the Hollywood heap. "Sylvia Scarlett" will give her another meaty part that should be right in her stride now that she is geared to a new dramatic pace. Those rumors of her marriage to Leland Heyward still persist, but after her silence on her first marriage, it's doubtful that the gossips will get farther than rumor.

Strong and Silent

Meet the screen's number one silent, he-man. Gary Cooper can suffer more stoically, meet situations more forcefully and tie more leading women into knots by his I-understand-it-all love-making than any one other movie hero. Having just dreamed his life away in "Peter Ibbetson" with Ann Harding, Gary will cast his spell next on Marlene Dietrich in "Desire." They should make an exciting team—the Dietrich lure plus the Cooper charm.

GLADYS SWARTHOUT

Lovely to look at, delightful to see—is Gladys Swarthout, who will make you revise the notion that all operatic stars are fair, fat and forty. A piquant personality...a charm and grace all her own...a voice of molten gold...audiences will take Miss Swarthout to their hearts when they see her in Paramount's colorful "Rose of the Rancho," in which she is co-starred with John Boles.

ADV.

. . SHIRLEY

A YEAR ago when things looked bleak and hopeless all over the country, when no conversation was ever concluded without a few groans over the depression, Washington held out helping hands in the form of the AAA, NRA, SERA and many other alphabetical combinations. Then, suddenly, Hollywood went in for the "letters" too, and out in the West was organized the TRA.

It is safe to wager that Washington has never heard of the TRA, although the most hard-boiled pessimist must admit that this one depression cure has made greater strides toward a complete mental and financial re-

"Life-saver" Temple in person.

THE DEPRESSION'S OVER FOR THOUSANDS BECAUSE OF HER!

BY FRANC DILLON

TEMPLE, SAVER OF LIVES

covery than all the other remedies put together.

TRA, if you're still with me, stands for the "Temple Recovery Act," and the big brains of this organization is little Shirley Temple.

TO MANY people, this beautiful child is known as a career-saver for Jimmy Dunn, who was floundering about in a rough sea of bad roles and in worse pictures when Shirley threw him a life line in "Baby Take a Bow." Two pictures with Shirley Temple and Jimmy is tops again.

To Hollywood casting directors, she is that little girl who, through her unbelievable popularity, has caused their offices to be overrun with thousands of other curly-haired children whose mothers are of the opinion that their little pets have everything that Shirley has. "Yes, and a little more," says one fond mama firmly.

To the financial barons of the Fox organization and to many a motion picture theatre box office suffering from undernourishment, Shirley was a Godsend; to theatre patrons all over the world she was something new and amusing to see when Mr. Hays and his moral squad said "nix on sex appeal," and she has been an international cure for the blues.

That would seem enough for one small girl to have accomplished before her sixth birthday, but Shirley stops at nothing. Not content with cheering up half the civilized population of the world, she has done a man's size job of bringing about financial recovery for a great many people.

Three people have a salary 52 weeks a year on account of Shirley's meteor-like rise to stardom. When actually making pictures, which is about forty weeks a year, seven more people have regular weekly salaries. This does not include the hundreds of people who work in and on her pictures or the hundreds of others who are employed in the various Shirley Temple enterprises throughout the country.

DURING THE making of "Curly Top," there was the usual rush of activity in the wardrobe department. The hum of sewing machines, the jangle of telephones and the rushing about of fitters and seamstresses all added to the general confusion.

Suddenly, above the general tumult, a child's voice floated out through a transom over a fitting-room door. "I want to show the girls," the tiny voice demanded. "Please let me show the girls my wedding dress."

Almost immediately the door opened and out came Shirley resplendent in a white satin wedding dress. Grasping her long skirt with one hand and her veil with the other, she skipped gaily toward the sewing room.

"Sing, girls, sing!" she demanded, as she stood poised in the doorway. "You must sing the wedding song."

With no thought other than to obey the command of their princess, for to them Shirley is nothing less, all work stopped and a dozen or so sewing women began to sing, "Here Comes the Bride," as Shirley tripped happily down between the long rows of sewing tables, the recipient of adoring glances as she passed.

"It's beautiful," said one woman. "All you need is a husband."

"Yes," Shirley giggled, "the only thing missing is the broom."

THE PARADE over, Shirley was maneuvered back into the fitting room by her mama and the French designer, René Hubert. Reluctantly, she (Continued on page 78)

Such cunning costumes as this mean 52 weeks of work for the studio seamstresses.

All of Shirley's dresses have a childish simplicity like this pale blue silk with organdy.

René Hubert, designer of this daisy dress, says there's no star he'd rather create for.

She wore this in "Curly Top" but her favorite dress was the wedding gown.

SPENCER TRACY

DRAW UP YOUR CHAIR AND LISTEN TO SOME INSIDE STUFF

BY GLADYS HALL

(Left) Spencer says, "For actors to complain about Hollywood and the producers is like a spoiled brat hitting an undemanding parent in the face." (Below) With Virginia Bruce and Robert Barrat in "Murder Man." (Right) His deaf son, Johnny, whom Spencer adores, and, extreme right, his wife.

SPEAKS HIS MIND

"ME," SAID Spencer Tracy, "I pay for what I get. I also get what I pay for. Every sorrow in my life has had its corresponding joy. Every loss has had its profit. My life, like everybody else's, I guess, is a matter of debit and credit. The scales weigh pretty even if you have the patience to balance them.

"I can't discuss any vital matter," Spence said, that shy and honest grin of his making a ruggedly plain face not plain at all, "I can't talk about anything concerning myself without bringing my ten-year-old son, Johnny, into it. That's because Johnny is the vital thing in my life, you know. It's his tenth birthday today, by the way. He's having twenty-one kids in for a party. I'm the twenty-oneth!

"Well, Johnny, as you know, doesn't hear. He had infantile paralysis when he was too little a shaver to have met up with suffering at all. He has caused me the nearest thing to heartbreak I ever want to know. On the other hand he has given me profound happiness, the emotion of a deeper tenderness than I could ever have known without him, a humble understanding of what courage can be in a little kid, a thrilling hope for what we may build together out of his disasters. Pretty heavy on the credit side, huh?

"My own mistakes—romance I should have foregone—the 'bad boy' I've played on occasion—the remorse of these derelictions, however beautiful, have been balanced by a deeper understanding with my wife, a stronger love of home and home things than I could have had in any other way. Sure sorrow and shame have their credit side. Their faces, when reversed, are sort of divine.

"WHICH BRINGS me to Hollywood—the debit and credit sheets of Hollywood. Well," said Spencer, leaning across our table for two in the M-G-M commissary while that sun-tanned, blue-eyed rough-hewn face of his blazed with an honesty as real as flame, "well, I'm kinda nuts on the subject of Hollywood on the scales. I've said that most of life is a matter of debit and credit. So is Hollywood but with the credit side so outweighing the debit that a man would be a son of a sea cook to do much complaining.

"And I'm not in the soft-soap business, either. I can wave a red flag with the best of them if there's anything to wave about. But I'd like to know where else in the world people could make what we make here. Nowhere! I get so damned sick and tired of hearing beefs about producers, about parts that have to be played, about staying on sets until after sundown, about 'injustices'! Injustice hell! When a producer is paying a man some hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year—which is just one hundred and forty-nine thousand and nine hundred more than that same man would be likely to get for any other job—why shouldn't the producer be entitled to ask the actor to postpone his dinner hour a few minutes? I sometimes think the studios will have to work with dogs if the actors don't get hep to themselves and get off their high horses and down on their knees where they belong.

"I've often had to get out of a room because I couldn't sit with a gathering of people where some million dollars a year or more is represented in actual earnings and listen to the yowlings about the working hours, and all the other thises and thats. Why, blank-blank-blank, most of us never heard of such sums of (Continued on page 81)

HER FIRST PICTURE PUT

Directly above you see the Luise Rainer who made such a great hit as the little companion in "Escapade." And surrounding her you see Luise Rainer as she is today, living high on a Hollywood hill with a brilliant future at her fingertips. This charming Viennese girl made a first-picture success and now she is all set. She waves aside flattery, loves American jokes and negro jazz, tries hard to speak only English but has to converse in German with her Scotch terrier! Her next role is in "The Great Ziegfeld" with William Powell.

NEW STAR IN

LUISE RAINER ON HOLLYWOOD'S STAR ROLL

THERE MUST be something to a star who refuses to be flattered!

Luise Rainer is such a girl. Flatter her, if you will, but be prepared for the consequences. If she simply laughs at you consider yourself lucky. If she calls you "liar"—in a perfectly charming way, of course—you will be astonished to find yourself laughing with her, for Luise is one of those rare people who can do such things and get away with it!

Why?

Probably because she is so different from anything Hollywood has ever known. Because she is so utterly appealing.

Right here let me say that I don't mean to "reveal" her. There is no knowing Luise, I'll confess that. One minute she is a madonna, her luminous eyes shining with all that is good and sweet—and the very next she is the gamin, indulging in impish pranks, her little nose crinkled with fun, her lovely teeth exposed in a broad smile. I don't believe she knows herself, has plumbed the depths of her abyssmal little soul, for there is a great deal to her. Her tremendous achievements are a source of wonder and admiration to everyone. But I will profess to know her at least as well as those few who have been privileged to share her hopes, her memories and her dreams.

I was talking with an M-G-M executive about her the other day, and among many things he told me:

"Luise is a marvelous person. She is the best actress on the lot. She does everything thoroughly and everything right."

The make-up artist, Lillian Rosine, said:

"She is so anxious to grasp—and she grasps everything!"

While Peter Lorre insists:

"She can make those who look at her face know exactly what she is thinking!"

The point really is, I guess, that Luise knows exactly what others think!

ALONE IN a foreign land, acclaimed and fawned upon since her tremendous success in "Escapade," she told me frankly:

"All my photographs flatter me. I know, because I have been looking into my mirror for twenty-three years!"

And what answer is there to that?

But things were not always champagne and caviar with Luise. Her father, a merchant of Dusseldorf, managed to lose the family fortune when she was sixteen. This was the first crisis in her life and she met it admirably. She announced she was going to visit her grandmother, and turning her thoughts and feet in the direction of the Luise Dumont Theatre she presented herself for an audition. Ten minutes later she had been offered a contract, accepted it, and there she remained for two years, adding to the family's income and her own invaluable experience.

Her next stop was the Reinhardt Theatre in Vienna, where success was assured. When only a child she had travelled in Italy, Switzerland, France, Germany and all parts of Austria. She attended no less than eight schools, and she learned languages, "all except English." She also studied art and music, becoming an accomplished pianist. But her histrionic achievements were so immediately brilliant that she cast her lot with the theatre, and after Vienna, she travelled throughout Europe, adding to her fast-growing prestige.

During the engagement of Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author" she was signed by Metro and rushed to Hollywood, and here we find her now, a busy, happy young person entirely engrossed in her work.

"Do you know what I like about America?" she exclaimed, with those same delightful mannerisms which earned her the love and

(Continued on page 84)

THE SKY

BY DENA REED

TAKING CARE OF Mama

"DON'T TAKE YOUR WIVES FOR GRANTED," CHORUS HOLLYWOOD PAPAS!

BY KAY OSBORN

I ENTERED the impressive offices of Bing Crosby, Inc., not expecting to see Bing, but to talk to brothers Everett and Larry Crosby about an appointment with Dixie Lee Crosby. (They're a gang, that clan, and to see one, you usually have to be passed on by all.) I didn't want even to see Bing, but there he was, anyway, in pins and needles—not on them, but I mean in them, literally—for there was the Crosby tailor taking tucks in the Crosby suit, because the Crosby physique had lost weight.

"What do you want to see Dixie about?" asked Bing, his arms spread wide, to avoid the pins.

"To find out the best rules for holding a husband—you, for example. She seems to have been very successful and I have . . ."

But I was interrupted. "Stuff and nonsense!" said Bing, without changing his awkward position, and I would say that at that moment Bing came as near to being bombastic as his easy-going disposition will probably ever allow him to be. "That's a lot of tommy-rot . . . ridiculous to say the least. Her holding me! I'm easily held. Most husbands are. But holding a wife—well, now, that's something, something that requires brains and a lot of finesse, especially when the wife's as attractive as Dixie." (Puffing himself up a bit as he talked.) "If I do say so, I think I deserve the credit in my family! And I can get away with saying so, because it's a compliment to her. Now, why don't you do a story like that! 'How to hold a husband'—there have been a million stories like that—but 'How to hold a wife'—there you've got something practical and original!"

"Have I? Well, it all depends what you've got to say on the subject, Bing, old Bing. So go ahead—my pencil is poised—and give!"

FIRST BING experimented to see if the suit would give. It did, so he sat down. "In the first place, for a happy marriage, the woman has got to rule the roost. I know some men think differently about it but they're wrong. There's no woman living who wouldn't rather boss than be bossed. It's natural—and it's nice. I like it, anyway. Dixie rules our roost, and she can continue to. It takes a lot of responsibility off my (Continued on page 63)

Bing and Dixie Lee Crosby at home.

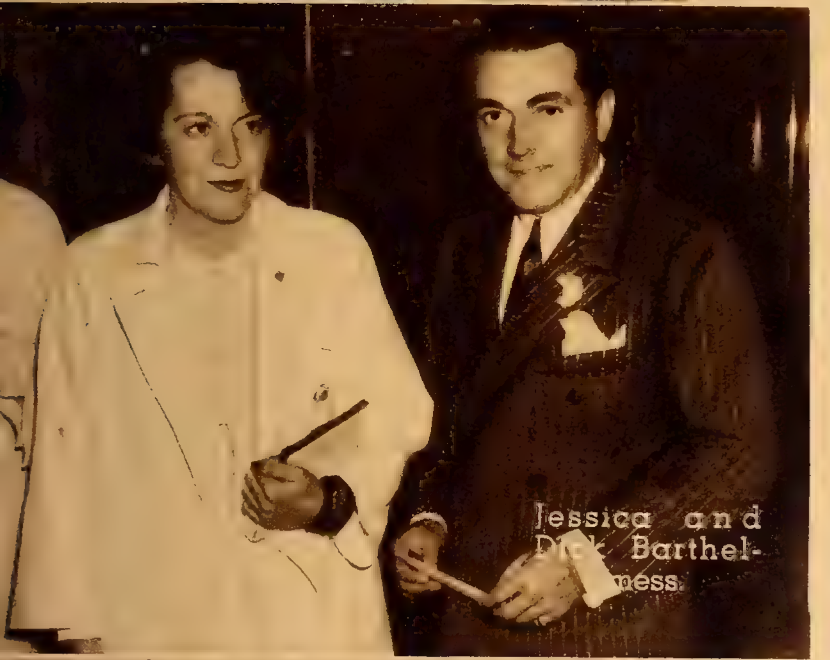
[illegible] Eloise [illegible] stepping [illegible]

Chester and Susie Morris do the town.

[illegible] Robinson indulges his Gladys plenty!

Clark and Rea Gable pose agreeably.

Fred and Phyllis Potter Astaire.



Jessica and Dick Barthelmess.

Jimmy and Billie Cagney at home.

TAKING CARE OF Papa

HOLLYWOOD'S LITTLE WOMEN CATER TO THEIR DADDIES' WHIMS!

BY MURIEL BABCOCK

LOOKING AFTER papa—seeing that his bank account isn't raided, that he gets home to bed early, that the blondes don't snatch him—is a full-time job for a good Hollywood wife. What would you do if you saw your husband set upon by, not one, but twenty predatory women? You'd probably shriek and run to his rescue. A movie wife can't. She has to control herself. I actually saw Mrs. Fred Astaire stand calmly and without a tremor, while a group of gurgling, feminine fans practically rushed her husband off his feet. They flattered him, cooed at him, and patted him.

Someone said, "Doesn't that disturb you? I should think it would make you furious."

"No," said Mrs. Astaire, "the time to get furious is when they pay no attention to him. Being idolized by his fans is part of his stock in trade."

Yet, I noticed that Mrs. Fred stood right there and watched everything. At the psychological moment, she grabbed hubby by the arm and nonchalantly dragged him away, leaving the fans high and dry.

Mrs. Fred is one of our most astute and clever wives. She keeps herself in the background, yes, but Fred scarcely makes a move without her counsel. She spends long hours on the set, watching him dance, later analyzing and discussing his work with him. She makes a full-time job out of being a good and clever wife.

I DON'T know why it is, but there are just as many children among our big handsome male screen idols as there are in any good representative kindergarten. Lots of these well-tailored he-men you see strutting across the screen in the latest London tweed or specially cut tails are so helpless they can't even tie their own neckties without mama's help.

Not many wives, of course, go to the lengths one did in seeing that her husband started the day in a tranquil mood and was protected from any jarring notes, as he awakened from his rest-giving slumbers. This was Mrs. George Bancroft. Instead of grabbing Georgie by the arm and giving him a good hard shake when it was time for him to get up, she used to waft an orange peel gently in front of his nose. Whether the orange peel brought on a terrific sneeze which jolted (Continued on page 65)

Eric Blore, Lily Pons and Henry in "Love Song."

A hit in "Farmer Takes a Wife," Fox cast Fonda in "Way Down East" with Rochelle Hudson.

Broadway's gift to the movies—Henry Fonda.

SILENT YOUNG MAN

MEET HENRY FONDA! HOLLYWOOD PREDICTS BIG THINGS FOR HIM

BY MARTHA KERR

THERE ARE a lot of people in Hollywood who claim that Henry Fonda has had a lot of luck. In the cinema city less than a year, the lad who until recently was merely a producer's gift to the summer stock company, has found himself cast with Janet Gaynor in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," and serving as leading man to Lily Pons diminutive star of the Metropolitan Opera. Any one of the above assignments would have sent the average leading man about town "into the throes," but our Henry seems to have taken it all in stride.

It is easy to believe that the Fonda could easily play the original Bashful Boy. There are plenty of conceited youths in town who have a strong "Ritz" complex and who charge their concentrated aloofness to being that shy. However, it is the belief of those who know him best that Henry really would have plenty to say if he'd bother to put his thoughts into words.

Several years ago he met Margaret Sullavan in New York. He became one of her beaux—the one she'd go to the movies with if the city slicker forgot to phone or if the handsome youth on the fifth floor suddenly remembered that he always took his sister to the movies on Saturday night. Then Henry would get a break. Not that he was ever a male wallflower, mind you. No indeed. There were plenty of girls who would have enjoyed his company, but they weren't Margaret Sullavan, so he wasn't interested.

Finally, came their engagement in stock. It was summer stock in a town flooded with moonlight and honeysuckle. The roles were romantic and Miss Sullavan said "Yes" to the sincere youth who had been asking her to marry him for many months. After the stock engagement, Margaret went to Chicago in a play and it was from the Windy City that Henry received a wire informing him that he was a free man once again, that the little woman had divorced him. He had no inkling that she had any thought of becoming a divorcée in her pretty head. But who ever has an inkling of what goes on in the Sullavan cranium?

To say that this was a blow

(Continued on page 75)

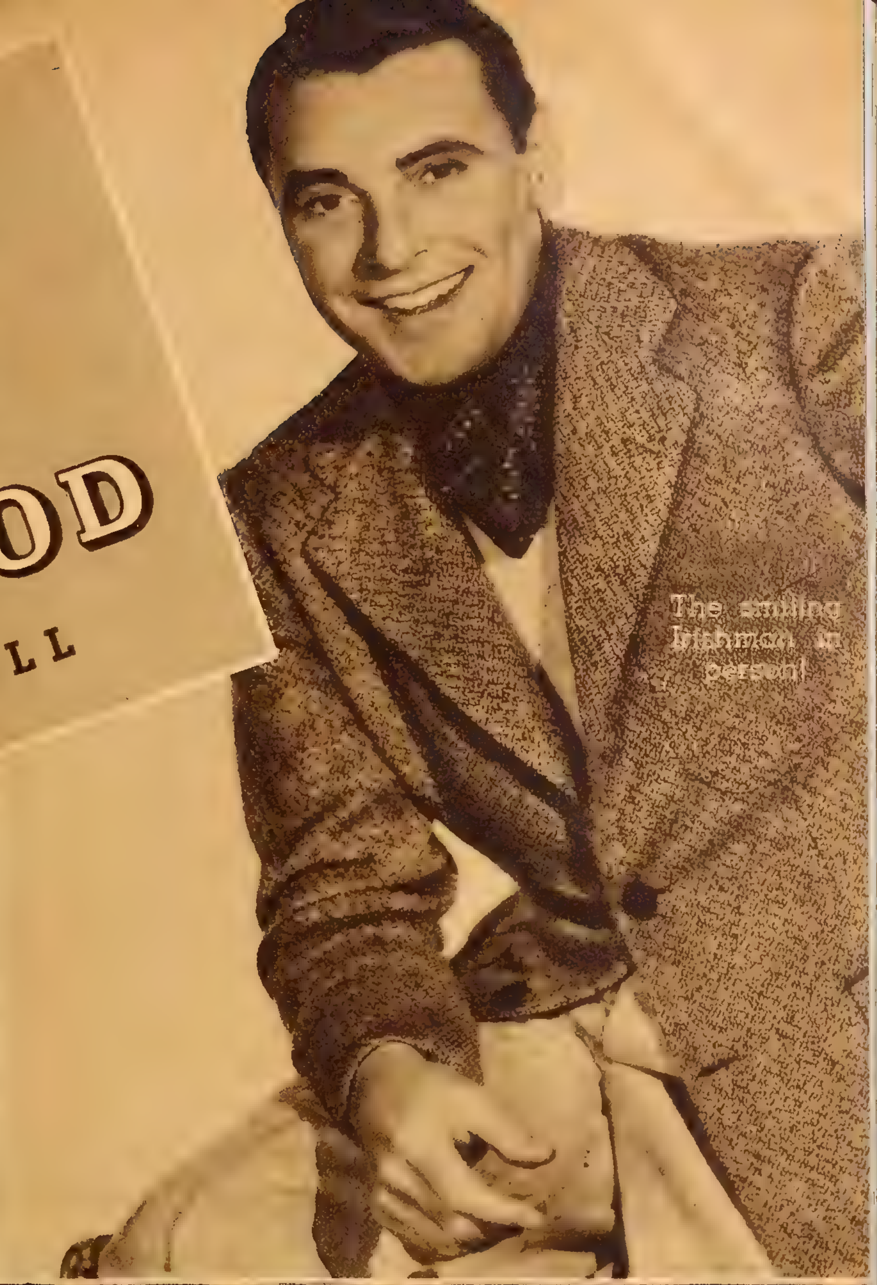
THE LONE WOLF OF HOLLYWOOD

BY GLADYS HALL



The smiling Irishman in person!

MR. BRENT IS THE MALE GARBO WHEN IT COMES TO CRAVING SOLITUDE

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: 'Tis said Greta Garbo is extremely unhappy over her romance with George Brent. Believe it or not, the greatest screen vamp of modern times is reported to have fallen desperately in love with the handsome Brent. And when Brent, who loves to fly and play tennis, seemed to prefer his sports, Garbo is said to have actually sulked. Well, personally, I think this makes her more human. And another thing that makes her human is that she is rowing with Fredric March. Freddie, who is tops today when it comes to acting, has been unconsciously doing a little scene stealing and Greta doesn't like it. (News item some time ago.)

BELIEVE-IT-OR-NOT RIPLEY should know about this. For if there lives the man who can make Garbo (Garbo!) "extremely unhappy" over her romance with him, if there lives the man who would make Garbo "sulk," if there lives the man who prefers to fly, swim or fish rather than to dally with the Solitary Swede—well, words fail me. All I can say is that the case should be investigated and analyzed. I investigated. The clinical diagnosis follows.

I talked with George Brent in an office on the Warner Brothers lot. He had exactly one hour to give me. For within the hour and ten minutes he was taking off in his plane, by himself, for ten days in Mexico. Fishing, adventuring, alone. A ten days' leave had come his way after nine consecutive pictures. And he was taking the ten days not where the Garbos glow nor the Crawfords charm but somewhere in darkest Mexico, with a fishing rod, womanless. . . .

I put two and two together and the total tallied with the newspaper excerpt above.

Nor is it only Garbo, the great and glamorous who becomes mortal for long enough (Continued on page 68)

With Kay Francis in "The Goose and the Gander."

LOVELY DOLORES DEL RIO LIVES A THRILLING MARRIAGE

Above and left, Dolores alone and with her husband, Cedric Gibbons. Below left, with Everett Marshall in "I Live for Love." An apt title for her own life. Dolores thinks of her marriage as an exciting love affair.

Romantic—NEVER ROUTINE

By HILARY LYNN

THERE'S an enormous mural in the Mexican Embassy Hall in Paris painted by the well-known Mexican artist, Zarraga. It's one of those pictures that creates discussion because it has a message—and it's created plenty—for and against! In the central group of three figures, a beautiful dark orchid of a girl, obviously of the upper classes, is breaking the shackles that bind two workers—a peasant farmer and a mechanic.

The girl who posed for the main figure was Dolores del Rio. It was painted during her honeymoon grand tour of Europe with her first husband, the ill-fated Jaime del Rio. In the face of much criticism—particularly from her socialite friends in Mexico City—Dolores finally succumbed to the pleadings of the young artist who had received the important commission, and consented to pose for him.

"I always loved that painting," she told me very simply, "because it symbolized what has happened in my own life—the break from a hide-bound, artificial existence, shackled by old-fashioned, stifling, social conventions to the unrestricted modern life I lead with Cedric today." (Cedric, in case you don't know, being Cedric Gibbons, the famous art director of M-G-M.)

Dolores declares she is one of Hollywood's most modern girls. And it isn't because her house offers one of the finest examples of modern interior decorating and furnishing in the West, nor because she has a yen for modern French and Mexican paintings, nor because she reads ultra-modern literature. It's because she has modern ideas about life and love, and she really puts them into practice!

"I have a modern design for living and loving," Dolores continued.

"To hear you talk, one would think you were living in sin," I said, "at least indulging in a little free love! But how come? You're the respectable married wife of Mr. Cedric Gibbons—and I hear he's not only dignified and reserved, but he's also a very masterful gentleman who won't put up with any nonsense!"

She laughed, and the face which Baron Huene pronounced "the sublimest and most interesting for photographing of any star in Hollywood" lit up with that peculiar del Rio radiance! Even her scarlet-stained toenails seemed to gleam with a special audacity through the lattice of the smart white sandals she was wearing.

"We may be married," said Dolores, "but our marriage has the flavor of sin." She watched my reaction to this bombshell. "That's why it continues to be so thrilling. As long as it has that exciting quality we'll stay together. But if it ever disappears—we'll leave one another. That's a vow Cedric and I made the day of our wedding!"

IN ITSELF this was a startling enough statement to make anyone sit up and take notice. Doubly startling in view of those frequent discussions about Hollywood marriages which refer to Cedric and Dolores as if they were museum pieces. If they're ever seen together on the boulevard, which isn't very often because they keep pretty much to themselves, they're pointed out with pride as one of the rare examples of a happy married couple in America's best training school for divorces. "It's a happy marriage because it's an old-fashioned one," explain the know-alls.

When I repeated this statement to Dolores, she was positively insulted. "It's ten million miles removed from anything that could be called old-fashioned," she said.

First of all, Dolores and Cedric refuse to regard one another as husband and wife. They think of each other as lovers! Which accounts for that dangerously thrilling "flavor of sin."

"And we live like lovers—deliberately," says Dolores, proudly. "First of all, we meet only at night, because we're both kept so busy with our work. And, fortunately for us, our studios are at the opposite ends of California, so to speak—M-G-M at Culver City and Warner Brothers at Burbank. So we haven't much chance of bumping into each other between 9 A.M. and 6 P.M. And when we finally meet for dinner at eight o'clock every evening—and nothing on earth except urgent studio business can interfere with that rendezvous—it's with the same excitement that lovers have when they meet after being separated for a long time."

She smiled exultantly. "You've no idea how exciting a marriage can be when you look at it as a thrilling love affair, and not a tied-to-each-other-for-life, monotonous burden. And marriage could be that for everyone—if they were willing to act the part of lovers, and not bored husbands and wives."

(At this juncture I couldn't help smiling and wondering, privately, whether Dolores and Cedric had ever heard of that Oklahoma institution, the "Husbands' Gratitude Club." These are the national bene-

(Cont'd on p. 76)

Miss Pross, Edna May Oliver.

Donald Woods as Charles Darnay.

A TALE OF TWO

ONE MAN DIED SO ANOTHER COULD

THE MESSAGE . . . It was the year of Our Lord 1784. Up Shooter's Hill on the Dover Road (for they called that stretch of mud and ruts a road) a coach plodded doggedly. The passengers, perforce, walked by its side, for it was all the poor horses could do to pull the coach, let alone the passengers. Close they stayed to the clumsy vehicle, as if for protection, thoughts of highwaymen astir in their minds. The sound of an approaching horse sent them huddling even closer together—sent nervous hands reaching for pistols and blunderbusses.

Out of the fog came a hard-ridden nag. "Dover Mail? Are you the Dover Mail?" demanded Cockney accents from over a mound of muffler. "I'm a messenger from Tellson's London Bank. I wants Mr. Jarvis Lorry."

From the group of passengers a figure came forward. "Here I am. Is that Jerry Cruncher? It's all right, driver," to the apprehensive coachman. "I know him. What's the message, Jerry?"

"Wait at the Royal George for mam'selle," delivered Jerry.

"Ah! She'll be at Dover. Give this reply to the office, Jerry: 'Recalled to Life.' "

"Very good, sir," bowed Cruncher, and departed.

This exchange of cryptic sayings left the others in almost as nervous a state as if they had actually been held up by one of the robbers of the road.

AT DOVER . . . The waiter at the Royal George had his own opinion about the relationship of the fussy, prosperous-looking elderly gentleman from London and the pretty lady, who had just arrived with her maid. With that smileless smirk peculiar to all waiters, he announced to Mr. Lorry that Miss Manette was in her rooms. "Good. Good," said Mr. Lorry. He settled his odd, crimped little wig more firmly on his head. Then, catching the waiter's sardonic eye, he added, quite unnecessarily, "Business. Strictly business. Er . . . I'm from Tellson's Bank." A good man, Jarvis Lorry, if a trifle cramped and over-precise from a life of attention to—er—strictly business.

Lucie Manette greeted him with a sweet courtesy. Bade

CAST

Sydney Carton	Ronald Colman
Lucie Manette	Elizabeth Allan
Miss Pross	Edna May Oliver
Madame Defarge	Blanche Yurka
Stryver	Reginald Owen
Marquis D'Evremonde	Basil Rathbone
Dr. Manette	Henry B. Walthall
Charles Darnay	Donald Woods
Barsad	Walter Catlett
Gaspard	Fritz Leiber
Gabelle	H. B. Warner
Ernest Defarge	Mitchell Lewis
Jarvis Lorry	Claude Gillingwater
Jerry Cruncher	Billy Bevan
Seamstress	Isabel Jewell
Lucie as a Child	Fay Chaldecott

—Adapted from the METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER picture. Directed by JACK CONWAY. From the screen play by W. P. LIPSCOMB. Based on the famous novel by CHARLES DICKENS. Fictionized by MARY MAYES.

Lucie Manette, Elizabeth Allan.

Sidney Carton, Ronald Colman.

CITIES . .

WIN THE GIRL HE LOVED

him be seated. Yes, she had received a message from his bank. A message about . . . Obviously, something was puzzling her. An odd little frown wrinkled her brow. "Are you quite a stranger to me, sir?" she asked. "I know you—I'm sure I know you."

A shade fell on Mr. Lorry's business-like face. "Yes," he said. "Seventeen years ago, when you were a little girl, I was instrumental in bringing you and your mother over from France." He fell silent for a moment. "And now," his precise manner returning, "the business we have in hand relates to your father."

"You knew him before he died?"

"Yes. He was a client of Tellson's Paris Bank." Mr. Lorry fingered the wig, pulled at the snowy linen frills of his shirt. It was becoming increasingly hard to be business-like about what he had to say. "I am an arm of that bank—a mere arm. That is how you must regard me."

Certainly none of these matter-of-fact statements could have caused the color to fly from Lucie's face. It must have been something in the man's voice.

"You are," the voice went on, "in a manner of speaking, a ward of Tellson's—my ward. I have always handled your financial affairs. Now, let us suppose your father had not died. . . . Oh, don't be frightened, child!"

"Mr. Lorry! Please, what is it?"

Oh, he was making a botch of it!

"If your father had not died; if he had suddenly and silently disappeared; if he had had an enemy who caused him to be imprisoned . . ."

But Mr. Lorry got no further, for Lucie had fallen, a slim little unconscious heap, to the floor.

His inexpert masculine attentions and his fussy alarm were interrupted by the entrance (Continued on page 89)

Basil Rathbone as the cruel Marquis.

Blanche Yurka as Mme. Defarge.

MR. BOLES TAKES PEN IN HAND

JOHN KNOWS THE ANSWERS AND GIVES THEM ALL

BY KAY OSBORN

I CORNERED John just as he was leaving the studio some time ago and begged him to please answer some of the many questions that his fans are always asking him in their 2,000 letters a week. "Those same questions must be on the tips of all your fans' tongues . . . even those who don't find time to write. So let's print all the answers in MODERN SCREEN for everyone to read," I begged.

John smiled. "I'd love to. Let's go out to the house, where most of my mail is, and do it right now."

He really smiled! That warm smile that comes with eager anticipation. This was no boresome task to be done quickly, and "gotten over with." Where John's fans are concerned, he is sincere, appreciative and enthusiastic. That is one of the many things that makes John an unusual sort in Hollywood. As far as his fan mail is concerned, there just aren't any wastebaskets in his house. But there is a comfy deck chair in the back garden where John Boles sits three mornings a week, if he's not working, and dictates to his secretary, with the mail-to-be-answered piled waist-high beside him.

More than this, John is available to his fans. A lot of women have traveled across the country with the sole and intense purpose of meeting John Boles, and, almost unheard of in this town, these fans do meet him. Some of them even lunch and dine with him.

There is the story of the New York girl whose family surprised her with a trip to Europe. The girl burst into tears and said she would much rather have the money to go to California, where she might be able to see her film idol, John Boles. She burst into such tears, as a matter of fact, that that was what the family finally had to let her do. She wrote John that she was on her way, and when she got here he saw to it that her happiness was complete, and invited her to lunch at the studio.

Many are the John Boles fans who have since become John Boles' friends. Mrs. Violette Magner is perhaps the most outstanding example. A well-to-do woman of middle age, she began sending gifts to John several years ago. His sincere thank-you notes started a correspondence, which was later culminated in Mrs. Magner's first trip to the Coast, where she was entertained at the Boles home. During the last year, when John and his family went East, they took a four-day trip with Mrs. Magner, up through the Adirondacks. Mrs. Magner is like a mother to the Boles, and John is the son that she has dreamed of all her life.

While making personal (Continued on page 85)

You fans will like "Rose of the Rancho" for John sings a lot with Gladys Swarthout.

John spends three days a week, when not working, answering his bulky fan mail personally.

BIOGRAPHY OF BINNIE

SHE'S DRIVEN A MILK CART AND WORKED IN FACTORIES, SO ACTING IS A SISSY JOB!

BY CHARLES DARNTON

INTO A cold, gray London factory, on a foggy morning, tramped a cheerless girl in a shabby hat and a rag of a dress. Under her arm she carried a lunch box, nothing more than an old pasteboard shoe box which was turned to everyday use. Going to her place at a grimy iron stamping machine, she opened the box and took from it a small picture cut from a magazine. This she fixed to her incongruous treadmill where she could see it for the long day ahead. "My eye!" remarked the girl next to her. "Don't tell me it's the Prince of Wyles?"

"No," the hopeless romanticist was told, "it's Lillian Russell. She was called The American Beauty, and I'd rather be like her than any other woman in the world."

Into a warm, bright Hollywood room on a sunny morning breezed a joyous creature trim and smart in sky-blue pajamas. A soft hat rakishly perched upon her gold-shot hair set off her refreshing charm. She held out a friendly hand in greeting. Then she drew forth a platinum-framed photograph which she placed admiringly upon the table. "I simply can't quite make myself believe I've somehow lived to be her in the film 'Diamond Jim,'" marvelled the one-time London factory girl, Binnie Barnes.

"Has it been so great a change?"

"Look at me!" she challenged—and that wasn't hard. "Nothing could possibly be greater than changing from what I was to Lillian Russell. It takes me back to that day when I worked at a racketty machine from nine in the morning till seven at night for a pound a week—five dollars. Not that I minded. It really was easier than my first job, when I had to get up at four every morning and drive a milk cart about the London streets."

What a background! But I couldn't help wondering why an English actress had been chosen to play an American beauty.

"You can't be more surprised than I was," she said. "It knocked me right off my pins. You see, they cabled me to come over and play Miss Russell's chum, Edna McCauley, the fashionable dressmaker. But when I got here, they were in a jam and they grabbed me to get them out of it. They'd tested about a thousand girls for the Lillian Russell part, but although they got beauty galore, they couldn't get just what they were after. They wanted someone sympathetic."

"Miss Russell was," I recalled.

"Then you knew her!" exclaimed Binnie, wide-eyed.

Explaining that I'd known Miss Russell in her Casino and Weber and Fields days, I assumed that the slender Binnie embodied the "Beauteous One" of an earlier date.

"Yes," she replied, "when Miss Russell was at Tony Pastor's and just entering her Broadway career. She was twenty-eight."

"And you're——?" (Courage, man!)

"Twenty-six."

Singing with the angels, Lillian Russell, who had a way of keeping her youth out of Father Time's hands, must have raised a note of thanks.

"One thing that encouraged me was a yellowed program of the bill at Tony Pastor's announcing, 'Lillian Russell in English Ballads.' As I'd sung them I felt we had something in common. And when it came to playing her I wasn't afraid of my English accent. It isn't very noticeable, is it? You know, I've been taken for an American girl ever since I went (Continued on page 66)

Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes and Edward Arnold in the successful Universal film, "Diamond Jim."

When Binnie Barnes played Lillian Russell in "Diamond Jim," she realized a lifetime ambition.

Sylvia divulges Joan's beauty and health habits.

Joan Personette, the Modern Screen reader Sylvia chose as bearing the greatest resemblance to La Crawford.

BE SLIM AND REMAIN HEALTHY—LOSE THE SYLVIA WAY

BY MADAME SYLVIA

IF YOU WOULD HAVE A FIGURE LIKE CRAWFORD

OKAY, Joan Personette, just take a look at your picture published right here in MODERN SCREEN!

What a swell baby you are! And you don't stop at just looking like Joan Crawford, you even have her first name. That last name is pretty cute, too. What's this Personette business? Don't you know how to spell personality? Well, whether you spell it or not, you've got it.

Suppose you had the advantages of grand lighting, skillful photographers and make-up experts as Joan Crawford has! If they took that little pan of yours and gave it the works as they gave it to Crawford you'd see something swell.

But what's the matter, honey? Do you need that prop to hold you up? You won't need it after you've received the personal letter from me telling you exactly what to do to perfect yourself. You'll throw away that spear, hold up your shoulders, pull in your tummy and look the world smack in the eye with a flashing smile.

SPEAKING of smiles, where is your smile, Joan Personette? Were you afraid, maybe, that your teeth aren't quite so pearly as the Hollywood belles'? Well, let me tell you something, lots of the Hollywood pearls are cultured. Half the teeth in Hollywood have been straightened or are covered by porcelain caps. And in this day of modern dentistry there is no excuse for anyone—movie star or stenographer—to have unattractive teeth.

Never mind, baby, I'm one jump ahead of you. I know what you're thinking. You're saying, "That's all very well and good but where in the name of Will Hays am I going to get the money for expensive dentistry?" And that brings me to something I've wanted to say to all of you for a long time.

When you want a thing badly enough you can always find a way to get it! (And that goes for beauty and health, too. If you really want it you can have it.) You buy little luxuries and clothes on the installment plan, I'll bet. You make sacrifices for a new coat, maybe. Whatever you really want you can get!

And figuring out a way is good for your character. I mean that. But I'm giving it to you straight. The courage, the will power and the determination that it takes to "find a way" and go through with it makes you a better person.

Look at the movie stars. When the new girls are signed to long-term contracts,

(Continued on page 74)

Read what Sylvia has to say to Miss Personette and you girls who have or would like a Crawford figure.

Work with Sylvia and take off that excess weight! Her famous diets and exercises lop off 15 pounds a month

In spite of her fame as an opera singer, and now a movie star, Lily Pons is regular.

In the happy days before Miss Pons broke her engagement to Dr. Fritz von der Becke.

PONS & CO. INVADE Hollywood

BY RAMON ROMERO

SHE IS no bigger than a minute, weighs but ninety pounds with her clothes on, and looks like a miniature Mona Lisa. Standing beside Jeritza or Farrar, she would diminish into a a female Tom Thumb. She has reached the highest range in music, but in spite of her fame she remains as simple as a child. Meet Lily Pons, Grand Opera's latest contribution to the steadily growing list of songbirds who are bringing to the screens of the world a renaissance in music.

When Miss Pons makes her debut in "Love Song," she is expected to be as phenomenal a success in the cinema as she was on the night of her operatic debut at the Mulhouse in Alsace Lorraine, when she brought the musical critics to her feet. Aside from a bell-like voice, it is felt that her diminutive personality will do much to endear her to film fans who demand their heroines slim and slight.

Minus the usual fanfare of trumpets, the little French doll of Opera appeared suddenly one day in Hollywood to be introduced at a press tea at the Knickerbocker. Dressed simply in a linen sport outfit, she seemed anything but a glamorous star of the Metropolitan. Unaffected and ingratiating, she met each new person with wide-eyed interest, eager to explore into every new angle of movie production, bombarding reporters with questions, while each succumbed completely under the Pons charm. News went out the next morning that Lily was regular!

Thus, with one wise, diplomatic sweep she smote to smithereens the rumor which had circulated up and down the Boulevard that something approaching "the tops" in temperament was about to hit the town. Stories leaked out from the RKO lot that when La Pons arrived, she would bring with her from Paris and New York a retinue of servants, advisors, music teachers and whatnots that would set a new record for visiting celebrities. In fact the Pons pilgrimage to Hollywood would be in the nature of a Safari bordering on extravaganza. But at the tea she was inconspicuous enough to be mistaken for her producer's secretary!

A few days after her arrival I met Pons & Co. in the mansion she had leased on Los Felix Boulevard. Unincorporated, boasting no officials, without any stock to sell, and officially without even a company title, the invading Ponites had quickly settled down to the serious business of work, in the large, rambling vine-covered house, which might easily have been a villa on the Italian Riviera.

Pons herself met me in the garden, and led the way into a reception room for which I anticipated would be a private interview! Ah! Sweet anticipation! From behind the closed doors of the nearby music room I could hear melodic strains of "Pons' repertoire" doing things to a piano. In her cute, broken (Continued on page 94)

A BONA FIDE PRIMA DONNA COMES TO TOWN

"I'D BE A TERRIBLE HUSBAND"

...AND FRANCIS LEDERER, NOT SPARING HIMSELF, GIVES EIGHT REASONS WHY

(Left) Frances Dee and Francis Lederer make "The Gay Deception" a delightful comedy.

BY DOROTHY DONNELL

IN THE LOBBY of a Budapest theatre the frock-coated, gardenia-buttonholed manager stood complacently surveying the throng of patrons hurrying from their cars. It was within ten minutes of the curtain's rise and the evening's events were proceeding in orderly manner. Suddenly in the midst of top hats and evening cloaks burst a young man with wild black hair, dressed shabbily in threadbare grey, carrying a white linen jacket on his arm. A young man in a hurry.

"If you please," he said, panting and smiling, to the manager, "would you be so very kind as to lend me—for just half an hour—your trousers?"

It is a tribute to the young man's charm and radiant smile that the manager did not call the police. It is a tribute to his intense earnestness and sincerity that the request even seemed reasonable.

"If you please, quickly! Or it will be too late," gasped the newcomer, seizing his arm and steering him down a passage backstage. "It is so terribly important, you understand! The first chance I have had in a month. Only a waiter's part but who can tell? It might lead to something. Naturally I could not play a waiter in grey—all the world knows that waiters wear black trousers. The coat I borrowed from a barber. I took it off him. He seemed a little astonished but he will understand when I return it and explain. Only nowhere could I get the rest of my costume. I stopped men in the street. I begged them. But no one—none," said the young man tragically, "would lend me his trousers! Until you . . . ah . . . thank you! Thank you . . . a thousand thanks."

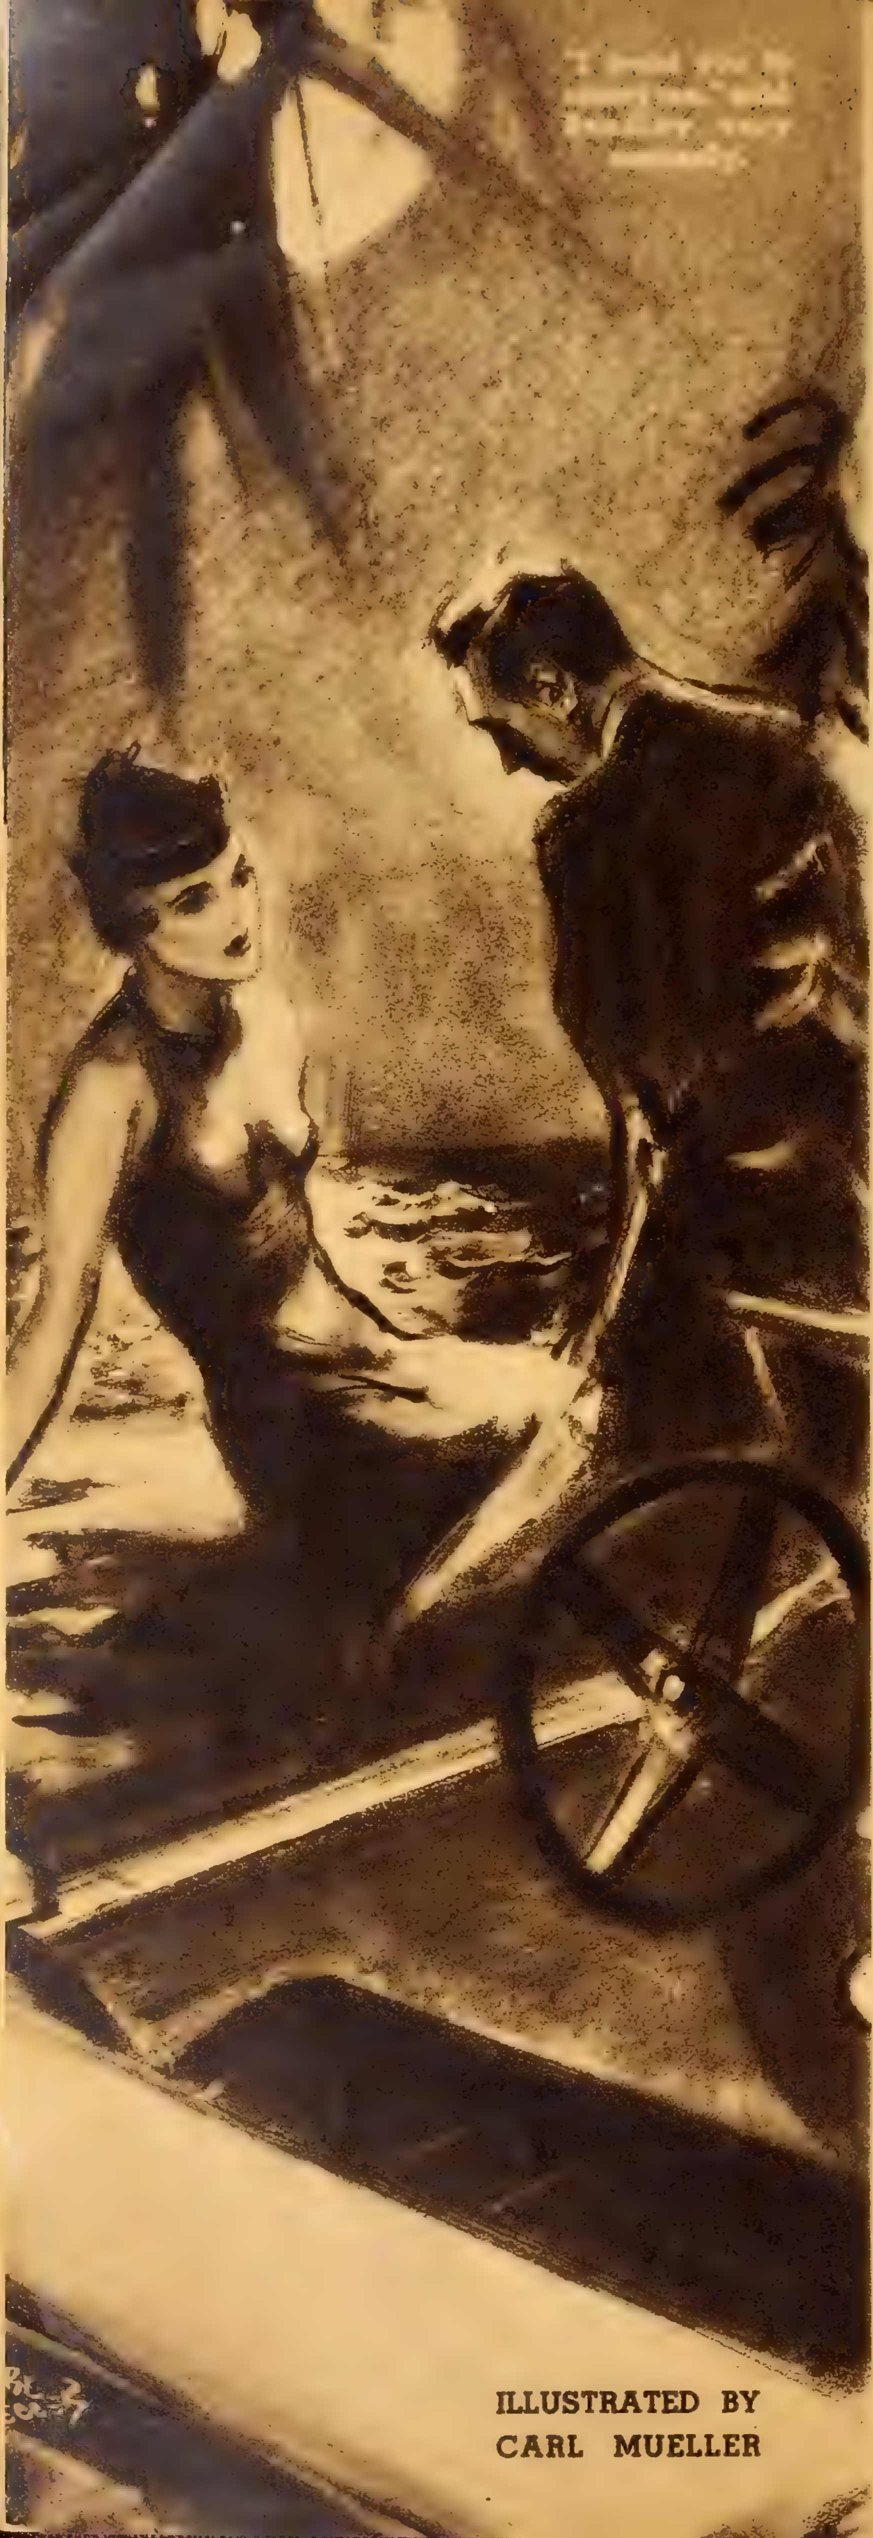
BEHIND THE shelter of a backdrop, the manager, frock-coated, gardenia-buttonholed, trouserless, stood staring after a slim figure running toward the wings, pulling on a white linen coat as he ran. With an air of conviction he spoke aloud. "Someday," he said, "someday we shall hear of that one."

Francis Lederer relates this little interlude of his career as an instance of his early struggles. To him it is neither extraordinary nor amusing. It is merely the way reasonable human beings behave. If Lederer continually astonishes Hollywood it is because Hollywood is strange, not Lederer.

If he chooses to spend his Sundays outflung on the ground under a tree instead of at Malibu or Caliente in order to renew contact with the earth it is not eccentric, merely natural. If he cannot work unless his pens and pencils point to the right sign of the Zodiac it is not superstitious but scientific. If he leaps from his seat in the midst of a play and runs up onto the platform to make a charming little speech of praise for the acting, it is not impulsive, but polite. And if he does not take Hollywood always into his confidence it is not secretiveness, but because he has a different idea from reporters and columnists as to what is interesting.

"I would have told about it if anyone had ever asked," he said simply, when reproachful interviewers descended upon him to demand why he had never confessed that Hollywood's most famous bachelor had four years ago separated from a Viennese opera singer to whom he was married for less than two years. "But you see," added Francis with the beaming little

(Continued on page 83)



[illegible]

ILLUSTRATED BY CARL MUELLER

Confessions OF AN EXTRA GIRL

PART V

WHEN STUDIOS BLACK-LIST HER—WHAT THEN?

WHEN JOAN CRAWFORD made it possible for me to get extra work, I asked her how I might repay her and she said, "When you're in a position to do so, help some other poor girl who needs aid."

At the time I did not realize how soon an opportunity would come but now my artist friend, Bradley, who had just confessed his love for me, was leading me to the home of a girl who had been insulted, as I once had been, by the "quickie" director.

When she made a row about it, this director turned all the blame on her and said she was trying to "frame" him. It occurred to Bradley that her story would be given credence if I told my own similar experience, which was just as harrowing.

We found the girl, whom I shall call "Dolly," in tears. She reminded me of myself when I first came to Hollywood—young, eager, bewildered. I tried to comfort her by telling her that our experiences were exceptions and that, although this director had insulted me during the first week I was in Hollywood, I had never had such an experience again. I assured her that the directors on the big lots are much too busy and much too impervious to go around making life unpleasant for extra girls. It is such cheap, small-time men as the one who had made Dolly and me unhappy who give Hollywood its bad name—a name it in no way deserves.

But I told her that I would be glad to help her out by telling my story and she seemed to feel better.

I did what I promised her I would do and it was all utterly useless. The shoddy director behaved in a cheap, rotten fashion and declared that I was no better than Dolly and that I, being her friend (although I had just met her), was also in the plot to frame him.

Such injustice made us boil, but there was nothing to be done about it. I tried to dismiss it from my mind. But I was not to be allowed to forget it so easily.

I had, as I've told you, been receiving fairly regular calls for work from the various studios. These calls began to lessen.

At first I thought it was simply because the season was dull, not many pictures were being made. But other extras whom I knew had not noticed this. I tried not to worry too much. (Continued on page 79)

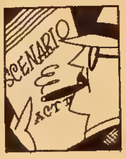
THE MEN WHO MAKE YOUR MOVIES

THE ELECTRICIAN SPOTLIGHTS FAMOUS FACES BUT THRILLS TO FEW!

BY KATHERINE ALBERT

Earl Cantrell, Paramount electrician, admires Helen Mack (above) because she's as sweet as Mary Brian. Seeing Arthur Brisbane on the set one day thrilled him more than rubbing elbows with Dietrich (below)!

And below is Earl Cantrell, in person. He has been at Paramount for ten years and probably will be for ten more even though he thinks from time to time that he might break away. He's typical of many others.



IF YOU were to walk on a movie set tomorrow, no doubt the center of your interest would be the glamorous stars making passionate love to each other beneath the glare of lights, before the watchful eye of the camera.

You would be interested to see whether your favorites were more beautiful on than off the screen. When the cameras ceased their turning, you probably would be held spellbound as you heard the director discussing the next scene with the players. And, after all this, if you were not whisked off the set by the office boy, who was showing you around, you might waste a couple of glances on all the other people on the stage.

That man with the broom sweeping away marks of the actors' footprints, you would be told, is an assistant prop boy. That lad, who clicks two sticks together beneath the microphone as a signal that all is in readiness to shoot, is a member of the camera crew. That girl with a ream of typewritten pages in her hand, sitting close to the director, she's the script clerk. And all those men moving the enormous lights, scrambling over the parallels at the top of the stage or walking around aimlessly, apparently doing nothing—they're the electricians.

DRAMA IS here. There is glamor and excitement in the hopes, the ambitions, the personalities of the people behind the camera—those people who, daily, are so close to the stars and yet, in actuality, so far removed from them. And we, who spread the Hollywood scene before you, are often so blinded by star dust that we cannot see the importance of these people.

Take the electrician, for instance. Would you like to be one? Would it excite you to be within touching distance of Garbo, Dietrich, Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, every day of your life? Would it thrill you to know that the lights you wield had the power to make or mar the star's beauty?

Now meet Earl Cantrell, a typical electrician, and answer these questions for yourself.

For ten years Earl has been at Paramount, handling "babies," "barrels," "pans," and "strips." He has been assigned to pictures in which the most glamorous stars have appeared. From Swanson

(Continued on page 93)

WARM FURS . . . Giddy HATS

IT IS an amusing paradox that a suntanned spot like Hollywood should yield some of the most exciting fur fashions for your winter wardrobe inspiration. Yet, all weather forecasts to the contrary, you need a warm tippet of a Hollywood evening. And far be it that the stars should forego such luxurious fripperies as rich fur wraps, soft scarfs and swathing capes! They love 'em! It is a fact that one furrier made himself famous for having a stock of rentable furs on hand for big premieres and gala parties in the old days. Actually, many of those gorgeous wraps you used to sigh over as pictured in the news flashes of opening nights, were returned the next morning. Today, however, there's hardly a little extra girl who can't afford some sort of fur wrap for her first public appearances around Hollywood's swank night spots.

The silver fox cape that has become such a staple in the smart Hollywood wardrobe was an exciting innovation the first night that the late Lilyan Tashman wore one to a grand premiere. Lil was noted for being forehanded in her chic . . . she could sense dashing new styles that would take with the rest of the country, often Bronzy brown seal in a youthful modified fur swagger coat worn by Olivia De Havilland. A practical but very smart winter choice.

Rosalind Keith lets her wide meshed veil completely cover her black velvet hat.

A matching black broadtail beret is Gail Patrick's topper to her coat.

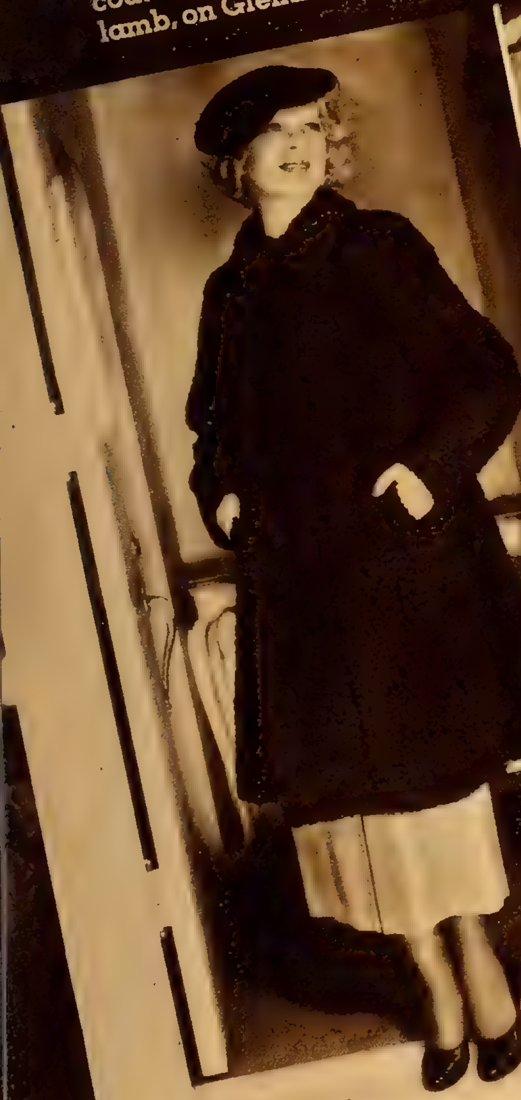
BY ADELIA BIRD

they were bizarre but Lil never let that hold her back. And usually she was right, for later they were modified and copied by the more conservative stars who did not have the Tashman adventuring spirit when it came to new things.

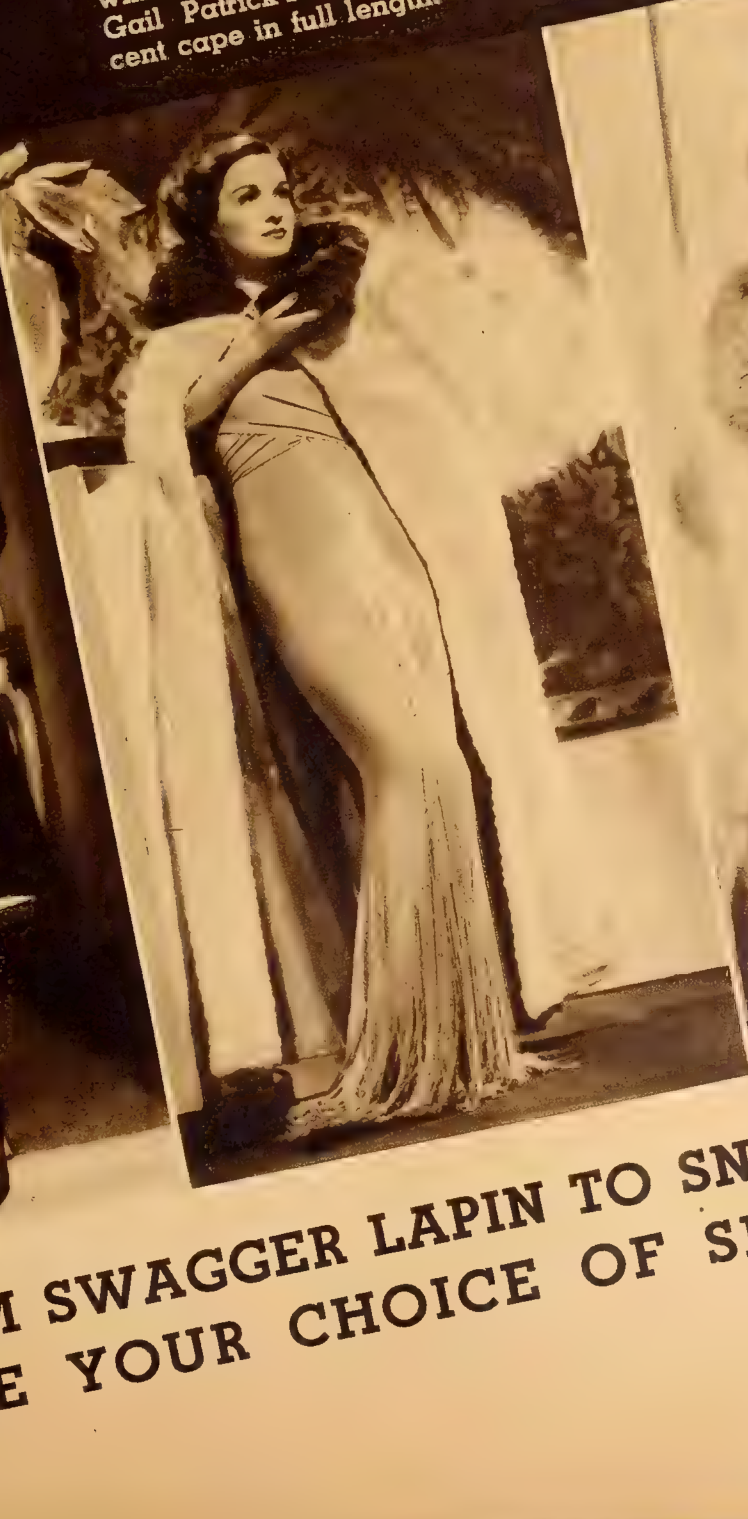
JUST THE other night in Hollywood, the number and variety of silver fox capes were startling. Marlene Dietrich topped all the crowd with a swagger coat made entirely of silver fox skins, used vertically. Very stunning with her black dinner costume. Dolores Del Rio wore a bulky short cape of the precious dark fox skins . . . her hat was one of the wide brimmed halos with a twisted forehead band of velvet. Her cape reached below her elbows, but one Miriam Hopkins wore, the same evening, was much shorter. It topped a full skirted taffeta gown and had matching ties of the taffeta for fastening. Mrs. Gary Cooper was another silver fox cape-ite. Hers was rather straight, fitting her shoulders snugly and worn open at front. This topped a black velvet gown trimmed with white silk frogs in a military manner. Her small turban was one of those Mussolini-like affairs with a bang of silk fringe hanging off the crown in front.

This just gives you a small idea of how the silver foxes are giving their all to make Hollywood more glamorous by day and night! Josephine Hutchinson in "The Melody Lingers On" wears one of these silver fox pretties in the new longer length. This is shown on page 50 and you will see how the skins are used vertically, much like the Dietrich wrap I was describing earlier. The

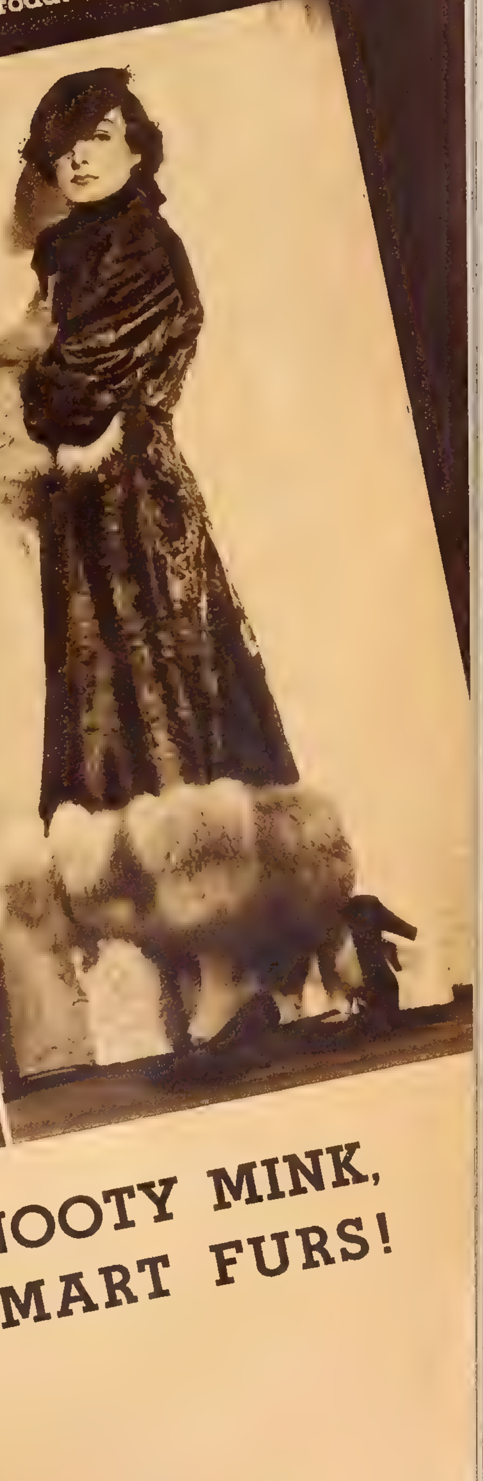
The new three-quarter length swagger fur coat in black Persian lamb, on Glenda Farrell.



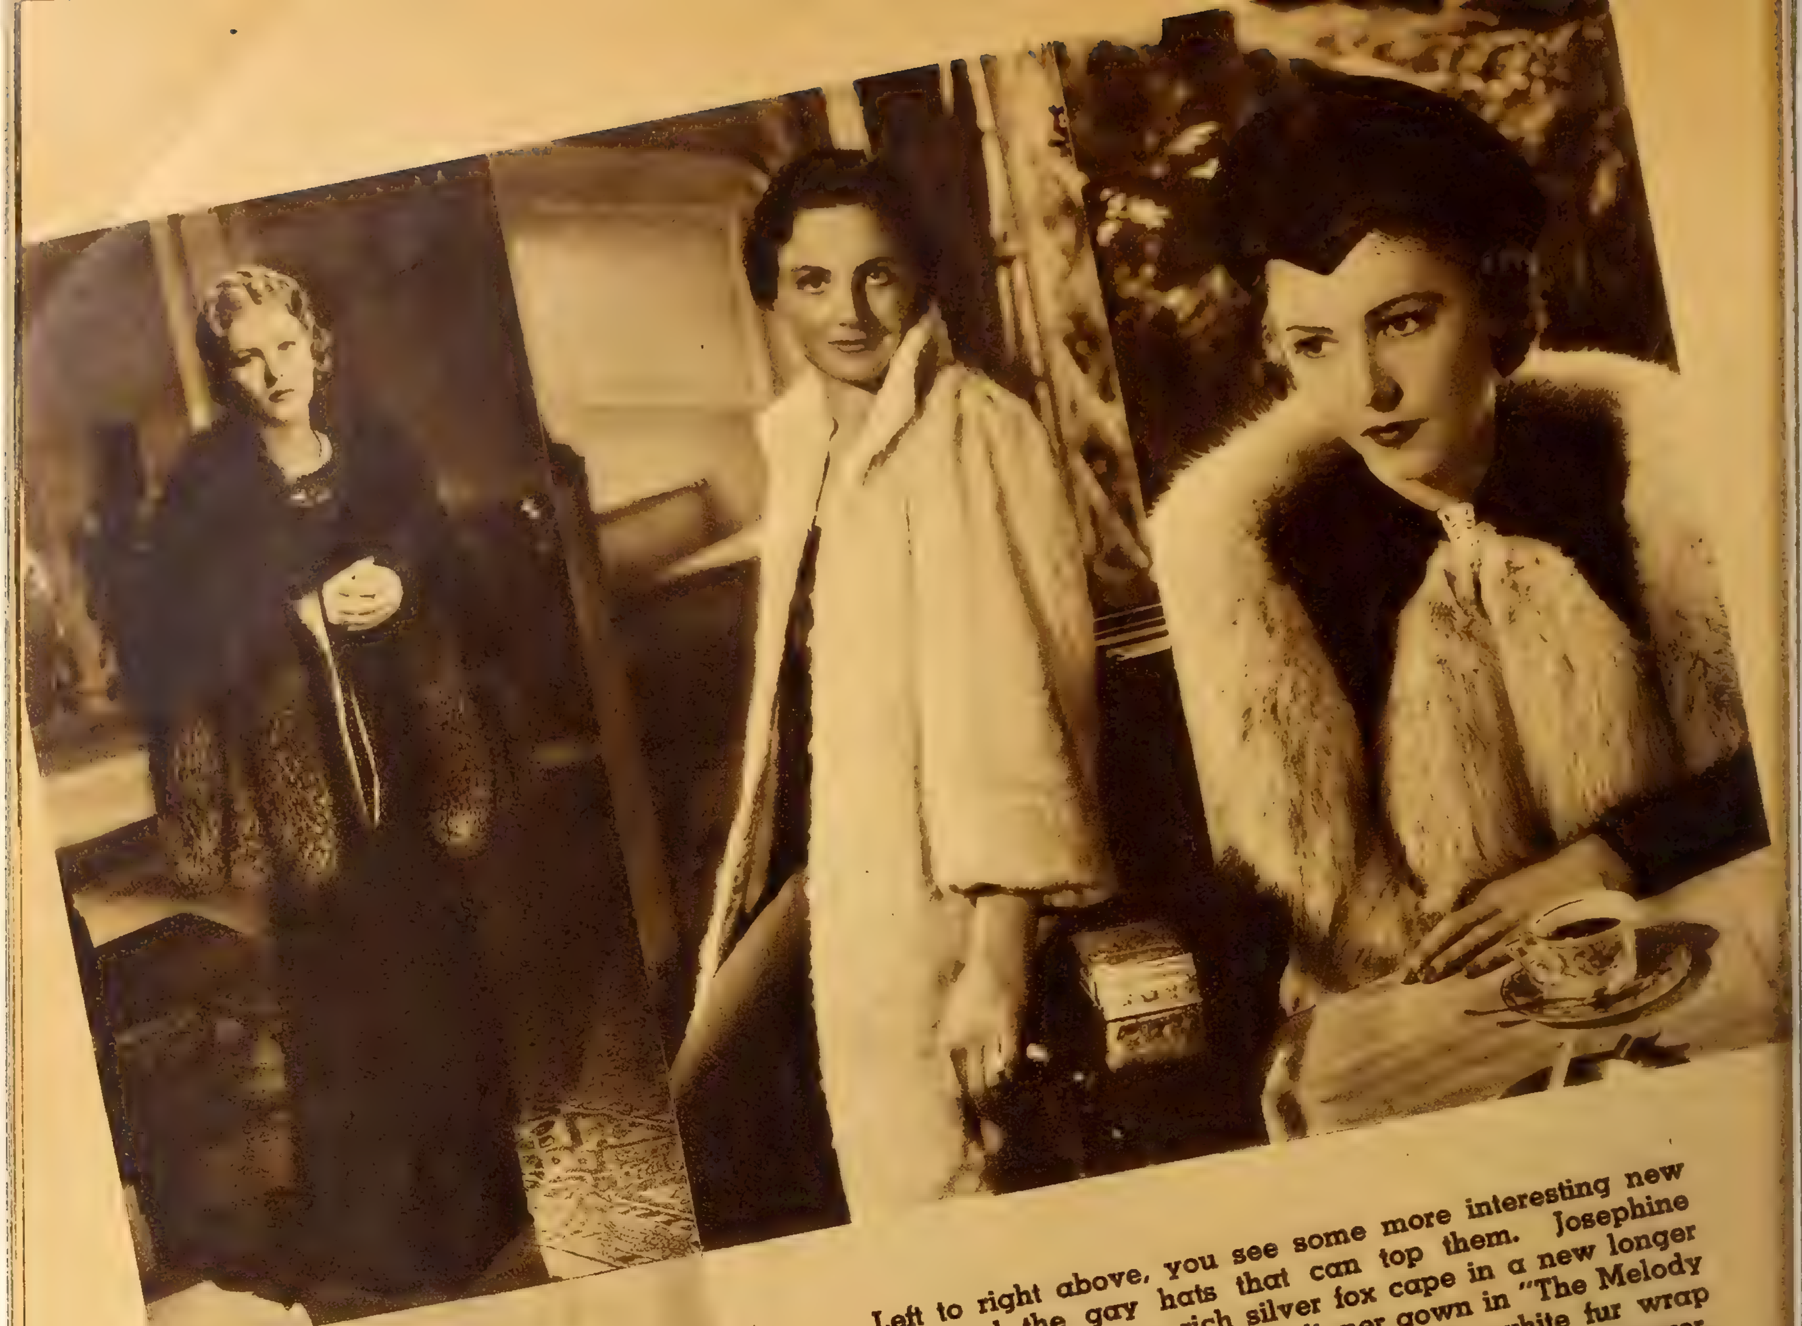
Evening elegance in white ermine and sable. Gail Patrick's magnificent cape in full length.



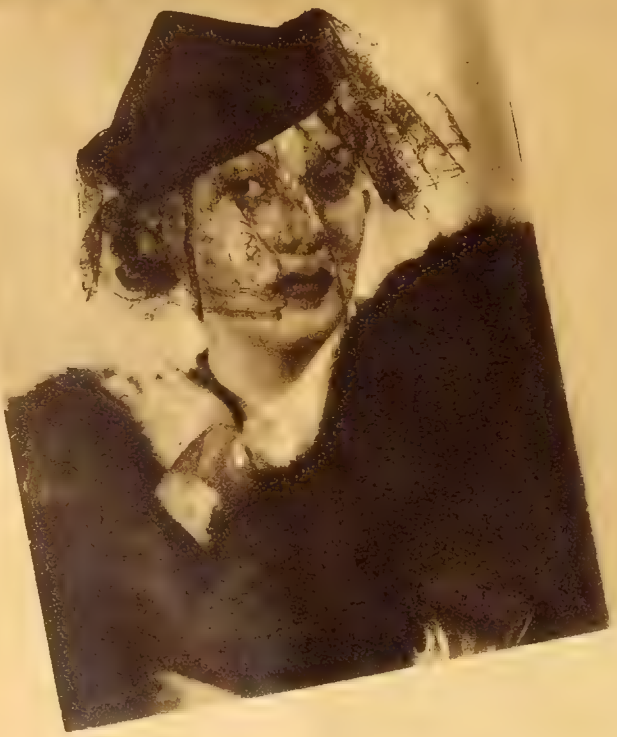
And the last word in daytime swank . . . Gail again but this time in black broadtail and fox.



FROM SWAGGER LAPIN TO SNOOTY MINK, TAKE YOUR CHOICE OF SMART FURS!



Left to right above, you see some more interesting new furs and the gay hats that can top them. Josephine Hutchinson wears a rich silver fox cape in a new longer length over her black velvet dinner gown in "The Melody Lingers On." Frieda Inescort wears the white fur wrap that is a great pet in Hollywood. Hers is a swagger, three-quarter length Russian caracul with tailored Johnny collar and softly bloused three-quarter length sleeves. Again Josephine Hutchinson in fox trimmed velvet costume—note how cleverly the fur has been set away from the face. Her halo hat has Mephistophelean point at the forehead and a tiny veil to soften its severity. At left, Rosalind Keith wears an amusing little peaked turban of bengaline with a full lace veil circling her face and suspended from the cuff brim. Perfect for formal afternoon and dinner costumes.



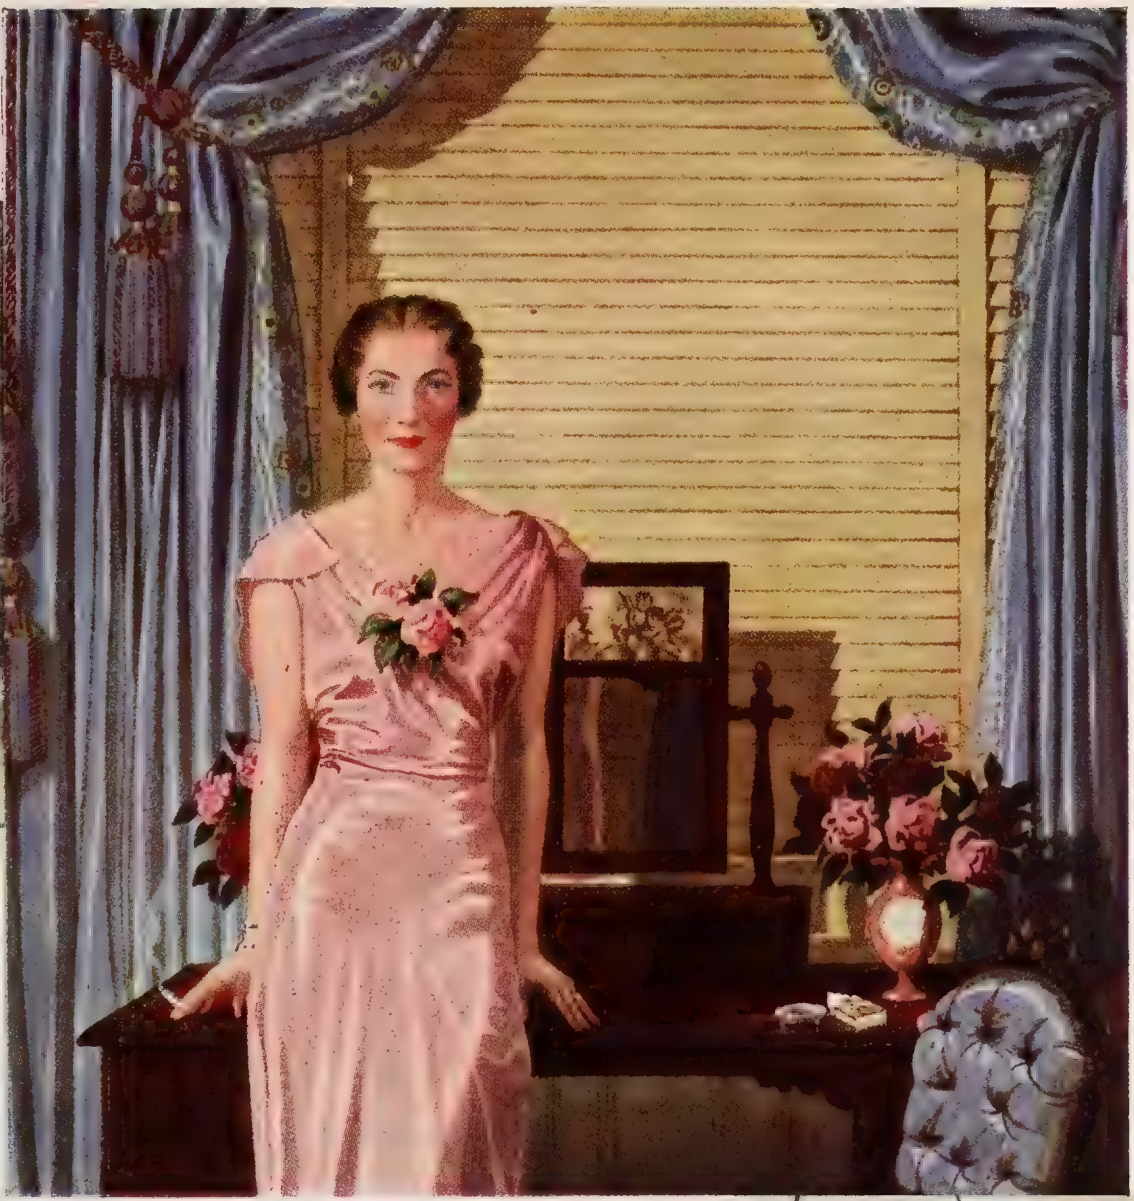
short cape is usually made with the skins in a horizontal and circular effect.

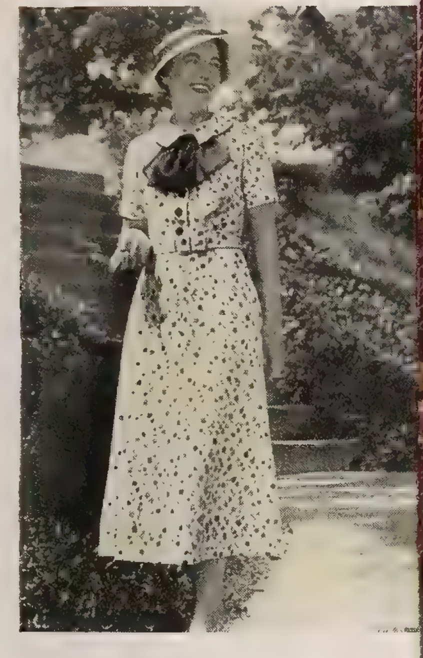
To sidestep for a moment from furs, I want to tell you something about the costumes that Josephine wears in this picture. She wears thirty-six changes of costume, covering a period of more than twenty years. The fashion period starts with 1917 and goes through the present day to several years hence. The interesting thing is that the 1917 fashions, with but few changes in skirt length and waistline, are not unlike the present day fashions we are wearing. Helen Taylor, who has done such a grand designing job on these, believes that no one would laugh at Josephine should she suddenly walk down Hollywood Boulevard in some of her 1917 outfits. And those that forecast fashion trends a few years hence are definitely worth keeping in mind.

But to get down to earth, since you and I can't think only in terms of the lavish silver fox, we can turn our eyes to the many other charming furs that come closer to our budget confines and still retain (Continued on page 87)

"I enjoy the added zest that comes with smoking a Camel"

Mrs. Jasper Morgan





When not occupying her town house, Mrs. Morgan is at Westbury, Long Island. "Mildness is important in a cigarette," she says. "I'm sure that is one reason every one is enthusiastic about Camels. And I never tire of their flavor." The fact that Camels are milder makes a big difference.

Young Mrs. Jasper Morgan's town house is one of the most individual in New York, with the spacious charm of its two terraces. "Town is a busy place during the season," she says. "There is so much to do, so much entertaining. And the more people do, the more they seem to smoke—and certainly Camels are the popular cigarette. If I'm tired from the rush of things, I notice that smoking a Camel revives my energy in a pleasant way. And I find their flavor most agreeable." Camel spends millions more every year for finer, more expensive tobaccos. Get a "lift" with a Camel.

AMONG THE MANY DISTINGUISHED WOMEN WHO PREFER CAMEL'S COSTLIER TOBACCOS:

MRS. NICHOLAS BIDDLE, Philadelphia
MISS MARY BYRD, Richmond
MRS. POWELL CABOT, Boston
MRS. THOMAS M. CARNEGIE, JR., New York
MRS. J. GARDNER COOLIDGE, II, Boston
MRS. ERNEST DU PONT, JR., Wilmington
MRS. HENRY FIELD, Chicago
MRS. CHISWELL DABNEY LANGHORNE, Virginia
MRS. JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, New York
MRS. POTTER D'ORSAY PALMER, Chicago
MRS. BROOKFIELD VAN RENSSELAER, New York

CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND CIGARETTES
QUALITY

In summer Mrs. Morgan is keenly interested in yachting. "Another thing that makes me like Camels so much," she says, "is that they never affect my nerves. I suppose that is because of the finer tobaccos in Camels." Smoking Camels never upsets your nerves.

Camels are Milder!...made from finer, more expensive tobaccos ...Turkish and Domestic...than any other popular brand © 1935, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

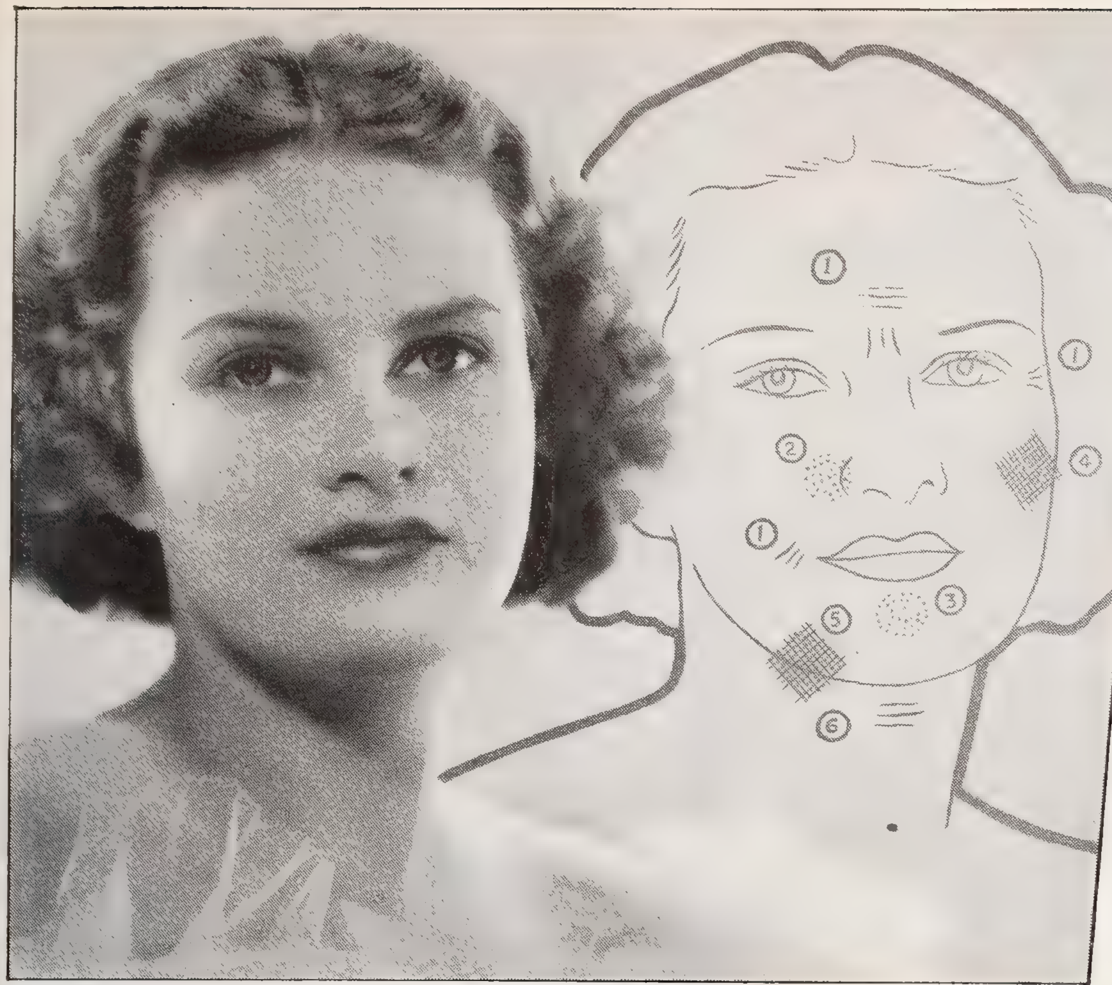
A Romantic Duet

Backstage love—an aspiring young soprano and the successful baritone. In other words, Lawrence Tibbett and Virginia Bruce in "Metropolitan." This behind-the-scenes yarn of the opera gives Tibbett a grand setting for his screen return. And are you fans pleased! Alice Brady's a diva whose best notes are sour. As for Virginia, she gets the breaks, not only Tibbett but Cesar Romero.



Which is Yours?

1 Lines fade when wasting under tissues are stimulated.

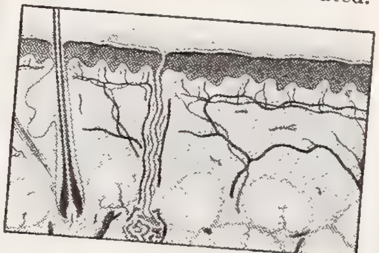
2 Blackheads go when clogging underskin secretions are removed, and underskin stimulation prevents further clogging.

3 Blemishes stop coming when blackheads that cause them are removed and new ones prevented.

4 Pores reduce when kept free from pore-enlarging secretions that come from within the skin.

5 Dry skin softens when penetrating oils restore suppleness and oil glands grow active.

6 Tissues won't sag when underskin nerves and fibres are kept toned up and stimulated.

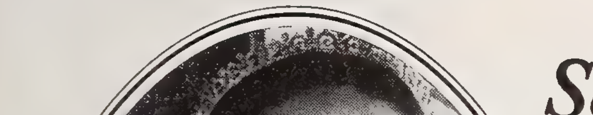


Where skin faults start— In the underskin, tiny nerves, cells, blood vessels and glands keep outer skin flawless. Skin faults start when this underskin slows up!

Miss Constance Hall says: "Pond's Cold Cream keeps my skin clear and fine."

Put new life into Under Skin

See outer skin bloom...Faultless!



HER ROYAL HIGHNESS, FRANCOISE of FRANCE

Princess Christopher of Greece famed among royalty for her classic beauty, says: "Pond's Cold Cream makes my skin look fresher, my pores fine. Little lines have vanished!"

Deep-skin Cream reaches beginnings of Common Skin Faults

WHAT annoys you most when you peer into the mirror?

Blackheads dotting your nose? Lines on forehead? Little blemishes? If you could only start new—with a satin-clear skin!

And you can!—by putting new life into your underskin! There's where skin faults begin. And there's where you must work to get rid of them.

Your underskin is made up of tiny nerves, blood vessels, glands and fibres. Kept active—they rush life to your outer skin—free it of flaws. Annoying lines, blackheads, blemishes are a sign your underskin is losing its vigor!

TO KEEP that underskin pulsating with life—stimulate it deep with Pond's Cold Cream. Made of specially processed oils, it seeps down the pore through cloggings of dirt...make-up... skin secretions. Out they flow—leaving your skin fresher, immediately clearer.

But Pond's Cold Cream does still more! Pat in more cream briskly. Circulation quickens, little glands get busy. Now pores reduce, blemishes go away, lines begin to fade!

A double-benefit treatment

Every Night, pat in Pond's Cold Cream to uproot clogging make-up and dirt. Wipe off. Now pat in fresh Cream—for underskin stimulation!

Every Morning, and before make-up, refresh your skin with Pond's Cold Cream. It smooths your skin for powdering.

Pond's Cold Cream is absolutely pure. Germs cannot live in it.

Special 9-Treatment Tube

POND'S, Dept. M50, Clinton, Conn. . I enclose 10¢ (to cover postage and packing) for special tube of Pond's Cold Cream, enough for 9 treatments, with generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder.

Name____________________

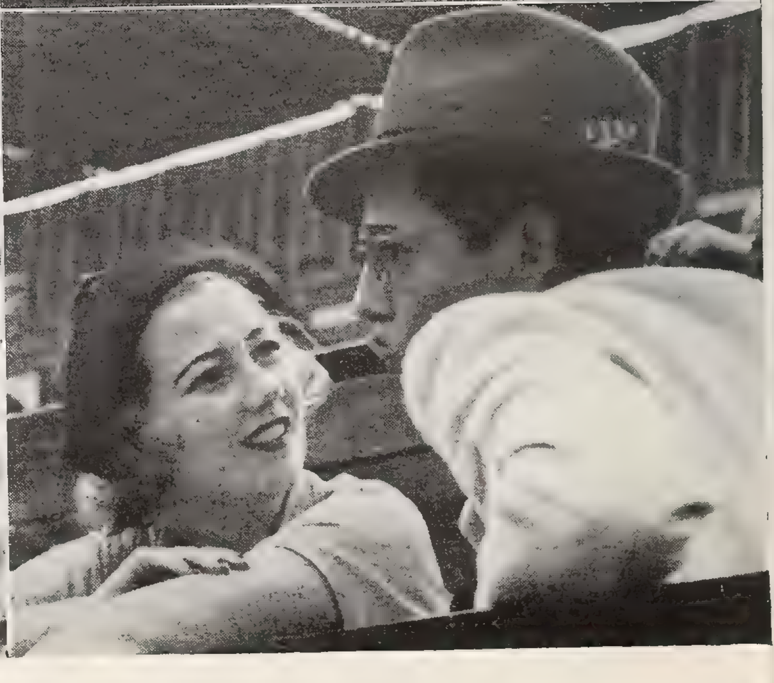
Street____________________

City______________ State________

Copyright, 1935, Pond's Extract Company

Love GAME

Love game on the tennis court and in the grandstand! At least that's the way it struck Scotty when he looked about and spotted all these teams as spectators. At right, Gladys Swarthout, the operatic screen star, and her husband, Frank Chapman. They're very devoted. Then below, left to right, Margaret Sullavan and spouse, William Wyler, prove that everything is hunky-dory with them again. Bob Riskin with Carole Lombard, an inseparable duo. And in the bottom row, none other than Gloria Swanson, looking smarter and younger than ever, with her constant swain, Herbert Marshall. They seem to be having more fun than anyone else. And last, Ann Sothern waits eagerly for Roger Pryor's decision on a play. This romance goes on and on.



"Thank Goodness—
I'M not Boy Crazy"

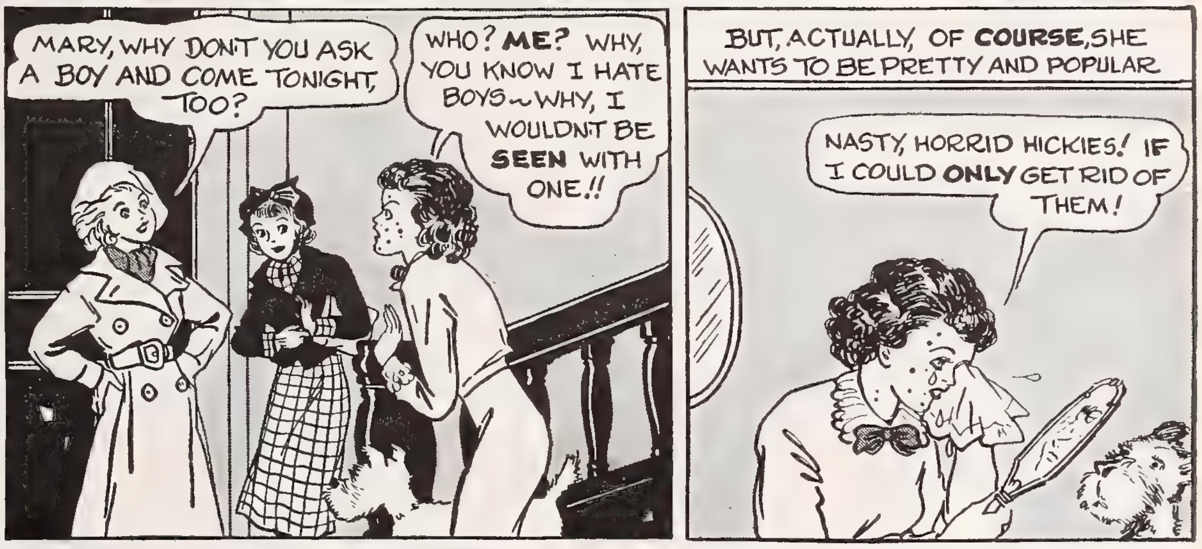
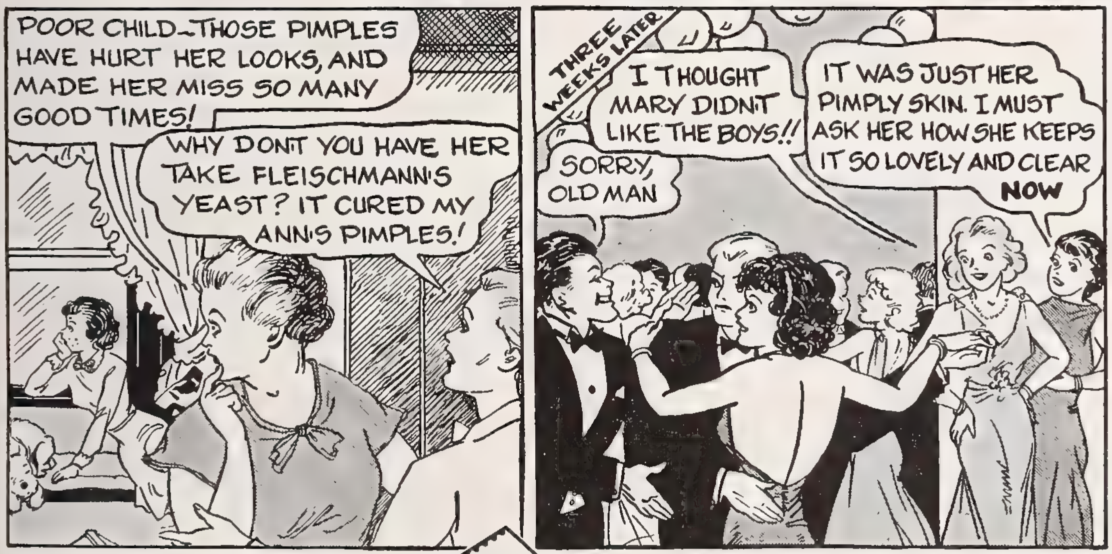
But secretly she cried over her pimply skin



MARY, WHY DON'T YOU ASK A BOY AND COME TONIGHT, TOO?
WHO? ME? WHY, YOU KNOW I HATE BOYS—WHY, I WOULDN'T BE SEEN WITH ONE!!
BUT, ACTUALLY, OF COURSE, SHE WANTS TO BE PRETTY AND POPULAR
NASTY, HORRID HICKIES! IF I COULD ONLY GET RID OF THEM!



POOR CHILD—THOSE PIMPLES HAVE HURT HER LOOKS, AND MADE HER MISS SO MANY GOOD TIMES!
WHY DON'T YOU HAVE HER TAKE FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST? IT CURED MY ANN'S PIMPLES!
THREE WEEKS LATER
I THOUGHT MARY DIDN'T LIKE THE BOYS!!
SORRY, OLD MAN
IT WAS JUST HER PIMPLY SKIN. I MUST ASK HER HOW SHE KEEPS IT SO LOVELY AND CLEAR NOW

Don't let adolescent pimples cramp YOUR style

From 13 to 25 years of age, important glands develop. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin becomes over-sensitive. Harmful waste products get into your blood. These poisons irritate the sensitive skin and make pimples break through.

Physicians prescribe Fleischmann's Yeast for adolescent pimples. This fresh yeast clears skin irritants out of the blood. Pimples vanish! Eat it 3 times a day, before meals, until skin clears.

Copyright, 1935, Standard Brands Incorporated

Supplies Vitamins A B D G
FLEISCHMANN'S
YEAST
Eat 3 cakes daily before meals

—clears the skin

by clearing skin irritants out of the blood

Left, a brother and sister team that hoofed successfully from Broadway to the screen—Vilma and Buddy Ebsen. Buddy also has the distinction of being married to Walter Winchell's Girl Friday, Ruth Cambridge. And right, the Hollywood snapshooter's sweetheart, Arline Judge. And that's our own Scotty with his arm about the gal. The camera lads decided that Arline always gave them the breaks, never refused to pose—so they presented her with a silver cup, inscribed, "You're the tops!" Nice tribute.

MORE GOOD NEWS

(Continued from page 15)

on the Warner lot, and tennis on a weekday afternoon is only for the idle rich and the snooping reporters.

■ ■ ■

Love in Bloom Department: Sally Eilers and hubby Harry Joe Brown holding hands like a couple of school kids during a recent cocktail hour. . . . Pat Ellis at the "Bright Lights" opening with Dick Green, an assistant director at RKO, who, they say, is Pat's true love. . . . Lyle Talbot dividing his evenings between Paula Stone and Martha Merrill, among others. . . . And Alice Faye sharing her spare moments with Billy Seymour and Vic Orsatti. . . . Lee Tracy and Isabel Jewell together again at the Baer-Louis fight in New York.

■ ■ ■

Von Sternberg, as you probably know, has just finished making "Crime and Punishment" for Columbia. Many were the Hollywood gags which floated about during its production—such as calling the picture Von Sternberg's Crime and Columbia's Punishment—but those who have seen the rushes predict it will be one of the real hits of the new season.

■ ■ ■

The off-again on-again honors for the month are hereby handed to Robert Taylor and Irene Hervey. Following their romance is driving us dizzy, but we've finally figured it out. On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays they're madly in love. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays they deny everything, and people see Bob with Alice Faye and Irene with someone else. We haven't got around to figuring out their Sunday status yet.

■ ■ ■

Visited Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan on the set of "Tarzan Escapes," on which they have been working since last June. This is their third venture into the jungle, and Maureen seemed particularly happy about it because Johnny Farrow wrote the dialogue and spent much of his time on the set. It's hardly possible that Johnny contributed the dialogue for the scene we watched, which consisted of "Ugh!" and something that sounded like "Ummmph!"

■ ■ ■

If you can measure prosperity by the length of a person's automobile, Mae West is the wealthiest gal in the world. Mae must have been saving the money she usually invests in diamonds, for she has just stepped out with a swank Dusenberg that's almost as long as a feature picture. Even on a foggy day you can see Mae for miles, for the job is all done up in white. All, that is, except the driver, who is three shades darker than Stepin Fetchit.

■ ■ ■

Mae's pretentious buggy sort of puts Bob Montgomery's imported Bentley Racer in the anti-climax department, but it hasn't taken away any of Mr. M's enthusiasm for his car. At Metro stars are allowed to drive their automobiles onto the lot, which means that Bob practically drives his right onto the set and almost runs over his pals in his anxiety to show off his prize possession. It's getting so he spends most of his time at the wheel; if Metro wants a Montgomery picture they'll either have to blast or write Robert a racing yarn.

■ ■ ■

It seems there are two subjects Gene Raymond hates to discuss with interviewers, and they are love and marriage. Recently a writer asked him, "What is your opinion of a trial honeymoon properly chaperoned?" Gene replied, "First tell me what would be your opinion of a trial chaperone properly honeymooned?"

Danced with Una Merkel at the Trocadero recently and she raved about the grand wardrobe she wears in "Riff Raff." Thinking Adrian must have poured his soul into his supreme creations, we visited Una on the set a few days later for a first-hand preview of her gorgeous gowns. The little number she was wearing must have cost all of thirty-nine cents. It was a house dress obviously made for someone who was—well, bigger around the house than Una. And it wasn't an Adrian creation. Una said she personally shopped for her things and the complete wardrobe, dresses, shoes, stocking, jools and all cost her ten dollars. "There's just one thing wrong with this lovely creation," said Una of her oversized house dress, "the men—it drives them mad!" So watch for "Riff Raff" and the ravishing new Merkel ensembles.

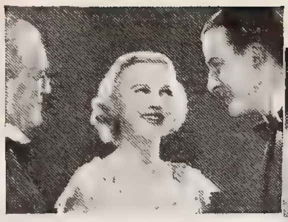
■ ■ ■

Jackie Cooper's mother has the right idea in re-bringing up a child star. Mrs. C. and Jackie take a beach home every summer, as a rule, and return in the winter to their place in Beverly Hills. This summer Jackie had such a swell time with the kids in the beach neighborhood that they forgot all about him being a movie star and elected him president of their club. Mrs. C., believing that Jackie is getting a chance to be just one of the gang, has closed her Beverly Hills home and will keep the club president with his fellow members at the beach all winter.

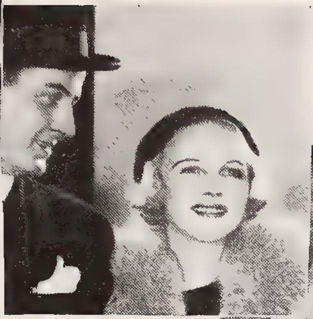
■ ■ ■

Evalyn Knapp, who suffered a broken back two years ago and is now making her screen comeback, got her start on a lemonade stand. When she was ten, it seems, she wanted to take dancing lessons, but her parents told her dancing was wicked, and so—no dough for dancing lessons. Brother Orville, now the orchestra leader, decided to finance the gal's career himself, so he built himself a lemonade stand and turned the proceeds over to Evalyn for her dancing lessons. So if you want to get into the movies, just take a few lemons, add water and a dash of sugar.

The SIX STAGES OF LOVE

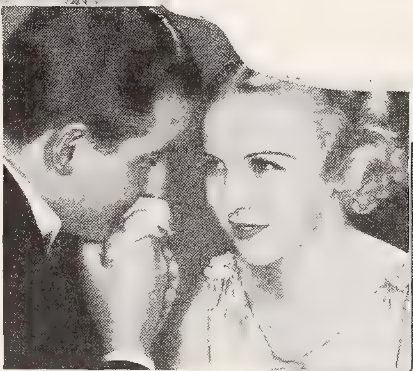


1
The introduction—he gives you the once over — do your eyes invite friendship?



2
The first date—he follows your eyes, searching for understanding, for more than friendship.

3
Then the fateful moment, when gazing into each other's eyes, the realization of love comes.



4
The proposal — the "yes" in your eyes says more than lips ever can.

5
At the altar—eyes meet in sacred understanding.

6
On the honeymoon and ever after he adores your eyes—if from the very introduction you've kept your lashes long and alluring with Winx Mascara.

EYES INVITE ROMANCE

if framed by long lovely lashes

Now a wonderful new way to beautify lashes—as easy as using lipstick or rouge.

Instantly EVERY girl can have the romantic eyes that men adore . . . thanks to the latest improvement in mascaras, based on years of experience.

An up-to-the-minute creamy mascara! Always ready! No water required! No mixing. No bother. Easier to apply. In 40 seconds your lashes look longer, darker, more luxuriant.

Creamy Winx comes in a dainty, convenient tube, handy to use anywhere, anytime. You simply squeeze a bit of Creamy Winx on a brush and apply . . . it's so easy.

This new Creamy Winx keeps the lashes soft and silky, with no danger of brittleness. And, of course, this new style of Creamy Winx Mascara does not smart—it is tear-proof, smudge-proof. Absolutely harmless.

Its creamy smoothness beautifies lashes naturally, overcoming the artificial look of ordinary mascaras.

Today, buy a tube of this new Creamy Winx—to try it is to abandon all others. Black, brown or blue. At all 10c toilet counters.

• • •

Other Winx Eye Beautifiers

Winx Mascara for darkening lashes is also presented in cake and liquid—each superior in its field. For lovelier brows, use a Winx Eyebrow Pencil. For giving your eyes depth and accent, use Winx Eye Shadow.

ROSS COMPANY, 243 West 17th Street, New York City

NEW Creamy
WINX for Lovely Eyes
WINX
CREAMY MASCARA

KOOL

MILDLY MENTHOLATED CIGARETTES—CORK-TIPPED

YOUR THROAT SAYS
. . . thank you

THOSE cork tips please your lips. The fine Turkish-Domestic tobaccos please your palate. The mild menthol brings a cool and thankful refreshment to your throat. Finally, the B & W coupon in each pack of KOOLS is a constant source of gratification. Save them; they are good for a choice of attractive items of nationally advertised merchandise. (Write for latest illustrated premium list No. 10; offer good in U. S. A. only.) For a year of Thanksgiving smoking switch to KOOLS!

Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., Louisville, Ky.

SAVE COUPONS for HANDSOME PREMIUMS

SAVE THIS VALUABLE B&W COUPON
–REDEEMABLE–
BY THE UNDERSIGNED
KOOL
MILD MENTHOL
15¢ for TWENTY
25¢ in CANADA

RALEIGH CIGARETTES . . . NOW AT POPULAR PRICES . . . ALSO CARRY B & W COUPONS

BETWEEN YOU AND ME

Get busy, folks, and let us hear from you. If you would like to have your letter published in these columns, you must write something interesting about a movie personality or a phase of motion pictures that will interest everyone. Address: Between You and Me, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

"Star-Gazer" on the Carpet

Because of a letter in the September MODERN SCREEN, signed "Star-Gazer, Cornwall, Eng.," I am writing my first letter to a column of this kind. To call Joan "the essence of artificiality" is bad enough, but to add that she is only a "glorified clothes-prop" really rings the bell. Miss Crawford probably wears clothes better than anyone else in pictures. As for her leading an artificial private life, I believe we, who live here in Hollywood, know something about that, and know that she is kind, generous, sincere and cultured. We hope Joan will continue to be our beautiful, fascinating, talented American Girl—and I'm half English!—Vernita McClelland, Los Angeles, Calif. Joan Crawford lives as natural a private life as anyone in the movie colony. Joan and Franchot make a perfect couple. As to publicity—there hasn't been nearly as much about Joan and Doug Jr. as there has been about Doug Sr. and his English lady friend.—Roberta Peers, Virginia, Minnesota. A large dress house in New York has copied all of the gowns Joan wore in "No More Ladies" and they are all good sellers! Joan deserves more than a carload of orchids for having the knack to wear such glamorous clothes. I have written Joan numerous times and she has always answered and written lovely letters, which proves she appreciates her fans interest in her.—Betty Miller, Scranton, Pa. It's a shame that you don't know all the little kind things that Joan has done for a number of unfortunate people, and if you did, you would not dare to call her artificial. In fact, you would dash off an apology at once. Your comment on her mouth is unjust. Only once has she deserved such criticism and that was in "Sadie Thompson"—there it was slightly exaggerated. As for her hair, thousands of girls are dependent on her pictures to give them new ideas on how to wear their hair. Without movie stars to set the styles, everyone would look alike.—Billie Befanger, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Good Work, Arline!

I am glad to see Paramount has given a real break to a great little star who really deserves it. I refer to Arline Judge, whose performance in "College Scandal" was one of the most natural portrayals I have ever seen on the screen. There have been many stars who have laid a claim to natural charm and good down-to-earth acting, but I am sure that Hollywood has never seen an actress who could have made the character of "Sally Dunlap" so utterly human and pleasingly natural as Miss Judge has done.—Frank Crowe, Spokane, Wash.

Success Secret!

I am a great admirer of George Raft. He has the same effect upon me as Katharine Hepburn—I am content to just sit and watch these two, they are so utterly fascinating. A lady once said to me: "Doesn't it just thrill you the way he shows 'them' teeth?" I guess that must be one of Mr. Raft's secrets of success. However, it seems to me that the stories he is in are rather slow moving. "Limehouse Blues" and "The Glass Key" were better. But the leading lady in "The Glass Key" couldn't act and wasn't even pretty. I can't understand this when you see so many pretty girls in comedies and Westerns, girls who can act, too. Here's hoping I see him in a good story with a good leading lady.—Bernice Coleman, Fort Scott, Kansas.

Five Wishes

Things I'd like to see done:

Ann Harding (pictured) given a one-way ticket to China.

Better roles for Spencer Tracy with an actress instead of a glorified dress model as his leading lady.

Ditto Franchot Tone. Why he is always cast as the weak-kneed husband or suitor is past me, especially after his performance in "Bengal Lancers."

Shirley Temple giving her fans a rest for a while. Enough is plenty.

Three loud phooeys for Herbert Marshall. I suppose he calls himself an actor, but to me he is nothing but a walking flagpole with his conceited airs and so perfect vocabulary. I wish he'd go back to England instead of spoiling good pictures with his everlasting egotistical performances.—Just Me, Detroit, Mich.

Bela Lugosi Crime Report

The "Veiled Woman" sat in the "Thirteenth Chair" and dined with the "Prisoners." She cried, "Oh, For a Man!" not knowing "Such Men Are Dangerous." The "Renegades" were "Broadminded" about taking "Dracula" with them on their "Black Camel" to visit "Women of All Nations." "The White Zombie" with the aid of "Chandu, the Magician," committed "Murders in the Rue Morgue" on "The Island of Lost Souls" by means of "The Death Kiss."

(Continued on page 95)

Smart Girls ARE MATCHING LIPS AND FINGER TIPS

Natural Lipstick:
Natural, Rose and Mauve Nail Polish

Coral Lipstick:
Coral Nail Polish

Cardinal Lipstick:
Cardinal Nail Polish

Ruby Lipstick:
Ruby Nail Polish

MAYBE it's the touch of matchmaking in it that appeals to every woman! Anyway, you'll want to come out —right now—in the new Cutex matching lips and finger tips.

Abandon any fears that the matching idea may be complicated to work out! Just choose one of the 6 smart shades of Cutex Polish. Then complete your color ensemble by smoothing on matching Cutex Lipstick. Could anything be simpler?

A perfect match in quality, too

Cutex Polish, you'll find, flows onto your nails with positively divine smoothness. It leaves no rim or streaking of color. It won't peel or chip. And every smart shade is authentic, selected by the World's Manicure Authority.

The new Cutex Lipstick is just as expertly made as the polish. It's smooth, creamy . . . yet never messy or greasy. And it stays on—without drying your lips. It's a perfectly grand lipstick at about half the price you usually pay!

Get Cutex Liquid Polish . . . Crème or Clear . . . with patented metal-shaft brush that holds the bristles in tightly, and Cutex matching Lipstick, in a smart black enamel case, at any Toilet Goods Department.

Start off with your favorite shade of Cutex Polish and matching Cutex Lipstick—and you'll soon see what an adventure in smartness it turns out to be! Begin today!

NORTHAM WARREN, New York, Montreal, London, Paris

CUTEX
Nail Polish and Lipstick

THE MODERN HOSTESS

Yum-yum, Mrs. Woods has certainly prepared a delicious meal for Donald. He's telling her that English Beef and Kidney Pie is just what he craves. And Chopped Meat Casserole with Rice (right) is another dish that adds zest to a dinner menu. The coupon at the end of this article will bring you recipes for these and other delicious meat dishes.

BY MARJORIE DEEN

Courtesy Southern Rice Association

"MEN LIKE MEAT," SAYS DONALD WOODS, "AND IT'S A WISE WOMAN WHO WILL SERVE IT THE WAY THEY LIKE IT!"

ASK ANY man what he'd like to have for dinner and chances are about ten to one that he'll answer "steak" or "chops"—just like that without a minute's thought.

It's only natural, therefore, that a great many women fall into the error of thinking that those are the only two kinds of meat their husbands really like, when the truth of the matter is simply that the darling lacks imagination and can't think of anything else to say on the spur of the moment.

But no housewife will make any mistake in thinking that when it comes to food preferences men like meat. So, spurred on by a desire to economize, fortified with determination and armed with a few good recipes, she is sure to discover, as I have, that there are lots of meats less expensive than steaks or chops and just as popular with the men folk.

Of course, these cheaper meat dishes must be particularly well cooked and seasoned to compete successfully with more costly cuts for masculine approval. But I have Donald Woods' word for it that no man can resist the appeal of a Savory Lamb Stew or fail to appreciate a wife who adds variety to the daily menu by serving an English Beef and Kidney Pie, a tempting Chopped Meat Casserole with Rice, or a rich, brown Hungarian Goulash!

"GIVE ME one of the dishes I've mentioned, in preference to steak any day," Donald told me. "Well seasoned, attractively served and absolutely swimming in gravy, these meats star on any menu. With them I personally want something starchy—potatoes, rice or noodles. That combination, so far as I'm concerned, makes a really perfect meal!

"Yes," continued attractive Mr. Woods (whom you'll soon be seeing as Elizabeth Allan's young husband in Ronald Colman's next starring picture, Dickens' immortal "Tale of Two Cities"), "yes, it's a wise woman who realizes that most men eat vegetables only because they have to, don't care a hoot about vitamins, consume salads under compulsion only, and shudder inwardly (if they're polite) or kick openly (if they're not) at the sight of too-sweet desserts. But if the main dish is meat and that meat dish is a success, friend husband will overlook any bad points about the meal and leave the table in a jovial mood, satisfied with the world in general and his wife in particular!

"Take my own house as an example," he continued. "My wife doesn't happen to like meat herself! But like the wise little woman she is, she serves her fancy salads, vegetable plates, dainty egg dishes and the like at bridge club luncheons only. Then for dinner we have one of the many meat combinations that she has discovered I like to eat. Clever girl, what!" he concluded with a proud grin.

Perhaps it was the praise showered upon her by Donald, or maybe my own entreaties had something to do with it, but at any rate Mrs. Woods went to considerable trouble describing the foods over which her handsome young husband is so very enthusiastic. You can be sure that I listened with the greatest interest, for I felt that Donald was on the right track when he stressed a man's marked preference for meats over any other food. And you can be sure that I literally grabbed a batch of Woods recipes when they were offered me and rushed home to try them out and to pass on to you the results of my conversation and experiments.

AFTER testing the recipes gathered from the Woods files. I'm here to tell you that such succulent meats and flavorsome gravies I have never tasted. Never before did I realize that one could do such wonders with a simple lamb stew just by adding a little chili sauce and the right amount of seasoning. Never did I think that a pound of chopped beef could be stretched to make a meal for four, nor that it could be seasoned and served in such a way that it becomes a dish fit for a king—or a screen star! Well, you live and learn they say and certainly I learned a lot about men's liking for meats from Donald Woods and discovered how to prepare original and unusual meat dishes from his wife.

I know that you will be pleased to hear that I am going to give you several of these tested recipes this month. You will find two of them at the end of this article—one for the Savory Lamb Stew, the other for Pork Chops, Hawaiian—both of them great favorites of Donald's.

Just below the recipes you will see a coupon. If you are a wise woman you'll fill out that coupon, at once, and send it along to me, because some of Donald Woods' best bets in the line of meat dishes are included in this month's recipe leaflet. It is yours for the asking—as always. Yes, absolutely free! And pretty darned attractive, this recipe leaflet, if I do say so. Thousands of women already have taken advantage of this generous monthly offer of free, tested, practical recipes for the favorite foods of well-known screen stars. Others would do well to follow their example, especially this month when a moment's writing and a stamp or postal will bring you suggestions for meat dishes that are sure to win your husband's approval (or your best beau's heart).

The fact that these recipes will help you save on your meat bills is just another point in their favor. I doubt very much if Mrs. Woods had any such idea in mind when she set out to discover ways of preparing and serving meats that Donald would like. But though she only sought—and found—ways to add variety to the menu, you will discover and appreciate the fact that her suggestions are economical as well.

For these recipes provide splendid examples of the two best ways to "stretch" meat money that I know of. One way, of course, is to use the cheaper meat cuts. The other way is to make a more expensive cut go further by "extending" the meat

(Continued on page 97)

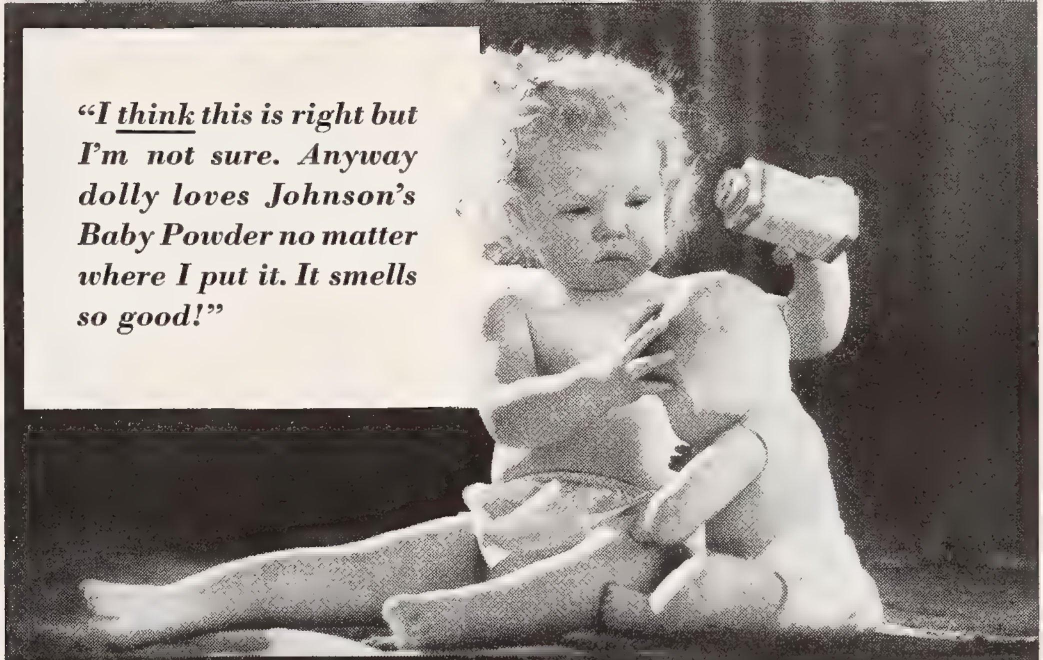
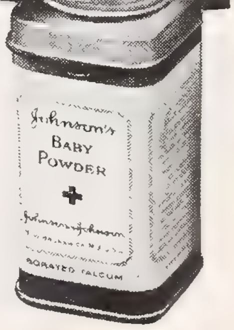
"You wouldn't hold out on my dolly, would you Mummy? C'mon, hand over that smoothy stuff while I give this child of mine a treat!"



"I think this is right but I'm not sure. Anyway dolly loves Johnson's Baby Powder no matter where I put it. It smells so good!"

"Hey, this dolly put ideas into my head. Now I need powdering—'cause I'm scratchy! Please take care of me, Mummy—I'm in trouble!"

"I'm Johnson's Baby Powder — the kind that soothes away skin irritation just like that! For I'm soft as silk — made of the very finest Italian Talc. No gritty particles nor orris-root in me. And don't forget my team-mates — Johnson's Baby Soap and Baby Cream!"



Johnson & Johnson
NEW BRUNSWICK NEW JERSEY

ACCEPT FREE
2-DRAM BOTTLE OF
$3 La Richesse
PERFUME!

La Richesse
Luxor
COMPLEXION POWDER
MOISTURE-PROOF

To introduce
LUXOR...moisture-proof powder

Combats shiny nose, conspicuous pores, floury blotches

You can't possibly have a lovely skin if face powder mixes with natural skin moisture and lets shine through, clogs pores and makes them conspicuous, or forms pasty-looking blotches.

So change at once to Luxor, the moisture-proof face powder. Prove it yourself. It won't even mix with water in a glass. Thus, it won't mix with similar moisture on your skin and make a harmful paste.

More than 6,000,000 women stick to Luxor because it is moisture-proof. It comes in a range of smart new shades, scientifically blended in our vast laboratories to flatter brunettes, blondes, and in-betweens with gorgeous natural effect.

No powder at any price, contains finer, purer ingredients. Insist on Luxor by name, and get a sophisticated, smart French scent, selling regularly at $3 an ounce. An enchanting gift to win new friends for Luxor. Powder and perfume together in a bright new Christmas wrapper at all cosmetic counters for the price of Luxor powder alone.

FREE! 2-drams of La Richesse

Moisture-proof Luxor 55c FACE POWDER

AMAZING HAND SOFTENING CREAM DRIES LIKE MAGIC!

By all means try this spectacular new softener for hands. A marvelous absorbent cream works right into tissues—dries like magic! At all cosmetic counters.

Good Housekeeping Bureau

?
What size shoes does Tom Brown wear?
INFORMATION DESK
art helfant

ASK US! GO AHEAD, ASK US

HELEN COUGHLIN, Rochester, N. Y.; FLORENCE STONE, Detroit, Mich.; MARY BUTTY, Brooklyn, N. Y.; ELEANOR DEIMLING, Cleveland, Ohio; GERALDINE GENTZIG, New York City; GLENN SCHULTZ, Alma, Wis.; LORRAINE DeNEP, Chicago, Ill.; LOIS WATTS, Dallas, Tex.; MARGARET MOODY, Pasadena, Tex.; MARTHA HILL, Kansas City, Mo.; DORA BROWN, Sask., Canada; MARY F. MOYLAN, CAROLYN KLINE, Phila., Pa.; GRACE NOLAN, Devon, Conn.; HILDA & HULDA STUTZMAN, Natchez, Miss.; MARGUERITE PINARD, Oakland, Cal.; HELEN BURGSTA, Wallington, N. J.; ELSIE HORVATH, Lorain, Ohio; ALLAN LESLIE, Antler, N. D.; RUBY RICKETTS, Anadarko, Okla.; N. P. GUNNERSON, Shrewsbury, Mass.—Our first subject for examination this month is Jean Harlow, who was born with the name of Harlene Carpenter, on March 3, 1911, in Kansas City, Mo. Her father was Dr. Frank Carpenter, a dentist. Until she was ten she attended the Barstow School for Girls in K. C., then moved to Hollywood where the Hollywood School for Girls carried on her education. Then back to K. C. and the Bigelow School and later Ferry Hall in Lake Forest, Ill. At 16 she ran away and married Charles F. McGrew II and went to Hollywood to live, but was divorced 2 years later. Through a bet she registered at the Central Casting office and in a short time was assigned to an extra part in Richard Dix' "Moran of the Marines." Then Hal Roach took her over and she played in a Laurel and Hardy comedy, released in 1929. Because of family pressure, she was forced to ask for her release from the Roach contract and spent the next 8 months doing nothing. Trying her luck once more, Jean (she had adopted her present name with her first picture) landed a part in Clara Bow's "Saturday Night Kid." Then she met Ben Lyon and James Hall who were making "Hell's Angels" and through them was awarded the lead in that film. The rest is movie history. Jean is 5 feet 3½ inches tall, weighs 109 pounds, has gray-blue eyes and silvery blonde hair. She loves to entertain and is an excellent cook. Collects wire-haired terriers and phonograph records, can't play any musical instruments, likes to play golf, tennis, swim and ride. Her second husband was Paul Bern, her third—Hal Rosson. She and William Powell are still lika-this. Jean is under contract to M-G-M Studios, Culver City, Cal., where she is now working on "Riff Raff" with Spencer Tracy.

LETTYE ANN VOGEL, Kansas City, Mo.; MARY ANN GORDON, Jersey City, N. J.; V. SCHNEIDER, New York City—Nelson Eddy is now working on "Rose Marie" with Jeanette MacDonald. If he makes "Maytime" it will probably be with Grace Moore. "Follow the Fleet" is the next Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers opus. John Ford directed "The Whole Town's Talking" and Clarence Brown "Anna Karenina." George Raft's next after "Every Night at Eight" is "She Couldn't Take It."

RUTHE HAWLEY, Boston, Mass.; ESTHER LOOMIS, Ruxton, Md.; IDA SELLINGER, Chicago, Ill.; MARY CHADWICK, EILEEN LEARY, Newark, N. J.; CHARLES R. QUINLAN, AUDREY SMITH, New York City; JANE FRIEDMAN, Queens Village, N. Y.; DOROTHY VINCENT, DOROTHY MINNETTE, St. Louis, Mo.; M. R. MASON, Disputanta, Va.; KENNETH BIDWELL, Greenville, Ohio; N. SANTORS, Bklyn., N. Y.; CLARA HOUSTEAU, Leetonia, Ohio; THELMA REILLY, Salt Lake City, Utah—Chester Morris, son of William Morris and Etta Hawkins, both well known on the stage, was born in New York City on February 16, 1901. Chester attended grade and high school in Mt. Vernon, N. Y., and later the Art Students League. Although his father did not want him to become an actor, young Morris joined a stock company in Mt. Vernon. When he was 16 he obtained the role of an old man in "The Copperhead" with Lionel Barrymore, after which he appeared in a great number of other stage productions. Then came vaudeville followed by more plays in New York. In the summer of 1928 D. W. Griffith came to New York to unearth film talent. Chester Morris was chosen for the lead in "Alibi" which netted him a contract with Joseph Schenck. On November 8, 1926, Chester Morris was married to Sue Kilborn. They have two children, Brooks and Cynthia. Chester is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 155 pounds, has green eyes and black hair. His most recent M-G-M picture is "Pursuit."

If you would like to see a brief synopsis of your favorite's life in this department, fill in and send us the coupon on page 73. General questions, of course, will be answered here, too. Those asked most frequently and the most interesting ones receive first preference. And not too many at a time please. Address: The Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

WILLIAM T., Clarkton, Mo.—The part of Addie May in "Steamboat 'Round the Bend" was taken by a little girl named Lois Verner. Garbo's next will probably be "Camille." Margo finished "Robin Hood of El Dorado" before starting her New York play.

ANNE, Macon, Ga., ROYE T. BRAKE, Burkesville, Ky.; JANET GOLDIE, Newtonville, Mass.; J. DRAVILLAS, Oakland, Cal., CONSTANCE PETTY, Gilberton, Pa.; HERBERT GIBSON, Lansdowne, Md.; OLEN McDONALD, Monroe, N. C.; MARIAN SAVIDGE, Jersey City, N. J.; E. V. FLITCRAFT, Oak Park, Ill.; BETTE WARREN, Norfolk, Va.; LOUIE SAUNDERS, Snoqualmie, Wash.; JOANNE ROGERS, Hollis, N. Y.—Rochelle Hudson is going places, and since you'll be seeing more of her from now on, you'd better stock up on her past history. Born in Claremore, Okla. (Will Rogers' home town) on March 6, 1914, she received her education in the Claremore grade school, and the Hollywood High School after her parents moved there in 1930. She determined to become a film star and after many futile attempts signed an RKO contract, making her screen debut in "Laugh and Get Rich." After completing five more pictures with that company she signed a Fox contract following her success in a small role with Rogers in "Doctor Bull." It is important to mention that, while Rochelle had no previous professional stage experience, she had appeared in local performances, had taken dramatic lessons as well as singing, dancing and painting. Her hobby is hook rugs, has two cats as pets, likes to swim, play tennis and read good fiction. She has grey eyes and her favorite color is blue. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 100 pounds and has dark brown hair. After "Way Down East" in which she appears with Henry Fonda, she will be in "Snatched" with Bruce Cabot and Cesar Romero. She is under contract to 20th-Century Fox, 1401 N. Western Ave., Hollywood, Calif. Miss Hudson is not married.

GLADYS PRYOR, Salisbury, Md.—John Wayne most assuredly is not dead. His two most recent pictures are "Lawless Range" and "The New Frontier." Buck Jones will be 46 on the 4th of December.

MARY LOUISE ADKINS, Cleves, Ohio; ELLEN SANDFORD, Los Angeles, Cal.; L. GLENNON, Boston, Mass.; MARY HILNER, Taines, Fla.; PATRICIA GORDON, Oakland, Cal.; IRENE HANYAK, Barnesboro, Pa.; DOROTHY FLETCHER, Melrose, Mass.; JEAN LAZARUS, New York, N. Y.; MATTIE LEE, Pasadena, Cal.; KATHERINE KNIGHT, Dallas, Tex.; MOVIESTRUCK, Iowa City, Ia.; EDNA MANSFIELD, Burlington, N. C.—And now's for Robert Montgomery. The son of Henry Montgomery, Bob was born in Beacon, N. Y., on May 21, 1904. There were tutors and exclusive places for his early training and his prep-school education was received at the fashionable Pawling School for Boys, following which he was sent to Europe to complete his education. When Bob was 16 his father died quite suddenly, leaving the family fortune in a sad state. He and his brother set about immediately to find work. Four months later Bob was deck hand on an oil tanker. On his return to New York Bob got a bit part in a show through his room mate, following which he joined a stock company in Rochester. After his stock experiences, Montgomery returned to New York, where he talked himself onto Broadway, and was a rising success there for five years. His first talking picture was "So This Is College," and his first stellar picture was "Man in Possession." He dresses with exceeding care, shoots a good game of golf and is considered one of the best tennis players in the film colony. He plays the piano and sings a nifty tenor, is an incessant reader, and very fond of scotties. Elizabeth Allen is Mrs. Robert Montgomery and they have one daughter. He is scheduled for three pictures, the first of which will probably be a musical with Jessie Matthews and Clifton Webb. Write him at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Cal.

CELESTE SIMARI, Brooklyn, N. Y.—David and Betty Holt are not the children of Jack Holt. Rosalind Russell is in her late twenties.

MERCEDES FRITZSCHING, Washington, D. C., ELEANOR CLARK, Kent, Ohio; JEANETTE SMITH, Schenectady, N. Y.; SHIRLEY ANDERSON, Chicago, Ill.; LOUISE MULLINAX, Gadsden, Ala.; MARGARET KYLE, Winnipeg, Canada; MARY HOLDEN, Quincy, Mass.; ENID MITCHELL, Columbus, Ohio; DIXON WELLS, Greene, N. Y.; D. LEE TOMPKINS, Cedar shoulders, and makes her feel important . . . and she is. So why not?

(Continued on page 73)

Taking Care of Mama

(Continued from page 32)

"All women like to have their own way, and, in the long run, their way is usually best. Of course, a woman likes to have a little argument now and then. So, every once in a while, I remember to argue a point—just so Dixie can have the pleasure of seeing me give in. That's a very important point! You mustn't be too easy-going, or she'll forget you're a factor and take you for granted. Yes, sir, a little disagreement once in a while sure peps things up around the house!

"I guess you know I don't like to dress up very much. In fact, clothes just aren't one of my hobbies. But Dixie has been after me on that score for years and I'm honestly trying to let her have her way about it. There's only one handicap, you see I'm color blind. An orange sweater, a green tie and a blue shirt—they all look the same to me. So it's not exactly my fault that I haven't given in sooner. But I'm all right today, am I not? Everything I have on is tan, isn't it? And you can see she finally got her way about my getting thinner! Thus proving that the wife is always right, or should be!

THERE'S only one thing I boss—one exception to my rule. And that is Dixie's health. I won't let her do anything to endanger it. And that's another good way to hold a wife—there's really more to it than appears on the surface. You can't be happy unless you're healthy. A healthy woman makes a good companion, and a sick one doesn't. I was glad when Dixie went back into pictures and I encouraged it until I saw that too much work was overtaxing her strength, right then and there was where I laid down the law. And I can do it, too! As a matter of fact, I just finished doing it this morning!" Bing added rather proudly.

"You see they want her to do another picture right away. But the doctor told me she should have a little rest first. So that's what I told her. We've been staying down at the ranch, and this morning she wanted to come back to town with me. But I wouldn't let her. I made her stay down there, much as I would have liked to have her with me. But it's good for her down there—good for her, and good for the kids. A husband's got to think of those things. And besides, if I'm cautious about her health, she knows how really precious she is to me!

"Oh, yes, and before I forget it, here's one thing every married man should keep in mind. Remember anniversaries! And special ones, too! Ordinary anniversaries, like when you were married, when the babies were born, Christmas and Easter and birthdays aren't enough. Why I've invented all sorts of anniversaries! The day we met. The day we bought our house. All those things! I even make an anniversary out of Dixie's first day, and her last one, on a picture. Why, when she finished "Redheads on Parade" it cost me one mink coat, but it was worth it, I'll say!

"You see I don't want Dixie to think that her career and the money she makes out of it, has anything to do with us. It's bad to let a wife mix her business up with marriage."

I got him all right, and was so sold on what I got, that I decided to try out a frederics new 50% COOLER PERMANENT WAVE

JOAN BENNETT

PLAY as intensely as you wish . . . Dance till morning . . . if you will, but remember this: If you want to be "lovely at all times" you must have a Frederics Permanent Wave.

A Frederics Vita Tonic or Vitron Permanent Wave is not just a Permanent . . . but a Permanent-ly Beautiful wave. Your hair is waved to a soft, lustrous, flattering loveliness.

And now you may enjoy permanent-ly beautiful waves in absolute comfort—even on the hottest summer day—because

FREDERICS PERMANENT WAVES ARE 50% COOLER

Your hair is waved with exactly one-half the heat formerly required. As a result the hair is more vibrant and alive—scintillatingly beautiful—never dry and brittle. Your finished permanent is lovelier, delightfully manageable, and so much more lasting. Even hair that is silky-soft—dyed or bleached, or wiry and unruly—can be successfully waved with this new Frederics Process . . . Try a 50% Cooler Frederics Permanent, and know the joy of having soft, appealingly "natural," easy to manage waves.

E frederics inc
VITA·TONIC Wrappers
VITRON Wrappers

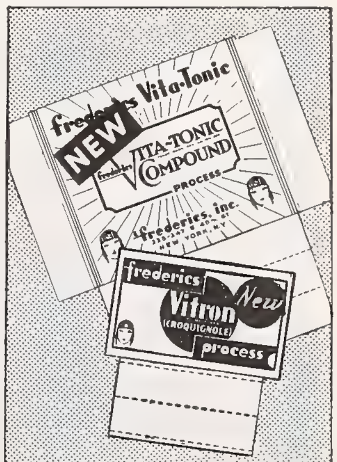
To be sure of receiving a Genuine Frederics Permanent Wave . . . Patronize an Authorized Frederics shop! Look for the Frederics Franchise Certificate which guarantees the use of a Frederics machine! Examine all the wrappers used on your hair—make sure no harmful imitations are used.



E. FREDERICS, Inc., Dept. MM1, 235-247 East 45th St., New York, N. Y.

Kindly send me free booklet showing latest Hollywood Hair Styles and list of Authorized Frederics Franchise Salons in my vicinity.

Name.................................... Address..

City.. State..

Selected TO CELEBRATE GB'S FIRST ANNIVERSARY

GB'S EIGHT ★★★★★★★★ STAR SPECIAL

RICHARD DIX · LESLIE BANKS · HELEN VINSON · MADGE EVANS* · C. AUBREY SMITH · BASIL SYDNEY

"TRANSATLANTIC TUNNEL"

New York to London

THE MOST GIGANTIC FEAT IN ALL HISTORY

GB THANKS Walter Huston · George Arliss for graciously contributing portrayals of the President of the U. S. and the Prime Minister of England . . .

Directed by MAURICE ELVEY

COMING SOON

A GB Production

*Courtesy of M. G. M.

few other of Hollywood's happily married husbands to find out how they stay that way. It's true that women have a great deal more freedom today than they have ever had before. And freedom furnishes temptations. Another thing, women, as they grow older today, become constantly more attractive—often more attractive after marriage than they were before. Yes, this holding a wife is a modern problem, and even Hollywood men are not exempt.

One of the most attractive wives in Hollywood is Mrs. Pat O'Brien. Pat, being a fighting Irishman, knows only fighting-Irishman rules. And here they are:

"When I received an offer to come to Hollywood," Pat told me, "I practically had to kidnap Eloise to bring her along with me. And when I got my first pay check, I just told her we were going to get married, even though she'd said 'no' about forty-eight times. I finally dragged her right up to the altar. Well, that's sort of made me boss ever since! And that's why I don't agree with what Bing says about letting the lady rule the roost.

"Of course a man's got to be considerate of the little woman's feelings and preferences about certain things. But I don't hide from her the fact that I'm crazy about her, and that she belongs to me, and that I get jealous every time another guy looks at her cross-eyed! I don't mind admitting I hope she's jealous of me, too. I believe in showing it now and then—not petty jealousy, hell no!—but enough to prove I'm not going to let anything break up our home. We've fought for our home for years, to make it what it is today, a haven of security, a baby and a balance in the bank. And just let anybody try to take it away from us! That goes for scandal mongers, gossipers and the rest!"

Now Pat showed signs of cooling off, and continued, "Of course, there are other things that are important, too. Little things, like taking your wife dancing whenever she wants to go, whether you feel like it or not. And you know that slogan you see in some restaurants: 'Take your wife out to eat once a week'? That's okay, too—a swell gag for any married man to follow. Take her out as often as you can—go to movies, go dancing, or just go for an auto ride—hold her hand and give her a kiss or two, like you did in the good old days before you were married. Don't be a mugg and sit home in your slippers all the time. A woman likes to see the bright lights, meet new people, and show off a new dress. And for heaven's sake, don't ever let her think she's missing something by being married!

My next victim was Chester Morris. Now Chet is as sentimental as a school-boy about his sweetheart, even after a good many years of marriage. And it's easy to see that Mrs. Morris feels the same way about him. "In the first place," said Chet, "if there are any such things as rules, I believe that considerateness is the greatest thing any man can give to his wife. And it's especially important for an actor, because you know how unbearable an actor can be! Why, after a disappointment—not getting the role I wanted—I sometimes go for hours without saying a word—sulking, because I feel sorry for myself, I suppose. It's an actor's greatest failing and I just can't help it. This is an awful strain on Susie and I usually try to clear out until the mood is over. Or Susie will say simply, 'Mood, honey?' And I'll answer, 'Yes, mood.' And then she says, 'Well, O. K. Work it out, I won't bother you.' And with that little understanding between us, we never have any friction because of temperament.

"Another thing, I have sort of funny ideas about children. Although we have two of them, and they're the most adorable children in the world, I never let my affection for them come before my love for Susie. When a father (or a mother, either), allows his children to claim first place in his interest, he weakens the close bond between himself and his wife. It's bound to happen. And it's so foolish, for children always run out on their parents when they grow up.

"I've also found that always telling the truth is one of the surest ways to preserve happiness. Even about little things. Even when Susie doesn't ask me about something, I tell her every little thing I do all day long—the people I've met—the people I've talked to, and what was said. It saves a lot of misunderstandings later. Her confidence in me is terribly important to her and to me, too.

"I like to humor her, too. If Susie likes to have breakfast in bed, she never hears me complaining about having to eat downstairs alone. I have no reason to complain. I like her to do anything and everything she wants. Every husband should make it a point to indulge his wife's whims now and then—and also to go out of his way to do little favors for her. Always be considerate of her strength. And don't be backward about showing your affection for her in front of other women. A woman likes that, though she may pretend not to! And have a lot of laughs! A lot of them. They've got what it takes to stay married!"

AT the Eddie G. Robinsons', love is constantly sending a little gift of roses, or Rolls-Royces, or diamond bracelets, or a whole new bedroom set! Eddie simply showers gifts on Gladys, and as he says, "It isn't so much the gifts that count, but I do try to show her, by them, how much I think of her and how often."

And because Eddie was too modest to enumerate them himself, I'm going to tell you just a few little items that he showered on her after the baby was born. There was one new town car, spic and span, shining black. One beautiful bracelet. One service set, a lovely old Swedish design. And one stunning tea service, with tremendous tray to match. In addition to which he bought the town out of toys for the baby.

Of course not every man can afford such a splurge, even when the first baby is born but, as Eddie advises, "If a man has five dollars to spare, he should spend at least four of it on his wife. Yes, sir, four out of five, that's my motto! It shows her you're proud of her.

"And I try to please her in other ways, too. I'm sort of a quiet chap and could stick around the house seven nights in a week. But, if Gladys wants to get dressed up and go out, well then, we get dressed up and go out. And I even 'go the whole hog' and wear tails and a white tie, if she wants me to. Women just naturally like to see their men well-dressed, I guess, and I think there's been entirely too much said on the other side of the question, about how women should keep themselves just as attractive, just as slim, just as well dressed after marriage as before. Well, how about the men? It's just as important for us as it is for the women.

"Another thing, most women are more socially-minded than men. And it's no use to buck it. If she likes to entertain and play hostess, then it's up to the husband to be just as cordial a host as she is a hostess. But it's not right to have too many people around all the time. It's good for the soul of marriage for two people to get off by themselves together once in a while."

Taking Care of Papa

(Continued from page 33)

George out of his snores or, whether its scent was supposed to be a sentimental reminder of their wedding, I never heard, but anyway, that's what she did!

The bigger and handsomer the husband, the more he has to be coddled. If you don't think Mrs. Clark Gable has a chore with Clark, you don't know your onions. Clark is much like a big, gamboling St. Bernard dog—lovable, happy-go-lucky and unwilling to be bothered by the details of life. He leaves everything to Mrs. Gable. But he doesn't like to be bossed, so she has had to develop her own subtle, but neat, technique in handling him. Wives who have big, gamboling, hearty husbands—take note!

In the first place, she caters to his tastes rather than hers by making him perfectly happy and comfortable at home. A socialite, she loves the opera, formal dinners, dressing on all occasions. Clark hates formality. And so Mrs. Gable caters to Clark's ideas. Most of the time they entertain no more than eight people informally at home. They have stews, cold cuts, or steak and potatoes, and beer, the kind of hearty food Clark likes, instead of squab and champagne. Only once in a blue moon does Mrs. Gable exercise her wifely prerogative and get Clark into something distinctly social. Then, though he protests a little, I think he really enjoys himself.

Rea Gable has never tried to "tame" Clark. She knows that he loves to go prowling at night by himself, having talks with garage mechanics, hot dog proprietors, being with people who do not know he is Clark Gable. That his hunting trips, up in the Arizona and Nevada mountans, for a week at a time—where he fraternizes with hunters and guides, men who don't know him as "sex-appeal Gable," are important to his being himself. And so she never objects when she doesn't hear from him on these jaunts except the laconic wire, "Be home tomorrow. Love, Clark."

WISELY, while he is keeping himself happy and fit, she attends to the business details of the household. She pays the bills, banks the checks, and sees that the household runs smoothly for him. And, undoubtedly, Rea Gable's wisdom as a wife is one of the reasons why Clark has maintained his standing on the screen so ably.

Some of our most successful stars are frank to attribute much of their success and a great deal of their stability to the good sense, unfailing discretion and tact maintained by their wives. Quite a few will admit frankly that they probably wouldn't have a cent to their names if it were not for wifey's keeping a close eye on the checkbook.

In days of yore, papa not only brought in the dough, but spent it. If mama wanted a new dress, it was he who stopped by at the general store and planked out $1.75 for a bolt of calico which would last her and the children for five years. But not in Hollywood today. Papa may bring in the dough, but mama not only spends it, but keeps track of it.

Some wives, even though they don't check the family exchequer or pay the bills, are fine balance wheels for their husbands. Mrs. Robert Montgomery has done a great deal towards stabilizing Bob, and it has taken great patience and great strength of character on her part. Bob,

Her skin looked dull, sallow...

Miss Rosalie de Forest Crosby, a beautiful brunette

Over 200 girls' skin color-analyzed to find the hidden tints in lovely skin now blended invisibly in Pond's new Face Powder.

"The right powder makes it brilliant," Color Analyst said

Here's a girl who thought all brunette powder shades were alike. Dark-haired with pale creamy skin, she had been using "just any" brunette powder. Her skin looked sallow with it—yellowish. Pond's Color Analyst told her why: "Too dull a shade." He smoothed on Pond's Brunette. "Why, this brightens my skin!" Her coloring looked positively alive!

DON'T THINK Pond's Brunette is like any other brunette shade. Nor Pond's Rose Cream like any other blonde powder! They're not. Pond's Powder shades are the result of a new discovery that adds life to every skin.

With an optical machine, Pond's color-analyzed the skins of over 200 girls. They discovered the secret tints that made each skin what it was. Most astonishing of all, they found that dazzling blonde skin owes its transparency to a hidden blue tint! Glowing brunette skin gets its creamy clarity from a hidden touch of green!

Pond's blended all these precious tints into their face powder. Invisibly. When you fluff on Pond's, dull skin lights up. Pale skin surges with new vitality. A florid complexion tones down soft. Every skin blooms afresh!

Don't use a powder shade that stamps you old-fashioned, dull. See what the new Pond's shades can do for you—

Brunette—clears brunette skins
Rose Brunette—warms dull skins
Rose Cream—gives radiance to fair skins
Natural—lighter—a delicate flesh tint
Light Cream—a light ivory tone

With Pond's, you don't have to be "powdering all the time"—it clings for hours. So delicate, it cannot clog.

New Reduced Prices—

55¢ size now 35¢
$1.10 size now 70¢

5 Different Shades FREE!—Mail Coupon Today
(This offer expires February 1, 1936)

POND'S, Dept. M-94, Clinton, Conn. Please send me free 5 different shades of Pond's new Powder, enough of each shade for a thorough 5-day test.

Name____________________
Street____________________
City____________ State____________
Copyright, 1935, Pond's Extract Company

Why doesn't it EVER ring?

WHAT wouldn't she give to hear it ring? To hear a girl friend's voice: "Come on down, Kit. The bunch is here!"

Or more important: "This is Bill. How about the club dance Saturday night?"

• • • •

The truth is, Bill would ask her. And so would the girls. If it weren't for the fact that underarm perspiration odor makes her so unpleasant to be near.

What a pity it is! Doubly so, since perspiration odor is so easy to avoid. With Mum!

Just half a minute is all you need to use Mum. Then you're safe for the whole day!

Use Mum any time, even after you're dressed. For it's harmless to clothing.

It's soothing to the skin, too — so soothing you can use it right after shaving your underarms.

Mum doesn't prevent perspiration. But it does prevent every trace of perspiration odor. Use it daily and you'll never be guilty of personal unpleasantness. Bristol-Myers, Inc., 75 West St., New York.

MUM

TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

ANOTHER WAY MUM HELPS is on sanitary napkins. Use it for this and you'll never have to worry about this cause of unpleasantness.

who is essentially a happy-go-lucky, carefree young man, went through a difficult maturing process a few years ago. Hollywood rather went to his head and I think he got the idea he was a great sheik with the ladies. He was a pretty foolish young man on a couple of occasions, and it is to Mrs. Montgomery's credit that she watched him with great forebearance as well as an appreciation of his finer qualities, realizing that he would bounce back to normal eventually. Bob appreciates this now.

Taking care of an absent-minded movie papa is really something of a feat. Ask Billie Cagney, wife to Jimmy. You may have thought of James as a serious, responsible young man who does things with clock-like precision, but if you should talk to his wife, you'd find out he's worse than the traditional absent-minded professor. Billie's best example of this is about the time they didn't meet on the corner to go to the theatre! It's typically Jimmy and reveals a side that few people know. Billie had gone to visit her mother and was to 'phone Jimmy where to meet her. In due time, the 'phone rang. Jimmy answered it. It was Billie.

"Will you meet me in a half an hour, dear?"

"Yes, of course," he said.

"Will you please, while I hang on to the 'phone, see if my watch is on the dresser, and then we'll decide where."

Jimmy went, discovered the watch, returned to the living-room, where he sat down and calmly went on with his reading while Billie held on to the telephone in a public booth miles away. She could hear the rustle of the newspaper as her absent-minded spouse went on with his reading. She heard him whistle a little tune. She shouted over the telephone, she squeaked, she whistled, but his thoughts were far away. She heard him get up, put on his coat, and go out the door to meet her—goodness only knows where! So, she hung up and took a taxi home to meet Jimmy coming shamefacedly in the door. The receiver to the telephone was still off the hook!

She doesn't let him handle his own money. He has a bank account but is never permitted more than a hundred-dollar balance at a time, not for the reason that he's extravagant in his spending, but because he is so generous. He will give money to anyone who asks for it.

ONE of the most thoroughly protected and cared for actors in Hollywood is George Arliss, but why not, when he has, not only Mrs. Arliss always by his side and working right along with him, but Jenner, his staid English valet who has been with him for twenty-nine years. Efficient and noiseless, Jenner is a terrific tyrant and sometimes runs afoul of Mrs. Arliss in his duties. I presume that she is victor in these matters, but at the time the air is filled with sparks. Jenner's response to the studio employee who came up to him to ask some questions regarding Mrs. Arliss' work in "Richelieu" is indicative of this. Jenner turned away haughtily and replied, "I really don't know. You will have to ask her. We are not speaking today!"

For aplomb in the face of circumstances which would startle a complacent Mrs. Minneapolis Banker out of her mind, I must report Jessica Barthelmess's poise on the occasion of the Firmonte fight in Hollywood when she saw her husband, shirt open at the neck, walk calmly into the ring, carrying pail and towel, to be introduced as the Italian's second. Jessica probably wouldn't have minded if Dick, who is the soul of conservatism himself, had given her some warning, but he hadn't. Friends sitting with her heard her gasp for breath at the sight of him. But she quickly controlled herself, and all she did was wave sweetly a congratulatory handkerchief in his direction.

Biography of Binnie

(Continued from page 41)

on the stage. In fact, I was billed as 'Texas Binnie Barnes' in the first thing I did, a rope-twirling act with Tex McLeod in South Africa. Nobody knew I was English, and the funny part of it was, that I myself didn't know I had a Southern accent. I'd picked it up from Tex, and thought that all Americans talked as he did. When I went back to London I couldn't get a job as an English girl. I played gangster molls in 'Innocents of Chicago' and other sweet, tender little things in which you couldn't call your life your own. And was I tough!"

"You don't look it."

"THANK you kindly, sir," she laughed. "But those were my bad days. I had a terrific make-up, and oh, the walk of me! Later on I played Spanish, French and German girls, all with the same accent. Then I tried an Irish one in 'The Silver Tassie' with Charles Laughton on the London stage. It seemed odd to be with him again in 'Henry the Eighth' on the screen. But I started my movie work with Ida Lupino's father, Stanley, in short comedies. He threw pies, and had to have a girl who could take 'em. The first one that came along knocked me flat on my fanny. Far from a beauty," she pensively added, "I was called 'Pie-Face'."

"You seem to have had a varied career," I sympathetically remarked.

"A bit of this, that and the other," she lightly replied. "I was in slapstick for years. I didn't mind, just taking my luck as it came. I'd probably never got on the stage at all if Tex McLeod hadn't happened to come into a London dance hall where I was working. It's all been surprising. But it amazed me to be given the part of Lillian Russell, for London producers had always associated me with tough parts. And I certainly never was known as a beauty. In England we have no great beauties. Of course, there was Lily Langtry in her time, but even she couldn't hold a candle to Lillian Russell. Today we have personalities, to my mind, far more important than beauty, especially on the screen."

"Whom do you consider the most beautiful screen actress?"

"Wait a moment—a fine lot of trouble I'd be piling up for myself saying that!"

"Nonsense, go ahead."

"W-well," she hesitated, "I will say that Claudette Colbert is charming. But beauty's no good if you've no personality. English girls are much quieter than American girls, who have more push and are more sexy, but do not have more charm. But an English girl can be very dull. She is kept down by chaperons and God knows what! Life is more of a routine in England. Just as in all old countries, it goes on and on without change; customs and habits remaining the same. Here there is more freedom. This makes it easier for an American girl to marry. She learns an awful lot. Then there's the climate, with more opportunity for sports, which develop the body and must do the mind some good. Everything here is action. Before an Englishman does anything he thinks twice—particularly about marrying. So what can the poor girl do?"

"But you managed it?"

ONCE—and never again. Now that I've got a husband I'm going to hang on to him. That's my main job, and I'm going back to it after making one more picture here. But I'll return to America. I never want to stay in any one place a long while. After a bit I like to pop off somewhere else. I've had a lot of experiences in different parts of the world, and they've all been swell, even when I've been out of dough. I grumble once in a while, but I'm never discontented. My one idea, ever since I was a kid, has been to keep working."

"You mentioned driving a milk cart."

"We had no money, so I had to do something. Dad was a London policeman, and when he died he left mother and me on a tiny farm. So we went into the milk business. The hardest part of it was getting up at four in the morning. That's not gay, even for a fourteen-year-old girl. But I loved driving the horse, Snowy we called him. He got so he knew every house on the route and would stop without my saying a word or pulling a line. And that, mind you, meant sixty houses. Then there was a little coffee shop where I'd get a cup for myself and lumps of sugar for Snowy. That turned out to be our hard luck place. I was coming out of it one morning when Snowy, scared by a passing tram, started to run away. I just managed to swing myself up on the wagon, but I couldn't stop him. He tore along till he got jammed in between two trams and was so badly hurt he had to be shot."

"Were you hurt?"

For answer she pulled off her hat. Her forehead showed a white scar.

"That runaway put us out of the milk business. But as soon as I was able to be about again I got a job in a factory, where I tested electric light bulbs and became a first-class solderer—sealed the tin casings, you know. Next I worked in a paper bag factory. Then I pressed veins on artificial leaves—sounds silly, doesn't it? From there I went to a tobacconist's. I never did office work; for one thing, I wasn't intelligent enough."

No? With all due respect, you can't believe her.

"When I left a place I always got a better one," was her most intelligent reply. "I liked 'em all while I stayed.

"Work was good for me," she insisted. "If I'd been brought up in cottonwool, I'd never have done anything. And it was fun having a go at one thing and another. I got to know all kinds of people. Lord, the different ones that poked their heads out of doors when I was delivering milk! That was the time, early in the morning, to see them as they really were without any frills. The things they wore and the things they said! I'll never forget one old crone who wore diamond earrings—probably slept in 'em—and a second-hand lady with the airs of a duchess. Oh, well, I dare say I thought myself pretty grand when I got that job in a dance hall! I'd wait for a customer to do a twirl with me, then slither out on the floor like Lady Vere de Vere herself."

"After all your other jobs, what do you think of movie work?"

"This," said the practical Binnie, "is a sissy job."

"MUTINY!"

. . . So rang the cry from stem to stern of H.M.S. BOUNTY, homeward bound to England from the enchanted islands of the South Seas . . . "MUTINY! Down with Captain Bligh!"

The men of the BOUNTY had been at the breaking point for many long weeks, and at last, unable to stand any longer the scenes of horror and ghastly brutality that had marked the voyage, they turned against their captain in fierce mutiny, led by the gallant mate, Fletcher Christian.

Gaining command of the ship, Christian and his men turned their course back to the green isles of Tahiti. The men were elated . . . were they not bound for a peaceful carefree life . . . for a Paradise on earth? Christian rejoiced, for he was returning, as he had promised, to Maimiti, the beautiful Tahitian maiden who had captured his heart . . .

But cruel Captain Bligh, whom they thought dead, was seeking revenge . . . could they escape him and remain in this Eden for which they had fought so desperately?

You will enjoy reading the thrilling and romantic story of "Mutiny on the BOUNTY," M-G-M's picture featuring Clark Gable, Charles Laughton, and Franchot Tone—it appears in complete story form in the December issue

Screen Romances

The Love Story Magazine of the Screen
December now on sale

YOUR SKIN IS SO LOVELY, DEAR!

TO END SKIN TROUBLES

Try This Improved Pasteurized Yeast That's EASY TO EAT

PIMPLES and blotches, like muddiness and lack of color in the skin, are usually caused by a sluggish system. That is why external treatments bring so little relief.

Thousands have found in Yeast Foam Tablets a pleasant, easy way to correct skin troubles caused by digestive sluggishness.

Science now knows that very often slow, imperfect elimination of body wastes is brought on by insufficient vitamin B complex. The stomach and intestines, deprived of this essential element, no longer function properly. Your digestion slows up. Body poisons cause ugly eruptions and bad color.

Yeast Foam Tablets supply the vitamin B complex needed to correct this condition. These tablets are pure pasteurized yeast—and yeast is the richest known food source of vitamins B and G. This improved yeast should strengthen and tone up your intestinal nerves and muscles. It should quickly restore your digestive and eliminative system to normal, healthy function.

With the true cause of your trouble corrected, pimples and other common skin troubles disappear. And your whole system benefits so that you feel better as well as look better.

Don't confuse Yeast Foam Tablets with ordinary yeast. These tablets have a pleasant, nut-like taste that you will really enjoy. Pasteurization makes Yeast Foam Tablets utterly safe for everyone to eat. They cannot cause fermentation in the body and they contain nothing to put on fat.

Any druggist will supply you with Yeast Foam Tablets. The 10-day bottle costs only 50c. Get one today. Refuse substitutes.

YEAST FOAM TABLETS

FREE MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY
You may paste this on a penny post card

NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO. MM-12-35
1750 North Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Please send free introductory package of Yeast Foam Tablets.

Name______________________________

Address____________________________

City____________________State________

The Lone Wolf of Hollywood

(Continued from page 35)

to sentimentalize over the Irish George. There is no man in all Hollywood, today, who causes more palpitations than George. Nor any man who cares less whether ladies palp or not. Preferably NOT. I can even list some of them under the general heading of "Palpitations One, Two, Three" and so on. There was Loretta Young, who admitted to a more than professionally friendly feeling for the dark Irishman in the pre-Chatterton days when she and George were making "Week-End Marriage" and "They Call It Sin" together.

There was La Chatterton herself, who from the day when she first saw his test for her picture, "The Rich Are Always With Us," uttered the now famous line, "Where has he been all his life?" There are those who say that because George flies, Ruth flies, too, in the airy hope that perhaps, someday, in the ether . . .

THERE is Joan Crawford—Joan went, I happen to know, to quite devious ends to invite George to one of her ultra-conservative, very private at-home dinner parties. It is said that she asked Jean Muir to bring him with her because she knew that Jean and George were friendly. George was teaching Jean to fly. And then the columnists fell upon the lessons with both pens, so to speak, so pupil and teacher flew no more that day. Nor any other day. And there is a hint of the wistful in the Muir eyes, remembering . . .

A few days ago a pretty girl approached George on the set and said to him, "You don't remember me, do you?" George confessed politely, that he did not. Then the girl seized him by the lapels of his coat saying in a hushed, emotional voice, "Did you ever have the feeling that you belonged to someone?" George gave a loud yelp and dashed for the safer precincts of his set, muttering that he had felt that way and wanted none of it. The girl turned out to be an extra from another set, inoculated with a Brent-bent. Quite harmless.

And that's reason No. 1 for George being the "Lone Wolf of Hollywood" today. He doesn't want to belong to anyone. He is afraid of women. He is afraid of possessiveness. He has survived two unsuccessful marriages and they have not served to lessen his fear. He loathes ties and bonds of any kind. He despises routine eating hours, household schedulism, the silken strands with which women bind a man who would be free. He wants travel and adventure and solitude far more than he wants the frail fevers of any feminine entanglement.

Undoubtedly his birth and background have everything to do with it. George was born, as you may know, in Ballinasloe, a town in mid-western Ireland. His father was a newspaper man, the descendent of a long line of fighting Irshmen.

WHEN George was eleven he made his first trip to America. And learned to love the roll of a ship beneath his feet. He soaked in eagerly the talk of seafaring men, the sight of far horizons. "I knew then," he told me, "that I would never stay long in any one place again."

He returned to Dublin to attend the University there, and, later, during the inception and success of the Abbey Theatre, he was inspired to go on the stage by the plays of Yeats, Lady Gregory, Padraic Colum and others. "I felt," said George, "that the theatre crystallized all of my ambitions for me. I had been torn between the newspaper business and the cavalry. On the stage, I figured, I could be all of the characters I wanted to be—I could smell the sea in my nostrils when I played a sailor, know the tang of war as a make-believe warrior, feel the plains of the West under my feet as a frontiersman. But most of all, I would be going places. That was why I chose the stage. I would never be still. Never tied to one place, nor to one group of people. I would be free. The theatrical profession, I knew, was one of the three or four in the world which does not stay in one place. And that was my real ambition. The only real love I have ever had, has been, and is today, the love of freedom. To be free, a man must walk alone.

"I managed to matriculate at the Abbey and the only times I didn't show up for the rising curtain were times when newer and more stirring interests diverted me. Rebellions and political cabals and such.

"That was the time of the Irish Revolution of 1924. With a patriotic newspaper editor for a father and with the hot blood of generations of Irish patriots boiling in my blood, it is hardly necessary to say where my sympathies were. I was in the thick of it from the first and acted as dispatch carrier for Michael Collins.

"I was a spy. And I learned, during those days, to mistrust small talk and the people who were glib with it. I learned to keep my mouth shut and my ears open and to respect those who did likewise. I learned to weigh every syllable before I uttered it. I learned to fear women. I learned to steer clear of their blandishments.

THEN Michael Collins was slain and the young George fled from Ireland for his life. For a time he went into hiding in Glasgow. And there again, he learned the lesson he never has unlearned—how golden silence can be.

But even in Glasgow, the English authorities found him out and in the dead of night he left Scotland and entered England, figuring that it would be the least likely place for them to look for him. A freight boat out of Plymouth offered him safe passage to America and he took it.

His career as a warrior and as a spy was at an end. And George found that his love for the theatre still clung to him. For five years he played more than three hundred leads in stock companies. He ranged through the States—Florida, Massachusetts, Colorado, New York. Then "Love, Honor and Obey" brought him to Broadway, where he played opposite Alice Brady. In that company was another young actor of whom you may have heard! His name was Clark Gable.

The screen began to talk. The dragnet for new talent spread out. New faces for old. There were tests and a few minor pictures for George before the big call came from Warner Brothers, who announced that they were looking for a leading man for Ruth Chatterton. And the rest is history known by heart.

All of which should tell you why George Brent is the "Lone Wolf of Hollywood" today. Why, when he has a leave of absence, he prefers to spend it in the remote ether rather than with such earthy Venuses as Garbo, Crawford, Jean, Loretta. . . .

I faced him down about being a Lone Wolf. He smiled that diffident smile of his. You have to come right out and face him with things when you talk to him because he will not answer questions.

"You are the 'Lone Wolf of Hollywood,'" I stated.

"I am," he said. "I work too hard to be anything else. Nine pictures in a row. When I'm through at night I'm too tired to put on the soup and fish, order flowers, go through the necessary rituals. I go home to my house in Toluca Lake—rented, not owned—I wouldn't own a house for anything. It might come to own me. I go home and go to bed and read and I repeat this performance every night of my life, week in and week out. I'm poor copy for a story just because I don't do anything."

"If you were not working so hard, were not tired," I said, "you'd do the same thing?"

"The same," agreed George. "Matter of honest fact, I'm a very shy person, always was. I have no small talk. I can't spend an evening dotted with such conversational high-lights as, 'So what?' or 'How do you like that?' I'm not comfortable at parties, at the Grove, places like that. And if I'm not comfortable, it naturally follows that I'm not having a good time and if I'm not having a good time, why should I go?

"I'm working with one objective in view, to pay off some annuities of mine. When I get them all paid up I'll be really free. And when I am free, I'll go away from here. I want to travel. I want to see all of the far places of the earth and all of the strange people. I want to hunt, fish, knock about, and keep my mouth shut and my ears open. I don't want to have to punch a clock. I don't want to know or care what time it is. I don't want a home, possessions, ties or responsibilities. I belong with men, in a man's world. I fit better there. I'm more comfortable there. That's all there is to it."

I SAID, "But we read, now and again, squibs in columnists' chatter stating that you were seen lunching here and there, dining this place and the other. For instance, some time ago an item appeared to the effect that you were seen at the races with Garbo. The story went that a small child sat in back of you, poked her mother and said, 'Oooh, Ma, there's Greta Garbo with George Brent!' And the mother, peering, said, 'Nonsense, dear, it is not!'"

George said, his eyes turned now in the direction of the flying field where his plane was tuning up, "If the incident really happened at all, I can say only that Mama was right! I went to the races only once and that once was with my friend and agent, Minna Wallace. None of these items happens to be true. I read that I was seen at Caliente, when I have never been to Caliente. I read that I dined here, there, the other place—and they are usually houses I have never stepped foot into and people I have never met. There are, of course, a few places I should like to go. Grace Moore invited me for dinner several times, for instance. I am very fond of Grace. She is a grand person. I've never been able to go because of work. But for the most part, I go nowhere. I know that one invitation leads to another and before you know it you are enmeshed. And so—I change my telephone number every two weeks and stay alone in my lair."

Strange as it may seem—this is the simple truth. Garbo may sulk, Jean look wistful, Crawford invite, Loretta remember—but far off in the limitless ether his books and his fishing rods beside him, George Brent looks down upon a toy world—alone.

CHERAMY

April Showers

THE PERFUME OF YOUTH

Luxury . . . ON A BUDGET

YOUTH shall not be denied loveliness, says April Showers . . . and forthwith presents the most exquisite toiletries that ever fitted a young budget! Face powder . . . a sheer veil of scented mist. Talc for a refreshing body-bath. Eau de cologne for a glamorous rub-down. And a perfume created by one of the world's greatest perfumers to give you a fragrance that is young and gay and in supreme good taste.

PRICE LIST

April Showers

Eau de Cologne	28¢, 55¢, $1
Face Powder	28¢ and 55¢
Talc	28¢ and 55¢
Perfume purse sizes	28¢ and 50¢
Dusting Powder	85¢ and $1.25

Rouge, Lipstick, Skin Lotion, Bath Salts, etc., from 28¢ to 85¢. At stores everywhere.

Exquisite . . . but not Expensive

Modern Screen Scoreboard

(Continued from page 6)

Name of Picture and Company	Modern Screen	N. Y. Times	N. Y. Herald Tribune	N. Y. American	N. Y. Evening Journal	N. Y. Post	N. Y. Sun	N. Y. Daily News	N. Y. Daily Minor	World-Telegram	Chicago Herald-Examiner	Los Angeles Examiner	Variety	General Ratings
Diamond Jim (Universal)	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★		3★
Don't Bet on Blondes (Warners)	2★	2½★	2½★	3★	3★	2★	2★	2★	2★	1★	2½★		1★	2★
Doubting Thomas (Fox)	4★	3★	2★	4★	3★	2★	3★	3★	4★	4★	3½★	3★	3½★	3★
Escapade (M-G-M)	3★	2★	2½★	4★	3★	2★	2★	3★	3½★	3★	3★	3★	4★	3★
Escape Me Never (United Artists)	3★	3½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3½★	3½★	4★	4★		3★	3★
Every Night at Eight (Paramount)	3★	2½★	2★	3★	2½★	3★	2½★	2½★	2★	2½★	1★		2★	2★
The Farmer Takes a Wife (Fox)	3★	3½★	4★	4★	3★	2★	4★	3★	4★	3½★	3★	3★	3★	3★
Forsaking All Others (M-G-M)	3★	3★	3★	4★	4★	2★	3★	3★	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★	3★
Four Hours to Kill (Paramount)	3★	3★	3★	3½★	3★	3★	4★	3★	4★	3★		3★	2½★	3★
Front Page Woman (Warners)	3★	3★	3½★	3½★	3★	3★	3½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	4★	3★	3★
G-Men (Warners)	3★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★
The Gilded Lily (Paramount)	4★	3½★	3★	4★	3½★	3★	3★	3½★	3★	3½★	4★	4★	4★	3★
Ginger (Fox)	2★	3½★	3★	3½★	3★	3★	2★	2½★	3½★	3★		3★	2★	3★
The Girl from 10th Avenue (Warners)	2★	3★	2★	3★	2★	3★	2½★	2½★	2★	2★		2★	2½★	2★
The Glass Key (Paramount)	2★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	2½★	2★	3★	2★	3★	2½★	3★	2½★	3★
Goin' to Town (Paramount)	2★	2½★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★		2★	3★
Go Into Your Dance (Warners)	3★	3★	3★	3½★	3½★	3★	3★	3½★	4★	3★	4★	3★	4★	3★
The Goose and the Gander (Warners)	2★	1★	1★	2½★		2★	1★	3★	2★	1★			2★	2★
Hard Rock Harrigan (Fox)	3★	1★	2★	2★		2★	1½★	2★		1½★		1★	2★	2★
Here Is My Heart (Paramount)	3★	4★	3★	4★	4★	4★	4★	3½★	4★	4★	4★	3★	4★	4★
Hold 'Em Yale (Paramount)	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★			3★	3★	3★		3★	2½★	3★
Hooray For Love (RKO)	3★	1½★	2★	2½★	2½★	3★	2★	2½★	2★	2★	2½★	3★	2★	3★
I'll Love You Always (Columbia)	2★	2½★	2★	1★	2★	1★	2½★	1½★	1★	1★			2★	2★
In Caliente (First National)	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★	3★
The Informer (RKO)	3★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★
The Irish in Us (Warners)	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	2½★	3★	2½★	3★		3★	3★
The Iron Duke (G-B)	3★	3★	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2★			3★	3★
It Happened in New York (Universal)	3★	3★	2★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	2★	3★	2½★	2★		2½★	3★
Jalna (RKO)	3★	3★	2½★	2★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★		3★	3★	2★	3★
Java Head (First Division)	2★	2★	2½★	2½★	2★	1½★	2★	2½★	2★	1½★	3★	2★	1★	2★
Laddie (RKO)	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3½★	3★	2★		3★	2★	3★
Lady Tubbs (Universal)	3★	3★	3★	2½★	1½★	2★	1½★	1½★	2★	1★	2★	2★	2★	2★
Les Miserables (20th Century)	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	4★	5★	5★	3★	5★	5★	5★
Let 'Em Have It (United Artists)	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3½★	4★	4★	3★	3★
Life Begins at Forty (Fox)	3★	3★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	3★	4★	3½★	4★	4★	4★	4★
The Little Colonel (Fox)	3★	3★	3½★	4★	3★	3½★	3★	3½★	4★	3★	4★		3★	3★
Love in Bloom (Paramount)	2★	2★	2★	2★	2★	2★	2★	2★	2★	2★			1½★	2★
Love Me Forever (Columbia)	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	2½★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★		4★	4★
Loves of a Dictator (G-B)	3★	3½★	3½★	3½★	3½★	3½★	3½★	3★	3½★	2★	3★		3★	3★
Mad Love (M-G-M)	2★	2½★	2½★	2½★	2½★	3★	2½★	2½★	3★	2★		2★	2½★	2★
The Man on the Flying Trapeze (Paramount)	3★	3½★	4★	3½★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	4★	3½★	3★	3★	2★	3★
The Man Who Knew Too Much (M-G-M)	3★	3★	4★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	2★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★
Mark of the Vampire (M-G-M)	2★	2½★	2½★	2½★	2★	3½★	2½★	2½★	3★	1½★	2★	3★	3★	2★
McFadden's Flats (Paramount)	2★	2½★	2★	3★	2½★	2½★		2★	3★	2½★	2★	2★	2★	2★
Men of Tomorrow (London Films)	2★	2★	1★			1★	1★	½★		1½★			2★	1½★
Men Without Names (Paramount)	3★	3★	2★	3½★	3★	4★	3½★	3½★	3★	2½★	4★	2½★	2★	3★
Mississippi (Paramount)	2★	3★	3★		3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	2½★	2★	3★
Mr. Dynamite (Universal)	2★	3★	2★	2½★	2½★	2★	2½★	2½★	3★	3★	2★	3★	2½★	2★
Murder in the Fleet (M-G-M)	3★	1★	1½★	2★	2★	2★	1½★	2½★	1½★	2★	1★	1★	½★	2★
Murder Man (M-G-M)	2★	2★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	2★	2★	2★	1★	2★	2★
Nell Gwyn (United Artists)	4★	3½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3½★		3★	2½★	3★
A Night at the Ritz (Warners)	2★	2½★	2★	1★	2★	2★	1★	1½★		2★		2★	1½★	2★
No More Ladies (M-G-M)	3★	2★	2★	3★	3★	2½★	2½★	2½★	3★	2★	2½★		3★	3★
Oil for the Lamps of China (Warners)	5★	3½★	4★	4★	4★	2★	3★	3★	4★	3½★	3★	4★	3★	4★
One More Spring (Fox)	3★	4★	4★	4★	3★	3★	4★	3★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★
Orchids to You (Fox)	2★	1½★	1★	2★	2★	2★	2★	2½★	2★	2★		2★	2½★	2★

Name of Picture and Company	Modern Screen	N. Y. Times	N. Y. Herald Tribune	N. Y. American	N. Y. Evening Journal	N. Y. Post	N. Y. Sun	N. Y. Daily News	N. Y. Daily Mirror	World-Telegram	Chicago Herald-Examiner	Los Angeles Examiner	Variety	General Ratings
Page Miss Glory (Warners)	3★	2★	1½★	4★	3★	2★	2★	3★	3★	2½★	4★	3½★	3★	3★
Paris in Spring (Paramount)	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★	2★	3★	3½★	3★	3★	2½★	2★	3★	3★
The People's Enemy (RKO)	2★	2★	2★	2★		2★	2★	2½★	2★	2★			1★	2★
People Will Talk (Paramount)	2★	2★	2★		1½★	2★	2★	½★	1★	1½★	3★		1½★	2★
Princess Charming (G-B)	1★	1★	1½★	1★		1½★	1★	1½★	2★	1★		1★	1★	1★
Public Hero No. 1 (M-G-M)	3★	3½★	4★	3★	3★	4★	3★	3★	4★	3★	4★	3★	4★	3★
The Raven (Universal)	3★	1★	2★	2★	2★	2★	1½★	1½★	2½★	1★	2★		2½★	2★
Roberta (RKO)	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	4★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★	5★
Sanders of the River (United Artists)	2★	1½★	2★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	2½★	2½★	1★		2½★	3★	2★
The Secret Bride (Warners)	3★	2★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★
Shadow of Doubt (M-G-M)	3★	3★	3★	3★		2½★	2½★	1½★	3★	3★	2★	3★	2½★	3★
Shanghai (Paramount)	2★	3★	3★	2½★	2★	2★	1½★	2½★	2★	2½★	2★	2★	2★	2★
She (RKO)	3★	3★	2½★	2★	3★	2★	1½★	2★	3★	1★	3★	2★	3★	2★
She Married Her Boss (Columbia)	4★	4★	4★	3★	3★	3★	4★	3★	4★	3½★				4★
Special Agent (Warners)	2★	3★	2★	3★	3★	3½★	3★	3★	3★	3★			2★	3★
Steamboat Round the Bend (Fox)	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★	3★		2½★	3★
The 39 Steps (G-B)	4★	4★	3½★	4★	3½★	4★	4★	3½★	3★	4★			3½★	4★
Times Square Lady (M-G-M)	2★	2½★	2★	2½★	2★	3★	2★	2★	2★	2★			2½★	2★
Top Hat (RKO)	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★
Transient Lady (Universal)	2★	2★	3★	2★	2★	3★	2★	2★	2★	2★	3★	2★	2★	2★
The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes (G-B)	2★	3★	2½★	3★	2½★	3★		2½★	2½★	2½★			2★	2★
Two for Tonight (Paramount)	1★	2★		1½★		2½★	1½★	2★	1½★	1★			1★	1★
Vagabond Lady (M-G-M)	2★	2½★	2★	2★	3★	2★	2½★	2½★	2★		2★		2★	2★
Vanessa (M-G-M)	3★	2½★	2½★	3½★	2½★	3★	2½★	3★	3★	3★	2½★	3★	2★	3★
The Wedding Night (Sam Goldwyn)	3★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★	4★
We're in the Money (Warners)	3★	1★		2★	2½★	2★	½★	2½★				2★	1★	2★
The Werewolf of London (Universal)	2★	2½★	2★	2½★	2½★		3★	2½★	3★		3★	3★	2★	2★

A NEW KIND of Mildness

Scientists have found the mildness of cigarette smoke depends not on the tobacco but on its preparation. The smoke from your Philip Morris cigarettes has been proven definitely and measurably milder than from ordinary cigarettes. This fact has been presented to, and accepted by, the medical profession.

America's Finest 15¢ Cigarette

"Call for PHILIP MORRIS"

"Reduced 37 POUNDS with DILEX-REDUSOLS" writes Mrs. H. H. LANGLEY

YOU can have THE SLENDER FIGURE OF YOUTH!

Now YOU can take off POUNDS of UGLY FAT THIS SAFE, EASY QUICK WAY!

No Dieting...No Self Denial, No Strenuous Exercises!

SOUNDS too good to be true? Yet it is true. Dilex-Redusols increase your metabolism . . . they turn food into energy instead of fat. You will be amazed at your increased vitality!

REDUCE 12 POUNDS WITH 1st box...or no cost!

■ Many satisfied users report they have reduced as much as 40 and 50 pounds with safe Dilex-Redusols.

Eat What You Wish And All You Want!

■ At last you can reduce safely and quickly without denying yourself the good things of life. You do not have to go through tiresome exercises...simply take these carefully prepared capsules and watch the fat disappear! Dilex-Redusols are effective because they remove the cause of obesity.

Profit By the Amazing Experiences of Others!

REDUCED 50 POUNDS "I want you to tell every woman about my reducing 50 pounds." Mrs. E. D.

LOST 40 POUNDS "I have lost 40 pounds in 13 weeks." Mrs. H. C. R.

LOST 35 POUNDS "Changed my weight from 169 to 134 pounds." Mrs. H.L.

REDUCED 36 POUNDS "Am losing 15 pounds a month with Redusols"... Miss L. H.

The DILEX-REDUSOL Way is the Safe Way!

■ Do not accept any substitute for safe Dilex-Redusols...the absolutely harmless capsules that reduce your weight by increasing your metabolism. Dilex-Redusols contain no thyroid extract or other harmful ingredients. They are absolutely safe when taken as directed. Beware of any product that makes extravagant claims for more rapid reductions...physicians will tell you it is harmful for anyone to reduce more than 15 pounds a month.

Remember you reduce 12 pounds...or no cost!

DON'T WAIT... MAIL COUPON TODAY

DILEX INSTITUTE
9 East 40th Street, Dept. 8512A, New York City

☐ Enclosed find $3.00 for which please send, postpaid, one box of 90 Dilex-Redusol Capsules in plain wrapper.

☐ Send one box of 90 Dilex-Redusol Capsules, C.O.D. I will pay postman $3.00 (plus 23c. postage).

If I do not lose at least 12 pounds after taking the first box of Dilex-Redusols as directed, you will refund my $3.

*Name*________________
Write Mr., Mrs. or Miss
*Address*________________
*City*________ *State*________
*Give Height*______ *Weight*______ *Age*____ Canadian and Foreign Countries Cash in Advance

Beauty Advice

(Continued from page 17)

fragrance-bearing beauty aids, too, as well as in perfume. I can give you carnation, orange blossom, and violet fragrances in delightful bath powders and Eau de Colognes. What are your guesses? Write me, and I'll tell you if they're right.

Now that you've had a guessing party, perhaps you would like some practical hints for your next honest-to-goodness holiday party. Well, first off, there's a grand new two-minute facial. It's oatmeal all dressed in a heavenly fragrance, and with new beautifying properties that you mustn't fail to know about over the holidays. All you have to do is to blend it with water, and it turns into a smooth creamy lotion that will make you feel as if you had acquired a new skin. It is particularly helpful for the rough dry skin to which we are all so subject now that the weather has reverted to type. Then again it combats large pores by deep-cleaning. You know the hardest skins to treat are the large-pored, dry skins. It seems that they are even worse than the oily skins that are so productive of ugly coarse pores. Blackheads which are the result of inefficient methods of cleaning will respond to this two-minute facial. Since the holiday season is almost under your noses, you'll be glad to learn of such a quick cleansing method for party occasions, and after-party occasions when it seems that you're too "dead tired" to so much as pick up a wash cloth. When you've only two minutes to dress for that important twosome . . . there you have a perfect two-minute pick-me-up.

With your skin in condition, you'll want to apply your perfume right on the skin—the only proper place for it. Fabrics have an imperceptible odor all their own. They destroy some of the essential delicacy of the perfume fragrance that the warmth of the skin serves to enhance. Mary Carlisle applies her perfume with the perfume bottle stopper, touching it to her ear lobes, the seductive hollow of her throat, and her wrists. Rita Cansino, new Fox starlet, touches her perfume to her eyelashes. You have to be skillful in doing this so as to avoid getting any in your eyes. Ginger Rogers has a trick that is especially alluring. She adds just a drop of perfume to her eyeshadow before she applies it. I have heard of several of the stars adding a little perfume to their foundation cream, too, as a fragrant base for their powder. It all sounds very festive! doesn't it?

Because I know that you're going to be particularly anxious to keep your personal daintiness contributing to your allure during the holiday season, I have prepared a special bulletin for you about the whys and wherefores of Personal Daintiness. It tells you about deodorants that deodorize without preventing perspiration, and those that prevent both odor and perspiration. It talks about soap appeal and sex appeal. It will clear up all the guess-work questions you've been wanting to ask about the rather intimate subject of a woman's personal daintiness.

You'll see that I'm trying to be your good angel this month, because I have yet another special bulletin for you, and this one has a great many tips to help you solve your gift problems as well as your own personal glamor problems.

Get the answers to your guess-work questions now and send in this coupon.

MARY BIDDLE,
Modern Screen,
149 Madison Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Kindly send me your bulletins on Personal Daintiness ☐
Holiday Beauty ☐

Name.............................
Address.............................
No. Street
City.................State.........
Just check and send in with stamped, addressed envelope.

A gay trio at the tennis matches—Norma Shearer, Sam Goldwyn and Jack Gilbert. Jack certainly is getting about the town these days and nights!

Information Desk

(Continued from page 62)

Grove, W. Va.; DOROTHY ROBINSON, Pompton Lakes, N. J.; ELAINE MIDDLETON, La Grange, Ill.; JAMES MANK, Indianapolis, Ind.—Katharine Hepburn probably holds the world's record for the number of times fired from stage productions. She was kicked out of the lead in "The Big Pond," removed from the casts of "Death Takes a Holiday" and "The Animal Kingdom" and even temporarily canned from the production in which she eventually gained Broadway stardom, "The Warrior's Husband." Her dynamic personality and fine work in this play caused RKO officials to sign her to a long term contract and put her in "A Bill of Divorcement." She then scored in "Christopher Strong," and "Morning Glory" followed by "Little Women." Briefly, these are the highlights of Miss Hepburn's rise and present fame in the cinema sun. Miss Hepburn was born in Hartford, Conn., on November 8 about 27 years ago. She is a graduate of Bryn Mawr. Her first appearance on the legitimate stage was in "These Days." She next understudied Hope Williams in "Holiday" and substituted for her one night on the road tour. She has also appeared with considerable success in stock productions, particularly in Baltimore. Katharine has auburn hair, green eyes, and a beautiful, slender figure. She never goes to night clubs or large parties. Goes to bed very early. For hobbies she indulges in tennis, swimming and golf. She is divorced from Ludlow Smith and rumored already married to Leland Hayward. Following "Alice Adams" she is now working on "Sylvia Scarlett" with Brian Aherne.

VIOLA CRISSINGER, New Windsor, Md.—Maurice Murphy played the part of Jimmy in "Curly Top." He is a free lance player and you can probably reach him at the 20th Century-Fox Studios, 1401 N. Western Ave., Hollywood, Cal.

OXFORD CLUB, Rockford, Ill.; EDWARD M. WRIGHT, JR., IRENE OSIKA, Chicago, Ill.; EDITH GALLOWAY, TERRY O'CONNOR, Warren, Ohio; HELEN HIDA, Plainfield, N. J.; BETTY KNOWLES, Rocky Mt., N. C.; EATON SMITH, Lebanon, N. J.; BEVERLY BEVILLE, Detroit, Mich.; ANTHONY HANSEN, Brooklyn, N. Y.; MARGEAN SCHULTZ, Michigan City, Ind.; VIRGINIA CERNEY, Wilmetre, Ill.; BETTYE LAWSON, Reisterstown, Md.—Little Jackie Cooper can hardly be called that any longer. He was 12 his last birthday, September 15, and is now all of 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 135 pounds. Born in Los Angeles, he is the son of Mabel Leonard, a former vaudeville violinist, and the nephew of the well-known director, Norman Taurog. He was educated in kindergarten, then by private tutors. Because of the position of his uncle in the movie world, it naturally followed that Jackie should turn to the screen. His first part was a very small one in a Lloyd Hamilton comedy. Other bits followed, including some with "Our Gang." "Skippy" was the picture that launched him on his road to stardom, but "The Champ" with Wallace Beery was the biggest hit of his entire career. His hobby is tennis and airplanes. He is enthusiastic about athletics and likes dogs. Jackie has blonde hair and hazel eyes. "O'Shaughnessy's Boy," with Wally Beery, is his most recent vehicle. You can write him at M-G-M Studios, Culver City, Cal.

LUCY KALEN, Boston, Mass.; ELIZABETH KIRKPATRICK, Indiana, Pa.; JESSIE DETTY, Steilacoam, Wash.; ANN ROWE, Hamilton, Canada; SYLVIA CALHOUN, Olympia, Wash.; BERTHA MARKINS, Wordsworth, Ohio; MARGARET SCHISLER, Nashville, Tenn.; M. FRIEDBERGER, ALICE CHECK, Phila., Pa.; ELSIE MARTIN, Falls City, Neb.; ELAINE LECAS, ALICE PERRETTI, New York City; SADIE GREENBLATT, Plainfield, N. J.; VIRGINIA CAMPBELL, Sioux Falls, S. D.; M. HANLIN, Bklyn., N. Y.—The future Anthony Adverse—we'd better call him Fredric March for now—was born in Racine, Wis., on August 31, 1898. In 1920 our hero graduated from the University of Wisconsin, having won his letter at football and track and also having been elected to the Beta Gamma Sigma and Alpha Delta Phi fraternities. He won a scholarship which the National City Bank maintained to train students for service in its foreign branches, and consequently worked on a bank staff for nearly a year. Then came a change in bank presidents and young March, fearing a like change in the scholarship, asked for a leave of absence and went on the stage. His first theatrical job was third assistant stage manager, but after that he got speaking parts which, step by step, became larger. For three years he played stock in Denver, where he met and married Florence Eldridge. In 1928 Fredric went to Los Angeles to play on the stage in "The Royal Family" and as a result was offered a part in the Paramount talkie, "The Dummy," which he accepted. This resulted in a long term contract. This handsome gent is 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 170 pounds, has brown hair and brown eyes. His favorite recreations are horseback riding, tennis and swimming. Fredric and his wife (it's still Florence Eldridge) have two adopted children, a girl and a boy. As hinted above, Fred will make "Anthony Adverse" in the title role—and a good Anthony he should be, too. (Note to V. C.—Marilyn Knowlden was the cute little girl who played Fredric's foster child in "Les Miserables.") You can reach him at the United Artists Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., Hollywood, Cal.

INFORMATION DESK,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please print a brief life story of ....

....

in your department.

Name......................................

City...............State....................

WHO'S AFRAID OF A BIG BAD CORN?

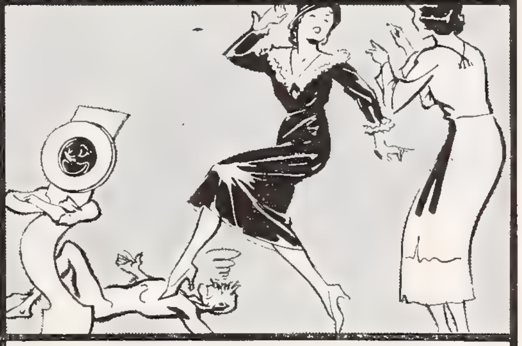
"Not I", said Brave Blue-Jay, as he set about to rescue the beautiful lady in distress

(1) She was in distress, too, that beautiful lady! This terrible corn had her by the toe . . and he just wouldn't let go! He stabbed and kicked and made ugly wrinkles and a look of agony come into her beautiful face.

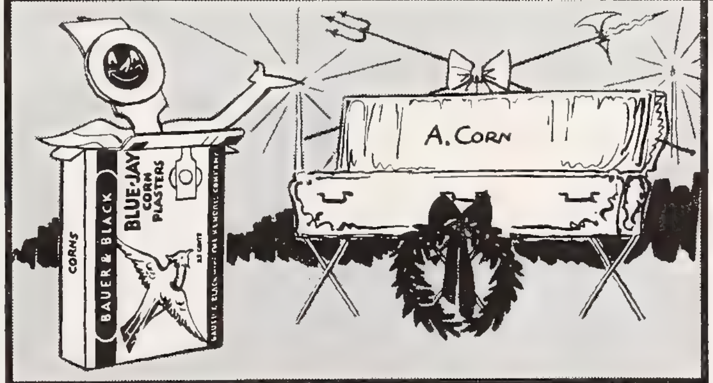
CORNS
BAUER & BLACK

(2) Who will come to her rescue?"Blue-Jay!" whispers a kind and helpful friend. And out of his package-home leaps Brave Blue-Jay, ready and willing. Quick as a flash—

(3) Blue-Jay attacked that terrible corn and had him down in a moment utterly helpless. The villain's torturing hold on the beautiful lady was instantly broken, and—



(4) She sprang to her feet and danced from sheer joy! Now that corn would trouble her no more . . would no longer make her cranky, nor keep her from dancing with her friends!



(5) The end of the story is the end of the corn. Imprisoned by Blue-Jay for three days, at the end of that time his lifeless form was lifted out, carried away. Thanks to Brave Blue-Jay!

MORAL: If you have a corn, get rid of it safely and quickly with Blue-Jay—the scientific corn remover ● The pain stops the minute Blue-Jay is applied. The snug-fitting pad of the finest softest felt cushions the corn against painful shoe pressure. Then the mild Blue-Jay medication gently loosens and undermines the corn—and after 3 painless days the dainty pad is quickly removed and the corn lifted out easily and completely.

Blue-Jay scientific Corn Plasters have been used successfully by millions of corn sufferers for 35 years. They are made by Bauer & Black, famous surgical dressing house.

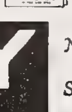
Tested and Approved
4653
by Good Housekeeping Bureau
Conducted by Good Housekeeping Magazine

BAUER & BLACK
BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

25c at all druggists. Special sizes for bunions and calluses.

© 1935, Kendall Co.

BLUE-JAY
BAUER & BLACK SCIENTIFIC
CORN PLASTER



EXERCISE BOOK FREE Illustrates valuable exercises for foot health and beauty. Contains helpful information for foot sufferers. Address Bauer & Black, 2500 So. Dearborn St., Chicago.

(Pasting coupon on government postcard saves postage)
MS-12

Name..

Street...

City...

STOP A COLD THE FIRST DAY!

Drive It Out of Your System!

A COLD once rooted is a cold of danger! Trust to no makeshift method.

A cold, being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. A cold also calls for a COLD treatment and not a preparation good for a number of other things as well.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is definite treatment for a cold. It is expressly a cold treatment in tablet form. It is internal in effect and it does four important things.

Four Effects

First, it opens the bowels. Second, it checks the infection in the system. Third, it relieves the headache and fever. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Grove's Bromo Quinine is distinguished for this fourfold effect and it is what you want for the prompt relief of a cold.

All drug stores sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. When you ask for it, don't let anyone switch you to something else, for any reason! The cost is small, but the stake is large!

A Cold is an Internal Infection and Requires Internal Treatment
LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE
For Colds
PRICE 35 CENTS
FOR COLDS & SIMPLE HEADACHES
SINCE 1889

GROVE'S LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

If You Would Have a Figure Like Crawford

(Continued from page 43)

the studio takes them in hand, remodels them, fixes up what's wrong with them—and the studio pays the bills. And that's a darn good way to make a selfish, lazy sissy out of a girl. But when you have to struggle and skimp and sacrifice to get the things you want, you can throw your shoulders back and say, "I am somebody." And not only that, you won't forget so easily and so quickly that you were once an ugly duckling, as the movie stars love to forget. Gosh! Some of those stars' memories are as short as their leading man's close-ups. We seldom appreciate what's given to us.

AND now back to this month's movie star double, Joan Personette. You have a beautiful forehead, high and broad. And the structure of your face is very nice. It is the kind of face that has camera possibilities. Remember, it was the possibilities that the studio saw in Joan Crawford. Your hair is nice and you show good taste in the way you arrange it. You're smart to keep it simple.

And now I want you to gain health and vigor. Notice some of the things Joan Crawford does. She has a swimming pool but she isn't an ardent swimmer. She takes long sun baths, and there's nothing better for you than that, but she's wise enough to know that swimming develops ugly shoulder, arm and thigh muscles.

Joan can't afford to develop her shoulder muscles. As it is she has very wide shoulders. Do you know that gal is a size sixteen through the shoulders and a size twelve in the waist? And she gives the appearance of being a small fourteen!

Also Joan Crawford dances. But she dances in the right way. That's why her legs remain good looking. She doesn't go in for the muscle building buck and wing, tap stuff. She does more soft shoe work and graceful bends.

Turn on your radio or phonograph to some snappy music that's got exactly the right beat and tempo. All the old tunes are swell. Like "Turkey in the Straw" or "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain." Believe me, that tune will get the moon over the mountain. That's what Kate Smith has been trying to do for years. I'm sure if that moon of hers were in the first quarter it would be lots easier.

There's an old saying that when you see the moon in the first quarter any wish you make will come true. But don't just wish and let it go at that. Wish and work is the way—and let's have a lot more working than wishing. Because right now I'm going to tell you how to lose fifteen pounds in one month.

Get up early. Never sleep more than eight hours. Every morning or evening get those tunes going and dance around the room a dozen times. Put some pep in the dance. Take this limbering-up exercise. Stand with feet slightly apart, arms straight above your head. Stretch and reach as high as you can. Now swing the body from side to side. Keep knees stiff and do not move the feet. Always keep arms above head. Then swing the body from the waistline in a circle, not moving the lower part of the body. Do this ten times in one direction and then reverse.

Take a brisk walk whenever you can. Don't, don't sit down after meals. Get up and move around. Don't take hot baths. A tepid shower is best. Use a body brush and dry with a real heavy Turkish towel.

THEN take your special exercises for the fat spots. (How are you gals getting along with those hip and thigh exercises I've already given you? Is the soreness gone yet? No. Well never mind, keep it up. It's good for you.) But for heaven's sake use your common sense. Don't write me for a million exercises at once. Stick to one job at a time. If you're fatter in the hips than any place else work on them until they begin to go down before you start on the abdomen exercises.

And now for the diet. Some women, you know the type, the whiny ones—complain that it's monotonous. I'd like to give them a good shaking—and it would do them good, too, believe me. I give you plenty of choice—and how can anything be monotonous when your mirror tells you that you're getting slimmer and more beautiful every day. Stop complaining!

BREAKFAST

Small glass grapefruit or orange juice
Slice melba toast or thin wholewheat toast or rye wafer with a little honey, but no butter
Cup black coffee (no sugar)

LUNCHEON

Glass tomato juice or grapefruit juice
Large bowl of clear vegetable soup or consommé (no crackers) or (that's "or" not "and") green salad or cole slaw
In the middle of the afternoon tomato juice or orange juice or an apple.

DINNER

Fruit cup or melon (not watermelon) with lemon juice and no salt
Salad of lettuce and tomato or endive and watercress (Dressing of very little oil and lemon)
Choice of the following:
Small broiled rare steak
One double lamb chop
One slice one-fourth inch thick roast beef
Two slices of broiled or roasted turkey
Chicken breast and wing
Two slices of broiled lamb
Small portion of broiled ground round steak (without fat)
(No thick gravies or sauces with any meat)
Two vegetables (Peas, carrots, broccoli, greens, etc.)
Small baked potato prepared like this: When potato is done scoop out the inside leaving about one-fourth inch still on the skin. Put this skin back in the oven until it is crisp and brown. Eat this instead of bread
For dessert have fruit gelatin or baked apple without sugar or stewed fruit without sugar
Use very little salt. And take no liquor at all!

This diet, combined with the exercises will take off fifteen pounds in one month. It's worth working for! It's worth fighting for!

Remember, too, that I am always eager to help you with any beauty, weight and general health problem that you may care to ask me about. Just send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply.

Silent Young Man

(Continued from page 34)

to the sincere, emotional youth sort of comes under the head of an understatement. He mooned around for weeks before he decided to try to get over it. He still phones her. There are those who say he has visited his ex-wife on the "So Red the Rose" set, but this Henry denies. At any rate, no woman has meant anything to the lad since Margaret, which puts him in the class of a "one-woman man," a rare specie in Hollywood—or in any town for that matter.

Henry will do anything in the interest of his job. The day we saw him, the company was shooting the ice floe scenes for "Way Down East." Many a leading man would have demanded a double rather than take a certain ducking as he fled after Rochelle Hudson over huge cakes of ice. But our hero wrapped himself up in a mackinaw, boots and fur cap, on the hottest July day that ever bloomed, and did his stunt. Of course he touched bottom somewhere between the third and fourth cakes of ice, but he came up smiling and asked, "Will I have to do this again? It would just be like someone saying that my scarf wasn't on right the first time!"

HENRY wants to get back to the New York stage. "Trite but true," says he, "there's nothing like audience reaction. There's nothing like building up to a big dramatic scene and being able to sustain the emotion. In pictures, when you're all het up someone shouts 'Cut' and you've got to deflate like a balloon and start all over again.

"I'm not saying a thing against Hollywood, mind you. I like the place. I have an apartment now—share it with another fellow—and we have a cook. She's better than the house man we used to have. He sort of got us down. He'd worked for some big shot or other and I think he thought we were a little on the uncouth side. You know, not dressing for dinner and such like. I guess I'm not much on wardrobe, which annoys heck out of a valet."

Henry flew to Omaha over week-ends during production. It worried the company, but his father was ill and he was going to be with him every minute he could steal from work. There's a loyalty

Skeet shooting is one of Hollywood's favorite sports and here is one of its youngest devotees, George Breakston. He's currently appearing in "The Return of Peter Grimm."

WHICH IS YOUR LUCKY NUMBER?
1 DARK BRUNETTE
2 RACHEL
3 BEIGE
4 BRUNETTE
5 NATURAL
Lady Esther

You May Think It is No. 1 When It Really is No. 3; Or No. 2 Rather than No. 4

The Wrong Shade of Face Powder Will Make You Look Years Older Than You Really Are!

BY Lady Esther

Are you using the right shade of face powder for you?

That sounds like a rather needless question, doesn't it? For there is nothing a woman selects more confidently than her color of face powder. Yet, it is an actual fact, as artists and make-up experts will tell you, that many women use altogether the wrong shade of face powder.

The shade they so fondly believe makes them look their youngest and most attractive does just the opposite and makes them look years older than they really are!

Brunettes think that because they are brunettes they should use a dark shade. Blondes think they should use a light shade. Titians think they should use something else.

Choose by Trying

The fact is, you shouldn't choose a face powder shade according to your "type" or coloring, but according to which one is the most becoming for you. After all, a brunette may have a very fair skin while a blonde may have a dark or olive skin or any shade between. The only way to tell, therefore, is to try all five shades which, experts agree, accommodate all colorings.

So fundamentally sound is this principle that I want you to prove it to yourself at my expense. I will therefore send you all five shades of my Lady Esther Face Powder free of charge and obligation. When you get the five shades, try all five on. Don't think that your choice must be confined to any one or two shades. As I say, try on all five. Maybe the very shade you think least suited to you is really your most becoming, your most flattering.

Stays on for 4 Hours

When you make the shade test of Lady Esther Face Powder, I want you to notice, too, how smooth this face powder is—how evenly it goes on and long it holds. By actual test, you will find this face powder adheres for four hours or more.

Write today for all five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder which I offer free. With the five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder I will also send you a 7-day tube of Lady Esther Face Cream. The coupon brings both the powder and cream.

(You can paste this on a penny postcard.) (19) FREE

Lady Esther, 2010 Ridge Avenue, Evanston, Illinois

Please send me by return mail a liberal supply of all five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder; also a 7-day supply of your Lady Esther Four-purpose Face Cream.

*Name*____________________

*Address*____________________

*City*____________ *State*________

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Ltd., Toronto, Ont.)

Change the color... and you change the dress
So much easier now because RIT offers FAST COLORS WITHOUT BOILING!

LET your own mirror and the flattering comments of friends prove that last season's dress can be a smashing success today—with Rit!

Tinting and dyeing with Rit is so easy, so sensible, so economical, you'll find dozens of uses for it. For tinting, use only warm water; even for dark colors, you need NO BOILING. Try Rit today—you'll be grateful for the introduction!

Rit is a concentrated wafer: easier to measure than powder; won't sift out of the package; dissolves instantly.

INSTANT

RIT
dissolves in 60 seconds

AT ALL DEALERS

RIT

TINTS AND DYES

White Rit Color Remover . . . takes out color without harming the fabric—really whitens white goods.

and sincerity about the lad that is truly touching. It shows through in his work. It shines through his eyes, which are the bluest blue you could ever imagine. He's a good-looking youth, but seems totally unaware of it. He's very tall and slim and diets in a mild way. If you accused him of this, he'd say, "Don't be redick," but if scrambled eggs and stewed tomatoes every luncheon is a pleasure, then there's no such thing as a key to the calories!

Mr. Fonda spends his evenings at home. Which is another source of wonderment to the city of glitter. There are so many places to go when the sun goes down, gay places with guh-rand music and celebrities and beautiful girls. Henry doesn't take them in. He's not interested at this point. He doesn't care to be rumored about. He says, "If the right girl comes along, she'll never believe I'm on the level if she's read I've been here and there with this beauty and that." Being on the level is very important to Mr. F. Things are as they seem to him.

"I've got to sing in Lily Pons' picture," he said. "At least it's in the script. Maybe when they hear the play-back, they'll cut out the song, which should spare the audience no end. There's no need of torturing nice people, you know, when all they want is good, clean fun—a little honest entertainment." Which, we suppose, is fair enough, even though it is said that Henry can hit a mean musical note.

OFTEN Hollywood does strange things to people. Sometimes it gives them the big head. There are those skeptics who claim that when Fonda begins reading his very excellent press notices he's going to think, "Pretty good, this Henry—eh, wot?" That it would be only human. Our guess is that no such thing is due to occur.

He says of himself, of course half kiddingly, "I must be pretty hot stuff. Why, the producer who signed me to make pictures has loaned me out ever since the day I put my name to the contract. Yep, two for Fox and one for RKO. Some fun, hey?"

The very fact that other companies bid for the services of a movie newcomer shows what faith the powers that be in the Celluloid City have in Henry. He really has about everything, you see. Youth, good looks and acting ability. A rare combination to turn up in a town where if you look the part, you're apt to be blah and if you're a swell actor, the profile isn't anything to be taken seriously; in fact, it should be somewhere on the comedy lot.

Yes, we think if we had any shekels to bet, we'd place them on Henry Fonda's very straight nose and, so, would come in the winner of the cinema sweepstakes.

Romantic—Never Routine

(Continued from page 37)

factors who decided that what this country needs—besides a good 5-cent cigar—is more connubial osculation. So they took the following pledge:

1. I solemnly pledge myself daily to embrace my wife, kiss her and tell her that I love her.
2. I promise to compliment her at least once each day on some particular part of the menu she prepares.
3. I promise to perform at least one kind and unexpected deed for her daily.

Latest news reports attest that, after a fair trial, the wives of these reformed husbands declare it to be a marvelous idea, and insist that the Club be continued. . . . (Did some of these smart husbands perhaps hear of the wonderful results of the Gibbons-del Rio marital experiment in romance?)

"AND," continued Dolores, breaking in on my reverie, "you can't imagine how I anticipate that nightly dinner date with Cedric. That's the advantage of being absorbed in my work all day long. I'm sure, if I didn't work as hard as I do now and if I had the empty time on my hands I used to have in Mexico City, I couldn't make a go of my marriage. But being compelled to see other people all day long makes coming back to Cedric both a soothing tonic and a wonderfully fresh adventure.

"Then there's another important rule we observe which makes ours an out-of-the-ordinary marriage. The question of finances never enters into it at all.

"I earn money enough to be financially independent of Cedric—and I spend it as I like. I've always thought it shameful for women to have to go begging to their husbands every time they want a new dress or coat. To be made to realize that they're dependent, body and soul, on the man they marry. Ugh! It's humiliating. I could never bear it!"

But Dolores admits that Cedric doesn't allow her too much independence. That's never good for women. As the old grannies say: "It gives 'em ideas—puts foolish notions into their heads."

Cedric insists on paying all the household expenses. Which indicates clearly to all concerned whose house it is and who's the master in it. There should never be any doubt about that, he firmly believes. And Dolores quite agrees with him.

So with the salary Dolores earns (which is no slouch these days) under her new contract with Warner-First National, she buys all her own clothes, pays the wages of her secretary, and does lovely gracious things for her parents—such as building and decorating a new home for her mother to occupy during her annual six months' stay in Hollywood.

DOLORES is exceptionally proud of that house because it is completely her own brain-child—every spot of color, every stick of furniture in it. It was her way of showing Cedric how much she'd learned from him in the matter of artistic selection.

She admitted all this to me one day in her dressing-room—which, by the way, is also very modern—a sparkling affair in white and tomato red. When I admired it and remarked how perfectly it suited her personality, she said, "I'm glad you think so. To do one's best work and to be happiest one should always manage to wear a touch of one's personality color, or have it in one's surroundings. Red is my color—just to see it makes me feel alive and gay!"

Actually, Dolores looks up to Cedric's intelligence with something of awe, as an adoring pupil regards an adored and splendid teacher.

"I know he's mentally superior to me, and I'm certainly not sorry!" she declares.

In the past four years, since her marriage to Cedric Gibbons, Dolores del Rio has learned more about life and the right way to self-expression and the achievement of happiness, than most young women of her age—and certainly more than she ever learned in the 24 or so odd years before Cedric entered her life. She's profited wonderfully by the sad experience of her first marriage.

They were all set for matrimony but now Irene Hervey and Bob Taylor just go out together occasionally.

She realizes now what is of permanent value to a woman and she's employing the knowledge that was born of suffering to maintain the happiness she's found with Cedric.

FIRSTLY, Dolores realizes that there can't be a true and happy relationship between a man and a woman unless it's tacitly understood by both that the man is superior to the woman in some way that counts. And that doesn't necessarily mean earning more money—or being physically stronger. It's much more subtle than that. A woman must never be allowed to consider herself the superior or the equal of her mate in every respect. It's fatal—no matter how emancipated the two people consider themselves. Think back over the smashed-up marriages in Hollywood. How many times are they caused, primarily, by the wife being a Neon-lighted star who regards herself, and compels everyone else to do so also, as the superior member of the union. And the husband—whatever his profession and no matter how good at it he is—must either submit to being patronized because he's just Mr. Movie Star—or get out because he can't stand it!

This explains Dolores' delight in being able to look up to Cedric's "superior intelligence." She wants to feel herself inferior to him in some respects!

Then there's still another thing she's learned. Keeping a love relationship at a high pitch of emotional satisfaction depends largely upon the woman. Having become quite a young philosopher, Dolores has a theory about this. She believes it's easy for a woman to do this, at least, easier than it would be for a man because every woman is a true actress at heart!

"A woman never completely reveals herself as she really is no matter how much she adores her man. She simply can't help acting just a little, even though she wants to be entirely honest!"

Further, Dolores believes that love is like the theatre—"You have to continually create and maintain a perfect illusion to hold an audience, or your lover, spellbound!"

NEW EASY WAY TO Perfect Chocolate Pie!

EAGLE BRAND CHOCOLATE PIE

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1⅓ cups (1 can) Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
½ cup water
Baked pie shell (8-inch)

Melt chocolate in double boiler. Add Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk, stirring over boiling water five minutes until mixture thickens. Add water, stir until thoroughly blended. Pour into baked pie shell. Garnish with whipped cream if desired. Chill.

● Use any other recipe, and it'll take you 30 minutes' cooking and stirring and watching to get this creamy-smooth filling! Don't fail to clip this magic recipe! ● But remember—Evaporated Milk won't—can't—succeed in this recipe. You must use Sweetened Condensed Milk. Just remember the name Eagle Brand.

MAGIC RECIPES
Quicker, easier surer to succeed

FREE! New Cook Book of Wonders!

New! New! NEW! Just off the press! "Magic Recipes" is a thrilling new successor to "Amazing Short-cuts." Gives you brand-new recipes—unbelievably quick and easy—for pies, cookies, candies, frostings! Sure-fire custards! Easy-to-make refrigerator cakes! Quicker ways to delicious salad dressings, sauces, beverages, ice creams (freezer and automatic). Address: The Borden Sales Co., Inc., Dept.MM125 350 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Name__________________
Street__________________
City__________ State________
(Print name and address plainly)
This coupon may be pasted on a penny postcard.

Borden Quality

Wedding bells rang for Sylvia Sidney and Bennett Cerf recently. The pair won't have time for a honeymoon until Sylvia finishes her Paramount film, "Mary Burns, Fugitive."

VOICE

100% Improvement Guaranteed

We build, strengthen the vocal organs—not with singing lessons—but by fundamentally sound and scientifically correct silent exercises . . and absolutely guarantee to improve any singing or speaking voice at least 100% . . . Write for wonderful voice book—sent free. Learn WHY you can now have the voice you want. No literature sent to anyone under 17 unless signed by parent.

PERFECT VOICE INSTITUTE, Studio 72-19
64 E. Lake St., Chicago

BECOME AN EXPERT
ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $3,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. Only 12,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U. S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A's, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession that Pays."

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 12318-H, Chicago
The School That Has Trained Over 1,200 C. P. A.'s

"I Look Years Younger"

"Sem-Pray Creme made me look 15 years younger. My skin is lovelier too." Mrs. M. S., Richmond, Va. Sem-Pray's rare Eastern oils smooth away erasable lines, wrinkles. Clears, softens, smooths skin instantly. Look years younger. Concentrated. Outlasts 5 ordinary jars of cream. Get Sem-Pray today at all good drug and department stores, 60c. Or send 10c for 7 days supply, to Mme. LaNore, Sem-Pray Salons, Grand Rapids, Mich., Suite 217S.

Sem-Pray Creme
Youthifies Beautifies

It all depends on the WOMAN

There are sensitive women everywhere who do not trust the superficial information that is going around about feminine hygiene. These deep-natured women want the whole truth from the scientific standpoint. They must depend on themselves to sift out the real facts. And to them the news about Zonite will be welcome.

● You do not need to use poisonous antiseptics for feminine hygiene, just because an older generation used them. In those days there were no antiseptics powerful enough for the purpose, except the poisons. But that was before the discovery of Zonite—the antiseptic-germicide of the World War.

Zonite is powerful, and Zonite is safe. Zonite is far more powerful than any dilution of carbolic acid that can be used on the human body. But Zonite is not poisonous. Not caustic. Zonite has never harmed any woman. It will not desensitize tissues. It cannot cause accidental poisoning.

● The old-fashioned poisonous antiseptic has no place in the life of the modern woman. She has welcomed Zonite—and Zonite is now available in every town and city throughout the length and breadth of America. Sold in bottles; 3 sizes, 30c, 60c, $1.00.

Another form of Zonite . . Suppositories

Besides the liquid Zonite, there are also Zonite Suppositories. These are $1.00 for box of a dozen. They are dainty white cone-like forms, each sealed in its own glass vial. Some women prefer them to the liquid. Other women use both. Ask for both the Zonite Suppositories and the Liquid Zonite by name at drug and department stores. There are no substitutes.

● Send for the booklet "Facts for Women." This is a plain, clear statement on the whole subject of feminine hygiene. Much discussed in women's circles. Coupon below will bring you a copy. Read it and get frank, authoritative data on this important phase of modern life. Write today.

USE COUPON FOR FREE BOOKLET

ZONITE PRODUCTS CORPORATION MS-512
Chrysler Building, New York, N. Y.

Please send me free copy of the booklet or booklets checked below.
( ) Facts for Women ( ) Use of Antiseptics in the Home

NAME..
(Please print name)
ADDRESS..
CITY........................STATE....................
(In Canada: Sainte Therese, P.Q.)

Shirley Temple, Saver of Lives

(Continued from page 27)

allowed the dress to be unfastened. Lovingly she patted the soft satin.

"I'm going to keep it always," she said soberly, "and when I get married I'll have a big dress just like it."

Before she left the building, she returned to the sewing room to wave goodbye to the "girls." She carried away an armful of scraps of silk, which they save for her doll clothes, but she left behind a smile on every face. Those women love her and they are also grateful to her for their jobs. They know that when a Shirley Temple picture is being prepared there will be several weeks' work for three extra seamstresses and it makes them all happy.

In "Curly Top" she has eighteen changes of costume. Each tiny garment is beautifully made and finished with the most exquisite handwork—little rabbits on pink satin pajamas, gay flowers embroidered on black velvet. There are hats to accompany many of the costumes. Even her shoes are made to order.

"Every dress we make for Shirley costs from $35 to $40," René Hubert told me. And there is no star for whom the great designer would rather fashion clothes. "She is so refreshing," he explained. And every garment that is made for her is given to her for her personal use when the picture is finished.

Marion Weldon, a young lady who sings and dances, is another who owes her weekly salary directly to Shirley. She learns all of Shirley's songs and dances and, in turn, helps to teach them to Shirley.

"I try them out on Marion," Jack Donohue, the dancing instructor, explained. "When I'm satisfied with them I teach them to Shirley by having her watch Marion. It's the easiest way to teach a child and besides, Shirley is a born mimic."

During a Temple production, he hires an assistant to carry on his regular work so that he is available for Shirley at any time. Handicapped by the law, which allows children to work a limited number of hours a day, he must be ready to rehearse with Shirley whenever she can work with him. In preparing for a new picture they usually rehearse two hours in the morning and two hours in the afternoon. There is an extra pianist hired for Shirley's rehearsals. For "Curly Top" an Hawaiian dancing girl was hired at $15 a day for at least a week to teach her a native dance.

SHIRLEY says her lessons to Miss Lillian Barkley, who teaches the stock players at the studio, but a welfare worker is employed for Shirley exclusively.

This welfare worker, Mrs. Veta Geddes, receives $9 a day for her services and she works every day that Shirley does. She reads to Shirley, plays games and is with her every minute she is on the set.

Both teachers are enthusiastic over their small pupil and say she always worries over other children who work in her pictures. When making the baptizing scene in "The Little Colonel" the little colored boy had to be ducked many times before the scene suited the director. Each time, after the ducking, it was Shirley who ran for the blanket and wrapped him up so he wouldn't take cold.

Generous to a fault, she wants to share her good fortune with others and particularly with her little stand-in, Marilyn Grannis. If she is offered an ice cream cone or a piece of candy, she will scarcely wait to say "thank you" before she adds, "Marilyn is over there."

Marilyn, however, has profited more than in these small attentions by Shirley's rise to stardom. In "Baby Take a Bow" Marilyn, with some other children, was hired to do a specialty number. Mrs. Temple and Shirley took a fancy to Marilyn and her mother and so she has been employed regularly at a salary of about $30 a week to act as Shirley's stand-in. The money Marilyn earns is not needed for "family" expenses and is put away intact for her use later on.

Of course Shirley's mother wouldn't be any place, but with her child. But for her companionship, for teaching Shirley her lines and for other duties she performs (perhaps as a reward for having had Shirley!), Mrs. Temple is paid a salary of $100 a week by the studio.

This money enabled Mrs. Temple to hire a housekeeper to do the work which she had previously done herself. It also enabled the Temples to move into a more secluded home when Shirley's popularity caused a crowd of curiosity seekers to surround their house at all hours of the day and night in an effort to get a peek at the tiny star. While this was an unbearable annoyance to the Temples, it was a break for the real estate dealer who sold them a new home.

Several months ago Shirley's fan mail increased to more than 4,000 letters a week (more than that received by any Fox star) necessitating the hiring of a secretary to answer it. She is a permanent employee and taking care of the mail occupies all of her time.

BESIDES the people employed at the studio in Shirley's pictures and for her in other ways, there are hundreds of other people who enjoy a salary every week on account of this child. There are the people who wrote and published the Shirley Temple books. There are the people who manufacture and distribute the Shirley Temple cut-outs (paper dolls).

There are the Shirley Temple dolls, which must be manufactured, dressed and distributed. This business has grown to huge proportions. There are the Shirley Temple hair ribbons, her latest venture. There are the Shirley Temple dresses, which have become so popular that the company which manufactures them on Long Island, New York, has recently moved the factory into a larger and newer building.

Last, but by no means least, is Shirley's lawyer, Loyd Wright, who makes all of her contracts and takes care of her business.

In spite of this fame and attention, it is the general opinion of those who know that Shirley has remained remarkably unspoiled. Her influence has been felt around the world. Just to see her in a picture is to feel better.

Darryl F. Zanuck has big things in store for Shirley and that means a treat for her great legion of fans.

How would you like to have Shirley in a grand musical? Well, one is being considered now. The idea is to give Shirley's nimble feet and musical talent full sway, surrounding her with a cast that will be the tops.

While all these plans are on foot, Shirley is having a perfectly grand time slowing her fast foot work down to the sedate pace of the minuet and the quaint dignity of the hoop skirts she wears in "The Littlest Rebel." When this is finished she will rest before playing in that beloved old story "Captain January."

Speaking of plans for Shirley, Mr. Zanuck says, "By her talent, Shirley has won her way to the highest rank of the film stars. We mean to help her remain on top. In the future, everything will be done for Shirley that is done for grown-up stars. She will have the best writers and her supporting casts will be composed of outstanding personalities. Great care will be exercised so that her roles will be varied and the fans, whose hearts she has captured, shall remain hers for a long time to come."

With all this sudden wealth, the Temple family has hardly changed its mode of living. Shirley has worked in pictures before and her mother has always accompanied her to the studio. The greatest difference is that formerly Mrs. Temple had to hurry home to prepare dinner for her husband and two hungry boys.

An adverse Supreme Court decision, together with Father Coughlin, couldn't (if they would, and they wouldn't) jar this one-girl institution, for the TRA is the most effective cure-all yet advanced.

Confessions of an Extra Girl

(Continued from page 46)

But when absolutely no more calls came I realized the truth—that the story had been whispered around, that the director was being believed and that I was dubbed "bad news." Apparently others were afraid to give me work lest I "pull off another frame."

In vain I tried to do something about it, but I found that I could not even see the assistant directors who had once given me work. And I realized that I was being "blacklisted."

When I was working more or less steadily I spent the surplus money with which I had come to Hollywood for clothes, because a good wardrobe made me more valuable. The result was that I had no extra money on which to fall back. I was behind with my rent for the first time.

I believed that Hollywood would forget that I was "bad news." Hollywood forgets so quickly, sometimes. And so I began looking for other work to tide me over until that happened.

Another job? What a fool I was! I had not learned typing and shorthand in high school, so sure was I that I was destined to be a famous actress, so I applied for work as a waitress and then as a clerk in cheap stores. But how many thousands of girls there are in Hollywood who come out to seek fame and fortune and, finding neither, start looking for other jobs. Stores and restaurants are filled with would-be Garbos, Crawfords and Colberts.

And so the days dragged on. I was so miserable and unhappy that I would not even read the studio news in the papers.

Now I had one alternative. I might have given up and gone home. But I could not. No, there is something about Hollywood that gets you, even if you're on the very outer fringe. I would undoubtedly have been better off had I not gone to Hollywood in the first place but once there, there is no turning back.

Then finally another alternative presented itself.

One evening Bradley called for me in his car and we drove to the beach together.

Beautiful Eyes
with Maybelline
EYE BEAUTY AIDS
MASCARA...EYE SHADOW...EYEBROW PENCIL...EYELASH TONIC CREAM...EYEBROW BRUSH

FAME AND FORTUNE . . . OR HOME AND HAPPINESS?

When little Annette Monard married the poverty-stricken composer, Fritz Brecker, at a carnival, little does she dream that she will become a great singer . . . nor does Fritz. But, upon realizing what great talent she possesses, he starts her on her career. As Annette rises rapidly and becomes a great artist, Fritz sinks deeper and deeper into the gloom of his own lack of success. He leaves her, and Annette must choose . . . will she have a great career—or a happy married life? With this difficult choice before her, how does she decide?

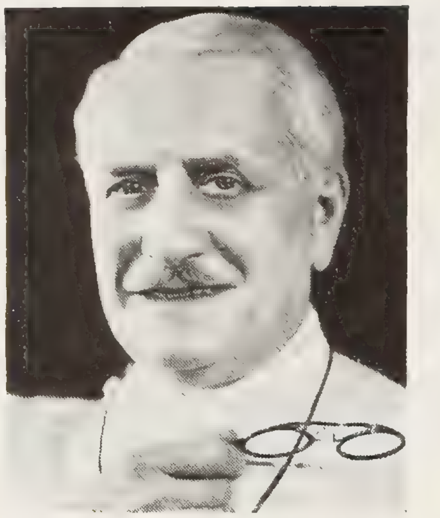
You'll enjoy reading "I DREAM TOO MUCH," the story of RKO Radio's new musical, starring Lily Pons, famous soprano, in her film debut, with Henry Fonda. Complete story in the December SCREEN ROMANCES.

Other complete stories in December will include: "Rose of the Rancho," starring John Boles and Gladys Swarthout . . . "Magnificent Obsession," starring Irene Dunne with Robert Taylor . . . Barbara Stanwyck with Preston Foster in "Annie Oakley" . . . James Cagney and Margaret Lindsey in "Frisco Kid" . . . "A Night at the Opera," starring the Marx Brothers with Kitty Carlisle . . . William Powell and Rosalind Russell in "Black Chamber" . . . Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone in "Mutiny on the Bounty" . . . Helen Twelvetrees and Donald Cook in "Spanish Cape Mystery" . . .

SCREEN ROMANCES

The Love Story Magazine of the Screen

DECEMBER ISSUE NOW ON SALE.



Science Discovers New Way to Increase Weight

Gains of 10 to 25 lbs. in a few weeks. First package must add weight or the trial is free

AN AMAZING new "7-power" yeast discovery in pleasant tablets is putting pounds of solid, normally attractive flesh on thousands of "skinny", run-down people who never could gain an ounce before.

Doctors now know that the real reason why great numbers of people find it hard to gain weight is that they don't get enough Vitamin B and iron in their daily food. Now scientists have discovered that the richest known source of health-building Vitamin B is cultured ale yeast. By a new process the finest imported ale yeast is now concentrated 7 times, making it 7 times more powerful. Then it is combined with 3 kinds of blood-strengthening iron in little tablets called Ironized Yeast tablets.

If you, too, are one of the many "skinny", run-down persons who need these vital elements, get these new "7-power" Ironized tablets from your druggist at once. Day after day, as you take them, watch flat chest develop and skinny limbs round out to normal attractiveness. Indigestion and constipation from the same source quickly vanish, skin clears to normal beauty—you're an entirely new person.

Results guaranteed

No matter how skinny and run-down you may be, try this wonderful new "7-power" Ironized Yeast for just a few short weeks. If you're not delighted with the results of the very first package, your money instantly refunded.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body." Remember, results guaranteed with the very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists. Ironized Yeast Co., Inc., Dept. 312, Atlanta, Ga.

10 lbs., 3 weeks

"I was like a scarecrow. With Ironized Yeast I gained 10 lbs. in 3 weeks."—Fannie Alcorn, Oneida, Tenn.

14 lbs. quick

"I seemed born to be skinny, but with Ironized Yeast I gained 14 lbs. in 3 weeks."—Dora Sotelo, Anaheim, Calif.

"SKINNY? SEE HOW I LOOK SINCE I GAINED 12 POUNDS"

Posed by professional models

Overlooking the beautiful moonlit water, he told me that I had no chance of becoming a star and that I should give up trying to get extra work again.

"Darling," he said, "I love you. I want you to marry me so that I can take care of you and protect you."

The security of a fine husband—no more financial and emotional worries! But I could not accept Bradley now. I had two reasons for my refusal and I hope I can make you understand them.

First of all, I still had to prove to myself that I could act if I were given the chance and I felt that I must not give up when only situations over which I had no control were apparently keeping me back. Secondly, I felt that perhaps Bradley was asking me to marry him simply because he felt sorry for me. And my pride would not let me accept that. Before I could marry Bradley or anybody I had to prove myself in some way.

I tried to explain these things out there in the moonlight but I saw how hurt and disappointed Bradley was. He hid his hurt with anger, called me a "damn career woman" and, when he left me at my door, swore that he would not see me or talk to me until I had "come to my senses." Actually, he did not know in what straightened financial circumstances I was.

AND so began the most depressing and heartbreaking period of my life. There is nothing so dreadful as being alone and without money in Hollywood. Time and again I was tempted to call Bradley but that I could not do until my pride was restored.

I sold a few dresses to the second-hand clothes shops with which Hollywood abounds, but I could not give up all my best things in case I received a call. I pawned a little bracelet with one diamond in it that my mother had given me.

Finally I discovered myself completely without money. For two days I did not eat. Once during those days I weakened and called Bradley. He was not in and I did not leave a message. No, I must see this thing through myself.

But hunger is awful. One night as I walked along the street I thought, "If this were not Hollywood, I would have the alternative of the oldest profession in the world. But, heaven knows, one can't sell love in Hollywood when so many girls are eager to give it."

I must have been a little crazy to think such things. As I walked I stumbled against something. I looked down and saw a garbage can that had just been put out. On the top was a big piece of dry bread. I hurriedly looked about me to see if anyone were looking. I snatched the bread from the garbage can and ran with it, cramming it into my mouth as I ran. I thought what my mother would say, what tears she would weep if she knew I was eating food from garbage cans!

I tried to stop myself from having these thoughts. I ran along the street in the direction of some lights ahead of me. At one of the few studios—a smaller one—actually remaining in Hollywood proper, they were doing some night shooting.

I discovered that they were working on the street in front of the studio. A crowd had gathered to watch. I became one of that crowd, on the outside looking in again.

The scene showed the star being picked up, obviously having been struck down by an automobile, and being carried away on a stretcher. How familiar it all was—the lights, the cameras, the sound truck. Would I ever be working in this atmosphere again?

I heard the director say to the extras, "Here now, when she is put on a stretcher one of you throw a coat over her." He called for a prop boy and asked for a coat, but the boy explained that since no such prop had been requested beforehand, none was available.

The director looked the extras over. Several girls were wearing coats but one was too dark and one was too light.

Suddenly his eyes fell upon me. "Will you lend me your coat, young lady?" he asked. "It is just what I want."

Gathering all my courage I said, "I will if you'll let me be the one to throw it over her."

He laughed. Apparently he thought me some idle girl who wanted the thrill of working in a picture. Ah, if he only knew!

"Okay," he said. And so again by the merest accident I was working. I even had a small bit to do, stepping forward when the star was lifted on the stretcher and throwing the coat over her.

We worked until past three o'clock and then he said it was time to go home. The assistant director came to me and gave me five dollars.

I SNATCHED the money and was just turning to go when the director shouted, "Say, stop that girl and get the coat. It's spotted in this scene and when the stretcher arrives at the hospital it must be thrown over it." He turned to me. "Will you sell us the coat?" he asked.

"No," I said, "it's the only one I have."

"Then will you rent it to us?"

"Yes," I answered, "if I go along with it. You'll need extras in the hospital scene, won't you? Let me be one of them."

He shook his head. "You've been spotted in this scene. We'll need other faces at the hospital. But I'll rent the coat for what I'd pay you—five dollars a day."

And so, by a curious chain of events which could not possibly happen anywhere but in Hollywood, I ate regularly once more and my coat worked for me.

Every evening I went to the studio and collected the money the coat earned. On the third day they said they were through with it but that I should keep it carefully since they might need it for retakes. And then I took a bold chance. I asked to see the assistant director. He undoubtedly thought, when he saw me, that the nuisance was back again.

I said, "You must listen to me." And I told him the whole story and my belief that I had been "blacklisted."

He was most kind and he said, "Such a thing is actually impossible. There is no blacklist in Hollywood. I'm sure I can explain what happened, although I've never heard of your particular case before. But perhaps this rotten fellow told a few people not to use you. As you know, the people right on the ground are the ones who get the jobs. When they stopped seeing you around they forgot about you. It's just one of those tough breaks. But I'm willing to help you. I'll begin right now by putting you on my call list for a new picture. It will probably start the ball rolling again for you."

And so I was back in pictures once more.

That evening I called Bradley. He seemed unhappy that I had another chance. "I thought," he said, "that I could make you see that marriage was the best thing for you."

And now I have told you the most dramatic things that have happened to me. But before I finish completely with my confessions I want to do what I promised to do in the first place.

Next month I'm going to end my story by telling you what my life is like today and discuss what I—who should know Hollywood by now—think of the chances for an unknown girl in this town.

Spencer Tracy Speaks His Mind

(Continued from page 29)

money until we came out here! Most of us never knew whether we'd eat from one week to the next until we hit this town!

"Look at doctors and lawyers and longshoremen, do they yelp and howl if they have to work all hours of the night? They do not. And do they get the rewards we get out here? Not on your life they don't and can never hope to. And some of 'em have had long years of arduous preparation and others of 'em work, with their muscles and their sinews and their strained hearts. We need never have gone to school—Hollywood doesn't ask us for any mortar board. And the strain we put on our hearts and muscles wouldn't hurt an embryo. Better hit me over the head, if you want me to stop. This is a sore point with me. Seems to me that for actors to complain about Hollywood and the producers is like a spoiled brat hitting an overindulgent, undemanding parent in the face.

ANYWAY, this is my credit side of the sheet. If it hadn't been for Hollywood and what it has done for me I wouldn't have been able to do what I've done, and am doing, for Johnny. I couldn't have taken him to the best doctors, the last-word experts in the country. I couldn't have taken him to San Francisco last week, for instance, and have tests made and a device used which has ascertained that he has a little hearing. A very little but enough so that there is hope for the future. Enough so that he could, for the first time in his life, hear my voice and his mother's. Say, no headline story that could be written about me could be the big story this one line of information is. And say, I'd owe Hollywood the skin off my back if all it ever gave me was the look on that kid's face when he heard his mother's voice and mine for the first time in his life."

Spencer cleared his throat, rubbed one hand across the blue of his eyes and said roughly, "Sure, it's given me the chance to live on the ranch we're living on now—Gary Cooper's you know. It's given me the chance to give Johnny and Susie, too, horses and polo ponies and dogs, a swimming pool, fields to roam about in. It's opened a whole world of activities to a little chap who might have been shut out of a lot of them. Just this alone is enough to swell the credit side of my sheet so top-heavy there won't be much room for the debits.

"Hollywood saved my mother's life. She was seriously injured in an automobile accident back East. The doctors there said that the injuries were fatal. I could and I did bring her out here, into the sunshine, into a house of her own in Beverly Hills. Care was available, medical attention. She is alive and well today. It couldn't have been done if I had been in any other line of work. Chalk that one down to the credits . . ."

And there are other items which belong on the credit side of Spencer's Hollywood. Things he didn't tell me himself. Things his friends have told me. There are the old friends of his Dad's—men who are tired and beaten, too old and too frustrated to start again. Well, thanks to Spencer they have started again and one of them said to me one day, "It wasn't only the money he gave me, it was the faith in people I got back."

"When I was a youngster I dreamed of being a doctor," Spencer once told me, adding with a laugh, "but hell, I wouldn't have got through the first year of pre-medical school. Too dumb."

SO now there's a certain young man who is going through McGill and, Spencer will tell you proudly, standing third in his class. And when this young man begins to heal with his hands the wounds of his fellowmen it will be the hand of Hollywood that trained him.

"I don't want money. Not for myself," Spencer told me. "I'd be a bad boy if I had too much dough. And I know it. If I could say to the studio tomorrow, 'Toodle-oo, I won't be needin' you!', I'd go berserk. So I keep myself broke and I'm happy and safe. I have insurance and annuities so that if I should die tomorrow the family would be substantially safe. That's all I care about. I've got no use for the stuff myself.

"On the credit side goes, too, the way people feel about us—us movie actors I mean. In all the fan letters that come to me there's not one with a grouse in it. You'd think that some folks would write in and say, 'How did you get this way,

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912 AND MARCH 3, 1933. of MODERN SCREEN, published monthly at Dunellen, N. J., for October 1, 1935.

State of New York }
County of New York } ss.

Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared Helen Meyer, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that she is the business manager of the MODERN SCREEN and that the following is, to the best of her knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 411, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher, George T. Delacorte, Jr., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Editor, Regina Cannon, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Managing Editor, George T. Delacorte, Jr., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Business Manager, Helen Meyer, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

2. That the owner is: Dell Publishing Company, Inc., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; George T. Delacorte, Jr., 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Margarita Delacorte, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. George T. Delacorte, Jr., Trustee for Estate of George T. Delacorte, Jr. Margarita Delacorte, Trustee for Estate of Margarita Delacorte.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders or security holders as they appear upon the books of the company, but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by her.

HELEN MEYER, Business Manager.
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 18th day of September, 1935.
MAY KELLEY,
Notary Public, N. Y. County.
N. Y. County Clerk's No. 89.
N. Y. County Register's No. 7K118.
(My commission expires March 30, 1937.)

The 8th WOMAN

HER ADVANTAGE OVER OTHERS

Do you know a woman who is never at a disadvantage, never breaks engagements, never pleads that she is "indisposed," and whose spirits never seem to droop?

She is apt to be that eighth woman who has learned to rely on Midol.

Eight million women once suffered every month. Had difficult days when they had to save themselves, and favor themselves, or suffer severely. But a million have accepted the relief of Midol.

Are you a martyr to "regular" pain? Must you favor yourself, save yourself, on certain days of every month? Midol might change all this. Might have you playing golf. And even if it didn't make you completely comfortable you would receive a measure of relief well worth while! Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It's effective for hours, so two tablets should see you through your worst day. And they do not contain any narcotic.

You'll find Midol in any drug store—usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or, a card addressed to Midol, 170 Varick St., New York, will bring a trial box postpaid, plainly wrapped.

ALWAYS HERSELF—Nature doesn't keep the eighth woman off the links—or from other strenuous activities. Midol means freedom from the old martyrdom to "regular" pain.

Aglow
WITH YOUTH!
BLONDE
Nestle
COLORINSE
rinses • tints • glorifies your hair
CONTAINS TWO BLONDE HAIR RINSES

Rinse away hair dullness with Colo-Rinse. Rinse in "the Sheen of Youth" —glowing, natural color; shimmering highlights; and a soft, glamorous lustre. Neither a dye nor a bleach, absolutely harmless. It tones up dull, faded or harsh hair immediately. Used and praised by leading beauticians everywhere.

10c Trial Size at all 10c Stores
ALSO ASK FOR
Nestle SuperSet, Golden Shampoo or Henna Shampoo
Hot Oil Shampoo and Nestle Shampoo

THE NESTLE LeMUR COMPANY
MAKERS OF QUALITY PRODUCTS
NEW YORK

"AIR-CONDITIONED"
FOR RAPID DRYING AND BETTER CURLS

that's why
HOLLYWOOD STARS favor this CURLER
①
②
③
②

1. Patented end lock is a beveled disc . . . not a ball. Locks curler without stopping air-circulation. 2. Ends of curler never close. Ample air flow is assured. No other curler has these features. 3. Perforations increase ventilation. This complete "air-conditioning" insures rapid drying. Curls set swiftly. Hair dress takes less time . . . and curls are softer, lovelier, last longer.

JANE HAMILTON
RKO player

HOLLYWOOD
Rapid Dry
CURLER

5¢ AT 5¢ AND 10¢ STORES AND NOTION COUNTERS

Divorce, Hollywood style! Adrienne Ames and Bruce Cabot have frequent dates now that they are divorced! And don't they look like bride and groom here?

you big punk? Who are you to be making your dough and riding around on polo ponies and living on dude ranches and buying orchids while we sweat for a beastly pittance and are as good as you are?' You'd think they'd say this sort of thing, some of 'em. They never do. No one seems to begrudge us our big piece of cake. And so I say that on the credit side of my sheet goes my appreciation, my knowledge of the generous hearts, the unbegrudging spirit of my fellow men.

"And not only from the fans do we get this attitude, but right here at home where our well-paid and pampered bodies are right under the eyes of fellows who sweat for a living wage. The boys on the sets, I mean. Why, a finer gang of fellows never lived. And when I hear some actor beef, or when I myself think of beefing because I have to work overtime and then look at those chaps—say, it teaches you a thing or two.

"I remember," said Spencer, flipping an admiring paw at Jean Parker as she passed our table with her chaperone, "I remember one night when we were making 'Dante's Inferno.' I was dead tired, doing two pictures at the same time. Day and night stuff. There were two hundred extras on the set that day and the director couldn't make up his mind whether he wanted me to stand up on a platform and take a long shot or a close-up. Along around seven o'clock I got temperamental for the first, and I think, the only time in my life. I ripped off the shirt I was wearing and started to go. As I made to leave the set one of the electricians grabbed hold of me. 'Say, Spence!' he said, 'I had to move those big lights for this take, you know. Damned heavy, those lights, when you've been moving 'em all day. And it's seven o'clock for me, too.'

"So it was. So it was seven o'clock for him, too. Say, I put that shirt of mine back on and got back to that set in a hurry. Seven o'clock for him, too, and he couldn't send out for coffee and sandwiches, either.

"They try to say that the life of a screen actor is short-lived. Phooey! Unless we go crazy, get grogged and stay that way we can keep working till the wagon comes. Look at George Arliss and Lionel Barrymore and Lewis Stone and a few of the others.

Spencer was saying, "Now about these debits—I told you I'd have to dig a bit for them. It comes to about this, I think. We actors are like the children of very wealthy parents who keep a very close watch on us, have guards and spies set over us. The studio is the mama and papa of the actor. The whole world, the press, the public are the guards and spies. We can't really be ourselves, much of the time. "Maybe," laughed Spencer, "maybe it's just as well, but it's damned uncomfortable at times. I mean, the average chap can do what he pleases, but an actor must always be on his toes. One slip and the whole town's talking, and magnifying it to tremendous proportions.

"I can't go about dressed like the farmer's son as I would like to do and do do a good part of the time. But even when I do, I can't get the full pleasure out of the blue jeans and sweat shirt. I feel that I should be sporting the soup and fish and making papa proud of his little boy.

"I can't play practical jokes, shoot off my mouth, horse about as I might want to for fear of being misinterpreted by some little bird who might overhear me or oversee me. It's kind of a strain, all this. Even when I play polo I have a sense of guilt. I know that mama and papa studio really disapprove. They fear that I might break my little neck which is carrying the Tracy face through a production with a heavy cost sheet.

"And them thar," said Spencer, finishing his pistachio ice cream with a flourish, "them thar are about the only items I can think of to list on the debit side. Kinda skinny little items they are, at that. But I can't invent any. Even the well known 'temptations of Hollywood' are a lot of bologna, most of them. All the pretty girls, they say. Sure, but you know the old psychology about a candy shop. Work in one for a few days and you pay no attention to the sweets! The only temptation I know about out here is a sort of general inclination to go mildly nutty when you aren't working. The balmy air, the vacationland atmosphere do tend to make you have to buckle on the armor and behave. But that's really up to the individual and if the individual will keep his eye on the credit sheet he won't really disgrace mama and papa—not for long.

"I got no kick coming," said Spencer, "it's all on the credit side with old man Tracy."

"I'd Be a Terrible Husband"

(Continued from page 45)

boyishness which is his greatest charm, "nobody ever did ask me if I had been married so I did not think to mention it. There are so much more important things to talk about."

CERTAINLY this young man with the face of an ardent ascetic—a passionate monk—does not lack for words even in his adopted language. Night after night, from college and lecture platforms, he pours them out, day after day when he is not on a movie set making love before the grinding cameras, he is sitting at his desk writing them—flaming words, coaxing words, persuasive words, ten-dollar words! The two cramped, dusty offices he occupies on the studio lot in place of the richly-decorated dressing-rooms of other stars are filled to overflowing with words, locked up in cabinets, filed away under "P," Peace Plans, "U," Unemployment Remedies, "W," War Statistics.

But under "L" you will find nothing about Lederer, Francis, Stage and Screen Idol, or Luxury, or even Love. And under "M" you will find no notes about Marriages, past or to come.

"If being a husband means being an escort, a dancing partner, a host for dinner parties, then I would make a very bad husband indeed," Francis admitted when I asked him whether the rumors of his coming marriage to Mary Loos were true. (I wasn't going to make the mistake of not asking this time.) "But if being a wife means being a housekeeper, or a bridge partner, or a hostess for one's parties I do not need a wife. I do not live in a house. I do not play bridge. As for parties, time is too precious to waste eating and drinking and making small talk about nothing at all. I do not know what to say when charming ladies rush up to me to tell me pretty things about my last picture. They wouldn't believe me if I would tell them how embarrassing it is for me to hear such compliments and how wasted the time is to talk about myself. You cannot point out to these charming ladies that there are important, worth-while problems they would do better to discuss. Instead at the end of a party you are exactly where you started except perhaps with a fine headache."

Whenever there is a Cause to be upheld, a Little Theatre to be launched, a college speech to be made, a peace convention to be addressed, Francis Lederer is there. But no parties. For one reason, he does not drink. At the age of ten his teacher in school in Czecho-Slovakia showed the class the colored picture of the stomach of a drunkard, and the sick memory has remained with him all his life!

"I think that a woman to marry me—Francis Lederer—would have a very difficult task ahead of her," he reflected aloud. "My life is not the sort of life most women would have the courage to choose. And yet I am not a cold idealist. I believe with all my soul that love is the greatest thing in life, a love that is a sharing of the mind and not merely the sharing of a roof, a love that springs from complete sympathy and understanding and not from holding hands under the moon. And I am hoping that I will find that love. I have heard that one of your poets says that he is strongest who travels alone. But my life is so full of empty places! When I stand before a big audience and feel their response and their enthusiasm I am alive, excited, ecstatic. But when it is over and there is no one to turn to, to talk it over with, to share all this experience then I know that it is not living fully to be alone."

FRANCIS LEDERER is right. It would be difficult for an American girl to fit her American ideas of marriage into the strange, selfless, chaotic life he leads. No Hollywood movie star cashes in his fame and popularity for the things on which this handsome, eager young Czech spends his. He lives in an inexpensively furnished apartment, drives his own car of a popular make and by no means new. He owns no yacht, no swimming pool nor wardrobe filled with sixty suits of clothes.

His manager, one of his own countrymen, quivers with emotion as he tells of the offers that pour in by every mail from Paris, Vienna, Berlin, London and New York—offers of stage parts, movie roles, lecture tours, magazine contracts which must all be turned down. "Meeelions," mourns the manager flinging out his hands desolately, "we refuse meeelions just because Mr. Lederer must make the peace talks."

Francis Lederer, bachelor, may keep himself poor to have money to spend on the cause near to his heart. Francis Lederer, husband, will assuredly do the same thing. There will be no square-cut emeralds, no star sapphires for the woman who marries this young idealist, no villas with forty rooms and a Roman swimming pool, no imported limousines.

"If she is the woman for me she will not want such foolish things," smiles Francis. "I would never fall in love with anyone who finds them necessary to her happiness. Myself, I own nothing. Even my ranch house is for sale. It is a forty-five minute drive from Hollywood and I cannot afford to waste so much time. I have only spent two days in a house of my own in my whole life. Houses, sticks of furniture, pots and pans—are these things marriage? Not to me!"

Here is a man who, looking back, remembers none of the dear associations of home. When he was a small child his parents were divorced. His beloved older brother was killed early in the war. He himself was in the trenches firing a machine gun when he was thirteen years old, before his bones had become man bones or his childish ideas, man ideas. Since then he has hung his hat in many places. He has never known the need of familiar walls about him, or a rosebush that he himself has planted at his own doorstep.

"A HOUSE becomes a tyrant," he says impatiently. "It demands that you live by the clock. For instance, three meals a day! I could never, never promise any lady to love and honor and eat three meals a day opposite her! Some days when I have much on my mind I do not eat at all, most days I eat only when I am hungry. I want only fruit and vegetables and perhaps crackers. Such things seem to me so unimportant, so unreasonable. Is it reason, I ask you, to spend the precious days of one's life, performing the ceremonials of domesticity—shopping, cooking, always repairing, mending, keeping the machinery of a house going? Surely there are women in this world who would not think that love means that a man must come home at a certain hour to dinner.

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAY-ON) PERFUMES

romantic
FAOEN
No 3
PARK & TILFORD
alluring
No 19
enchanting
FAOEN
No 12
entrancing

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAY-ON)
Beauty Aids

10c IN TEN CENT TUCKAWAY SIZES AS ILLUSTRATED AT ALL 5 & 10c STORES

NEW SHOES for OLD

NEW

GRIFFIN BLACK DYE

Less work, no mess—just paint it on for a jet black finish which will not wear off. Gives you a "new" pair of shoes with old shoe comfort. Adds another pair of shoes to your wardrobe. Available at your favorite 5 and 10 cent store, or any shoe repair shop.

GRIFFIN
BLACK DYE

10c BOTTLE

GRIFFIN MFG. Co.
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Avoid dirt

The easiest nursing bottle and nipple to clean is the safest to use. Ask your doctor.

HYGEIA

THE SAFE NURSING BOTTLE AND NIPPLE

VEGETABLE CORRECTIVE DID TRICK

They were getting on each other's nerves. Intestinal sluggishness was really the cause—made them tired with frequent headaches, bilious spells. But that is all changed now. For they discovered, like millions of others, that nature provided the correct laxatives in plants and vegetables. Tonight try Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets). How much better you feel—invigorated, refreshed. Important—you do not have to increase the dose. They contain no phenol or mineral derivatives. Only 25c—all druggists.

NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

FREE: Beautiful 5 Color—1935-1936 Calendar Thermometer with the purchase of a 25c box of NR or a 10c roll of Tums (For Acid Indigestion). At your druggist's.

"And a woman who was so courageous as to marry me would have to be willing to be alone a great deal. I have only been home two nights out of the last ten days! When I am not in a picture, I am speaking, here, there, everywhere. I have made five talks this week already. There are times when I attend two meetings within the same twenty-four hours, a hundred miles apart. There are times when I drive my car all night, after a day on the set, to speak at some woman's club or school group. My wife would have to choose whether she would remain behind and occupy herself with her own interests or whether she would travel about with me, leading the same active life I lead. I tell you that I would be the most difficult husband in the world! And yet," his expressive face grows wistful, "if I found someone who felt as I feel, who saw the world as I see it, who thought my thoughts, she would perhaps not know that there were any difficulties because she would also like to do the same things that I do."

The girl whom Hollywood watches lunching almost daily at Francis Lederer's side at the moment, is not the typical movie actress. Mary Loos, the niece of Gentlemen-Prefer-Blondes Anita, is a college girl. She belongs to the exclusive Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. She has dark thoughtful eyes and a serious forehead and she is in the movies more or less by accident.

"Does any woman," I asked Francis Lederer, "really care about World Peace, do you suppose?"

"I know one," he answered quietly. "Miss Loos is deeply interested in it. She is helping me hunt for something to make it colorful, a substitute for the parades and martial music that takes man's reason away, and the flags that children are taught they must be glad to die for and willing to kill for. Only then will we be able to make peace as dramatic and exciting as war."

The little-boy smile radiates his dark face. It is strangely touching, that young, eager smile in a face cut deeply, chiselled by sad memories and anxious thought. "Please, do not think that I have no other interests than that one. There are too many things in this world that I shall never find the time for. Right now I am taking up sculpture and painting. Miss Loos thinks that I have talent. She has made a friend of hers, an art critic, see my poor beginnings and he encourages me to go on. I am always trying to learn something new, to talk with people who can teach me things I would like to know. Long ago I made up my mind that every moment of my life I would be doing something that would develop me as a person. That thought drives me! You see now why I am impatient with parties and dull domestic details."

Driven! That is the word for Francis Lederer. It explains the eagerness of him, the nervous vitality that chacterizes him on the screen, the deadly earnestness and sincerity that led a blasé theatre manager to part unquestioningly with his trousers when he asked for them long ago in Budapest. It explains why, except to the one woman he seeks, he would make the worst husband in the world.

New Star in the Sky

(Continued from page 31)

admiration of everyone in "Escapade." "I like it because everyone seems to be walking on little pink clouds! Europeans, you know, are too intense!" And then, after thinking very seriously she added, "But what I like about Europe is that when a man loves a woman she knows it, but here, here she seems to be just another good friend!" Darn clever, those Viennese!

WHAT amazed me most was the tremendous progress she has made in English and she explained it so:

"I have worked at it very hard. At first the lessons, they were no good. I was talking with my face, my whole body, expressing everything in actions, not words, and then I said to my teacher, 'Please may I talk my lesson over the telephone?' And so it was decided! Every day for a long, long time I would speak over the telephone and every time I tried to say something in action I realized it would do no good so I just had to learn English, you see?" And she seemed entirely delighted at fooling herself.

Off the screen she tries very hard to talk English exclusively, except when speaking with Johnny, her Scottie, that she brought from Europe with her. Johnny understands only German for the studio hasn't gotten around to him yet.

For Bob Leonard, who directed her film, she has a deep regard and eternal gratitude.

"He was so kind," she said, "he explained how pictures differ from stage work, how to repress action in close-ups, how to keep from moving about and to use my voice skillfully under a microphone. And," she added, mischievously, "he taught me how to joke in American."

Luise jokes "in American" very well. She has mastered the pun with telling effectiveness and is as quick on the come-back as her most agile adversary. When Bob told her macaroni grew on vines she took it all in, very seriously, but her retort was, "And I suppose the egg plants are fresh every morning, too!"

ONE scarcely expects such hardiness from the slim brunette who isn't strictly beautiful, but whose expressiveness makes her face a constantly changing picture, and whose eyes have repeatedly been called "the most beautiful in Europe"—with which description one finds no grudge.

Puttering about her small house at Santa Monica, right next to Max Reinhardt's, she seems happy and content for she loves the beach and the open air reminds her of "home." But she hasn't had time for leisure—or for that matter, loneliness either. She is being wined and dined, teaed and cocktailed. Virginia Bruce was the first to introduce her to the American crowd and like everything she does, in her intense, whole-hearted way, she has embraced the American scene.

For instance, she likes Cab Calloway, is delighted with the Mills Brothers. She clogs on the set to the delight of both cast and crew and plays and sings in our best Yankee style. At the studio commissary she invariably tops off her dietless lunch with apple pie!

The studio itself realized her value as a new and exciting personality when the "rushes" were run off after the first few days' shooting. To their lasting credit it must be recorded they practically rewrote the part to fit her individuality. When you admire her charm and "cuteness," the latter an all too inadequate word to describe her certain magnetism, you may be reassured you are meeting the real Rainer, for they are her gestures.

Bill Powell, you know, was delighted with her. And in return she thinks him "the most brilliant and wittiest man I have ever met. And kind, too! He gave me so much confidence by being patient and considerate of me!"

In short, she is in love with everything and from observation, everyone is quite head over heels in love with her.

I told her she seems so satisfied, so filled with a zest for life that I wondered if somewhere there might not be some secret peeve, an unexpressed annoyance with circumstances or people.

"The only things which bother me are a narrow outlook and a small mind. I don't believe in people dividing themselves up into factions and each believing they are right. And," she added, "I also like only to be told the truth."

That alone sets Luise in a class by herself.

Mr. Boles Takes Pen in Hand

(Continued from page 47)

appearances in Chicago recently, John did the unheard of, and un-Hollywoodish thing of entertaining as many fans as he could in his dressing-room after every performance. One evening there were sixteen. (There were hundreds of others waiting outside the stage door, but these sixteen young women had made an appointment en masse.) John was as cordial and hospitable as he is in his own home. Among other things, the girls asked him why he hadn't sung their favorite song, "Sylvia," on the stage. "Because I didn't know it was your favorite," he replied. "But it's not too late to remedy that!" And John called in his accompanist and sang the song for the girls!

PERHAPS you don't know about the many John Boles Fan Clubs all over the country, and in England—and if you don't you should. To John they are one of the most encouraging things about his career. He talks of them often, never bragging, but oh, so appreciative. The motto, slogan, battle-cry, or whatever you want to call it of these clubs, is, almost universally, "We want John Boles to sing!" And no snatches of songs, either, as he did in "Music in the Air." (Did his fans raise something about that!) His fans want him to sing lots of songs and sing each one of them all the way through in his pictures. Here are some more aims of these clubs:

1. To encourage friendship amongst the admirers of our favorite singer and actor, John Boles.
2. To promote his popularity and his progress by writing to his studio and requesting suitable roles for him.
3. To show our appreciation by writing Mr. Boles and the studio after seeing each new film.
4. To encourage members to correspond with each other and to get together to see John Boles' films.
5. To keep members informed of Mr. Boles' activities by issuing club bulletins to members.
6. To send Mr. Boles greetings on his birthday and other days of celebration.

At times these clubs stage contests for the best letter about Mr. Boles, or perhaps, just a membership drive. On such occasions John usually donates some personal belonging for a prize. His own monogrammed handkerchiefs are most in demand. He also writes his clubs regularly once or twice a month, and his letters are always reprinted in the club bulletins.

But now to get down to the questions at hand, as John and I did later that afternoon. Here are his answers as he wrote them out for you.

How do you spend your time when you're not working?

"Out-of-doors, mostly. You see, I think keeping physically fit is one of the first laws for success in this business. After I have finished a picture, I am really fatigued. My energy is at low ebb. It isn't the work that does it. It's the strong lights. They take something out of me which only the sun and the fresh air and good healthy exercise can put back into me. That's why I play so much tennis, and ride horseback, and like to go fishing in the High Sierras. I take Sunday automobile rides, too, just like you do. I like to go picnicking. In the spring I spend a great deal of time at the baseball training quarters. Baseball is one of my hobbies, you know . . . I used to play it in college. In the fall, every Saturday afternoon finds me at a football field, on the 50-yard line, yelling my head off. Not good for my voice? On the contrary, I think it helps it!"

When did you start to sing?

"I started to sing when I was seven . . . and I am still studying, still taking singing lessons! One of my first recollections, as a barefoot boy on our ranch in Texas, is hearing the negroes singing in the fields. Their rich, tuneful voices inspired me to sing, too, and negro songs of the South were the first songs that I learned. I also learned to dance their dances. My uncle had given me an air-gun, one of my prized possessions. I made a bargain with one of the best negro dancers on the ranch. If he would teach me to dance, I would let him shoot my air gun. I have never yet sung those songs or danced those dances on the screen, but perhaps I will have an opportunity some day soon."

How did you get your first job?

"I borrowed a thousand dollars from my father to go to New York and then went to Glens Falls and taught French in the high school, meanwhile studying voice with Oscar Seagle. Two years later I went to Europe and studied a year with Jean de Reske. When I returned, a year later with scarcely five dollars in my pocket, I looked up my buddy with whom I had been through the war, and he gave me a bed to sleep in. Then started my long weary trek for a job. In spite of my urgent need, I was convinced that I should hold out for a leading role in a musical show. Small, bit parts would do me little good. I had to make money and make it quickly.

"Managers looked at me as though I were crazy when I turned down small parts and asked for the lead. They laughed at me for four months and then, strangely enough, they began to believe that, if I was so confident of my ability, I must have something after all. If they only knew! It was not so much confidence as determination! Then, when the leading man in 'Little Jesse James' had to leave the show, I was given his role. You can imagine that all my years of study, my burden of debt, my anxiety and my long wait, were well rewarded at that moment.

Are your hands
ROUGH as Stucco?

■ Do your hands feel coarse? Are they rough as stucco? Do they "snag" on silk?

Why not use some rich, wide-spreading, quick-drying Italian Balm (just one drop is sufficient) and see how quickly your skin becomes soft and smooth in texture!

Italian Balm is recognized as one of the quickest-acting, most economical skin beautifiers ever invented. These two qualities—effectiveness and economy—have made it the largest selling skin protector in America.

In one of the nation's largest cities a recent Parent Teacher's Association Report, covering over 5,000 homes, revealed that Italian Balm was practically a 3 to 1 favorite—used in about 3 times as many homes as any other similar preparation.

Italian Balm is made from a secret formula, by a secret process. There is nothing like it on the world market today. Your drug and department store carry Italian Balm in 3 sizes of long-lasting bottles—35c, 60c and $1.00—and in handy 25 cent tubes.

Free HANDY HOME DISPENSER

Nickel plated, 100% guaranteed Italian Balm HOME DISPENSER —attaches easily to bathroom, kitchen or laundry wall (wood or tile). Dispenses one drop when you press the plunger. Try your druggist first—ask for the Dispenser Package. If he can't supply you—then get one FREE by sending ONE 60c Italian Balm carton (and 10c to cover packing and postage), or TWO 60c cartons and NO MONEY —with your name and address—to CAMPANA, Batavia, Illinois.

Campana's
Italian Balm
THE ORIGINAL SKIN SOFTENER
"America's Most Economical Skin Protector"

TUMS MADE ME A NEW WOMAN
HEY...HOW ABOUT THAT BONE?

OLD MOTHER HUBBARD
HAS FILLED HER BARE CUPBOARD
WITH ONIONS AND STEAKS AND CHEESES; HER STOMACH FEELS GRAND
SINCE SHE KEEPS TUMS ON HAND . . .
SHE EATS WHAT SHE DARN WELL PLEASES!

NO ALKALIES FOR ACID INDIGESTION!

MILLIONS have found they do not need to drench their stomachs with strong, caustic alkalies. Physicians have said this habit often brings further acid indigestion. So much more safe and sensible to simply carry a roll of Tums in your pocket. Munch 3 or 4 after meals —or whenever troubled by heartburn, gas, sour stomach. Try them when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Tums contain a wonderful antacid which neutralizes acid in the stomach, but never over-alkalizes stomach or blood. Pleasant to eat as candy. Only 10c at any drug store.

TUMS FOR THE TUMMY

TUMS ARE ANTACID . . NOT A LAXATIVE

HANDY TO CARRY

EAT LIKE CANDY
TUMS
STOMACH DISTRESS
10¢

FREE: Beautiful 5 color 1935-36 Calendar-Thermometer with the purchase of a 10c roll of Tums or 25c box of NR (the all-vegetable laxative). At your druggist's.

Hair OFF Face Lips Chin

Unloved I once looked like this. Ugly hair on face...unloved...discouraged. Nothing helped. Depilatories, waxes, liquids...even razors failed. Then I discovered a simple, painless, inexpensive method. It worked! Thousands have won beauty and love with the secret. My FREE Book, "How to Overcome Superfluous Hair," explains the method and proves actual success. Mailed in plain envelope. Also trial offer. No obligation. Write Mlle. Annette Lanzette, P.O. Box 4040, Merchandise Mart, Dept. 187, Chicago.

Mercolized Wax

Keeps Skin Young

Absorb blemishes and discolorations using Mercolized Wax daily as directed. Invisible particles of aged skin are freed and all defects such as blackheads, tan, freckles and large pores disappear. Skin is then beautifully clear, velvety and so soft—face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. At all leading druggists.

Phelactine removes hairy growths —takes them out—easily, quickly and gently. Leaves the skin hair free.

Powdered Saxolite
Reduces wrinkles and other age-signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in half-pint witch hazel and use daily as face lotion.

Bob Montgomery shows off his new snooty looking imported Bentley car to his pal Chet Morris.

In less than six months I was able to return the thousand dollars I had borrowed from my father."

Who are your best friends?

"That buddy of mine who helped me through the war, and who kept me alive while I tramped Broadway looking for a job, is still my best friend today. I have never had very many friends but the few I have are good friends. No one person can do justice to a great many friends. It is much better to have only a few who mean something, and to whom you can really offer something, than a lot of half-way friends.

FOR the last few years I have been begging this buddy of mine to come to California to visit us. But until recently his business prevented such a trip. Then, a few months ago, when I was planning to go East to make personal appearances, I wired him that I was coming by plane, and for him to meet me. He knew that I had never flown before. Nor had he. He wired me to please take the train East because he wanted to return to California with me, by plane. He said, 'Let's have our first experience in the air together, just as we had our first experience together at the front.'

"And that's what we did. And we did have an experience. We were returning by plane to Hollywood on New Year's Eve night and at the stroke of twelve, we were sitting up front with the pilot. He had let us put the radio ear phones over our heads, when suddenly out of the great dark space about us, came the cheery, friendly greeting, 'Happy New Year!'

"We scarcely could believe our ears. 'It's the landing field below,' the pilot explained. 'We're passing over Leavenworth, Kansas.' He handed me the microphone. I called out into it, 'Happy New Year yourself! Happy New Year!'

"Someone handed us paper cups. In them, there was champagne. One of the passengers had brought a bottle of champagne for a New Year's toast.

"Drinking champagne out of paper cups, hundreds of feet in the air, with the landing field below calling up, 'Happy New Year!' It was a thrill that darned near brought tears to my eyes."

Why don't you sing in all your pictures?

"I love to sing. I would like to sing in all of my pictures but unless a story carries a logical excuse for music, it is better to have no music in it at all, than to drag the music in at awkward spots. Just because there is a piano in the room, is no reason to break the thread of the story with a song. But if the song and the singing is the natural development of the story—well, that is something different. Gladys Swarthout, the famous Metropolitan Opera star is making the operetta, 'Rose of the Rancho' for Paramount, and I'm in that with her. So you can see you're going to have to listen to a lot of my singing from now on!"

What are your plans for the future?

"I never look more than a year ahead. A year is a long time in this business—there's very little point in looking beyond it. There's one thing, however, which I do realize, and which each succeeding year only makes more clear, that material things aren't so important, as I used to think they were. As a boy I used to worry about building up financial security, I wanted to possess material things. Now these things don't seem to matter very much. The important thing is to be able to work, and to enjoy it, because you are doing the best kind of a job you know how."

And here is a typical letter from one of the John Boles Fan Clubs. This one was from the John Boles Music Club of Minneapolis and reads as follows:

> Dear Mr. Boles:
>
> Because I've received so many letters from your fans, who say that they want very much to join your Music Club, but that they have been ill, and out of work, or either they are going to college, and really find it difficult to pay the Club dues of one dollar—which I think is quite reasonable for one year —I have had a new sheet printed with the Club's particulars and aims and I am asking only fifty cents for dues now, because I am very anxious to see your Music Club grow . . . so that more of your ardent fans will promise to write to the Studio, and to the magazines to plead for more films and better roles for JOHN BOLES.
>
> Would you kindly let me know whether or not you think the new sheet I've had printed for you is better than the one I had printed last summer?
>
> The other day I telephoned to Mr. Bob La Piner of the Minnesota Theatre Co. and asked him if it is really true that you will appear in person at the State Theatre here in Minneapolis in a few weeks. I was afraid my husband was just teasing me but Mr. La Piner assured me that it is true. All the Club members here are delighted.
>
> Sincerely,
> Lillian Musgrave.

Warm Furs—Giddy Hats

(Continued from page 50)

aura of the glamor that we demand of any fur purchases we may make this winter.

Like dresses, the length of your fur coat is optional, only more so since you can make your coat briefer than you can your dress! The three-quarter swagger is one of the most popular, and I think one of the most youthful. For those who demand both practicality and smartness, this coat offers both. It is long enough to be warm, it has dash, with its fuller and favorite swagger cut, and it is to be had in every imaginable fur from the inexpensive lapin to the definitely expensive mink. One of the very best examples of this style is Glenda Farrell's attractive Persian lamb, shown on page 49. The easy, flaring silhouette, the small turnover collar and the slash pockets are all excellent details.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND, on the other hand, wears the longer, less fully flared swagger of Safari brown seal. Many of you will prefer this length to the shorter one of Glenda's because it is warmer and permits the wearing of thinner costumes beneath. Olivia's sleeves have fullness through the arm which is gathered into tight cuffs. Can't you remember when you used to sniff at seal as "an old lady's fur?" You don't need to any longer because both black and brown seal coats come in such smart, young styles that they are perfectly charming. For you who feel you can't invest in real Alaskan seal, the Hudson Bay seal is being made equally as smart and wears just as well. The same is true of the real beaver as compared with the less expensive nutria or beaver-dyed lapin.

Of course, lapin which can masquerade as eight other furs, is the answer to the small budget. All sorts of very smart costumes are being made up with lapin. The three-piece suit with the topcoat warmly lined with it, or with deep tuxedo revers is one of the best investments of the season because it gives you that good old combination of several costume possibilities in one. School girls and business women especially are finding these lapin and fabric combinations a joy since they come well under the hundred dollar mark, yet create the illusion of a luxurious costume.

Gail Patrick gives you that luxury yearning with her two winter fur purchases. One is a magnificent black broadtail coat made with a complete disregard for economy. Its Princess lines give it a nipped in waistline and a great flaring skirt that is bordered deeply in red fox. And, as if that wasn't enough, a huge muff of the fox is thrown in for good measure. It's the last word in daytime elegance, only equaled by the pet mink which every star considers her final seal of success when she can at last own one.

And Gail goes the cape subject one better, too. She sweeps into the night in a full length white ermine with sable collar and jeweled catch. The skins are used horizontally, giving a very unusual and stunning effect. We can ogle such elegance futilely but satisfy ourselves with a decorative black velvet cape with collar of ermine or some less expensive yet equally effective fur. There's always a way of getting around such yearnings, you see, even on a comparatively slim purse. And by day, the glorious broadtail cannot even "top hat" its less sophisticated sisters the kidskin or pony caracul.

THE short jacket is not prominent among this winter's first furs but a few of them are seen. Virginia Bruce wears an attractive one in "Metropolitan." Hers is of white ermine and at first glance, it looks like a cape until you discover that the sleeves are loops of fur like slings, covering the arm from shoulder to upper wrist. The rest of the jacket is hip length and slightly flared at back.

Frances Dee wears a kidskin coat that is a compromise between the short jacket and the three-quarter length coat. It is a fingertip length and has a boyish collar caught with the ends of the fur. Fairly straight in line, Frances wears this wrapped over in front and unbelted. It's a nice type for you who cling to your jackets.

Hollywood loves the white fur coat for daytime as well as evening. Any number of the stars wear them with their street clothes. Norma Shearer has had one for several seasons and so has Anita Louise. It is more appropriate for their winter days which often turn too warm for heavier and darker furs. Frieda Inescort, a stage star who made her screen debut in "The Dark Angel," has just such a coat in her personal wardrobe. I have shown it on page 50. It has a brief Johnny collar and very graceful sleeves that are bloused just above the wrists.

Aside from the furs which I have shown this month, there are several others which you will find much to your liking. The kidskins in many becoming costume shades, either swagger or belted types with slightly flared skirts and tunics of the Russian type, not to mention the longer, less extreme but very wearable styles that are standbys year after year.

An old favorite that is being revived is mole. Mole, like squirrel, is listed among the more perishable furs. They are not quite as hardy as the muskrats, the caraculs, seals and beavers but they are grand to wear and own if you can have an extra coat to save the wear and tear. Mary Astor has a smart moleskin swagger coat this season with a large matching muff made with an overflap in envelope style. The flap has a jeweled gadget for ornamentation.

Glenda Farrell has an auxiliary coat to her Persian lamb . . . squirrel with the skins put together diagonally, a treatment usually seen in ermine and mink. For sports coats, leopard and leopard cat are sturdy and so good looking whether they have a contrasting fur as trim or are self trimmed. Civet cat, mink and ermine gills together with a dozen or so unusual furs, give you a selection that ranges up and down the price scale, making it possible for everyone of you to own a warm, attractive fur coat which will give you more than a share of the Hollywood brand of glamor.

I can't think of furs, whether they are collars, whole coats, capes or separate scarfs, that I don't think of the giddy little hats you can have such fun wearing as toppers to these flattering furs.

THE other noon, I attended a luncheon at which Nicole, a famous French milliner, now having her main shop in New York, was the guest speaker. Mme. Nicole arrived with an enormous hatbox out of which she brought hats, like a magician brings rabbits. These weren't just ordinary hats, either, they were copies of chapeaux which she had designed for three well-known stars. There was a forward jutting black velvet with sharp black

Free DRAWING TEST

If you like to draw, test your sense of design, color, proportion, etc., with our simple Art Ability Test. An opportunity to get a frank opinion, free, as to whether your talent is worth developing.

Magazines, newspapers, publishers and advertisers spend millions yearly for illustrations. Design and color influence the sale of most things we buy. Artists have become important to industry. Machines can not displace them. If you have talent, train it. Drawing may be your surest road to success.

The Federal Schools, affiliated with a large art, engraving and printing institution, has trained many young men and women now serving industry as designers or illustrators, capable of earning from $1,000 to $5,000 yearly. Its Home Study courses in Commercial Art, Illustrating and Cartooning, contain exclusive illustrated lessons by many famous artists. Practical instruction by experienced men is the reason for its many years' outstanding success. Courses sold on easy payments.

Send today for Art Test and Free Book explaining present opportunities in art. Just fill out and mail coupon below.

FEDERAL SCHOOLS, INC.
1229E Federal Schools Bldg.
Minneapolis, Minn.

Send me, without obligation, your Art Test and Free Book.

Name....................................

Address....................................

....

Age...... Occupation... ....

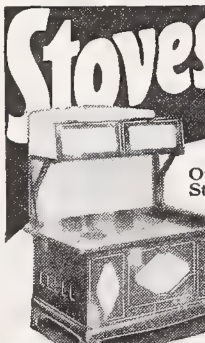
Stoves AT FACTORY PRICES!

SALE CATALOG—FREE

Over 200 Styles and Sizes of Stoves, Ranges, Furnaces at Factory Prices and Easy Terms—as little as 18c a day. More Bargains than in 20 Big Stores. New styles, new features, new colors. Year to Pay —30 days free trial—360 days approval test—24-hour shipments. The Kalamazoo Stove Co., Mfrs. 405 Rochester Avenue, Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Over 950,000 Satisfied Users
35 Years in Business
Write for FREE Catalog

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You"



"I Couldn't Sit, Couldn't Stand,
Couldn't even Lie Down!

WHAT a terrible affliction, Piles! What they do to pull you down physically and mentally! The worst part of it is that Piles are such an embarrassing subject, that many people hesitate to seek relief. Yet there's nothing more serious than Piles, for they can develop into something malignant.

There is no more satisfactory treatment of Piles than Pazo Ointment. Pazo supplies the needed effects. First, it is soothing, which relieves pain, soreness and itching. Second, it is lubricating, which makes passage easy. Third, it is astringent, which tends to reduce the swollen blood vessels which are Piles.

RESULTS!

Pazo comes in Collapsible Tube with Detachable Pile Pipe which permits application high up in rectum where it reaches and thoroughly covers affected parts. Pazo also now comes in suppository form. Pazo Suppositories are Pazo Ointment, simply in suppository form. Those who prefer suppositories will find Pazo the most satisfactory as well as the most economical.

All drug stores sell Pazo-in-Tubes and Pazo Suppositories.

OLD MONEY WANTED
$2000.00 FOR 1¢

We pay the world's highest prices for old coins, encased postage stamps and paper money. Large Copper Cents up to $2000.00 each, Half Cents $250.00, Indian Head Cents $50.00, 1909 Cent $10.00, Half Dimes $150.00, 25c before 1873 $300.00, 50c before 1879, $750.00, Silver Dollars before 1874, $2,500.00, Gold dollars $1,000.00, Trade dollars $250.00, 1822 $5.00 Gold Piece $5,000.00, Old Paper Money $26.00, Encased postage stamps $12.00, Certain Foreign Coins $150.00, etc.

Don't Wait! Send Dime Today for our large illustrated list before sending coins

ROMANO'S COIN SHOP
Dept. 597. Springfield, Mass.

Stop..
WORRY OVER tell tale
GRAY HAIR

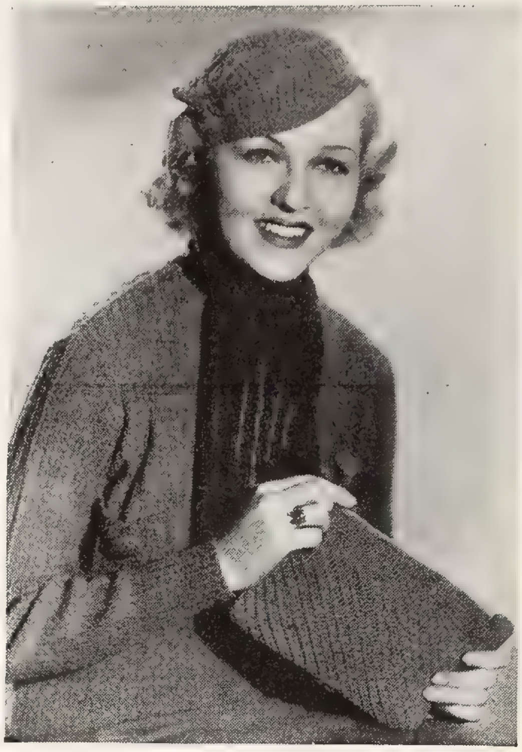
look 10 Years Younger

Now, without any risk, you can tint those streaks or patches of gray or faded hair to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and Brownatone does it. Prove it—by applying a little of this famous tint to a lock of your own hair.

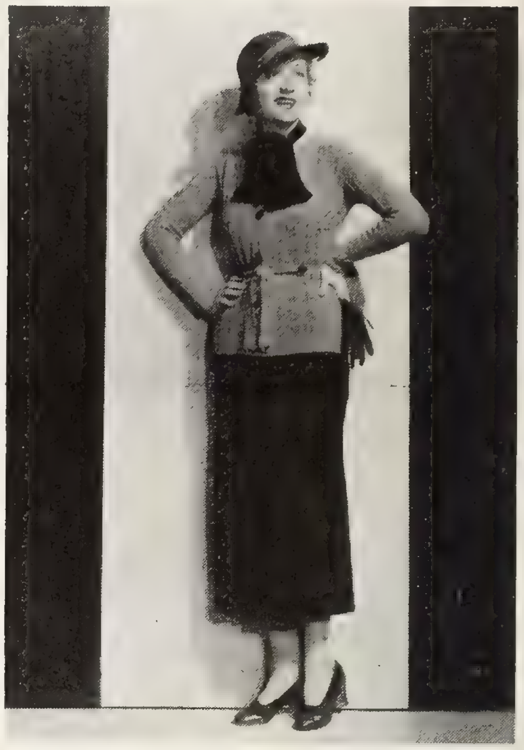
Used and approved—for over twenty-four years by thousands of women. Brownatone is safe. Guaranteed harmless for tinting gray hair. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Is economical and lasting—will not wash out. Simply retouch as the new gray appears. Imparts rich, beautiful color with amazing speed. Just brush or comb it in. Shades: "Blonde to Medium Brown" and "Dark Brown to Black" cover every need.

BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug and toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee.

Get busy with your knitting needles and crochet hooks, gals! Instructions for making these smart costumes are yours for the asking



1—If you are afraid to start out on a whole costume, get into the swing by crocheting this charming beret and bag set. Patricia Ellis has made hers in red and gives you all her instructions for the writing in, as explained below.



2—A two-piece costume with smart scarf is Genevieve Tobin's example of her handiwork. You can knit it all, or just the sweater top. The skirt is brown and the top beige—but use your imagination for your own color scheme.

feathers sweeping out over the face and down to shadow one cheek. Guess who? Marlene Dietrich, of course. And perfect, too, for the lovely German. Another Dietrich number was the other extreme . . . a mannish velour with creased crown pierced by two bright quills, set at opposite angles. Marlene could remove these quills, replacing them with other colors to suit the costume.

A tiny turban with a great cascade of coq feathers down one side was a Claudette Colbert choice. While Adrienne Ames had picked a Venetian tricorne of almost fatal charm. Also, black, it had a great veil that swept down from its front point in a flaring triangular piece. This veil only half covered the face and was sprinkled with chenille dots that gave a wicked glint to the eye they half hid.

And, if you don't think veils are popular, try to resist buying at least one hat with one. I have pictured several here this month. Back to Mme. Nicole. There were other hats which she had designed for these three but the point which she stressed about each was this . . . she would not design a hat for anyone in Hollywood unless she felt that she could express her true personality in so doing. No business of just making pretty hats, these were hats that bespoke the character of the star. It is something to bear in mind as you pick your next hat . . . don't just pick one that Sally looks well in, choose one that you are you in!

If you can't find a becoming hat this winter, you never will. The majority are giddy and gay but for you, who can't face the light of day in a slightly mad concoction, there are plenty of conservative standbys, either brimmed, off-the-face or turbaned. And your pet old beret pops up time and again in as many disguises as an amateur sleuth. You can have an international flavor to your hats . . . Venetian tricornes, Italian military hats with coq feathers, Mussolini's fringed fez hat, African native turbans, Tyrolean sports hats, French gendarme caps. Anything you like, but wear only what really becomes you, remember!

KNIT YOUR COSTUMES! CROCHET YOUR ACCESSORIES! Get your needles and your yarn, girls. For several months, henceforth, I am going to give you a chance to get full instructions for some of the smart knitted things all Hollywood is making. Begin with the two featured above this month. They are easy to make, fun to work on and exciting to wear. Just designate by number and the name of the star, the instructions you want. Write directly to me. Adelia Bird, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. C. It's all free for the asking—just include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

A Tale of Two Cities

(Continued from page 39)

of a redoubtable woman—a very battleship of a woman—all starch and competence and bombazine, who flew at him, demanding, "What have you done to my ladybird?" Then flew at Lucie with tender croonings of dismay. Then flew to the door, shouting for cold water, burning feathers, vinegar, quick! And then flew back at poor Mr. Lorry, upbraiding him for a great oaf—and asking why had he told her whatever he had told her with such clumsiness. During the hubbub, Lucie opened her eyes.

"I'm all right, Miss Pross," she said to the battleship female. Then, to Mr. Lorry, her gentle voice firm, "I entreat you to tell me, sir—where is my father? You must take me to him at once!"

"I will," replied Mr. Lorry.

RECALLED TO LIFE

Later, Lucie and Mr. Lorry were being escorted by one Ernest Defarge up the filthy stairs of a still filthier rabbit-warren in one of the unhappiest quarters of Paris. A towering, taciturn bull of a man, Defarge. Had not the minds of the other two been so intent upon their mission and had they not had good cause to be grateful to Defarge, they might well have found it in their hearts to fear him. And that wife of his, down in the wineshop—taciturn like her husband, with a cold eye and a hard mouth. Seldom speaking. Knitting, knitting, all day. A vast web which proved, upon examination, to have the coat of arms of many a noble French house worked into its folds.

And the men who frequented the wineshop—what men! Garbed in rags—for there were no clothes in Paris for the poor. Thin, for there was no food in Paris to feed them. Silent, for what topic could men discuss in those days, except the ever-present one of injustice and cruelty? And if the wrong ears overheard such talk, a man found himself behind bars. Even the tragedy that had occurred that afternoon was not discussed too openly. The tragedy—scarcely worth mentioning, for such things happened so often—was the murder of their friend Gaspard's little boy. The child had been clumsy enough to get himself run over by the coach of the Marquis D'Evremonde. Very vexing—to the Marquis, who had had to stop when his horses plunged and reared. Standing there on the step of his elegant carriage, a delicate frown on his high-bred features, he had given a moment of his precious time to rebuke the father for not taking better care of the child—and had tossed a gold louis in the road to show that, after all, he bore no permanent ill will toward the wretch who crouched there, so silent, with the limp bundle in his arms.

But there, as we have said, such things were not worth mentioning—except, perhaps, in whispers. And there had been some whispering in Defarge's wineshop—a whispering between groups of equally ragged and starved-looking men who seemed, all of them, to have the same name. At least, each called his fellow "Jacques" and was in turn called "Jacques" himself. Surely, it could not be that these scarecrow mortals had still enough levity in their souls to play a sort of game?

The arrival of Lucie and Mr. Lorry had put an end to all this. Mr. Lorry's signal, "Recalled to life," had met with a recognizing nod from Defarge. It was all very sinister and mysterious. Lucie remembered things afterward—long afterward.

At the very top of the crazy building, Defarge stopped. Across a grated door, he pulled a rusty key. "Must you lock him in?" asked Mr. Lorry.

A shrug of the huge Defarge shoulders. "He's lived so long that way, an open door would . . ."

"Is it possible!"

"All things are possible in France today!" The deep voice shook as though with secret fury. "Just as all things will be possible later!" And Ernest Defarge unlocked the door.

DR. MANETTE'S STORY

Eighteen years before the time of our tale, the iron gates of the Bastille had closed upon Alexandre Manette. His crime had been this: he had been summoned to give medical care to a young girl—summoned too late, for she had died. From her tearful mother and sister he had pieced out the sad little story. The girl, young and pretty, had found favor in the eyes of the Marquis on whose estate her family lived. The fact that she had loathed his attentions only whetted the nobleman's desire and, of course, the laws of France stated that all things on his lands were his. So, what was not given willingly was taken by force.

A common enough story. The only uncommon part about it was that a clever and respected surgeon bothered to go to the mighty Marquis—the same bored and elegant Marquis whose progress through the Quarter had been upheld that very day—and register a protest. That, indeed, was uncommon—unheard of. And it was quite to be expected that D'Evremonde's guards should, shortly thereafter, have entered the doctor's home—torn him from the embrace of his golden-haired wife and the sight of his little daughter—and taken him to prison. A trial? Any sort of hearing? Naïve questions!

For eighteen years, Dr. Manette remained in the Bastille. "105 North Tower"—he came to think that that was his name. But on a piece of paper he wrote other names—the names of every member of D'Evremonde's house. Wrote with pencillings of soot and grime from the floor of his cell and with blood squeezed from his ragged body. And he buried that list under a loosened brick in the floor.

After months—eons—had passed, to save what remained of his sanity, he begged permission to learn a trade and it was granted. He learned to make shoes—and for the rest of the eighteen years, he made shoes. All day. Every day.

D'Evremonde had, naturally, long since forgotten the trivial case of the impudent doctor. But there was one who had not forgotten—the sister of the girl who died. When she grew up, she married a wine merchant named Ernest Defarge. And through some tortuous, secret means known to themselves, they had been able to snatch one victim from the Bastille. One victim "recalled to life."

It scarcely seemed, however, that the pathetic, trembling ghost whom Lucie and Mr. Lorry saw before them could have any life left in him. He could not understand that it would be quite all right for him to leave that room. He clasped his rough shoemaker's tools to his ravaged

On the second day
take a Beauty Laxative

If you want to keep the sparkle in your eye and the peaches and cream in your complexion, get rid of accumulated body waste regularly. If Nature fails to maintain a regular schedule, take a beauty laxative.

Olive Tablets are just the thing for the purpose. Gentle and mild, easy to swallow, non-habit-forming, they assist nature in her work of house cleaning.

Keep tab on yourself. If more than a day goes by, take a beauty laxative—Olive Tablets. Three sizes—15¢-30¢-60¢. All druggists.

DR. EDWARDS'
OLIVE TABLETS
THE Beauty LAXATIVE

PINS 35¢

FOR YOUR CLASS-SOCIETY-CLUB!

Send For Free 1936 Catalog

PINS handsomely silver plated, enameled 1 or 2 colors, any 3 or 4 letters and year. Doz. Price $3.50. Sterling or Gold Plate 50c; Doz. $5. RINGS, Sterling Silver, similarly low priced. Largest makers for 40 years. Over 300 designs. Write today!

BASTIAN BROS. CO.
71 BASTIAN BLDG ROCHESTER, N Y

RINGS $1.60

BE A DESIGNER OF HOLLYWOOD FASHIONS

Earn $25 to $50 a Week

Have your own Style Shop, design smart gowns for best dressed women, mingle with the elite, be the Hollywood Fashion Expert of your town.

Dress Like Screen Stars at Little Cost

You can learn to design and make gowns like those of your favorite star at a fraction of their cost. You may acquire the charm such alluring gowns give the wearer. Have more clothes and dress more smartly, at less expense.

Hollywood Fashion Creators Train You at Home

With the aid of Fashion Creators of Motion Picture Studios, and Screen Stars themselves, this 50-year-old college will teach you Professional Costume Designing in your spare time at home by its easy-to-learn method, and prepare you for high-salaried position. Free placement service for students; graduates in demand.

Woodbury College, Hollywood, Cal.

MAIL COUPON FOR FREE BOOK

WOODBURY COLLEGE, Dept. 53-M, Hollywood, Calif.
Send me FREE your new book, "Designing Hollywood Fashions," and full particulars of your home-study course in Costume Designing. My age is..................
(No student under 16 years accepted)
Miss—Mrs. ....
Street..................
City..................State..................

body. At last, Lucie's gentle insistence seemed to awaken some dim remembrance in his mind. But there was one other thing which troubled him. "The list? Where is it?" and he felt pitifully along the floor for the loosened brick—the brick that must be there.

"Something he left in his cell," rumbled Defarge. "Get him out of France!" he went on. "Get him to England! For his sake—and for the sake of the Jacquerie who rescued him!"

CONCERNING THREE LIVES—AND TWO LOVES

In stuffy little London chambers, two men shared lodgings—Mr. Stryver and Mr. Carton, King's Counsellors. An oddly paired duo. People often said they couldn't understand why that nice Mr. Stryver—such a gentleman!—put up with that very peculiar, if extraordinarily handsome, Sydney Carton. Mr. Carton drank, they said. He had no manners. It seemed too bad that Mr. Stryver kept up his schoolfellow association with one who, obviously, was little better than a pensioner.

That's what they said—hitting the truth just about as accurately as they usually do.

"Really! Not working yet, Carton?" Stryver entered the littered apartment, to find his friend sprawling morosely in a chair, a bottle before him. "This is too much. You've got to put your mind on this case. They've got this, this Charles Darnay up for treason."

"I don't know Charles Darnay," in sardonic accents from Carton. "I hate treason and I hate Frenchmen. For that matter, I hate Englishmen, too."

"Yes, all very well, but Lorry sent this case to us with a special request for all our consideration."

"You don't need me to help you," replied Sydney bitterly. "You're becoming a great man in the law courts these days."

"I use my brains."

"You mean you use mine," said Sydney.

"Well, if I do, I pay you for it."

To this, Sydney replied that the money wasn't sufficient to make up for the continual interference with his drinking. And he poured another drink. Somehow, Stryver managed to set the brief before him and make him glance at it. "I tell you, Darnay is lost," he said despairingly—meaning that the case was lost, of course, "unless we can do something to counteract the evidence of these witnesses, Barsad and Cly."

"Barsad and Cly. Barsad and Cly," mumbled Sydney. "Cly and Barsad. Why, the case could be tried on the mere sound . . . From the very syllables of their names, they are manifestly villains. Barsad—Barsad. Seems I've heard that name before. Now, the other fellow. Charles Darnay, is, from his syllables, man'f'stly a gen'lem'n." This sudden thickness of the tongue—annoying! He took another drink to relieve it, clapped on his hat at a crazy angle, and prepared to leave. To the protesting and puffing Stryver, he answered merely that he thought he knew where Barsad did his drinking. "That means I can pursue this case in a congenial atmosphere. You're in luck, Stryver. I'll lay you a wager I'll drink you a victory."

AND so it came about, because the handsome, melancholy, clever and disillusioned Sydney Carton did not like the name Barsad and did like the name Darnay, that one life was saved and the threads of three lives were woven together in a bond that nothing but death could break.

In the dock at Old Bailey Court, young Charles Darnay stood—pale, resolute and handsome—with hope quite lost. He knew, too well, the one across the Channel who had engineered this trumped-up treason charge. And the power of that one.

Some months ago, he had come to the long-pondered conclusion that his manner of living was, through no direct fault of his own, wicked and wrong. He existed, common sense and common humanity told him, on the sweat and blood of other men. The delicate food he ate, the well-cut clothes he wore, the chateau which was his home—all were paid for and kept up because the peasants of France were taxed to the breaking point. But the real power to make the slightest change in the French ancien regime was not his. Conversations and pleadings with his uncle, the Marquis D'Evremonde, had brought him to the bitter conviction that D'Evremonde was not only a cold and indifferent man, but an evil one as well. And so Charles Darnay had forfeited his noble name, divided his inheritance among his people, adopted the simple appellation of monsieur and journeyed to England.

When he had informed his uncle of his resolve, sneers had been the response. Some hot words had passed between them. Sorrowfully bidding farewell to his old tutor, Gabelle, a faithful D'Evremonde retainer, he had set out for England.

He had not seen the calculating look in the Marquis' eyes, bent upon him. He could not know that the Marquis' gold louis had purchased the services of a certain Joseph Barsad, informer par excellence, who had always been able to secure evidence on anybody, provided there was a cash profit involved.

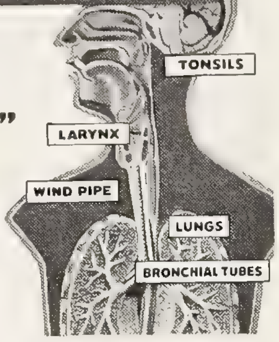
AND so Charles Darnay stood in the dock and looked, with his heart in his eyes, upon the sweetest face in England. Lucie, Lucie, that heart cried. Life is hard—I have found you, only to lose you so soon. The gentle girl and her father he had met on the Channel packet. They had been summoned as witnesses in his case. Forced to comply, they hadn't known that Lucie's most diffident statements would be used against the young Frenchman. Oh, so he had commented—and adversely?—upon England's treatment of her American colonies? No, no, the gentleman had merely said . . . If you mean the prisoner, madame, kindly say the prisoner. But—. Witness dismissed! And Mr. Barsad, you are quite certain this list of officers in His Majesty's army had been prepared by the prisoner? Quite, yer honor! And the crowd outside Old Bailey waited to see the miserable French spy hung, drawn and quartered . . .

Hours later, these vultures went away, cheated and grumbling. The clever Mr. Attorney Stryver, it seems (to whom Mr. Attorney Carton had been passing notes throughout the trial) had nullified the evidence of Joseph Barsad. In fact, at one point in the proceedings, Mr. Barsad had turned an odd shade of green and shaken as if with the ague. That was when Mr. Carton had looked up from the papers on which he kept scribbling and stared Mr. Barsad straight in the face. Mr. Barsad had taken back almost every statement he had made. And Charles Darnay had been acquitted. (Oh, the light in Lucie's eyes!)

Yes, Sydney Carton had drunk Mr. Stryver a victory. How? Oh, a little matter of many bottles at the tavern where Barsad did his drinking. A little boasting about certain fictional misdeeds of his own which, in turn, had prompted Barsad to do some boasting, too, for there are men who love to boast of their misdeeds. And how could Barsad have known that the roistering rake in the tavern would turn up next day at Old Bailey, gowned and wigged for the defense?

Was Sydney elated over his victory. Not at all. He was glummer than ever. Life was a savorless, lonely affair, with no one to share its joys and sorrows. There

Stop COUGHS quicker by "Moist-Throat" Method



Getting throat's moisture glands to work "soothes" coughs away

THE usual cause of a cough is the drying or clogging of moisture glands in your throat and windpipe. When this happens, heavy phlegm collects, irritates. Then you cough. The quick and safe way to relief is by letting Pertussin stimulate those glands to pour out their natural moisture. Sticky phlegm loosens, is easily raised. You have relief!

Get after that cough today—with Pertussin. Over 1,000,000 doctors' prescriptions for Pertussin were filled in one year, according to Prescription Ingredient Survey issued by American Pharmaceutical Assn.

PERTUSSIN
"MOIST-THROAT" METHOD OF
COUGH RELIEF

FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

Seeck & Kade, Inc., 440 Washington St., N. Y. C.
I want a Free trial bottle of Pertussin—quick!

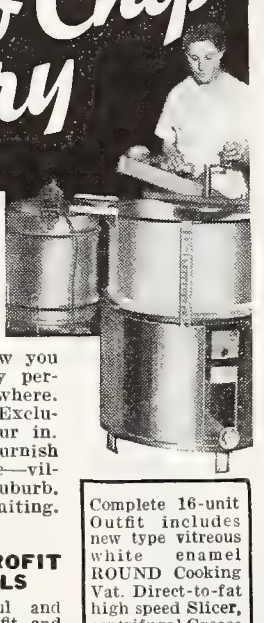
Name____________________
Address MS-12

Skin Help
When surface pimples spoil looks or eczema torments you

Send for FREE SAMPLE
Poslam Co.
STATION G
NEW YORK

POSLAM
WORKS FAST

OWN A Potato Chip Factory
COMPLETE



NEW HOME FACTORY MAKES NEW KIND of POTATO CHIP
Donuts Salted Nuts

Stop looking for something difficult. Turn potatoes into cash. I show you just how with my newly perfected outfit. Start anywhere. Very little cash needed. Exclusive location. Profits pour in. No experience needed. I furnish the plans. Begin anywhere—village, small town, city or suburb. A big opportunity is waiting. Business permanent.

Complete 16-unit Outfit includes new type vitreous white enamel ROUND Cooking Vat. Direct-to-fat high speed Slicer, centrifugal Grease Extractor, Thermometer — Positively everything necessary to start—all at new low price.

MAKE UP TO 300% PROFIT ON RAW MATERIALS

Raw materials are plentiful and cheap. Highly perfected outfit and confidential plans make operation simple, with startling profits certain.

WE HELP FINANCE YOU

and locate you. Send no money, just name, for book of facts and free opportunity.

LONG-EAKINS COMPANY
1190-S High St. Springfield, Ohio

Henry Wadsworth wants you to meet Pookie, a fan dog! He is a gift to Henry from an Ohio fan club and a pretty grand one, too. Henry will return to M-G-M after being loaned out for "The Big Broadcast of 1936."

never had been anyone. . . . Today, when he, too, had gazed upon Lucie Manette's sweet face, he had thought, "If there was one who would look upon me like that!" And the look, and Lucie's face, had remained in his mind all day.

Late that night, he stared moodily at his unkempt reflection in a tavern mirror. He had dined with Darnay and the young Frenchman's courtesy had had an uphill struggle against Carton's taciturn reserve.

"Why did you treat the man like that?" Sydney asked his image. "Is it because he shows you what you have fallen away from and what you might have been? Change places with him, and would you have been looked at by those blue eyes as he was? Come on, Carton, you're jealous! Have it out in plain words: you hate the fellow!"

SOME YEARS ELAPSE

It was plain, of course, to the veriest duffer, that there could be only one ending to the love story that had begun on the Channel packet. Lucie and Charles Darnay were married and Charles took a position in Tellson's bank. He had frankly told everything to Dr. Manette, now much restored in mental and physical health. When the doctor heard the name D'Evremonde, his face had gone haggard and some of his old vagueness had returned for a moment. But for the sake of the daughter he loved, above everyone else in the world, he had smothered his own feelings and given his blessing, only cautioning Darnay not to worry Lucie with a needless repetition of his past story. Affairs in France were unsettled—it might distress her. Satisfied with this reason, Darnay consented to keep his secret.

They were married, and in due time, there was a little Lucie, as fair and sweet as her mother. Miss Pross now had an entire household to bully and fuss over. At Lucie's behest, Sydney Carton became a frequent visitor in their home. His life, sweetened and warmed by that home's influence, became a little less bleak. Content to be near Lucie, he kept his love for her locked in his heart. At her pleading, he drank less, became a little less moody.

"I feel you still have such possibilities, Sydney," Lucie often said.

"They will never be realized," Sydney would reply lightly. "Think of me as one who died young."

"I'll never give up my hopes for you," Lucie insisted.

"I know better. But this I know, too. I would embrace any sacrifice for you and for those dear to you. Think of me as a man who would give his life to keep a life you love beside you."

"Thank you, Sydney. God grant it shall never be necessary."

"IS HE NOT A D'EVREMONDE ALSO?"

1792! The Revolution—a plant sown years before, nourished by oppression, tended by misery, reached its full harvest in that year and flowered under the hot breath of fanaticism. French aristos, hundreds of them, fled to England—those who were lucky enough to escape. An edict passed by Citizen Danton confiscated their property and made their return to France punishable by death at the hands of Madame La Guillotine. The sharp-toothed madame claimed many victims those days. After the flimsiest hearings before self-appointed judges, hundreds were hurried through the bloody streets to appease her appetite. Some, like the Marquis D'Evremonde, were not accorded this honor. It saved time when one of the Jacquerie (could it have been Gaspard, father of the murdered child?) knifed the Marquis in his luxurious bed. The Chateau D'Evremonde was razed to the ground and the still-faithful Gabelle taken prisoner by the mob—he might be useful later!

On the historic day when the populace stormed the Bastille, chanting their ghoulish cry for liberty, fraternity and equality, the huge figure of Ernest Defarge and the grim face of his wife could be seen in the lead. They had a little private mission to attend to in 105 North Tower. Under a loosened brick in the cell floor, they found Dr. Manette's list, the names of all those in the house of D'Evremonde. The public tribunal could find a use for this!

Dr. Manette's hands trembled so that he could hardly hold the letter. It was from his son-in-law—and very brief. Darnay wrote merely that he had heard his old friend, Gabelle, had been seized by the

A REFLECTION of your good taste- Drip-O-lator Coffee!

Your daily use of the Drip-O-lator, serving this finest of clear rich coffee, reflects your good taste. Your family will appreciate it. Your friends expect it. Chummy two and four cup sizes for bachelor girls' apartment use. Four, six and eight cup sizes for family or party occasions. On the base of the original Drip-O-lator you will find the trade mark. Look for this protection against imitations. You could not select a more appreciated gift.

CHRISTMAS EVE MENU
Red Cherry Salad
Chicken Almond Sandwiches
Sweet Pickles and
Drip-O-lator Coffee

THE ENTERPRISE ALUMINUM CO.
Massillon, Ohio

LATEST MODELS OF THE ORIGINAL DRIP-O-LATOR ON DISPLAY IN ALL THE LEADING CHAIN, DEPARTMENT AND RETAIL STORES

The Best GRAY HAIR REMEDY IS MADE AT HOME

YOU can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded, or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Look French's guaranteed SINGING CANARY AND French's Food Assortment

BOTH for only $6.95 F. O. B. New York City

Think of it! An imported, specially-bred and selected canary and an assortment of French's bird foods for only $6.95! The very best you can buy. If you enjoy the chopper canary's natural flute and bell tones order a French's Carillon. If you prefer the cultivated, soft-voiced roller canary ask for a French's Caroller. Live delivery to your nearest express office is guaranteed and we will promptly refund money and transportation costs on any bird not arriving in full health and song. Send check or money order. Free booklet. Address:

The R. T. French Co., Dept. MM, Rochester, N. Y.
Mfrs. of French's Bird Seed and Biscuit since 1910

GREATEST MOUTH WASH VALUE IN AMERICA!

MIFFLIN
Antiseptic
MOUTH WASH

12 oz. SIZE 20c

4 oz. SIZE 10c

AT LEADING 5c and 10c CHAIN STORES

Tested and Approved 3954 by Good Housekeeping Bureau Conducted by Good Housekeeping Magazine

THE PURE KNITTED COPPER
CHORE GIRL

The big hand full of safe cleanliness for pots, pans, aluminum and oven glass. Burnt-in grease and grime off in a jiffy. No splinters, no rust. Buy one today at the store where you secured this magazine. 10c

NEW EASY WAY 10¢
JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP
KEEP WIRES OFF FLOOR
(LAMPS AND RADIO).
A neat job instantly. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Set of eight colored clips to match vour cords. 10c.
At Kresge's

MAKE BLOND HAIR
—even in DARK shades
GLEAM with GOLD
in one shampoo WITHOUT BLEACHING

GIRLS, when your blond hair darkens to an indefinite brownish shade it dulls your whole personality. But you can now bring back the fascinating glints that are hidden in your hair and that give you personality, radiance—beauty. Blondex brings back to the dullest and most faded blond hair the golden beauty of childhood, and keeps light blond hair from darkening. Brownish shades of hair become alluring without bleaching or dyeing, camomile or henna rinsing. Try this wonderful shampoo treatment today and see how different it is from anything you have ever tried before. It is the largest selling shampoo in the world. Get Blondex today at any drug or department store.

Revolutionaries and that he would be released only upon the verification of Darnay. For this reason he had gone to Paris. There was no need to alarm Lucie. Would the doctor simply tell her that business had summoned her husband away?

No need to alarm Lucie! Ah, now, for a surety, there was need for all to be alarmed!

What to do first? He must tell Lucie her husband's secret—he had no right to keep it from her now. Mr. Lorry was in Paris, on business for Tellson's—he would be able to help, perhaps. And Dr. Manette felt sure that his own past history would have some weight. He would seek out Ernest Defarge.

So Lucie was told and with hope and fear alternately sending their hearts up and down, they set forth. Miss Pross, staunch female, would not hear to letting her Ladybird go without her—nor would she leave little Lucie behind. She poohpoohed the entire Revolution and Lucie, too distraught to know what was wisest to do, let her have her way.

Inquiries in Paris quickly unfolded the bleak situation. Gabelle's letter to Darnay had, of course, been a hoax. The hapless tutor had been murdered, after cruel torture had forced him to reveal the whereabouts of his former young master. Charles Darnay—his noble origins twice disclosed, once by Gabelle and once, so ironically, by Dr. Manette's own revengeful list in 105 North Tower—had been seized, upon his arrival in Paris, and incarcerated in La Force Prison.

Dr. Manette pushed his frail strength to the utmost in trying to gain a reprieve for his son-in-law. He had counted so earnestly on the help of the Defarges. But they, inflamed and insane with the blood-thirstiness of the times, gave him little satisfaction. "You, Citizen Manette, have suffered with us. But Darnay, is he not a D'Evremonde also?" It seemed hopeless—it was hopeless. Charles Darnay was condemned to die at the hands of La Guillotine.

"GREATER LOVE HATH NO MAN"

The gaoler outside No. 23 in La Force prison was remarking that you never could tell about these accursed aristos. Why, the women played games with their children and did fancy work. And here was a D'Evremonde in 23 who did nothing but write letters. His companion—the one they called the English spy—replied absently in abominable French that that was so. The English spy, who seemed to have something on his mind, waited until the gaoler had gone on his rounds. Then he beckoned down the dark corridor. A figure appeared. Stealthily, the English spy slipped a key into the lock of No. 23. And the other figure passed within. "Thank you, Barsad," it said.

"I'm afraid we won't pull this off, Mr. Carton," whispered the "spy."

"Do as you're told and we will."

"There's got to be a No. 23 in the morning."

"There will be. No, look here—return before the gaoler comes back to take Mr. Carton—Mr. Carton, understand?—to his coach."

"Lor, you couldn't pay me to do what you're doin', Mr. Carton," and a look that was almost reverence passed for a moment over the villainous Cockney face.

"Oh," Sydney Carton replied lightly, "I daresay you'd have your price even for this, Barsad."

Speechless, Darnay stared at the man who, once before, had saved his life and who had come now to—what had he come to do?

Apparently, he had come to dictate a letter—a letter which Darnay obediently wrote, but which he could not comprehend. It said, "I ask you to recall the words that passed between us on a certain occasion. I am grateful the time has come when I can prove them. . . ."

Darnay looked up. "What occasion? What is that queer smell? I feel faint . . ." Carton was waving something back and forth in his hand. Darnay leaped up to stop him, but Carton, too quick, felled him with a blow. Then with feverish haste, he took off the young Frenchman's clothes—dressed the inert form quickly in his own and himself donned Darnay's attire. He pulled his own hat far down over Darnay's unconscious face—called Barsad.

The next morning, the prisoner in No. 23 looked out of the murky little cell window. His eyes were shining, his heart full of a deep peace. When a grating noise sounded at his cell door, he turned eagerly, as one who welcomes a guest. The time had come then? Good.

BUT it was not the gaoler—it was a bigger, burlier man—who was speaking to someone without. "For the doctor's sake—this last interview. It's all I can do, but if it is discovered, it's all over with me. Remember—keep faith."

"I will, I will!' And thank you—bless you, Defarge!" said Lucie's voice. She entered the cell, spoke a name. "Charles!" Quickly, Sydney Carton snuffed out the candle on the rough table. Lucie came forward—seemed to sense something—stopped.

"Lucie, my darling, it was brave of you to come," Sydney spoke in a whisper, but with the haste of one who wards off another's speech. "There is nothing you can do—nothing, but say good-bye." Comprehension dawned in the blue eyes, so bright with unshed tears, that were raised to his. With an almost superhuman effort, he went on. "Remember, all that I have given you, I give freely. Say good-bye quickly, my dear. To stay, to make any protest—would be to endanger the others—all the others, even little Lucie." With a stifled sob, Lucie flung herself in his arms. A look that was mingled agony and ecstasy passed over Sydney Carton's face. "Charles is safe. Say good-bye for me," he murmured, gently loosening her arms. "Say good-bye to me!"

For a long time, she gazed at him. Then she drew his face down to hers and kissed him.

"Your time is up, Citizeness," said a gruff voice at the door.

Later that afternoon, the mob around the guillotine howled and shrieked as one noble head after another was severed by Madame's blow. Sixteen! Seventeen! Eighteen! Nineteen—an effete viscount, who thanked the headsman graciously for terminating a life which had become a burden. Twenty and Twenty-one—the Duc and Duchesse of—what did it matter? Twenty-two! A little seamstress—oh, a dangerous traitor. She had been heard to express sympathy for an enemy of the Republic who had been knifed the day before. Her face was pale to ghostliness. Her step faltered. She struggled to gain a little courage—turned to No. 23 behind her.

"You're not afraid! The others are pretending—but you—you really aren't afraid. It's almost as if you welcomed it!"

The mob howled for the accursed D'Evremonde—see, he hides his face! Haste, haste, headsman—the light is dying.

Sydney Carton spoke to the little seamstress. "Believe me, it is a far, far better thing I do than I have ever done; it is a far, far better rest I go to than I have ever known."

Sydney Carton's hand rested for a moment on the shoulder of the little seamstress, as though in a blessing. The peace and glory that had come to his soul that morning was glorified a thousandfold.

The Men Who Make Your Movies

(Continued from page 47)

to Negri to Dietrich—he's known them all. He has worked on big musical productions in which Hollywood's most beautiful chorus girls have appeared in costumes consisting of—well, a little of this and a little of that and a couple of beads. And musical productions bore Earl to death.

WOMEN stars, with a few exceptions, bore him, too. His favorite stars—and he's seen them all—are Dick Arlen, Randy Scott and Gary Cooper. The one woman about whom he is wildly enthusiastic is Tallulah Bankhead, because "she always thanks you when you do her a favor." And what favor, you ask, could an electrician do Tallulah? Well, he can rig up an impromptu dressing-table with the lights placed at just the right angles around the mirror. Or he can attach a small electric heater on cold days. These things do not come under the head of regular duties. They are just little side jobs, small courtesies. And it seems pretty bad if the star neglects to thank the electrician.

An electrician's duties are so many that it is a favor when he takes time out from his other tasks. The electrical crew arrives on the set before any of the other workers. The night before, the "best boy," as he is called, has looked over the set and decided what lights are necessary for the next day and has requisitioned these from the electrical department. Before the other workers arrive the "gaffer," the floorman (or "best boy") and the operators (or crew) do a little stunt called "roughing in" which means setting the lights so that the set will be well flooded and all the generators will be at advantageous points. When the cameraman arrives the "juicer" or electrician is under orders from him. It is the cameraman who tells where he wants the spotlights placed. "And," Earl told me, "cameramen can be more temperamental than the stars when they want to be."

THE toughest set Earl (who is a "best boy") ever had to light was the Algerian town in "Devil and the Deep." The electricians worked for two days on that location before the company showed up, for, in order to light the street, platforms had to be built for the lamps. There were five portable generators, 150 lamps, 20 sun arcs and a lot of other things—all of which generated about 20,000 amperes. Twenty electricians were used.

Just to give you a slight idea of the amount of lights used, even an ordinary set would cost you about sixty dollars an hour, if it were on your electric bill. The studios, of course, make their own juice.

No, the electrician's job is not an easy one. Although the biggest work consists of the morning's "roughing in," the lights must all be moved and changed for each different scene, or set-up. And every hour brings some new problem.

For instance, when you're watching a scene in which an actor walks into a room and snaps on the light you probably don't stop to realize what a difficult job that is to photograph. He can't, for instance, walk into the room in pitch black darkness, else you wouldn't see him. There must be some light right at first. Then, when he snaps the switch there must be a great deal more. It takes the electrical crew just about forty-five minutes to rig up the lights so that you will see this effect on the screen.

Although they get overtime, the electricians hours are long and tedious. The longest stretch Earl ever worked was from six A. M. Sunday to 10:30 Monday night. In telling me of this he said, "And the rest of the crew worked on until midnight."

I asked, "Why did you leave at ten-thirty?" Very simply he answered. "Well, they telephoned onto the set that our baby had just been born." And there, gentle reader, is a little drama for you. For forty and a half hours he had been pulling lights around in front of actors' faces, knowing that his wife was at the hospital having a baby. But he could not desert the fake drama for the real thing.

WHEN he was just a kid, Earl ran away from home and got a job as a laborer at Universal City in the studio mill. From there he went to a quickie company as an assistant cameraman. Then he learned the electrical business and has, as I've told, been at Paramount for ten years, working darned hard every minute. "Some days," he told me, "I hate the studio. And then I like it. No, it isn't a thrill any more. I don't exactly know what it is."

Neither do I, but since I've experienced the same sensation myself I can guess. It is, somehow, being so intimate a part of the life of the drama. Work it is, but it is invariably exciting, stimulating work.

For instance Earl has lots of fun watching new actors and actresses in their first roles. He makes little bets with himself about whether they will make the stardom grade or not. And he has seen so many come and go, that he is usually right. He prophesied, to himself, of course—for who thinks that an electrician knows anything about art?—that Mary Brian would last longer than Betty Bronson. That was when he watched the two of them work together in "Peter Pan." Mary is still in pictures. And Betty? Where is she?

He thinks Mary Brian is a swell kid, by the way. Helen Mack he admires, too. She is sweet like Mary.

He has wonderful times kidding around the set with Dick, Randy and Gary—his three favorites. He also is very fond of Kent Taylor and Cary Grant. They, he'll tell you, are regular fellows—and that's a relief. In some films he has no interest at all and doesn't care to see them on the screen. But others he watches carefully in the making, they're usually the outdoor, he-men pictures. Later he takes his wife and kids to see them, when they play at the neighborhood theatre. He is always interested in watching how his lighting effects show up and tries to explain about it to his wife. But she's more interested in knowing what Claudette Colbert is really like.

Then on the days when important visitors come on the set it's fun. It's work, too, of course, because he has to make a new electrical set-up so that the still men can take photographs of the visitors for the newspapers. He has seen probably every important person of this generation. Royalty doesn't interest him at all. He wouldn't waste a second look on them. But the football stars, ah, they're great and usually all of them are swell fellows.

HE glowed with interest when he told me about them. And suddenly, he turned to me. "Guess who I saw on the set one day?" His voice was low. He was truly impressed. This was to be a name with which to conjure. But keep in

"Please HELP ME"

BEWARE OF WORMS!

Have you wormed your dog lately? Worms kill thousands of dogs. All puppies and dogs should be wormed regularly. For safe, sure results use SERGEANT'S PUPPY CAPSULES for worms in pups; SERGEANT'S SURE-SHOT CAPSULES for older dogs. Sold by druggists and pet shops everywhere.

Write for Free Dog Book » » »

Do you know the symptoms of worms and the many diseases to which your dog may fall prey? Do you know how to feed your dog to keep him well and strong? Do you know how to train your dog to be well-behaved and obedient? Give your dog the benefit of expert care. It is yours for the asking. All this information, and much more is yours in the famous "SERGEANT'S DOG BOOK." 46 pages and many illustrations. All you have to do to get it is to send us your name. It may save your dog's life. Write at once.

EXPERT ADVICE FREE. Our own veterinarian will gladly advise you about your dog's health. Write fully, stating all symptoms and the age, breed and sex of your dog. There is no charge.

For Free Book or Advice, Address
POLK MILLER PRODUCTS CORPORATION
1969 W. Broad Street
Richmond, Virginia

Sergeant's
DOG MEDICINES

HAIR Removed now and Forever at HOME

You Can Cure Your Own Case

In privacy of your own HOME with this amazing ELECTROLYSIS OUTFIT. REMOVES HAIR FROM FACE, ARMS, LEGS, ETC. IT'S SO SIMPLE! IT'S SO EASY TO OPERATE. No longer need you be embarrassed. Bring your loveliness to light. Results guaranteed. Quick relief—harmless.

NATHENIELS—ELECTROLOGIST SPECIALIST
906 Fox Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

ELECTROLYSIS Outfit Instructions Complete $12.75

WORK FOR THE

GOVERNMENT
$1260 to $2100 Year
TO START

Men—Women

Get ready immediately

Common education usually sufficient

Mail Coupon Today—SURE

COUPON

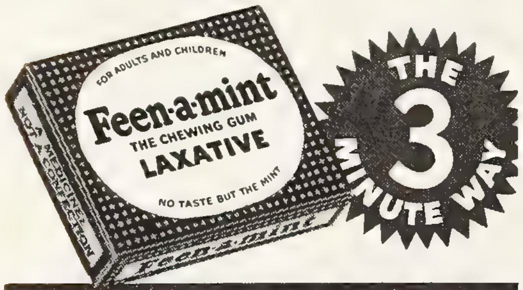
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. C320
Rochester, N. Y.

Rush FREE list of U. S. Government big pay JOBS, 32-page book describing salaries, hours, work. Tell me how to get one of those jobs.

Name........................
Address........................

"3 minutes of my time... and I forgot my troubles!"

There's no doubt about it—the three-minute way certainly makes a difference. Three minutes chewing FEEN-A-MINT, the delicious chewing-gum laxative—then good-bye constipation and the logy way it makes you feel. Have you been using racking "all-at-once" cathartics? Then you know what cramps and griping are. The three-minute way is easy, thorough, and oh so efficient! It's good for the entire family—and children love it.



THE CHEWING-GUM LAXATIVE

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. KnoGRAY ENDS GRAY HAIR

Mme. Turmel, famous French hair expert, retiring from private practice, now offers for home use her unique method of coloring hair any shade, blonde to black, from the same bottle. Not a restorer, exact match. Instantaneous. Permits Permanent Wave. KnoGRAY cannot fade or rub off. Apply yourself day or night. Free Booklet. Madame Turmel, Dept. 8, 256 W. 31 St., New York

5¢ EACH LITTLE BLUE BOOKS

Send postcard for our free catalogue. Thousands of bargains. Address: LITTLE BLUE BOOK CO., Catalogue Dept., Desk 369, GIRARD, KANSAS

Brand New NOW ONLY $17.95 & UP

TYPEWRITER PORTABLES

10¢ a Day • Easy Terms

Sensational Low Prices and easy terms on limited supply only. All brand new, up-to-date —4 row keyboard. Fully Guaranteed.

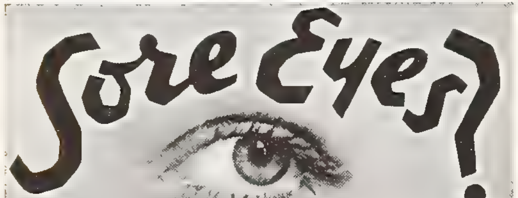
SEND NO MONEY—10 Day Trial

Send for special new literature and money-saving, easy pay plan with 10 day trial offer. Also amazing bargains in standard size, rebuilt office models on FREE trial offer.

International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 1261 Chicago

ASTHMA?

"If you are sick and tired of gasping and struggling for breath—tired of sitting up night after night losing much needed rest and sleep, write me at once for a FREE trial of the medicine that gave me lasting relief. I suffered agony for nearly six years. Now I have no more spells of choking, gasping and wheezing and sleep sound all night long. Write today for a FREE trial. Your name and address on a post card will bring it by return mail." O. W. Dean, President, Free Breath Products Company, Dept. 1351-B, Benton Harbor, Michigan.



Bathe them with LAVOPTIK

Instant relief for inflamed, sore, tired, strained or itching eyes. 6000 eyesight specialists endorse it. 25 years success. Get Lavoptik (with free eye cup) from your druggist.

mind that Earl has seen all of Hollywood's biggest stars, has worked with them daily. And here he was saying, thrilled, "Guess who I saw on the set one day? I saw Arthur Brisbane!"

No, Earl wouldn't turn around to see Marlene Dietrich in the altogether. But it was a big day when he actually saw Arthur Brisbane. It is a matter, I suppose, of whom one's heroes are.

The gaffer called him. They were talking a strange language—"save 'em," "put a silk on that broad and kill the baby," "get it hotter," "bring it up," "put a screen on that." It was a language you and I couldn't understand. They were in the secret world of their trade. Earl was busy now putting those curious words into action. As I was leaving he broke away long enough to say, "This afternoon I'll be over on the test set. I like making tests. It's swell seeing the new kids. And, funny thing, sometimes they're more at ease than the old-timers."

"Do you ever give the new ones tips about acting?" I asked.

"I would if they asked me to," he said earnestly.

And he could, too. For he's seen the best and the worst acting of his generation; he knows the difference. And maybe it's the realization of this knowledge that has kept him so many years at the studio.

In spite of the work, the long hours, the grief, the pandering to temperaments—the electrician's job has its compensations.

Pons & Co. Invade Hollywood

(Continued from page 44)

English she hastened to explain that she had been practicing the "Bell Song" from "Lakme" since the early hours of the morning.

"If I do not keep up constant practice," she accompanied herself with Frenchy gestures, "in one month it is difficult for me to reach a high note. A voice must be watched even more carefully than a child. Only no amount of pampering can spoil a voice. A mother lives for her child, a singer for her voice. Such is the leisure life of an opera star."

BUT you are in the movies now," I reminded her. "That means that at last you will have some time for play. Once a song is recorded, it's recorded, and that's that."

"I'm afraid I have not much time for play," she answered, carefully searching for words with which to make herself clearly understood. "You see, I have a schedule by which I must work in Hollywood, the same as in Paris or New York. Here everything is new to me, and it is the same as a baby learning to walk. N'est-ce pas? In the mornings I practice my operatic selections. In the afternoons, I must change my technique of rendition to rehearse the songs I am to sing in the picture. To mix the two would be dangerous. The vocal cords would rebel. My teacher is here with me to see that I do nothing to injure my voice. After all, I must go back to the Metropolitan next season."

The doors of the music room swung open and Miss Pons' celebrated teacher, Signor Alberti de Gorostiaga; a shy, meek little Italian with the quietly twinkling eyes of a Pekingese, came in to join us. Miss Pons hurriedly explained to him, in his native tongue, my mission. Signor de Gorostiaga, evidently pleased, bowed and bowed and bowed. Such graciousness have these Continentals!

"If it were not for Signor Gorostiaga, I would not be in Hollywood today." She looked proudly at the little music master as she spoke. "It was his belief in my future that made my musical career possible."

Signor Teacher broke into a ripple of smiles that bespoke approval and, although he understood not a word of the English she was trying to speak, he knew the significance of the words, and nodded and nodded and nodded. I, too, found myself nodding.

"Signor Gorostiaga has been my teacher from the very first," she pointed out. "I myself never dreamed I could ever be a singer worthy of the Metropolitan. Once, long before I knew my teacher, I played the music halls of Paris, but I did not sing a note in the act. I was merely a comedienne in a skit. As you say over here, I was a stooge."

Another door opened. (There were at least a half dozen leading into the large reception room where our interview was under way.) A sleek, dark young man walked in, and was introduced as Lehman Byck, Miss Pons' director on her radio programs of last winter. He, too, had made the migration across the continent to assist the diminutive diva in her movie début. Upon his foreign features was written the look of a thick accent. When he opened his mouth he actually spoke English!

Then suddenly from another door, a tall, blonde woman appeared, followed by a handsome, olive-complexioned middle-aged lady bearing a striking resemblance to the most renowned of the "Lakme" interpretors. The dark one, Mr. Byck introduced as Miss Pons' mother, and the other as her secretary. Like the good Signor Gorostiaga, they, too, could not speak English. After bowing, nodding, and bowing some more, we all sat down in a little family circle to continue the interview. The scene had suddenly taken on the feeling of the dénouement in the last act of a play. All the leading characters were on the stage and very soon a climax must be reached.

Mr. Byck, jittery about something, rose suddenly, explained that he must be off to the studio, where the sound department was waiting to discuss the best method of presenting the Pons voice to the movie microphones. As he disappeared the one person besides myself who could understand English, was gone—like the final flicker of a candle. As for my French, it would be worse than their English. I looked hopefully towards dear Signor Gorostiaga. He was still nodding.

The interview must go on. "Did you ever think of becoming a movie star before you went into Grand Opera?" I promptly asked Miss Pons.

HER eyes brightened with animation. She understood! Signor Gorostiaga seemed to understand, too, for there was a new gleam in his eyes. Also the mother and the secretary. I expected them all to answer at once. Words hung on their lips. But it was Miss Pons who replied.

"Never could I imagine that I would some day be a movie star," Mademoiselle Pons confessed. "You see, I was not a pretty child, my family disapproved of a professional life, and Hollywood was so far away. But," she chuckled with the memory, "I was such a movie fan!"

"You mean like those people who stand around begging for autographs and writing fan letters?" I probed relentlessly, giving gesture for gesture.

"Only worse," Miss Pons answered. "As a little girl in France, I adored movie stars. Thomas Meighan was my favorite. I used to collect his pictures avidly, out of newspapers, magazines, and keep them pasted in a book. Once I went backstage in a little provincial theatre and stole his photographs off a wall of the dressing-room."

"I presume you are still a movie fan." I addressed Miss Pons, but it was Signor Gorostiaga who bent forward and clung to every word. "Who is your favorite star now?"

For a moment she digested my question, wavering between diplomacy and honesty—then promptly confessed, "Wallace Beery. I never miss his pictures. Oh, I loved 'Viva Villa!'"

On the subject of men, I garnered courage and ventured into more dangerous territory.

"Why did you divorce your husband?" I asked right out loud, emitting the words so quickly that it would be impossible to recall them. Then, holding my breath, I waited for the explosion of Parisian temperament.

MLLE. PONS stiffened. Embarrassment fluttered across her face. She opened her large eyes even wider, and looked at me in delicious dilemma. Even the Signor understood the word 'husband' giving him his cue. He, too, stiffened, in rhythm with the emotion of his famous pupil—and for once he did not nod—but only stared, helpless and pathetically forlorn, like one suspended in mid-air. Mamma Pons and the secretary looked at one another as if I had just asked them to join a nudist colony. I tried smiling even more sweetly than Maestro Gorostiaga.

Miss Pons broke into one of her little chuckles, clearing the atmosphere of the electricity with which my question had charged it.

"I had to choose between marriage and a career." She perked her head up defiantly. "So I chose a career.

"You see," she went on to explain, "I was so young when I married. I did not realize then what this career meant to me. I have given years to my studies. My teacher," she looked fondly across at the beaming little Italian, who looked at that moment like a romantic puppet vendor on the canals of Venice, "my dear, dear Alberti, believed so much in my talent that he gave years of his time to devote to my training. When the great opportunity came to go into Opera, I could not walk out on him in repayment for his devotion and faith."

As if sensing that he was the subject of Miss Pons' long impassioned speech, Gorostiaga permitted his eyes to blink with modesty, and had he had a puppy dog tail he would have wagged it.

"After I married I tried to continue with my career," she went on to vindicate her matrimonial misadventure. "Each week found me in a different Opera House in a different country. I was no longer just a woman. I no longer belonged to myself. My husband followed me with such tender thoughtfulness from one city to another, to be near me always. But I soon realized he had become only a part of my entourage. It was unfair to a man so very deserving of domestic happiness. So I divorced."

However, after her divorce, Lily found romance again. It was a shipboard romance with Dr. Fritz von der Becke. She met and fell in love with him during a return trip from South America. They announced their engagement, but later it was broken by mutual consent. The ship's doctor and the star could not make their separate lives merge to the happiness of both. It meant that one must give up a career and neither felt such a sacrifice was fair.

On being queried about her recent romance and rumored marriage to Andre Kostelanetz, orchestra leader on the prima donna's radio programs, she denied that there was anything to it.

"Well, anyhow," I laughed nervously, noting the glint of iron in the secretary's eyes, "how do you like Hollywood?"

"It is fascinating," she replied at once, then immediately interpreted my question for the three listeners. They all agreed it was fascinating, and broke into a symphony of nods and smiles. Yes, yes indeed, it was fascinating. Everyone nodded. Everyone acceded. All was bliss and harmony again.

"Everyone is so friendly." She went on to relate how thoughtful were the studio executives, how polite the electricians, how gracious the stagehands, how generous the press. Each time she handed out a bouquet, good Signor Gorostiaga's chin mechanically pressed down on his chest in agreeable affirmation.

"Hollywood is making some wonderful predictions for your future in pictures," I assured her.

She glowed for a moment with the excitement of the information, then quickly relayed it to her teacher. He promptly got up, and bending himself in two, bowed to me. What could I do but bow back.

The secretary glanced at her wrist watch. In French, she reminded Miss Pons it was time to go to the studio. The interview was at an end. Thanking me, the vest-pocket-edition prima donna bid me adieu. The last glimpse I caught of her, she was bounding up the wide stairs to her bedroom, two leaps at a time, like a little girl who must get dressed in a hurry because she is about to be taken to a party. She was crooning "Minnie the Moocher"!

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 58)

"The Mysterious Mr. Wong" spent a "Night of Terror" at the "International House" after "The Return of Chandu." "The Whispering Shadow" was satisfied that the "Black Cat" received "The Mark of the Vampire" for chasing "The Raven" because he knew that "The Best Man Wins."—Hope Lininger, Johnstown, Pa.

Disgusted

If by some miracle you have ever gone to see a movie, did you notice that men as well as women go? Movies are not made for women only. Why, then, are movie magazines made just for the females? Yes, lots of men and boys read your magazine and we want to see styles of men and masculine advertisements. We are sick of reading about lipsticks, powders, mascara, Paris gowns, reducing diets, cooking recipes and headache powders.—Walter Richelieu, Camden, New Jersey.

"I FOUND OUT that the purest talc costs but 10¢"

...and it's blended!

I tried every high-priced talcum and now I know that—even if I had a million—I couldn't buy a finer or softer powder than Lander's blended talcs. Besides—there's so much in those extra-large-size tins.

Select your favorite from these five delicate blends:

1. Lilacs and Roses
2. Lavender and Pine
3. Sweet Pea and Gardenia
4. Orchids and Orange Blossoms
5. Carnation and Lily of the Valley

Lander alone gives you the exquisite fragrance of BLENDED TALCS because Lander alone has discovered the secret of blending. The secret is copyright.

GIANT TIN 10¢

ALL DIME COUNTERS

Lander

FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

LILACS and ROSES
Blended

NO "CHAP" for ME

No more sticky lotions for me. My hands quit chapping when I changed to—

HESS WITCH HAZEL CREAM

—the no-gum lotion. Hess is never sticky. It keeps skin free of chap all winter long. Heals and soothes rough, sore, red skin like magic. Try it. Sold in all 10c stores. (57)

E. E. HESS CO., Brook, Ind.

HESS

Photo of myself after losing 28 lbs. and reducing 4½ inches.

Remove that FAT

Be adorably slim!

Money-back guarantee

Feminine attractiveness demands the fascinating, youthful lines of a graceful, slim figure—with firm, rounded, uplifted contours, instead of sagging, unbecoming flesh.

Hundreds of women have reduced with my famous Slimcream Method—and reduced just where they wanted, safely, quickly, surely. I myself, reduced my chestline by 4½ inches and my weight 28 lbs. in 28 days.

J. A. writes, "I was 37 inches (across the chest). Here is the miracle your Slimcream has worked for me. I have actually taken 5 inches off. I am overjoyed."

The Slimcream treatment is so entirely effective, so easy to use, and so beneficial that I unhesitatingly offer to return your money if you have not reduced your figure both in pounds and inches in 14 days. What could be fairer than that!

Decide NOW to achieve the figure of your heart's desire. Send $1.00 today for the full 30-day treatment.

FREE Send $1.00 for my Slimcream treatment NOW, and I will send you entirely free, my world-famous, regular $1.00 beauty treatment, with a gold mine of priceless beauty secrets. This offer is limited, so SEND TODAY. Add 25c for foreign countries.

DAISY STEBBING, Dept. MM-8, Forest Hills, New York

I enclose $1. Please send immediately postpaid in plain package your Guaranteed Slimcream treatment. I understand that if I have not reduced both in pounds and inches in 14 days, you will cheerfully refund my money. Send also the special free Beauty Treatment.

Name..

Address.......................................

City..

DON'T NEGLECT A COLD

Distressing chest colds and minor throat irritations should never be neglected. They usually respond to the application of good old Musterole. Musterole brings relief naturally because it's a "counter-irritant" —NOT just a salve. It penetrates and stimulates circulation, helps to draw out local congestion and pain. Recommended by many doctors and nurses—used by millions for 25 years. Three kinds: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong, 40¢ each.

Good Housekeeping Bureau

MUSTEROLE
BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER
REG U S PAT OFF

HOLLYWOOD'S LATEST FAD
18-IN. SEA GARDEN PEARLS
Synthetic, with rich opalesence of real pearls, perfectly graduated, Sterling clasp with brilliants, boxed for gifts. Very specially priced — $2 — stamps, currency or money order Satisfaction guaranteed
BEST PRODUCTS CO. 1374 H STREET, N. E. WASHINGTON, D. C.

CATARRH AND SINUS
CHART—FREE
Guaranteed Relief or No Pay. Stop hawking—stuffed-up nose—bad breath—Sinus irritation—phlegm-filled throat. Send Post Card or letter for New Treatment Chart and Money-Back Offer. 40,000 Druggists sell Hall's Catarrh Medicine. 63rd year in business. . . Write today!
F.J. CHENEY & CO. Dept. 312 TOLEDO, O.

BUNIONS
Torture Needless
Pain stops almost instantly. The swelling and inflammation is so quickly reduced you can wear smaller, neater shoes with ease. Prove it on your own bunion. Just write and say, "I Want To Try Pedodyne." No obligation.
Pedodyne Co., 180 N. Wacker Dr., Dept. P.210, Chicago, Ill.

GRAY FADED HAIR
Women, girls, men with gray, faded, streaked hair. Shampoo and color your hair at the same time with new French discovery "SHAMPO-KOLOR," takes few minutes, leaves hair soft, glossy, natural. Permits permanent wave and curl.
Free Booklet, Monsieur L. P. Valligny, Dept. 39, 254 W. 31 St., N.Y.C.

DEAFNESS IS MISERY
Many people with defective hearing and Head Noises enjoy Conversation, Movies, Church and Radio, because they use Leonard Invisible Ear Drums which resemble Tiny Megaphones fitting in the Ear entirely out of sight. No wires, batteries or head piece. They are inexpensive. Write for booklet and sworn statement of the inventor who was himself deaf.
DRUM
A. O. LEONARD, Inc.. Suite 986, 70 5th Ave., New York

BE A NURSE
MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK
You can learn at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. Est. 36 years. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write us now.
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2312, 26 N. Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 32 sample lesson pages.
Name____________________
City________________State________Age____

Plenty Mad

Something should be done about these smart-aleck reviewers. Often I see a picture and enjoy it thoroughly, but when the reviews are printed, one would think the photoplay that I had enjoyed was a menace to society. If there's any criticizing to be done, it should be about the way good American talent is being wasted in favor of Continental importations. Lilian Harvey was perhaps the most colossal flop of them all and Anna Sten has been released from her contract. Yet, they spend millions to bring them over to America and gamble on their success while such talent as Blondell, Dvorak, Brady, and many others are wasted on one poor picture after another.

My last complaint is about Hollywood's prize ham actress—Constance Bennett, of the mad, mad Bennetts. I nearly went mad when I saw "After Office Hours." The way she posed with a cigarette in one hand and hot air in the other, was disgusting. Connie promised to retire from the cinema last year but I knew it sounded too good to be true.—Kenneth Gilbert, San Diego, Calif.

Talent Unnoticed?

Frankie Darro is one boy actor who deserves more praise than he has been receiving. He has everything, good looks, fine voice, acting ability and a personality no one can resist.

Even in tough, unsympathetic parts he adds a certain humanness that makes his role an outstanding portrayal in any production. He makes one forget he is acting and I don't know of a greater achievement. A juvenile actor who troupes like a veteran, and who wrings tears and laughter from his audience with equal ease.—A. Cooper, Arlington, N. J.

Big Things Ahead

Luise Rainer has something that no other star in Hollywood has. Her beauty is rarely to be found and the tone of her voice is beautiful. I wish her all kinds of success and I have a feeling that she will some day reach the top. Such a personality!—Jane Jurgens, Philadelphia, Pa.

Too Much Nudism

Have you noticed the insane mania of late to show men, as well as women, in bathroom scenes, displaying every part of the anatomy they can get away with? Recently we saw William Powell as a detective who seemed to conduct most of his work showing his naked body or consuming enormous quantities of liquor—much of the picture was taken of him in the bath, scrubbing and soaping his hulk. Powell started out to be a good actor, but he has become so darned conceited and puffed up that he is fast spoiling what chance he did have to draw the public. He got his start as a drawing card in "The Thin Man," but now that he has put on weight (apparently muchly in the head) he seems to have lost his love for "thin men" and wants to display his manly form.—John Luter, Los Angeles, Calif.

Down with Double Features

Speaking as Miss American Movie Fan I want to condemn the double feature policy. Because of it I am missing a lot of good entertainment, for I won't go to a movie like "Sequoia" if I have to sit through a "quickie" like "The Winning Ticket." Why can't the studios re-release film successes of recent years to be used to fill in? As I see it, it would save the studios the expense of producing inconsequential pictures, give our old favorites more prestige, make our hours in the theatre more enjoyable and increase box office returns since more people would flock to the theatres. I don't think anyone would object to seeing "Public Enemy," "Scarface," "Bill of Divorcement," "Hell's Angels," "Wings," "Anna Christie," "The Sign of the Cross" again.—Frances Miller, Seneca Falls, New York.

Star Stuff

Why not star Rosalind Russell? She's got that certain snap and vigor in her manner. She "picture steals" in every role she receives — "China Seas," "Casino Murder Case," etc. Give her a break—star her.—Edith Johns, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Who's to Blame?

What has become of Shirley Temple's once unaffected acting? She seems to have lost the childish innocence she so wonderfully displayed in her first few productions. Her acting has become dull and over-affected. Perhaps she has been too generously praised and admired. Outside the gates of movieland await children whose talent and wholehearted acting would far surpass Shirley's.—A Fan, Providence, R. I.

On Stardom and Privacy

The last few interviews I've read, granted by the stars, have been practically identical. They all moan about their lack of privacy and how they want to keep their personal affairs to themselves. This, of course, is very natural but it seems to me that by now the stars should know that stardom and privacy don't mix. Why not make their interviews different once in a while?—Betty Sue Molloy, Berryville, Ark.

Wray-Lindsay Booster

If anything could be said that would further the careers of Fay Wray (pictured) and Margaret Lindsay, I would say it. They are doing well enough for two so young, I suppose, but I would like to see them co-starred with really great male stars, such as Fredric March and Clark Gable. They are both very beautiful and they look an awful lot like sisters, and twins at that! I like to boost the people not yet at the top, because with what they have to work with they usually do as good a job as the so-called stars of the picture.—E. Staley, Indianapolis, Indiana.

The Modern Hostess

(Continued from page 61)

through combining it with other things and supplying a great deal of rich, meat-flavored gravy to add zest to the foods with which it is combined.

Take the Pork Chops, Hawaiian, in this article, for instance. The delicious gravy for the rice and the accompanying bananas will make father forget that with pork in the luxury class these days, he will have to content himself with one small pork chop instead of the two big ones he used to demand. The same is true of the Chopped Meat Casserole which you will learn how to make by getting your copy of the leaflet. The top round of beef called for in this recipe is not the most inexpensive of beef cuts by any means but there is absolutely no waste in fat or bones and besides here again rice is used as an "extender"—permeated as it is with the flavor of meat and rich tomato sauce.

FOR the Lamb Stew you will notice Mrs. Woods recommends meat cut from the shoulder of the animal. You will find this is slightly higher in price than some of the other cuts (notably the neck which is fine for stewing purposes and is exceedingly cheap) but you will also find that there is more meat and less bone to the pound if you purchase shoulder lamb.

You will be delighted with this recipe I am confident, for this is no pale, soupy stew but rather a brown, flavorsome combination of well-seasoned meat and meat-seasoned vegetables. I urge you to try this recipe and the Pork Chops, Hawaiian, that also appears here. Don't ever overlook the recipes that appear in the magazine itself—for they are as carefully tested and fully as good as the ones in the leaflet and they certainly deserve to be added to your collection, together with the ones that the coupon brings you.

I know that if you try these two recipes you'll surely want to have the leaflet containing more of Donald Woods' meat suggestions and I surely want you to have these recipes, for they include such delicious things as Hungarian Goulash, English Beef and Kidney Pie, Chopped Meat Casserole and Stuffed Veal Birds.

Just wait 'til you see how easy these recipes are to follow! Just wait 'til you discover how great an improvement they are over the meats you generally serve! Just wait 'til you hear the kind things your family will have to say about your new culinary achievements! But don't wait to send in the coupon or you may forget—and then you'll have reason to be sorry. For this is the time of year, you know, when meats should be featured because they furnish heat and energy to the body for chilly days ahead—besides being high in proteins. And then too with the Holidays coming soon, now is the time when you will surely welcome the economical features of these recipes.

PORK CHOPS, HAWAIIAN

4 lean pork chops (1 pound)
1 teaspoon salt
A few grains pepper
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup water
1 tablespoon brown sugar
½ cup pineapple juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon flour
¼ cup seedless raisins

Sprinkle chops with salt and pepper, dust lightly with a little flour. Brown chops on both sides in butter in hot skillet. Add water, cover and simmer until chops are tender. Remove chops to hot platter. Add brown sugar, pineapple juice and lemon juice to liquid in pan. Stir until blended. Thicken gravy with 1 tablespoon flour moistened to a smooth paste with a little water. Add raisins and simmer for a few minutes. Pour gravy over chops. Surround chops with mounds of boiled brown rice and halved, spiced bananas.

SPICED BANANAS

¾ cup vinegar
⅔ cup sugar
18 whole cloves
1 small stick cinnamon
4 small bananas

Boil together vinegar, sugar, cloves and cinnamon until sugar is dissolved and the bubbles begin to look thick. Peel bananas, cut in halves crosswise. Drop banana halves into the hot syrup. Boil hard for two minutes. Remove from syrup carefully to pork chop platter.

SAVORY LAMB STEW

2 pounds shoulder lamb, cut in small pieces for stewing salt, pepper, flour
salt pork or bacon fat
2 cups boiling water
2 stalks celery, minced fine
1 bay leaf
¼ cup chili sauce
6 small carrots
6 small white onions
6 small potatoes

Dip the lamb pieces into boiling water, drain, sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll in a little flour. Melt pork or bacon fat in heavy pan or dutch oven. Brown meat in this fat, turning frequently so as not to burn. When meat is thoroughly browned on all sides add boiling water, minced celery, bay leaf and chili sauce. Cover closely and cook gently for an hour. After an hour add carrots, scraped and cut in halves lengthwise, peeled onions and peeled potatoes. Cover stew closely and simmer gently for one hour longer or until meat and vegetables are tender. Taste gravy before serving, adding more salt and pepper if desired. If you wish you may thicken gravy slightly with a little flour moistened with water to a smooth paste.

MODERN SCREEN STAR RECIPES

HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN Magazine
149 Madison Avenue, N. Y., N. Y.

Please send me the December leaflet containing Donald Woods' favorite economical meat recipes, at no cost to me.

Name.............................

Address.............................
(Street and Number)

....
(City) (State)

MAKE YOUR HANDS
A SOCIAL ASSET

Smooth-white attractive hands give you poise and confidence. You can have them too, by becoming a regular user of Chamberlain's Lotion. A clear liquid, not sticky or gummy, absorbed in 37 seconds, it not only re-beautifies hands, but arms and skin as well. Blended from thirteen different imported oils, it is a complete beauty treatment, one you will enjoy using. Two sizes—at any drug or department store.

USE THIS COUPON

Chamberlain Laboratories, Inc., Des Moines, Iowa.
Please send free trial size of your lotion.
MM-2
Name
Address
(GOOD ONLY IN U. S.)

Chamberlain's Lotion

Learn Radio IN 12 WEEKS
BY SHOP WORK - NOT BY BOOKS
Send for "Pay-After-Graduation" Plan

Prepare for jobs in Service Work, Broadcasting, Talking Pictures, Television, Wireless, etc., by 12 weeks practical shop training in Coyne Shops. Free Employment Service. Many earn while learning. Write for BIG FREE RADIO and TELEVISION BOOK, and my "Pay-Tuition-After-Graduation" Plan.

H. C. LEWIS, President, COYNE RADIO SCHOOL
500 S. Paulina St., Dept. 95-6E, Chicago, Illinois

Operator
No. 38

Follow This Man

Secret Service Operator No. 38 is on the job! Running down Counterfeit Gang. Tell-tale finger prints in murdered girl's room. Thrill, Mystery.

Free The Confidential Reports of Operator No. 38 made to his chief. Write for it.

Earn a Regular Monthly Salary

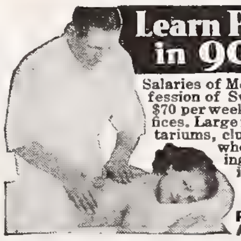
YOU can become a Finger Print Expert at home, in spare time. Write for details if 17 or over.

Institute of Applied Science
1920 Sunnyside Ave.
Dept. 72-19 Chicago, Ill.

No JOKE TO BE DEAF
—Every deaf person knows that—
Mr. Way made himself hear his watch tick after being deaf for twenty-five years, with his Artificial Ear Drums. He wore them day and night. They stopped his head noises. They are invisible and comfortable, no wires or batteries. Write for TRUE STORY. Also booklet on Deafness.

Artificial Ear Drum

THE WAY COMPANY
717 Hofmann Bldg. Detroit, Michigan



Learn Profitable Profession in 90 days at Home

Salaries of Men and Women in the fascinating profession of Swedish Massage run as high as $40 to $70 per week but many prefer to open their own offices. Large incomes from Doctors, hospitals, sanitariums, clubs and private patients come to those who qualify through our training. Reducing alone offers rich rewards for specialists. Anatomy charts and supplies are given with our course. Write for details National College of Massage & Physio - Therapy, 20 N. Ashland Avenue, Dept. 966, Chicago, Ill.

STOP that ITCH
IN ONE MINUTE

Simply apply Dr. Dennis' cooling, antiseptic, liquid D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION. Quickly relieves the itching tortures of eczema, eruptions, rashes and other skin afflictions. Its gentle oils soothe the irritated and inflamed skin. Clear, greaseless, and stainless—dries fast. Stops the most intense itching instantly. A 35c trial bottle, at drug stores, proves it—or money back.

D.D.D. Prescription

GRIFFIN-A·B·C
for a real shine
GRIFFIN A·B·C BLACK SHOE POLISH
NEW CAN 2/3 LARGER
EASY OPENER
ALL COLORS 10¢
Griffin Manufacturing Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"HUSH" FOR BODY ODORS AT ALL 10¢ STORES

LEARN
Piano, Violin, Cornet, Trumpet, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, Organ, Accordion, Saxophone, Clarinet
EASY HOME METHOD—new, fast way for beginners. Makes you accomplished in amazingly short time. 300,000 enthusiastic students. Low cost; easy terms. Satisfaction guaranteed. Free Catalog gives full details.
NATIONAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC
Dept. 666 1525 East 53rd Street, Chicago

SHEET MUSIC
WHEN BUYING SHEET MUSIC
ask your dealer to show you
CENTURY CERTIFIED EDITION
IT COSTS ONLY 15¢ A COPY
Catalogue of 3000 Selections
FREE ON REQUEST
CENTURY MUSIC PUBLISHING CO.
233 W. 40TH STREET N.Y.C.
15¢ A COPY 15¢ A COPY

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED
Size 8 x 10 inches or smaller if desired. Same price for full length or bust form, groups, landscapes, pet animals, etc., or enlargements of any part of group picture. Safe return of original photo guaranteed.
47c

SEND NO MONEY Just mail photo or snapshot (any size) and within a week you will receive your beautiful life-like enlargement, guaranteed fadeless. Pay postman 47c plus postage—or send 49c with order and we pay postage. Big 16x20-inch enlargement sent C. O. D. 78c plus postage or send 80c and we pay postage. Take advantage of this amazing offer now. Send your photos today. Specify size wanted.
STANDARD ART STUDIOS
104 S. Jefferson St. Dept. 1325-W CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Reviews

(Continued from page 11)

★★★ The Virginia Judge

(Paramount)

Walter C. Kelly, who toured the vaudeville boards for years with a sketch entitled "The Virginia Judge," now brings his character to the screen in a pleasant, homey type of picture which you'll enjoy considerably, if you're in the mood for that sort of entertainment. Its setting is a small town in the South, where Mr. Kelly is the local judge. There are several hilarious courtroom scenes involving local rivalry between Stepin Fetchit and another ebony-hued gentleman, but the story itself is built around a juvenile love triangle involving the judge's son, the town banker's son, and, of course, the gal. Robert Cummings, the judge's offspring, is jealous of Johnny Down's car and his ample spending money and believes they are the reason Marsha Hunt has transferred her affections to the wealthy youth. All of which gets pretty involved, but the youngsters are pleasant and the comedy, as handled by Stepin Fetchit, is both spontaneous and funny.

★★★★ The Dark Angel

(Samuel Goldwyn)

Back in the days when silence was golden (or was it Goldwyn?) it may be recalled that "The Dark Angel," as played by Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, was an entertainment full of charm, romance and a certain haunting beauty. For those of you who can think back that far it will be good news to learn that the talking version retains all of these qualities and distinguishes itself as the Number One tear-jerker of the season. It is perhaps unnecessary to remind anyone that this is a story of a girl who is in love with two brothers, and that she chooses one of them on the eve of their departure for the war. When he doesn't return she believes he has been killed, and is about to marry the other brother when the man of her choice is discovered living in a nearby community. Blinded by the war, he is too full of remorse to return to his home. Fredric March portrays the blind war hero with his customary competence, Herbert Marshall does well with the sacrificing brother, and Merle Oberon is completely natural as the heroine. Fay Chaldecott and Cora Sue Collins are fine in their roles.

★★★The Bishop Misbehaves

(M-G-M)

What the bishop does may not actually be in the misbehaving department, but you might say his activities are a bit bizarre for a man of the cloth. An avid follower of detective stories, he beams with almost unholy glee when he accidentally bumps into what looks like a first-class crime. After a bit of expert snooping he discovers the crime is a robbery perpetrated by Norman Foster and Maureen O'Sullivan. It seems Reginald Owen had cheated Maureen's father out of the rights to an invention, and Maureen enlists Norman to help her obtain the papers that prove it. The robbery is completed in a roadside pub, by special arrangement with the proprietor, a neighborly chap who hopes to be cut in on the proceeds. The papers and the jools are carefully tucked away, and Owen and his wife, Lilian Bond, are properly bound and gagged in an ante-room of the pub when the bishop and his sister happen in and complicate things. Since it's a mystery picture, we won't spoil it for you by telling what happens, but we can say that it's a lively and pleasant affair worth your attention. Both Edmund Gwenn and Lucile Watson, as the bishop and the sister, are excellent, and an engaging bit is performed by Lilian Bond, who oughta be in more pictures.

★★★★ The Big Broadcast of 1936

(Paramount)

Paramount's annual round-up of the radio stars is with us again, and it is our pleasure to announce that this year's gathering is the most entertaining and the most successful of them all. It may be recalled that in the past a rather flimsy story was tacked around the offerings of the radio celebrities. This season the plot is actually credible; you could send the radio stars home and still enjoy a good comedy. Concerned in the plot department are Jack Oakie, Henry Wadsworth, Burns and Allen, Lyda Roberti and Wendy Barrie. Jack and Henry own a radio station, but they're on their uppers until George Burns and Gracie Allen drop in with an invention which can tune in on anything in the world, be it broadcast or be it not. They try to sell it to Lyda Roberti, a mysterious countess, but she falls in love with the boys instead of their machine and carts them off to her island castle. It's goofy, but it's fun, and injected into it are numbers by such names as Bill Robinson, Amos 'n' Andy, Ray Noble and his band, Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman, Mary Boland, Charlie Ruggles, and the Nicholas Brothers.

This pretty, smiling gal is Phil Reed's real heart. She's Molly Lamont and here they are at the preview of "Top Hat."

★★★ Two Fisted
(Paramount)

This is your picture if you like 'em with a punch. Lee Tracy delivers some fast verbal ones and Roscoe Karns the upper lefts. Young Billy Lee stages a garage boxing-match with some pals which beats many a professional one we've seen. Gail Patrick is an attractive feminine foil as the wife of Gordon Westcott who's ruthless as they come and bent on kidnapping their son. There are a few mascara-messing moments when he succeeds, but all is saved at the crucial moment, including the rain checks. The Tracy brainpower is responsible for this heroic rescue and for straightening up Gail's alcoholic brother, Kent Taylor. But when it comes to managing Roscoe Karns, Lee has to take a back seat. For two years he's given his all to make a fighter out of him, but it's the pretty nurse-maid, Grace Bradley, who inspires Roscoe to win his first fight. The cast is competent and though the plot has its weak moments, you'll be too helpless from laughing to care.

★★ Red Salute
(Reliance)

Barbara Stanwyck, whose celluloid likeness we haven't seen in several months, returns to the screen in a drama which contains some good comedy, some first-rate acting and quite a bit of unnecessary flag-waving. Barbara, the daughter of an army general, is in love with a violent young college man who spends most of his campus hours making speeches. He is what some newspapers would call a Red Menace. The general, realizing his daughter's imminent danger, sends her off to Mexico to forget. Barbara immediately re-crosses the border with the help of a young American soldier, Robert Young. You practically know what's going to happen from there on. It is, perhaps, sufficient to say that the screenplay is in the modern manner, which calls for the hero and heroine to hurl insults at each other for several reels, all of which is a tip-off to movie-wise audiences that they are madly in love. As mild comedy-drama, "Red Salute" is amusing because of the efforts of the co-stars and Cliff Edwards in a supporting role, but as propaganda for the U. S. Army it falls short of its mark.

★★ The Little Big Shot
(Warners)

Dished up from a formula that's almost as old as the Hollywood hills, this little number emerges as a combination tough-guy—tear-jerker which really belongs back in the gangster cycle of several years ago, although it has its entertaining moments. Everybody knows, of course, that there are no more gangster pictures, so the machine guns which blast away in this film are probably some the boys had left over from "G-Men." Getting to the story, it seems that Robert Armstrong and Edward Everett Horton, a pair of Broadway phonies who hawk fake watches on street corners, fall heir to little Sybil Jason, whose daddy has been rubbed out for an unexplained reason. When the boys enlist Sybil to aid them in peddling their watches they incur the honest wrath of

Guarantee of Satisfaction

The publishers of MODERN SCREEN guarantee that you will be satisfied with your purchase of every packaged product advertised in this magazine. If for any reason you are dissatisfied, MODERN SCREEN will replace the product or, if you prefer, refund your purchase price. In either case all you have to do is to send us the unused portion, accompanied by a letter outlining your complaint. This guarantee also applies if the product, in your opinion does not justify the claims made in its advertising in MODERN SCREEN

Careful examination before publication and rigid censorship, plus our guarantee, enable you to buy with complete confidence the products you see advertised in this issue of MODERN SCREEN.

Index of Advertisers

December 1935

Barbo Compound 91
Bastian Bros 89
Best Products Company 96
Blondex 92
Bluejay Corn Plasters 73
Borden Company, The 77
Brownatone 88

Camel Cigarettes Insert
Campana's Italian Balm 85
Century Music Company 98
Chamberlain's Lotion 97
Cheramy Toiletries 69
Chicago School of Nursing 96
Chore Girl 92
Coyne Electrical School 97
Cutex 59

DDD Corporation 97
Dilex Institute 72
Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets 89

Enterprise Dripolator 91
Ex-Lax 11

Faoen Cosmetics 83
Feenamint 94
Federal Schools 87
Fleischmann's Yeast 55
Fox Films 18
Franklin Institute 93
Frederics Vita Tonic Permanent 63
Free Breath Products Company 94
French Company, R. T 91

Gaumont-British Corporation 64
Griffin Shoe Dye 84
Griffin Shoe Polish 98
Grove's Bromo Quinine 74

Hess Hand Lotion 95
Hollywood Rapid Dry Curlers 82
Hush Company 98
Hygeia Nursing Bottles 84

International Typewriter Exchange 94
Institute of Applied Science 97
Ipana Toothpaste 3
Ironized Yeast 80

Johnson & Johnson Baby Powder 61
Justrite Push Clips 92

Kalamazoo Stoves 87
Kool Cigarettes 58
Kno-Gray Hair Remedy 94

Lady Esther Cosmetics 75
Lander Powders 95

La Salle Extension University 90
Lavoptik 94
Lanzette, Annette 86
Leonard, A. O 96
Lewis Company, A. H.
  Tums 86
  Nature's Remedy 84
Little Blue Books 94
Long-Eakins Company 90
Lucky Strike Cigarettes 4th Cover
Luxor Cosmetics 62

Maybelline 79
Mercolized Wax 86
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures 5
Midol 81
Mifflin Mouth Wash 92
Mum 66
Musterole 96

Natheniel's—Electrologist Specialist 93
National Academy of Music 98
National College of Massage 97
Nestle ColoRinse 82

Paramount Pictures 25
Pazo Ointment 88
Pedodyne Company 96
Perfect Voice Institute 96
Pertussin 90
Philip Morris Cigarettes 71
Pond's Creams 53
Pond's Powders 65
Procter & Gamble Company
  Camay 17
  Ivory Flakes 15

RKO Pictures 9
Rit Products Corporation 76
Romano's Coins 88

Sempray Jovenay 77
Sergeant's Dog Medicine 93
Standard Art Studios 98
Stebbing System 95

Valligny, Monsieur P. 96

Warner Brothers Pictures 7
Way Company, The 97
Winx 57
Woodbury College 89

Yeastfoam Tablets 68

Zonite Corporation, The 78

Although we make every effort to insure the accuracy of this index, we take no responsibility for an occasional omission or inadvertent error.

Glenda Farrell, a hat check girl who secretly loves Bob. At that point the machine gun boys pin a murder on Bob and kidnap Sybil, but the cops arrive just in time, and our Robert wins himself a reward and everybody settles down in the country, where clean living predominates.

★★ King Solomon of Broadway (Universal)

For some reason or other, this seems to be revival month for gangster pictures. With its kidnapping and its gunplay, and its actors who talk out of the side of their mouths, King Solomon of Broadway joins the parade. Not that Edmund Lowe, who as King Solomon owns Broadway's biggest dine and dance palace, is actually a gangster himself—he merely has connections. One of his connections, a gentleman called "Ice" Larson, and a menace if ever we saw one, owns a piece of the joint. Eddie, who wants no part of "Ice," arranges with a beautiful and wealthy client to buy him out. The client is Louise Henry and she's in love with Eddie. Eddie, however, is in love with Dorothy Page, an entertainer at his dance palace. However, before Eddie can swing his deal, an opposition mob buys out "Ice's" share of the establishment, and even goes so far as to kidnap Miss Henry. This sort of thing irks Eddie no end. It makes him just mad enough, in fact, to go out and rescue Miss Henry, and that lovely lady is so grateful she talks her father into backing Eddie in a terrific new enterprise. At that point Mr. Lowe fools us all by going right out and telling Miss Page he loves her. "King Solomon" of Broadway has a couple of swingy tunes, some good lines, and Pinky Tomlin.

★★★ O'Shaughnessy's Boy (M-G-M)

Here is what might be termed a two-man show, for almost all the footage is given over to the histrionics of those two established pals, Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper. You knew them, man and boy, in "The Champ," and you wept quite a bit over them. Let the weeping now begin anew, for they're back together again in another of those father-son epics which promises to be even more lachrymose than their former effort. Beery, in the sort of role he seems to relish, is a circus animal trainer, big and bluff but just a boy at heart. His son, who is his pride and joy, is Jackie Cooper, except in the earlier sequences when it's Spanky McFarland, who plays Jackie as a youth. (Can you remember way back when old Mr. Cooper was a mere lad himself?) The boy is taken away from his father by a mean sister-in-law who puts him in military school. Several years later Wallace gets custody of his son, but the boy's mind has been poisoned against him. Time and a dramatic climax bring these two old pals back together.

★ Music Is Magic (Fox)

If you've ever been smitten with the urge to crash pictures, see this one and learn how not to do it. Alice Faye is the blondined brunette in this case who believes that all is fair in love, war and Hollywood. The results aren't so good but the laughs are. Ray Walker does a good job as Alice's agent—that is, he does a good job of the acting. The best he can do to further his client's career when they first land in Hollywood is to get her work in a laundry. Mitchell and Durant do some of their noisy cutting up, but the real laughs come from Luis Alberni's characterization of an Italian waiter. Bebe Daniels plays the role of a movie star who's seen better and younger days, but won't admit it. Her deft impersonation should cause many a lady about town to wince. Rosina Lawrence is attractive as Miss Daniel's daughter, whom she is trying to pan off as a sister.

★★ The Last Outpost (Paramount)

This one is actually a western thriller done up in soldier suits. It has all the action and every bit of the hokum which used to mark the horse operas of William S. Hart and Tom Mix, even down to the scene where the hero, armed with one revolver, holds off an entire band of Indians. In this case, the hero is Cary Grant, and his trusty six-shooter holds back an oncoming tide of native Africans armed with rifles, spears and arrows. Just at the moment Cary begins to get the feeling he is slightly outnumbered, he looks back over his shoulder and discovers, happily, that the British army is about to join him. Needless to say, these stalwarts make short work of Cary's opponents. A first-rate cast, including Grant, Gertrude Michael and Claude Rains, is wasted on an outmoded story.

★ Two for Tonight (Paramount)

Even the best of studios make mistakes. If you're courageous enough to have this statement proven, a visit to this little opus will convince you. Built around an impossible story, with situations always bordering on slapstick and lines that are supposed to be funny falling with a thud that can almost be heard on the sound track, this is one long headache for a number of people, including Bing Crosby and the audience. Bing, according to the plot-makers, is a song writer who becomes acquainted with Joan Bennett, a producer's secretary. It seems she has crashed into Bing with her airplane (how a $30-a-week secretary can afford a plane is not explained), so in order to make retribution she attempts to sell the producer a musical by Bing.

★★ The Case of the Lucky Legs (Warners)

If a pair of lovely legs can cause all this trouble, we'll take elephantiasis. Patricia Ellis is the owner of the lucky limbs in this case, which take her into all kinds of trouble—broken hearts, homes and a murder, to mention a few. But it all gives Warren William, as her lawyer, something to think about besides sloe-gin. If Mr. William is any example, no lawyer should pass more than one bar without stopping, for he manages to unravel mysteries that would stump any denatured brain. Genevieve Tobin is equally amazing as a secretary who's both beautiful and bright. Lyle Talbot plays Mr. Talbot with his usual sure touch and Peggy Shannon is capable in a small role.

Left, George O'Brien and his wife, Marguerite Churchill, seem to be having a big laugh at someone else's expense at the Kings Club. Doesn't Marguerite look well and happy since the arrival of her new daughter? And how do you like her Algerian turban? And to the right you see two jovial gents at the Cafe Lamaze—Fred Astaire and Randolph Scott. Randy's sideburns are a "So Red the Rose" hangover!

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

WAS SHE IN LOVE WITH AN OUTLAW...?

Upon the admission of California to the Union, bands of outlaws invaded the state, and, claiming the old Spanish land-grants, fell upon the property of the original owners. Beautiful Rosita Castro, daughter of a proud old Spanish family, found herself falling in love with a man whom she believed to be a member of a dangerous gang of land-jumpers who were trying to seize her father's estate. Caught between two tides—her love and loyalty for her father and her family tradition against her new love for one who represented everything she had been taught to despise—how did she decide? ... Who was this handsome stranger who rode into the life of proud Rosita Castro? ... What was the outcome of their stormy romance?

Read "ROSE OF THE RANCHO," the story of Paramount's outdoor musical, with Gladys Swarthout, lovely star of opera and radio, and golden-voiced John Boles. Complete story in the December issue now on sale at all newsstands.

18
MOVIE HITS
IN STORY FORM

Other complete stories in December will include: "Mutiny on the Bounty" with Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone . . . "Love Song" starring Lily Pons with Henry Fonda . . . "Magnificent Obsession" with Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor . . . William Powell with Rosalind Russell in "Black Chamber" . . . Barbara Stanwyck with Preston Foster in "Annie Oakley" . . . "A Night at the Opera" starring the Marx Brothers with Kitty Carlisle . . . "Spanish Cape Mystery" with Helen Twelvetrees and Donald Cook ... James Cagney and Margaret Lindsey in "Frisco Kid."

SCREEN ROMANCES

THE LOVE STORY MAGAZINE OF THE SCREEN

THANKS—I'D RATHER HAVE A LUCKY
They're easy on my throat
LUCKY STRIKE
There are no finer tobaccos than those used in Luckies
and Luckies' exclusive process is your throat protection against irritation - against cough.

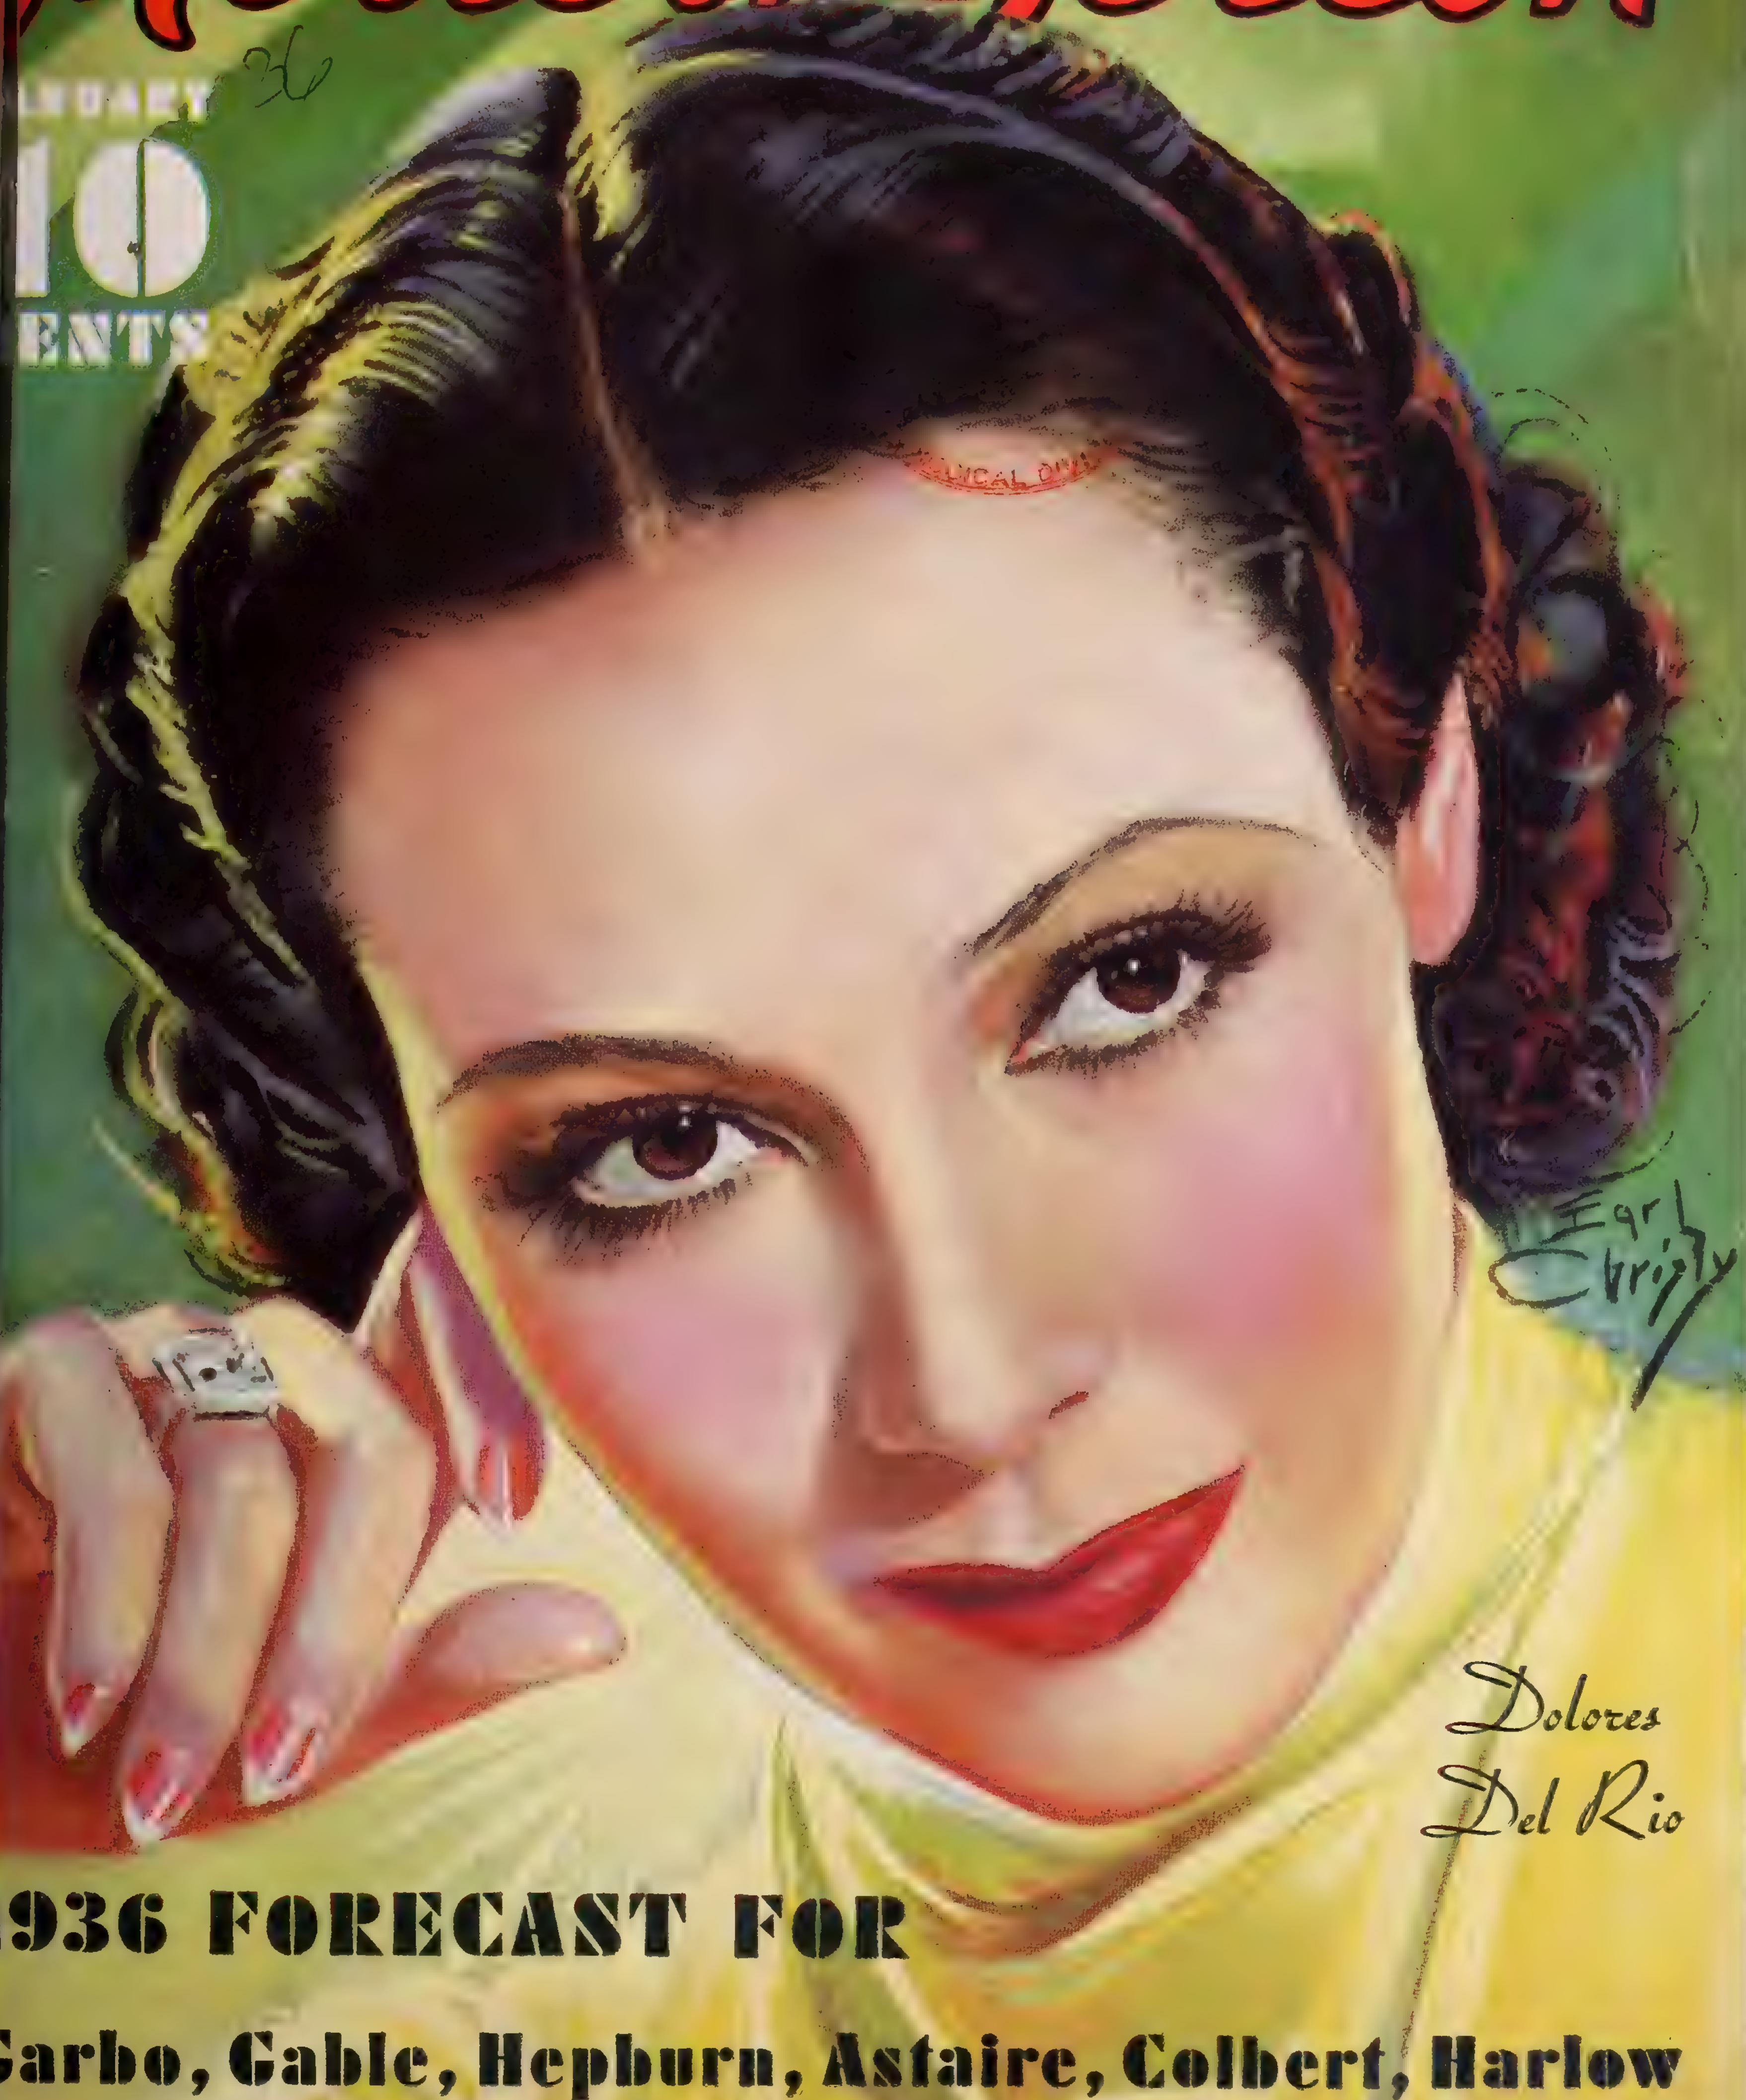
Modern Screen

NUARY

10

ENTS

36



Earl Christy

ICAL O

Dolores Del Rio

1936 FORECAST FOR

Garbo, Gable, Hepburn, Astaire, Colbert, Harlow

IN LOVE WITH HER SLAVE

. . . What happened when beautiful aristocratic Arabella Bishop became the captive of the man she had once purchased at the slave block for ten pounds?

Admiration for his proudly insolent manner and for his refusal to be humbled by those supposed to be his masters, coupled with a strange inner feeling, had prompted her to bid ten pounds for this man when he was auctioned off. And although his manner toward this girl, who had bought him as she would buy a horse, was one of scorn, Peter Blood could not dismiss the face of Arabella from his mind. . . . Even the hardship and torture of a slave's life could not do this. . . .

You will enjoy reading the thrilling romance of Captain Blood—an exciting story of slavery and piracy in the Caribbean. The complete story of "Captain Blood," Warner's new picture, starring Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland, appears in the January issue of SCREEN ROMANCES.

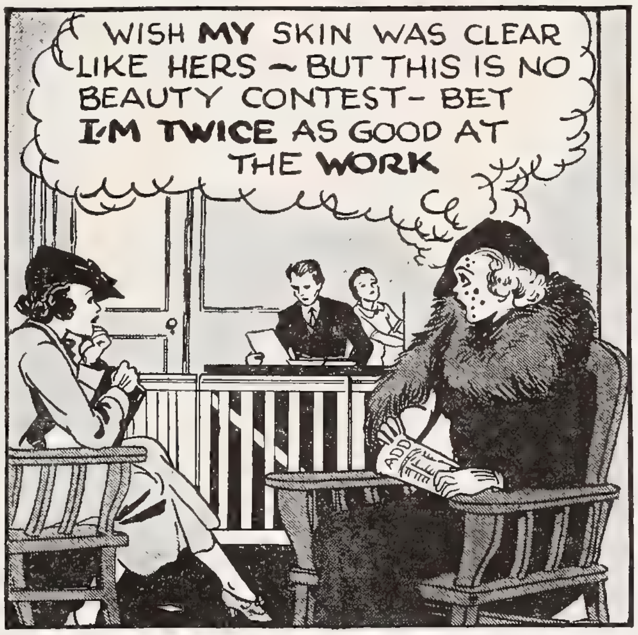
Other complete stories in this issue include "Riffraff," with Jean Harlow and Spencer Tracy. . . . Jack Oakie, Joe Penner and Frances Langford in "Collegiate." . . . Paul Muni in "Enemy of Man." . . . Gene Raymond in "Seven Keys to Baldpate." . . . Also previews of "Hands Across the Table," with Carole Lombard. . . . Shirley Temple in "The Littlest Rebel." . . . "Mary Burns, Fugitive" with Sylvia Sidney. . . . "Transatlantic Tunnel" with Richard Dix and Madge Evans.

THE LOVE STORY MAGAZINE OF THE SCREEN • JANUARY ISSUE NOW ON SALE EVERYWHERE

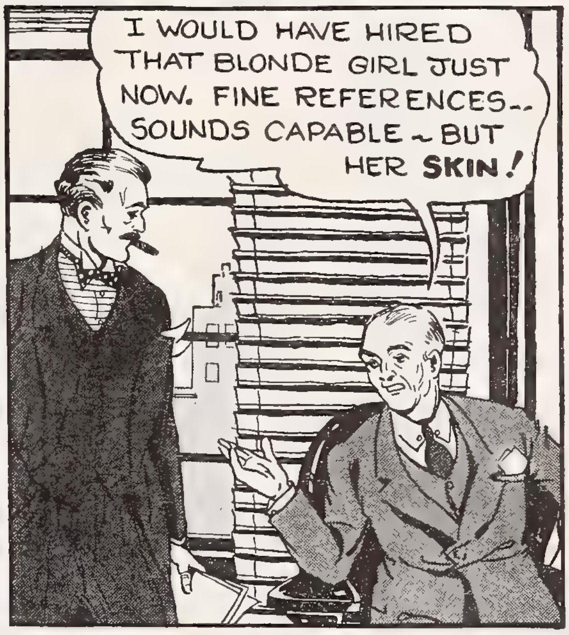
SCREEN ROMANCES

JUST LIKE A MAN–TO CHOOSE A PRETTY FACE

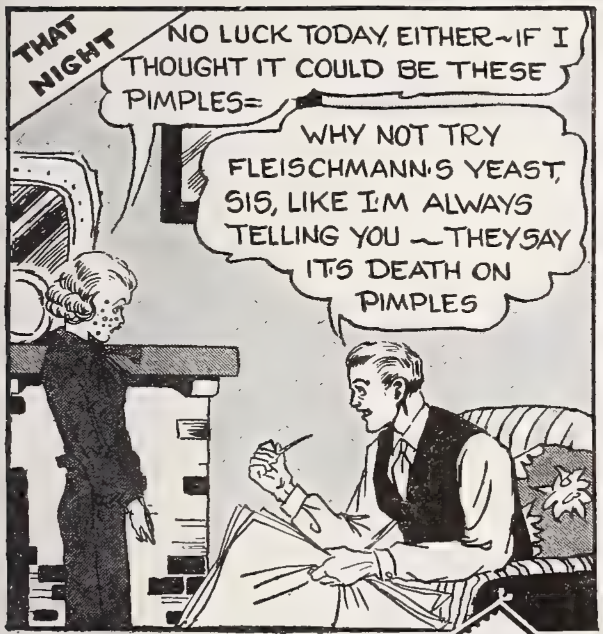
Yet in her heart she knew her bad skin was no asset for any job



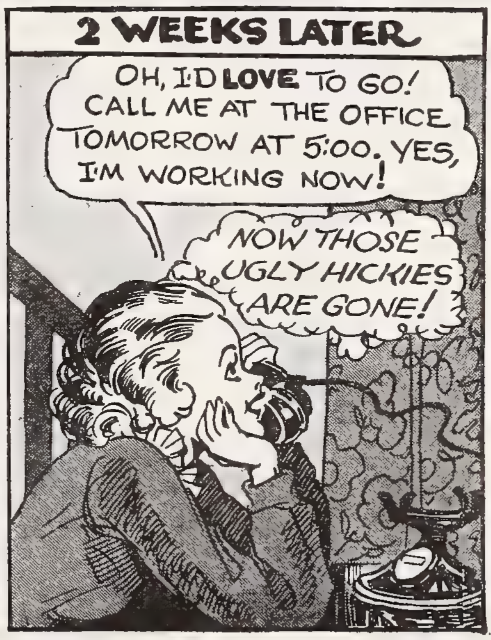
WISH MY SKIN WAS CLEAR LIKE HERS – BUT THIS IS NO BEAUTY CONTEST – BET I'M TWICE AS GOOD AT THE WORK



I WOULD HAVE HIRED THAT BLONDE GIRL JUST NOW. FINE REFERENCES – SOUNDS CAPABLE – BUT HER SKIN!



THAT NIGHT
NO LUCK TODAY, EITHER – IF I THOUGHT IT COULD BE THESE PIMPLES =
WHY NOT TRY FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST, SIS, LIKE I'M ALWAYS TELLING YOU – THEY SAY IT'S DEATH ON PIMPLES



2 WEEKS LATER
OH, I'D LOVE TO GO! CALL ME AT THE OFFICE TOMORROW AT 5:00. YES, I'M WORKING NOW!
NOW THOSE UGLY HICKIES ARE GONE!

Don't let adolescent pimples keep YOU out of a job!

Between the ages 13 and 25, important glands develop. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin becomes oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin —and pimples are the result.

For the treatment of these adolescent pimples, doctors prescribe Fleischmann's Yeast. This fresh yeast clears the blood of the skin irritants that cause pimples.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast 3 times a day, before meals, until your skin is entirely clear.

Supplies Vitamins A B D G
FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
Eat 3 cakes daily before meals

—clears the skin

by clearing skin irritants out of the blood

Copyright, 1935, Standard Brands Incorporated

NOV 29 1935
©CIB 281861

MODERN SCREEN
NOW SHOWING
TODAY

REGINA CANNON, EDITOR
ADELIA BIRD, Associate Editor
ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor
LEO TOWNSEND, Hollywood Editor

FEATURES

HERE COMES THE BRIDE Joan Crawford Tone discusses her marriage........ Katherine Albert 17
WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THEM IN 1936? Dareos' prophecies again........... Harry Lang 26
HEPBURN—ARTIST OR IMITATOR? Is Katie a dramatic copycat?........ Helen Louise Walker 28
WHO WILL BE HOLLYWOOD'S JENNY LIND? Singing stars vie for honors...Ramon Romero 30
WHY MEN FALL FOR MIRIAM HOPKINS And the answer is surprising.....Robert Eichberg 32
FOUR DANCING FEET Patsy Kelly and Ruby Keeler tap to fame................ William French 34
RIDE A HOBBY TO HAPPINESS That's Jean Muir's advice.............Caroline Somers Hoyt 36
HE'D RATHER ACT THAN EAT Peter Lorre tells you why......................... Hilary Lynn 37
THE PRIVATE DIARY OF BILL POWELL Amusing day-by-day chronicle.......... Gladys Hall 38
WHAT'S AHEAD FOR JANET GAYNOR? Greater fame or retirement?........ Faith Service 40
LITTLE MAN, WHAT NEXT? Freddie Bartholomew maps his future............... Franc Dillon 42
DON'T MARRY A MARX BROTHER! Mrs. Groucho Marx gives warning....... Nanette Kutner 43
HOW TO HOLD YOUR HUSBAND By no less an expert than.................... Mme. Sylvia 44
CONFESSIONS OF AN EXTRA GIRL Concluding chapter of this true story.................... 46
DON'T TAKE ADVICE! Some Hollywood stars have, and regretted it!............ Mary E. Parks 47
STAR STUFF ON A SHOESTRING Even economizing can be made fun............ Adelia Bird 48

SHORT SUBJECTS

Reviews—A Tour of Today's Talkies...... 6
The Modern Hostess.............. 8
Polo and Parties.................... 10
Good News......................... 12
Beauty Advice...................... 16
Exclusive Portraits.................. 19
It's Thrifty to Knit Your Clothes........... 52
Between You and Me.................. 54
Studio Addresses...................... 55
Information Desk...................... 56
Scott Shots.............................. 60
Modern Screen Movie Scoreboard........ 62
All Joking Aside...................... 98

Published monthly and copyrighted 1936 by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 12, No. 2, January, 1936. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.75 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.50 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Post Office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole Foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E. C. 4, England.

THE FUNNIEST PICTURE SINCE CHAPLIN'S "SHOULDER ARMS"

And that—
If your memory is good . . .
Was way back yonder!

* * *

We've gone a long way back
We admit.
But then, consider what
"A NIGHT AT THE OPERA" has—
And you'll see why
We feel safe
In making
This comparison.

* * *

It has
The Marx Brothers—
Groucho . . . Chico
And Harpo—
Every one of them a comic genius,
And together the funniest trio
That ever played on stage or screen
In this
Or any other country.

* * *

And it was written by
Two famous comedy dramatists—
George Kaufman
And Morrie Ryskind
(George is the fellow who wrote
"Once in a Lifetime,"
"Merrily We Roll Along,"
And Morrie collaborated
With George on
"Of Thee I Sing" and other hits).
This is their first joint job
Of movie writing.
Their stage successes were Laugh riots—
Imagine what they do
With the wider range
Of the screen—
And three master comics
To do their stuff.

* * *

Then Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
Put $1,000,000 into Making this picture.
Yes, sir! One million dollars
For ninety consecutive minutes
Of entertainment.
Which,
So our Certified
Public Accountant says,
Is $12,000 worth of laughs
Per minute (and that, we think,
Is an all-time high).

* * *

And lest we forget,
That new song—"Alone"
By Nacio Herb Brown
And Arthur Freed
(The tunesmiths who gave you
Five happy hit numbers in "Broadway Melody of 1936")—
And there's lots of Music and romance
For instance
Allan Jones' rendition
Of "Il Trovatore"
(Watch this boy, he's A new singing star)
And watch
Kitty Carlisle—
She is something
To watch!

"A NIGHT AT THE OPERA"

Starring the

MARX BROTHERS

with KITTY CARLISLE and ALLAN JONES • A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture Directed by Sam Wood • Story by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind

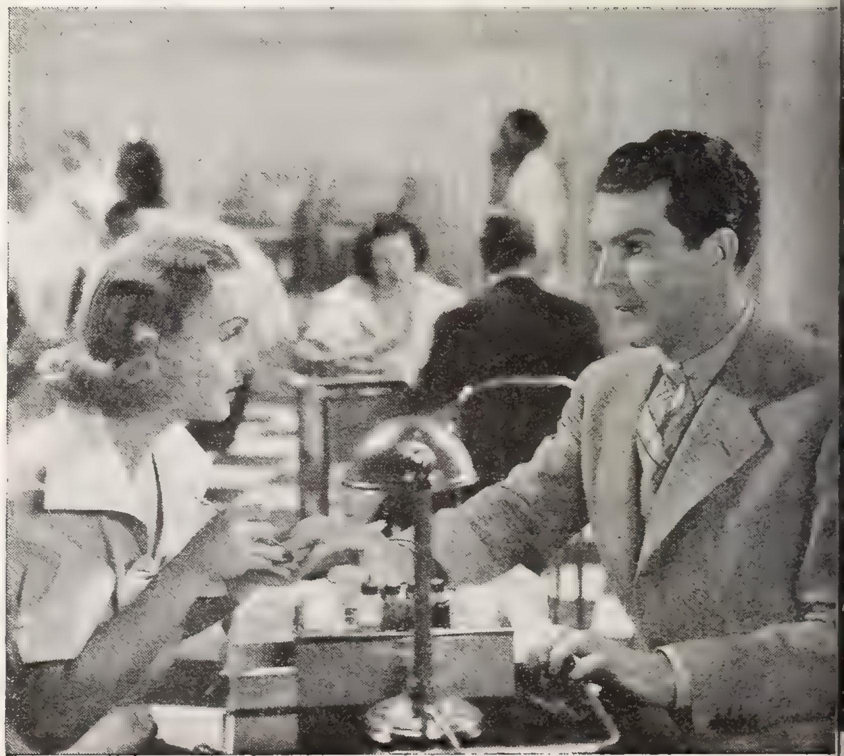
Reviews

A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES

By Leo Townsend



(Right, above) Walter Abel (as D'Artagnan), Heather Angel and Ralph Forbes in a tense scene from "The Three Musketeers." Remember Doug Fairbanks in the silent version? (Center) There's some fine entertainment in this Ronald Colman-Joan Bennett opus, "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." (Bottom) Carole Lombard gives her best performance to date in "Hands Across the Table," with Fred MacMurray.

★★★ The Three Musketeers (RKO-Radio)

Possessing all the charm and dash of the old silent version which starred Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., "The Three Musketeers," with sound effects, is a welcome addition to the new season's playbill. The story, familiar to everyone, has undergone few changes, and scenarist Dudley Nichols (who wrote the screen play for "The Informer") has done a swell job in keeping it swiftly paced and well stocked with humor. As D'Artagnan, Walter Abel gives his character all the life and vigor the script calls for. Movie patrons with memories may prefer the more swashbuckling D'Artagnan of the elder Fairbanks, but Abel's performance is excellent and should make this recruit from the Broadway stage a permanent guest in Hollywood. The musketeers are played by Moroni Olsen, Paul Lukas and Onslow Stevens, and they're in capable hands. Others seen about are Margot Grahame, Heather Angel, Ian Keith and Ralph Forbes. If you like your entertainment dished up in the virile manner, this film has everything you're looking for.

Preview Postscripts

"The Three Musketeers" talk at last. Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., made the silent version several years ago, and followed it with "The Iron Mask," which took up the adventures of the Dumas gangs twenty years later. Extensive research was made for this more elaborate version and the costs were tripled on the former pictures. Faithful reproductions were made of old French scenes and architecture. The grilled iron gates of an old palace outside of Paris were imported for one scene, as were sixty-five fine steel rapiers from a French museum and many old costumes from which duplicates were patterned. The court ladies look elegant on the screen, but they didn't feel that way. Every gown had steel ribs holding in the bodice and some of the skirts were lined with wooden slats to give that modish flare. . . . This is Walter Abel's first picture, but not his first movie contract by any means. He was signed up two years ago after one of his many Broadway successes. Hopefully, he came to Hollywood and, optimistically, he hung around the studios. The pay checks came regularly, but not a sign of work. Somewhat disillusioned about this new art, Mr. Abel returned to Broadway. A year later he was recalled and decided to give the studio another chance to see him work. Again the weeks drifted by, and just as he was boarding a plane to New York a producer rushed up with an assignment to play in this flicker. Mrs. Abel was able to give her husband some pointers on playing D'Artagnan. She once played that gentleman's role in an ultra-performance staged by the girls of Bryn Mawr. In those days she was Mary Anna Bitters, with fond hopes of seeing that name in the electric lights. She thinks her present name looks just as good in lights, though. . . . Moroni Olsen, that first name notwithstanding, is of Norwegian descent. He's anyone's idea of a Viking, with six-feet-four and two hundred and twenty-five pounds to his credit. This is Mr. Olsen's first celluloid appearance, too. But now he's busy with two pictures at the same time out on the RKO lot. He'll be Buffalo Bill in one of them. On Broadway, Olsen played with the Theatre Guild and with Miss Katherine Cornell for several seasons, besides having his own repertory theatre for a time. . . . Onslow Stevens is a Pasadena product. The entire Stevens family is stage-struck. In a recent play at the Pasadena Community Theatre, Papa Stevens, Mama S. and three of their sons took part. Onslow's the only professional. The rest of the family just participate for the fun of it. . . . Heather Angel and Ralph Forbes fell in love with a couple of other people while making this picture. But it was just to please the director. This was their first picture together since their marriage of a year ago. . . . No one has arrived in Hollywood recently with more ballyhoo and hullabaloo than Rosamond Pinchot. She was given space in the Social Register because her father is Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania. But she was given the coveted role of the nun in "The Miracle" because she had proved herself an actress of talent and beauty. Hollywood, however, hemmed and hawed about a role for Miss Pinchot several months before giving her this one.

★★★ Hands Across the Table (Paramount)

Here's a grand picker-upper for all the woikin' gals out battling the world and the New Deal for a living. For Miss Lombard plays a poor but pure—oh, very—manicurist, who lands a millionaire playboy for her very own. The fact that he turns out to be just the playboy without a million doesn't spoil it either, since Fred MacMurray is our hero. But don't think Carole didn't have a chance to be in the money. She spurns the bonafide bankroll of Ralph Bellamy for love in a cottage. Further proof that money isn't everything—to Carole—is the fact that she looks lovelier in her starched beautician's uniform than she's ever looked hung with diamond bracelets and Travis Banton's creations. Marie Prevost does a grand comeback in this picture as Carole's plumpish pal. Fred MacMurray and Ralph Bellamy are excellent in their respective roles. And Miss Lombard tops a whole list of good performances with this one.

Preview Postscripts

Training to be a barber and finding yourself in the movies is apt to be a shock. So don't worry about that startled look on the faces of the dozen young men in the barber shop sequences. Paramount sent a rush call to the Los Angeles Barber College one day for twelve of their prize students and then kept them on the studio payroll for a couple months. Miss Lombard had a surprise, too. She found herself transplanted from the studio to a Boulevard beauty shop, where she had to give manicures for a whole day, following some intensive instruction in the art. The next day she appeared on the lot with her two dachshunds on a leash. Both were sporting brilliant ruby red claws. Carole had been doing her homework. . . . This marks Fred MacMurray's first starring role in pictures, thanks to Miss Lombard's insistence and persistence with the powers that be. Fred has leaped to fame in the cinema. But then, he's a speedy young man, having literally blown through college. He played a saxophone in the orchestra. Carroll College is his alma mammy, which school also boasts of Alfred Lunt—now. Fred's soulful saxophoning attracted the attention of a Chicago orchestra leader and he was offered a job. The pay wasn't much, but there was a possibility of the band having a free trip to California in the summer. So Mr. MacMurray joined forces. The next two years were spent traveling between Hollywood and New York with various orchestras. When in Hollywood, Fred took any extra roles he could get, but always returned to his first love. While in New York with the California Collegians, a comedy stage band, he was suddenly offered a dramatic role in "Roberta." In this he was "spotted" by a cinema sleuth and woke up one morning back in Hollywood. . . . Director Mitchell Leisen used to be a set dresser for Cecil DeMille in the good old days of silents. He still has an eye for the artistic and made it a rule to appear on the set every day in a different suit with some dazzling combination of handkerchief, tie and socks. Bets ran high among the cast as to whether Mitchell's miraculous wardrobe would hold out for two weeks. The thirteenth day Director Leisen showed up in shorts and sweat shirt—sockless, shoeless and hankyless. He admitted he was beaten.

★★★ A Night at the Opera (M-G-M)

The title of this one is really too modest. It should have been tagged "What a Night at the Opera!" for it stars the Three Marx Brothers. Some of you patriarchs may recall that there once were Four Marx Brothers, but Zeppo, one of the silent partners, has since retired and gone straight. Groucho, Chico and Harpo carry on, however, and uphold the fair name of Marx in excellent fashion. Groucho is Otis J. Driftwood, and he uses his abundance of sex appeal to lure Margaret Dumont into contributing heavily to an opera company which supports the romantic leads, Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones. Mr. Jones, incidentally, has a voice and a personality which should get him places. The action shifts from Italy to a transatlantic liner to the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, where Harpo and Chico break up the performance with a series of backstage antics. All in all, it's one of the Marx's maddest jamborees, and our only complaint is that we could have used more of Groucho. To us he is the funniest of the brothers, and his every leer is loaded with drama, sex, and just a touch of hysteria.

Preview Postscripts

Director Sam Wood lost fifteen pounds worrying over the Marx Brothers during the filming of this picture. Those boys just never run down. No one on the set was safe from their practical and impractical jokes. Instead of the usual camp chairs with their names printed on them for use on the set, the brothers Marx had large beds moved to the lot, with their names printed across the foot. Their musical instruments were placed on an adjoining table, so at a sign from poor Mr. Woods the boys could just reach over, get their instruments, and tune up. When they weren't (Continued on page 88)

Thrills and laughs galore in "Rendezvous," from "The Black Chamber," with Binnie Barnes, Bill Powell and Rosalind Russell.

Kay Francis, Paul Lukas and Ian Keith head the cast of "I Found Stella Parrish." Little Sybil Jason is in it, too.

THE BEERYS' CHRISTMAS FEAST IS CHOCK FULL OF CULINARY SURPRISES

By Marjorie Deen

The Modern Hostess

CHRISTMAS at the Wallace Beerys is a page from Dickens. Excitement reigns from the amusement room, decked in tinsel and holly, to the steaming kitchen where Blanche, the cook, and Mrs. Beery (when she's not unwrapping gifts before the tree) superintend the making of goodies that will tempt the vast number of relatives who are invited for the eventful day.

Recipes handed down from Mrs. Beery's mother, from Wally's mother and his mother's mother produce Christmas culinary surprises for the delectation of their guests. And just wait until you hear more about the Hollywood holiday foods that Reta Gilman Beery, wife of the screen's best-loved character actor, has for you, too! Ruby-colored, shimmering cranberry jellies and sauces . . . turkey stuffing made of shredded wheat biscuit (imagine that!) and rich with chestnuts and oysters . . . a wholesome fruit concoction that is good for children . . . a Yuletide pumpkin pie with walnuts scattered over its broad golden expanse . . . these and other delicacies will make their proud appearance at the Beerys' Christmas feast.

During the entire week preceding Christmas, the low, sprawling, Spanish plaster house is a seething center of planned activity. Wally's beloved and lovely adopted daughter, Carol Ann, hustles about with mysterious packages—presents purchased by the hoarding of pennies and nickels from her twenty-five-cents-a-week allowance. Wally himself is secretively busy in the amusement room—a tabooed spot for Carol Ann until December 25th! And for the whole week before Christmas the tree is in place so that Wally can have the fun of hanging ornaments and decorations by the dozens on its friendly green arms.

"I don't know who is more excited, Carol Ann or Wally," pretty blonde Reta Beery told me. "Both are up at the crack of dawn on Christmas morning and down they go to the amusement room to see what Santa Claus has brought them. Carol Ann is a firm believer in Santa.

Pumpkin pie, sprinkled with walnuts, is one of the many delicacies which Mrs. Beery will serve Wally and little Carol Ann on Christmas Day.

As for the tree it takes days for Wally to decorate it to suit his fancy. He puts ornaments here and there, then changes them, like an artist, to get a better effect. Really I am just as excited as they are, for we all love gifts and celebrations."

Good-natured, big-hearted Wally is at his expansive best as Yuletide host, surrounded by relatives big and little, old and young. Doubtless as he looks at the smiling faces about him he recalls his own pitiful, cheerless Christmases as a child in Kansas City where his father's patrolman's wages barely supplied the needs of life and left very little for frivolity. At fourteen broad-shouldered, muscular, young Wallace joined up with a circus, you know; became successively elephant trainer, New York chorus boy (his brother, Noah was one also) and thus entered show business where he remained with short excursions into hobo-ing and banking for contrast! Not until Wallace Beery reached manhood did he ever have a bang-up Christmas celebration. Small wonder, therefore, that Beery, today, assembles as many as fifty or sixty relatives and friends in his Beverly Hills home and plays Santa Claus to them all.

AND such food as they serve in Wallace Beery's household when Christmas dinner-time comes around! Of course, the turkey, as everyone knows, is the pièce de résistance and the rite of its preparation is one that engages Reta Beery's own personal attention. The bird should be dressed the day before, she says, and salt and pepper sprinkled inside it—after which it should be allowed to stand and season over night. In the morning the bird is stuffed with the special stuffing already mentioned, placed in a slow oven and roasted for the required amount of time, allowing twenty-five minutes a pound for cooking. Reta cautions that the turkey must be cooked slowly and basted every fifteen minutes.

"Turkey to reach its peak of perfection must be juicy, yet well done," says Wally's wife, "and still further deliciousness is added to this popular bird by a well seasoned stuffing." The turkey stuffing Reta uses is perfectly elegant and entirely novel. The coupon that will bring you a copy of her recipe accompanies this article, but of that more anon.

Of course, turkey without cranberries is practically unthinkable, so Reta Beery next introduces you to her cranberry recipes. You may prefer the red berries with their crunchy shells left in, as a sauce; or smooth and clear as a jelly, so I'm giving you Reta's (Continued on page 67)

Take your Laxative the CHOCOLATE way

Ex-Lax is so pleasant to take . . . so gentle—so effective

YOU can, if you want to, swallow some nasty-tasting stuff while your whole self rebels against it. You can strain your system with some violent harsh cathartic. But . . . why?

Why—when you can take a laxative that tastes like a piece of delicious chocolate. And enjoy the mildest, most pleasant and painless relief from that dreaded old enemy to health and loveliness . . . constipation.

More women take Ex-Lax than any other laxative. And so do more men, and children, too. It's America's favorite laxative . . . 46,000,000 boxes were bought in this country last year alone. Follow the leader . . . and you can't go wrong!

Ex-Lax comes in 10c and 25c boxes at all drug stores. Insist on the genuine!

GUARD AGAINST COLDS! . . . Remember these common-sense rules for fighting colds —get enough sleep, eat sensibly, dress warmly, keep out of drafts, keep your feet dry, and keep regular—with Ex-Lax, the delicious chocolated laxative.

MAIL THIS COUPON—TODAY!
EX-LAX, Inc., P. O. Box 170
Times-Plaza Station, Brooklyn, N. Y. MM16
Please send free sample of Ex-Lax.

Name ....

Address ....

(If you live in Canada, write Ex-Lax, Ltd., 736 Notre Dame St. W., Montreal)

When Nature forgets—remember
EX-LAX
THE ORIGINAL CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

Tune in on "Strange as it Seems", new Ex-Lax Radio Program. See local newspaper for station and time.

polo and parties

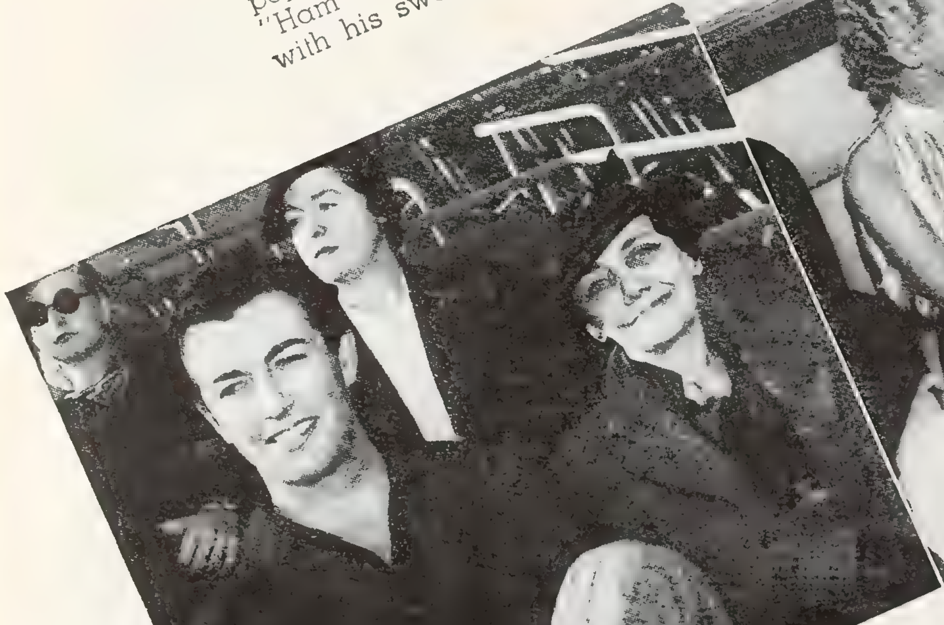
Meet one of Cinematown's more fickle young gals, Miss Wendy Barrie. Maybe Wendy's broken troth to young Donahue made her cagey, but the fact remains that she gets about town with a vast assortment of swains. Here, at left, you see her being squired by that rising young actor, Louis Hayward, at a polo meet.

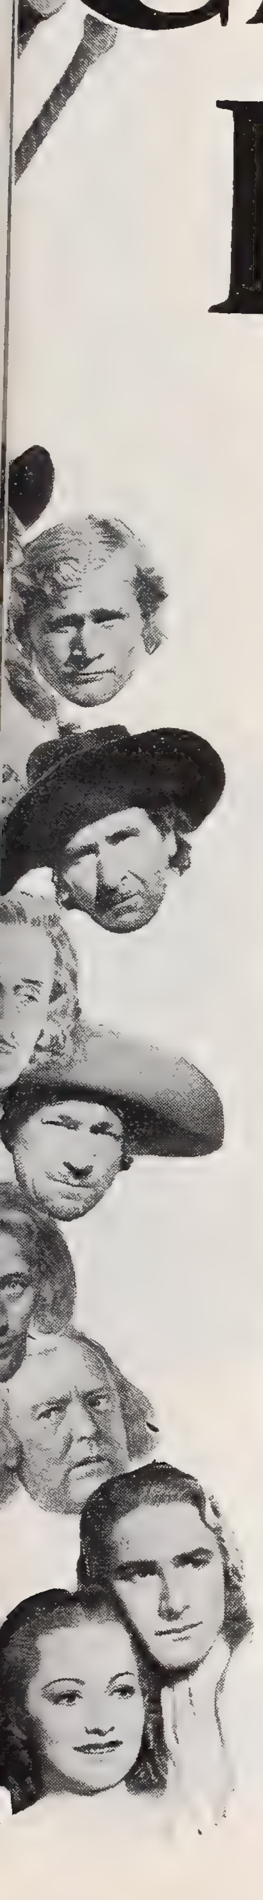
Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Nelson step out at the Roosevelt Blossom Room, above right. In case you don't recognize Mrs. N., it's your old pal, Bette Davis. Bette tries to keep Harmon from being called Mr. Davis—so they make few appearances at the popular night spots. "Ham" keeps busy with his swell band.



Above left, Bob Taylor puts one over on the rumor hounds by taking his mother, Mrs. Ruth Brough, to the polo matches. Bob's romance with Irene Hervey seems to be on once more. And right, the opening of a new night spot finds this gay looking trio—Eadie Adams, singer at the new Cinegrill, C. Henry Gordon and Una Merkel.

Come Adventuring with "CAPTAIN BLOOD"

The buccaneers are coming! . . . in Warner Bros.' vivid picturization of Rafael Sabatini's immortal story of the 17th century sea rovers.



After two years of preparation and, according to reliable Hollywood sources, the expenditure of a million dollars, "Captain Blood" is ready to furnish America with its big holiday screen thrill.

What with great ships, 250 feet in length, crashing in combat, with more than 1000 players in rip-roaring fight scenes – with an entire town destroyed by gunfire – this drama of unrepressed hates and loves, the story of a man driven by treachery into becoming the scourge of the seas, is superb beyon any screen parallel.

THE PICTURE OF THE MONTH

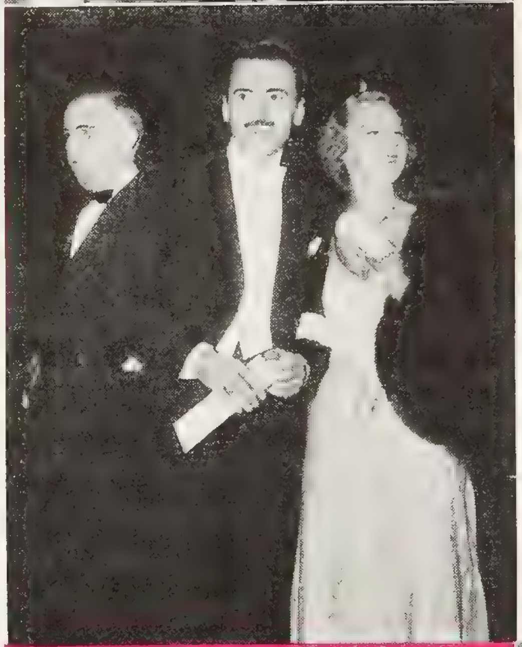
And the cast is just as exciting as the production First there's a brand-new star, handsome Errol Flynn captured from the Londo stage for the title role; an lovely Olivia de Havillan who brilliantly repeats the success she scored in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Others in a long list of famous names are Lionel Atwill, Basil Rathbone, Ros Alexander, Guy Kibbee, Henry Stephenson, Robert Barrat, and Hobart Cavanaugh with Michael Curtiz directing for First National Pictures.

To do justice with words to the fascination of "Captain Blood" is impossible. Se it! It's easily the month's grandest entertainment. And Warner Bros. deserve ou thanks for so brilliantly bringing alive a great epoch and a great story!

GOOD NEWS

OUR SMOOTHIE REPORTER JOTS NOTES ON HIS DRESS SHIRT

by LEO TOWNSEND



No rest for boiled shirts and white ties this month in Hollywood—such goings-on! At right, Myrna Loy autographs a fan's book while Arthur Hornblow grins—at "Hands Across the Table" preview. Grace Moore hanging on to hubby, Valentin Parera, at the "Dream" premiere. Gracie's always good for the dazzling smile and so's Val.

When you see "Klondike Lou," Mae West's latest, you may observe that La Belle West is the best-dressed woman in the cast—and there's a reason. Seems that Lucille Gleason was signed for an important role in the picture, and Travis Banton designed a few nifty costumes for her. They were so nice, in fact, that our Mae walked off the set when she saw them, refusing to return to the studio on the following day. However, into the breach stepped Ernst Lubitsch, Paramount's new big boss, and a heavy conference ensued. Following it everyone kissed, made up and returned to work. The dove of peace flapped again, albeit somewhat nervously, over the "Klondike Lou" set.

■ ■ ■

The big splurge of the social season, thus far, was the premiere of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," for which everyone dug the ermines out of the moth balls and tucked away ordinary preview costumes in favor of white ties and tails. The occasion was so gala that it took three-quarters of an hour to move from the corner of the theatre, which was in the middle of the block. The traffic was so tied up, despite—or maybe it was because of—the presence of a police delegation, that the picture started an hour late. Everyone saw Shakespeare, heard speeches, applauded members of the cast and girded themselves for the hard fight getting out to their respective cars. And thus was a new social season born.

■ ■ ■

Following the premiere, some 500 guests journeyed out to Marion Davies' Santa Monica beach home—we were going to say "cottage" but it hardly seems a proper title for a 30-room domicile—where Miss D. once more proved herself the undisputed champion hostess of Hollywood. It would be impossible to list all the celebrities present, for almost anyone you could name was there. A specially-built dance floor covered the space usually occupied by a few swimming pools and a couple of tennis courts, and a blue canopy sheltered the entire area. Two orchestras furnished the music—and most of the fancy dancing was supplied by the hostess and one of her escorts of the evening, George Brent.

Those Wylers, tsk, tsk! Maggie Sullavan and Willie do a tandem on their new cycle. A new way to prove marital compatability.

* * *

The most amusing single incident connected with the opening was the advertisement in a Hollywood trade paper. You probably don't know it, but when a picture is completed everyone from the director to prop boy, advertises in the trade papers to announce his part in the completed task. In this manner, producers, noting their accomplishments, hire them for new pictures from which the boys often make enough money to pay for the ads on the last one. Anyhow, a day before the opening, and after much hullaballoo about the genius of Reinhardt and the courage of the Warner Brothers, there appeared a half-page ad in one of the trade papers which simply said: "A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM—original story by William Shakespeare."

* * *

Last month we told you that Jean Harlow and Bill Powell had taken back their deposit on the orange blossoms and decided to be just pals, instead of Mr. and Mrs. That it was a friendly break-up has appeared to be correct, but there is one little dissenting voice of rumor that puts a new light on the sitchee-ashun. It seems that the cause of the break was no less a beguiling lass than Rosalind Russell, his co-star in "Rendezvous." So Jean steps out of an evening with her "Riff Raff" director, Walter Ruben—or with Harry Richman, who seems to be the gent to dab a hankie in the eye of many a distressed damsel!

* * *

The Grant-Bruce twosome is passê, for Virginia has switched her affections to Cesar Romero, the Latin from far-off Manhattan. Having been seen out together three nights in a row they are, according to the rumor-makers, all set for a march to the altar. When you take a girl out three nights in a row in Hollywood, your fourth day finds you flooded with wires from the air lines offering attractive round-trip rates to Yuma with a quiet wedding thrown in for a small additional charge. And on the fifth day you start getting information on the rates to Reno.

* * *

Questions without answers department: What very good-looking young star, who recently gave the heavy boy friend the air, now finds herself in the same boat, so to speak? Making a picture on location, she fell considerably in love with a handsome male star, but when they returned to Hollywood the gentleman decided home and fireside was the best place, after all. So now the young lady is enjoying a mild breakdown. Wasn't it Wordsworth who once said of a girl like this, "She can dish it out, but she can't take it"?

* * *

Hollywood is doing considerable buzzing about the Barbara Stanwyck-Frank Fay divorce. The "I told you sos" are having a field day, but a few of the more observant natives are almost willing to bet that the divorce will lead to a reconciliation. For one thing, it must have done something to Frank, for he has gone back to work in a big way. Once one of the smartest comedians on Broadway, Frank went into almost complete retirement after his marriage. Since the marriage fell apart he has finished a role in "Stars Over Broadway."

* * *

Item number two on the Michael accident: Gertrude was rushed to the hospital in a semi-conscious state, and during the examination an interne, gathering information, asked her her name. Gertrude knew she was in pictures, but she couldn't quite place herself. The interne must have had the same idea, for he said, "You're in pictures, aren't you?" "Yes," replied Gertrude, with what she thought was the light dawning on her, "I'm Grace Moore."

Now that Gertrude has fully recovered from her automobile accident, this little item can be told. When Gertrude was thrown from her car, a group of Mexicans, who saw the accident, immediately phoned the hospital and took care of her until the ambulance arrived. After seeing Gertrude safely into the ambulance they left—with her purse, her wrist-watch and her shoes.

* * *

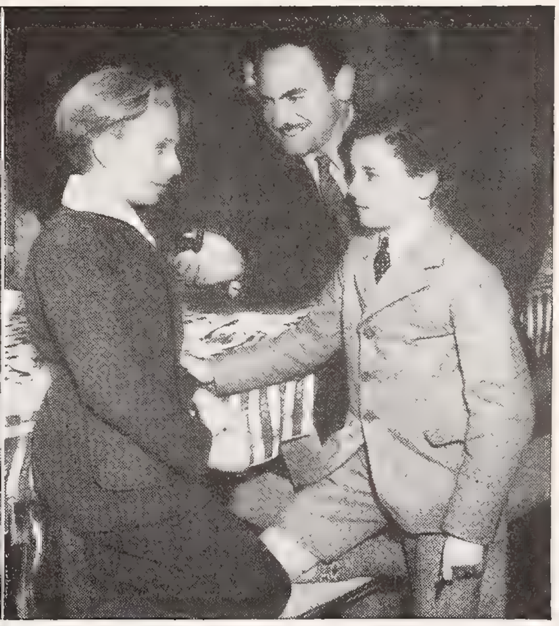
Another nice-gesture-of-the-month is that made by Fred Stone. When Will Rogers died, his stand-in, Leonard Traynor, was left jobless. He was, that is, until Fred heard of his plight. Now Traynor is Fred's stand-in, and just to be sure he always gets the job, Stone had a clause to that effect inserted into his contracts with RKO and Paramount.

* * *

Probably the most social-minded of our younger gentlemen, hereabouts, is Tom

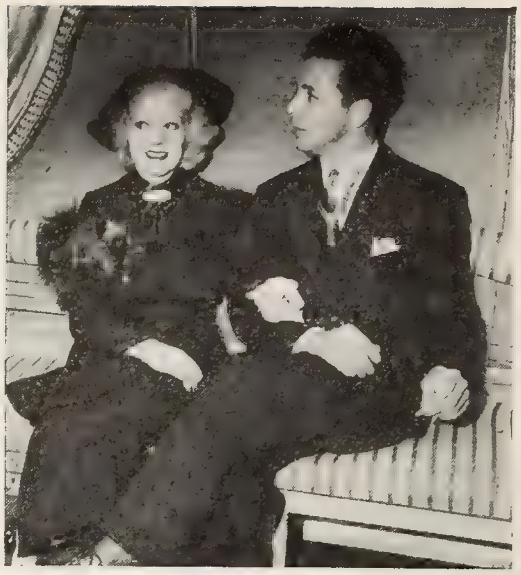
More "Dream" premiere-trotters. All Alma Mammy Warner Brothers, too. Pat Ellis, the Warren Williams, Lyle Talbot and Paula Stone.

Leslie Howard and Norma Shearer in earnest confab at the very elaborate Marion Davies party after the "Dream" premiere.

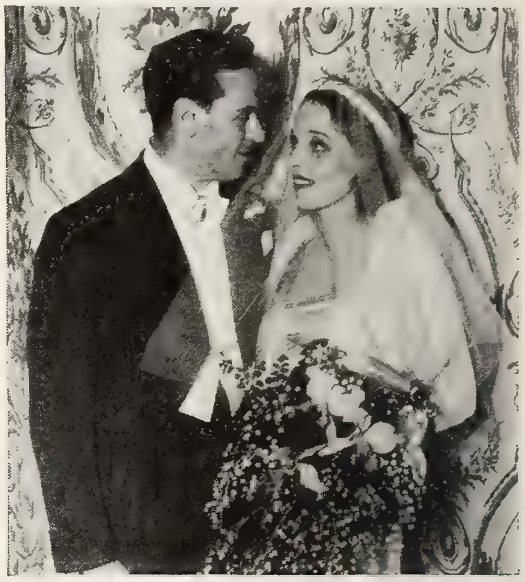


These Britishers! George Breakston and his Dad talk things over with Freddie Bartholomew at a Father and Son get-together breakfast.

FRONT AS HE RACES THROUGH FLICKERTOWN'S SOCIAL WHIRL!



Above, left to right, a telling little trio of snaps that shows you love's thorny path in Hollywood! Joan Blondell, looking very wistful, dates Dick Powell, looking very gay. Next evening Joan, all smiles, steps out with ex-hubby George Barnes. The same evening, Alice Faye, putting on the big gay act, dates a wistful looking gent named Powell! And so, my pets, that to the Powell-Blondell romance rumors! To the right and down, bride Sally Blane looks adoringly at her new husband, Norman Foster. Hermia arrives for her Hollywood debut in "Midsummer Night's Dream"—Olivia de Havilland, looking more like Juliet, has a tussle with her train while Ernest Mendel-Hall looks on. Olivia received bravos on her fine performance in the Shakespeare-Reinhardt special. And last, gaze on Cinematown's sizzling romance of the month—Cesar Romero with that blonde charmer, Virginia Bruce, at the "Metropolitan" preview.



Brown. Almost all of his appearances, however, are with Jane Frances Mullen, socialite of Los Angeles.

Young Mr. Brown, by the way, is fast becoming a very popular guy with the young lady fans, if what we saw at a football game last month is any indication. It was at the outside gate, and a group of young things were crowded about a lass who was exhibiting a Tom Brown autograph she had just obtained. As we passed she was in the process of rejecting a trade-in offer of a genuine Dick Powell. Of course, the young lady with the genuine Dick Powell may have had a couple more at home.

* * *

And what's this about Joan Blondell? When she obtained her divorce from George Barnes everyone thought she was a gal who divorced for keeps. Well, on a Monday night she was seen out with Dick Powell, which proved everyone's prediction—until Wednesday, when she attended the premiere. The gent whose arm she clung to was none other than ex-hubby George Barnes, and they looked sooo devoted, which certainly put everyone on the ropes!

* * *

We're a little late announcing it, but Katharine Hepburn recently posted an offer of $100, and it went begging. It happened this way: just before her last jaunt to New York she was stopped in front of a Hollywood cafe by a photographer who wanted a picture with her escort, Leland Heyward. Katie refused, and paused long enough to announce that anyone agile enough to snap her between here and New York would be handed a hundred bucks. Miss H. still has the money.

When you read about the lavishness of the stars—how they spend fortunes wiring their swimming pools for sound and so forth—it's nice to know that there are a few residents out here who know the value of a dollar. Take Ruth Chatterton, for instance. Ruthie is no pauper—she has a lovely home, cars, and flies her own plane, but she can skimp when she has to. Just recently, for example, she sent a basket of flowers to a friend in honor of an anniversary. With it was her card, a pretty sentiment on one side, and on the other, in neat engraving, Mrs. George Brent.

* * *

Simone Simon, 20th Century-Fox's French import, who couldn't speak a word of English when she arrived in this country, is doing all right with her language these days, judging from a recent conversation we had with her. The little lady announced she was about to buy a car, and when she was asked what brand she had in mind she replied: "Oh, just a little Packard!" Being able to say "Packard" after only two weeks in these parts comes under the head of nice going.

* * *

Speaking of autograph fiends, Evelyn Venable has just met the tops in that field. Recently Evelyn was stopped on the street by a little girl who handed her a sheet with two carbon copies and asked for her signature. Evelyn inquired about the carbon copies and the little lady said, "Well, I sell the original, give the second copy to one of my friends, and I usually keep the third copy for myself." P. S. Need we add that she didn't get the autograph!

Left and down, Marion Davies with George Brent at "Midsummer Night's Dream" preview—Marion threw a huge and very exclusive party after this. Glenda Farrell with her big heart throb, Addison Randall, at the opening of a new night spot, the Roosevelt Cinegrill. John Boles and Gladys Swarthout take a radio duet very seriously. Lower row, left to right, Cary Grant still goes places with Betty Furness. Here they are on a recent evening at the Trocadero. And next, that young smoothie, Tom Brown, beaming on Toby Wing. Tom told Scotty to say that he hadn't given la Wing his class pin yet—the wag! Incidentally, Tom seems to be taking lessons in variety from some of the town's more seasoned Lotharios. Gary Cooper and wife, Sandra, take in a preview of "Hands Across the Table." Somehow the Coopers always look so glum about their public appearances. Could it be that they don't like photographers?

If any of youse guys have ever gone six months without a haircut you'll have a rough idea of how nice a barber chair looked to Donald Woods recently. It wasn't that Donald couldn't afford a haircut, it just seemed that his art forced him to let his hair down. Parts in "Frisco Kid," "Enemy of Men" and "A Tale of Two Cities" all called for long tresses, but after six months of it all three roles were finished and Mr. W. sat himself down at his favorite tonsorial parlor. Five minutes later a frantic phone call told him to hold everything—he was needed for retakes on "A Tale of Two Cities." Donald rushed to the studio and did his scenes entirely in profile, for the barber had finished half of his job and only one side of the Woods' head was Dickens.

■ ■ ■

Now that Christmas is approaching it might be well to know what your favorite stars want in the way of gifts. We haven't got around to many of them so far, but a heart to heart talk with Edith Fellows reveals that she's counting on Santa Claus to bring her a monkey. Anyone possessing a monkey, even if it's a slightly used one, can have Edith's address for the asking. We think, though, that Shirley Temple's request tops them all. Shirley doesn't want toys and she doesn't want dolls. She merely wants the Dionne quintuplets!

■ ■ ■

Lyle Talbot is going to stop being nice to kiddies. Mr. T. is one of Hollywood's most accommodating gents—he's even nice to autograph hounds. The other night a group of youngsters surrounded him and, after he had autographed all their books, he gave one of the lads a fatherly pat on the head. As he turned to leave he heard the little guy's voice booming out. "Say," said the kid, "who is that guy?"

■ ■ ■

Hollywood has gone terpsichorean, and you can blame it all on Fred Astaire. After seeing Fred's nimble footwork in "Top Hat," the young ladies of the town have taken to dropping uncomplimentary remarks about the dancing of their male friends. Remarks, you know, like "I didn't say you were clumsy, dear, I merely asked if you had seen the way Fred Astaire did it." Soooooo, after a series of nasty looks from their young men, the gals have banded together and formed a dancing class. Charter members are Patricia Ellis, Grace and Gertrude Durkin and Paula Stone.

■ ■ ■

It may not be a new idea, but Dolores Del Rio says it is, and who are we to doubt Dolores? Her idea is to equip her wardrobe for each picture with gowns of the same shade. If you saw her in "In Caliente" you probably noted that everything Dolores wore was white, from unmentionables on up. In her next, "Meet the Duchess," black will get the call, and those who have seen some of her creations say they're swell.

■ ■ ■

Now that Jan Kiepura has arrived to make a picture, Hollywood seems like the old days once more. Mr. Kiepura is the Polish tenor whose pictures are so sensational in Europe, and Mr. K. is also extremely (Continued on page 58)

Beauty Advice

A DRESSING-TABLE PREVIEW OF "GETTING READY FOR A PARTY"

By Mary Biddle

SO YOU'RE going to a party! Well, here's our own little private preview of "Party Glamor" (produced and directed by Mary Biddle—ahem!). Olivia de Havilland is the star, and we might re-title it "A Midwinter Night's Dream."

Olivia de Havilland's mother named her after the Olivia in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," and perhaps the name itself has touched her with magic. At any rate, her fresh beauty has stirred even Hollywood to enthusiasm . . . and for her, the dream has come true. She has suddenly awakened to find herself all that she had ever dreamed of being, a Reinhardt protegee in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" . . . a Hollywood discovery . . . a sought-after actress.

Now, all of us have different dreams about what we want to be and what we want to have happen to us, but I imagine we're all alike in having shared the dream of being "the belle of the ball," with all the Gables and Montgomerys beseeching us for just one little dance. And the one particular heartbeat would be fuming and glaring from the sidelines in savage jealousy over our being so popular, and all the women would be murmuring not too sweetly, "What has Mary done to herself . . . she's a positive sensation." Isn't that a pretty good crystal reading of your own cherished dream?

Let's analyze this business of being the belle of the ball, before we sit down at our dressing tables. Think of the most popular girls you've ever known. Did you ever know a popular girl who didn't have a gay face and a gay manner at parties, a sort of party face and party manner? Miriam Hopkins, for example, is a grand party belle. She has a certain radiance about her, an outward reflection of her inner gaiety. The most effective beauty aid in the world is a happy mental state.

Sometimes girls write me and say, "I dread going to parties. I never have a good time." Well, there they are handicapping themselves right at the start. They work themselves into a glum, gloomy state of mind even before they get to the party. Have you ever watched children's faces when you say the word "party" to them? They light up with an eager anticipation over the magic word. If you could just work up a little more of that spirit, too, you would be surprised at what an effective beauty aid it would be.

A famous artist once said that the most (Continued on page 72)

With the holiday partying season in full swing, Olivia de Havilland illustrates some tricks to give new life to the hair. Sprinkle a little brilliantine and a dash of perfume on your hairbrush and brush vigorously. This gives the hair an even sheen, rather than the smeary, plastered effect that results when brilliantine is applied with the hands. Try it!

Joan and Franchot's wedding as you imagined it, not the simple affair it really was!

Here Comes the Bride!

JOAN TONE DISCUSSES HER MARRIAGE WITH HER CLOSEST FRIEND

By Katherine Albert

I CAN tell you that what the Crawford-Tone wedding lacked in orange blossoms and Lohengrin, it made up for in to-do from press and public. For weeks Joan and Franchot had been playing a matrimonial hounds-and-hares with the poor, benighted newspapermen. They were married . . . they weren't married . . . they might be married. And so it went until, finally, Joan and Franchot slipped away to a little New Jersey town and were quietly wed by a local judge. Joan had consistently, even tearfully, denied even to me that she would marry Franchot. Franchot, like a gentleman, refused to say whether or not he was sitting on the fence waiting for her answer.

And the question that you will ask is, "Why did Joan change her mind?"

Ever since the day that Joan divorced young Doug, she had stoutly maintained that she was through with marriage forever. She said that it had no place in her scheme of things.

THE DAY after her marriage I asked her what had changed her mind.

"Franchot," she said. "Franchot and all that he is as a person made me change my mind. I had wanted to marry for months but Franchot (Continued on page 70) might have been trapped by this new underworld terror!

A GIRL YOU KNOW

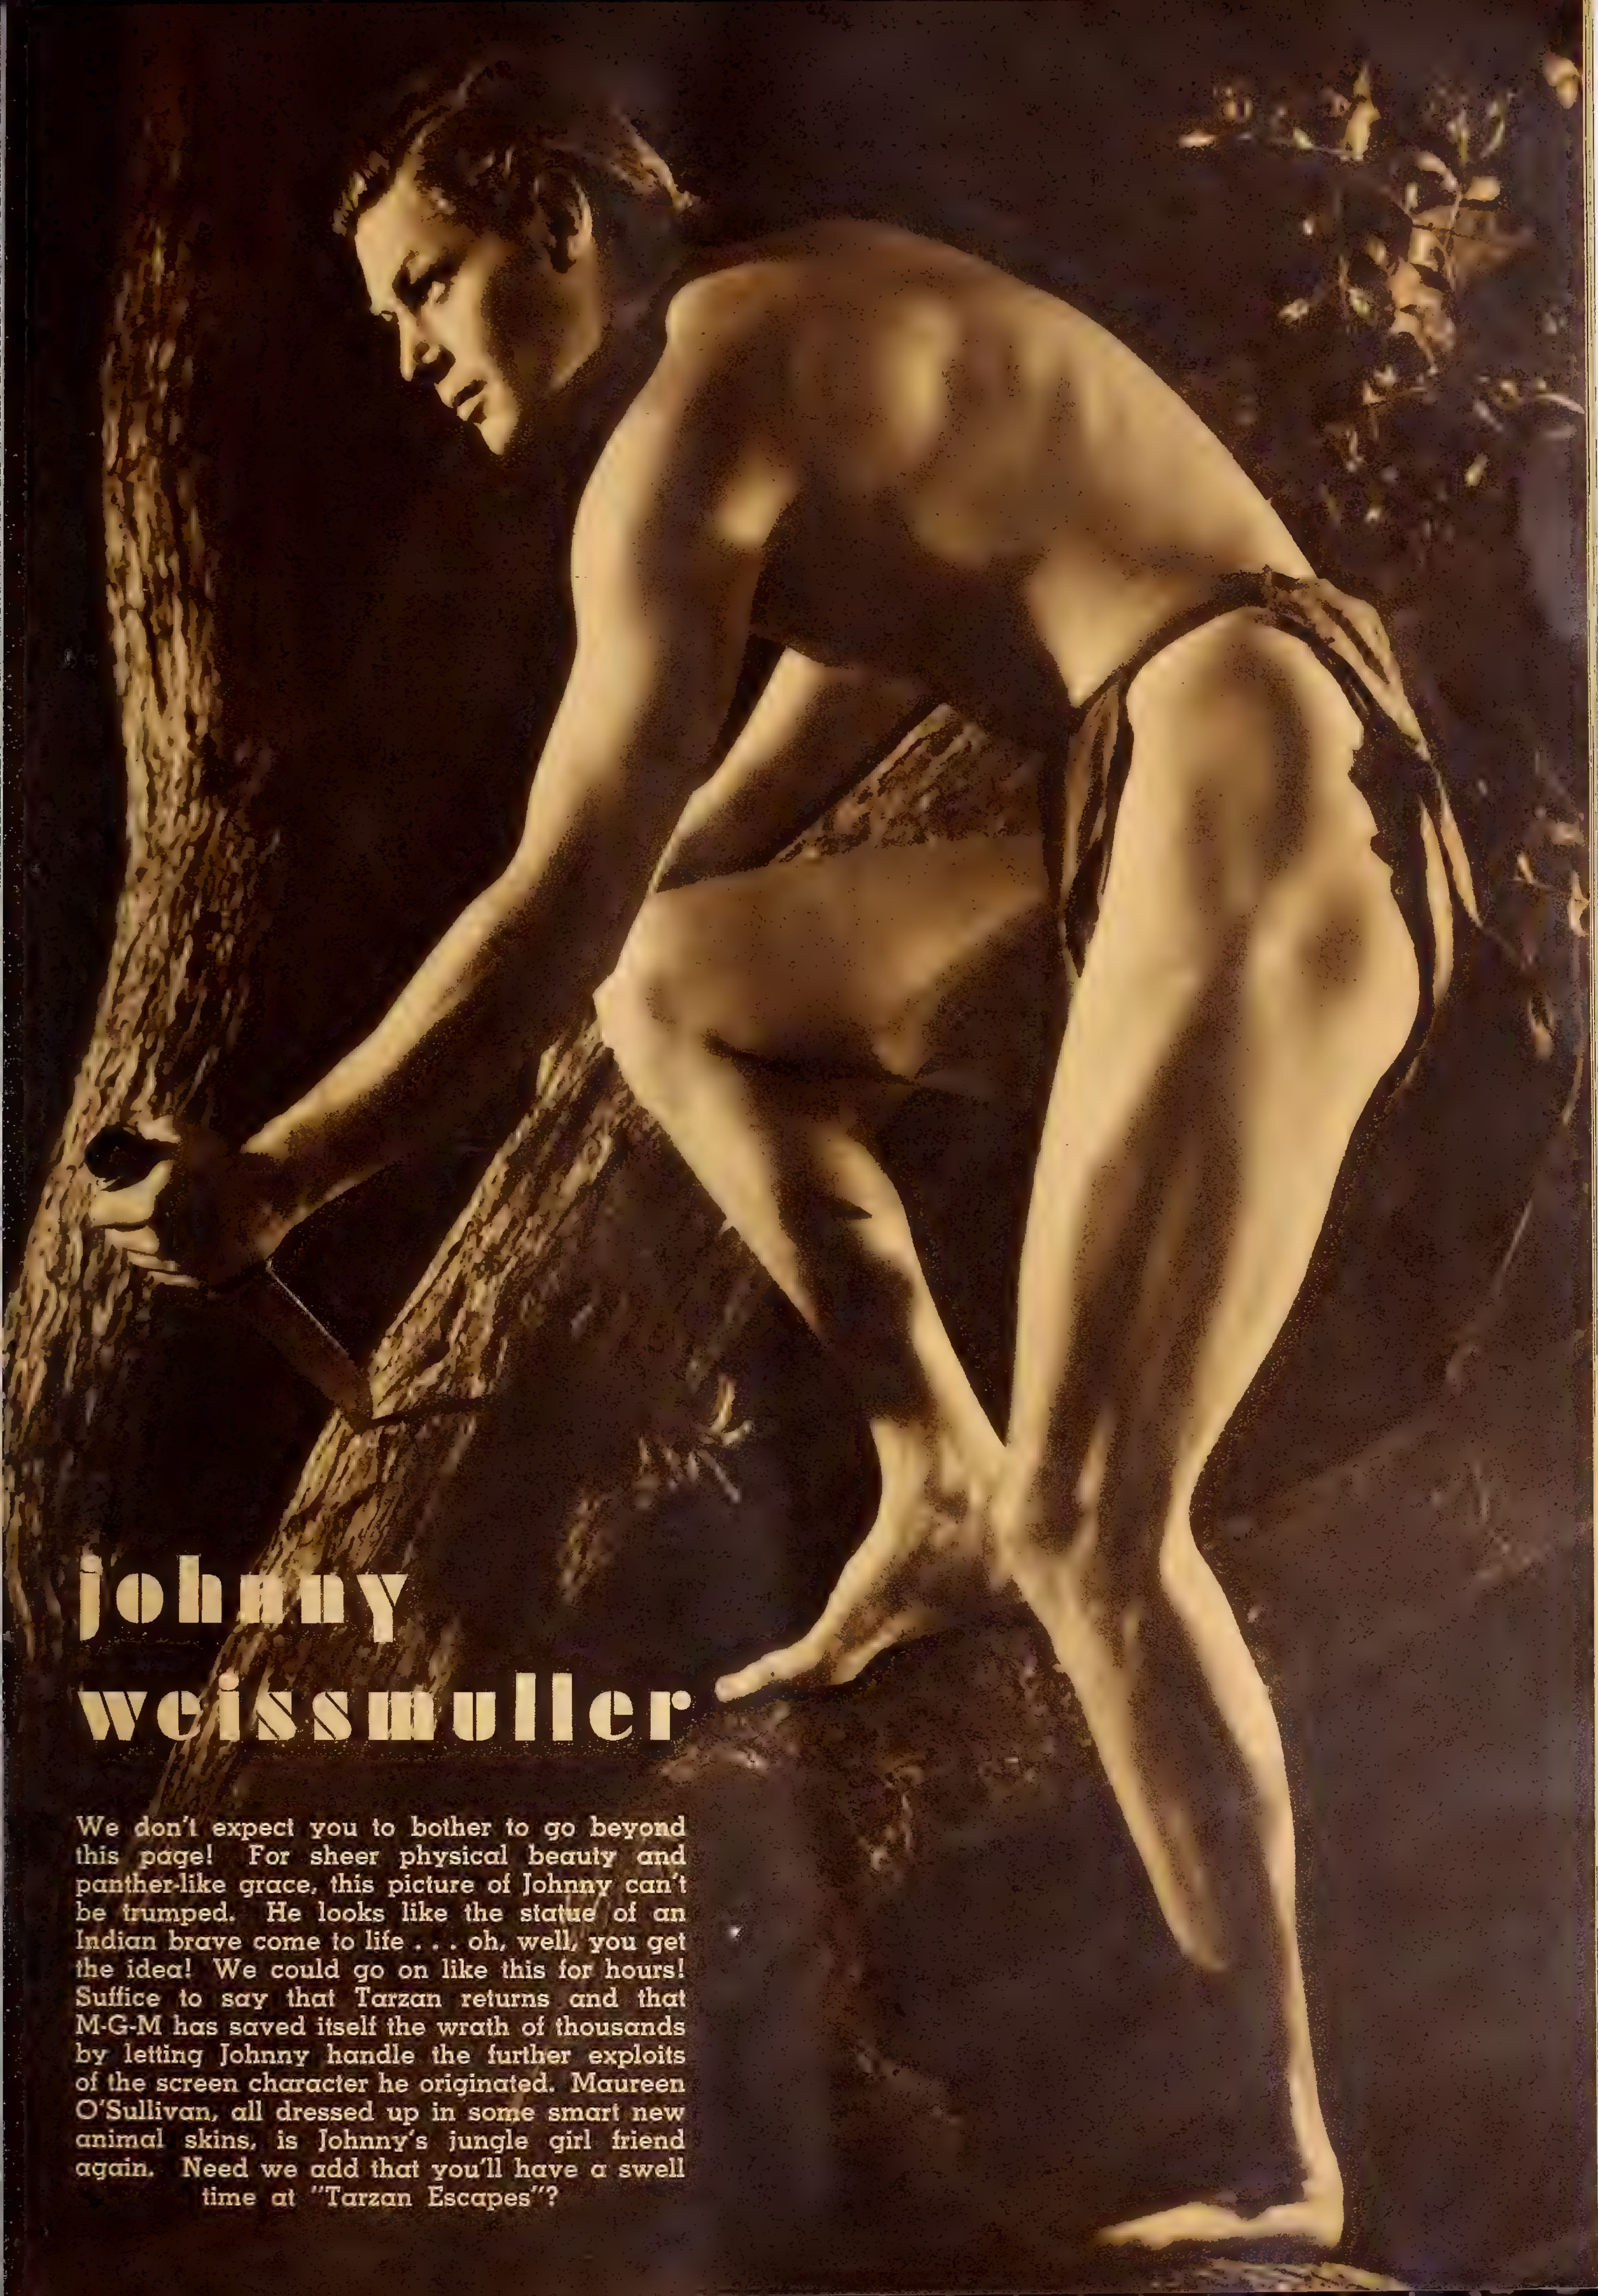
Like the girl next door . . . or at your office . . . the Loretta of this story never dreams that crime will strike her . . . until one cruel night she is hurled into the machine-gun fury of a nation-wide manhunt . . . her loved ones threatened . . . her life endangered!
Frantically, these people struggle. And YOUR heart beats to THEIR horror, THEIR hopes . . . for suddenly you realize, "This can happen not only to a girl I know . . . THIS CAN HAPPEN TO ME!"

SHOW THEM NO MERCY!
20th CENTURY FOX

A
DARRYL F. ZANUCK
TWENTIETH CENTURY PRODUCTION
PRESENTED BY JOSEPH M. SCHENCK
with
ROCHELLE HUDSON
CESAR ROMERO • BRUCE CABOT
EDWARD NORRIS



johnny weissmuller

We don't expect you to bother to go beyond this page! For sheer physical beauty and panther-like grace, this picture of Johnny can't be trumped. He looks like the statue of an Indian brave come to life . . . oh, well, you get the idea! We could go on like this for hours! Suffice to say that Tarzan returns and that M-G-M has saved itself the wrath of thousands by letting Johnny handle the further exploits of the screen character he originated. Maureen O'Sullivan, all dressed up in some smart new animal skins, is Johnny's jungle girl friend again. Need we add that you'll have a swell time at "Tarzan Escapes"?

jean harlow

A grand gal, Jean, and one of Hollywood's real "toiling tillies." So much so, in fact, that it must seem strange to her to find no immediate picture scheduled after "Riff Raff" and an eastern vacation trip a reality. "Riff Raff," incidentally, gives Jean a new team-mate in the form of Spencer Tracy. Spence, an exponent of the Gable-Beery virility school and a grand actor, with Harlow, should give you fans a new combination to cheer.

ronald colman

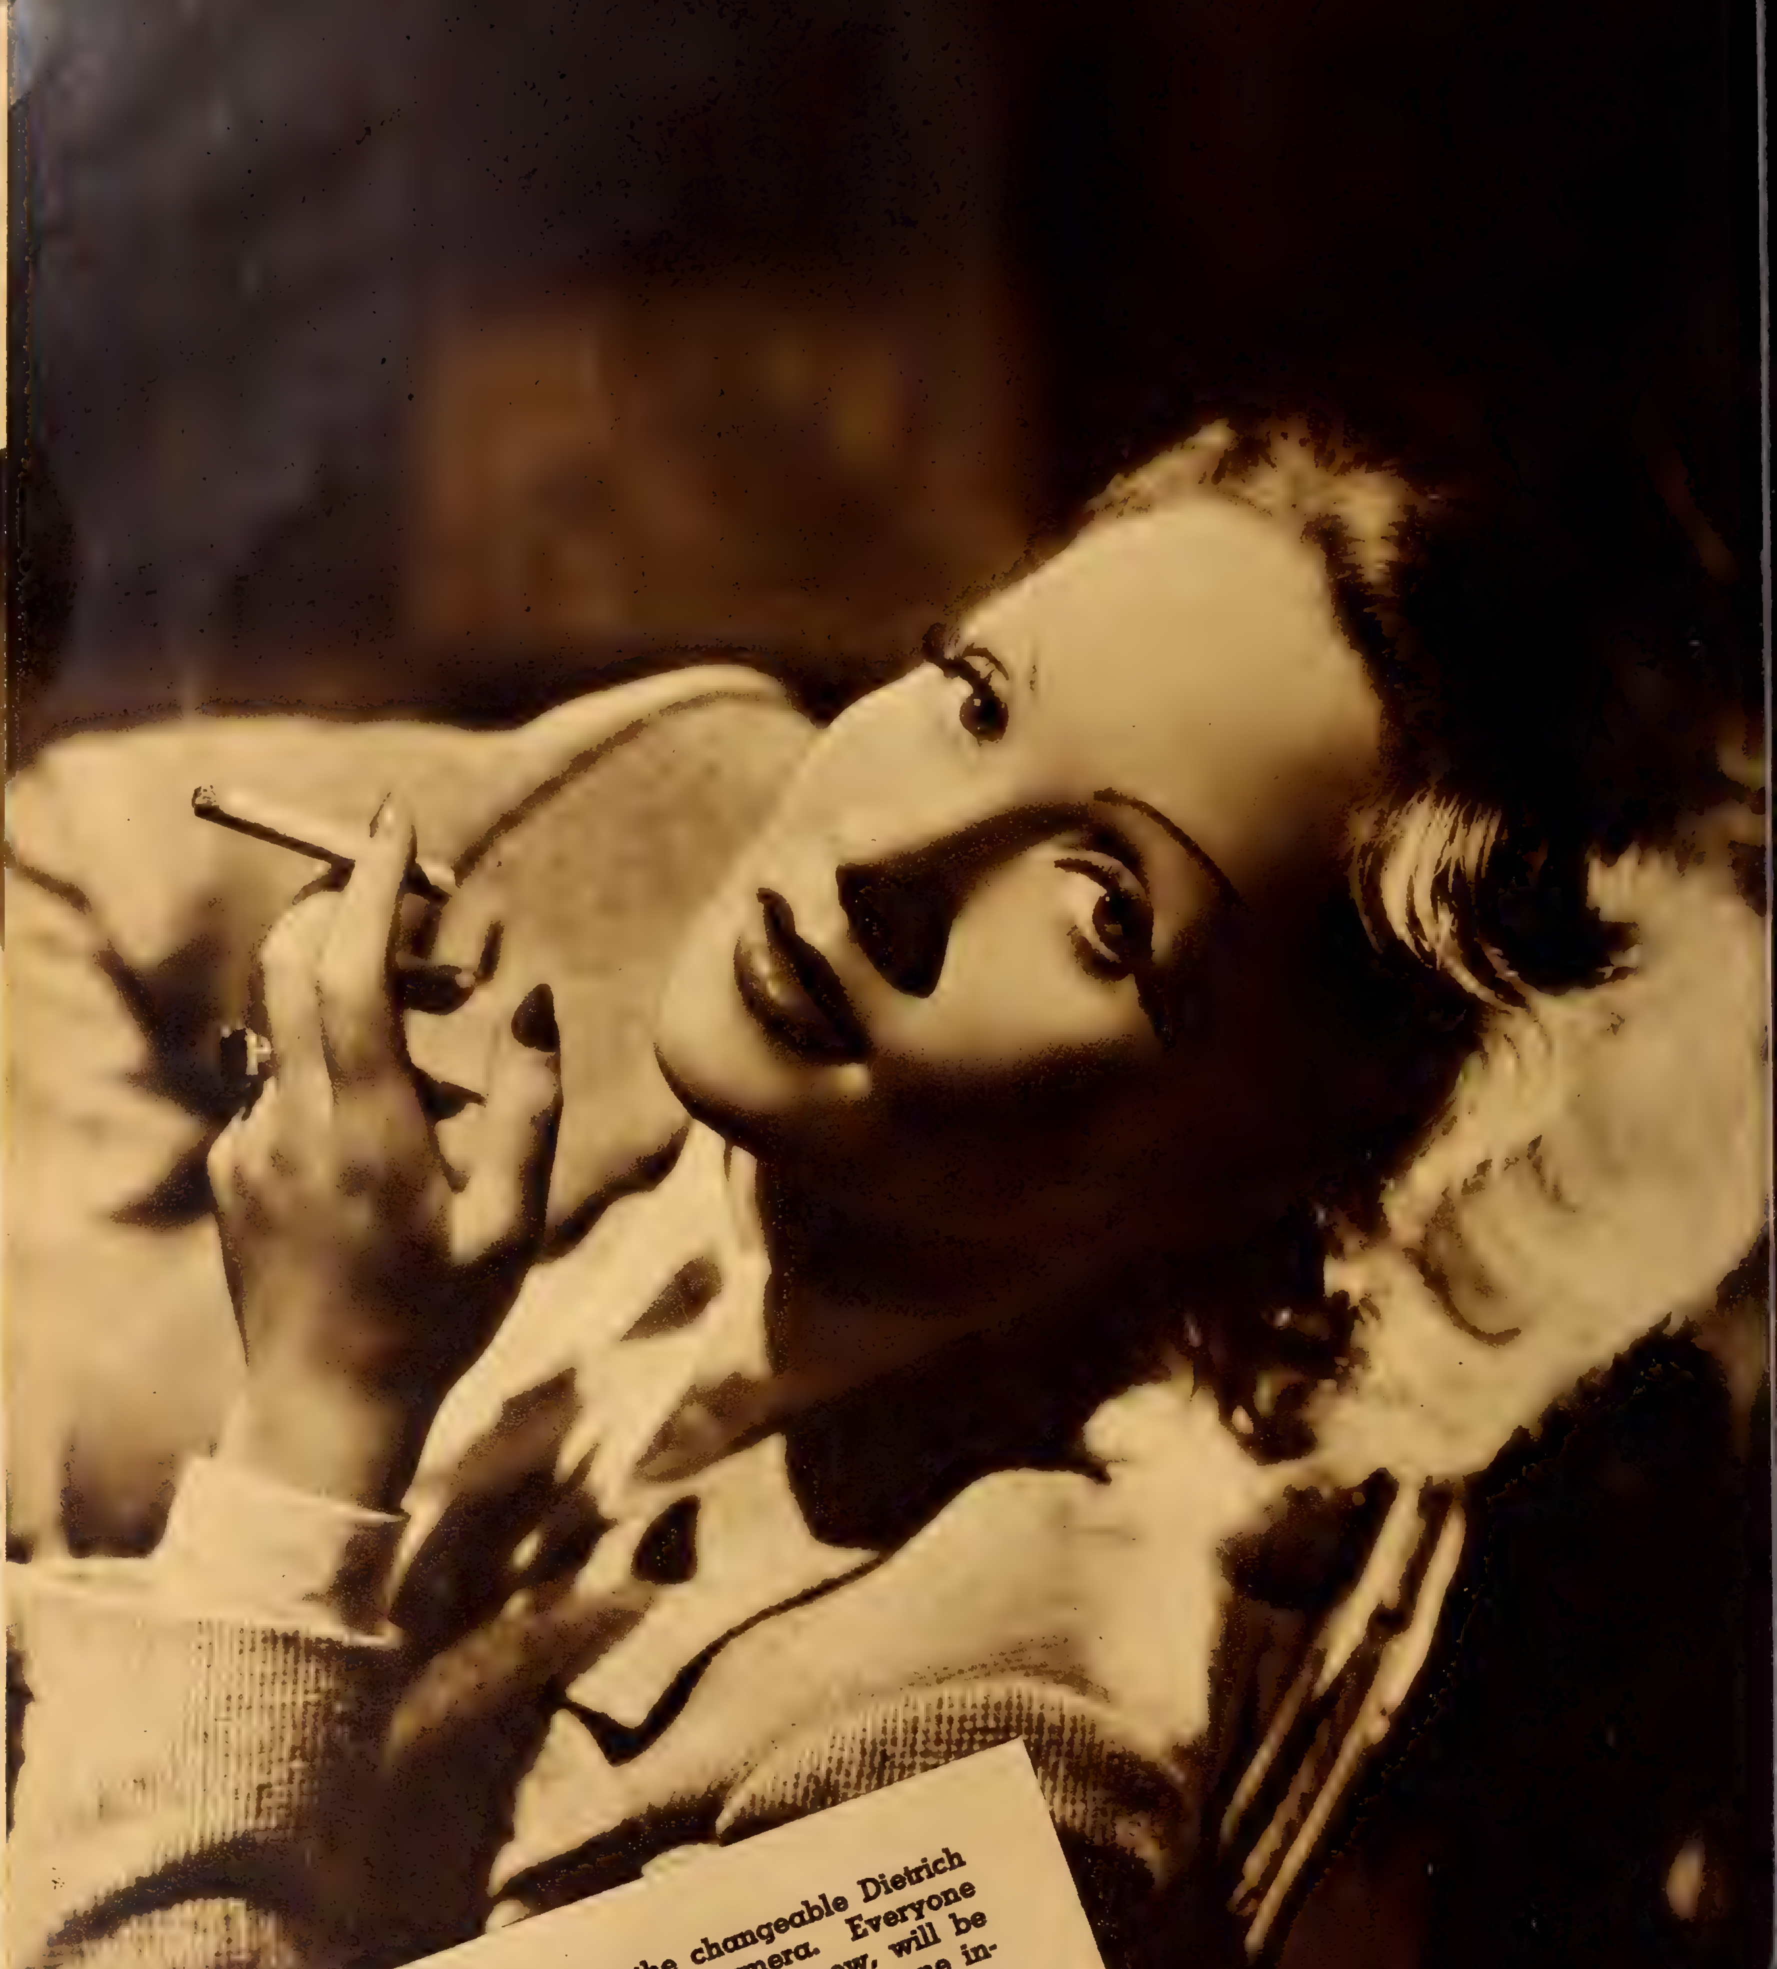
It's homey to see Ronald Colman with an upper lip decoration again and back in one of those suave roles that he tosses off with such aplomb. After the unkempt Darnton of "A Tale of Two Cities," it must feel good to be washed up for the sleek part of "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." Joan Bennett returns, too, as his fair partner in this famous gambling saga.

cary grant

Here's a chap that isn't taking any dust on his way up to the topnotch leading man rank. Cary gave a nice performance in that very masculine opus, "The Last Outpost," and now he's with Hepburn in "Sylvia Scarlett." Off-screen, he's a favorite Hollywood beau-about-town.

rochelle hudson

It looks as if dark-haired, hazel-eyed Rochelle is stepping right into the star shoes of Janet Gaynor. Since illness forced the Gaynor to quit the "Way Down East" cast and Rochelle so capably took her role over, 20th Century-Fox has been busy looking over scripts suitable to the Hudson talents. Rochelle is fragile and young looking, but she's a poised, intelligent gal when it comes to planning a bright future. "Show Them No Mercy" is her next picture, then comes "Ramona" with John Boles.



All the elusive fascination of the changeable Dietrich seems to be caught here by the camera. Everyone wonders about "Desire" which, as you know, will be without the Von Sternberg guiding hand. But one interesting fact stands out, Marlene has the same leading man that she had in that great success years ago, "Morocco"—Gary Cooper! Perhaps with Gary she'll recapture that subtle screen charm which seems to have been swaddled in the elaborate costume pictures.

marlene dietrich

Blithe, young Anita Louise gaily admits that she isn't old enough to wangle a mink coat from her mother, but the Brothers Warner consider her quite enough of a dramatic veteran to handle some of their neatest supporting roles! She's had great breaks of late what with falling under Max Reinhardt's tutelage in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and now to be cast with that fine actor, Paul Muni, in "Enemy of Man." She laughs off rumors of her romance with Nino Martini, the newest screen vocalizing charmer.

anita louise

Threats?

Divorce?

Marriage?

Accident?

what will happen

What Dareos Prophesied

1. Death for three of the screen's best-loved players.
2. No Pickford-Fairbanks reconciliation despite talk. Mary to make success at writing.
3. Emotional uncertainty for Constance Bennett—beginning of career decline.
4. Chaplin to complete picture—fact of his marriage to Paulette Goddard accepted.
5. Garbo to go to Sweden; her mother to die; career to decline; no marriage.
6. Leslie Howard divorce whispers untrue; scandal threat; screen and stage in London.
7. Marriage either in '35 or '36 for Loretta Young; breakdown late in year, which will stop work.
8. Barbara Stanwyck on verge of divorcing Frank Fay but will make up. Adopt child.
9. Claudette Colbert to be victim of violence. Threat of scandal. "Will do a Garbo."
10. Miriam Hopkins to have big screen year. No marriage.
11. Katharine Hepburn to marry.
12. Big professional year for Ronnie Colman. No marriage despite rumors.

THE PLANETS for 1936 frown balefully on Hollywood and many of its best-beloved stars . . . !

They say:

—there is more woe ahead for Harlow! Danger of life or limb menaces Gable! A serious motor crash lies directly in John Boles' path! It'll be a "bad year" for Bing Crosby, and an even worse one for Constance Bennett! Kidnappers have their eyes on many Hollywood children! Gangsters threaten Mae West! Dolores Del Rio faces heart unhappiness! Many other stars enter the year in the shadow of accident, scandal, sickness, even possible death. The break-up of several stars' homes is indicated. For Hollywood itself—internal strife and subsequent upheaval.

But there is good, too, to balance the bad in the year's astrological aspect . . . the public will thrill to torrid ro-

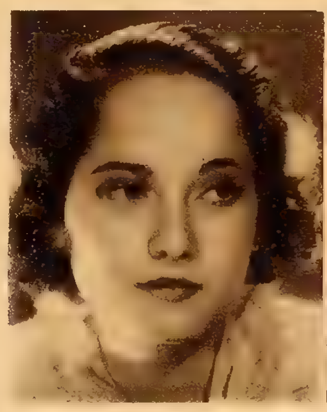
EIGHTY PER CENT CORRECT IN HIS 1935 PROPHECIES, DAREOS

FLOHERTY JR

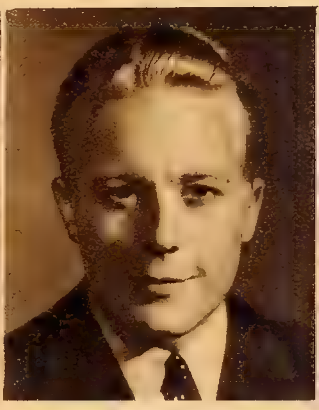
DAREOS' ANNUAL FORECAST

AS TOLD TO HARRY LANG

ILLUSTRATION BY FLOHERTY, JR.



Love?



Success?

Unhappiness?

to them in 1936 ?

mances in the lives of Garbo, Myrna Loy, Gene Raymond, Dick Powell, Janet Gaynor! And marriage—happy marriage — is probable for Merle Oberon, Claudette Colbert and Loretta Young. Bright futures lie ahead for Shirley Temple and Freddie Bartholomew, the child-wonders of the past year. There'll be new babies in Hollywood homes—the Jolsons will probably adopt another child, perhaps even twins. And there's a likelihood of twins being born to the Fred Astaires! The Paul Munis, the planets say, may adopt a child, too. For Hollywood, generally, it will be a big financial year, despite what internal woes the industry may have. At least one great film will be produced, during the year, that will amaze the world.

All these events are in the 1936 forecast of Dareos, that world-renowned (Continued on page 74)

What Happened

1. Death of Will Rogers, Junior Durkin and Sam Hardy.
2. Correct on both prophecies. Doug and Mary are divorced. Mary's three books are selling well.
3. Connie's emotional life none too serene. Career definitely on wane, after year of free-lancing.
4. Picture completed and Hollywood does accept marital status with Paulette.
5. Did go to Sweden; mother still lives; her career waning; no marriage.
6. Right about divorce talk; no known scandal. Did successful London screen and stage work.
7. No marriage as yet in '35 but Dareos says to watch '36. Breakdown now keeping her from work.
8. As this is written Barbara and Frank are separated. They adopted a boy.
9. No known violence but scandal whispers concerning her Mexican divorce. Now hiding from questioners.
10. Right-o, Dareos! Miriam's career on the up but no marriage.
11. She denies it but Hollywod says yes.
12. Correct. Colman has had splendid pictures but no marriage despite romance rumors.

TELLS HOLLYWOOD STARS WHAT TO EXPECT IN '36!

Garbo's GLAMOR?

By Helen Louise Walker

Hepburn—artist or imitator?

WHAT GOES into the making of a successful actress? What are the ingredients of screen success and how do you mix them and at what temperature do you bake them? Wouldn't a lot of people, including you and I, like to know the answer to that one!

Someone, at a party not long ago, described Katharine Hepburn as an "assembled" star. Asked to explain, she said, "Katie uses her hands like Nazimova, walks like Hope Williams, talks like Garbo . . ." and so on through quite a lengthy list of characteristics, the implication being that Miss Hepburn's borrowed attributes had been important factors in her truly spectacular success. And I don't use "spectacular success" with any reservations since the amazing dramatic right-about-face Katie did in "Alice Adams." From one of the worst slumps any actress ever experienced to a new high in fine acting, she certainly deserves the tag of "spectacular" without contention. Katie's "Alice" made you feel that she had undreamed of dramatic potentialities and it makes the question of whether she is an "assembled" star worth the analyzing at this point in her career.

LET'S GO 'way back for a moment. In the first place Katharine Hepburn has been one of the most assiduous, the shrewdest, the most successful borrowers of stage or screen. She has always been a person who knew what she wanted yet who has recognized her own limitations. When she was a small, red-haired girl in Connecticut, she knew that she wanted to be an actress. In fact, she was convinced that she was an actress because she had discovered that the tears and the heart-rending sobs, which she could produce at will, were very useful in getting her what she wanted. She sobbed at her father until he built her a small theatre of her own in the back yard where she could practise her lachrymose histrionics to her heart's content.

THERE ARE THOSE WHO CLAIM KATIE'S A COPYCAT! IF SHE IS, HER BORROWING IS REMODELED INTO A BRIGHT NEW FORM OF GENIUS

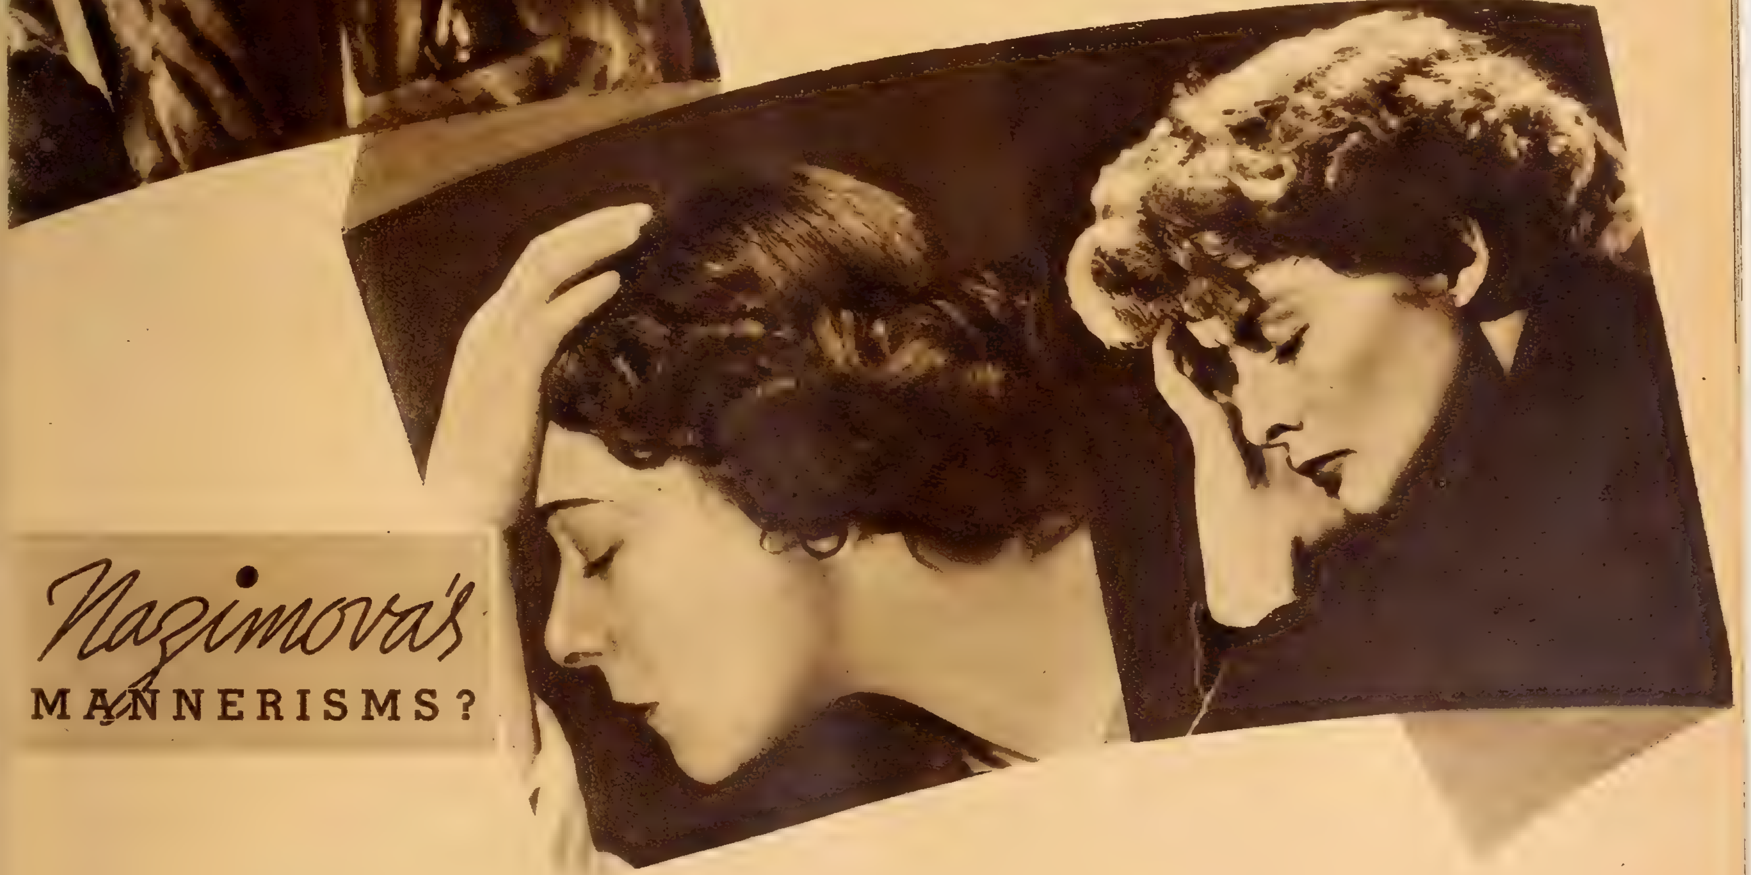
Then and there, Katharine began to "borrow." There was a little girl in the "company" who was, it seemed to Katie, a more convincing cry-er than was Katie, herself. She insisted upon knowing how the other child did it.

Hope Williams'
BOYISHNESS?



She studied, imitated, analyzed this superior art of sobbing until she had made the secret her own. Even as a young and spoilt child she developed the knack of benefitting from what other people had learned.

Later, having profited in school dramatics not only from the instructors but from talented amateur colleagues, Katharine, in the face of violent family objections, went to Baltimore and demanded to be allowed to become a member of Edwin Knopf's stock company. She was, she informed Mr. Knopf, an actress. When he viewed her gangling figure and youthful enthusiasm with obvious amusement, she acted for him. She did it with such fiery and bad-tempered verve that he engaged her, despite her awkward lankiness. And Katie began to learn . . . or borrow . . . some more. That was what she was there for.

She detected some discontent with her delivery of lines . . . and no one in the company had time to coach the newcomer. So, when Kenneth McKenna joined the company briefly as a visiting star, she asked him, point blank, what was wrong with her. He told her, bluntly that there were a great many things wrong. Chiefly her timing. She spoke too rapidly, her bodily poise simply wasn't, she did not know how to time gestures to suit action.

Katharine listened . . . and when the season closed she betook herself to New York, engaged a voice and diction teacher and then besought Mordkin, of the Russian Ballet, to help her to overcome her long-legged awkwardness. She haunted that ballet at performances and rehearsals and, if the Hepburn of today undulates in poetic fashion across the screen, it is partially due to that persistent haunting.

But there is more about that now-famous walk of Hepburn's. After a number of devastating disappointments (the gal had both backbone and determination!), she finally was engaged to understudy Hope Williams in the stage play, "Holiday."

Now, Hope Williams was a young woman with an arresting and dynamic talent, a boyish figure and a sort of ball-bearing walk which she had developed to conceal the fact that her legs were a leetle mite too long for ideal symmetry. She was at that moment one of New York's sensations.

Hepburn was, in a trice, letter perfect in the role. She rehearsed it, she stood in the wings during performances . . . months of successful who will be

(Continued on page 81)

Petite Lily Pons, the most individual of the prima donnas, met with approval in "I Dream Too Much," her first film.

Will "Rose Marie," Jeanette MacDonald's next singing effort, send her stock higher?

THE BATTLE OF THE SONGBIRDS IS ON—WITH MOORE, MACDONALD, hollywood's jenny lind?

By RAMON ROMERO

Grace Moore has "One Night of Love" and "Love Me Forever" to her credit. Can she top these performances?

Moore and Pons have a real rival in Gladys Swarthout, whose rare beauty and dulcet tones are thrilling audiences with "Rose of the Rancho."

VOICES PITTED one against the other. A war with song as the ammunition. A rhythmic conflict which no League of Nations can stop, for in the end the best voice must win. Victory means popularity. Screen immortality. An everlasting niche in the Hall of Fame. Gladys Swarthout versus Grace Moore! Lily Pons against Jeanette MacDonald! Marta Eggerth challenging Mary Ellis. And in the reserve forces, behind this vanguard of golden-voiced nightingales, Marion Talley, Jeritza, Irene Dunne, Jane Froman, names that have won their spurs wherever melody is loved. Musical comedy queens, Grand Opera stars, movie prima donnas—all mixed up in a musical melee, the like of which has never been seen in all moviedom. All out to capture the exalted title of "The Jenny Lind of the Movies."

The first shot fired from the melodious first-line trenches transpired a little over a year ago when Grace Moore appeared in "One Night of Love," scoring such a tremendous hit that Jeanette MacDonald's laurel wreath was blown right off her pretty head, forcing her into immediate retreat while preparing a counter-attack.

JEANETTE MACDONALD'S answer to the enemy was "Naughty Marietta," which has proved to be her most successful picture. It has recovered for her much of the lost prestige she had conceded to her victor. The combat between these two songstresses has become so personal that the battlefield has narrowed down to a lyrical prize-ring. Behind the ropes in this corner, ladies and gentlemen, you have Miss Grace Moore (applause), and in this corner Miss Jeanette MacDonald (more applause). You, the Public, are the referee. When the gong goes off and these two lovely ladies start pulling notes out of each other's throats, all for your amusement, it will be your audience reaction that will decide the championship.

M-G-M's star prima donna has just won a coup over her rival by being awarded the most coveted musical role of the year, the title part in "Rose Marie," in which Nelson Eddy is once again her co-starring partner. If you remember, Miss Moore, who is under contract to make one picture for Miss MacDonald's employers, was originally announced for the same picture. Miss MacDonald is said to have insisted on having the part. Now it is reported Grace Moore will (Continued on page 68)

PONS AND SWARTHOUT AS CONTENDERS! WHO WILL BE THE VICTOR?

. . . why men fall for miriam hopkins

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, IT'S NOT DUE TO GLAMOR, NOR BEAUTY—BUT SOMETHING THIS CHARMING STAR SAYS YOU, TOO, CAN ACHIEVE

By Robert Eichberg

EVEN HER best press agents wouldn't call Miriam Hopkins "glamorous." Nor would any artist choose her as one of the "Ten Most Beautiful Women in America."

Yet there is hardly a man who knows her who doesn't swear that she is one of the most fascinating girls he ever met. Many of them, indeed, are more than a little in love with her.

So I decided to find the reason for Miss Hopkins' astonishing charm.

Consequently, I rang the bell, not long ago, at the door of the little house she occupies when in New York. A butler showed me upstairs, and into the library. It was a cheerful room—not very big—with a log fire burning to take the chill off. The walls were covered with books. They weren't de luxe editions; they were just a miscellaneous collection of volumes that she had read and liked well enough to keep for re-reading. (The others, she told me later, go to the Salvation Army, the Old Sailors' Home, and so forth.) There were no dressy, flashy chairs, made to be seen rather than sat in—simply two huge, soft armchairs and a long, low davenport with a coffee table before it.

Maybe that's the first of her charm secrets. She knows how to make a home livable. She doesn't make it just a "front" for a movie actress; it's the sort of room every man wishes his wife would give him.

I sat and waited. In a moment I heard quick, light footsteps running down the stairs from the third floor and in came Miriam, wearing a trim little gray tweed suit, a gay neckerchief, a wide smile and practically no make-up. Her lips were pink instead of bright red, her cheeks were powdered but unrouged, and her fair, curly hair floated around her face. She looked scrubbed and wide awake and gay. Maybe it isn't a compliment to say that a young woman looks "wholesome," but there it is. There wasn't even the faintest trace of glamor; she just looked clean, healthy and full of life.

Men who know Miriam find her completely fascinating, many are more than a little in love with her. What makes her so captivating is a lesson to every girl who yearns for popularity and the admiration of men. As it happens, the big heartthrob in Miriam's life, since her divorce from Austin Parker, is that blond fellow, Michael Hopkins, her young adopted son! At the extreme left you see her in a scene with Joel McCrea from "Splendor." Joel just finished winning the gal in "Barbary Coast," too. "Lucky duffer," did we hear all the gents in the audience say?

AND maybe that's another reason why men fall for her. Maybe glamor is just a little frightening to most men.

Now, I had heard that Miriam was a holy terror. I had heard the story about the time she was to be guest of honor at a week-end party on a yacht, and how, after the first day, she got bored and made the host head back for port. They say he was so broken up about it that he had to stay in bed for two days.

And I had heard about the time an old friend of hers in New York, phoned across the continent to her one night to say that he had just sold his first play to the movies, only to be asked, "Why bother me about it?" So I decided to see this alleged "holy terror" in action, and proceeded to ask her the dumbest, most infuriating question I could. I said, "Say, Miss Hopkins, how do you go about getting men to fall for you?" And then I waited for the storm to break. Instead of flying into a rage or even simpering coyly she burst out laughing, promptly looking about eighteen years old. Her eyes twinkled as she changed the subject by suggesting that we discuss something that she "knew something about." No false modesty—she just didn't want to talk about her amazing charm. But in the conversation that followed, she revealed many sides of her multi-faceted personality.

As we sat down to breakfast (yes, she'd been thoughtful enough to order two of everything) she said, "I'm sorry I kept you waiting, but I had to broadcast last night, and after that some friends came over here with me and we scrambled eggs, played the phonograph and talked 'til after three."

"How are you as an egg scrambler?" I asked.

"Oh, I didn't really scramble them," she confessed. "One of the men did that. I just looked on and ate them and told him how good they were. But I can cook and sew if I have to. I take care of the baby when the nurse is out, and he seems to like it. Wait a minute, I've got to show you some pictures that I took of him a few weeks ago."

She jumped up and went to the desk, caught up a handful of snapshots and came back. "Here," she said, sitting close beside me, so that she could point things out, "this one's Michael. He's the one making the face. Don't you think he looks strong? And he's only three! Now look at this one. Here he's . . . "

And in these few minutes she had unwittingly disclosed several more reasons why she appeals to men. First, she's punctual—apologizes for being less than two minutes late. She's good-natured, (Continued on page 66)

FROM THE SIDEWALKS OF NEW YORK, RUBY KEELER AND PATSY KELLY

ILLUSTRATED BY JAMES KELLY

Above, Patsy Kelly, queen of comedians, knows Ruby Keeler (left) as no one else does and so she gives the lowdown on her friend.

By William French

four dancing

FOUR AMBITIOUS little feet, tapping gaily on the echoing floors of Jack Blue's dancing school. Four tired, hot feet, with aching toes and blistered soles, shuffling over the last few blocks of scorching sidewalk from 51st and Broadway to 70th Street and Third Avenue. Four flashing, nimble, educated feet, climbing steadily upward.

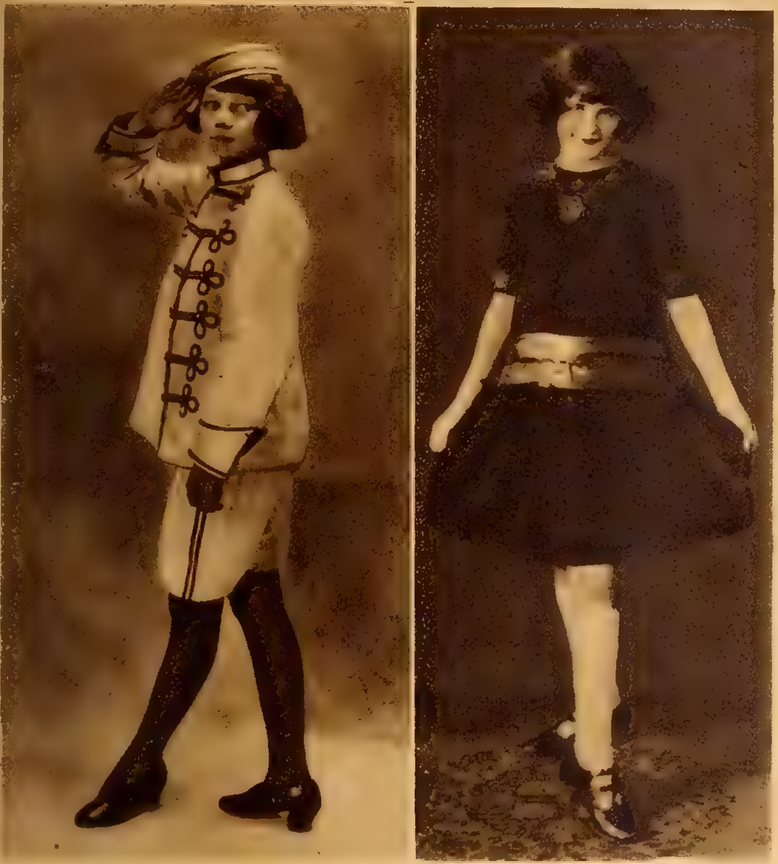
And now, two of these four feet, encased in comfortable slippers and propped against a camera dolly, are resting between scenes on the Twentieth Century-Fox set and Patsy Kelly, fresh from a boudoir scene with Dick Powell in "Thanks A Million," is spilling the lowdown on Ruby Keeler. And if there's anything about Ruby that Patsy doesn't know, it's because it hasn't happened yet.

"Don't let that gal fool you," Patsy was saying, "she's always had a system. She may have stood in the background and never tried to sponge up any credit for anything, but she was little Miss Efficiency all the time, and she had a way with her. She was so darned sweet, she made giving easy. And don't ever make the mistake of thinking it was luck that got Ruby where she is. It was system and efficiency.

"WE WERE about ten, I guess, when I got my bicycle. A friend of the family gave it to me, glory be. And somebody else had given Ruby a pair of roller skates, glory be again.

"As I remember them they weren't anything like the roller-bearing skates of today. One, I think, had an egg-shaped wheel on it. Either that, or those old New York

TAPPED THEIR WAY TOGETHER TO HOLLYWOOD AND SUCCESS



Big-time stuff! At the age of ten years young, Patsy (left) and Ruby all set for a doting audience at one of Jack Blue's syncopation soirees.

feet . .

sidewalks had goose flesh. Anyhow, one foot always felt like it was on a miniature bump-the-bumps.

"I don't know how wonderful Ruby thought those skates were, but I'll never forget how well she sold them to me. Before she got through I was convinced that I was the luckiest kid along Third Avenue to be able to use them while she rode my bike. When I look back at it now, I sometimes suspect those skates had grown to my feet.

"ANYWAY, Ruby was the prettiest girl I'd ever seen, and I used to love to watch her ride the bicycle. Maybe it was because she looked like I ached to look, way down deep in my heart.

"I remember the first day (Continued on page 71)

ride a hobby to happiness

UNLUCKY? DISCONTENTED? SO WAS JEAN MUIR! BUT SHE FOUND A WAY OUT AND YOU CAN, TOO

By Caroline Somers Hoyt

WHAT'S HAPPENED to Jean Muir? Two years ago she was one of the unhappiest girls in Hollywood. Today, I would venture to say that she is one of the gayest. And what caused this amazing change is a story from which you can take a lesson in the achievement of true contentment.

To tell this story properly, I must go back to Jean's childhood. She told me that her earliest remembrance is something both sensitive and lovely. One day she was rolling her doll buggy, when suddenly a drop of rain fell upon her hand. Looking down, she was filled with a curious wonder at the miraculous beauty of that raindrop, trembling there before evaporating. And Jean believes that it was this first emotional reaction to loveliness which has made her seek it, unconsciously, throughout her life.

As a child, she outwardly refuted this inward sensitiveness. She was wildly rebellious, invariably putting her worst foot forward. Once she was sent home from school because she would not pledge allegiance to the flag. She was to stay expelled until she would take the simple oath the other children so willingly gave. But she never did. No one bothered to explain to her why loyalty to flag and country was expected of every citizen. Therefore, she couldn't attach any significance to a piece of striped and starred bunting. And, when she was told the story of George Washington and the cherry tree, she refused to believe that he couldn't lie. Jean went on the theory that everybody told fibs and that the Father of His Country was no exception! In fact, Jean should have been born in this decade of progressive schools. She would have basked in the careful explanations that are part of modern child education and psychology today.

So different was Jean from the pack, so ready was she to question and doubt, so intolerant of those who did not share her doubts, that it is not surprising that the other children disliked her. Children are quick to sense the misfit. Jean was definitely a misfit and so they punished her for her nonconformity by chasing her with sticks and stones. She used to walk backwards so that she could keep her eye on her persecutors and then, when she was only a couple of blocks from home, she would break into a run and throw herself, weeping and terrified, upon the floor.

BUT TEARS were reserved only for the times when she was alone. She faced the world rebelliously and the world was her enemy. Her maladjustment followed her through adolescence. She was big, awkward and gauche and boys did not like her. At dances no one cut in.

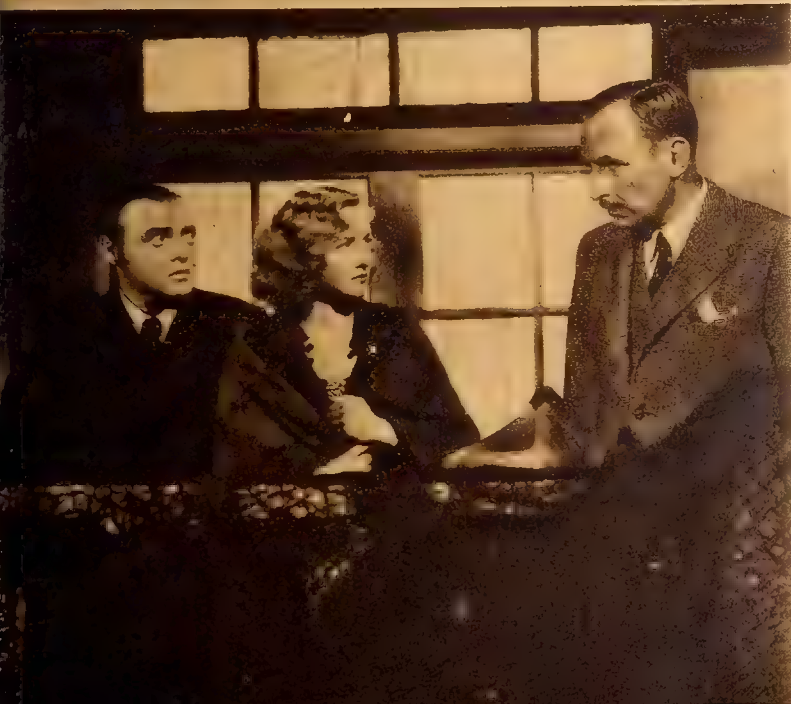
So she dramatized herself and escaped from reality. And, from dramatizing herself, she stepped quite naturally at school, to dramatizing in plays.

A wise teacher allowed her to have her way in her classes and for the first time in her life Jean achieved a little personal happiness. Here (Continued on page 74)

Her desire to set herself apart from the crowd has caused Jean misery and loneliness. Those wallflower days are over now since handsome George Wolcott is her constant companion.

Peter Lorre in person, so truly mild that it's fantastic that he could play vicious criminals. And below with Mrs. Lorre, a Viennese actress.

Below, Peter Lorre, Marian Marsh and Douglas Dumbrille in "Crime and Punishment." Peter's in nearly every scene and it promises to be great.



he'd rather act than Eat

TALENT +, TEMPERAMENT —, AND A PRANKSTER, TOO—THAT'S LORRE

By Hilary Lynn

"LORRE haunted the studio like a sick kitten during all those months of waiting for the right role to turn up," one of Columbia's executives commented. "He's miserable unless he's acting fourteen hours a day. Honestly, I believe it nourishes his body as well as his soul."

Yet one of the first things he asked me, stopping for a moment in his steady locomotion back and forth across his dressing room, was—

"Doesn't it strike you as just a little funny when you think of us actors eternally putting on and taking off make-up and spending the best part of our days and nights making funny faces? When you look at it from a grown-up point of view, acting is the most childish of professions, isn't it?" He eyed me seriously.

"The way I justify it to myself is that with me acting is like a drug and I am an incurable addict. I can't get along without it. I can't throw it off. I must act!"

THAT MUST was a still, small voice which prompted him when there seemed no earthly possibility of fulfilling his craving for the stage! Heaven knows, he didn't have the sort of face one associates with an actor. Like Cyrano de Bergerac his beauty was an inner thing. Not even the woman in love with him can call Peter Lorre remotely handsome.

The extreme poverty and narrow Puritanism in his family closed the doors of all show houses to him, even after his family had moved from the small Carpathian mountain village to Vienna. So that Peter Lorre has the distinction of being the only actor in Hollywood who had his first taste of the theatre, not from a seat in the gallery, but from a walk-on part on the stage! The first time he entered this "house of the devil," as his family probably termed it, he came in by the stage entrance. And he's been going in that way ever since!

He walked on to his first stage without a word to say (his original three-line part having been cut because he played it like Lady Macbeth in the private diary

(Continued on page 77)

INTIMATE!

MONDAY:

Mornings are all the same. I wake. I wonder why I never go to bed until the dawn comes up like thunder. I can't decide.

My mouth feels like the flannel underpinnings of a moth.

I ring for orange juice. Before it arrives, I open my door to look for the morning papers. I hope they will not be there. So that, item, I can find something to kick about. And, item, so that I won't have to read them. They are always there.

The orange juice arrives. I contemplate it skeptically. I don't know whether it will go—or rather, stay. I achieve it. I then settle myself against my three-cornered reading pillow (a Christmas present) and read the movie columns.

I rise and totter to the shower.

I go out of doors.

I survey my lawns with melancholy pleasure. I decide that I was just as happy in more modest diggings. I figure that it's all right, though, if only communists don't crawl under the wall—or tax-collectors over it—or termites into the house itself.

The other day a young lady, with healthy interests, asked me how one knows when one's house has termites. My answer scientifically was sound. I record it. I said, "If you should fall from your bedroom through to the

Photo by Abril Lamarque

AMUSING! SPICY! As given to Gladys Hall # of bill powell . .

cellar, that would be a definite termite symptom."

She said, "Oh, rully?"

I went to the swimming pool and shivered. I looked across to the Barthelmess estate. I wondered where Dick might be. I've had a gate cut through the wall connecting our two properties to save Dick walking all around the block. He came along presently. He asked me how I felt. I told him lousy. I said it was the last three. He seemed to understand. I asked him how he felt and he said swell. That made me feel like licking him on the courts so we played a few sets—but I didn't!

I felt that some liquid refreshment was indicated. I went to look for my keys—any keys. The keys to the locker by the pool. Or the locker in the game-room. Or the one in the dining-room. I never find them. Dick asked me if I ever knew where I put them, and I said that I didn't.

After luncheon I had an interview. I was on the stage for years and I've been asked all the questions so I only give interviews because I like some of the interviewers, and don't want to seem snarky.

The young woman asked me what I think of love. I said, "You are twenty years too late." She wanted to know what I meant by that. I told her that, when I was twenty I knew all about love, how its works went around. I could have talked about it for (Continued on page 80)

Retirement for Janet? Or will she turn from youthful roles to more mature ones such as "The Farmer Takes a Wife" with Henry Fonda? Right above, Al Scott, a recent beau, not a serious one.

what's ahead for

MOVIETOWN IS BAFFLED, FOR FAR MORE IS KNOWN

THE QUEEN is dead! Long live the Queen!

Are "They" saying that about Janet Gaynor?

For "They"—the shadowy, invisible host known as "They"—are muttering and mumbling, that is certain. "They" say that Janet no longer reigns as sovereign on the Fox lot. "They" say that young Rochelle Hudson is being groomed for the stellar place once held, undisputed, by Janet. When Janet stepped out of the cast of "Way Down East," all kinds of rumors reared their serpent heads. "They" muttered that Janet wasn't really as ill as the public was being led to believe. "They" theorized, knowing nothing, about the change of studio policy, when Mr. Sheehan stepped out and Mr. Zanuck stepped in. "They" said that they had heard "on good authority . . . that it was believed . . . that someone close to Janet had said. . . ." Just what it was that "They" had heard or that was believed or that had been said was somewhat incoherent.

And there hasn't been anyone close to Janet. No one save her mother and one or two very old, tried and tested friends who wouldn't misquote Janet if they were drawn and quartered for it. For Janet has kept her counsel well. She has gone ahead with her work and with her play, giving no confidences. More, far more is known about Garbo, here in Hollywood, than is known about Janet Gaynor. Like most girls of her type, she has been shy and secretive—and very clever.

Is the Queen dead—or isn't it merely that she stands with reluctant—or unreluctant—feet where the brook and river meet? The brook which was her shining girlhood. The river which begins to carry her to an uncharted womanhood?

Years ago a Golden Girl made her dainty debut before the screen public. She was called "America's Sweetheart." The whole world loved her. Elderly men, watching her, felt the pangs of nostalgia for their days which were no more. Elderly women watched her and they, too, felt the grip of that nostalgia for their own vanished yesterdays. Young men watched her and felt within their skeptical young hearts the stirring of an olden chivalry. Young girls watched her and faced their mirrored selves uneasily—lipstick and jazz and petting parties. They wondered whether . . . perhaps . . . perhaps not.

Her name is Mary Pickford.

Time and tide caught up with her. America's

By Faith Service

janet gaynor ?

ABOUT GARBO THAN ABOUT THIS RETICENT STAR

Sweetheart matured. Her white nostalgic star went into eclipse.

AND THEN another America's Sweetheart was smiling winsomely from the screen. Again men and women, girls and boys, vibrated to youth, wearing the white flower of innocence. When "Seventh Heaven" flashed its lyrical loveliness before our eyes, another white star was born and we watched it and said, "Yes, this is the way youth should be . . . and love . . . and life."

She is called Janet Gaynor.

No two girls on the screen have ever so captured the public—heart, imagination and box office—as have Mary and Janet. For they were youth when the world was young and the hearts of men gallant and the hearts of women pure. And we loved them for reminding us.

But youth is a dream and dreams fade and new dreams rise up to replace the old. And is it because they feel, uneasily, the dimming of that young dream that they murmur, uneasily, about Janet?

For a good many years Janet held the high at the box office. Month after month statistical ratings gave her top place. Then, a couple of years ago, the beloved Will Rogers caught up with her and they were teammates at the top—the winsome girl and the kindly man.

At this writing, Janet's box office has dropped one to two points. That is all. If she no longer appears at the apex, she never drops below third place. I believe that Clark Gable is one of the two to top her at this writing.

It may be because the Tree of Movie Life has so spread its branches that new ways, new faces, new enthusiasms occasionally force their lusty young life to the top. It may be lack of perfect story material —no second "Seventh Heaven."

But it is my belief that the change, if any, is simply that Janet has grown up. And Janet, the woman, is beginning to assert herself. When the mature woman steps in and takes the star personality, which is herself, in hand, some changes are bound to occur. If the studio backs her up as she enters upon a new phase, then a new lease of life should be guaranteed. In Janet's case, and just at this possible juncture in her life, a new studio regime came in. Unsettled conditions little man, what next?

(Continued on page 84)

Freddie Bartholomew's promotion to stardom didn't ruffle him a bit since his allowance remains 5 cents a day.

By Franc Dillon

FREDDIE'S FUTURE LOOKS EVEN BRIGHTER THAN HIS STARRING CONTRACT

"WELL, young man, you're a star now," Louis B. Mayer announced to eleven-year-old Freddie Bartholomew.

"What does that mean?" Freddie asked.

"Why, it means you're important to us," the older man explained. "It means you will get more money, for one thing."

"You mean I'll get more than five cents a day to spend?" the child asked eagerly, for to him money is important only insofar as it affects his spending money. When informed that his allowance would remain at its present figure, the value of stardom took an immediate slump in Freddie's mind, but remained at par in the minds of the M-G-M executives, who consider this child one of their most important stars.

For Freddie was not made a star at the expense of money and years of time. He earned the title and all that goes with it in one picture by his portrayal of David Copperfield. Since then he has received more fan mail than "even Clark Gable," a wide-eyed girl in the fan-mail department reported.

Popular demand made him a star, a star with equal rights to those of Jean Harlow, Nelson Eddy, Wally Beery and other top-notchers. You saw him with Garbo in "Anna Karenina," and after that he will be the star of any picture in which he appears.

"How do you like the idea of supporting a mere child, who has made but one or two pictures?" I asked an actor who has been one of America's finest, both on stage and screen, for forty years or more.

"I CAN'T say I like it," the actor replied honestly. "But in all fairness, I must say Freddie deserves it. He had a great break—a break that comes to one out of hundreds of actors—but he was more than lucky. He was able to make good. He is not only a great artist, but a charming, unspoiled boy."

Now actors are known to have what is called "professional jealousy"—which is really no different from the common, garden variety of jealousy—and such an honest tribute from a fellow-actor is as rare as it is greatly to be desired. Freddie is a genuine favorite at the studio where he works. His contemporaries are constantly bringing him gifts, doing him little favors, vying with each other for his affection.

Recently Constance Collier, the famous English actress, presented him with a cocker spaniel, "a relative of Flush," Freddie will tell you proudly, which he promptly named Concoll. "Con for Constance and coll for Collier, see?" he explains.

Miss Collier (Continued on page 64)

The Mad Marx Brothers, Chico, Harpo and Groucho, in "A Night at the Opera."

By Nanette Kutner

AUDIENCES HAVE HYSTERICS, WHILE WIVES BECOME HYSTERICAL!

don't marry a marx brother!

THIS IS a story about some crazy people. In other words, the Marx Brothers, who treat everybody with equal and impartial disrespect. Whether he be executive, co-worker or relative, each is in line for a practical joke at one time or another.

The Marxes are natural comedians. They never quit. That same erratic brand of tomfoolery which has successfully, year after year, sent audiences into delighted hysterics, is applied around the house. So, at home, they can be a trial.

Recently, Ruth, Groucho's wife, gave an elaborate dinner party. Among the guests were two whom Groucho had never met.

Prior to their arrival, Ruth warned him concerning his behavior. "I want to make a nice impression. They're very important people," admonished Mrs. Groucho Marx.

She really should have known better. Such a remark addressed to any of the Marx clan, will, with unfailing certainty, defeat its purpose. Dignity to them is like raw human flesh to hungry cannibals. They devour it whole.

Unaware of an impending bomb, Mrs. Groucho dressed for the party. And she put on an outfit, which, from Hollywood reports, was considered the latest fashion—lounging-dinner pajamas. Except for their wide trousered legs they resembled an evening gown—silver cloth and satin with a low-cut back.

AFTER SPINNING about for her husband's approval, and admonishing him to "Please hurry up and dress; they'll all be here any minute!", she left him to greet the company.

An half hour later, Groucho made his appearance. At the moment Ruth was in the pantry, supervising the cocktails. She heard sudden and loud laughter. No one needed to tell her. A Marx was up to his tricks.

She ran into the living-room. There she saw Groucho confronting their guests, attired in a short smoking jacket, and the blue-and-white striped trousers of his sleeping pajamas.

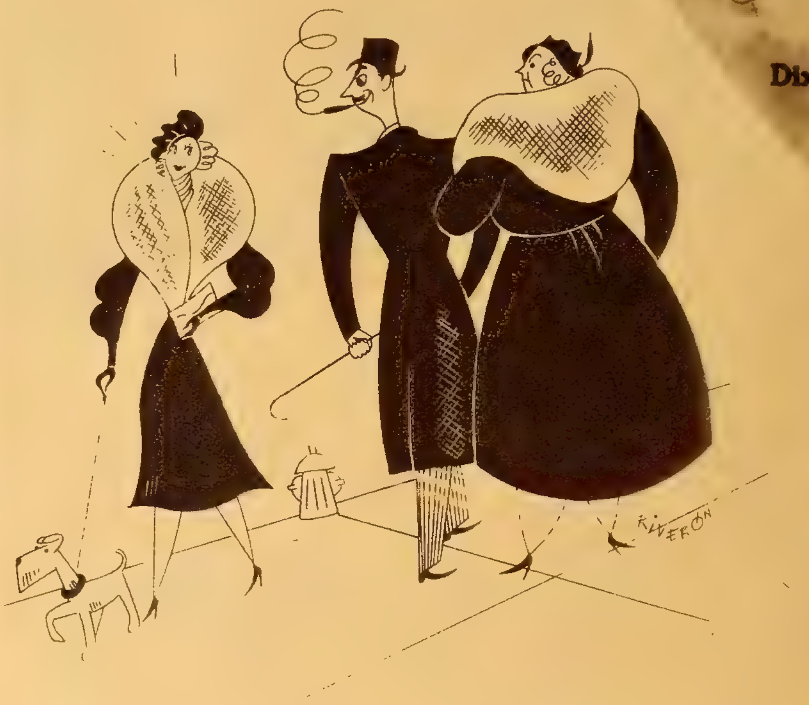
"Hello," he blandly called. "If you can wear your pajamas, I guess I can wear mine!"

For the remainder of that evening, he did so.

Episodes of like dizziness are no uncommon events. When they motored to Agua Caliente, Ruth, who loves to dance, and claims Groucho (Continued on page 69)

how to hold your husband

Dixie Lee Crosby



BY MADAME SYLVIA

EVERY WOMAN can hold her husband! But not every woman knows how to do it, nor does she realize that it's as much of a career as any nine to five job in an office. Instead of the business woman's eight hours a day, a wife's job is twenty-four hours long.

You know the old adage used to be, "The way to a man's heart is through his stomach." That's still a bit of wisdom to bear in mind—but, while you give him what he wants to eat and plenty of it, be sure that he isn't allowed to become sluggish or grouchy. And you be smart about your diet, too. Don't eat your head off, stuffing on sweets and starches, so that, before you realize it, you are the one who looks fat and acts sluggish. If you do, be forewarned now, you don't stand a chance in competition with the slimmer gals he will meet in his daily contacts.

There is nothing so wonderful as being a pal to your husband. It's the perfect relationship in any marriage. But no man wants a pal, if she weighs a ton. And you can't be a real pal when overweight limits your activities—you have to be alert in body as well as mind.

KEEP YOUR husband making love to you! Isn't that what all of you hope you can do the day you marry? But how many of you can honestly say that it is true today? What's wrong then? Have you let him keep his individuality or have you tried to remodel him? Don't tell him how he ought to be. Remember that you fell in love with him as he was. And he fell in love with you, as you were (probably a cute, slim baby) so before you start making him over, take a long look at yourself, and be that slim baby again. Don't nag at him, nag at yourself so hard that you stick to diets and keep at those exercises of Sylvia's!

Above all else, be regular. Once, I read a lot of nonsense about holding your husband by the simple—and I mean simple in the sappy sense—trick of waking up in the morning, applying fresh make-up, slipping back into bed and waiting for your husband to awake and murmur, "Ah, how ravishing!" Such bunk, as if any man wouldn't realize what a hoax it all was. You don't need any such slim dodges if you stay slender, keep your skin clear and fresh with health, your hair glossy from constant, careful

DON'T LET A SLIMMER GAL GET YOUR HUSBAND WHEN YOU CAN

Irene Dunne Griffin

Joan Bennett Markey

grooming. You can't help looking grand, without benefit of make-up, if you follow such a regime.

Don't listen to that rubbish about "preserving" the illusion of slimness. It can't be done. Don't even try for an illusion, make it a reality and you'll get along better.

Look at your Hollywood favorites. Nine times out of ten, a star can hold her husband as long as she wants him, all because she's learned the art of staying attractive. Of course, every time I mention a happily married Hollywood couple I keep my fingers crossed and watch for the first divorce rumors! It's hard to stay happy in Hollywood where everybody butts into your private life. But it's hard to stay happily married in Jones Center for the identical reason.

I'll risk a chance on saying that Joan Bennett can hold Gene Markey's love as long as she likes. Why? Well, look at her picture. She's cute, she's slender. And you couldn't find a fault with her gleaming hair, brushed to a trim cap. She looks regular—nothing artificial about her. Her eyes are, above all, beautiful but they are something more than that—they look at you honestly, unwavering. Look at her lovely hands, her perfectly groomed nails. She's exciting to look at, think how wonderful she must seem to the man who has been her husband for over four years.

JOAN'S a real pal. Gene adores her. You'll often find him visiting her set when she's working. He brings her silly little gifts. They are a family combination as well as careerists—don't forget Melinda and Diana—but they preserve romance by laughing and playing together. They're both the matrimonial tops with me.

Then there's Irene Dunne. Do you think you could handle your marriage as smartly as she has with three thousand miles separating you most of the time? Irene has a husband whose dental profession keeps him in New York, her work ties her to Hollywood. Yet neither of them has asked the other to give up his or her work. Instead, each keeps from interfering with the other and they look forward eagerly to their frequent reunions. When they meet it's like another honeymoon. I wouldn't recommend this except for (Continued on page 83)

DIET AND EXERCISE BACK THAT GIRLISH FIGURE YOU ONCE HAD

Every extra makes up as carefully for a scene as the star, herself.

ILLUSTRATED BY CARL MUELLER

Confessions of an extra girl

AND, IN CLOSING, OUR EXTRA GIRL TELLS WHAT SCREEN CHANCES AWAIT YOU IN HOLLYWOOD

CONCLUSION

FIVE YEARS ago, when I came to Hollywood so full of hope and ambition, you will recall the pledge that I scribbled upon a piece of paper. That pledge, to myself, was to the effect that within a year, if I had not become a leading woman, I would return to my home. Today, as I conclude this chapter of my career, I am still in Hollywood, still an extra and with little hope of becoming anything more important in even another five years! The pledge is lost. My mother has died, my father re-married. Now Hollywood is my only home. Even Bradley, the man who begged me to give up my idea of a career to marry him, has gone to New York. No doubt he has lost faith in me and I have lost a finer career than Hollywood will ever offer—that of a wife and mother.

As I jot down these depressing facts, telling myself over and over again that I am only an extra among thousands of extras, a hope still lurks in my heart. And there you have the real tragedy of Hollywood—false hope. For, although five years of bitter experience should have convinced me that my case is hopeless, still I have the fixed idea that some day, some time, I'll get the chance to show I can act! I continue to grasp at that will-o-the-wisp, fame! Nor must you think that I am unique in this—there are thousands like me right here in Hollywood. Girls who struggle on, barely making a living, eating the crumbs from the fat loaf while hoping that the whole loaf will be theirs some day.

I promised that in this concluding chapter I would tell you girls how much opportunity I think there is for you in Hollywood. Therefore, let me analyze the situation for you (Continued on page 79) don't take advice!

Helen Vinson, luckily for her, followed her instincts.

Paul Muni takes the do-as-I-please attitude always.

Myrna Loy's first hunch proved right in her recent studio fracas.

Remember Cagney's rebellious days? But he's tops now.

LEARN A PROFITABLE LESSON FROM STARS WHO SHUNNED IT

By Mary E. Parks

THE OTHER day on a movie set I saw a little newcomer, who had just signed her first contract, sitting at the feet of an elderly actress, eagerly listening to her.

When she arose and came over to me her eyes were shining. "She's so marvelous," the girl said, indicating the actress, "and she has been giving me such wonderful advice."

I smiled at this touching tribute, but what I wanted to shout was, "Don't take it, if you want to get ahead. Whatever you do, don't take it!" For I have seen "good advice" ruin hundreds of Hollywood careers. And I believe statistics will bear me out that the people with the biggest box-office appeal are those who have thrown suggestions and rules to the California winds.

The point is, I believe, that the sort of person who must go to others for guidance hasn't the force, the vitality, or the courage, to face the rigorous demands made by life and careers. And there is within great artists some innate intuition which makes the small voices of their own souls the only ones worth heeding. Let's take a look!

Remember when Jimmy (Continued on page 82)

Four ideas that run high in fashion but low in cost. Billie Burke's attractive rhinestones with a new way to place your hair clip. Anne Darling's red bead and rhinestone set. Billie again in a lamé jacket and flowers bunched at the neck. Virginia Bruce's simple felt hat with fetching veil.

Star Stuff on a shoestring

ANY YOUNG, ambitious extra in Hollywood today can tell you that it takes wit, perseverance and more than a share of close figuring to dress like a star on a spasmodic income of a few dollars and fewer cents a month. You girls with your weekly pay envelopes, no matter what amount they contain, are far better off than they—you know how much you can plan on, they never know! They may work three days one week and only one the next.

And there's hardly a big star today who won't break down and confide the rigid economies she had to carry out in order to feed and clothe herself well during those first long steps toward stardom. Many a time a few yards of a good fabric, bought in a remnant sale, were sewed into a dress that helped keep up a smart face during the grilling round of the casting offices. Just such an economy was resorted to by Merle Oberon only a few short years ago. She told me that she used to wait for sales of fine fabrics and then would buy enough for a dress but would have to wait for a season or so to roll by before the fabric was seasonable again to make into a dress. She would buy woolens and velvets toward spring, then save them to make up in the fall—and in turn, she would buy cottons in the summer sales and wait until the next spring to sew them into dresses.

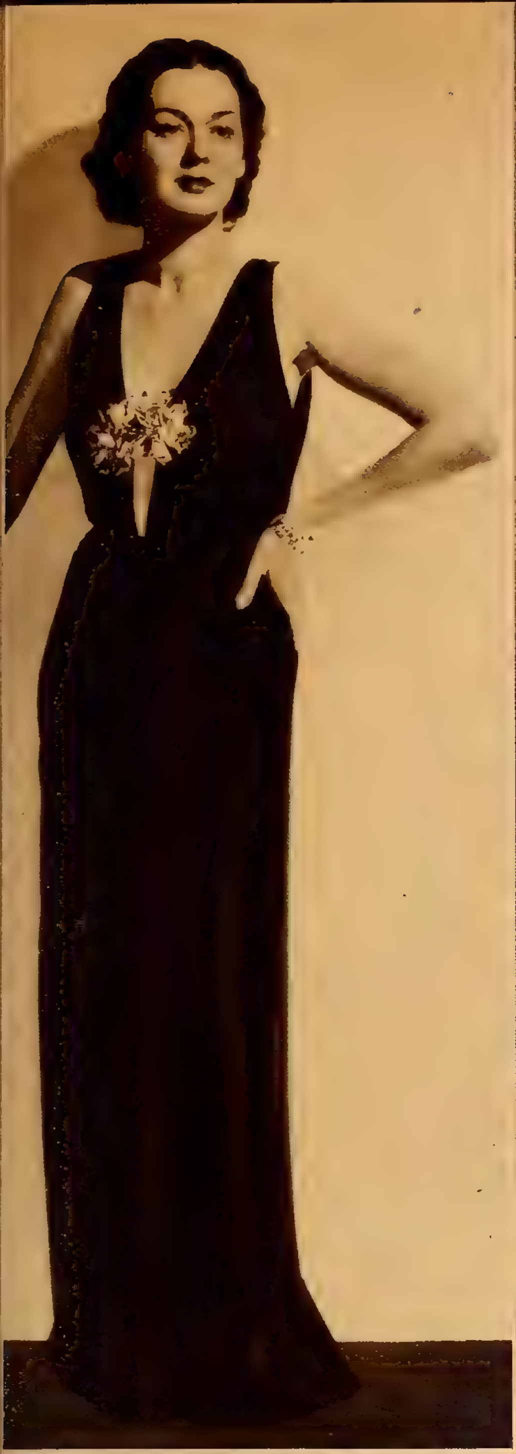
Frances Drake likes to design her own clothes even now because she got in the habit of making charming clothes before she could buy them. And there are many more who get a kick out of remembering the penny-saving dodges they practised in leaner times.

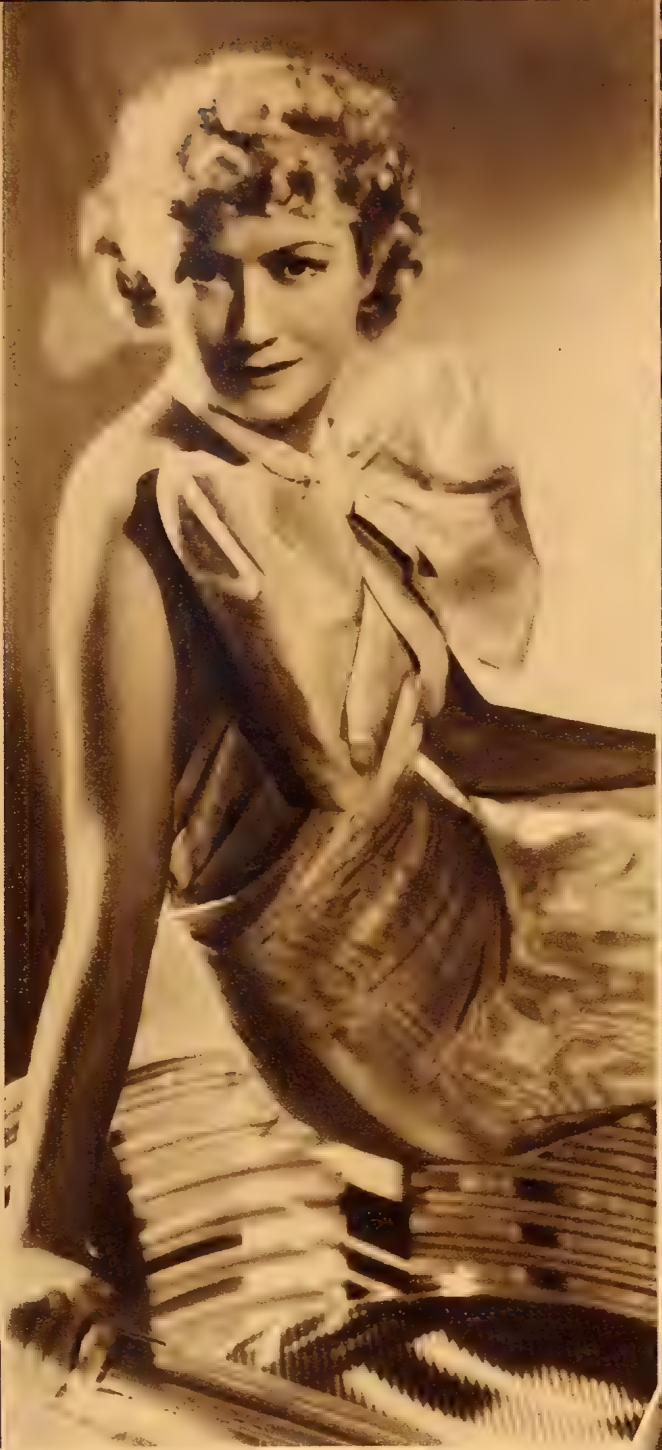
Dressing well with a firm hand on the purse zipper is like going on a diet—you have to pass up the pastries of the fashion output for the more homely vegetables!

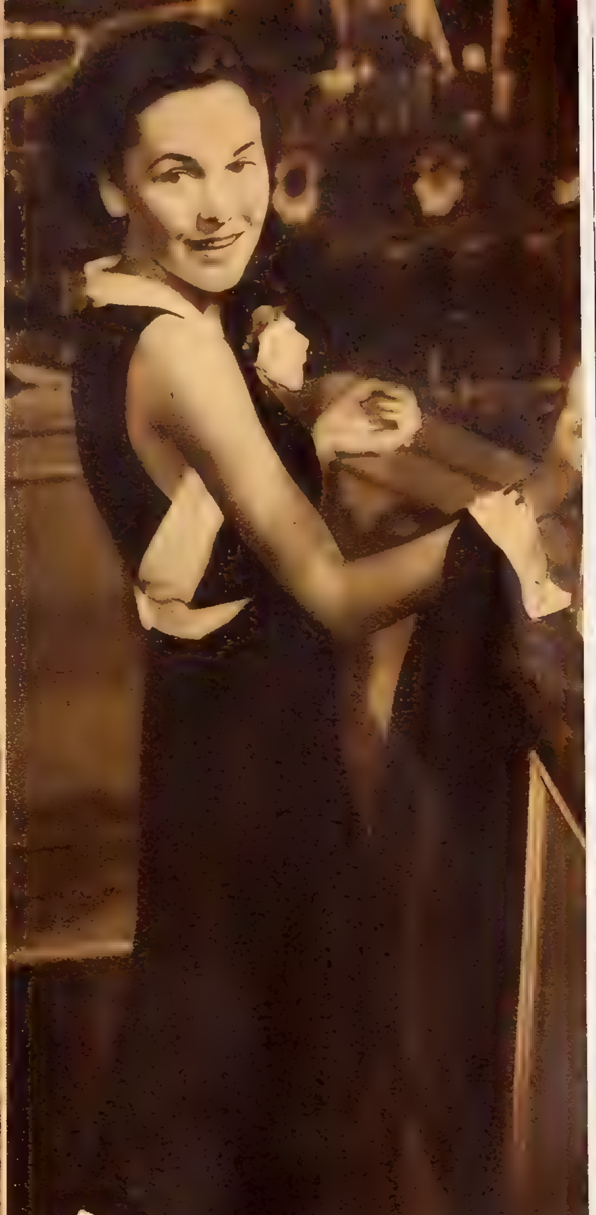
FOR SOME time now, with this article in mind, I have asked every star I met to tell me what rules she considered important in trying to dress on a shoestring. And so I give you the ideas of some of the cleverest and smartest of the cinema gals—everyone questioned was a former member of that large sorority of sisters who live on next to nothing a year!

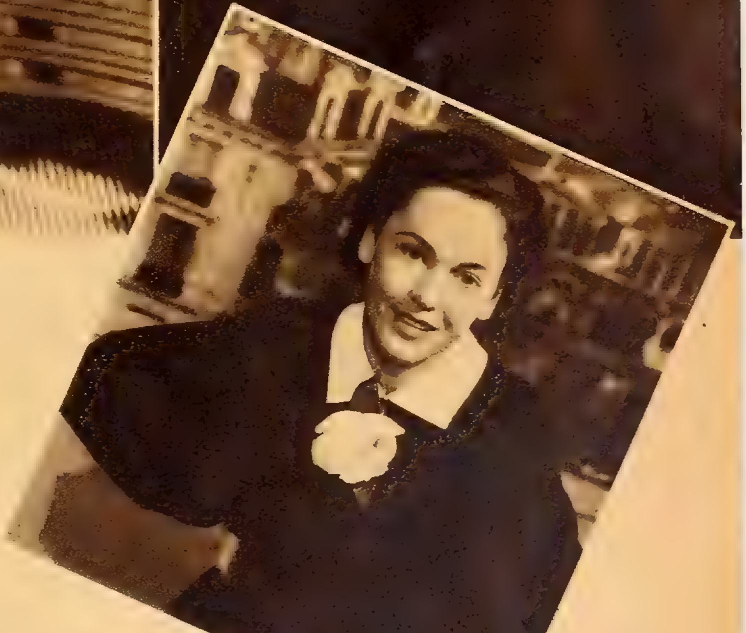
From sophisticated Claudette Colbert to young Anita Louise, eight stars out of ten put a tailored suit as a must on their budget lists. Not just any tailored suit, either, but one that is tops in fabric and tailoring. 'Scrimp somewhere else,' they all chorus, but don't try to spend your fewest dollars on your suit. They unanimously select the semi-mannish style, in a good worsted, that is so popular in Hollywood. A suit that is neither sporty, nor elaborate but one that by its very simplicity can change its personality by a dozen little accessory tricks such as a bright scarf, a new piece of costume jewelry, a flower boutonniere and an infinite interchange of inexpensive blouses, sweaters and vestees. That's the frugal Hollywood suit that goes right through the day and often into an informal evening date. And it's a suit that goes right around the year with you from spring through the cool days of summer, through fall and then slyly slips under your winter coat and kids the innocent bystander that it's a brand new outfit in each appearance!

HOLLYWOOD SHOWS YOU HOW TO MAKE ECONOMIZING QUITE









When you can't have several evening dresses Rosalind Russell recommends one simple black one like hers, above, which can be infinitely varied by changing accessories. Black crepe with gold leather gardenias, very graceful but devoid of fussy details. And for an all year 'round evening gown, as smart in summer as in winter, Miriam Hopkins suggests white moire taffeta with only a huge self fabric bow for trimming. Maureen O'Sullivan's practical thought is a dual personality frock. Black crepe trimmed with white which can be formal without its jacket and just right for a Sunday evening supper or cocktail gathering with its wide-sleeved, split-down-the-back jacket.

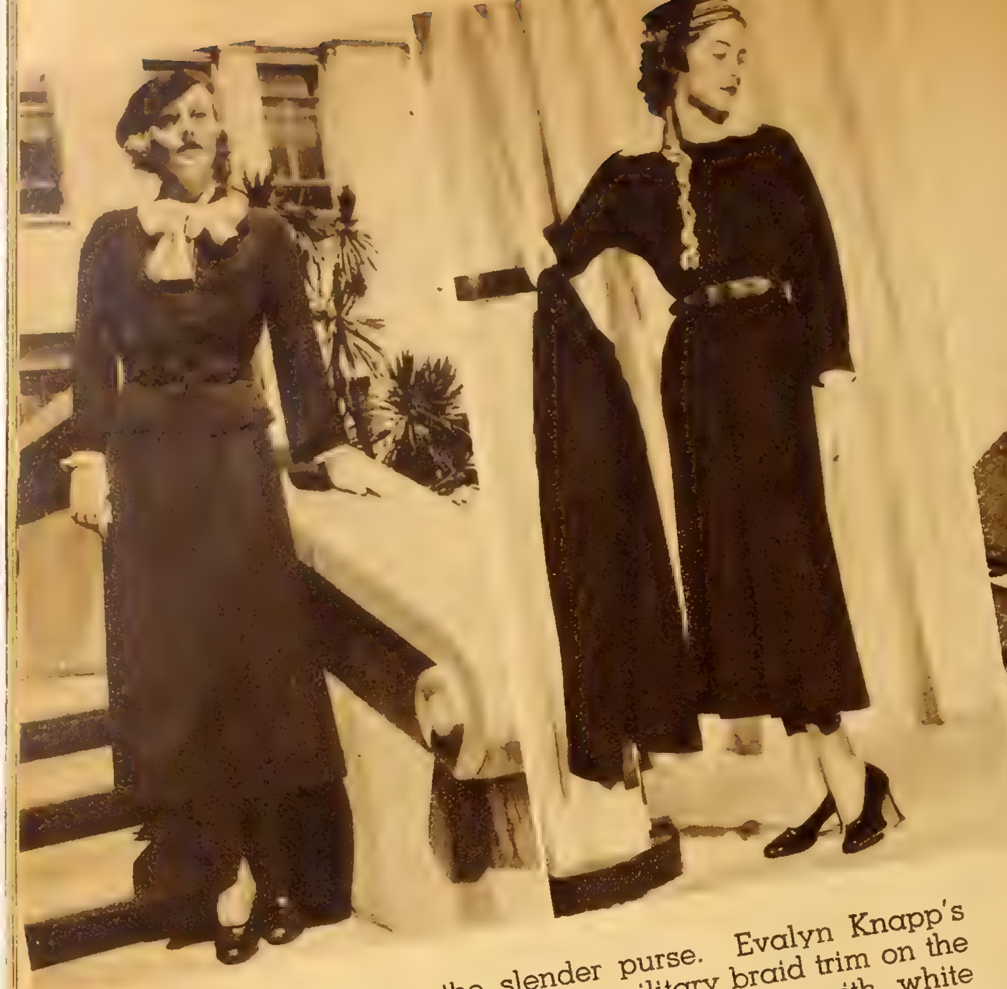
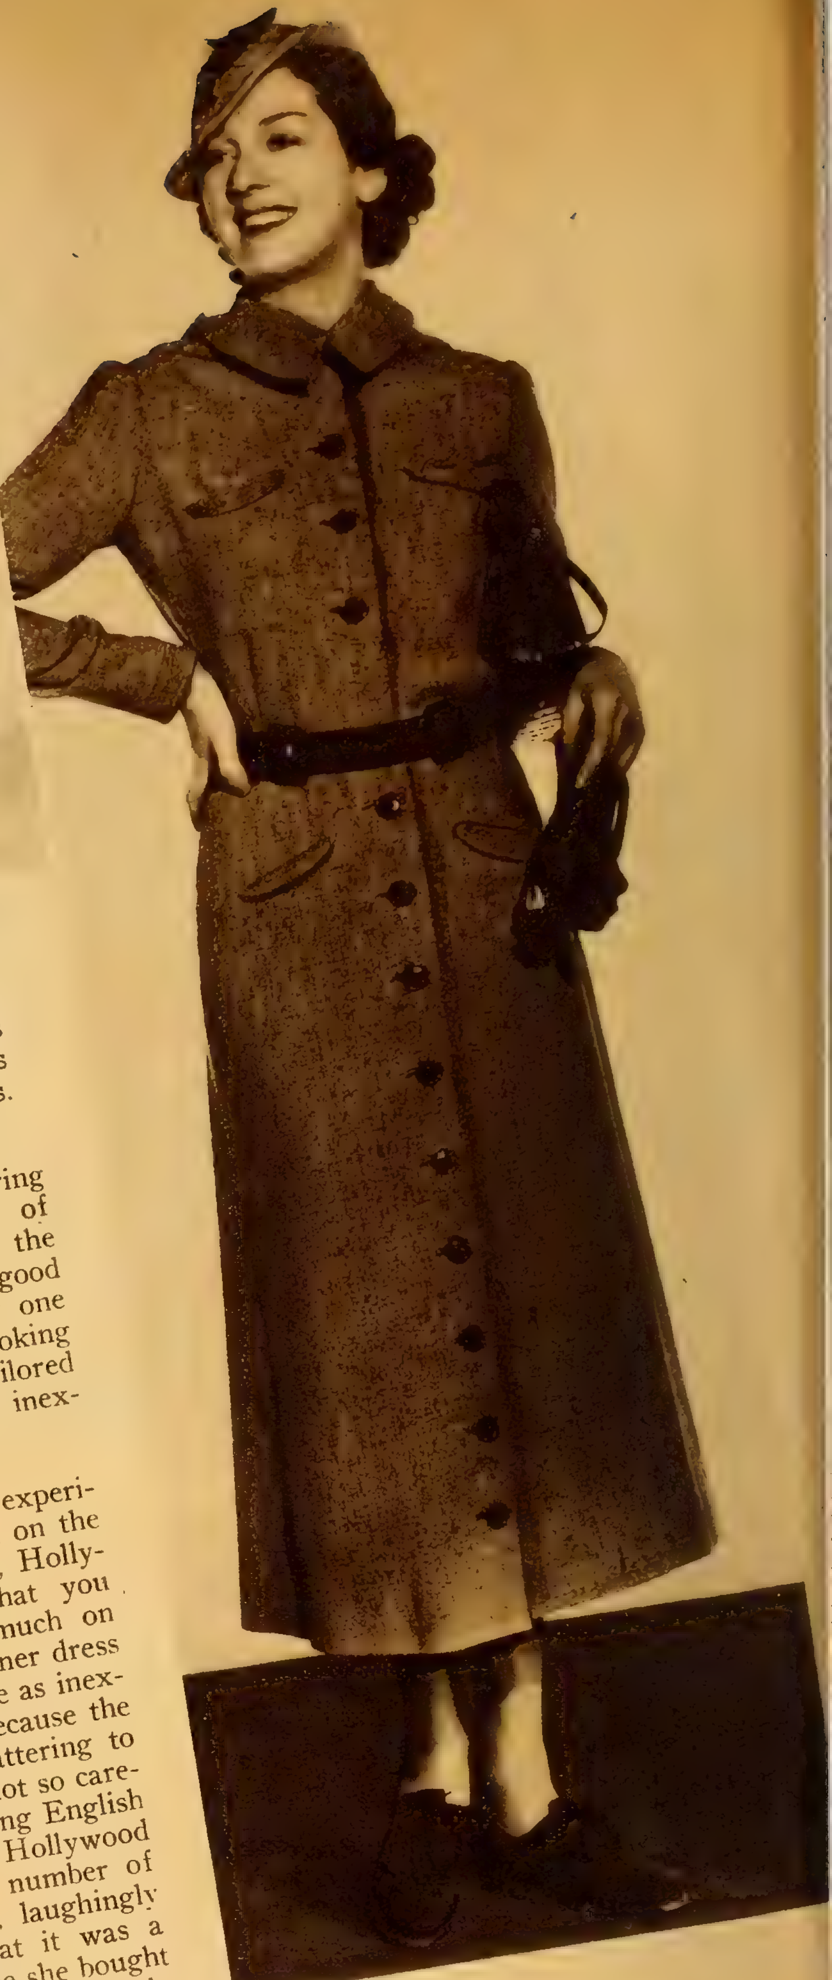
Just as you can't scrimp on your suit, you must follow the same rule about your accessories, according to the Hollywood budgeters. One good set a season in a shade that will harmonize with everything in your closet is a sound investment. Good shoes, a nice handbag and one good hat—a trio that will reincarnate any ancient dud and

PAINLESS WITH A DOZEN OR SO SMART IDEAS!

By Adelia Bird





Three daytime gems for the slender purse. Evalyn Knapp's two-piece silk crepe jacket dress with military braid trim on the jacket. Marsha Hunt's one-piece black woolen with white accents and a cape that can be worn in milder weather but is not essential to the costume's chic. And Rosalind Russell's tailored gray woolen which permits many accessory changes.

add that all important new look to this year's wardrobe gem.

HAUNT THE between-season sales is another star pointer. Often you can pick up a perfect beauty of a dress for five dollars. It may be a little soiled or a little shopworn but it still looks like the original price tag—the cleaning and retacking is a mere item of your own labor. And you have the fun of knowing that you have a gown that you never could have contemplated at its original pricing.

You may not be able to save pennies then on suits or the basic accessories but — and here's where Hollywood stars are canny—you can make it up on the following items. Fabric gloves, rather than kid or suede ones. A dollar will buy you a really finely made fabric glove and several cents under a dollar will purchase serviceable ones. Hose is next, it's nice to ogle the sheerest of chiffons but long wear and economy sit upon the service sheer counters. Glove silk and rayon undies are well styled and very practical these days. They minimize the laundry bills and they wear marvelously. For every day they are one of our shoestring economies with a nice set of silk ones thrown in for the dress-up costumes. One good hat can be augmented by one of those school-girl looking felts that suits your tailored clothes and gives you an inexpensive jauntiness.

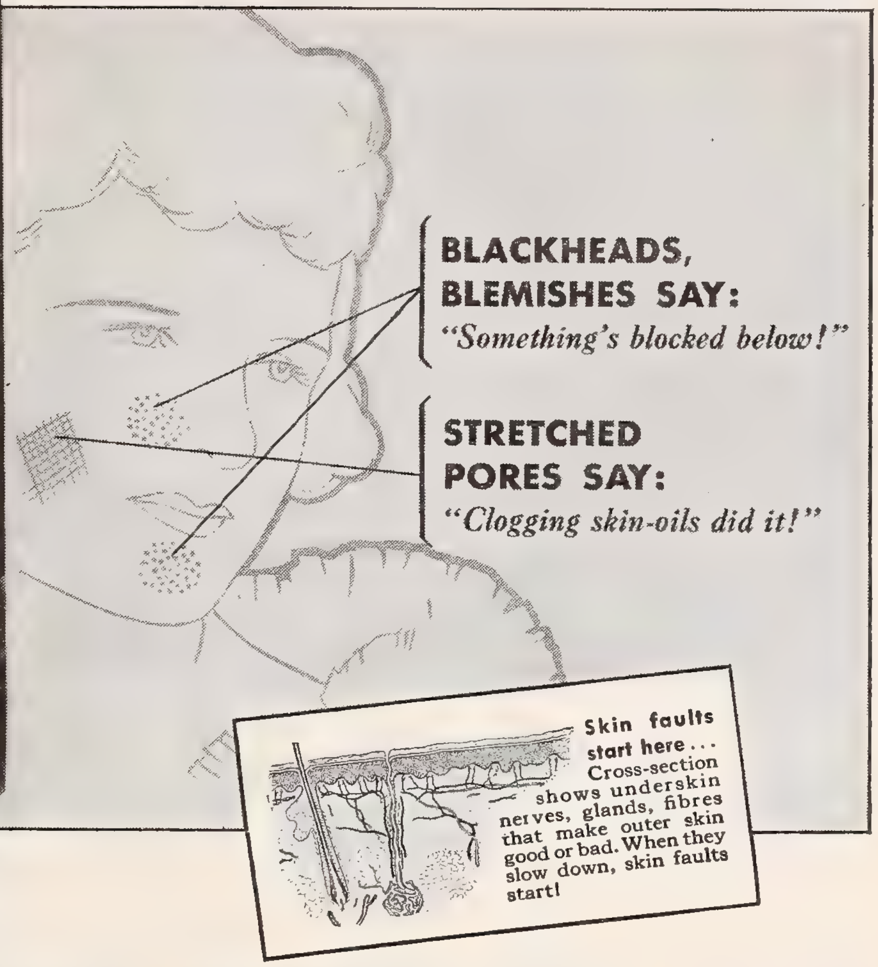
AND OUT of long experience of needing to turn on the glamor in the evening, Hollywood will tell you that you don't have to spend much on formal clothes. A dinner dress or a party gown can be as inexpensive as you like because the evening lights are flattering to cheaper fabrics and not so careful sewing. One young English star, who amazed Hollywood by the variety and number of her evening gowns, laughingly admitted to me that it was a terrific hoax because she bought the most inexpensive little dresses—six of which would barely cost what one of Colbert's or Shearer's would. Evening accessories can be cheap, too. A bit of glitter in an evening bag will cover up its economical pricing. And even the most lavish spender would not consider buying very expensive evening slippers. You have to have too many and the hazards of being stepped upon are too great!

One important item must not be forgotten—and that is the winter coat. It is a bugaboo in every budget. However, one good coat every two or (Continued on page 78)

See knitting offer on page 52.

"BAD SKIN" means—A Lazy Under Skin

Miss Helen Mitchell Stedman, of an old Boston family, says: "Pond's Cold Cream makes my skin much finer. Pores don't show!"



BLACKHEADS, BLEMISHES SAY:
"Something's blocked below!"
STRETCHED PORES SAY:
"Clogging skin-oils did it!"
Skin faults start here . . . Cross-section shows underskin nerves, glands, fibres that make outer skin good or bad. When they slow down, skin faults start!

Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel III

Not a single flaw in the skin of this beautiful young Society woman! She says: "The last thing before bed—every morning, too—I use Pond's Cold Cream. It stimulates and tones up my skin . . . Blackheads and blemishes just never come!"

Underlying glands, nerves, fibres . . . need rousing with this deep-skin cream

TODAY, stand close to some girl you know. Gaze right at the skin on her nose, on her chin. Isn't it awful?—the way coarse pores and blackheads stand out!

Your own face gets the same "third degree" every time you're at arm's length. People think, Why don't you do something about your skin?

Yet it's not the skin they see that's at fault. It's your lazy underskin! Tiny glands are overtaxed . . . The oil they give off is thick . . . clogs the pores on its way out. What follow are the blackheads, coarse pores that ruin your good looks!

Even heartbreaking lines and sagging contours are just the outward signs of an underskin "let-down"!

Stop Skin Faults . . .

But you can quicken that underskin—rouse it, set it to work. Yes, you can!—with this deep-skin cream of Pond's.

Pond's Cold Cream contains specially processed oils which go straight to the underskin. Even as you smooth it on, you see it go in, come out—thickened with grayish dirt, stale make-up. Now your skin is clean. Clear to its depths! Now smooth on more Pond's Cold Cream. Pat it in sharply with firm finger tips. This way you rouse that lazy underskin. Nerves, glands and fibres "step lively" . . . flush your skin with new fault-fighting vigor! Keep this up. See how quickly bad skin becomes "a good complexion."

Tip-ends of blackheads loosen. Deep-lodged matter comes out . . . fine texture takes the place of every blemish. Even critical eyes can't find anything wrong!

For a Beautiful Skin

Every Night, pat in Pond's Cold Cream. Watch it bring out dirt, make-up, secretions. Wipe off. Pat in more cream briskly. Your underskin feels it . . . gets awakened. Your outer skin shows it . . . blooms fresh, unblemished!

Every Morning, and always before make-up, renew this newly-won freshness with Pond's Cold Cream. See it brighten your skin—soften it. Now powder can't possibly catch or flake!

Try this cream without delay. Pond's Cold Cream is pure. Germs cannot live in it.

SPECIAL 9-TREATMENT TUBE
and 3 other Pond's Beauty Aids

POND'S Dept. A-50, Clinton, Conn.
Rush special tube of Pond's Cold Cream, enough for 9 treatments, with generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ to cover postage and packing.

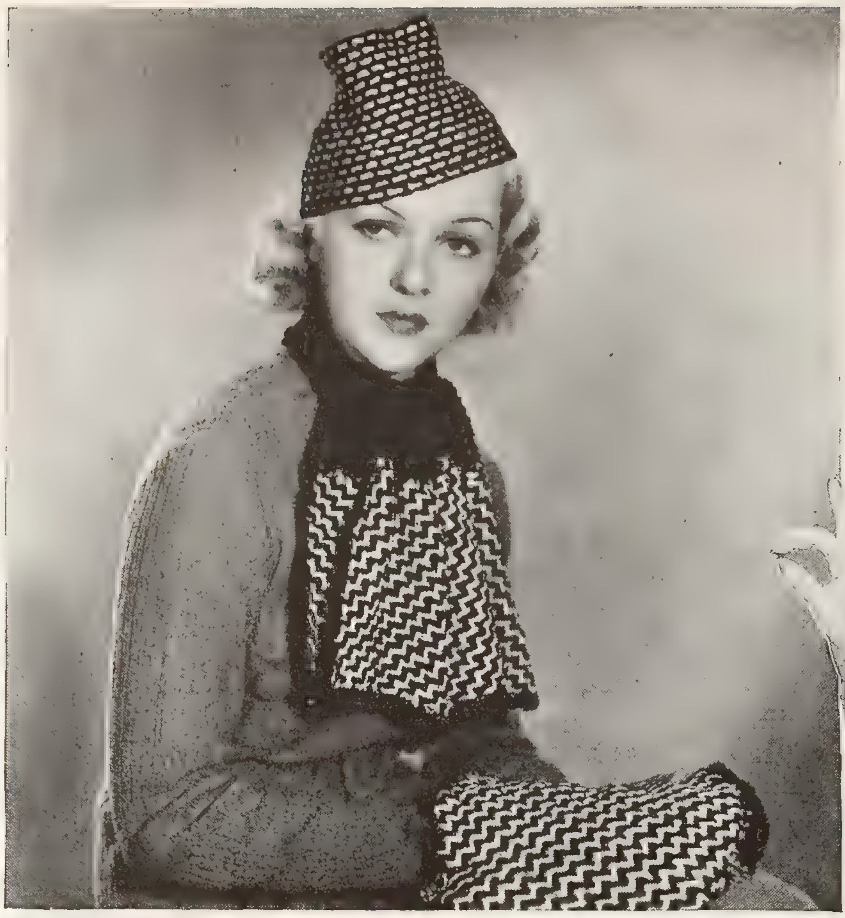
Name____________________________

Street____________________________

City____________________State________

Copyright, 1935, Pond's Extract Company

YOU DON'T HAVE TO KNOW HOW TO KNIT, WE TEACH YOU!



3.

Patricia Ellis (3) and Genevieve Tobin (4) model these attractive articles which they have made. Pat shows you a crocheted hat, scarf and bag set. Genevieve models a stunning one-piece green dress.

it's thrifty to knit your clothes

THE KNITTING craze has taken Hollywood by storm. When you walk onto a set it isn't the click-click of the camera you hear—it's the click-click of knitting needles!

It's the smart thing to do, but more than that it's the thrifty thing, too. After all, any of you can buy a dress, but to look really stunning in something you've made yourself for next to nothing—that's a thrill. It's a sad star these days who cannot boast of at least one or two knit things that "I've done myself, my dear!"

Because we suspected that you would want to join the Hollywood knitting bee and would like to make duplicates of some of the star knitting fashions, we have asked Patricia Ellis and Genevieve Tobin, two of the most skillful knitters in the film colony, to let us use their directions.

Last month you had two fashions to send for, this month you have two more. If you want last month's instructions, send for them at the same time that you indicate your preferences for these. Model 1, last month, was Patricia's beret and bag set. No. 2 was Genevieve's two-piece costume with scarf.

Our instructions tell you how to cast on and cast off stitches; how to purl, to knit, to slip a stitch, to increase and decrease, as well as specific instructions on each individual garment.

The crocheted accessories are fully explained, also.

And just a word about finishing your knitted (Continued on page 82)

4.

LET US SOLVE YOUR XMAS GIFT PROBLEMS

If you wish, we will post any of these books in a handsome Xmas package, enclosing your gift card, to any address in the United States in time for Xmas.

For Reading Enjoyment • For Xmas Gifts • For Your Library

All Prices Postpaid

THE RUBAIYAT OF OMAR KHAYYAM

"A book of verses underneath the bough,
A jug of wine, a loaf of bread—and thou."

This is a beautiful edition of this famous romantic classic. It has beautiful colored illustrations. Everyone should have it and it is ideal as a gift, being suitable for men and women, young and old. Gold stamped, leatherette cover. Regular Price $1.50 Our Price .60

WOMAN'S GUIDE TO HEALTH AND HOME REMEDIES
MARY MELENDY, M.D.

This 400-page book gives complete information on all matters pertaining to

1. The Female Human Body with special emphasis on sex.
2. Beauty, Grace, etc.
3. Care and management of infants and children.
4. Prevention, treatment and cure of diseases.

Regular Price $2.00 Our Price .60

THE HEPTAMERON—MARGARET OF NAVARRE
This great classic is like Boccaccio's DECAMERON, containing a succession of exciting, absorbing and amusing stories many of which are rather sophisticated. This imported, unexpurgated edition is illustrated and contains over 450 pages. Regular Price $4.00 Our Price $1.00

LOVE LYRICS FROM FIVE CENTURIES—G. G. HARROP
This book contains the glorious and immortal love-poems that have become part of the language of romance and the art of love-making. It is a splendid de luxe book and it comes boxed. The perfect gift for your sweetheart. Regular Price $5.00 Our Price $2.00

LOVE LETTERS OF A LIVING POET
BENJAMIN DE CASSERES
A passion growing every day more lovely, a devotion unfaltering in its outpourings and an all-encompassing love burn steadily through these letters. They are delightful examples of the perfect love letters and at the same time are a beautiful love-story.DeCasseres is a well-known poet. Regular Price $2.50 Our Price .60

MADAM BOVARY—GUSTAVE FLAUBERT
This French novel created a sensation when it was banned upon publication 50 years ago. But the author told his story of the French habits and customs of infidelity and great love in such a fine style that this book was recognized as great literature and the ban was removed. This edition is one of the great Crown Classics. It has a beautiful two-tone cover, gold stamped, wrapped in cellophane. Regular Price $5.00 Our Price $1.25

DON'T DELAY
MAIL TODAY

New York Bargain Book Co., Dept. B
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

I enclose Cash ☐
Money Order ☐ in full payment for the books checked below:

☐ THE RUBAIYAT OF OMAR KHAYYAM $.60
☐ WOMAN'S GUIDE TO HEALTH AND HOME REMEDIES $.60
☐ THE HEPTAMERON $1.00
☐ LOVE LYRICS FROM FIVE CENTURIES $2.00
☐ LOVE LETTERS OF A LIVING POET $.60
☐ MADAM BOVARY $1.25

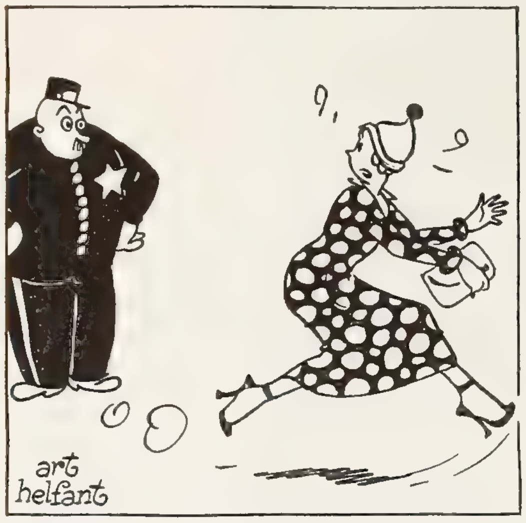
☐ Please send the books checked above direct to:

Name..
Address..
City...State.....................

If you prefer, we will send your books as a gift package with your card enclosed. Check here ☐ if you want this special service and instead of your name above give name of person to whom package is to be sent. Be sure to send your gift card enclosure with this order.

between you and me

LIVELY, ENLIGHTENING LETTERS FROM FANS TO INTEREST EVERYONE



Movie-set rules are not made to be broken, as this fan learned on her first visit to a studio.

BARRED FOR LIFE!

I've just returned from the Coast where it was my pleasure (?) to visit a major movie studio set. Here are some of the rules a visitor must observe:

Don't look at the actors, they hate being stared at. Don't attempt to get autographs, stars resent being asked. Don't snoop onto sets, somebody might get suspicious of you. Don't make any noises, a sneeze at the wrong moment may cost the studio thousands. Don't open your mouth, someone may think you're about to speak and get nervous prostration. Don't lean against a building, it may be made of cardboard and topple over. Don't stay in one place too long, you may be formulating a plan to cut off Harlow's platinum locks or shave off Menjou's continental moustachio.

Confusing? It was to me, too, but, being a sort of devil at heart, I decided to break one of the strictest rules. I spotted Clark Gable and had a brief conversation with him. I was somewhat averse to approaching him, his pirate make-up for "Mutiny on the Bounty" looked so fierce, but he was very kind and agreeable. But I had hardly said "How do you do?" when I saw the evil eye of a studio official nearly pop out of its socket and I ran as fast as I could for the studio gates. I'm barred for life!—Hollywood Visitor.

RAFT NOT A CREAMPUFF

Every time I see my idea of a man and not a "creampuff" my heart melts. I have not missed one of George Raft's pictures and never will. Many people call him "a barrel of vaseline," but by saying that they are merely acknowledging their ignorance. He is in my opinion the one and only good actor on the screen and I don't think anyone can top him as far as acting is concerned.—Beatrice Sarafian, Detroit, Mich.

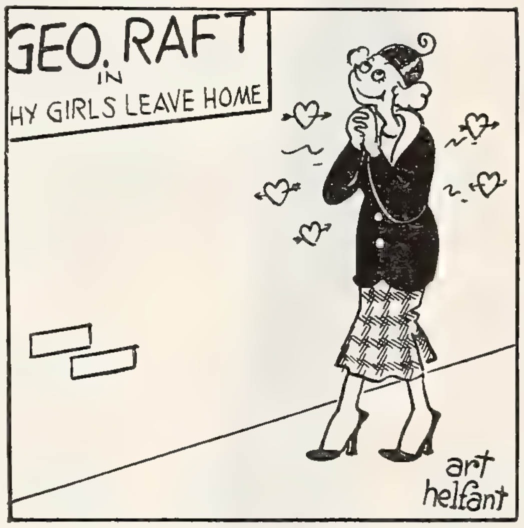
STARVED-APPEARING STARS

It is surprising how the personality of the movie stars diminishes with poundage. Dieting creates a poor decoy of the original. Trimmed and sheared within an inch of the bone, the picture players are moulded into mechanical robots of fashion. The camera adds pounds to the physique. Wonder how some of the movie idols appear in real life.

In "Top Hat," Ginger Rogers resembled a tinker toy, dancing away on long spindling legs. The curving figure of Pat Ellis has melted away into stereotyped loveliness. Charles Bickford used to be hardy, robust, strong, typically a man's man. Have you seen him lately? Thinner, of course, but also haggard and pale, with eyes circled. The spice is gone. Even that splendid actor, Charles Laughton, has not escaped the frenzied fad. He was a type and his weight helped to make him so. Recently he's lost over 50 pounds. The result is disastrous. He's positively meek!

Bony, flat chests, skinny necks, sharp elbows, and shapeless legs are not pleasing. Does the public really like it? Or have the moguls of the movies established this type of beauty, and are the women of America killing themselves, depriving themselves, to compete with the starved-appearing slickness of the stars?

Personally, give me brawn and bravery in the heroes, and plenty of dimples and curves in the heroines.—Harriet Bossard, Lynbrook, N. Y.



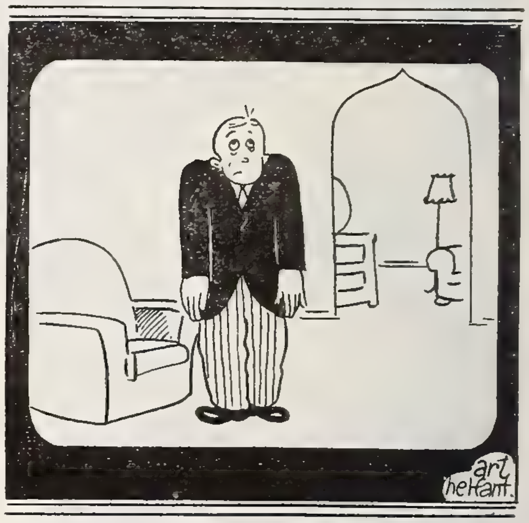
To millions of thrill-seeking gals, George Raft is head man on the star list.

Your opinions on movies and movie personalities are important! Here's your chance to voice them. What have you got to say? Speak frankly to your fellow fans through these columns. Address: Between You and Me, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, New York.

LIFELESS PERSONALITIES KILLING MOVIES!

There is a group of actresses in Hollywood today who are getting more than their just dues. Hangovers from the silent days, when the chief requisites of a movie queen were a set of good-looking facial expressions and the ability to pantomime gracefully, these players have made no attempt to adapt themselves to the swifter tempo of the talkies. With the biggest roles, bolstered up by desirable leading men, the best directors and given vast publicity, they continue to slither and slink across the sound stages, apparently indifferent and independent, with their huge salaries.

Are the producers blind to the truth that numbers of films in recent years, which should have been highly successful, were shunned simply because of loss of interest in these lifeless personalities of Ann Harding, Garbo, Constance Bennett, Del Rio, Dietrich and Loretta Young? In justice to the cash customers, does it not follow that these former stars should withdraw and make way for the vibrant, personality-packed young moderns for whom the public clamors?—Isabel Jarsk.



Dieting has changed many a star's personality and Laughton's a sad victim, says a fan.

NEW STAR

I'm wondering why the millions of Gable, Montgomery, Harlow and Garbo fans don't leave those aloof stars in their personal heavens and boost and encourage a lesser star who is, without doubt, worth all of it. I'm referring to Peter Lorre. Never before have I seen such superb acting as Lorre's in "M," "The Man Who Knew Too Much" and "Mad Love." Now you big-star fans, let's pay more attention to this steadily rising man who needs our coöperation. — Mildred Johnson, Fort Worth, Texas. (Continued on page 61)

WIN A CASH PRIZE FOR YOUR LETTER! ANNOUNCEMENT NEXT MONTH!

STUDIO ADDRESSES

Columbia Studios, 1438 N. Gower St., Hollywood, Calif.
Samuel Goldwyn Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., Hollywood, Calif.
Mascot Studios, 6001 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Calif.
Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Calif.
Republic-Monogram Studios, 9336 W. Washington Blvd., Culver City, Calif.
RKO-Radio Studios, 780 N. Gower St., Hollywood, Calif.
20th Century-Fox Studios, 1401 N. Western Ave., Hollywood, Calif.
United Artists Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., Hollywood, Calif.
Universal Studios, Universal City, Calif.
Warner Bros.-First National Studios, Burbank, Calif.

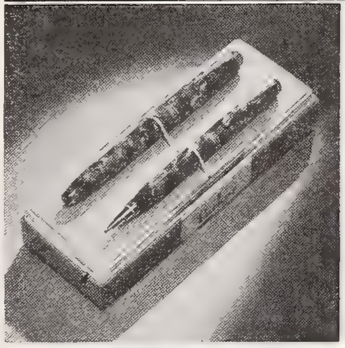
ABEL, WALTER: RKO-Radio.
AHERNE, BRIAN: M-G-M.
ALBERNI, LUIS: Free lance. Write him at 20th Century-Fox.
ALBERTSGN, FRANK: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
ALBRIGHT, HARDIE: Free lance. Write him at Mascot.
ALEXANDER, KATHERINE: Free lance. Write her at M-G-M.
ALEXANDER, ROSS: Warner Bros.
ALLAN, ELIZABETH: M-G-M.
ALLEN, GRACIE: Paramount.
ALLEN, JUDITH: Paramount.
ALLEN, ROBERT: Columbia.
ALLWYN, ASTRID: 20th Century-Fox.
AMES, ADRIENNE: Free lance. Write her at Paramount.
AMES, ROSEMARY: 20th Century-Fox.
ANGEL, HEATHER: RKO-Radio.
ARLEDGE, JOHN: RKO-Radio.
ARLEN, RICHARD: Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
ARLISS, GEORGE: United Artists.
ARMETTA, HENRY: Universal.
ARMSTRONG, ROBERT: Warner Bros.
ARNOLD, EDWARD: Universal.
ARTHUR, JEAN: Columbia.
ASTAIRE, FRED: RKO-Radio.
ASTHER, NILS: RKO-Radio.
ASTOR, MARY: Warner Bros.
ATWILL, LIONEL: Paramount.
AUTRY, GENE: Republic.
AYRES, LEW: Free lance. Write him at 20th Century-Fox.
BAKER, BENNY: Paramount.
BANCROFT, GEORGE. Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
BARBIER, GEORGE: Paramount.
BARNES, BINNIE: Universal.
BARNETT, VINCE: Universal.
BARRAT, ROBERT: Warner Bros.
BARRIE, MONA: 20th Century-Fox.
BARRIE, WENDY: Paramount.
BARRYMORE, JOHN: M-G-M.
BARRYMORE, LIONEL: M-G-M.
BARTHELMESS, RICHARD: Warner Bros.
BARTHOLOMEW, FREDDIE: M-G-M.
BARTLETT, MICHAEL: Columbia.
BAXTER, JANE: United Artists.
BAXTER, WARNER: 20th Century-Fox.
BEAL, JOHN: RKO-Radio.
BECK THOMAS: 20th Century-Fox.
BEECHER, JANET: Paramount.
BEERY, NOAH, JR.: Universal.
BEERY, WALLACE: M-G-M.
BELLAMY, MADGE: 20th Century-Fox.
BELLAMY, RALPH: Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
BENCHLEY, ROBERT: M-G-M.
BENEDICT, WILLIAM: 20th Century-Fox.
BENNETT, CONSTANCE: M-G-M.
BENNETT, JOAN: Paramount.
BENNY, JACK: M-G-M.
BERGNER, ELISABETH: United Artists.
BERNIE, BEN: Paramount.
BICKFORD, CHARLES: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
BIRELL, TALA: Columbia.
BLACKMER, SIDNEY: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
BLAKELEY, JAMES: Columbia.
BLANE, SALLY: Columbia.
BLONDELL, JOAN: Warner Bros.
BLORE, ERIC: RKO-Radio.
BLUE, MONTE: Free lance. Write him at M-G-M.
BOLAND, MARY: Paramount.
BOLES, GLEN: Warner Bros.
BOLES, JOHN: 20th Century-Fox.
BOYER, CHARLES: Paramount.
BRADLEY, GRACE: Paramount.
BRADY, ALICE: Free lance. Write her at RKO-Radio.
BREAKSTON, GEORGE: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
BRENDEL, EL: Warner Bros.
BRENT, EVELYN: Free lance. Write her at Paramount.
BRENT, GEORGE: Warner Bros.
BREWSTER, JUNE: RKO-Radio.
BRIAN, MARY: Free lance. Write her at 20th Century-Fox.
BRISSON, CARL: Paramount.
BRODERICK, HELEN: RKO-Radio.
BROOK, CLIVE: 20th Century-Fox.
BROWN, JOE E.: Warner Bros.
BROWN, JOHN MACK: Columbia.
BROWN, TOM: RKO-Radio.
BRUCE, NIGEL: 20th Century-Fox.

(Continued on page 86)

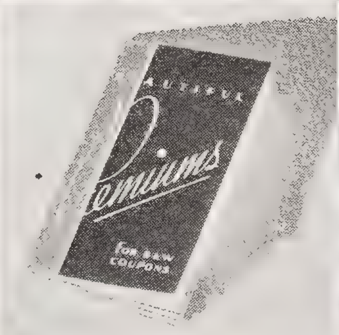
MAKE YOUR NEXT SELECTION "KOOLS"—That note of mild menthol refreshes every throat, those cork tips save every lip, and those valuable B & W coupons in each package are good for mighty worth-while premiums. Hot throats need KOOLS. Get a pack and sing for joy. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, Louisville, Kentucky.

KOOL
MILD MENTHOL
Cigarettes
CORK TIPPED
REG U S PAT OFF
SAVE THIS VALUABLE B&W COUPON
REDEEMABLE
15¢
25¢ in Canada
COUPON

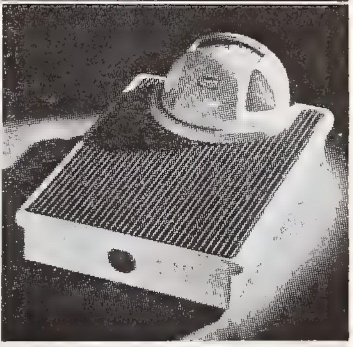
SAVE COUPONS . . . MANY HANDSOME NEW PREMIUMS



Parker Pen and Pencil Set. Choice of three smart colors. 250 coupons



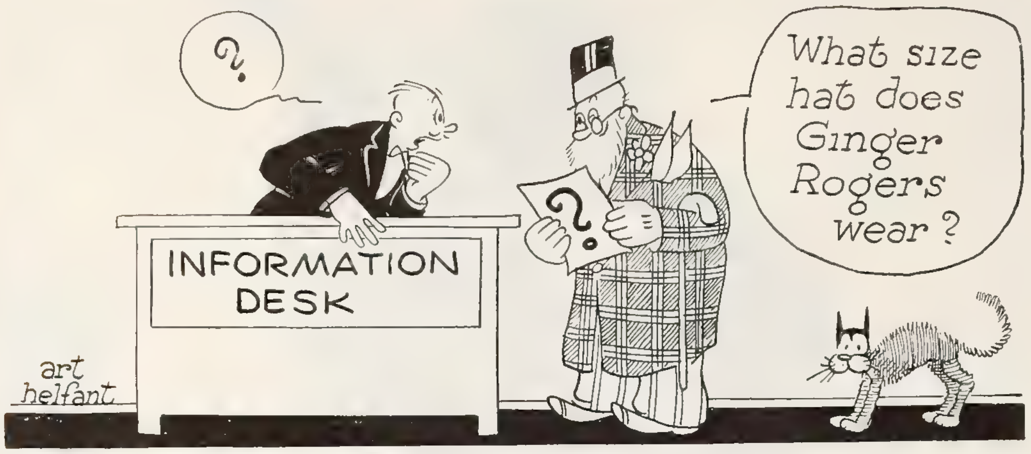
FREE. Write for illustrated 24-page booklet of B & W premiums



Detecto Scale. White, bathroom-type. Guaranteed. 400 coupons

RALEIGH CIGARETTES...NOW AT POPULAR PRICES...ALSO CARRY B & W COUPONS

information desk



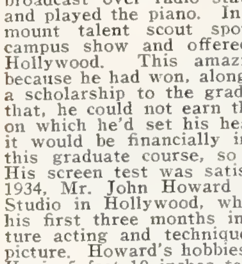
?
What size hat does Ginger Rogers wear ?
INFORMATION DESK
?
art helfant

If you would like to see a brief synopsis of your favorite's life in this department, fill in and send us the coupon on page 57. General questions, of course, will be answered here, too. Those asked most frequently and the most interesting ones receive first preference. And not too many at a time please. Address: The Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

ASK A QUESTION— GET AN ANSWER

John Howard

MARIE WHEELER, Willimantic, Conn.; JANE SILL, Ozone Park, N. Y.; GWEN, Omaha, Neb.; FLORENCE BERRELL, Trenton, N. J.; LORRAINE ZVONAR, Newark, N. J.; MORRY, Binghamton, N. Y.; PHYLLIS COHEN, Leavenworth, Kans.; JOSEPHINE GREGORY, LETTY GIBNEY, Bronx, N. Y.; I. BULLWINKEL, Bloomfield, N. J.; KAREN STONER, Hagerstown, Md.—Hear ye! Hear ye! Let it be known that the very attractive young man who played the part of Duncan Haley, Tom Brown's older brother, in "Annapolis Farewell," is none other than JOHN HOWARD. Mr. Howard is a comparative new-comer to the screen, his first picture being "Car 99" in which he used John Cox as his screen name. Now it's back to Howard, but don't ask why. Born in Cleveland, Ohio, on April 14, 1913, John is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Howard. Educated in the public schools of East Cleveland, he was an excellent student and won a scholarship to Western Reserve University. There he held more honors than is believable. Was president of the University Players and the Student Council; senior manager of the basketball team; member of the National Collegiate Players, of the Y.M.C.A. Cabinet, the University Choir and the Thalian Club; won a Phi Beta Kappa Key, a W.R.U. Honor Key, a scholarship for work in English and a couple of essay prizes. Moreover he was chosen as the most outstanding man in the Senior Class. His school activity was divided between dramatics and sports and he found time to broadcast over radio station WHK where he sang and played the piano. In the spring of 1934 a Paramount talent scout spotted young Howard in a campus show and offered him a chance to go to Hollywood. This amazing young man refused—because he had won, along with all the other things, a scholarship to the graduate school. And without that, he could not earn the professorship in English on which he'd set his heart. Soon he learned that it would be financially impossible for him to take this graduate course, so he reconsidered the offer. His screen test was satisfactory and in September, 1934, Mr. John Howard reported at the Paramount Studio in Hollywood, where he proceeded to spend his first three months in the study of motion picture acting and technique, before he was put in a picture. Howard's hobbies are drawing and painting. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, and has blue eyes and brown hair. "Millions in the Air" is his third picture, following which he will appear in "Soak the Rich."

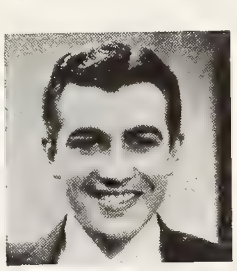


Dick Powell

NOTE: Because there are over 350 requests for biographies of the following players, it will be impossible to print the names and addresses this month. Please consider yourself included.

DICK POWELL—Born in Mountain View, Ark., on November 14, 1904, Richard E. Powell (his genuine name) was just another country boy until he attained the age of 12 years. At this time his father, mother and two brothers, Howard and Luther, transplanted themselves to Little Rock where young Dick attended school and college. During this time Dick began to annoy the neighbors by learning to play the saxophone, clarinet and cornet. In between times he sang in the church choir and for weddings and funerals. And besides that, organized an orchestra. In St. Louis he took a crack at vaudeville but hurried home where he knew he'd be appreciated. At this time Mildred Maund became his wife. Things were bad until a visiting orchestra, the Royal Peacocks, gave him a contract and took him on tour. He had various positions after that, finally ending up as master of ceremonies in a Pittsburgh theatre, where he remained for three years. Luck finally turned up in the form of a talent scout who offered him a screen test and a contract with Warners. In 1932 he made his first picture, "Blessed Event." Outside of film work his interests lie in music, flying, golf, swimming, horseback riding, bridge and football games. His hobbies are collecting musical instruments and making homemade movies. Dick is 6 feet tall, weighs 172 pounds, has blue eyes and auburn hair. He's no longer married to Mildred Maund—they were divorced shortly after Dick reached Hollywood—and now is seemingly interested in the Blondell girls, Joan and sister Rose. "Shipmates Forever" and "Thanks a Million" are his most recent films. His next will probably be "Glorious" with Marion Davies. You can reach him at the Warner Brothers Studios, Burbank, Cal.

ROBERT TAYLOR—And now's for the low-down on the latest contender for male popularity honors. Son of the late Dr. S. A. Brough, Bob was born in Filley, Neb., but later moved to Beatrice, where he attended public school. Then to college at Doane, Neb., for two years, and finishing at Pomona. In the latter institution Bobby Brough was outstanding in dramatics and a star tennis player. Seen in a campus production of "Journey's End" by a studio scout, Bob was given a screen test and audition and promptly sent back to college. After completing his college course and earning his Liberal Arts degree, he was given another test and signed to a contract. He immediately went into training at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which grooming has stood him in good stead. His favorite sports are tennis and horseback riding. He once accompanied his own songs with a cello for a period as a radio broadcast artist at Doane College, and is also an accomplished pianist. He owns a collie dog and his hobby is collecting different types and colors in sweaters. When it comes to black cats and ladders, Bob is just a bit superstitious, and he is a firm believer in hunches. His pet aversion is people who whistle. Six feet tall, he weighs 165 pounds and has brown hair and blue eyes. There is no Mrs. Taylor at present, but Irene Hervey seems the most likely candidate for that title at the moment. "Three Live Ghosts" will be his next picture and you may write him at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Cal.



Robert Taylor

GENE RAYMOND—This young man is certainly holding his own with the female fans. But why not? Raymond Guion is his real name and New York City his birthplace. Although born on August 13, 1908, Gene has been anything but unlucky. For one who is of French descent Gene looks more like the typical American male than many descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers. At the age of 5, young Raymond made his stage debut, was educated in New York public and private schools while occasionally taking parts in plays. From 1922 to 1931 he appeared in a great many stage productions in important roles. His last play, "Young Sinners," was such a success that it ran from 1929 to 1931 and landed him a contract with Paramount. His first picture was opposite Nancy Carroll in "Personal Maid." After the expiration of his contract Gene took to free lancing, and made pictures for every major studio. Gene is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, has blue eyes and very blonde curly hair. He enjoys horseback riding, tennis and golf. His favorite delicacy is a thick juicy steak and he can prepare bacon and eggs expertly. He spends his leisure days on the desert, plays the piano well and enjoys travel. So far Gene has seemed to be a confirmed bachelor, but some day he'll probably change his mind. Now under contract to RKO-Radio Studios, 780 Gower St., Hollywood, Calif., his next picture will be "Seven Keys to Baldpate," with three more tentatively scheduled for him.

George Raft

GEORGE RAFT—He is 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 155 pounds. His hair is black and seal smooth, his eyes light brown. Like Jimmy Cagney he was born in Hell's Kitchen in New York (on 41st Street between 9th and 10th Avenues). September 27, 1904, was his birthdate and George Raft his real name, which is surprising for one of French, German and Italian descent. He attended Public School 169 and later St. Catherine's. After school and during vacations George worked as an electrician's helper for $4.00 a week, but that wasn't enough for him. At 15 he decided to enter the pugilist game as a bantamweight, and in the next 2 years fought 25 times, was knocked out 7 and quit the game after his last beating. Then came the baseball era, with Raft signing with the Springfield Club. His fielding was good but his batting bad, so he was dropped after 2 seasons. Baseball still remains his favorite sport and he likes to watch prize fights and the horses. Returning to New York, he became a professional gigolo at Churchill's where Rudolph Valentino held a like position. Rudy departed for the movies, later sending for Raft to be his double, but died before Raft was able to take the job. But he was doing well in his own line, dancing at the best known places all over the country, sometimes hoofing with Walter Winchell, later in shows as Elsie Pilcer's partner. Then he introduced the Charleston to New York and later to London, becoming an international sensation and appearing in all the capitals of Europe. Then back to New York, night clubs and vaudeville, finally ending up in Hollywood for his first picture "Quick Millions." He is separated from his wife, and Virginia Pine still seems to be the "head woman." You really shouldn't have missed him in "She Couldn't Take it," his latest. His address is Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Cal. Either "Concertina" or "It Had to Happen" will be his next flicker.

GINGER ROGERS—The Charleston did things for this gal, too. It was through her winning the Texas Charleston championship at the age of 15 that she obtained a vaudeville contract, sundry stage engagements and a featured role in "Top Speed"—all of which served as rungs to the ladder-top. Born Katherine Virginia McMath in Independence, Mo., on July 16, 1911, she later moved to Fort Worth, Tex., where she attended school. "Young Men of Manhattan" was her first picture, made in the East during the run of "Top Speed." Then came several other musicals, the last of which was "Girl Crazy" in which she was a tremendous hit Her first Hollywood picture, "The Tip Off," followed this in 1931. Ginger is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 110 pounds, has gold-red hair and blue eyes. Her hobby is dancing, she plays a fair game of tennis and is fond of riding, swimming and golf. She likes music and cooking and her favorite dish is ham and eggs. Edward Jackson Culpepper became her first husband when she was very young, and Lew Ayres her second on November 14, 1934. "In Person" with George Brent is Ginger's most recent opus and "Follow the Fleet," another Rogers-Astaire musical, is next. RKO-Radio Studios, 780 Gower St., Los Angeles, Cal., is her home studio where you may write her.

Ginger Rogers

JEAN PARKER—This one started out in life in Deer Lodge, Mont., on August 11, 1915, as Mae Green. Her education was received in Los Angeles and Pasadena, where she attended high school. Getting into the movies for her was literally a bed of roses. Riding on a float in a Pasadena Tournament of Roses she was seen by a movie executive, tested, and assigned a role in "Divorce in the Family" in 1931. Just like that! Jean is interested in a number of things: interpretive dancing, acting, painting, music and writing. She speaks French fluently and likes to dance and swim. Her favorite color is jade green, which goes beautifully with her dark brown hair and blue-green eyes. Her friends call her Robin—and no wonder, for she is only 5 feet 3 and weighs a mere 105 pounds. The lucky girl recently had herself a trip to England where she played opposite Robert Donat in "The Ghost Goes West," which you will be seeing anon. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Cal., claim her as their contract player.

NELSON EDDY—You'll probably be glad to see this, if the number of requests for it are any criterion! And not to keep you in suspense any longer—Nelson and Jeanette MacDonald will be thrilling you again shortly in "Rose Marie." Are ya glad, huh? Providence, R. I., has the honor of claiming Nelson as its home town boy. Born there on June 29, 1901, the son of Isobel Kendrick and William Darius Eddy, both excellent singers. Educated in grammar school at Rhode Island Normal, the remainder of his education was obtained in night school and from correspondence courses. His early ambition was to be either a doctor or a trap drummer, but his first job was as a telephone operator. Following that he worked in the shipping department of an iron works, in the art department of a Philadelphia newspaper, and for five years was reporter, copy reader, etc., for two other city papers, to say nothing of writing advertising copy. Although Nelson had sung in Providence churches as boy soprano, and after his voice had turned to baritone, only for his own enjoyment, he began to amuse himself at this time by singing with phonograph records. Suddenly it dawned on him that perhaps his voice might serve as a means of livelihood. So off to David Bispham, the great American baritone of his time, Nelson hied himself to take singing lessons. After Bispham's death a year later, Nelson drifted from teacher to teacher until he came to William V. Vilonat, with whom he studied in New York, Paris and Dresden. Soon after he made his anonymous stage debut in "The Marriage Tax" in 1921. Three years later he was singing for the Philadelphia Civic Opera Company. By 1931 he was ready for New York, where his debut was sensational. In 1933 he came to Los Angeles in a concert at the Philharmonic Auditorium and got 18 encores! Screen tests and an M-G-M contract resulted, with Nelson having a part in "Broadway to Hollywood." But none of his pictures really counted until "Naughty Marietta" came along. Eddy's parents were divorced when he was 14. His father has married again and Nelson has an eight-year-old half sister, Martha Virginia. Tall (6 feet), handsome and athletic, Eddy finds relaxation in swimming, motoring, tennis, dancing and sailing. He weighs 173 pounds and has blue eyes and blonde hair. This super-man sings 32 operatic roles: He sings in English, French, Italian, Spanish, Russian and Yiddish. So far no wife has claimed him, but how long will he be able to resist this feminine onslaught? If you'd like to write him, M-G-M Studios, Culver City, is the address.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE—On April 23, 1929, little Shirley Jane Temple made her first appearance in this wicked world in a hospital in Santa Monica, Cal. For Mr. and Mrs. George F. Temple the birth of a baby girl was a most happy addition to the small family which already included two small boys, John and George. When she was three, Shirley had her first dancing lesson, and it was at one of these classes that a studio scout discovered what a talented little dancer she was. Result—she was signed to appear in seven Baby Burlesk Comedies for Educational. Following her work in these comedies she played a small part in "Frolics of Youth" then went over to Paramount for an inconspicuous role in Randy Scott's "To the Last Man." Fox decided, at that point, that the Temple child was just what they needed for the singing and dancing role in "Stand Up and Cheer." That picture was the making of this Hollywood honey. This was followed by "Now I'll Tell," "Change of Heart," "Little Miss Marker," "Baby Take a Bow," "Now and Forever," "Bright Eyes," "Little Colonel," "Our Little Girl" and "Curly Top." All of which add up to a lot of work in two short years for one so young. Her next is "The Littlest Rebel" with John Boles and Karen Morley, and after that will come "Captain January." It is rather superfluous to tell you that La Temple's hair is blonde and very curly and that her eyes are blue. Of course she can't read very well yet, but she will be glad to receive letters from you at the 20th Century-Fox Studios, 1401 N. Western Ave., Hollywood, Cal.

JANE WITHERS—And while we're on the subject of youngsters, we might as well give you Withers fans a break. Jane was also born in April—the 12th —but in 1926. Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Withers lived in Atlanta, Ga., at the time of Jane's birth, and at the age of four Miss Jane was Atlanta's child Garbo. Before the family moved to Los Angeles, she was featured in "The Toyland Review" and for two years was heard over the air waves on Station WGST. During this time she was learning French and Spanish and taking to horseback riding. In Hollywood the Withers searched in vain for seven months for a spot in the movies for their cheeild. Then came a bit in "Handle with Care," and a few other small parts at other studios. Nothing more came along, so Jane returned to radio work and was starred in KFWB's "Juvenile Review," in which she sang and gagged with the master of ceremonies. Her ability to do impersonations—she can do over forty—as well as her skill at singing, landed her the "brat" part in "Bright Eyes," and a contract. Off scene Jane is just a wholesome little girl, full of personality and mild devilment. She likes swimming and skating, and her love of pets has caused her to accumulate a small menagerie. She numbers a kitten, a rabbit, baby ducks, carrier pigeons and love birds in her collection. At present her ambition is to acquire a monkey. "Paddy O'Day" is Miss Withers' next picture and after that there will be "Gentle Julia." Unlike Shirley, she has dark brown hair and brown eyes. You can reach her, also, at the 20th Century-Fox Studios.

ROSS ALEXANDER—If you asked him, he would tell you that he had been an actor for 24 years—and he has, more or less. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., on July 27, 1907, young Alexander made his stage debut at the age of four when he played in a kindergarten production. From that day to the present he has devoted his major time to acting, though he did attend a number of schools as a duty and secondary interest. While still a student Ross joined a group of young players studying and acting under Hugh William Towne in his Little Theatre in Rochester. There he stayed for two years until he came back to New York to continue his studies at the Packard Theatrical Agency. In the very same week that he graduated, he reached the ripe old age of 18 and accepted the juvenile lead in Blanche Yurka's "Enter Madame." Since that time he had been on Broadway in hit shows until with the last one, "After Tomorrow," he was given a screen test and sent to Hollywood for a role with Claudette Colbert in "The Wiser Sex," in 1932. Since then he has risen rapidly, has acquired a long term contract with Warner Brothers Studio, Burbank, Cal., and is being built up to stardom. He is married to a nonprofessional. Six feet 1¼ inches tall, he weighs 160 pounds and has brown hair and blue eyes. His hobbies are the theatre, swimming and soccer football. He has an important role in "Captain Blood."

INFORMATION DESK,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.
Please print a brief life story of
....
in your department.
Name..
City....................State..................

NOW-NO BAD BREATH behind her
Sparkling Smile!
AND THEY USED TO PITY HER AT PARTIES
YOU CAN'T FOOL ME, MISS ALLEN, I'D KNOW YOU ANYWHERE!
WHY MUST SUCH A BEAUTIFUL GIRL HAVE SUCH A BREATH!
POOR PEGGY—ANOTHER PARTY SPOILED
HE WAS HORRID TO ME—I HATE HIM! AND WHY DO YOU TALK ABOUT MY TEETH—YOU KNOW HOW CAREFULLY I BRUSH THEM!
JUST THE SAME, THEY SAY BAD BREATH COMES FROM IMPROPERLY CLEANED TEETH. IT WON'T HURT TO ASK DR. MOORE.
YES, MOST BAD BREATH COMES FROM IMPROPERLY CLEANED TEETH. USE COLGATE DENTAL CREAM—ITS SPECIAL PENETRATING FOAM REMOVES THE CAUSE... AND MAKES THE TEETH BRIGHTER, TOO!
I'LL TRY IT, DOCTOR. I'LL GET SOME COLGATE DENTAL CREAM TODAY.
IT'S WONDERFUL HOW NICE AND CLEAN COLGATE'S MAKES YOUR MOUTH FEEL, MOTHER!
..YOU SHOULD SEE PEGGY NOW
COME ON, PEGGY... JUST ONE DANCE!
GO 'WAY...THIS IS MINE!
THANK HEAVENS FOR COLGATE'S. I'LL NEVER BE CARELESS AGAIN!
COLGATE RIBBON DENTAL CREAM

Most Bad Breath Begins with the Teeth!

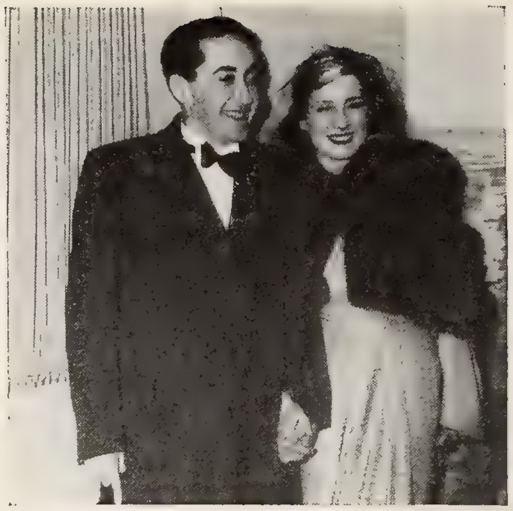
MAKE sure you don't have bad breath! Use Colgate Dental Cream. Its special penetrating foam removes all the decaying food deposits lodged between the teeth, along the gums and around the tongue—which dentists agree are the source of most bad breath. At the same time, a unique, grit-free ingredient polishes the enamel—makes teeth sparkle.

Try Colgate Dental Cream—today! Brush your teeth . . . your gums . . . your tongue . . . with Colgate's. If you are not entirely satisfied after using one tube, send the empty tube to COLGATE, Jersey City, N. J. We will gladly refund TWICE what you paid.

20¢
LARGE SIZE
Giant Size, over twice as much,
35¢

Jan Kiepura and Marta Eggerth. Hollywood thinks they're married.

Bride and groom. Sylvia Sidney with her new husband, Bennett Cerf.



Norma Shearer holding hands with hubby, Irving Thalberg, at a recent party.

(Continued from page 15)

temperamental. He knows what he wants, and he generally gets it. Right now everyone is wondering whether or not he's married to Marta Eggerth, the continental star who is now making a picture for Universal. Both Kiepura and Miss Eggerth deny the rumors, but 'tis said that Jan recently admitted to a writer that they were bride and groom. "However," he is reported to have said, "if you print it I'll sue you."

■ ■ ■

A fan of Paul Kelly's from East India sent Paul a talking minah bird. Paul's feathered friend arrived with a distinct accent, and Paul spent considerable time working on the creature's broad A. He feels he's been successful, too, for the other day the bird greeted him with, "Hello, Paul Kelly, Paul Kelly, Paul Kelly." "Have you had your breakfast, Charlie?" asked Paul, just trying to make conversation. Without a moment's hesitation the completely Americanized Charlie replied, "Hell, NO!"

■ ■ ■

More GOOD
NEWS

You've practically got to climb the highest mountain if you want to see Edward Arnold these days, for he and his family have just moved into a house on one of the loftiest hilltops in these parts. There's a grand view, and the air is swell—in fact, everything is dandy until you look out one of the bedroom windows. There is a perpendicular drop of 325 feet. Eddie seems to like it, though. He says you'd be surprised how it cuts down the number of overnight guests.

■ ■ ■

There is, at least, one girl in Hollywood who doesn't want to be in pictures, and that's Katherine Alexander's very efficient cook. One day Katherine was rehearsing a difficult bit of dialogue at her home, and after trying it several times with little success, she wandered into the kitchen, where Bessie was laundering the woodwork. Exasperated, Miss A. said, "Bessie, let's change places. I'll scrub and you learn my lines for me." Without missing a stroke on the woodwork, Bessie replied, "No, ma'am. Ah knows when I'se sittin' pretty." Maybe she's right, but no one ever heard of a floor-scrubber being furnished a stand-in.

■ ■ ■

Autograph fiends have their most trying moments when they attempt to sign up the Marx Brothers, mainly due to the fact that these three zanies off the screen can hardly recognize themselves. Groucho, for instance, without the painted moustache and the eyebrows, is just Mr. Julius Marx of Great Neck, L. I. At the preview of "A Night At The Opera," we saw Groucho standing by himself while autograph seekers cluttered around Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones. Trying to be a good Samaritan, we pointed out Groucho to one of the younger element, who took one skeptical glance and replied: "That guy? Nuts!"

■ ■ ■

Eddie Cantor's "Shoot the Chutes" barely had gone into production when one of the Goldwyn Girls announced she was on the way to the altar. Of late years, it seems the young ladies of the Goldwyn ensemble have taken the place of the Ziegfeld Follies' beauties in the racing-to-the-altar department. Anyway, the gal in question is Charlotte Russell, and the hubby is Richard Hamm, a Coast millionaire. It would probably spoil the story, though, to add that they've known each other for years and were going to get married even if Charlotte wasn't Glorified by Goldwyn.

■ ■ ■

The year's big event for Hollywood's younger set was Betty Grable's birthday party for Jackie Coogan. Betty hired a hotel ballroom for the affair, and practically all the juvenile leads in Hollywood turned out to honor Jackie's 21st birthday. Incidentally, on the same day Jackie came into a trust fund reported to total several million dollars. It just goes to show that education doesn't pay, for Jackie made most of his millions before he could read or write. Now that he's grown up and enjoying a college education he hasn't made a nickel. It's nice, though, to be able to knock off a couple million before you learn your ABC's. It sort of sees a guy through kindergarten.

■ ■ ■

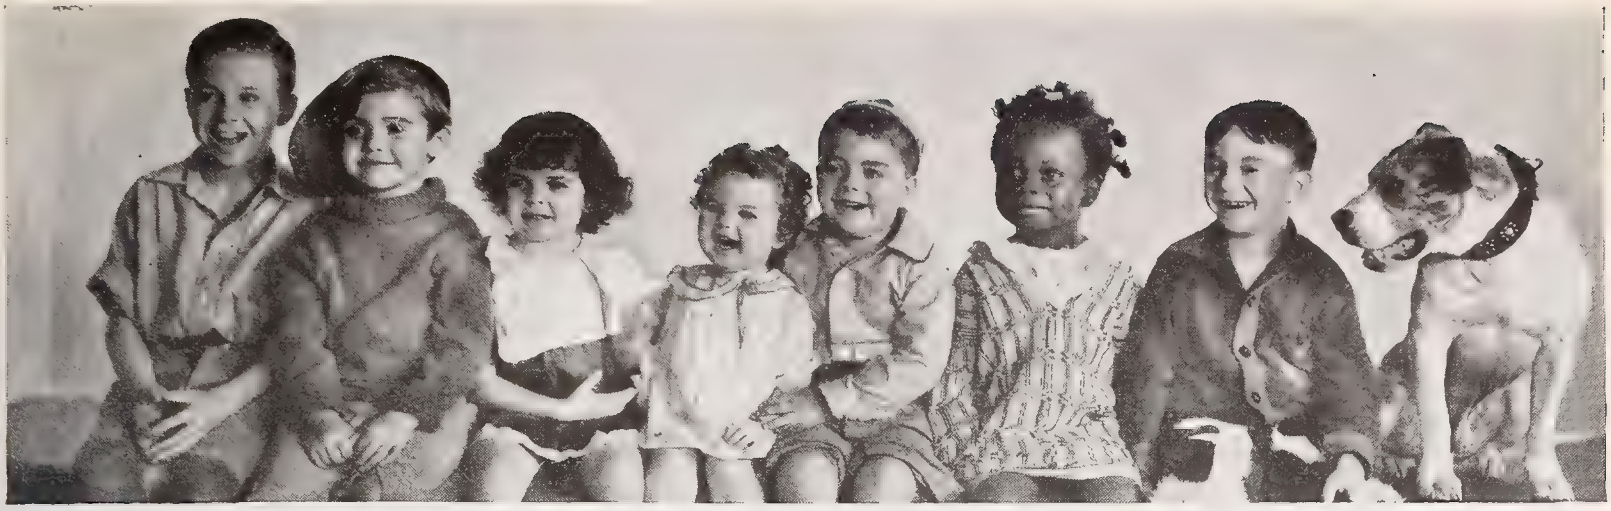
While we're discussing birthdays, perhaps the most pleasant of the month was Jean Arthur's. The Arthur gal was working on "If You Could Only Cook" on the Columbia lot when the big day arrived. She had just finished a scene, when producer Harry Cohen, accompanied by a full set of lackeys, presented her with a handsome bouquet and the announcement that she was to be given co-star billing on the picture with Herbert Marshall. Jean was so happy she almost gave out her right age.

■ ■ ■

Patricia Ziegfeld has scorned the screen for a career and will go in for higher education instead. She's registered at the University of California in Westwood and Mama Billie Burke says Patricia's in deadly earnest about her homework. But it may be just one of the Ziegfeld follies!

■ ■ ■

Hmmm, were those rumors just that and that's all about Paulette Goddard being Mrs. Charles Chaplin? Paulette, Charlie and Charlie's two small sons have been inseparable for over two years, until a month or so back when Paulette suddenly began appearing in late-spots with other cronies. The reason, she assured snoopers, being that Charlie was busy on "Modern Times," his new picture. But the picture's in the tin box, now, waiting release, and still the



"Our Gang" all lined up for inspection. Left to right, Harold Sweitzer, Scotty Beckett, Darla Hood, Baby Patsy, Spanky, Buckwheat, Alfalfa and Pete. Aren't they cute? Watch them carry on in "Our Gang Follies of 1936."

Goddard girl goes about minus Mr. Chaplin. So what? Is it a broken home or just a broken date?

* * *

Constance Bennett seems slightly party-minded these days. Recently she gave a homecoming party that was one of the gala events of the season. It was to honor her husband, Marquis Henri de la Falaise, who had just returned from a little world-jaunting. A few nights later Connie gave another celebration on an even grander scale. This was a farewell party, also for the Marquis Henri de la Falaise. Hank and his hangover headed for South America the next day, where he's planning to make another film of the wilds.

* * *

Sure, George Raft's wife will divorce him so's he can marry Virginia Pine. All those yarns you've been hearing about how difficult Mrs. Raft has been can just be checked up to idle chatter. She is really more than glad to oblige. Only one thing does she ask. That's the entire earnings from Georgie's Paramount contract for the next five years! What, not even Paramount Studios, Mrs. R.?

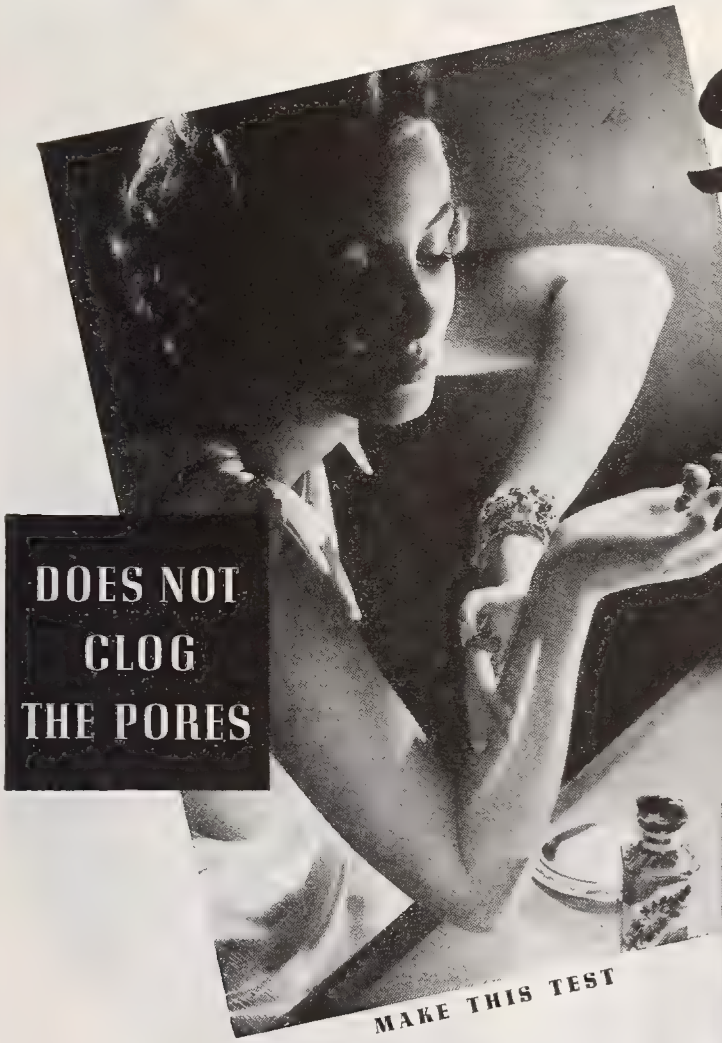
* * *

Wally Beery believes in doing everything in a big way. All his new swimming pool needs is a mountain peak to put Lake Louise to shame. Carol Ann, the Beery five-year-old, didn't think all that water should be wasted for swimming. Being more practical-minded, she thought it would be nice for boating and asked Papa for a yacht. Wally compromised on a small motor-boat, so Miss Beery is kept busy churning up the swimming pool.

* * *

If the censors don't stop this, you can enjoy a choice morsel with us about Miss Shirley Temple. She's

(Continued on page 96)



Woodbury's
facial powder

Stays on longer
Spreads farther!

DOES NOT CLOG THE PORES

A LOVELY new face powder that stays on your cheeks and nose for hours. That spreads farther* than other popular-priced powders and does not clog the pores—the new Woodbury's Facial Powder.

Spread a pinch of Woodbury's on your arm. Close to it, a pinch of the face powder you have been using. Compare the areas the two powders cover. Woodbury's is so far-spreading because it stays on the outer surface of the skin. It does not work down into the pores. It leaves your pores free to breathe.

Six smart shades. One of them will flatter your complexion. $1.00, 50c, 25c, 10c.

*Determined by Gar-Baker Laboratories, Inc., New York

TRY ALL SIX SHADES—FREE!

Please send me—free—all six shades of Woodbury's Facial Powder, enough in each sample packet for several powderings. (Paste coupon on penny post-card or mail in envelope—NOW!)

John H. Woodbury, Inc., 9161 Alfred St., Cincinnati, O. (In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ont.

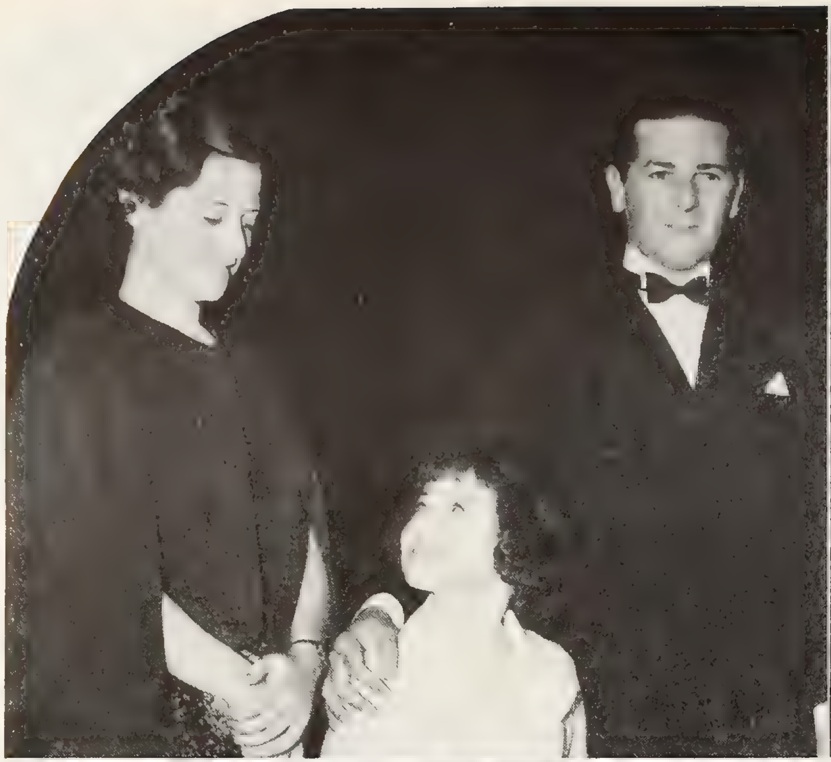
*Name*______________________________

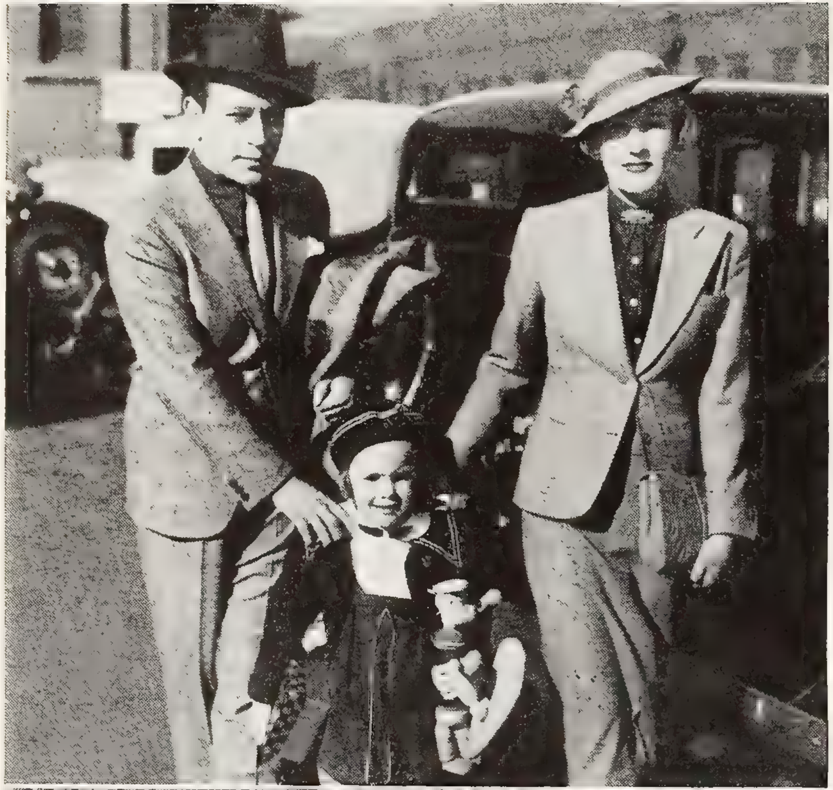
*Street*_____________________________

*City*____________________ *State*________

© 1936, John H. Woodbury, Inc.

Woodbury's Facial Powder



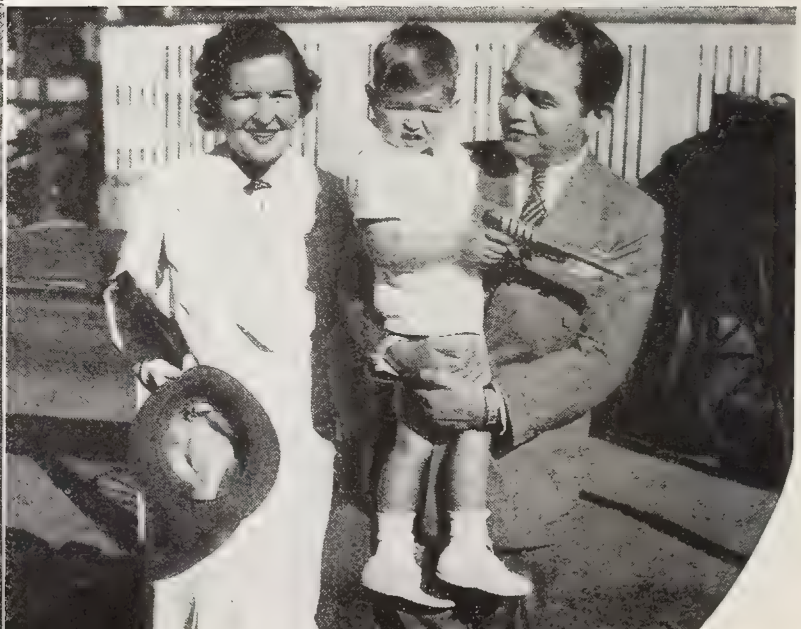


Above left and right, Warner's new child star, Sybil Jason, with her sister and uncle. And the smiling Bill Gargans at a preview.

scott shots

George Raft in a new role! He and Virginia Pine guide Virginia's daughter through traffic. Their marriage still waits on Raft's divorce.

Below, left, Anne Shirley, Jimmy Greer and Pat Ellis indulge in "record" autographing. Right, the Eddie Robinsons and their heir.



Between You and Me

(Continued from page 54)

BRAVO, MYRNA!

I am getting sick and tired of hearing all versions of why Myrna Loy walked out on "Escapade." If more actors and actresses would be as particular about the parts they play and a little more independent, we would all benefit by better pictures. Many times I have turned against favorites of mine simply because I saw them in pictures extremely unsuited to their talents. So I say to others in Hollywood, choose your rôles and give better performances—Beatrice Berman, Cincinnati, Ohio.

WATCH THIS NEWCOMER!

I wonder if any fan other than myself noticed the excellent work of John Howard as "Duncan Haley" in "Annapolis Farewell." I've read several reviews of the picture, but none of them mentioned Mr. Howard's performance. Never have I seen anyone more capable of expressing emotion facially and never have I seen anyone more charming on the screen. Here is a young man who is destined for a big movie career if the producers will give him a chance. What do you think, fellow fans?—William Eury, Nashville, Tenn.

TEMPLE vs. WITHERS

I've wanted to write just such a letter as Helen Lawrence wrote in your November columns regarding Mrs. Temple's resentment against Jane Wither's being in a film with Shirley. We all marveled at Jane's performance in "Bright Eyes," but after viewing "Ginger" everyone I talk to agrees with me that she is the greatest child actress on the screen. Fox ought to wake up to the fact that they have a miniature Marie Dressler in this child; the way she handles her roles, comedy and drama, with equal ease, is simply amazing. The studio seems to devote too much time to get just the right story for Shirley and overpublicizes her so much that every time you buy a movie book you know it will be full of Shirley befor you open it. There are many talented children in Hollywood but I'll place my bet on Jane, for since "Ginger" came to Houston she's the talk of the town—Waneda Simpson, Houston, Texas.

NEW TEAM MATE FOR ASTAIRE?

As a dancing partner, Ginger Rogers is not good enough for Fred Astaire. Why not star someone opposite him who can really tap dance on her own ability without having to have Fred Astaire dance with her to put her over. Eleanor Powell and he would be a tremendous sensation and certainly a treat for those who enjoy real tap dancing. I am sure it would be far more pleasing to see both dancers able to get up and dance individually, as well as together, than it is to see just one do all the work and the other one help to take the applause. I believe in giving a swell dancer like Fred Astaire a partner who can at least keep on the level with his own dancing qualities.—Yvonne Aston, Toronto, Canada.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

It seems to me that comedy inventors

(Continued on page 63)

Change Bread to Cake!

EAGLE BRAND COCONUT STRIPS

Day-old white bread
Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
Coconut

Slice bread ¾ inch thick. Trim off crusts. Cut into strips ¾ inch by 2 inches long. Spread strips on all sides with Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk, covering well. Then roll in dry shredded coconut, broken fine. Brown under low gas flame, or toast on fork over coals.

● Dee-li-cious! Tastes like Angel Food, delicately coconut-frosted! No one will believe it's so easily made! ● But remember—Evaporated Milk won't—can't—succeed in this recipe. You must use Sweetened Condensed Milk. Just remember the name Eagle Brand.

MAGIC RECIPES
Quicker easier surer to succeed

FREE! New Cook Book of Wonders!

New! New! NEW! Just off the press! "Magic Recipes" is a thrilling new successor to "Amazing Short-cuts." Gives you brand-new recipes—unbelievably quick and easy—for pies, cookies, candies, frostings! Sure-fire custards! Easy-to-make refrigerator cakes! Quicker ways to delicious salad dressings, sauces, beverages, ice creams (freezer and automatic). Address: The Borden Sales Co., Inc., Dept. MM-16, 350 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Name________________

Street________________

City__________ State_______

(Print name and address plainly)
This coupon may be pasted on a penny postcard.

Borden Quality

Father and son. Phillips Holmes with his dad, Taylor Holmes. Pop used to be a big star in silent days. This was snapped at a Fathers' and Sons' get-together.

modern screen movie scoreboard

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Accent on Youth (Paramount)	3★
Age of Indiscretion (M-G-M)	2★
Alias Bulldog Drummond (GB)	2★
Alias Mary Dow (Universal)	2★
Alibi Ike (Warners)	3★
Alice Adams (RKO)	4★
Anna Karenina (M-G-M)	4★
Annapolis Farewell (Paramount)	2½★
The Arizonian (RKO)	3★
Bad Boy (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Barbary Coast (United Artists)	3★
Becky Sharp (RKO)	3★
The Big Broadcast of 1936 (Para.)	3★
The Bishop Misbehaves (M-G-M)	3★
Black Fury (1st Nat'l.)	4★
Black Sheep (Fox)	2★
Break of Hearts (RKO)	3★
Brewster's Millions (United Artists)	2★
The Bride of Frankenstein (Univ.)	3★
Bright Lights (1st Nat'l.)	3★
Broadway Gondolier (Warners)	3★
BroadwayMelody of 1936(M-G-M)	4★
Call of the Wild (20th Century)	3★
Cardinal Richelieu (United Artists)	4★
Car 99 (Paramount)	3★
Case of the Curious Bride (1st Nat'l.)	3★
Charlie Chan in Egypt (Fox)	3★
Charlie Chan in Shanghai (20th-Fox)	2★
China Seas (M-G-M)	4★
The Clairvoyant (GB)	2★
Clive of India (20th Century)	4★
College Rhythm (Paramount)	3★
The Crusades (Paramount)	4★
Curly Top (Fox)	3★
Dante's Inferno (Fox)	2★
The Dark Angel (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
The Daring Young Man (Fox)	2★
David Copperfield (M-G-M)	5★
Diamond Jim (Universal)	3★
Don't Bet on Blondes (Warners)	2★
Doubting Thomas (Fox)	3★
Dr. Socrates (Warners)	2★
Escapade (M-G-M)	3★
Escape Me Never (United Artists)	3★
Every Night at Eight (Paramount)	2★
The Farmer Takes a Wife (Fox)	3★
A Feather in Her Hat (Columbia)	2★
The Flame Within (M-G-M)	2★
Forsaking All Others (M-G-M)	3★
Four Hours to Kill (Paramount)	3★
Front Page Woman (Warners)	3★
The Gay Deception (20th Cent.-Fox)	3★
G-Men (1st Nat'l.)	4★
The Gilded Lily (Paramount)	3★
Ginger (Fox)	3★
The Girl Friend (Columbia)	1★
The Girl from 10th Ave. (1st Nat'l.)	2★
The Glass Key (Paramount)	3★
Goin' to Town (Paramount)	3★
Go Into Your Dance (1st Nat'l.)	3★
The Good Fairy (Universal)	3★
Goose and the Gander (1st Nat'l.)	2★
Hard Rock Harrigan (Fox)	2★
Harmony Lane (Mascot)	2★
Here Comes Cookie (Paramount)	3★
Here Comes the Band (M-G-M)	1★
Here Is My Heart (Paramount)	4★
Here's to Romance (20th Cent.-Fox)	2★
Hold 'Em Yale (Paramount)	3★
Hooray for Love (RKO)	2★
I Live for Love (Warners)	2★
I Live My Life (M-G-M)	2★
I'll Love You Always (Columbia)	2★
In Caliente (1st Nat'l.)	3★
The Informer (RKO)	4★
The Irish in Us (1st Nat'l.)	3★
The Iron Duke (GB)	3★
It Happened in New York (Univ.)	3★
Jalna (RKO)	3★
Java Head (First Division)	2★
King Solomon of B'wy. (Universal)	1★
Laddie (RKO)	3★
Lady Tubbs (Universal)	2★
The Last Days of Pompeii (RKO)	4★
The Last Outpost (Paramount)	2★
Les Miserables (20th Century)	5★
Let 'Em Have It (United Artists)	3★
Let's Live Tonight (Columbia)	2★
Life Begins at Forty (Fox)	4★
Little Big Shot (Warners)	2★
The Little Colonel (Fox)	3★
Lives of a Bengal Lancer (Para.)	5★
Living on Velvet (Warners)	2★
Love in Bloom (Paramount)	2★
Love Me Forever (Columbia)	4★
Loves of a Dictator (GB)	3★
Mad Love (M-G-M)	2★
Manhattan Moon (Universal)	1★
The Man on the Flying Trapeze (Par.)	3★
The Man Who Knew Too Much (M-G-M)	3★
Mark of the Vampire (M-G-M)	2★
McFadden's Flats (Paramount)	2★
Men of Tomorrow (London Films)	1★
Men Without Names (Paramount)	3★
Metropolitan (20th Century-Fox)	4★
A Midsummer Night's Dream (Warners)	5★
Mississippi (Paramount)	3★
Mr. Dynamite (Universal)	2★
Murder in the Fleet (M-G-M)	2★
Murder Man (M-G-M)	2★
Naughty Marietta (M-G-M)	4★
Nell Gwyn (United Artists)	3★
A Night at the Ritz (Warners)	2★
No More Ladies (M-G-M)	3★
Oil for the Lamps of China (1st Nat'l.)	4★
One More Spring (Fox)	4★
Orchids to You (Fox)	2★
O'Shaughnessy's Boy (M-G-M)	3★
Our Little Girl (Fox)	2★
Page Miss Glory (Warners)	3★
Paris in Spring (Paramount)	3★
The People's Enemy (RKO)	2★
People Will Talk (Paramount)	2★
Princess O'Hara (Universal)	3★
Private Worlds (Paramount)	4★
Public Hero No. 1 (M-G-M)	3★
The Public Menace (Columbia)	1★
The Raven (Universal)	2★
Red Salute (Reliance-United Artists)	2★
Rendezvous (M-G-M)	3★
The Return of Peter Grimm (RKO)	3★
The Right to Live (Warners)	3★
Roberta (RKO)	5★
Ruggles of Red Gap (Paramount)	5★
Sanders of the River (United Artists)	2★
The Scarlet Pimpernel (U. Artists)	4★
The Secret Bride (Warners)	3★
Shadow of Doubt (M-G-M)	3★
Shanghai (Paramount)	2★
She (RKO)	2★
She Married Her Boss (Columbia)	4★
Shipmates Forever (1st Nat'l.)	3★
A Shot in the Dark (Chesterfield)	2★
Silk Hat Kid (Fox)	1★
Smart Girl (Paramount)	2★
Society Doctor (M-G-M)	3★
Special Agent (Warners)	2★
Star of Midnight (M-G-M)	3★
Steamboat Round the Bend (Fox)	3★
Stranded (Warners)	2★
Sweet Music (Warners)	3★
The 39 Steps (GB)	4★
This Is the Life (20th Century-Fox)	2★
The Three Musketeers (RKO)	3★
Thunder in the Night (Fox)	2★
Times Square Lady (M-G-M)	2★
Thunder Mountain (20th Cent.-Fox)	1★
Top Hat (RKO)	4★
Transatlantic Tunnel (GB)	3★
Transient Lady (Universal)	2★
Traveling Saleslady (1st Nat'l.)	2★
The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes(GB)	2★
Two for Tonight (Paramount)	1★
Under the Pampas Moon (Fox)	2★
Under Pressure (Fox)	3★
Vagabond Lady (M-G-M)	2★
Vanessa (M-G-M)	3★
Way Down East (20th Century-Fox)	2★
The Wedding Night (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
We're in the Money (Warners)	2★
The Werewolf of London (Universal)	2★
West Point of the Air (M-G-M)	3★
When a Man's a Man (Fox)	2★
The Whole Town's Talking (Col.)	4★
A Wicked Woman (M-G-M)	2★
Wings in the Dark (Paramount)	3★
The Woman in Red (Warners)	2★

Here is a condensed version of the Modern Screen Movie Scoreboard! You'll find it simple to follow and a valuable guide in choosing your film entertainment. Instead of giving you the individual ratings of Modern Screen and authoritative newspaper movie critics all over the country, we have struck an average of their ratings. You'll find this average under the heading, General Rating, beside each picture. Ratings, 5★, extraordinary; 4★, very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor.

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 61)

have long since worn out the idea of imitating the colored race. I am inclined to doubt if there ever was a time when it was a clever idea. Of course, in slavery days and immediately afterward, there may have been a reason for having a few laughs at the expense of the negro. But in 1935 the situation is entirely different. With freedom came intelligence and progress and pride. We would do well to consider a while before playing upon the pride of a whole race of people for the sake of cheap comedy. To me it is downright insulting. Enough of a thing is enough.—A Fan, Kimball, W. Va.

EXPERT EYEBROW LIFTER!

Some fans admire Gable's dimples, others marvel at Crawford's gowns, and some go in ecstasies over Colbert's eyes; now it's my turn to rave about the adorable way Russell Hardie lifts his eyebrows before he speaks. It's very distinctive and becoming to him.

Speaking of his eyebrows, why not let them charm some co-ed sometime instead of just being her brother. This brother stuff is all right, but we hope he'll graduate from these dull roles in time.—Fan, Portland, Maine.

IDEA FOR KIDDIE FILM

Why not have a film entirely acted by child artists? This would probably settle the question of the Queen Starlet. Imagine a screen play with Jane Withers and Jackie Searle as "mother and father." Shirley Temple, the "debutante daughter," wtih Freddie Bartholomew her "heart interest." Cora Sue Collins, George Breakston, Virginia Weidler, Sybil Jason, and Dickie Moore "supporting" and Baby Jane Quigley the "other girl."—Connie Cowell, Vancouver, B. C., Canada.

HOORAY FOR REGAN!

I sit through all of Phil Regan's pictures twice just to hear him sing! And he's so breathtakingly handsome, too! Bing Crosby and Nelson Eddy are not to be compared to sweet-voiced Phil. I'd rather have him sing to me than dance with Fred Astaire, go out with Clark Gable, dine with Greta Garbo, go up and see Mae West, or play house with Shirley Temple.—Nell Ljutic, Richmond, Calif.

CRITICIZING CRAWFORD

We all appreciate the fact that Adrian means well by designing clothes such as those worn by Joan Crawford, but some of us do feel that those clothes are unattractive and that it is utterly impossible for clothes like that to be worn by people other than an actress.

I do not know how many people will agree with me when I denounce Crawford's way of wearing her hair and making her lips look very large. I think that her make-up is ugly and that it makes her look common. She not only looks common and ordinary, but she acts as if she had been brought up in the poorer districts of some city where cheapness and commonness are part of one's nature.

I strongly hope that Miss Crawford will either learn to act better, dress better, make up differently and get over being cheap and common, or leave the movies. —D.E.K., Pelham Manor, N. Y.

(Continued on page 96)

Beautiful Eyes
with Maybelline
EYE BEAUTY AIDS
MASCARA... EYE SHADOW... EYEBROW PENCIL... EYELASH TONIC CREAM... EYEBROW BRUSH

A gay quartette snapped at the Sophie Tucker opening recently. Left to right, John Arledge, Una Merkel, Madge Evans and Tom Gallery.

Little Man, What Next?

(Continued from page 42)

probably never dreamed of the series of events which would be brought about by this gift, for Concoll proved to be a sort of turning point in Freddie's manner of living. Up to this time Freddie and his aunt had been content to live in a simple apartment, and they rode to the studio each day on the bus. But, as you must admit, any dog—particularly "a relative of Flush"—needs a yard in which to run, so Freddie and his aunt looked about for a house with a garden that would lend itself to the happiness of Concoll.

"And we found a very nice house," Freddie will tell you, in a manner that indicates it isn't at all important to him but is probably of great interest to you. "It has three bedrooms and two baths and a lot of other rooms and a two-car garage." But he admits with a sigh that Concoll didn't appreciate the yard. In fact, he proved himself most ungrateful by running away. Freddie was disconsolate and the studio was in a turmoil until the dog was found and returned a few days later. "But he hardly ever goes outdoors. He seems to like to be in the house better," Freddie added in a perplexed tone of voice.

THE next important event following the advent of the dog occurred on a sad day when the conductor on the bus refused to allow Concoll to ride. "It's against the law," he told Freddie, and that presented a major problem because, of course, Concoll had to go to the studio. How else could he be shown to all of Freddie's friends?

"So," Freddie recounted, "we just had to have a car to cart the dog around in."

It seems that this was a problem to be taken up with no one less important than L. B. Mayer, the head of the studio, so Freddie paid a call on Mr. Mayer. What happened next is best told in Freddie's own words.

"I told him that we had to have a car for the dog because he wasn't allowed to ride on the bus. No dogs are allowed to ride on the bus, you see. We couldn't bring the dog to the studio without a car.

"Mr. Mayer said he would attend to it right away," Freddie continued. "We had to wait a short while because they didn't have a black car. We wanted a black car. I think they're much nicer, don't you?"

It was agreed that a black car was much to be desired, but why did Freddie believe he could get a car by merely asking Mr. Mayer for one?

"Oh, I was sure Mr. Mayer would give us one. He's a charming gentleman and we're very good friends," Freddie explained airily.

This confidence was no doubt fostered by his experience, a few months previous, when he wanted very much to own a bicycle. His aunt, fearing an accident, refused to allow him to buy one. Freddie figured out in his own mind that if a bicycle were given to him, his battle would be more than half won, so he hinted to David Selznik that he "would like it extremely well" if he had a bicycle.

Unaware of Miss Bartholomew's objections, Mr. Selznick gave Freddie a bicycle and everything turned out as Freddie had hoped. It was no doubt a spirit of gratitude which prompted him, the next time he visited Mr. Selznick's office, to add his bit to a handsomely carved chair. This he did by cutting his initials on the largest polished surface he could find, right in the middle of the back of the chair.

All of which proves him just a normal, fun-loving boy, but doesn't answer any questions as to whether or not he has a chance to become a normal man. What lies before this attractive, unusual child, who is so clever as to be called a genius?

The studio has four or five pictures in mind as starring vehicles for him, all to be made within the next year. Besides, he has been loaned to 20th Century-Fox to do "Professional Soldier," with Victor McLaglen and then he will portray "Little Lord Fauntleroy" for United Artists—all good breaks, but what of the future? Even a contract that will, within a few years, make him a rich young man, can't stop Freddie from growing. And there is a strange lack of screen roles for a boy of adolescent age. Even when he reaches manhood there is no assurance that he will be as attractive a man as he is a child. Has he plans? Will he be prepared for whatever comes? I wondered, and I found out.

Freddie has a definite plan for his future. Although his new contract, which he has just signed, covers a seven-year period, he anticipates a time within a few years when there will be no roles for him and he is determined to utilize that time to further his education. His earnings are put into a trust fund which will provide for his advanced schooling as well as for his future. He wants a good, solid education—"Oxford and other good English schools"—because, he will tell you earnestly, "I want to write," and if you ask him what he wants to write he will say, confidently, "Oh, classics, like Shakespeare."

Freddie understands everything that is going on about him. He realizes his importance in the film world. But tennis, swimming, horseback riding and all the sports enjoyed by any normal boy, occupy his thoughts for the most part.

HE knows that articles are written about him in newspapers and magazines, but he isn't interested in reading them.

"Why should I?" he asks blandly. "I know all about myself."

He never reads the reviews of his pictures and, not without some logic, explains: "If they say nice things about me, I don't need to know that. If they criticize my work, it's too late to do anything about it. I did my best when I made the picture."

He hates to watch himself on the screen, preferring for amusement to see a good murder mystery or a western picture.

It is most difficult to remember, when talking to this boy, that he is but eleven years old because he is mentally so much older. He has an eager, curious mind that has grasped and retained everything he has ever heard. He has stored up knowledge far beyond his years, and his cultural background is one that the majority of grown people might envy. He is an omniverous reader, poring over and re-reading books that ordinarily would be considered far beyond the understanding of a boy who is in the eighth grade of grammar school.

Meet Freddie Bartholomew's family. His sisters, Eileen and Hilda, his father and mother. They lost Freddie's guardianship to his Aunt Cis, who has taken care of him since he was three years old.

HE talks of his roles with mature understanding. In speaking of the forthcoming "Oliver Twist," in which he will portray the title role, he remarked, "Oliver was such a sad little fellow. I'll try to be as much like him as I can, but I do hope I won't be that sad."

But don't get the impression that he is always serious. As a matter of fact, he is full of fun and loves nothing better than to tease or play a prank on someone. When he worked with Miss Garbo in "Anna Karenina," the two struck up a close friendship. He learned that he could make her laugh and cause her to break up a scene by talking Pig Latin in imitation of the difficult-to-pronounce Russian names. It took the combined efforts of the director, Freddie's tutor and his aunt to induce him to stop.

"She's sweet," he said, in speaking of Garbo. "I like her. We have so much in common. And do you know," he said, his eyes wide, "I can lift her? Really, I can. I lifted her this far from the floor," measuring six inches or so with his hands.

For no obvious reason this memory seemed to please the little man very much and he laughed heartily to himself. The joke, it was told me later, was a series of pranks he played on the great star all through the picture.

In addition to becoming a writer, Freddie's greatest ambition at the moment is to own a large ranch and a lot of horses. Recently he spent several weeks on a dude ranch in Arizona. He spent all the time he wasn't riding with the cowboys, saddling horses for the other guests to ride.

SINCE his visit to the ranch, his favorite cowboy visited Freddie at the studio and brought him a lariat. To the great consternation of everyone at the studio, Freddie learned to rope things. Until he tires of his rope, no one within reach of the weapon is safe, for Freddie is no respecter of persons.

He is so fond of this particular cowboy that he would like to keep him in the family. He figured out the easiest way would be for the cowboy to marry his Aunt Cis.

"Of course," he told her patronizingly, "as long as I'm around you won't need anyone else, but if anything should happen to me, it would be a good idea for you to marry him so he could take care of you."

"Taking care" of his aunt is a responsibility that Freddie doesn't take lightly. When she suggested that she would learn to drive the new car, Freddie objected.

"It's not a woman's work," he protested so vigorously that the idea was given up.

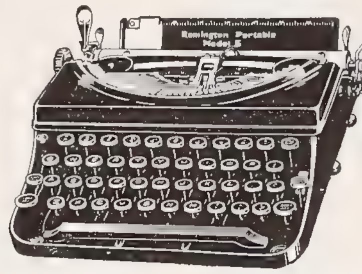
He not only takes care of his Aunt but his two sisters, Eileen and Hilda, as well. When a recent court order made his Aunt Cis his sole guardian, Freddie promised to contribute to the support of his sisters, who are living in England.

In spite of his tender years, he is doing a man's work in that he supports his relatives, and he feels his responsibilities keenly. His tutor declares him to be an excellent student and far ahead of the school standard fixed for a boy his age. It is safe to say that regardless of what profession he chooses after he is grown, he will be no ordinary man. In fact, right now he is a most remarkable fellow!

FACTORY TO YOU

LATEST MODEL REMINGTON TYPEWRITERS

BRAND-new, latest model Remington for only 10¢ a day! Here is your opportunity to get a perfect writing machine at an amazingly low price direct from the factory. Every essential feature of large office typewriters—standard 4-row keyboard, standard width carriage, margin release, back spacer, automatic ribbon reverse. Act now while this special opportunity holds good. Send coupon TODAY for details.



10¢ A DAY

Money Back Guarantee
10-Day Free Trial Offer

YOU DON'T RISK A PENNY

We send you the Remington Portable, Model 5, direct from the factory with 10 days' free trial. If you are not satisfied, send it back. We pay shipping charges both ways.

FREE →

TYPING COURSE

With your new Remington we will send you — absolutely FREE — a 19-page course in typing. It teaches the Touch System, used by all expert typists. It is simply written and completely illustrated. Instructions are as simple as A, B, C. Even a child can easily understand this method. A little study and the average person, child or adult, becomes fascinated. Follow this course during the 10-Day Trial Period we give you with your typewriter and you will wonder why you ever took the trouble to write letters by hand.

FREE →

CARRYING CASE

Also under this new Purchase Plan we will send you FREE with every Remington Model 5 a special carrying case sturdily built of 3-ply wood. This handsome case is covered with heavy du Pont fabric. The top is removed by one motion, leaving the machine firmly attached to the base. This makes it easy to use your Remington anywhere—on knees, in chairs, on trains. Don't delay . . . send in the coupon for complete details!

MONEY-MAKING OPPORTUNITIES OPEN. Hundreds of jobs are waiting for people who can type. A typewriter helps you put your ideas on paper in logical, impressive form . . . helps you write clear, understandable sales reports, letters, articles, stories. A Remington Portable has started many a young man and woman on the road to success.

A GIFT FOR ALL THE FAMILY. If you want a gift for birthday, Christmas or graduation . . . one Father, Mother, Sister or Brother will use and appreciate for years to come . . . give a Remington Portable. We will send a Remington Model 5 to anyone you name, and you can still pay for it at only 10c a day. Few gifts are so universally pleasing as a new Remington Portable. Write today.

SEND COUPON WHILE LOW PRICES HOLD

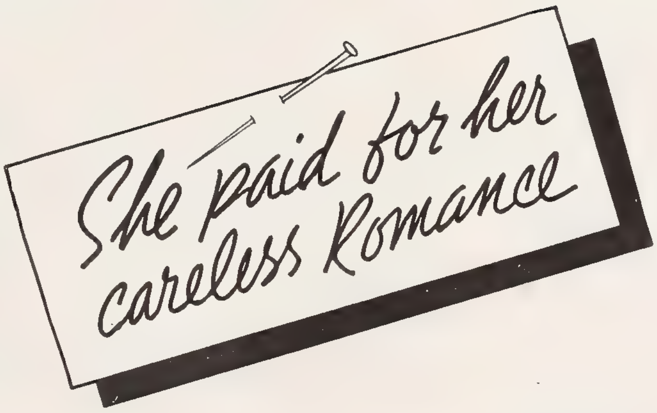
Remington Rand, Inc., Dept. 140-1
205 E. 42d Street, New York, N. Y.

Please tell me how I can get a new Remington Portable typewriter, plus FREE Typing Course and carrying case, for only 10c a day. Also send me new illustrated catalogue.

Name________________

Address________________

City________________ State________



Her wedding eve! How could she know that one last fling could end in disaster for herself and all who loved her?

Iris, alone at last with Don, was suddenly terrified. His hand slid along the railing and rested upon her own. She drew hers away with a little cry, then laughed tremulously to hide her perturbation.

"Moonlight does tricks with one's emotions," he said huskily, as though he had not noticed her gesture.

Standing there beside him, so tall, so capable of carrying all her burdens, she felt an almost ungovernable desire to tell him the truth and let him decide what she must do.

Suddenly she was crying softly, tearlessly, held close in his arms. It swept over her just how glorious it could be if she dared relax, dared let herself be attracted by this man who so obviously was attracted to her. She closed her eyes to stifle the thought of the beauty of what might have been and what never could be now! What desperate thing stood between Iris and Don?

What dark secret of her past was forever to darken their lives, their love?

BEULAH POYNTER will tell you in her new novel

"FIND THAT WOMAN!"

Read it in the January Issue

SWEETHEART STORIES

Why Men Fall For Miriam Hopkins

(Continued from page 33)

easily amused. And she lets the menfolk putter around the kitchen, appealing to their vanity, if not their stomachs, by complimenting their efforts. She's frank—doesn't put on any act about "simply loving housework," but can do it when she has to. And makes a great appeal to the paternal instinct by her enthusiasm for her adopted son.

It was at this point that the butler brought in a messenger boy with a note for Miss Hopkins. When she had read it, the youngster asked, in a scared, awe-struck voice, "Wouldya mind writin' your name on the envelope for me, Miss?"

Miriam smiled and shook her head, "Oh, that's not good enough for you," she said. "What's your name?"

"Joe," he said.

She went to the desk and hunted through it. "Sorry, but I can't find a photograph. Maybe this'll do. . . ." She took one of her letterheads and scribbled Joe a note on it, gave it to him.

The boy—he was about seventeen—was too happy to thank her. He grinned from ear to ear and kept saying, "Gee—oh, gee!" to himself as he stumbled out. Stumbled is the word, because he couldn't take his eyes off the note, and very nearly fell down the stairs. He was the happiest kid in the western hemisphere.

YOU see, Miriam doesn't divide people into two classes—those who can be of use to her and those who can't—as some stars do. She won't bother with a bore whose only recommendation is that he's a "big shot." Conversely, she never looks upon anyone as an "inferior" just because he happens to have a prosaic job. She and her colored maid hold long conversations, and the maid, together with her large brood of children, is permitted to live in the house while Miriam is in Hollywood.

Her French chef is another of her good friends. She even lets him teach her his native tongue, much to his delight. And Michael's nurse, an astrology fan, gets a couple of extra nights off every week to go star-gazing, after which Miss Hopkins practises horoscopy with her. Miriam gets a big kick out of casual conversation with taxi drivers and elevator men, too. "They're more interesting than some of my friends," she says. "I think anyone whose work brings him into contact with large numbers of people accumulates a lot of interesting conversation.

"For that matter, the quiet little fellow who sits in a corner by himself at a party is likely to be the most interesting man in the room. You don't have to be somebody who does important things to be interesting. The world needs people who appreciate art and music and literature and all those things, as well as people who create them.

"I like to talk to people, and I like to listen. No, I don't play bridge or golf. I haven't time for the practise they require. I like to walk, to read, to play tennis, to dance and to listen to music. I like parties, but I detest people who're the life of the party. They're a terrible strain on everyone else. I don't think much of parlor games and intelligence tests, either, because the dullest people usually seem to win. Show-offs of any sort are very trying.

"If I like people, I like them for themselves, not for what they've done or what they own. Most of my friends aren't in pictures—they're in all walks of life. People who are well informed and alert are always good company, no matter what their occupation is. They have something to say instead of just a lot of words. I loathe people who are deliberately 'arty'."

NOW, looking over this little speech of Miriam's, we can find a few more clews to her charm. She likes to listen as well as talk. She appreciates people for what they really are, and if she doesn't like them, she won't be bothered. Sure, she's frank about it; maybe that's how she got a reputation for being rude because plenty of people have told me that she can be most unpleasant upon occasion.

But rumors of that sort can spring from truly trivial incidents. For example, while I was with her she received a phone call from someone who wanted her to pose for a publicity picture, stepping into an airplane with a sleeping suit for Baby Michael under her arm. "No," she said into the transmitter, "he doesn't wear that sort of suit and it wouldn't be fair to make people think he does. I'm sorry, but I can't do it."

Probably the press agent whose request she refused will tell how he was high-hatted by the "snooty" Miss Hopkins. But you and I know better; we know that she wouldn't go for the stunt (which, incidentally, would have gotten her picture into lots of newspapers and magazines) because she didn't want to fool people. Sure, she's endorsed things. A leading brand of cigarettes, for instance. But when she smokes, which is seldom, that's the brand she really uses.

And men do like honesty in their women.

Just to check up and see whether the conversation was as revealing as I thought, I went to see three men who know her—men who have been her friends for several years. Their names don't matter, and I'm leaving them out because rumors concerning Hollywood stars' affections grow so rapidly, even when utterly unfounded.

Man Number One, a writer, said, "We've been friends for a mighty long time and still I don't know Miriam. She's unpredictable. You never know what she's going to say or do. I've never tried to analyze it before, but if I must pick one quality which has particularly fascinated me, it's that she's never tiresome."

Said Man Number Two, a business man, "She's sympathetic and understanding. She's always willing to listen to your troubles as well as to your triumphs. She's not just a fair weather friend, in fact, I think she's even nicer to people when they're having setbacks than just after they've experienced some particular success. After all, it's when you're in trouble that a woman's sympathy counts most."

(Maybe that's the "inside" on the story about the writer who is said to have been snubbed when he phoned to tell about selling his play.)

And Man Number Three, a movie director, added, "I like Miriam because she doesn't put on an act. She's always herself. Sometimes she may not be in as amiable a mood as at other times, but she's no hypocrite. She doesn't go temperamental, either—no scenes. If she's tired and wants to be left alone, she says so. The rest of the time, she's mighty good company."

(How does that fit in with the yacht ride story?)

So, ladies, if you're the Miriam Hopkins type, which means an average American girl, not especially beautiful, but no eyesore, either, you might take a few leaves from her book. It seems to work.

You don't need to have the disposition of an angel all the time. Apparently men get even more enthralled when they don't know whether you're going to be nice to them or not. Perhaps it's because they like to recall when somebody else couldn't get along with you that they get a big kick out of a few kind words.

Most of the heroines of literature had their whims and their moods—their spells of not wanting to bother with anybody and their pleasure in talking to the Charcoal Burner's third assistant.

Maybe it's because Miriam brings these fairy princesses to life that she has captivated almost every man who has met her.

Maybe it's because they never know how she's going to treat them.

Maybe it's because she's thoughtful of them, sometimes—maybe because she has a wide variety of interests—maybe because she seems to be brimming over with vitality.

They're all good ideas.

Why not try 'em and see how they work—for you?

Miriam Hopkins with two amused escorts. The one on the left is Max Ree, costume designer, and the other is Sam Wasson.

The Modern Hostess

(Continued from page 9)

recipes for both kinds.

CRANBERRY SAUCE

2 cups cranberries
1 cup sugar
½ cup boiling water

Pick over and wash cranberries carefully. Place sugar and water in saucepan and boil for ten minutes. Add cranberries and cook them gently in the syrup for twenty minutes longer. Store away in sterilized jars until ready to use.

CRANBERRY JELLY

4 cups cranberries
2 cups boiling water
2 cups sugar

Pick over and wash cranberries carefully. Place berries in saucepan, add water and boil twenty minutes. Press the berries through a sieve. Add sugar and cook gently 5 minutes longer. Pour into molds or jelly glasses. For a novel way of serving cranberry jelly cut molded jelly into thin slices, then cut slices into fancy shapes with cooky cutters.

While Reta Beery is busy in the kitchen with the turkey or cranberries, blonde Carol Ann (domestically attired in one of the little hand-embroidered peasant aprons that she and Wally bought in Germany on their recent European trip) busily takes care of her own small chores in a corner of the kitchen. Like all youngsters she loves to cut out cookies—hearts and diamonds, bunny rabbits, birds and Christmas trees! But on the day I visited there she was busy with blunt shears snipping marshmallows for the confection that the Beerys have named "Carol Ann Date Loaf" in her honor. It is a wholesome dainty which other children besides Carol Ann will love. Mothers will like it, too, for it involves not one bit of baking. Here is the recipe:

CAROL ANN DATE LOAF

15 graham crackers
20 marshmallows, cut into small pieces
1 package pasteurized, pitted dates, chopped fine
1 cup walnut meats, chopped fine
⅓ cup cream

Put crackers through food grinder or roll out to make fine crumbs. Reserve ¼ cup crumbs. Combine remaining crumbs with cut marshmallows, chopped dates and chopped walnuts. Moisten mixture with cream. Blend all together thoroughly. Form into a roll and cover with remaining ¼ cup crumbs. Wrap in wax paper and store in refrigerator several hours or over night. Serve in thin slices with whipped cream.

Of course the Beerys will have dozens and dozens of Christmas cookies besides those that Carol Ann has the patience to cut out herself. There will be the hard, spicy, brown, sugared Pfeffernuesse, made in strictest accordance with an old German recipe, and Mandelkranze—little cooky rings that all youngsters will adore. These are displayed on the Beerys' long buffet which is further loaded with fruits, nuts, candies and noggins of egg nog. You may have recipes for these cookies, you know, if you would like to have them.

Another Beery Holiday Special for the children of the party will be Honey Cake which originated in Hungary, but for which Reta Beery now has the recipe. You, too, can make this delicious nut and honey treat by sending for the leaflet.

On Christmas morning, big, bluff, Wally has his domestic stint to do, too, for someone has to make that traditional Christmas beverage, egg nog. So Wally, with the aid of the butler, summons up milk, cognac, rum, eggs and pulverized sugar and sets to work. Wouldn't we all love to be there to sample the results with him! However, if you have a man under your roof-tree perhaps you would like to have Wallace Beery's egg nog recipe so that your own lord and master can try his hand at making it. That recipe, also, is included in the leaflet.

Doubtless the most welcome of all the recipes, however, will be the one for Reta's Pumpkin Walnut Pie. Several of these pies will be safely stored away as the perfect Christmas dinner dessert, when the Beery's start their day of celebration by opening the packages under the tree. Even little Carol Ann is allowed to have a wee sliver of Pumpkin Walnut Pie on Christmas. And, of course, she'll have a generous piece of turkey for that is a delicacy which tickles her palate as well as Wally's. In fact on December 25th Carol Ann's usually simple eating schedule will be disregarded completely and she will be allowed to sample small portions of each and every item of the feast.

"I want a bag of toys, some easy little songs and a piano," she told Santa's emissary, Wallace Beery, the other day. She is a cute and wise little youngster, this little blonde darling who dominates the affections of the entire Beery household.

But on Christmas day all thoughts of careers will be forgotten in the delights of Reta Beery's bounteous dinner . . . the table fairly groaning under the weight of the succulent turkey with its steaming, nutty stuffing, the shimmering cranberry jelly, the mounds of vegetables, the plates of delicacies and finally the spicy golden pies, crowned with walnuts! While on the sideboard, squares of Honey Cake and plates heaped high with cookies will tempt flagging appetites. Mrs. Beery's recipes for the holiday fare I have described are so delicious that you, too, would enjoy sitting down at your own festive board to partake of one or all of her famous specialties.

You've already guessed, if you don't already know, that all you have to do to get copies of these recipes is to ask for them! The Beery recipe leaflet is absolutely free and the coupon will bring you your set promptly.

So here's wishing you all a Merry Christmas, with Reta Beery's recipes for Turkey Stuffing, Honey Cake, Egg Nog, Pumpkin Walnut Pie and two kinds of cookies to make it merrier!

HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN MAGAZINE
149 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

Please send me a free leaflet containing Wallace Beery recipes for special holiday fare.

NAME..

STREET..

CITY.............. STATE..........

. . . let Gerber's worry about the strained foods for your baby . . .

You can safely leave all that to us. Your baby's other needs, and your family's and your own, are too important to permit you to waste hours and hours in the kitchen—pushing spinach through a sieve!

Besides—and we say it with all modesty—we think we can do it better! Many baby-feeding specialists agree with us, too. That is because we are specialists. We use methods and equipment, and exercise a precision of scientific control, that the most complete home kitchen could not even approach.

Saving Vitamins and Minerals

Most important of all, Gerber processes prevent losses of nutritive value that so often occur in home cooking. We are able to retain more of vitamin C, because we cook with air excluded; and we save valuable minerals that may be poured off with the cooking water.

Another point—all our vegetables are "fancy," grown from special seed, picked at the peak of goodness, and packed in all their garden freshness. Then, we use a new process, "Shaker Cooking," which insures thorough cooking in less time, so your baby may have fresher-looking, fresher-tasting vegetables to tempt his budding appetite. (Gerber's are intentionally left unseasoned, so your physician may prescribe every detail of baby's diet.)

Let Gerber's 9 Strained Vegetables and Cereal solve your feeding problem and relieve you of work and worry. Read the names below—perhaps you have been using only two or three kinds. Your dealer will gladly supply all nine.

Gerber's

Shaker-Cooked Strained Foods

Strained Vegetable Soup . Tomatoes . Green Beans . Beets . Carrots . Prunes . Peas . Spinach 4½-oz. cans. Strained Cereal . 4½ and 10¼-oz. cans.

Every Mother Should Have This Book!

A treasure-house of valuable suggestions on baby's feeding, clothing, bathing, training, etc., with well-planned tables for filling in priceless records of baby's progress and history. 32 pages 5½ x 8½ in. By Harriet Davis, R. N. Send 3 Gerber labels or 10c, coin or stamps, for your copy.

GERBER PRODUCTS CO., FREMONT, MICHIGAN
(In Canada: Grown and Packed by Fine Foods of Canada, Ltd., Tecumseh, Ont.) MM-1-B

Name..
Address..
City.......................State..........

Who Will Be Hollywood's Jenny Lind?

(Continued from page 31)

star instead in "Maytime," which Jeanette MacDonald spurned. Thus the lovely golden-haired star has won another round from her opponent!

But Miss MacDonald's troubles are not yet over, for she now has a rival right on her home lot, in the person of young Marion Talley, Metropolitan soprano. When two prima donnas are under contract to one company there is bound to be fireworks and tight competition. For, eventually, the most popular one will get the choice singing parts. Miss MacDonald has no way of telling just how Miss Talley will strike the public's fancy. She does know that the young newcomer from opera is to be given a big build-up under Leo, the Lion's trademark, with her first picture, "Tales of Hoffman," already announced as the vehicle for her debut. It seems Miss MacDonald will have war not only outside of her own gates, but perhaps revolution at home.

And Miss Talley—new to Hollywood, inexperienced in the tricks of movie technique, at the mercy of the camera—surely realizes, too, that she will be compelled to vie with Jeanette MacDonald's popularity if she wishes to capture for herself the rich rewards of a permanent place in the Hollywood sun. In order to do so she must submit to the Hollywood machine, and make herself over from the buxom, wholesome lady that she is into a creature of celluloid, equally as enticing and glamorous as Jeanette MacDonald. She must learn from the beginning that not only must she be superior in voice, but in acting as well. The motion picture is a visual art. A vocal conquest is only half a victory. It is a lesson which even Miss MacDonald had to learn when she gave up Broadway for Hollywood to play in "The Vagabond Lover."

As the new season progresses the well established thrones of Jeanette MacDonald and Grace Moore totter while Hollywood waits to witness the initial motion picture appearances of Lily Pons and Gladys Swarthout, the two latest contenders for the queen's crown. Miss Swarthout's first picture, "Rose of the Rancho," a musical adaptation of the famous Belasco play, has just been released and Miss Pons' cinema operetta, "I Dream Too Much," also reaches movie audiences at the same time. They have been released almost simultaneously to an eagerly waiting public, already educated by the far reaching voice of radio to expect only the best from these two divas.

Swarthout and Pons are certain to put a dent in Grace Moore's spectacular success. Miss Moore, up until this time, has had the operatic field in pictures exclusively to herself, having been the first of the Metropolitan stars to transfer her talents to the screen. Already she has thrilled audiences the world over with her silver-sheet renditions of the best arias from "Madame Butterfly" and "La Boheme."

Miss Swarthout, like Miss Moore, is an American-born artiste. She brings to the screen a type of American beauty such as one might find in any community in the United States. Besides she has in her favor a more youthful appearance than her competitors, a singing voice said by music critics to be of the finest quality, and a physical make-up which will not limit her to a characteristic role. Photographically she is declared by her cameramen to be an almost perfect screen subject. Generally, she might be safely catalogued as being much like Grace Moore in temperament, personal history and talent. Comparisons between them will be inevitable.

The petite Pons on the other hand is as far removed from Grace Moore as Janet Gaynor is when compared with Garbo. Pons, in truth, is a veritable singing Gaynor. Her dainty loveliness, doll-like figure and dark comeliness made her the most individual prima donna in the world of opera, just as they will do in motion pictures. Added to the asset of possessing a tone quality proclaimed the world over for its bell-like clearness, she has also the aura of glamor. Swarthout and Pons may be considered rivals only vocally, but their screen personalities will set them worlds apart. Perhaps that is why they continue to be such good friends. On Lily Pons' arrival in Hollywood Gladys Swarthout threw an elaborate party in her honor at which Grace Moore was conspicuously absent.

Together, Moore, Swarthout and Pons are the symbols of the new transition that has come over opera in the last half decade. Their beauty, svelte figures, chic style and adaptability to the demands of modern audiences outdate and outmode such earlier favorites of the gilded Opera Houses as Melba, Mary Garden and Geraldine Farrar. Through the influence of Hollywood they have made avoirdupois an obsolete charm. Buxom Carmens are no longer tolerated. Audiences laugh at two-hundred-pound Manons and any Madame Butterfly who cannot fit into a kimono designed for a girlish figure is taboo, no matter how golden her voice.

Yet Jeritza (now the wife of the film chief, Winfield Sheehan), who is by no means a slight woman, looms upon the Hollywood horizon as the next great opera star to cast her lot with the cinema. Strangely enough, Madame Jeritza's chances for success in the new medium are more than favorable. It may be sacrilege and almost impudent to suggest, but the blonde Viennese songbird could easily be ballyhooed into a grand opera version of our own Mae West!

She has the same type of "Floradora" figure, the identical buxom lustiness, and a corresponding flair for buoyant portrayal. Even in coloring, they are enough alike to be unmistakably related to the same species of feminine beauty. Can you think of any other prima donna who could successfully suggest "Diamond Lil" if that infamous lady were suddenly made the chief heroine of a Grand Opera? Her success might be as phenomenal as Mae West's. There would be no question of competition, because in such characterizations, set to music, Jeritza would rule in a realm of her own, the undisputed queen of a new kind of operatic treatment.

Another lovely Viennese singer comes to us in the person of Marta Eggerth, who arrived on these shores recently to star in a series of Universal operettas. Miss Eggerth, originally from Budapest, has been prominent in Continental music circles since she was twelve. At twenty-five she comes to Hollywood a full-fledged star equipped to challenge the supremacy of all comers. Paris, London, Berlin, Budapest and Vienna have all acclaimed her. Now she is ready for the conquest of larger worlds via the far reaching magic of the screen. In this country she is chiefly noted for her work opposite Jan Kiepura (to whom she is rumored married), and for her splendid singing performance in the Schubert film, "Unfinished Symphony." While she may not achieve first place as the "Jenny Lind of Hollywood," it would be hard to find any singer better suited to play Lind on the screen. Eggerth is excitingly reminiscent of the Swedish Nightingale.

Meanwhile the Paramount lot has become sort of a camping ground for operatic divas. Gladys Swarthout, Mary Ellis and Kitty Carlisle are already parked there, with Helen Jepson moving in and Jeritza reported on her way. Any Paramount executive, six months from now, will be able to answer intelligently the question, "Are prima donnas temperamental?"

How do some of the lesser ladies of the high C's rate on the Hollywood stockboard of popularity? Mary Ellis, the original Broadway "Rose Marie," and a recruit from Covent Garden in London, has made two Paramount pictures, but so far has failed to cause Grace Moore or Jeanette MacDonald the least misgivings. Kitty Carlisle got off to a swell start, but failed to get the right roles. She deserves something better than a lead opposite Bing Crosby. Perhaps her role in the Marx Brothers' musical, "A Night at the Opera," in which she sings several operatic numbers straight, may give her the momentum she needs to make her a real competitor for first honors. Irene Dunne, who has used her singing voice too infrequently on the screen, will this year devote her talents almost exclusively to musical pictures. After "Magnificent Obsession" she will play Magnolia in "Show Boat," recreating the role which brought her into the limelight when the late Ziegfeld presented her in the same piece on Broadway. Some of the most beautiful and beloved American melodies are in this show. It should send Irene's stock soaring. Later this season Jessie Matthews will be over from London to make musicals for M-G-M. If she can repeat the success she achieved for herself abroad, she will be tops. Jane Froman of radio and Broadway musical comedy, is Warner Brothers' contribution to the contest.

At no time in the world's history has so much musical talent been gathered together in one place as there is in Hollywood this year—singers, composers, musical directors, music teachers of renown. Scheduled on producers' programs are films depicting the lives and careers of such great music masters as Victor Herbert, Beethoven, Wagner, Schubert, Chopin. Hollywood is to be turned into a gigantic music box.

Lovers of opera think of Gatti-Casazza, the grand old man of opera, who organized the Metropolitan and guided its destiny for thirty years, and shake their heads with pity. Poor Gatti-Casazza, no wonder he retired. They're canning opera now. You'll be able to see Grace Moore in "Girl of the Golden West" and Lawrence Tibbett in "Pagliacci" on a double bill for fifteen cents! But they are probably wrong. No doubt the old man's heart is filled with joy at the thought that at last these masterpieces have been made available for the great masses who could rarely afford a seat in the Opera House. He, too, is probably sitting back serenely in his study wondering which one of his children will become the Jenny Lind of the screen. Will it be Grace Moore, or Lily Pons, or Gladys Swarthout? Will it be the new Helen Jepson? Or will it be some unknown who has never even seen the inside of an Opera House?

Don't Marry a Marx Brother!

(Continued from page 43)

would be good at it, if he only tried, asked him to take her dancing. With an unusual display of willingness for one who habitually loathes such a pastime, Groucho consented.

But once seated on the edge of the dance floor, he refused to budge from the table. Fox-trot after fox-trot was played and he stubbornly stuck to his chair. However, when the orchestra struck up a tango, Groucho, who had never, in his life, danced one, jumped to his feet as he shouted, "Ah, that's what I've been waiting for!" and whirled an astonished mate about the room.

None of the other guests tangoed. To his joy, no one else rose. This rare opportunity for exhibitionism could not be overlooked, not by a Marx brother. Holding Ruth at arm's length, Groucho stared soulfully into her eyes as he performed a burlesque version of the dance. Mortified, she begged him to quit and quietly return to their table. His answer was a devilish grin. So, uncomfortably conscious of spectators convulsed by his antics, Ruth Marx was obliged to finish the number. She is convinced that it was the longest tango ever played.

GROUCHO fails to simplify the servant problem. Once, when their trunks arrived from the Coast, and a new maid, not knowing how much to tip, asked him what she should give the expressman, he airily suggested she give him the piano.

He answers the telephone himself, but disguises his voice, pretending to be a colored maid, and not a bright one. After discovering the caller's identity, Groucho, according to his mood, does one of three things: either he swears Mr. Marx fled the city, or he solemnly assures a shocked party that Mr. Marx just passed away; on occasion he becomes extremely polite, promises to fetch Mr. Marx, pauses, takes a deep breath, and then continues in his own voice. Servants do not like this. It gets them nervous.

The business of success makes it impossible for the Marxes to live in one locality. Actors out of work can loaf by the year on Forty-seventh Street, but box-office names must travel wherever their efforts send them. When the Marx Brothers had established themselves on Broadway, Groucho bought a house in Great Neck. No sooner did he settle his family there than Hollywood called. They leased the Great Neck residence and departed for California, where Groucho invested in another home. Then radio demands meant New York again, and now "A Night at the Opera" has swept them back to California.

In this picture the Marxes did something never attempted by Hollywood comedians. Before filming the production they took it on the road as a legitimate show. "Because," says Groucho, "no matter what we may think is funny, we can't really tell until we try it out. We let the audience decide upon our gags."

Supporting the Marxes in "A Night at the Opera" are those three Broadway singers, Alan Jones, Kitty Carlisle and Walter King. And, of course, Margaret Dumont, the perennial butt of their screen jokes. For the past nine years she has patiently stood for their on and off-stage humor. Groucho loves to pull chairs from under leading ladies. So Margaret Dumont can sympathize with the Marx friends and relatives.

Prior to the Great Neck days, the Marxes terrified their Broadway colleagues. It was a complicated job. One of them would date an unsuspecting friend. This being the prohibition era, another brother suggested visiting a speakeasy, and all drove down deserted streets to a warehouse near the East River. If the victim timidly inquired whether they knew where they were going, the Marxes quieted his fears. Arriving at the warehouse, they knocked at a door, flung open by a shirtless gentleman resembling Mr. Eugene O'Neill's "Hairy Ape." Matters were made more enticing by his right arm which brandished a thick club. As soon as he gruffly ushered them into a small ante-chamber, the lights went out, giving the Marxes opportunity to run into an adjoining room, where, from a transom, they could watch what happened.

Their friend was left alone with a supposedly crazy man, who shouted the police were coming, and waving the club, ordered

You've heard Eddie Duchin's orchestra on the radio many times but now you're going to see it, too. Here's Eddie with Bennie Bartlett as they appear in "Coronado."

BRIGHT EYE DEAS by Jane Heath

Is THERE some one for whose benefit you'd like to look especially lovely, evenings, in your lamp-lit living-room? Then this simple experiment may give you a brand-new idea on how to do it:

Just arrange your lamplight—make up your face as usual (omitting all eye make-up to start with). Then take your KURLASH and curl the lashes of one eye. Touch them with LASHTINT. And shade the same eyelid with a little SHADETTE. Now—inspect your face closely in a hand mirror, as the light falls across it. One side will seem softer, clearer, more subtly colored. Because the eye you have beautified looks larger, brighter, with longer, darker lashes. That's eye beauty! You'll never neglect it—or KURLASH—the little gadget that curls lashes without heat, cosmetics, or practice. ($1 at good stores.)

Lashtint by Kurlash

Kurlene for eyelashes by Kurlash

LASHTINT, the liquid mascara, may be applied while the lashes are being curled. Touch the little glass rod to them as they are held in the rubber bows of KURLASH. LASHTINT will darken the tips delicately and it doesn't crack, stiffen, wash or weep off—in black, brown, or blue, $1.

Another clever trick is to rub KURLENE on the lashes before you curl them, so they'll be silken and full of dancing rainbows. KURLENE is a scientific formula for eyelash luxuriance. 50c and $1.

• Have you tried TWISSORS—the new tweezers with scissor handles—marvelously efficient—25c.

Write JANE HEATH for advice about eye beauty. Give your coloring for personal beauty plan. Address Dept. MM-1.

Kurlash

The Kurlash Company, Rochester, N. Y. The Kurlash Company of Canada, at Toronto, 3.

him to make believe he was a lot of people. Shaking, the friend obeyed, dancing and singing until the Marxes were sufficiently amused and allowed him to escape.

Afterwards they would tell him the truth. The warehouse belonged to a man they knew, and, for his efforts, they paid the dramatic caretaker a salary which went towards sending his son through college!

AT a party given by Sam Harris, Groucho left the room and surreptitiously covered his fingers with burnt cork. Returning, he suggested an "original" game called, "Pinchy-Winchy."

"We all sit in a circle on the floor. And saying 'Pinchy-Winchy,' I pinch the cheeks of the man next to me. He, in turn, pinches the cheeks of the person next to him, and so on. Then we go to someone else's house, pick up more people, and do it again!" explained Groucho.

Of course, the man seated near Groucho unknowingly came away with a black face. When the group migrated to another house his face became blacker. And he could not understand why the rest kept laughing at what seemed to him a dull game.

During their first Hollywood sojourn, the Groucho Marxes planned a harmless evening at the movies, and they left, in their home, a guest, Arthur Sheekman, who was writing material for Groucho's radio programs.

Hardly had they gone when the telephone rang and a man, saying he represented "The Southern California Water Supply Company," informed Mr. Sheekman that, by morning, all water would be shut off, and suggested he fill the tubs. When Ruth and Groucho returned, Mr. Sheekman had gallantly filled every available vessel.

It was not until late the following day that they, along with other residents of the section, discovered this alarm had been one of Zeppo Marx's ideas.

The average in-law problems are nothing compared to the daily entanglements facing Ruth Marx. The brothers take turns telephoning her, and in falsetto tones, successfully imitate a despised lady cousin.

And while "The Cocoanuts" was running on Broadway, brother-in-law Chico put over one of his jokes. Ruth had sent a friend of hers, a dignified lady, backstage. Chico kindly offered to see that the visitor received a good orchestra seat. Writing something on the back of her card, and telling her to present it to the manager, he bowed graciously. The lady, never glancing at Chico's penciled scrawl, handed the card to the manager, who, upon reading it, furiously ordered her out of the theatre. It was months before she would speak to Ruth. Up to date, Chico has refused to reveal the contents of his message.

HARPO, whose silence has proved so golden, is the brother with but one trick. He performs it in his usual thorough fashion. He finds it difficult to remember names. Being a bachelor he has a series of lady friends, but whether the current sweetheart is American or foreign born, actress, writer or heiress, to Harpo, she is Miss Benson. And wherever he takes her, she is known as Miss Benson. This involves matters. Ruth, inviting him and his current girl-friend to a party, is obliged to introduce the guests to a Miss Benson, although, in that very month, she may have had them meet half a dozen ladies bearing the same name.

No doubt the Marxes inherit their gift for nonsense. Al Shean of that famous team "Gallagher and Shean," is an uncle. Their father too, was noted for his repartee.

I remember talking to the elder Marx, and commenting on the smartness of his attire. He winked in appreciation as he said, "Why shouldn't I look stylish! I have on Harpo's hat, Groucho's coat, Chico's gloves, and I'm carrying Zeppo's cane!"

Zeppo, who has given up the screen to turn his talents to being an author-and-actor agent, was the first Marx to meet Ruth. He invited her to watch their act. At the stage door she was introduced to Groucho, who carried a guitar plus numerous packages. Upon meeting Ruth, his initial words were, "I think I'll get married so I can have someone to carry my packages."

Ten weeks later they were married.

Groucho bought an automobile and they took a motor-trip honeymoon, driving from the west to keep a vaudeville engagement in the east. He neglected to inform his bride of one drawback. Until that moment he had never driven a car.

For awhile the jaunt went smoothly, but, reaching the mountains, Ruth held her breath as the auto, with uncontrollable speed scooted downhill. Her groom, not knowing what to do, had slipped the gears into neutral!

The car had no license plates. Groucho declared they would buy them when they reached New York. Enroute they were arrested and fined.

Groucho remained firm. "We'll get them in New York. We've been pinched once. It can't happen again."

But it did. The place was Canton, Ohio. Ruth waited outside while Groucho was hauled into the station house. She waited and waited, only to discover that the authorities had thrown her groom in jail.

Groucho loves to amuse his children. Just before bedtime he tells Miriam, the youngest, such mirth-provoking stories that, afterwards, Ruth has difficulty persuading her to sleep.

And when the Marxes were engaged for a chain broadcast Groucho wanted to try out the material at home. It was to this scheme that Ruth put a stop. Her argument was sound. "We couldn't listen to the same program all week, and on Sunday nights, too!"

But she must have smiled when she said that, for summing it up, she admits that the jokes and laughter of a husband and in-laws, although occasionally exasperating, are preferable to the troubles of the average complaining relative.

Here Comes the Bride!

(Continued from page 17)

and I did not want to do it until some of the excitement about our rumored secret marriage had quieted down.

"My desire was to do it as quietly as possible and the actual ceremony was quiet, despite all the fuss that had gone before."

The joy reflected in Joan's face is all you need to tell you what complete happiness is hers at last. As for Franchot, he goes about beaming on the world like the traditional bridegroom.

Both Joan and Franchot swore that there would be no interviews after their wedding. So this is not an official interview, but rather Joan's first chat with me, one of her closest friends, in an endeavor to sift rumor from fact. Here are the answers to those questions you have asked.

Question one, as to why Joan decided to risk marriage a second time, is answered.

Question two, concerning their future plans are about like this: Joan's home in Brentwood is being remodeled, once more, and they will live there together. Both have the feeling that this marriage is beautifully permanent because they have been in love so long. They have proven their enormous compatibility. For three years they have been friends and in three years a woman can test a man's loyalty and, in turn, will reveal her own heart and soul.

And now for the wedding itself. For months before it, the wildest rumors had been printed. No one was to be convinced that they were not married already. And no one would believe that (supposing they weren't married) definite plans had not been made.

BOTH of these rumors were wrong. They had, for the past year, discussed marriage—as two people as much in love as Joan and Franchot inevitably would do. But no plans were made. Vague plans for a wedding in New York, when both came to the city to broadcast over the radio, had been discussed.

Then the newspapers jumped in, making premature announcements. Joan was furious about this, since she had wanted to tell her own news, so—much to Franchot's sorrow—Joan said there would be no marriage for . . . well, she didn't know how long.

And then the gossip quieted down. The reporters gave up their little game of chasing Crawford—Franchot saw his opportunity and so on Friday, October 11, they were married in Englewood, N. J.

Nick Schenck, the producer, and Leo Friedman arranged the details and went with them. Joan wore a black suit, a red blouse and a little red hat.

At noon it was over and the very small wedding party drove back to New York, where they dropped the bride off at the Columbia Broadcasting station and she rehearsed all afternoon for the radio broadcast she gave the following Monday.

"I don't know how I ever got through that rehearsal," Joan told me. "Certainly my mind wasn't on the script from which I read. And somehow the words I said, for the character I played (Mary Turner in 'Within the Law') were absolutely meaningless. I had been terribly calm at the wedding, but at the rehearsal a sort of reaction set in. My knees shook and my voice trembled. And it kept up all afternoon. And when it was over, I was so tired that I hardly could keep my eyes open through dinner."

Not even Franchot's family knew of the wedding!

Strange—isn't it?—when you think of all the elaborate weddings that Joan has acted in pictures, with the bride all done up in hundreds of yards of Adrian wedding veils, with studio orchestras playing the Wedding March and with extra-girl bridesmaids thick as whipped cream . . . strange that her own wedding should have been so quiet, so simple and that, instead of going honeymooning in a yacht (as she usually does in pictures) she spent the afternoon at work.

And now they are married and their many fans wish them happiness.

Ruby Keeler is still enough of a kid to get a kick out of coasting, especially when she gets within shouting distance of some snow.

Four Dancing Feet . . .

(Continued from page 35)

we took that bike to school with us. We couldn't get out quickly enough. I held the bicycle while Ruby got on, and that's the last I saw of her until I finally reached her house, way up on 70th Street.

"Does that make it sound as if Ruby were selfish? I can answer that one, if anybody needs the answer. This girl somehow always found time to be doing things for someone else, even though she had her little sisters and brother to take care of. I told you Ruby had a system, a system that let her do housework, take care of the children, go to dancing school and always have plenty of time to play.

"Ruby was always doing things for the little kids of the neighborhood, and, by golly, there were a hundred of them within a cat's-throw of where she lived. There were so many they used to play out in the street in turns.

"Once in a while Ruby would get a dime for doing something extra nice for someone, and then we'd have a soda. And I mean we, because so many kids would have straws in the glass it would look like a pin cushion.

RUBY couldn't help being generous, with the dad she had. He was an iceman, with a chipping complex. We kids used to pile on his wagon during the hot days and eat the chipped ice. When he cut the big blocks of ice, he always did a lot more chipping than was necessary, so we could have our percentage.

"Ruby was awfully funny in school, in her quiet way. I remember once when we had to write an essay on some experience we would like to have, and Ruby wrote about going backstage and meeting a famous stage manager. She said his name was Mitchell, and that he thought her taps were simply wonderful. And, believe me, she put so much Irish palaver in it that some of us thought it had really happened.

"In those days Ruby and I would often go to her home after school. And walking from dancing school on 51st and Broadway to Ruby's tenement on 70th Street was no refreshing stroll. Of course, we bummed rides and 'flipped' trucks some of the time, and occasionally we went on the subway. But that was occasionally. Nickels were few and far between in the Keeler and Kelly families, and I guess our folks figured that if we had so much confidence in our feet, we could use them for transportation.

"But when we did ride on the subway I'd get a thrill out of how people, especially men, would turn and look at Ruby. She was such an attractive girl and she had such beautiful legs.

"You can't imagine how gorgeous she was as a very young girl. Her eyes were even more expressive than they are now. You'd feel you could almost see her heart through them. She had eyelashes you could use for bangs.

"Although she was the star pupil at

Seven Years of Constipation!

Every quotation in this advertisement is from an actual and voluntary letter. Subscribed and sworn to before me.

Bernice G Rittingh
NOTARY PUBLIC

"I had a most stubborn case of constipation, seven years of it, for which I tried almost everything."

"I was growing steadily worse until I read about Yeast Foam Tablets and decided to try them."

"In a short time I was entirely regulated. I have regained my old energy."

IMPORTANT to you is what Yeast Foam Tablets actually do, not what we say about them. So we bring you this true experience—one of hundreds reported by grateful users of these pleasant yeast tablets.

Rich in precious tonic elements, Yeast Foam Tablets strengthen the intestines and stimulate them to normal action. A food, not a drug, they correct constipation in a natural healthful way. How different from harsh cathartics which often irritate! Ask your druggist for Yeast Foam Tablets today. Refuse all substitutes.

FREE! Lovely Tilted Mirror. Gives perfect close-up. Leaves both hands free to put on make-up. Free for coupon with empty Yeast Foam Tablet carton.

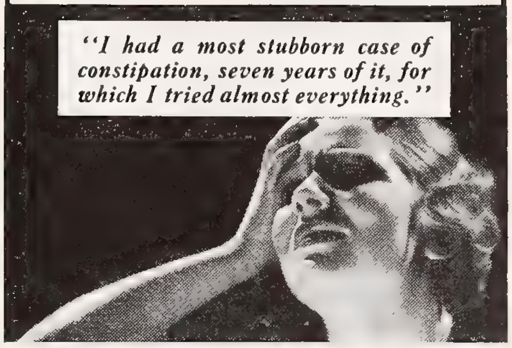
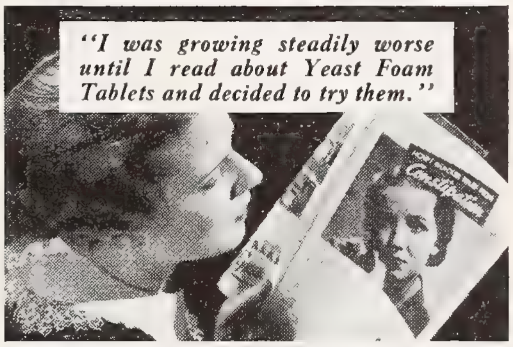
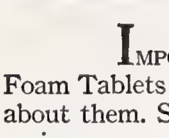
NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO.,
1750 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.
I enclose empty Yeast Foam Tablet carton. Please send the handy tilted make-up mirror.
MM 1-36
*Name*____________________
*Address*____________________
*City*______________ *State*__________







dancing school as a kid, and though she danced fifty per cent better than most of the men, she always hung back. In school we would all try to get her to dance, but she would beg off, saying one of the others could do it a lot better. You could always find her back in a corner, just a shy kid.

THEN I became instructor in tap dancing at Jack Blue's dancing school. I was only twelve, and naturally thought I was not so bad. I began getting ambitious until somebody coaxed Ruby out of the corner one day. I took one good look at her going to town, and then threw my dancing shoes out the window.

"Ruby and I appeared together in Jack Blue's Foolish Follies, and although we used to make only a few dollars a week, she always sent most of it to her family. She figured that while we were playing the towns around New York, going to such places as Asbury Park, and Atlantic City, we were having such a glorious picnic that the kids back home ought to get a break, too. Ruby's family always came before herself—and it still does.

"Then Ruby got a job in the chorus of George M. Cohan's 'The Rise of Rosy O'Reilly' and was making about fifty dollars a week, at the age of thirteen. At fourteen she was working on the Strand Roof. That's something for the kids of today to think about!

"Up to that time Ruby had been used to going without just about everything a girl would like, and I've seen her hungry more than once, though she was so quiet and game she'd never mention a word of it. But don't picture her as a timid, frightened little waif of the cruel streets. She was happy all the time. She loved her crowded home and the flocks of kids that lived all around her. She loved to dance, and at home they were always pulling her out of some corner or other, where she was practising steps when she should have been out in the fresh air.

"She was always a favorite at the night clubs, and smart Texas Guinan realized that this sweet kid, with her grave, innocent manner and her marvelous dancing ability, was going to be a gold mine for her. But if anybody had attempted to take liberties with Ruby, Tex would have swarmed all over him."

And that seems to be the history of Ruby Keeler's night club experience. She was always treated with the greatest consideration and she always had a perfectly wonderful time.

To have spoken out of turn to Ruby in the famous El Fey Club, the hottest night club and swankiest speakeasy in New York, was recognized by the wise ones as a short cut to disaster.

"Then," continued Patsy, "Ruby kept on climbing, but never changing. She got up into the five-hundred-dollar-a-week class and then married Al Jolson.

HOLLYWOOD came next, with '42nd Street' and then her great hit in 'The Gold Diggers.'

"All this time I was still in the east, working in this show and that. Of course, I hadn't written to her. It's like pulling teeth for me to write anyhow. Then it got so I was half afraid to write for, with such success, maybe, heaven forgive the thought, she had changed. And how I hated to think anything would spoil Ruby!

"Then came the opening of 'The Gold Diggers' and Ruby was the talk of New York. A few days later I happened to be walking down Broadway, near Forty-sixth Street. Suddenly I heard someone calling me from the other side of the street. I looked and saw Ruby waving to me and running across the street toward me.

"Boy, it was a relief to see her risking her neck in that traffic, and I felt a lump of shame come into my throat. For a minute I just couldn't say anything. Then I blurted:

"'Well, Ruby, things have certainly changed. I—I think you're swell.'

"She gave me a quick, understanding look and shrugged her shoulders. 'Don't be silly, I don't feel any different. Come on, let's get something to eat nearby.'

"So we went over to a tea room—no swanky restaurant for Ruby—and had a sandwich. We got talking about things in general, and Ruby was back in her old corner again, claiming that she simply had had some lucky breaks.

"What's happened since then I guess the movie fans know a lot better than I do, except perhaps they don't know that she is the same big-eyed Ethel Hilda Keeler that I first met when we were barely old enough to start school and she was experimenting with her first dance steps.

"At heart the Ruby Keeler I played with in 'Go Into Your Dance' is the same girl that I used to 'flip' trucks with back on Third Avenue when our feet got tired of trying to wear out the sidewalks."

And the much-in-demand new comedy queen of the movies, Patsy Kelly, half closed her eyes, looking back into the past. Seeing her at the moment you forget the swaggering, devil-may-care chorus gal who's had the biggest studios in filmdom bidding against one another for her services, and you see a woman lost in memories.

A half smile touched her lips, as she added, "Ruby hasn't changed and she never will."

Then two of those four feet from Broadway came to the floor with a thump, as an assistant director bellowed for Patsy to take her place in front of the camera beside Dick Powell.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The pictures of Patsy and Ruby as youngsters which appear in this story were loaned to us by Jack Blue. While talking to our Girl Friday, the dancing instructor had some enlightening bits of news about Patsy Kelly. He claims that while Ruby's dancing is excellent, if anyone could surpass it, it is none other than Patsy herself. And there is nothing he'd like better than to see Patsy do some real "stepping" before the cameras. He doesn't consider the little bit of tapping which she does in "Thanks A Million" sufficient to show what a fine dancer she is.

Beauty Advice

(Continued from page 16)

beautiful women who had modeled for him were those who had been lifted to the heights of beauty by their own desire to be beautiful. If you have a strong enough desire to make your dream come true, you'll make it come true. You'll work to make it possible. Belief in yourself, and belief in the magic that can happen, will accomplish wonders for you in giving you self-confidence . . . in giving you a party face and a party manner.

If you want a man to tell you that you "dance divinely," you'll have to learn to do just that. Eleanor Powell was "discovered" because she knew how to dance. You, too, in a lesser way, may be "discovered" by the man you want most to notice you, if you learn to dance divinely. Here are some hints if you want to be popular on the dance floor. Don't drape yourself around your partner like an old overcoat, with your arms limp, and your knees sagging. Remember that you can't dance with your feet alone, and your partner can't dance for you. Don't hold yourself stiff as a poker, or you'll remind your partner of trying to push a steamboat around on dry land. And don't, please don't, assume exaggerated postures. For good dancing the perfect position will always be erect and tipped a little forward. Always hold a man back of the shoulder with the left hand, lightly but firmly.

NOW THE hand that you slip into your partner's should be soft and smooth as velvet. There's certainly nothing romantic about a rough, scratchy hand. Use a hand lotion almost the last thing before you slip into your party dress. Smooth it on as you see Olivia de Havilland doing, much as though you were smoothing on those new long kid gloves you have. Keep a bottle of hand lotion on your dressing table in a prominent position so that it will be a constant reminder to you to keep your hands lovely. Then, of course, you'll want an extra bottle of lotion in the bathroom and right by the kitchen sink. Incidentally, you can get gloves that are chemically treated inside with a honey and almond lotion. They make a different sort of a gift. You might mention it to one of your friends.

You can make up your hands for a party, you know. You can rouge along the sides of your fingers and down the outside of your hands to reduce the apparent size of too plump hands. A little rouge on the finger tips will seem to shorten long fingers. A nice way to make up your hands is to use a liquid powder after your hand lotion application. I know just the liquid powder you'll want. Be sure, however, to wipe off all loose powder before you leave your dressing-table. There is nothing more provoking than white finger marks on a man's dark suit.

A smart way to lengthen the long-lasting qualities of a coat of liquid nail polish is to put on two layers. You can use a thin coat of colorless or light polish for the first layer. Then after this has thoroughly dried, you can apply a heavier coat of your chosen polish shade over it. This will give the lacquer more body and help to prevent it from chipping, praises be. If you don't have a good-looking manicure set you'll certainly want the new one I've discovered. It comes in a lovely simulated cloisonnê box in lavender, blue, or rust.

From fingertips to coiffures isn't such a long reach. A lot of fingers are busy with coiffures this holiday partying season. If you want a party hairdress that is full of sparkling highlights, you'll consider your hairbrush your best ally. Brush your hair every night. It's the only good resolution I'm going to ask you to make . . . until I think of another one! Brush it until it tingles with life, until your scalp feels ready to burst out into party exhuberance itself. Olivia de Havilland has a clever brush stunt to use on party nights. She sprays a little brilliantine on her brush, and then brushes her hair lightly. This gives the coiffure a well distributed sheen, instead of the smeary, plastered effect that sometimes results when you apply the brilliantine with your hands. Sometimes Olivia adds just a few drops of her favorite perfume to her brilliantine, too. If you haven't an atomizer, you can pour a bit of brilliantine into the palm of your hand, add a drop or two of perfume, and rub your brush through it.

Maybe you've discovered with horror that instead of gold highlights your hair is getting silver glints. Those first few gray hairs are depressing. Then again, maybe you have gray streaks in your hair which give the impression that you're older than you really are, and which discourage all your party spirit when you look into the mirror. There's a helpful touch-up pencil that will take care of those gray hairs in short order. It isn't a dye. And it's simple as pie (no rhyme intended) to use. It comes in stick form, and you simply dip the tip in water and stroke it over the portion you wish colored. Let it dry, and there you are . . . The coloring is harmless, and will wash off with the first shampoo. You can get the "pencil" in any one of eight hair-matching shades.

NOW you may want highlights in your hair, but you certainly don't want them on your nose. When you're going dancing, I think it's a good idea to use an astringent as your powder base, and then apply a pure, light, moisture-proof powder. You don't want your powder to mix with the natural moisture of your skin and form pasty-looking blotches, and I know the very powder to safeguard against this annoyance. Be sure to apply the powder lavishly, pressing it on with your puff, and then blending it in and removing the surplus with a soft powder brush.

Apply your lipstick before you powder. Don't purse up your mouth like a green persimmon when you're applying your lipstick. Smile! That is the advice of one of Hollywood's smartest make-up men. When you're attending a gay party, your lips are going to be busy talking, smiling (and smiling a lot, we hope), reflecting your various emotions. Look in the mirror now and watch your lips when you smile. If you have thin lips your smile may draw your upper lip into such a narrow line that you have scarcely any lips perceptible at the corners.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, beloved singer, arrives in New York to broadcast. She'll do a picture next with May Robson called "Gram."

After you apply your lipstick, press your lips to a piece of cleansing tissue to blot off any surplus. Then powder over your lips, pressing the puff to them lightly but firmly. The final step should be a light retouching with a fresh application of lipstick. Lipstick, tissue, powder, lipstick . . . these four steps give your lipstick substance, base, finish, and long-lasting qualities.

Eye make-up is ever so important, whether you're gazing into your dancing partner's eyes or the camera's eyes. There's a new eye beauty kit on the Christmas market which "has everything," —mascara, eyeshadow, eyebrow pencil, eyebrow brush, and eyelash tonic cream. It's a handy kit for the dressing table, and if you're going along to the photographer's to have your picture taken some fine day, better slip this eye make-up kit into your purse. Rochelle Hudson is the cameraman's delight because she always takes a good picture. Her eyes are two good reasons why.

DO you take a good picture? Some people just naturally do photograph much more flatteringly than others, it is true, but there are tricks to every trade . . . and especially the photographer's. If you've never taken a good picture, let's see if we can't "make up" for it now. A lot of you will be having your pictures taken for Christmas gifts . . . maybe a special Christmas gift for your best beau. Often when I pass by a photographer's studio, and look at the photographs on display in the window, I think to myself, "Now if that girl had just done so and so . . . used a bit of eyebrow pencil or worn a different neckline or had a different hair-do, she most certainly would have taken a better picture." In Hollywood, this posing for photographs is an art in itself. We need more of that attitude.

Do you know how to apply your make-up in order to take a good picture? Do you know what colors and what necklines are most flattering? Well, I've prepared a special bulletin for you that will tell you all those things and more. I've talked to some of the cleverest photographers in the business in order to work out a really helpful bulletin for you. Send in for it now, before you make your appointment at the photographer's. It costs nothing but a stamped, addressed envelope.

If you have any beauty heartaches that have made the Old Year discouraging, why not write me about them? There's always a New Year, and a New Chance to realize your dreams. I'm always anxious to help you . . . remember that! It is your letters to me that give me a composite picture of YOU, your problems, your discouragements, your difficulties. I would like to hear from more of you.

Mary Biddle
MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Avenue
New York, N. Y.

Kindly send me your bulletin on "Pretty as a Picture."

Name ....

Address ....
(Street)

....
(City) (State)

(Please inclose self-addressed, stamped envelope)

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAYON)
appealing·beguiling
FAOEN No. 44—Warm, vibrant, floral and alluring.
FAOEN No. 3—Oriental, exotic, clinging.
FAOEN No. 12—Delicate, refreshing, fragrant.
FAOEN No. 19—Fresh, elusive, intriguing.

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAY-ON)
Beauty Aids

10¢ IN TEN CENT TUCKAWAY SIZES AS ILLUSTRATED AT ALL 5 & 10¢ STORES

Ride a Hobby to Happiness

(Continued from page 36)

was her escape, here was her chance to show others and herself that she could excel at something—the little fluffy, personality-plus girls did not have her acting ability.

And so the stage was her outlet. When she was given her first jobs on Broadway she inhaled deeply of the air of the theatre and said, "This is life."

The others in the theatre were earnest workers, that was all. And no demands except the demands of work were made upon her. There was no personality competition. The people she met in the theatre did not intrude upon her private life.

But when she was given a Hollywood contract, things were different. She was thrown into direct competition with the most beautiful and glamorous women in the world. Jean knew little and cared less about clothes and she found the girls with whom she worked the most clothes-conscious of all women.

Realizing that she was awkward and not the "clothes type," all the old rebellion, the intolerance and the desire to set herself apart from the crowd, all the old complexes of her childhood, returned. She would show Hollywood that she would be no part of the trumped-up glamor. As a child she had refused to pledge allegiance to the flag, so now she would pledge no allegiance to the personal fubdubbery of movie town.

Jean stalked about in any old outfit. She said startling, sometimes even shocking, things to interviewers. She was intolerant of everything and she wanted to show Hollywood that she didn't care.

HER reputation for eccentricity became widespread and so she became a wallflower. Men are basically such conventional souls that they resent and mistrust any girl who steps out of the set pattern. So, in spite of her simple beauty, her intelligence, her sincerity, she was completely without romance in a town whose very essence is romance.

She would, she decided, do as she had done in school—throw herself completely and whole-heartedly into her work.

Then there came to her the most startling disillusion of all. Her screen work left her unsatisfied. Jean discovered that compared to the theatre, the screen was hack work. So many of the characters she was given to play were so unreal that she could do nothing with them. Thus she felt bereft of both work and social contact.

It was during this trying time that I saw her first. It was then I discovered her to be one of the unhappiest girls I've ever seen. All of the things she wanted were seemingly denied her, so she was trying to fill her life with activities like knitting, weaving rugs and such, activities which keep the hands busy but do not occupy the mind.

Jean was resentful of Hollywood and all it stood for. She became intensely disliked at her studio because of her inability to conform. And people did not take the trouble to understand her. Undoubtedly you, if you are sensitive, know there is no misery as great as being misunderstood.

Then an idea came to her and suddenly her life became full again. Since her screen work, except for a role such as the one she played in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," took but half her attention and talents, she decided she would return to her real love, the theatre. Before she realized it her idea became a reality and she was the head of a flourishing little artistic business known as The Theatre Workshop Incorporated.

So with four other earnest artists she formed a small company, rented a little place on Santa Monica Boulevard and set to work. They now have ten pupils who love the theatre and do not cast envious eyes at the screen. These students pay a nominal fee for instruction and participate in the activities of the workshop. They make their scenery, design their costumes and their purpose is to produce the best plays available in a sincere and artistic manner.

This is, of course, a worthy and laudable undertaking but its importance to this story lies in the part it has played in Jean Muir's happiness.

Because she is happy now. All her inintensity, all her energy, all her love of beauty pours into The Theatre Workshop. That little building, and what it symbolizes, is her work, her friend and her child all rolled into one.

I wish you could see her eyes sparkle as she talks about it. Gone is the rebelliousness and the intolerance. She has a place, now. She fits into some vital scheme. She has found her square in the pattern.

And she even likes Hollywood now. Knowing Jean as she was a year ago, you realize that this is the most amazing pronouncement of all. Whereas her social life used to be very limited, now you will find her at the polo matches, tennis games, premieres and night clubs. Her constant companion is George Wolcott, who is keenly interested in the blonde Jean.

A person less complex than Jean Muir could have found happiness in the smaller tasks alloted to her. But Jean must love herself in a purpose in which she believes. She has found that purpose now and the finding has worked a miracle.

As she told me about the Workshop, I was tremendously impressed with the idea itself. It is a worthy cause when a group of people ban together in the interest of beauty. But I got more out of the recital of her plans than that. It suddenly occurred to me what a verity was contained in Jean's story. And I wished that all the lonely, unhappy people in the world would do what she has done. I wished that, instead of escaping reality by pitying and dramatizing themselves, they would give the sensitivity and energy they possess to some hobby.

It really doesn't matter, you see, what the hobby is. The more worthy the cause, of course, the more worthy the effort. The doing is what makes it good.

Yes, Jean Muir is happy now and her happiness reflects itself in her work in her new film, "Stars Over Broadway."

What Will Happen to Them in 1936?

(Continued from page 27)

astrologer-seer of Hollywood. Dareos, who for many years has been the confidant and consultant of some of Hollywood's greatest stars, producers and directors, herewith presents to the readers of MODERN SCREEN his fourth annual Hollywood prophecy in these pages. Little more need be said of the accuracy of his previous forecasts than the mathematical statement that previous forecasts turned out better than 80 per cent correct! Into the compilation of his annual predictions, Dareos pours, not only the fruits of his astrological and psychic powers, but also the "inside" dope he gets from the movie people who come to him with their confidences, as they would to their lawyers or their doctors.

And so here, tabloided, stripped of the difficult language of the science of astrology, are Dareos' specific predictions for 1936:

GENERAL: Over the heads of Hollywood's movie-makers, both before and behind the cameras, lies a pall of threatened disaster. Death will come to some of the best-known names of movieland—violent death. Air crashes, like that which took the life of Will Rogers in 1935, are foreshadowed for several stars.

"I advise the stars," says Dareos, "to avoid air travel as much as possible during the year."

There will be several separations and subsequent divorces for some of the biggest stars. On the other hand, there will be, at least, three marriages of "top" stars.

The coming year will not see, as yet, the general use of color on the screen, but in 1937, the screen quite suddenly will go 100 per cent color. Moreover, late in 1936, Hollywood will develop a new process to transmit successfully motion pictures by wireless.

Internal strife from labor sources lies ahead for the movie business. There will be many strikes but all will be settled amicably.

And now for the individual forecasts:

JOAN CRAWFORD and FRANCHOT TONE: "If anything happens to the Crawford-Tone marriage," says Dareos, "it will be Franchot's fault." There will be no children. Joan and Tone should avoid England and France, ill health menaces them if they go there.

For Joan, there is the threat of litigation that will go against her, and also scandal. April is a particularly bad month. Early in the summer, she will receive an European offer which she will accept in the hope of re-building her career.

Secret enemies will strike at Joan, and it is from this source that scandal threatens. "Joan is a dear friend of mine and seems capable of taking care of herself," says Dareos, who still carries the wallet she gave him as a present when he predicted the successful career that has been hers, although when Dareos told her, she was the unknown Lucille LeSeuer.

Franchot will do some fine things in pictures, but his real future is on the stage. The first months of 1936, and its Fall, are danger periods for him, especially from accident by horses. He will come into an inheritance.

JEAN HARLOW: "The stars predict trouble ahead for Jean," says Dareos. The year will be the most unsettled of her life! It will be a year of physical danger, especially April and early Fall. "She is born under a planet which whips her in and out with unrest. If she goes to court, she will lose the litigation. Midsummer brings danger of a new scandal and talk that will hurt her. I advise her, by all means, to avoid marriage in 1936," says the seer.

WILLIAM POWELL: 1936 should be a happy year for him. His career is on the up-grade. He will do several remarkably fine pictures. No breath of scandal threatens him.

The year will continue Bill's and Jean's friendship, but they must guard it. If they come through the year's dangers, particularly those which threaten Jean's heart, physical self and happiness, then 1937 will be a magnificently grand year for both of them.

GARBO: In mid-summer, Garbo will experience a great love affair! The man will be someone whom she does not even know now! But the planets do not show a marriage ahead for her. Instead, in the Fall of 1936, there's the black prophecy of tragedy and sorrow for her through the death of a dearly loved one.

The aforementioned romance will be a great flaming one, but it will not bring her happiness of heart or soul. The year is one of unrest. Her health, too, is threatened. But if she carries on, she will again rocket to heights in 1937, and will carry through to set her name, in time, beside Bernhardt's.

CLARK GABLE: The year professionally will be great, but in his private and domestic life, it will be rocky. "I will not be surprised," says Dareos, "from what I read in the planets, if there is great unhappiness in his domestic life. I advise no divorce, however. Clark needs his wife."

More than any other star, Gable is in danger of a possible serious accident, even death, in 1936. Airplanes, automobiles and horses are the chief sources of his danger. November and December, 1936, are the blackest months in his year's prospect, with early Summer only slightly less menacing. If he watches his step, hurdles the 1936 threats, he will go on to even greater screen triumphs than in the past.

NORMA SHEARER: With the exception of two cloudy periods, April and December, 1936 glows with happiness and promise for Norma. Particularly bright are September and October, during which period she enters an astrological sequence that should bring her the grandest era of her life. April threatens unsettled professional conditions and friction; December carries the danger of scandal, unrest and friction from an elderly, married person, ill-disposed toward Norma.

For her wedded life, there is continued happiness in store, but Thalberg must look to his health.

Norma must guard her family. There are dangers from kidnap attempts, and from fire! She must be careful in employing new servants, lest some person, so taken into the household, brings danger. There is the shadow of an elderly person's death—someone close to her.

During the year, she will make her greatest picture, finer by far than anything she has done before.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE: For Shirley, 1936 and 1937 will be brilliant. Great as her popularity has been, it will be even greater in these two years—both in this country and abroad. But 1938 will see a lull in her career which comes as she emerges from infancy to girlhood. And in the future, if she re-enters the screen field, she will become a second Janet Gaynor, with all the winsome charm of Janet.

Particular precautions against kidnapping must be taken on Shirley's behalf. Threats have already been made and a kidnap attempt is almost certain. There is also danger of appendicitis, and a serious operation.

FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW: Like little Shirley, Freddie faces a bright future. He is going on to unlimited success, and in the years to come, he will be one of the greatest actors of both stage and screen.

The year 1936 holds two threats for him. Like Shirley, he is menaced by kidnap attempts. There is also the shadow of hospitalization over him.

JANET GAYNOR: Despite the lull in her career, as this is told, Janet again will rise to screen heights in 1936. And despite whispers that she is "through," she will continue to star for years to come.

The year is a propitious one for romance in her life, and although Janet is more in love with her work than with love, the year will bring her a splendid romance.

GENE RAYMOND: Somewhere in Texas, there is a beautiful girl, an heiress. She and Gene will find themselves deeply in love. They will think of marriage, but the planets are indefinite as to whether this marriage will actually take place. Their signs are unfavorable. By that, Dareos means that he advises against marriage for Gene, lest it crash in unhappiness. Gene should remain single for at least two years more—marriage would interfere with a career that looks promising. Astrology says that he has a wonderful future, and an exceptionally long ride on the crest of screen popularity.

FRED ASTAIRE: Matrimonially, Fred and his wife will live in continued happiness, despite rumors of separation. "I would not be surprised, according to the signs, to see Fred Astaire the father of twins," says Dareos. The year's menaces are two—danger of an air accident and a great sorrow of undeterminable nature, in the Fall.

GINGER ROGERS: The year 1936 will see the professional separation of the Rogers-Astaire screen team. Ginger will go on to continued individual success. The planets are strangely silent as to her personal life.

MIRIAM HOPKINS: Romance lies all around Miriam in 1936, but her attitude will be "I can't be bothered!" Romance will rest in her work, according to her own ideas, despite the signs of heart happiness with some man. The year will be a financial success, with producers fighting for her, both here and abroad.

PAUL MUNI: His screen success is only beginning, and 1936 will see him transcend his previous magnificent work. Privately, his life will continue happily with Bella, his wife. No hint of scandal menaces them. There is the forecast of death for a dear one in his or his wife's family. During 1936, the Munis may adopt a child.

CESAR ROMERO: Contrary to indications, Cesar Romero does not appear likely, according to the planets, to become the "second Valentino." The year will bring early success, but it will turn to ashes, and there will be contract difficulties and a decline in his career.

Here Dareos makes a startling prediction. He utters the name of a youth, now unknown, and says he will be the greatest sensation of the screen since Valentino! Like Valentino, he comes of Italian blood, and from that ancestry comes his first name—Guglielmo. He will change this, and be known as "William Clark," on the screen.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT: Claudette is the "greatest bet" for the movie industry in 1936, says Dareos. Professionally, she will rise to undreamed-of heights.

Love and romance lie close to her

BID THAT COLD BE GONE!

Oust it Promptly with This Fourfold Treatment!

BEWARE of a cold—even a slight cold—and any cold! A cold can quickly take a serious turn.

What you want to do is treat it promptly and thoroughly. Don't be satisfied with mere palliatives. A cold, being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. That's common sense. A cold, moreover, calls for a cold treatment and not for a cure-all.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what you want for a cold. First of all, it is expressly a cold tablet and not a preparation good for half a dozen other things as well. Secondly, it is internal medication and does four important things.

Fourfold Effect

First, it opens the bowels. Second, it checks the infection in the system. Third, it relieves the headache and fever. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

All drug stores sell Grove's Bromo Quinine—and the few pennies' cost may save you a lot in worry, suspense and expense. Ask firmly for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine and accept no substitute.

A Cold is an Internal Infection and Requires Internal Treatment

GROVE'S LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE
For Colds
THE FIRST ORIGINAL COLD TABLET
PRICE 35 CENTS
FOR COLDS & SIMPLE HEADACHES
SINCE 1889

throughout the year, and there is a fifty-fifty chance of marriage, according to the stars. "There is great romance for her with a medical man," says Dareos, "but I do hope she does not marry in 1936," but waits instead, until 1937. The planets say that marriage in 1937 will be happy, but in 1936, conflict with her career would menace its happiness, unless both she and her husband exert all their love and intelligence to surmount the hurdles.

MYRNA LOY: Great romance lies in 1936 for her—possibly a marriage. The man will be prominent and the romance will thrill the countless fans who worship her.

Professionally, she will continue to ride the crest of the wave and all her future seems bright, even beyond the next year or two. Scandal will never menace her. Her greatest danger in 1936 lies in a possible travel accident.

WARNER BAXTER: Although he will be the target, during 1936, for the attentions of a designing woman, Baxter will remain happily married. He will ward off the deliberate efforts of this woman to drag him into scandal.

Baxter's health and physical safety are threatened. Sickness hovers over his home.

Professionally, it will be a grand year, but in a short while he will turn from acting to writing.

JOHN BOLES: The year is gray for him—February, June, September carry the threat of a serious motor crash which may permanently incapacitate him. In April, litigation which would be bad for him, threatens.

However, his domestic happiness will go on. Born under the sign of Scorpio, Boles will always attract women, but he will never let this attraction intrude upon or threaten his own marriage. Professionally, the year will continue good for him, with the possibility of making a picture abroad.

MERLE OBERON: Professionally, Merle is on the up-grade and her screen career will last for many years. The year 1936 will see Merle Oberon marry an important motion picture producer. Dangers lie ahead both in her health, and in governmental difficulties pertaining to her passports and visas.

DICK POWELL: 1936 will bring a vivid romance into Dick's life, with a girl who is now unknown to Hollywood. But there'll be no marriage for Dick. All his love affairs will fade out; he is a bachelor at heart, and should remain so. Marriage would mean his collapse as a screen star.

Like Clark Gable, Dick Powell definitely faces intense physical danger in the year, with death not an impossibility, especially in the air or from the sea!

BING CROSBY: For Bing, 1936 is astrologically a "bad year." January and October bring dangers of domestic trouble through a false friend. He must be careful of admitting undesirables into his home; he must beware of "new friends."

An attempt may be made to kidnap his children; illness lies in their path, too. The year carries bad signs if he gambles or speculates, for loss is almost inevitable.

The autumn months bring signs of great changes for him. There will be advantageous contract offers, and he may go abroad for an indefinite period.

LUISE RAINER: She will never be a "second Garbo," although she will climb during the year. She faces great danger of a nervous breakdown.

GRACE MOORE: The coming year will bring her greater successes and continued happiness. Her future is so unruffled, so calm, so bright, that little can be said save that all is serene ahead for her, both domestically and professionally.

GARY COOPER: Gary must be careful in 1936. Over him hangs some dark menace, but the signs are so indefinite that it cannot be foretold from what source the danger may come. Secret enemies will attempt to cause trouble in his domestic life. There will be a death in his near family; it will mean inheritance for him. Beyond that, says Dareos, he can only warn Gary to watch his step, for some indefinable menace is there for him.

LORETTA YOUNG: It will be a strange, paradoxical year for Loretta. Despite the fact that her health will be in great danger, the year bristles with signs of great professional and heart happiness. It is the "marriage year" for her, but scandal lurks, too. A very well-known star will pay ardent attentions to her, and marriage is extremely likely. The following year—1937—will bring extraordinary screen success to Loretta.

MARLENE DIETRICH: Pay no attention to the Dietrich-John Gilbert love rumors. It's a sister-and-brother friendship, if the planets do not lie, and nothing like marriage could ever come of it. Marlene will go back to Germany, but will soon hasten to return to the United States and Hollywood, for she will find Europe turbulent. If she takes her movie earnings abroad with her, she faces danger of losing all, as Germany and France seem destined by the planets for a great financial debacle in 1936.

Professionally, Dietrich will go on without spectacular developments. There is no threat of kidnap or illness for her daughter.

JOHN BARRYMORE: "John could not help his love affair with Elaine Barrie," says Dareos, "for he was a victim of his planet Uranus, which simply sent him haywire!" There is a possibility that his break with Dolores may be healed, and reconciliation is NOT impossible in 1936, even though the divorce has been granted. John is still on the road to great screen work. But for his health and physical well being, the year brings danger, even to life, through accidents.

Al Goetz and Ethel Merman, whom rumor has it are Mr. and Mrs. How about it, Ethel? They look happy enough for bride and groom.

The year for Dolores will be a generally sad one. However, she will resume screen work successfully.

MAE WEST: No romance for Mae; all business. Her career will continue successfully. During the year, gangsters will make an attempt of some nature against her, but Mae will defeat them again as she did in 1935.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN and PAULETTE GODDARD: They will never part; Charlie has found the ideal love of his life. Paulette, as the result of her work in Charlie's new picture, will find screen success, but she must guard her health during the year.

For Charlie, governmental complications loom, because of citizenship and other factors, but he will remain a British subject. Next Fall will almost certainly see him go abroad where he will have new and further professional success. His new picture will be a financial success. Either in late 1936 or early 1937, someone near and dear will die.

His two boys will not follow in their father's footsteps to screen success; one of them will become a lawyer. They will go abroad with Charlie and Paulette in the Fall.

DOLORES DEL RIO: Strangely, the planets conflict. Heart unhappiness is indicated for Dolores, and yet the portents are that she will remain comfortable in her marriage. April and December are black months; August and September bright for her.

JAMES CAGNEY: Will continue unspectacularly successful both on the screen and as a husband. Danger in the air threatens.

KAY FRANCIS: Her work will remain at its usual level. There is the sign of a romance, but it will not bring her happiness. Toward the end of the year, she will consider retiring from the screen!

CONSTANCE BENNETT: For Connie, 1936 brings threats of evil proportions! The omens for her health are bad; illness stalks her, hospitalization looms. Domestically and in her private life, there are indications of violent upheavals—scandal, possible divorce, and a break of some nature not clear. It is a gloomy year ahead for her.

MARY PICKFORD: Mary will again appear on the screen! But it will not be a successful comeback. The year's signs augur well for success in business, both here and abroad, but particularly the latter.

Romance, despite her denials, hovers over her and Buddy Rogers. The signs spell marriage for them, but this is not utterly certain.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY: Horrible crash threatens him, but whether on land or in the air is not clear. His marriage will continue and his screen career go on unhindered.

ANN HARDING: The year will be an unsettled one for her. Spring will be a bad time both in her career and her private life. However, the rest of the year seems bright with romance, and even possibility of marriage looms. On the screen, toward the latter part of the year, she will do a great role.

LUPE VELEZ and JOHNNY WEISSMULLER: The year 1936 is their big "danger year!" Scandal is close. Health omens for Johnny are very bad. Some great crash is imminent but its nature remains hidden.

BETTE DAVIS: The coming year will be great for her on the screen. Somewhere in the future, despite the avowed happiness of her present marriage, the stars indicate another matrimonial venture for her!

He'd Rather Act Than Eat

(Continued from page 37)

the sleep-walking scene). Yet he gave the audience such a load of fun that he might have been billed as a comedian from then on if he hadn't decided that he wanted to give audiences something to do besides laugh.

FOR Peter Lorre of the round moon face, the strange prominent eyes, the short jolly stature which can rise to heights of tragic dignity—Peter Lorre, with the red cheeks and little boy's neck—Peter Lorre, who drinks raspberry vinegar mixed with coca cola, and has a mania for hand-woven shirts—actually endangered his life to become an actor.

He ran away from home the day he graduated from secondary school. For several years he dreamed his dreams on a park bench or on a bed of pine needles in the woods. For blankets he used the newspapers he couldn't sell. When he did sell them, he'd buy a goulash. And it's still his favorite dish, probably because he never got enough of it in his youth. The goulashes were so few and far between that he soon achieved another distinction not often enjoyed by actors. He developed scurvy from malnutrition!

But the scurvy, though it left him in delicate health for years after, didn't stop him any more than the cold or the hunger had.

"In Europe," Peter said, stopping for a moment in his perpetual pacing, "we have a saying: 'All roads lead to Rome.' No matter how twisted or roundabout they may look to be. I am a firm believer that the chance comes to every man—the main chance he's been waiting for. Only those do not succeed who have the fear in the back of their heads that it will not come, and therefore, divert their talents or energies to something else. It comes—I know. That is why I was willing to wait then, that is why I would be willing to wait again!" (He waited a year to play "Crime and Punishment," because he knew it was the role he should play next.)

But while he was waiting, in those earlier days, he succeeded in impressing the manager of a bank with his talents as a financier. He was engaged as a bank clerk. The job lasted until the cruel manager discovered that the cherubic Lorre with the docile eyes was coöperating with the timekeeper in a neat little racket. Every morning the supposedly industrious young bank clerk arrived on time, or even early, so anxious was he to further his banking career, according to the timekeeper's check! Whereas the young villain actually was rolling in between 11:30 and noon because he spent most of the night directing and acting in amateur plays!

PERHAPS it was this disappointing experience in a counting house which has given Lorre his rather un-American attitude toward money. Decidedly not a press agent's gag is the constant reiteration by Peter himself, and everyone at Columbia studios, that he doesn't give a tinker's dam for money. "He doesn't have to," say you and I, heaving an envious sigh, "with the salary he's drawing now."

We're mistaken. When he finally stopped starving and got his big chance in Berlin, where he had landed with ten marks in his pockets, he achieved such a raging success overnight with his first role—the part of a yearning adolescent youth—that he could have written his own ticket as far as money goes. He didn't. Then, as now, for him the play (and the role) was the thing. If he couldn't play the parts he wanted, very well, he'd starve again. He'd learned how to do that so well that it took no practise any longer. Which doesn't mean that he refuses to be typed. He's too clever for that.

"I played a murderer in 'M,' I play a murderer in 'Crime and Punishment.' But no two murders were ever alike!"

This particular psychopathic child murderer he portrayed in "M," made such an impression on the public that for months afterward it was impossible for Peter to enter a cafe or walk down the street without a noticeable speeding up of pedestrian traffic in the opposite direction. Mothers hastily hid their children under their skirts and susceptible young girls nearly fainted. It was exactly as if a boa-constrictor or one of Haile Selassie's lions had suddenly been seen sauntering down Unter den Linden.

For Peter doesn't only live to act—he lives his act! His performance was so realistic that people couldn't separate him from the role he had created. Which, if you know Peter in Hollywood, is quite fantastic.

Whereas in Berlin, where sophistication and gloom were the order of the day, Peter was the most sophisticated man in all Germany. In Hollywood, where it is better to be gay, Peter's the gayest of them all!—the life of every party. Never was there such a wonderful clown.

His mind is a cupboard full of devastatingly funny impersonations. The jittery man, for example. Or the man with the funny walk. Or the one-armed violinist. Or a night at a cabaret in Berlin. Ad infinitum, ad side-split 'em. All of which makes him in constant demand socially.

One week he went to fourteen parties in a row. At each one he gave an entirely different repertoire that the guests haven't stopped talking about yet.

EVEN such a serious and profoundly moving drama as "Crime and Punishment" gave Peter his opportunity for playing pranks. His head was shaved for the role. Now Hollywood is full of actors, and actors are full of superstitions. One of them being that it's good luck to rub the smooth crown of a bald-headed man. So when the first seeker of luck slithered by and hastily touched the shining Lorre pate, Peter caught him by the arm.

"Not so fast, my good man," said he. "That costs a nickel." Perhaps the head-rubber was more surprised than pleased. But he forked up the nickel. By the time Herr Lorre had acquired some bristles again, he had also collected nearly six dollars from unsuspecting victims!

His private clowning has put such pranksters as W. C. Fields and Jack Oakie out of the bright spot . . . almost! The only difference is that he isn't paid for this type of entertaining, preferring to accept the shining lucre for more meaty efforts. Such as, for instance, his new role in "Crime and Punishment" in which he not only gives a towering performance, but in which he appears in virtually every scene of the picture.

Probably no screen actor ever had, or ever will have, such a gratifying role again. And Peter makes the most of it. That man can do more to arouse pity, fear, loathing or sympathy, without an ounce of make-up on, than other actors do with two yards of beard, inch-deep beetling brows,

RUBBING AT HEEL
PRESSING ON CALLOUS
BITING AT INSTEP
PINCHING OF TOES

END CORN PAIN

Stop Shoe Troubles

QUICKLY RELIEVE CORNS, BUNIONS, CALLOUSES

Imagine a relief so quick-acting that it stops the pain of these shoe and foot troubles instantly! That is what Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads—the treatment of many uses—does for you. They soothe and heal; remove the cause—shoe friction and pressure; and prevent corns, sore toes, tender spots and blisters; ease new or tight shoes.

Never Cut Your Corns or Callouses

This dangerous practice can very easily cause blood-poisoning. Dr. Scholl's double-purpose treatment—pads for ending pain and separate Medication in convenient form for quickly loosening and removing corns or callouses—is the safe, sure way to get relief. Get a box today. Sold everywhere. Special sizes for corns, callouses bunions and soft corns.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

Put one on-the pain is gone!

5 COMPLETE NOVELS IN ONE MAGAZINE

ADVENTURE
You people who like wings can have the adventures of an around-the-world flight by following Caution Jones, hero of The Sky Crasher, L. Ron Hubbard's new air thriller.

SPORT
Get set for the hockey season and William Bruner's Double Cross-Check.

WESTERN
Tom Curry takes us West with Gun Rule, the stirring story of Vince Hill, who risks his neck ferreting out outlaws' plans.

MYSTERY
While the police are trying to track him down as Public Enemy No. 1, Raymond Landon tries to solve the mystery of Who Killed Gilbert Foster?

ROMANCE
In Vikings Go Alone, Steve Ricker, an outcast, puts up a lone, valiant battle for a place in the sun of Lake Placid's winter sport activities.

Five Novels

January Now on Sale Everywhere

false noses, and wrinkles as wide as gullies. The use he makes of his own natural equipment—the twist of the wide mouth, the droop of a fleshy eyelid, the slump of his mobile body—can express anything from depraved criminality to the innocence of a youth's first calf love.

But temperament, he has none. He takes direction like a lamb. Does the scene over and over again without complaint. And working with Von Sternberg is no perpetual joy ride, as anyone but Peter—and perhaps Dietrich—will testify.

As to Peter's loves and hates: He loves a certain lady who is as tall and slim as he is short and stocky, as quiet and dignified as he is voluble and gay.

"She was known," he says with great pride in his voice, "as the last lady of the Viennese stage."

Celia Lvovsky, who gave up her own career as a prima donna to marry Peter last year (he took a half hour off between scenes to do so), is a lady in the ultimate European sense of the word. She has the polished elegance which comes from being steeped in the centuries-old tradition of the finest that breeding and culture offer. She has wit and understanding. She thinks Peter a god—which always makes for a happy marriage.

As to aversions, Peter is too mild, too wisely tolerant, to hate with much gusto. But there is one dislike which he will express with vehemence, his dislike of Bohemians. Not the ones who come from Prague, but the kind who live in Greenwich Village garrets.

"A Bohemian," says Peter, "is an unsuccessful bourgeois. He protests against conventions so much because he is really envious of those who succeed in life. He is like the atheist who rants against God because the thought of God continually exists in his mind. I'm always suspicious of people who protest too much.

"The great artist is neither a bourgeois nor a Bohemian. He is an individual and a human being."

Very clever, these Hungarians! And it is this subtle insight into human nature that makes Peter Lorre a truly great actor.

Star Stuff on a Shoestring

(Continued from page 50)

three years should cut the expenses down. A coat that either is furless or has a detachable fur trimming is the best bet. The furless coat can do duty in the spring and fall as well as in cold weather and it always allows the adding of scarfs in fur or fabric. The coat with detachable fur is equally as versatile and never makes you feel that everyone is thinking, "Oh, that same coat again!"

NOW we come to the silk dress that has to play a heavy part in any wardrobe scheme. It has to be a perfect Jekyll and Hyde. It goes to business by day and it has to look like an entirely different dress for evening dates. A well-known New York department store has come forth with the best solution to this problem. It offers in a recent series of ads a basic dress of either silk or wool. This dress is the last word in new lines and detailing—a fuller skirt with the flattering, stitched down pleats at the front, a well fitted bodice and straight but graceful sleeves, and a neckline with a clever collar that can be worn up or open. No ornamentation of any kind on this dress—just good line and fabric. But, here's the trick, along with the illustration of this dress is a series of smaller sketches showing little tricks that will change it from tailored severity to utter, dress-up femininity. Such things as tailored suede or kid belts to be interchanged, with a velvet or metal belt for greater formality. Jewelled clips or simple metal ones. A tricky braid collar as opposed to a bright but tailored Ascot scarf. And several types of flower trimmings with the tailored contrasting with the more elaborate. Why you don't have to have an ounce of imagination to see what a perfectly swell idea it is and how quickly you can take it unto yourselves. A dozen costumes out of one simple, not very costly dress.

My pictures this month give some extra ideas for you along our same pinch-penny theme. Rosalind Russell's very plain black crepe evening dress is one of those pets that can be changed by little decorations and thus appear at a whole winter's social gaieties without being pointed out as the dress you wore last time. A necklace, clips or a little capelet would exchange with the original gold kid flowers as details. The lines of this dress are good any time regardless of fashion flurries for Grecian robes or the more fussy gowns of various historical periods.

Miriam Hopkins' moire with the impertinent bow at the neck is one of those evening dresses that will look just as seasonable next summer as it does this winter. And incidentally, that giddy bow isn't a bad stunt to try on some evening dress that begins to look a little party weary. Done in velvet or taffeta it would be a triumph.

Maureen O'Sullivan has one of those grand jacket dresses that leads a dual, even a triple life. Black crepe is the fabric with contrasting white crepe for the flattering collar and bodice trimming. The decolletage is high in both back and front. A brief jacket, shown below the picture of the dress on page 49, has full elbow sleeves and a boyish little collar to match the trim on the dress. The jacket is slit all the way down the back. A single water lily of the crepe adds a nice detail to this costume.

ON page 48 are four frivolous but excellent suggestions that cost little but will mark you imaginative as well as practical. First Billie Burke shows what you can do with rhinestone jewelry. A hair clip is placed in a new spot at the part of the hair. Earrings and a clip can be worn together or alone. In another picture you see her wearing a metal jacket over a plain crepe dress. A large bunch of metallic and silk flowers fill in the neckline and provide sole trimming for the dress. A large chiffon handkerchief and a pearl bracelet provide added accessory notes. Billie wears this costume in "Splendor" and it shows you how you can transform any last year's evening gown by merely adding a new bunch of flowers and a jacket as she has. The flowers or the jacket alone would do the trick but the combination is irresistible.

A clip can be switched about from costume to hair—worn on a dress by day and doubling as an evening hair ornament after six! Anne Darling matches the clip in her hair with a small choker necklace of red beads and rhinestones which are tied with a velvet ribbon instead of held by the usual fastener. Since high necked dresses trimmed with pearls or other beads are so good this season, you can vary this idea with great effectiveness.

Incidentally, while on the subject of jewelry, do you know what the best jewelry investment is for the girl who can't indulge in passing whimsies of the costume jewelry counter? It's an inexpensive string of pearls which can be worn with everything from sports clothes to evening dresses and never be in poor taste no matter what you are wearing.

I added Virginia Bruce's hat to this assortment of ideas because it illustrates a good point. As you notice, Virginia is wearing a tailored suit with a very frilly feminine blouse, so she takes a plain felt of the Breton sailor type and dresses it up with a chenille dotted veil. Doesn't that give you an idea of how to change a tailored hat into a gay dress-up affair that will be able to look an elaborate velvet right in the face without feeling a shabby cousin?

ON page 50 are three wearable daytime dresses that, by changing accessories, also change their personalities. Evalyn Knapp's green crepe with a small embroidered dot has all the new elements to look for in this winter's dress. The skirt is short with the fullness gathered to the front, the short jacket affects a military swagger through the silk braid frog fastenings. When the jacket is removed, Evalyn has a trim one-piece dress with the soft white silk scarf tie. This tie can be varied with others, in color and different fabric. A metal one would make the dress formal enough for a cocktail party or an evening bridge gathering. It's the perfect silk dress I mentioned earlier that can go to business as well as out to parties. Evalyn's choice of a tricorne is a good tip, too. It looks tailored by day, but with the addition of a veil, it takes on all the airs of a formal hat.

Marsha Hunt's black woolen would be equally smart in silk crepe or satin. The full cut to the skirt with the front gathering is graceful. The white collar and vestee are perfect for daytime use but can be replaced by lace or contrasting velvet for dress-up wear. The cape, which she holds in her hand, is a grand topper to the dress for fall and spring days when a coat isn't needed, but the dress looks just as smart without it when worn under a heavy coat. Note Marsha's nice choice of simple accessories.

Now, don't turn away from Rosalind Russell's gray woolen because it looks too plain. It is one of the most useful dresses you can have, a variation of the classic button-down-the-front shirtwaist dress. Rosalind uses only a bright belt and bag to give it color but a handkerchief scarf tucked into the collar, or a white pique collar and cuff set, or a smart sports pin would all provide good variations in trimming. This type of dress is as good in silk as woolen—and infinitely useful.

Before signing off, I want to call your attention to what you can do for your budget by knitting accessories and costumes. Knitted fashions are very important and hand-knitted ones even more so. Now, just turn to page 52 for this month's two attractive knitted fashions.

Confessions of an Extra Girl

(Continued from page 46)

—and above all, please believe me when I say that I know whereof I speak.

You hear, I know, about girls being picked from the extra ranks and given important roles. This does happen occasionally. However, what is never stressed enough is the fact that it is one of the most unusual things that can occur in Hollywood. You don't hear about the hundreds and hundreds of extras—of which I am one—who are not picked. You go ahead, day after day, year after year, being nothing but extras.

AND it is that one chance in ten thousand that lures girls to Hollywood. I know. I said to myself before I came to Hollywood, "Yes, there is a lot of competition. There are thousands of beautiful and attractive girls in Hollywood, but I believe that I am as beautiful and as talented as they. I will be one of those one-in-ten-thousand girls." And, you see, I wasn't. Yet I stay here for two reasons: first, I have no other place to go and second—and this is the most important—I am a victim of hope.

Oh, it is really much better to sit at home with the dream that perhaps, had you tried, you could have become a great actress. It is better to have this illusion than to face the bitter reality of Hollywood.

When I first began my career, plenty of people told me how lucky I was. It was quite amazing the manner in which I received my first chance. It was—actually—lucky. And yet it was unlucky in a way, too. For if I had never had even one day's extra work, I would have remained in Hollywood only until my money ran out and then gone home. How much better off I would have been!

No, it is that first day's work that is so insidious.

There are two types of extras in Hollywood. One type is comparatively happy. They are the people who have no hope, no ambition (perhaps they once had, I don't know), who simply have found an easy way to make a haphazard living. Then there are those, like myself, who still foolishly dream of the day when we will be great stars. We are the unhappy ones.

I won't say I haven't had some fun during my five years as an extra. And if I am to be honest, I must say that there is still a tremendous amount of glamor in this business for me. I never step on a set without getting a thrill, without thinking, "Maybe this is the time."

I have made several very good friends as well as many enemies. My friends are those girls and boys, who, like myself, have ambition. The ones without ambition are very apt to kid those who have it.

SO many people talk about "getting the breaks." A "break," as they call it here in Hollywood, often means nothing at all. I had several good breaks and for awhile my hopes were sky high. But there was no follow up—and so, I am still an extra.

And now I must tell you about my life as it is today.

I go sometimes for as much as two weeks without a day's work. Then I will have a lucky week and work five days steadily. I average about twenty-five dollars a week which just keeps my head above water and gives me no chance to save any money.

There are various little tricks one can use to get more work. For instance, suppose one is on a ballroom set with many extras. It is a good idea to try to get a place as close to the star as possible. The star always will have close-ups and these usually are made after the majority of extras are dismissed. Since a large number of extras are expensive, they will shoot the long shots first with the extras all in the scene. That may take a day or two. Then they will go into the star's close-ups which will call for a return only of those extras who are near the star.

The easiest sets are those which show an audience watching a theatrical performance. That means that all you do is to sit all day and applaud at the right moments.

The most difficult scenes for "dress" extras are ballroom scenes. You are then kept dancing all day and it is no fun, I assure you.

I had a strange psychological shock the first time I went on a ballroom set. I was given a gorgeous evening dress to wear. I put on my make-up carefully and arranged my hair in a lovely effect. And yet, when I walked on the set, not a single person told me I looked nice.

When a girl puts on an evening dress to go out dancing with her best beau he invariably says, when she comes in the room, "You look lovely tonight. What a beautiful dress!" And most women expect this when they have gone to the trouble to look their best. You have no idea how flat you feel when no one notices either you or your gown.

I WONDER how many people notice the extras at all when they see a picture? Few do, I imagine. The extras are simply a background for the star, and yet, each extra dresses as carefully and makes up as well as if he or she were the star and all eyes were centered upon him.

Many extras read, sew or play bridge on the set. I always say that I do not play bridge when they ask me and I never take a book, or any sewing, because I want to watch the stars at work. I always am storing up little bits of knowledge.

Over and over again, I've seen stars fail to understand what the director wants. I know I could do the scene better, yet I must control myself to keep from crying out, "Let me do it. I know I can. Oh, please let me do it." This always discourages me.

Then I'll be watching and will see a star do a scene so brilliantly, so emotionally that I am discouraged because I know I could never rise to such heights. I've often gasped at seeing the simple, beautiful way in which Helen Hayes does her work. It is a pity that she says she is retiring from the screen.

Sometimes I just know I am not to be given the chance, that I am doomed forever to be an extra and that probably some day your children will be seeing me as one of those white-haired dowagers who are always in every "dress" set! Believe me, though, if I ever am a star, I will reveal my true identity and admit that I wrote these confessions. Will that day ever come!

No, girls, take a tip from me. Don't come to Hollywood. For the extra's life is heartbreaking and bitter. Instead of buying that ticket, stay at home with your dreams!

Why Hollywood FEARS the second day

IT'S no secret out in Hollywood that more than one famous star has lost her job because of constipation.

Movie directors simply can't stand for lack of pep, dull eyes, pimples, sick headaches caused by constipation.

That's why you should follow Hollywood's example and not let a second day pass without coming to nature's aid with a beauty laxative.

Olive Tablets are popular in Los Angeles, and everywhere else, because they are dependable, mild and non-habit-forming. And because they gently help Nature restore normal action in the intestines.

Keep a box handy on the bathroom shelf. Three sizes—15¢, 30¢, 60¢. At all druggists.

DR. EDWARDS' OLIVE TABLETS THE Beauty LAXATIVE

CHS 36
Write for FREE Catalog
OVER 300 DESIGNS

CLASS PINS · 35c RINGS · $1.60

PINS handsomely silver plated, enameled 1 or 2 colors, any 3 or 4 letters and year. Doz. Price $3.50. Sterling or Gold Plate 50c; Doz. $5. RINGS, Sterling Silver, similarly low priced. Largest makers for 40 years. Write today!

BASTIAN BROS. CO. 72 Bastian Bldg., Rochester, N. Y.

Girls! GET THIS Free Art test

If you like to draw, test your sense of design, color, proportion, etc., with our Art Ability Test. Get a frank opinion, free, as to whether your talent is worth developing.

Publishers and advertisers spend millions yearly for illustrations. Design and color influence the sale of most things we buy. Industry needs artists. Girls earn as much as men. Many Federal trained artists earning from $1,000 to $5,000 yearly. Many famous artists contributed exclusive illustrated lessons to our courses. If you have talent train it at home. This may be your surest way to success. Courses sold on easy monthly payments. Get free Art Test and Book describing opportunities in art. State age and occupation. Write today.

FEDERAL SCHOOLS, Inc.
129F Federal Schools Building
Minneapolis, Minnesota

The Private Diary of Bill Powell

(Continued from page 39)

days. Now I know nothing about it. I don't know what it is, I don't know how it comes, or goes.

She asked me whether I intend to marry again. I said that I didn't know. I may. Or I may not. She looked very unhappy about it.

Then I was asked whether I chew gum. If I'd said that I do, the Upper Crust would say, "Oh, the nasty mans!" If I'd said that I do not, the Lower Crust would say, "The big stuck-up—who does he think he is?"

I said that I didn't know. The young lady was disappointed in me. Her eyes told me so.

I thought, after she had gone, that she might have asked me about acting. But no one seems to care what I think about acting. It seems too bad—I have given so much time to it and I can discuss it quite intelligently.

Once I was asked how I became suave. When I want to try to be funny I pronounce suave like "salve," with a flat A! I talked about that. I said that when I first went to dramatic school in New York they told me I wouldn't do. They said I had ability, but was too yokel. They said I talked yokel. I thought I could fix that, so I played the sedulous ape to all suave actors. I went to the theatres where the English actors played and hung over the balcony rail and soaked it all in. The way they pronounced words, their manners. They seemed very pleasant to me. I thought I would like to be like them. Now I am very suave. Everyone says so. And to my face!

TUESDAY

I was taking a sun-bath in my solarium this afternoon. Suddenly I heard voices below. I draped a bath towel about me, and went down. Three women were passing from my living-room to my dining-room and thence to my game-room. They were animated and seemed very pleased with the house. I had never seen them before. I located my butler. He made inquiries. He came back and reported that they were tourists—fans. They had wanted to see a movie actor's home so they had been gracious enough to choose mine. They said that they knew I wouldn't mind. My butler, with an Eric Blore smile, conveyed to them that this is a private home. They seemed surprised, but said they had enjoyed every minute of it.

My Mother and Dad are now installed in the cottage built for them on the grounds. They are happier there than they would be in the house with me—more independent. My hours are so indefinite that I'd have servant problems and they'd have indigestion.

My mother still calls me "Willie." And thinks of me as her "baby." That's all right. I often hark back to those days of yore. I'd like to be a child again.

I think I tore down Hobart Bosworth's original house and built this new one, new from the ground up, so that I could play blocks again. Other adult experiences—love, marriage, fame—may be here today and gone tomorrow. Bricks, stones and mortar remain. As we grow older, things, just things, become more important to us.

I built this house for an investment—two ways. So that it would be easy to live in and easy to sell.

I never leave the place when I am not working. I can do everything I ever want to do right here—swim, play tennis, run pictures, hunt for my keys.

I usually cook my own dinners. Broil steaks over charcoal in the fire-place, or I roast whole chickens. I have all the gadgets. Then I run pictures. It's my hobby as well as my home, this house. Every tree has been planted for a special reason. Everything runs smoothly except for my keys.

WEDNESDAY

Some talk of my playing in a picture with Carole Lombard this year. I was asked, "Would you like it?" I said, "Sure, it would be swell." Why not? Carole and I go places occasionally again, now that Jean Harlow and I decided to—"just be friends."

Someone asked me the other day why I became an actor.

I said, "Don't be nasty."

They weren't being nasty, they said. So I told them. I said that I became an actor because I was acutely self-conscious as a kid. I used to spend hours, when I was going to a party, figuring how I would act, what I would say, what sort of an impression I would make. I always hoped that I would create the impression of being debonaire. I never did. And I never left a party that I didn't wonder and worry over what impression I really had made, whether I had appeared to advantage or not. I developed the habit of rehearsing before going out. I'd rehearse myself—in the role I thought I would appear in to the best advantage.

In other words, I was always putting on a performance. I forever was figuring out my exists and entrances, my lines. It was but a step from being an amateur to becoming a professional, which gives me the opporunity of appearing in a variety of agreeable roles, and knowing what impression I create.

That is why I am an actor. It may be the "why" of all of us. Perhaps actors are, fundamentally, more self-conscious than other men.

Rosalind Keith and Marsha Hunt at Hollywood's ice skating rink. Uh, huh, there is one!

THURSDAY

A friend said to me today, "Are you a business man or are you all temperament?"

I went to look for my keys.

I came back and said, "I am a business man at heart. I am a merchant with a commodity to sell. The commodity is myself."

My friend said that I was "killing."

I developed my train of thought. I said, "Instead of selling soup I sell my own personality. The studio bottles it for me, I act accordingly. I watch my fan mail. Why? Well, doesn't every good business man check up on his sales? Doesn't he have to know how his customers are receiving his cans of soup? The fans are my customers. They go to the box office and buy me or they do not. I want to know what they have to say about the man who is, in my case, both manufacturer and the product. I go on the premise that the customer is always right."

My friend said, absently, "Aren't you killing?"

I went on, talking to myself. I said that I've never been a juvenile leaping in the moonlight, not even when I was a juvenile leaping in the moonlight. I've never capitalized on youth—not on the screen. And suavity should be ageless. I figure that I can totter onto the screen when I am eighty and still get a palsied hand.

FRIDAY

Today my friend was here again, or possibly yet. We got to talking about actors again. He said, "But actors have more emotion than other men . . ."

"No," I said, 'we just show our emotions more. We know how."

My friend said, "But aren't there more temptations in Hollywood than elsewhere?"

"Oh," I said, "that. Sure," I went on suavely, "if you walk among a swarm of bees you are more apt to get stung than if you just meet up with one bee now and then."

My friend said, "but come now, don't you fall in love with all your leading women?"

I went to look for my keys. This time I found them—and used them!

I came back. I shut his mouth with my right hand.

I said, "I have a deep affection for Luise Rainer and for all of the other lovely ladies who have been in pictures with me. But it is affection—and nothing to do with the emotion called 'sex.' "

Disbelief was horrid in the eyes of my friend. I tripped him with my right foot, he toppled over into the pool. I left him there and addressed my remarks to the fish in the fish pool. Some ass had put bluestone in the water that morning, so the fish were dying anyway. A few more gasps of astonishment could neither harm nor help.

I said aloud, "I don't know anything about these things. I think that succumbing to temptation is an individual matter, as is nobly resisting it. Some of us are St. Anthonys here in Hollywood as we would be on the desert. Some of us are not. Each man behaves according to his last, like shoes. Some walk crooked, others stay on a straight and narrow line. Now and then the hand of the Potter shakes and the pot wobbles. Someone once said 'Character is fate.' I repeat it."

SATURDAY

My son Bill was here today—he is ten. He's developing into a fine swimmer. I think he's going to be a producer. He asks me all kinds of questions about the cost of pictures and what exhibitors pay for this one and that and about box office receipts and things.

Luncheon on blue linen and with white flowers for decoration. I didn't notice this, a guest did. I have a good cook—one of Life's major blessings. The kind of cook that does Asparagus Vinaigrette so you would say, "But is this vinaigrette or is it, even, asparagus . . .?"

We were talking. Dick and Jessica were here and Ronnie (Ronald Colman). I like to talk. I said that Hollywood has no traditions. It has no memories, except D. W. Griffith and Valentino. It's like a Gold Rush town, I said. Strangers from the four corners of the globe come here. No one knows anyone else's real name, nor where they come from. Nobody cares.

How could Hollywood have memories or tradition? Great-grandmother Garbo, for instance, never exchanged recipes with Great-grandmother Marlene Dietrich.

We can't say, "Do you remember?" and go back for more than a handful of years.

I've been asked whether actors are like other people. I always answer yes, only more so. Everything depends on the man behind the actor. There are actors, who marry, build homes, have children and lay up stocks and bonds, against their old age. There are other actors who become so fevered that they explode like Fourth of July pin-wheels and nothing can be seen of them but whirling sparks.

Scratch the average man and you'll find the actor. Scratch the actor and you'll find the average man. There are exceptions. But we'll leave them to Herr Freud and the psychopathic wards. Mostly, all people are of the same clay.

My friend of yesterday has not come up. I have answered the phone seventy-nine times by actual count. I have a phone with a long extension in every room in the house. But I mean every—

My keys disappeared.

I went to look for them—the keys.

There may be something symbolic in my constant search for my missing keys. For keys open doors, answer riddles, throw light upon the darkness . . .

Hepburn—Artist or Imitator?

(Continued from page 29)

performances . . . watched, listened and imitated Miss Williams. The Cinderella story did not come true. Miss Williams never, during that long run, failed to appear for a performance and thus allow her understudy to "save the show." But the understudy was thoroughly versed, at the end of the run, in all of Miss Williams' best physical stage tricks. They were, physically, so alike.

AFTER that Katie understudied Alla Nazimova in the Theatre Guild's "A Month in the Country." Now, Nazimova is an actress who becomes, for the time being, the character she is portraying. (I have heard this from people who have played with her . . . and they tell me that it is all very confusing when the lady is engaged in repertoire!) Hepburn, the minx, also became the character whom Alla was portraying. She became that character so thoroughly that it became a part of herself.

There are shots of her in "Alice Adams" which you would swear were shots of Nazimova. The hands-to-the-throat gesture, the flutter, the turning of the profile to the audience while the throat vibrates . . . all these are characteristic Nazimova tricks.

It all reminds me of a conversation with King Vidor, one of our most sensitive and important directors. "An artist should be like a sponge," he pronounced. "He should learn from everyone. Now, I want to be an artist and therefore I don't want to talk to you. . . . I want you to talk to me. There is always the possibility that you may know something which has bearing on my job, something which I may have overlooked!"

I don't know who taught Katharine to control her temper. That temper lost her a number of excellent opportunities in her early days in the theatre. It lost her, by an untimely flaring, a coveted role in "Death Takes a Holiday." She waited three months for a plummy role in "Animal Kingdom," opposite Leslie Howard, and then sacrificed it after five days of rehearsal because she had quarrelled with her director. There were a number of similar episodes, but there have not been, you will observe, any of the same sort since she entered pictures!

She may have been naughty to the Press but she has worked with her producers and directors with no noticeable difficulty.

THEN there were a couple of pretty obvious and profitable bits of borrowing from Garbo! Our Katie, like Greta, is a showman. Arrived in Hollywood, Katharine apparently looked about her inquiringly, to discover what actress had achieved the most valuable publicity and by what methods. A child of six could have answered that one. Garbo, of course. And the method? It consisted, merely, of appearing to wish to avoid publicity, while doing everything possible to attract attention.

So, Katie ran like everything from reporters and photographers . . . down the very same alleys that Garbo had been sprinting before her. (Hepburn was a bit hampered by the fact that she could run faster than Garbo!) Described by studio press agents as "exotic," la Hepburn rode to that studio in an expensive, imported car, complete with liveried chauffeur, herself wearing faded dungarees, tattered tennis shoes and a battered hat. Could it be that she had heard some mention somewhere of Garbo's elderly sweaters and tired canvas shoes?

There can be no doubt that she studied and profited from Garbo's voice, screen diction and general aura of glamor.

That is not all that she studied. After "Alice Adams" had been shot, she spent three days in the cutting room, watching assistant director Jane Loring edit the film. She has made the life of cameraman Robert de Grasse pretty complicated by demanding to peek through the finder at impending shots. She has got in the way of prop men and electricians, wanting to watch shots in her pictures which did not concern her in the least.

She says that she has learned more from director George Cukor than from anyone else in Hollywood . . . to which Mr. Cukor responds, gallantly, that he has learned a great deal from Miss Hepburn, too. But,

You'd be surprised—
WHAT GOOD COFFEE HAS TO DO WITH Romance!
COFFEE IS always good MADE

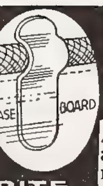
the Drip-O-lator way

Oh, so you think good coffee and romance have no connection. You just try being "the one and only" and serve your friends or him coffee that is weak, carelessly made. Follow the simple instructions supplied with every Drip-O-lator and you will be sure of perfect coffee every time. Like most good things, it's imitated. Remember the name and LOOK for the name DRIP-O-LATOR stamped in the bottom for your protection.

THE ENTERPRISE ALUMINUM CO., MASSILLON, O.

THE ORIGINAL DRIP-O-LATOR IS SOLD BY ALL LEADING CHAIN, DEPARTMENT & RETAIL STORES

NEW EASY WAY



10¢

JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP

KEEP WIRES OFF FLOOR
(LAMPS AND RADIO)

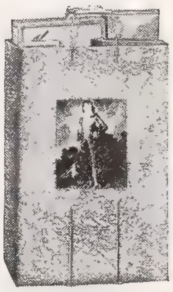
A neat job instantly. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords. 10c.
At Kresge's

Now a New Christmas Shopping Convenience

DEUBENER'S
Basketlyke Carrier

No. 20 10c

and the old RELIABLE No. 1 LEATHERLYKE Shopping Bag 5c



Make Christmas Shopping easy at your favorite store. These good-looking, strong, handy Deubener Bags are great for shopping—serve you for knitting and many other uses every day, ALL the year.

MERRY CHRISTMAS
HAPPY NEW YEAR

DEUBENER'S SHOPPING BAGS
GARFIELD PARK, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

do we detect something wry in Mr. Cukor's polite retort, something to do with the problem of the psychology of talented, red-haired actresses? Or are we bum detectors?

KATHARINE HEPBURN does not like meeting new people. This is not so much because she is shy as it is that she is restless and impatient. Impatient with the effort it requires to undertake the careful groundwork of getting to know a person . . . and impatient with the waste of time and energy you spend in silly talk. She will do without her lunch rather than go into the studio commissary alone. If she goes with someone, they can pretend to be engaged in serious and important conversation. Alone, she is required to answer two dozen friendly and well-meaning persons who pause at her table to inquire, "How's tricks?" or "What do you know?" Katie simply doesn't know the answers to those questions. She is possessed of no such give-and-take of small talk and it scares her to death.

That is probably why she never goes to Hollywood parties and why she appears so rarely at Hollywood restaurants. It is probably why, on those hurried plane trips to Connecticut to see her family, she withdraws so definitely from the friends with whom she went to school. Her friends will tell you that she is shy. I don't believe it. No really shy girl could have made her way with such stubborn determination through so many set-backs and fiery personal clashes in the difficult theatre world! Katharine Hepburn is not shy, but neither would I call her sociable nor cozy!

Time was when I thought that perhaps she was another flash in the pan, that her success might have been one of those accidents of personality, of strange, unconventional beauty, plus fortunate vehicles and directors. I thought she might be merely novel. But since "Alice Adams" . . . no, since the saccharine and old-fashioned "Little Minister," I have been sure that Hepburn was the stuff of which permanent success is made.

Undoubtedly, she will go right on "borrowing" tricks and traits from more mature and experienced troupers. I once heard the president of an important University pronounce, "Our really important students are not the ones who become letter perfect in their lessons and recite them like parrots. They are the boys who assimilate what they learn, make it their own and transmute it into something individual."

If Katharine has "borrowed" recognizable characteristics from other people, she has nevertheless transmuted them into something individual and artistically important. But gracious! If she goes on like this, she'll be practically an entire motion picture cast, all in one package!

Don't Take Advice!

(Continued from page 47)

Cagney was the rebel of Hollywood? He told his studio that he'd leave the picture business before he'd make the compromises demanded of him. He threw words of rebellion in their faces.

He was given advice. Golly, was that lad given advice! "You're being a fool, Jimmy," people said. "Now take my advice and patch this thing up. Why, the studio can ruin your career. You'd better see the producers. You had better compromise."

They painted a black picture—unless, of course, he took their shining advice. But Jimmy went his own way, he listened only to the dictates of his own rebellious heart. And today he is doing okay for himself. That wolf you heard wasn't howling at his door.

And now look at a victim of bad advice whose own vitality at last came through. I'm speaking of Myrna Loy.

You really can't blame her for heeding the advice-givers. It was pretty hard for her to sit back, with only an average contract, and realize that she was coining money for her studio while others, with not nearly so much box-office appeal, were better off than she.

True, when she signed that contract she had been a mediocre actress for years. True, it was the change in her style of work and a chance to show the talents that had so long been hidden by slithering, slit-eyed roles that turned her into a company money-maker. But no one knew that this was going to happen.

And so she was "advised." The hundreds of Hollywood advice-givers (honestly, they should form a union) told her she was foolish to sit by and make no more demands. So Myrna against her own better judgment upped and left the lot and an announcement was made that she was going with another studio.

Myrna's advice-givers should now be getting a royalty from Luise Rainer. Luise profited when she stepped into the Loy four-Bs. It may have been her own first hunch or the flashing success made by Rainer that determined Myrna to give up the outside studio idea. At any rate, she is back in the fold. And the lads who peddled the advice must feel pretty silly.

THERE are those who say Helen Vinson is the biggest potential bet on the screen. And every newcomer is meat for the advisors. How shocked they were when anyone so untried and insecure determined to break her contract and free lance! They were horrified when she dared to quarrel with Sam Goldwyn over how a scene in "The Wedding Night" was to be played.

SO they weren't surprised, they said, when she signed a contract to make a couple of pictures with Gaumont-British; it was all just a part of her general rebelliousness. And they told her, "You're making a big mistake to work in England. After all, in Hollywood it is 'Out of sight out of mind!' Besides people will get the idea that you're through here and won't want you any more."

So Helen made her two pictures in England, "King of the Damned" and "Transatlantic Tunnel"—both of which added credit to her fame as an actress—and has returned to Hollywood for another picture. And besides having more prestige, she also has a new husband, Fred Perry, the tennis player.

How right Helen was to listen to her own convictions! How wrong she would have been had she taken the free advice!

And man, oh man, the advice they gave Garbo. "You must be nice to the press," they told her. "You must be sweet and gracious and always see everyone. You must go to the important parties," they said. "It's good to mix with people and get to know the big shots. It will get you publicity."

So Garbo said, "I tank I go home" and got more publicity than press teas and smiles for every writer in Hollywood would have netted her.

THE first trip Paul Muni made to Hollywood was a succession of advice conferences. Not knowing the ways of Hollywood he said he felt like a man going through an African jungle. How stupid the man would be to attempt it without a guide. So he took along a lot of guides, who showed him just where to put his foot every step he made.

What happened? In just a few months Paul was out. He went back to the stage, a little sore at Hollywood.

And then, months later, he had another chance. This time he listened to no one but himself. He broke all the rules which Hollywood lays down for its newcomers. And the next thing you knew Paul Muni was a success in pictures.

It really all boils down to one truth—the people who dare to do, who have real rebellion in their souls, who refuse to walk along the accepted paths, are the ones with the courage and energy to put themselves across.

Haven't you seen it in families? Four children will be "mother's pride"—so sweet, so docile, so gentle. And the fifth will always be in trouble, never do what he is told. Nine times out of ten it is that very trying fifth child who makes his presence felt in the world.

And yet so bound are we by rules and regulations, so envious perhaps of those who have the courage to break them, that we predict dire disaster for them.

Carole Lombard and I were talking about that one day. "I never listen to anybody but myself," she said. "People say I'm just plain nuts. But at least they say it, they don't dismiss me with an evasive word or two."

I believe that if you will look over the Hollywood scene you will learn a lesson. And that lesson is, "Know what you want to do, have a picture of your goal in your mind and set out to get it your way, without taking advice from anybody!"

It's Thrifty to Knit

(Continued from page 52)

fashions. The finishing is very important. You can have your dress blocked by a professional if you like, but if you want to do it yourself, this is the way to go about it: Be very careful in sewing the seams together to have the rows matching. When your dress or sweater is completed, lay a thick pad on a table, then spread your dress out full length and width. Stretch it to your individual measurements. Get your correct length of sleeve, bust and hip measurement. Then pin it carefully to the pad about every inch, following above instructions. Lay a wet cloth over it and press until almost dry. Remove the pins. Lay the seams flat and press out the creases made by the pins.

There is no charge for our instructions—they're absolutely free. All you do is to signify the accessory set or costume you want by number and send it together with a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Adelia Bird, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

How to Hold Your Husband

(Continued from page 45)

unusual people, and Irene and her husband are that.

Now take a tip from Dixie Lee Crosby. Give your husband twins once in awhile! (Ha, Ha!) But seriously, Bing was the proudest man in Hollywood when those babies were born. Aside from his paternal pride, think what husbandly pride he must take in looking at Dixie, the mother of three lusty boys, and finding her the same slender, vivacious girl he married. Don't ever let your maternal interest in your new offspring dull your romantic one in your husband. Get after your figure the moment you are feeling tip-top again. Make your routine just as methodical as that of your baby's. You won't regret it, you'll thank me.

And now let me give you some tips. For goodness sake, don't harp on dieting and reducing. Husbands have a holy horror of those two words, mostly because they have seen too many women ruin their health and dispositions by stupid starvation diets and fantastic get-slim-quick ideas. A jittery, cranky woman can drive a man to more things than drink! Remember this, my system gives you health and strength—two essentials to beauty in any form. You must be healthy to be strong.

Now I'm going to give you a marvelous exercise for reducing the abdomen—it has never failed. It's an exercise wherein your husband can help you, if you can persuade him to.

LIE flat upon the floor, on your face, with your arms outstretched above your head. First, get your husband to grab you around your ankles (he's in a standing position). Now, have him slowly pull your ankles up off the floor. Your legs are in a semi-circle and it is as if he were going to make your toes touch your head and thus bring you into a complete circle. While he is doing this, you must stretch your stomach and arm muscles. Baby, you can feel the flesh rolling off. Keep at it. Have him raise and lower your ankles for about five minutes, daily. In a month you won't know your own figure. You won't know your husband, either, he'll be complimenting you so much.

And listen, baby, don't let your husband give you that old alibi, "I don't want you to reduce. I love you the way you are."

Sure, he probably does like you the way you are because you've become a habit—a comfortable sort of habit like his old smoking jacket or his bedroom slippers.

No matter how interested he still seems to be in the plump you, remember that he can become more interested in some slender atractive girl who happens along. By the time he's met a dozen slim, attractive girls —well, look out!

Have you ever noticed that when a group of married friends go dancing of an evening, how often the husband of a fat gal dances with his neighbor's slim wife? Need I say more?

He may say he likes you as you are but he would worship you, if you were youthful, slim and lovely looking. Life for both of you would be a thousand times more fascinating. We are progressing so fast today that pretty soon there will be no such thing as age, so be alert and eager enough to grasp all the benefits that science has to offer you.

Now I am going to give you a "How to Hold Your Husband" diet. It works both ways. It's a meal that will reduce you and will, at the same time, be so darn good that he'll yell for more. Don't laugh. It's a corned beef and cabbage dinner!

Cut off all the fat from corned beef. Put it in a kettle with a cup of cold water. To this add two onions, three bay leaves, twelve whole black pepper pods and a solid head of white cabbage, cut into quarters. Steam all this together for one hour and a half. Then peel and quarter (quarter them the long way) some Irish potatoes. Add them and steam the whole dish for another hour. You can eat the corned beef and cabbage but don't eat the

Which is which? Can you spot Mme. Sylvia's Joan Personette, whom she selected in our December issue as the girl most closely resembling Joan Crawford? The likeness is startling and when la Crawford visited New York recently, the girls got together. Here they are—at left, Joan Personette, at right, Joan Crawford.

GRIFFIN-A·B·C
for a real shine
GRIFFIN A·B·C BLACK SHOE POLISH
NEW CAN 2/3 LARGER
EASY OPENER
ALL COLORS 10¢
Griffin Manufacturing Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

BECOME AN EXPERT

ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $3,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. Only 12,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U. S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A's, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession that Pays."

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 1318H, Chicago

The School That Has Trained Over 1,200 C. P. A.'s

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

THE liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile onto the food you swallow every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c at all drug stores. © 1935, C. M. Co.

potatoes. The rest of the family will enjoy them.

With this meal serve a green salad and for dessert, have apples baked this way: Cut out both stems of the apples but do not core them. Stick a piece of lemon peel into the place where the stem was. Then squeeze the juice of the lemon over the raw apples. Bake them slowly, basting as you bake. Do not add any sugar. Serve them with a demi-tasse. A swell dessert.

And there you have a meal that is reducing, inexpensive and absolutely delicious. It's as good for your husband as it is for you. Just sit back and listen to him yell for more. And, when you tell him that it's a reducing meal, I'll bet he won't believe you!

So, in closing, remember, darling, a good man is hard to find—but once found, he's worth holding with every bit of imagination and allure you can conjure up.

Sylvia is glad to answer your letters. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Mme. Sylvia, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

She will discuss all of your personal problems with you. But remember to ask her just one question at a time. She can answer them more quickly that way.

What's Ahead for Janet Gaynor?

(Continued from page 41)

often produce very unsettled results.

But I believe that even these facts are comparatively insignificant and unimportant. I believe that the change, if there be a change, is due simply and wholly to the fact that the girl has become the woman and there is a normal break indicated between what she has done and what she may do in the future.

That, plus an accident which removed her from the starring role of "Way Down East." Of which, more later.

And it is also my belief that Janet will not go into the eclipse suffered by Mary Pickford. She will not undergo a similar fate just because she is entering a new phase—and knows it. That is the healthy omen, that she does know it. That is the omen which promises longevity for Janet, the star.

People say, "But if she grows up, will the fans accept her in anything but young and saccharine roles?"

IT seems to me that the past year or two answers that. And indicates, sharply, that Janet sees herself in an undistorted mirror. And demonstrates that the fans will keep step with her. For in "Carolina," she very definitely began to grow up. As the young mother of two small children she stepped into the adult class. In "Change of Heart," she played a quite mature, newspaper girl, a college graduate, no longer adolescent and wondering what it is all about. In "One More Spring," she was sophisticated, certainly not the sheltered, idealistic darling nor the pampered Faëry Queen. And while I understand that that picture, as a picture, was not an outstanding success, the report on the fan reaction to Janet herself was highly enthusiastic. In "The Farmer Takes a Wife," she gives an adult characterization and, more important, plays a character part which is an eye to the future or I am blind. And had she completed "Way Down East," she would have played a girl, unwed, who had experienced motherhood. And Janet had no objections to that role.

These are incontestable and easily checkupable facts, and seem to indicate, if not to prove, that Janet is not going to cling, blushing, to her sunbonnet blue and her Faëry Princess wands.

One fact should be clearly borne in mind when any discussion of Janet is before the house. And this fact is that she is, first and foremost, an excellent business woman. And excellent business women know when a product is dated. She is sound business woman enough to take to heart what happened to Mary Pickford, who never grew up, and to realize that there does come an end to the story of Peter Pan.

Janet is probably wealthier than nine out of ten of her fellow stars. She has no extravagances, neither financial nor emotional. Her head rules her heart and her check book and her contracts. She lives in a simple home. She keeps one servant. The average movie star's menage is staffed with anywhere from five to twenty-five. She never buys expensive cars. She has had the same one for years. She doesn't care for jewels. She never entertains more than six persons at any one time. She saves and invests her money. She buys inexpensive gowns. She doesn't make ridiculous mistakes. She consults her mother about everything. And so she will not, it is safe to assume, make the most ridiculous mistake of all—that of clinging to the ruffled skirts of girlhood once girlhood is gone, or ought to be gone.

People say "But why did she leave the cast of 'Way Down East'? I hear—Rochelle Hudson—I am told—don't try to tell me—" and so forth.

I don't know why I should try to tell anyone anything since we all believe what we want to believe, what there's the most kick in believing, and the devil take the truth.

And, for the matter of that, I can only tell you what I myself have been told by people who were eye and ear witnesses of the accident, people who were on location with the "Way Down East" company in Santa Cruz. And I have a naïve way of believing eye and ear witnesses as against the "they-sayers."

PEOPLE say, "It's all very curious." Well, if concussion of the brain and a dangerously low blood count is very curious, have it your own way. I can merely reiterate that I am told that Janet was badly hurt, and for that reason, and no other, she abdicated the part to Rochelle Hudson. She did collide with Henry Fonda when they were on location. She did see stars and she did fall over backwards, striking her head against a jagged piece of rock protruding from the field.

Mr. Henry King is a very vigorous director. When he directs the collision of two stars, one of them falls. Janet fell. And after the smash-up, a nasty one, she went on working, while her head hummed and ached. She returned to Hollywood that night. The next morning she went to the hairdresser's for a head massage, believing the treatment might relieve the pain in her head. She returned to the studio to work. She fainted in her dressing-room. Even then, she persisted. She worked for almost a week, taking osteopathic treatments meanwhile. At the end of the week she fainted again. This time she was compelled to go home. A doctor's examination disclosed concussion and a blood-count low enough to have put a prize fighter under a transfusion. She was told that she must remain in bed for at least two months. She was told that, of course, the scalp massage and the osteopathic treatments were the very worst things she could have done, under the circumstances. She was told that she really should not work for another six months.

People say, "But why isn't she working now? Isn't there something queer about that? Has Twentieth Century-Fox a story ready for her? If not, why not?"

No, nothing queer about it. Twentieth Century-Fox have not a story ready for her at this writing because, according to the terms of her contract, which call for three productions a year, she does not start work until January, 1936. "Way Down East," in spite of her having to leave the cast, is counted as one of her three for the year. Not being due to make another until January—having worked very hard and pushed her schedule ahead last year in the hope that she could make her long-dreamed-of world tour—she is up to scratch and that is the why of that. They are looking for material for her right now.

Her contract with Fox expires in June of this year. She will make her scheduled two pictures before that time. Barring an Act of God, and assuming that a studio is not staffed with practised fabricators, this can be stated as fact.

Ann Sothern helps to eat up Inez Courtney's wedding cake! Inez recently wed Luigi Filiasi, a Los Angeles wine merchant.

Season's greetings from Hollywood's problem child! Edith Fellows, who was such a bad girl in "She Married Her Boss," presents this doll-like picture, amid a galaxy of toys.

When her contract expires, will she reign still, as Queen of the Fox lot? Well, "They" say that she will not re-sign. They say that they have heard that she will go with Mr. Sheehan. But where? Do "They" know that? Because, and I have this as coming from Janet herself, she does not know where she will go, if at all.

Such being the case, what can Janet say? It is certainly safe to assume that she will go wherever it is most advantageous for her to go, as any good business woman would. Naturally if Mr. Sheehan affiliates in such a way as to offer her better stories, larger opportunities, more money than she has now—then, quite reasonably, she would go with Mr. Sheehan, I should think. As she would go to M-G-M, RKO, Columbia, Warner Brothers—or remain where she is—according to the proposition involved.

I believe that this gives answers, however speculative, to most of the rumors, equally speculative. The box office drop of a mere one to two points. The assurance that she will make her two more scheduled pictures on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot. The assumption that if she does not re-sign with Fox it will only be because something more attractive presents itself. The information, which is as valid as eyes and ears can make it, that Janet left the cast of "Way Down East" because she was ill . . . difficult for skeptics to swallow, this idea that what they are told at headquarters is the truth. But as near to the truth as we have been able to come.

One more rumor. "They" have also been busy with romance rumors. One day report had it that a young dentist is the favored Romeo. I can tell you, pretty definitely, that the seriousness of that romance has been over and done with these many months. Love is an unknown quantity, of course, and any day my "pretty definite" statement may rise up to smite me in the teeth. But I think not. Another report nominated Gene Raymond as the Gaynor Gallant. Then Al Scott and so on, through the roll-call of eligible young men. Of whom there are not many.

In fact, I am told that Janet said, when questioned about Gene, "Whom else would a girl go out with in Hollywood?" And Janet's mother likes Gene, likes Janet to go out with him. Because Janet is not yet as strong as she might be and when Gene says that he will bring her home at eleven, he brings her home at eleven. I am further told that Janet has no matrimonial intentions whatsoever, or *whom*soever. She is, she says, "having a good time, playing the field." Every girl's birthright, or isn't it?

So, what's ahead for Janet Gaynor?

Somerset Maugham says, somewhere in his "Don Fernando" that ". . . if you chance to create a type he will go marching down the ages to the end of time. You gave him life and he holds you forever in the remembrance of men . . ."

Well, Janet and Mary created a type. They created the perfect type of youth when youth is innocent and dewy and lovely. The young Mary, the young Janet will remain forever, I feel sure, in the rosemary and remembrance of men.

But it is my conviction that Janet will not go down, embalmed in a memory—one memory. I believe that she will give us, not one of the Stages of Man, but possibly, all Seven Stages. She will go marching down the ages bequeathing us her idyllic youth and, as well, a mellow maturity, a silvery age, a poignant portrait gallery of which the girl will be only the pretty predecessor.

LITTLE JACK HORNER
SAT IN A CORNER
AFTER EATING A LARGE PIECE OF PIE . . .
HE STUCK IN HIS THUMB,
AND PULLED OUT A TUM,
(WHICH HE ALWAYS KEPT IN HIS VEST POCKET FOR JUST SUCH EMERGENCIES)

WHY MILLIONS CARRY TUMS!

MILLIONS now know the smart thing is to carry a roll of Tums, always. Heartburn, gas, and other symptoms of acid indigestion have a habit of occurring at unexpected times. You don't have to drench your stomach with harsh alkalies which physicians have long warned may make the tendency toward acid indigestion worse. Tums, a real scientific advancement, contain no soda or other alkalies, instead a wonderful antacid that simply neutralizes stomach acidity, the balance passing out of the body inert. Pleasant to eat as candy, only 10c a roll. Put a roll in your pocket now.

TUMS FOR THE TUMMY
TUMS ARE ANTACID . . NOT A LAXATIVE
EAT LIKE CANDY TUMS STOMACH DISTRESS 10¢
HANDY TO CARRY

FREE: Beautiful 5 color 1935-36 Calendar-Thermometer with the purchase of a 10c roll of Tums or 25c box of NR (the all-vegetable laxative). At your druggist's.

Free for Asthma During Winter

If you suffer with those terrible attacks of Asthma when it is cold and damp; if raw, Wintry winds make you choke as if each gasp for breath was the very last; if restful sleep is impossible because of the struggle to breathe; if you feel the disease is slowly wearing your life away, don't fail to send at once to the Frontier Asthma Co. for a free trial of a remarkable method. No matter where you live or whether you have any faith in any remedy under the Sun, send for this free trial. If you have suffered for a lifetime and tried everything you could learn of without relief; even if you are utterly discouraged, do not abandon hope but send today for this free trial. It will cost you nothing. Address

Frontier Asthma Co., 112-A Frontier Bldg.
462 Niagara Street, Buffalo, New York

THE PURE KNITTED COPPER
10¢ CHORE GIRL
It's a big handfull of pot cleaner
Chore Girls get quickest results in removing burnt-in grease and grime from all kitchenware. No more rough, red hands. No rust or splinters to endanger. Buy one today at the store where you secured this magazine.

BE A NURSE
MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK
You can learn at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. Est. 37 years. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write us now.
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 231, 26 N. Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 32 sample lesson pages.
Name
City State Age

Studio Addresses

(Continued from page 55)

BRUCE, VIRGINIA: M-G-M.
BUCK, FRANK: RKO-Radio.
BUCKLER, JOHN: Columbia.
BURGESS, DOROTHY: Free lance. Write her at RKO-Radio.
BURKE, BILLIE: Free lance. Write her at Columbia.
BURKE, KATHLEEN: Paramount.
BURNS, GEORGE: Paramount.
BUSHMAN, RALPH: M-G-M.
BUTLER, JIMMY: Paramount.
BUTTERWORTH, CHARLES: M-G-M.
CABOT, BRUCE: M-G-M.
CAGNEY, BILL: Republic.
CAGNEY, JAMES: Warner Bros.
CALLAHAN, MARGARET: RKO-Radio.
CALLEIA, JOSEPH: M-G-M.
CANSINO, RITA: 20th Century-Fox.
CANTOR, EDDIE: Samuel Goldwyn.
CARLISLE, KITTY: Paramount.
CARLISLE, MARY: M-G-M.
CARMINATI, TULLIO: Columbia.
CARRILLO, LEO: Columbia.
CARROLL, NANCY: Columbia.
CAVANAGH, PAUL: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
CHANDLER, CHICK: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
CHANDLER, HELEN: Free lance. Write her at United Artists.
CHAPLIN, CHARLES: United Artists.
CHATTERTON, RUTH: Columbia.
CHEVALIER, MAURICE: M-G-M.
CHRISTIANS, MADY: M-G-M.
CLARKE, MAE: M-G-M.
CLIVE, COLIN: Universal.
COLBERT, CLAUDETTE: Paramount.
COLLIER, CONSTANCE: M-G-M.
COLLINS, CORA SUE: M-G-M.
COLMAN, RONALD: United Artists.
CONNOLLY, WALTER: Columbia.
COOK, DONALD: Columbia.
COOPER, GARY: Paramount.
COOPER, JACKIE: M-G-M.
CORTEZ, RICARDO: Warner Bros.
COURTNEIDGE, CICELY: M-G-M.
COURTNEY, INEZ: Columbia.
CRABBE, LARRY: Paramount.
CRAWFORD, JOAN: M-G-M.
CROMWELL, RICHARD: Columbia.
CROSBY, BING: Paramount.
CROSMAN, HENRIETTA: 20th Century-Fox.
CUMMINGS, CONSTANCE: Free lance. Write her at Universal.
DANIELS, BEBE: Free lance. Write her at 20th Century-Fox.
DARE, DOROTHY: Warner Bros.
DARRO, FRANKIE: Free lance. Write him a Warner Bros.
DAVIES, MARION: Warner Bros.
DAVIS, BETTE: Warner Bros.
DEE, FRANCES: RKO-Radio.
DE HAVILLAND, OLIVIA: Warner Bros.
DEL RIO, DOLORES: Warner Bros.
DE MILLE, KATHERINE: Paramount.
DEVINE, ANDY: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
DIETRICH, MARLENE: Paramount.
DINEHART, ALAN: 20th Century-Fox.
DIX, RICHARD: RKO-Radio.
DODD, CLAIRE: Warner Bros.
DONAT, ROBERT: United Artists.
DONNELLY, RUTH: Warner Bros.
DOUGLAS, MELVYN: Columbia.
DOWNS, JOHNNY: Paramount.
DOYLE, MAXINE: Warner Bros.
DRAKE, FRANCES: Paramount.
DUMBRILLE, DOUGLAS: Columbia.
DUNA, STEFFI: RKO-Radio.
DUNN, JAMES: 20th Century-Fox.
DUNNE, IRENE: RKO-Radio.
DURANT, JACK: 20th Century-Fox.
DURANTE, JIMMY: M-G-M.
DVORAK, ANN: Warner Bros.
EDDY, NELSON: M-G-M.
EGGERTH, MARTA: Universal.
EILERS, SALLY: Universal.
ELDREDGE, JOHN: Warner Bros.
ELLIS, MARY: Paramount.
ELLIS, PATRICIA: Warner Bros.
ERROL, LEON: Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
ERWIN, STUART: M-G-M.
EVANS, MADGE: M-G-M.
EVANS, MURIEL: M-G-M.
FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS JR.: United Artists.
FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS SR.: United Artists.
FARRELL, CHARLES: Universal.
FARRELL, GLENDA: Warner Bros.
FAVERSHAM, PHILLIP: Warner Bros.
FAYE, ALICE: 20th Century-Fox.
FAZENDA, LOUISE: M-G-M.
FEARS, PEGGY: 20th Century-Fox.
FELLOWS, EDITH: Columbia.
FETCHIT, STEPIN: 20th Century-Fox.
FIELDS, W. C.: Paramount.
FLYNN, ERROL: Warner Bros.
FONDA, HENRY: Paramount.
FORAN, DICK: Warner Bros.
FORBES, HAZEL: RKO-Radio.
FORBES, RALPH: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
FORD, WALLACE: Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
FOSTER, NORMAN: 20th Century-Fox.
FOSTER, PRESTON: RKO-Radio.
FOX, SIDNEY: RKO-Radio.
FRANCIS, KAY: Warner Bros.
FRAWLEY, WILLIAM: Paramount.
FRITCHIE, BARBARA: Paramount.
FROOS, SYLVIA: 20th Century-Fox.
FULLER, FRANCES: Paramount.
FURNESS, BETTY: M-G-M.
GABLE, CLARK: M-G-M.
GAHAGAN, HELEN: RKO-Radio.
GALLAGHER, SKEETS: RKO-Radio.
GALLIAN, KETTI: 20th Century-Fox.
GARAT, HENRI: 20th Century-Fox.
GARBO, GRETA: M-G-M.
GARGAN, WILLIAM: Warner Bros.
GAYNOR, JANET: 20th Century-Fox.
GIBSON, WYNNE: Free lance. Write her at RKO-Radio.
GILBERT, JOHN: Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
GLEASON, JAMES: RKO-Radio.
GODDARD, PAULETTE: United Artists.
GOMBELL, MINNA: Free lance. Write her at 20th Century-Fox.
GORDON, C. HENRY: M-G-M.
GORDON, GAVIN: Columbia.
GRABLE, BETTY: RKO-Radio.
GRAHAME, MARGOT: RKO-Radio.
GRANT, CARY: Paramount.
GWENN, EDMUND: M-G-M.
HADEN, SARA: Free lance. Write her at RKO-Radio.
HAINES, WILLIAM: Mascot.
HALE, ALAN: RKO-Radio.
HALEY, JACK: 20th Century-Fox.
HALLIDAY, JOHN: Paramount.
HAMILTON, NEIL: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
HARDIE, RUSSELL: M-G-M.
HARDING, ANN: RKO-Radio.
HARDWICKE, SIR CEDRIC: United Artists.
HARDY, OLIVER: M-G-M.
HARLOW, JEAN: M-G-M.
HARVEY, FORRESTER: Free lance. Write him at M-G-M.
HARVEY, LILIAN: Free lance. Write her at Columbia.
HAYDON, JULIE: Paramount.
HAYES, HELEN: M-G-M.
HAYWARD, LOUIS: M-G-M.
HEALY, TED: M-G-M.
HENRY, CHARLOTTE: Republic.
HENRY, WILLIAM: M-G-M.
HEPBURN, KATHARINE: RKO-Radio.
HERSHOLT, JEAN: M-G-M.
HERVEY, IRENE: M-G-M.
HILLIARD, HARRIET: RKO-Radio.
HOBSON, VALERIE: Universal.
HOLLOWAY, STERLING: 20th Century-Fox.
HOLMES, PHILLIPS: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
HOLT, DAVID: Paramount.
HOLT, BETTY: Paramount.
HOLT, JACK: Columbia.
HOPKINS, MIRIAM: Samuel Goldwyn.
HORTON, EDWARD EVERETT: RKO-Radio.
HOWARD, JOHN: Paramount.
HOWARD, LESLIE: Warner Bros.
HUDSON, ROCHELLE: 20th Century-Fox.
HULL, HENRY: Universal.
HUME, BENITA: 20th Century-Fox.
HUNT, MARSHA: Paramount.
HUNTER, IAN: Warner Bros.
HUNTLEY, G. P. JR.: Universal.
HUSTON, WALTER: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
HUTCHINSON, JOSEPHINE: Warner Bros.
HYAMS, LEILA: Paramount.
JAGGER, DEAN: Paramount.
JARRETT, ARTHUR: RKO-Radio.
JASON, SYBIL: Warner Bros.
JENKINS, ALLEN: Warner Bros.
JEPSON, HELEN: Paramount.
JEWELL, ISABEL: M-G-M.
JOHNSON, KAY: RKO-Radio.
JOLSON, AL: Warner Bros.
JONES, BUCK: Universal.
JORY, VICTOR: Columbia.
JUDGE, ARLINE: 20th Century-Fox.
KAAREN, SUZANNE: Republic.
KARLOFF, BORIS: Universal.
KARNS, ROSCOE: Paramount.
KEATING, FRED: Columbia.

Watch this chap! He's John Howard and he made everyone sit up and ask his name after "Annapolis Farewell." Now he's on his way in "Millions in the Air." A genial gent and a swell actor.

KEELER, RUBY: Warner Bros.
KEENE, TOM: Free lance. Write him at Paramount.
KEITH, ROSALIND: Paramount.
KELLY, PATSY: M-G-M.
KELLY, PAUL: 20th Century-Fox.
KELLY, WALTER C.: Paramount.
KELTON, PERT: RKO-Radio.
KENT, BARBARA: Columbia.
KENYON, DORIS: Free lance. Write her at Universal.
KIBBEE, GUY: Warner Bros.
KIEPURA, JAN: Paramount.
KING, WALTER: 20th Century-Fox.
KNIGHT, JUNE: M-G-M.
KRUGER, OTTO: Columbia.
LAMONT, MOLLY: RKO-Radio.
LANDI, ELISSA: Paramount.
LANGDON, HARRY: Columbia.
LANE, LOLA: Free lance. Write her at Mascot.
LANG, JUNE: 20th Century-Fox.
LANGFORD, FRANCES: M-G-M.
LA RUE, JACK: Free lance. Write him at United Artists.
LAUGHTON, CHARLES: Paramount.
LAUREL, STAN: M-G-M.
LAWRENCE, ROSINA: M-G-M.
LAWTON, FRANK: Universal.
LAYE, EVELYN: M-G-M.
LEDERER, FRANCIS: RKO-Radio.
LEE, BILLY: Paramount.
LEE, DIXIE: 20th Century-Fox.
LEE, DOROTHY: RKO-Radio.
LEROY, BABY: Paramount.
LEROY, HAL: Warner Bros.
LEYTON, DRUE: 20th Century-Fox.
LIGHT, ROBERT: Warner Bros.
LIGHTNER, WINNIE: Free lance. Write her at Columbia.
LINAKER, KAY: Warner Bros.
LINDEN, ERIC: M-G-M.
LINDSAY, MARGARET: Warner Bros.
LLOYD, HAROLD: Paramount.
LODGE, JOHN: Free lance. Write him at Paramount.
LOMBARD, CAROLE: Paramount.
LORD, PAULINE: Columbia.
LORRE, PETER: Columbia.
LOUISE, ANITA: Warner Bros.
LOVE, MONTAGU: Free lance. Write him at Paramount.
LOWE, EDMUND: Universal.
LOY, MYRNA: M-G-M.
LUGOSI, BELA: Universal.
LUKAS, PAUL: M-G-M.
LUND, LUCILLE: Mascot.
LUPINO, IDA: Paramount.
LYON, BEN: Free lance. Write him at 20th Century-Fox.
MacDONALD, JEANETTE: M-G-M.
MACK, HELEN: RKO-Radio.
MacMAHON, ALINE: M-G-M.
MacMURRAY, FRED: Paramount.
MALA: M-G-M.
MANNERS, DAVID: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
MANNORS, SHEILA: Columbia.
MARCH, FREDRIC: United Artists.
MARGO: Paramount.
MARSH, JOAN: RKO-Radio.
MARSH, MARIAN: Columbia.
MARSHALL, HERBERT: Paramount.
MARTINI, NINO: 20th Century-Fox.
MARX BROTHERS: M-G-M.
MAYNARD, KEN: Columbia.
McCOY, COL. TIM: Columbia.
McCREA, JOEL: Samuel Goldwyn.
McFARLAND, SPANKY: M-G-M.
McHUGH, FRANK: Warner Bros.
McKINNEY, FLORINE: Universal.
McLAGLEN, VICTOR: Free lance. Write him at 20th Century-Fox.
MEIGHAN, THOMAS: Free lance. Write him at 20th Century-Fox.
MELTON, FRANK: 20th Century-Fox.
MENJOU, ADOLPHE: Warner Bros.
MERCER, BERYL: Free lance. Write her Republic.
MERKEL, UNA: M-G-M.
MERMAN, ETHEL: Samuel Goldwyn.
MICHAEL, GERTRUDE: Paramount.
MILJAN, JOHN: Free lance. Write him at Paramount.
MILLAND, RAY: Paramount.
MITCHELL, FRANK: 20th Century-Fox.
MITCHELL, GENEVA: Columbia.
MONTENEGRO: CONCHITA: 20th Century-Fox.
MONTGOMERY, DOUGLASS: Universal.
MONTGOMERY, ROBERT: M-G-M.
MOORE, COLLEEN: RKO-Radio.
MOORE, DICKIE: Free lance. Write him at Paramount.
MOORE, ERIN O'BRIEN: Free lance. Write her at RKO-Radio.
MOORE, GRACE: Columbia.
MOORE, VICTOR: Universal.
MORAN, POLLY: M-G-M.
MORENO, ANTONIO: 20th Century-Fox.
MORGAN, FRANK: M-G-M.
MORGAN, RALPH: Free lance. Write him at Republic.
MORGAN, HELEN: Warner Bros.
MORLEY, KAREN: Warner Bros.
MORRIS, CHESTER: M-G-M.
MORRISON, JOE: Paramount.
MOWBRAY, ALAN: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
MUIR, JEAN: Warner Bros.
MULHALL, JACK: Free lance. Write him at Mascot.
MUNDIN, HERBERT: 20th Century-Fox.
MUNI, PAUL: Warner Bros.
MURPHY, GEORGE: Columbia.
MURPHY, MAURICE: 20th Century-Fox.
NAGEL, CONRAD: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
NEAGLE, ANNA: United Artists.
NIXON, MARIAN: Free lance. Write her at RKO-Radio.
NOLAN, LLOYD: Columbia.
NOVARRO, RAMON: M-G-M.
NUGENT, EDWARD: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
OAKIE, JACK: Paramount.
OBERON, MERLE: United Artists.
O'BRIEN, GEORGE: 20th Century-Fox.
O'BRIEN, PAT: Warner Bros.

It's not a beautiful Eskimo with Gregory Ratoff but Binnie Barnes all done up in one of those new, hooded fur capes.

OLAND, WARNER: 20th Century-Fox.
OLIVER, EDNA MAY: M-G-M.
OLSEN, MORONI: RKO-Radio.
O'NEILL, HENRY: Warner Bros.
O'SULLIVAN, MAUREEN: M-G-M.
OVERMAN, LYNN: Paramount.
OWEN, REGINALD: Free lance. Write him at M-G-M.
PALEY, NATALIE: RKO-Radio.
PALLETTE, EUGENE: Free lance. Write him at Warner Bros.
PARKER, CECILIA: M-G-M.
PARKER, JEAN: M-G-M.
PARRISH, GIGI: Republic.
PATERSON, PAT: 20th Century-Fox.
PATRICK, GAIL: Paramount.
PENDLETON, NAT: M-G-M.
PENNER, JOE: Paramount.
PICKFORD, MARY: United Artists.
PITTS, ZASU: Universal.
PONS, LILY: RKO-Radio.
POWELL, DICK: Warner Bros.
POWELL, ELEANOR: M-G-M.
POWELL, WILLIAM: M-G-M.
PRYOR, ROGER: Universal.
QUALEN, JOHN: 20th Century-Fox.
QUIGLEY, JUANITA: Universal.
QUILLAN, EDDIE: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
RAFT, GEORGE: Paramount.
RAINER, LUISE: M-G-M.
RALPH, JESSIE: RKO-Radio.
RAINS, CLAUDE: Universal.
RALSTON, ESTHER: Republic.
RAND, SALLY: Paramount.
RATOFF, GREGORY: RKO-Radio.
RAY, CHARLES: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
RAYMOND, GENE: RKO-Radio.
REED, PHILLIP: Warner Bros.
REGAN, PHIL: Warner Bros.
RHODES, ERIK: RKO-Radio.
RICE, FLORENCE: Columbia.
ROBBINS, BARBARA: RKO-Radio.
ROBERTI, LYDA: Paramount.
ROBERTSON, GUY: Republic.
ROBINSON, BILL: 20th Century-Fox.
ROBINSON, EDWARD G.: Warner Bros.
ROBSON, MAY: M-G-M.
ROGERS, CHARLES: RKO-Radio.
ROGERS, GINGER: RKO-Radio.
ROLAND, GILBERT: 20th Century-Fox.
ROMERO, CESAR: Paramount.
ROONEY, MICKEY: M-G-M.
ROSS, SHIRLEY: M-G-M.
ROULIEN, RAUL: 20th Century-Fox.
RUGGLES, CHARLES: Paramount.
RUSSELL, ROSALIND: M-G-M.
SABIN, CHARLES: Columbia.
SAVO, JIMMY: M-G-M.
SCHILDKRAUT, JOSEPH: Columbia.
SCHUBERT, MARINA: Paramount.
SCOTT, RANDOLPH: Paramount.
SEARLE, JACKIE: 20th Century-Fox.
SELLON, CHARLES: 20th Century-Fox.
SELWYN, RUTH: M-G-M.
SEWARD, BILLIE: Columbia.
SHANNON, PEGGY: Free lance. Write her at Universal.
SHAW, WINIFRED: Warner Bros.
SHEA, GLORIA: Columbia.
SHEARER, NORMA: M-G-M.
SHIELDS, FRANK: M-G-M.
SHIRLEY, ANNE: RKO-Radio.
SIDNEY, SYLVIA: Paramount.
SKIPWORTH, ALISON: Paramount.
SLEEPER, MARTHA: M-G-M.
SMITH, C. AUBREY: United Artists.
SMITH, QUEENIE: Paramount.
SOTHERN, ANN: Columbia.
SPARKS, NED: Warner Bros.
STANDING, SIR GUY: Paramount.
STANWYCK, BARBARA: RKO-Radio.
STARRETT, CHARLES: Warner Bros.
STELLING, WILLIAM: 20th Century-Fox.
STEN, ANNA: United Artists.
STEPHENS, HARVEY: M-G-M.
STEPHENSON, HENRY: M-G-M.
STEVENS, ONSLOW: Universal.
STONE, FRED: Paramount.
STONE, PAULA: Warner Bros.
STONE, LEWIS: M-G-M.
STUART, GLORIA: Universal.
SULLAVAN, MARGARET: Universal.
SUMMERVILLE, SLIM: Universal.
SWANSON, GLORIA: M-G-M.
SWARTHOUT, GLADYS: Paramount.
TALBOT, LYLE: Warner Bros.
TAYLOR, KENT: Paramount.
TAYLOR, ROBERT: M-G-M.
TEASDALE, VERREE: Warner Bros.
TEMPLE, SHIRLEY: 20th Century-Fox.
THOMAS, FRANKIE: RKO-Radio.
THOMAS, JAMESON: Republic.
TOBIN, GENEVIEVE: Warner Bros.
TODD, THELMA: M-G-M.
TOMLIN, PINKY: Universal.
TONE, FRANCHOT: M-G-M.
TORRENCE, DAVID: Free lance. Write him at M-G-M.
TRACY, LEE: Paramount.
TRACY, SPENCER: M-G-M.
TREE, DOROTHY: Warner Bros.
TREVOR, CLAIRE: 20th Century-Fox.
TURPIN, BEN: Free lance. Write him at Mascot.
TWELVETREES, HELEN: 20th Century-Fox.
VALLEE, RUDY: Warner Bros.
VELEZ, LUPE: M-G-M.
VENABLE, EVELYN: Paramount.
VINSON, HELEN: Free lance. Write her at Columbia.
WADSWORTH, HENRY: M-G-M.
WALBURN, RAYMOND: Columbia.
WALKER, JUNE: 20th Century-Fox.
WALKER, RAY: Free lance. Write him at 20th Century-Fox.
WALTHALL, H. B.: 20th Century-Fox.
WALTERS, POLLY: Universal.
WALTON, DOUGLAS: Samuel Goldwyn.
WARE, IRENE: Universal.
WATERS, ETHEL: Free lance. Write her Universal.
WAYNE, JOHN: Republic.
WEBB, CLIFTON: M-G-M.
WEIDLER, VIRGINIA: Paramount.
WEISSMULLER, JOHNNY: M-G-M.
WELLS, JACQUELINE: Free lance. Write her at Republic
WEST, MAE: Paramount.
WESTCOTT, GORDON: Warner Bros.
WESTLEY, HELEN: RKO-Radio.
WHEELER, BERT: RKO-Radio.
WHITE, ALICE: Free lance. Write her at Paramount.
WILCOXON, HENRY: Paramount.
WILLIAM, WARREN: Warner Bros.
WILLIAMS, CLARK: Universal.
WILLIAMS, HUGH: 20th Century-Fox.
WILSON, DOROTHY: Paramount.
WILSON, LOIS: Free lance. Write her at Universal.
WING, PAT: Warner Bros.
WING, TOBY: Paramount.
WINNINGER, CHARLES: 20th Century-Fox.
WITHERS, GRANT: Universal.
WITHERS, JANE: 20th Century-Fox.
WONG, ANNA MAY: Paramount.
WOODS, DONALD: Warner Bros.
WOOLSEY, BOB: RKO-Radio.
WRAY, FAY: Columbia.
WYATT, JANE: Universal.
WYNYARD, DIANA: M-G-M.
YOUNG, ELIZABETH: Universal.
YOUNG, LORETTA: M-G-M.
YOUNG, POLLY ANN: Free lance. Write her at 20th Century-Fox.
YOUNG, ROBERT: M-G-M.
YOUNG, ROLAND: United Artists.
YOUNG, TAMMANY: Free lance. Write him at Paramount.

Juanita Quigley gives herself a preview of Christmas morning! And judging by the eyes, this is just what she wants.

GREATEST MOUTH WASH VALUE IN AMERICA!

MIFFLIN
Antiseptic
MOUTH WASH

12 oz. SIZE 20c

4 oz. SIZE 10c

AT LEADING 5c and 10c CHAIN STORES

Tested and Approved 3954 by Good Housekeeping Bureau Conducted by Good Housekeeping Magazine

SORE, RHEUMATIC MUSCLES

Say goodbye to messy liniments and salves, that have to be smeared on every few hours to be effective. The new treatment for sore, aching muscles is Allcock's Porous Plaster, that stays on until pain is all gone. One Allcock's Plaster lasts days and days without further thought. The blood is gently drawn to the painful rheumatic area, and the muscles are massaged as you move. No rubbing. Nothing smelly or sticky. Allcock's is pleasant. Easy on, easy off when pain is gone. 5 million users testify that Allcock's is marvelous for backaches, arthritis, pains, chest colds. 25¢ at druggists, or write "Allcock's, Ossining, N. Y." ALLCOCK'S

ITCHING
TORTURE STOPPED in one minute!

For quick relief from the itching of pimples, blotches, eczema, rashes and other skin eruptions, apply Dr. Dennis' cooling, antiseptic, liquid D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION. Its gentle oils soothe the irritated and inflamed skin. Clear, greaseless and stainless—dries fast. Stops the most intense itching instantly. A 35c trial bottle, at drug stores, proves it—or money back.

D.D.D. Prescription

FRIEND SOLVED HEADACHES

"Try Famous All-Vegetable Laxative," She Said

Headaches were making her miserable. She felt tired, listless, too. Then she found that Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) really corrected her intestinal sluggishness. NR Tablets are a combination of laxative elements provided by nature in plants and vegetables. Try them tonight. Note that they give thorough cleansing action that leaves you refreshed and invigorated. This trial means so much to you and is so simple to make. NR's contain no phenol or mineral derivatives. Non-habit forming.
Only 25c—at all drug stores.

NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

FREE: Beautiful 5 Color—1935-1936 Calendar-Thermometer with the purchase of a 25c box of NR, or a 10c roll of Tums (For Acid Indigestion). At your druggist's.

Reviews—A Tour of Today's Talkies

"Thanks a Million" is a knockout musical, with Ann Dvorak, Dick Powell and Patsy Kelly.

(Continued from page 7)

resting or cutting capers, the Marxes were busily engaged in trimming everyone in the cast who was foolish enough to join in one of their bridge games. Ely himself wouldn't have had a ghost of a show. . . . Kitty Carlisle was born down in New Orleans, but spent most of her life in Europe. She was educated in Switzerland and Paris with a social career in mind. But social butterflying palled on the Carlisle girl, so she began looking around for some place to market her voice. She didn't have any hopes of marketing her looks. But it was the Carlisle legs that landed her in Florenz Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita." Summer theatre work followed and the next season she had an offer to display her vocal and histrionic ability in "Champagne, Sec." Next stop, Hollywood. . . . Allan Jones longed to sing, too. But working in coal mines doesn't give a fellow much opportunity. He worked four years in the Pennsylvania undergrounds, until he'd saved up enough money to begin a musical education. His work with shovel and pickax was a rest cure compared to the work he did the next couple of years on his voice.

★★★ Thanks a Million

(20th Century-Fox)

Combining a political satire with a first-rate musical may sound like a difficult assignment, but 20th Century-Fox has done it with more than pleasing results. It might well be added, of course, that Dick Powell, Fred Allen, Ann Dvorak, Patsy Kelly, The Yacht Club Boys and Paul Whiteman's Band should be credited with expert assistance. Fred Allen, it seems, is stranded with a band of entertainers, so he sells them to the campaign managers of the Commonwealth Party, whose candidate for governor, Raymond Walburn, is having difficulty getting voters to listen to his speeches. Fred's entertainment packs the house, and the right-thinking citizens go so wild over Dick Powell's singing that he finds himself replacing the regular candidate, who is a non-crooner. The opposition hires Paul Whiteman's Band and the battle is on. It's swell entertainment all the way through, with Fred Allen and the Yacht Club Boys stealing the honors. Allen's dead pan comedy registers as well on the screen as it does on the air, which means you'll be seeing more of him.

Preview Postscripts

That $100,000 Stradivarius of Rubinoff's provided plenty of entertainment for the cast on this picture. But not for Mr. Rubinoff. He was on the verge of nervous prostration until the picture was completed and he and the famous fiddle were en route to New York. Every day someone would get hold of the violin and hide it safely away, 'til in despair Mr. R. called the Metropolitan Insurance Co. (advt.) and had a man sent to stand guard over the instrument. All the members of the cast became interested in insurance before that rain sequence was completed. Shooting lasted for a week and a half, so that a special heating system had to be installed to safeguard the health of the players. Pipes strung across the set cause those perfect rainfalls. A faucet controls the type of moisture. "Mist," "light shower" or "deluge" can be turned on at a moment's notice. A wind-machine is brought in for tornado effects. . . . Patsy Kelly was given a year to live three years ago. That was following the tragic accident in which Jean Malin was killed and she was temporarily paralyzed. The two dancers had appeared on a program at the "Ship Cafe" on a Santa Monica pier. Their car backed through a rail as they were leaving and was pitched twenty feet into the ocean. Patsy was finally extricated from the car in time, but her dancing days were supposed to be over. Now she practises eight hours a day and thinks nothing of it. Except the other day, when she and Ann Dvorak met at eight o'clock at the studio to practise their routine. They had worked continuously until one o'clock and mentioned it to Mr. Darryl Zanuck, who happened to be passing by. "That's fine," said Mr. Zanuck. "At that rate you should be pretty good by four or five and we can begin shooting."

★★★ Peter Ibbetson

(Paramount)

Produced with exceptional good taste and charm, "Peter Ibbetson" is a serene and beautiful example of the technical excellence which a motion picture can attain. Those very qualities may detract from its appeal to a number of audiences, for while it has a number of virtues, it lacks excitement. You may know the story. Briefly, it tells of the love of a boy and a girl, separated in childhood and reunited years later just long enough to discover that their devotion to each other is all that each has lived for. After their meeting they never see each other again, for the boy is serving a life term in prison, but their love brings them together nightly in their dreams until death carries them away together. The idyllic romance is ably portrayed by Ann Harding and Gary Cooper, although both seem somewhat stolid and matter-of-fact about the whole affair. One can hardly blame them, at that, for Fate really hasn't given them much to be gay about. John Halliday is splendid in a supporting role, and the lovers as children are superbly played by Dickie Moore and Virginia Weidler.

Gary Cooper and Ann Harding in the thrilling drama, "Peter Ibbetson."

May Robson, Frankie Darro, Charlotte Henry, William Benedict, Billy Burrud and Henry Armetta represent the cast of "Three Kids and a Queen."

Preview Postscripts

This classic story has been reproduced many times on the stage and for opera, but leave it to the movies to get the right effects right down to the last whisker. Expense means nothing compared to authenticity. The mild, unobstrusive lady sitting on the sets for this picture every day drew a pretty penny for being so authentic. Mme. Hilda Grenier is the name and her job means much more than just sitting in camp chairs. She has to pass on the design of every tapestry hung on the ancestral walls, every stitch of clothing worn by the players, every bit of dialogue, etc., to determine whether it would be appropriate to that time in history. Would a gentleman of 1830 smoke a clay pipe or paper cigar; would the duke carve a saddle of mutton or boiled peacocks; what cusswords, if any, would the gentlemen of that era be fond of? "Gadzooks" she insists went out before Washington and "blooming" didn't come in before Kipling. Twenty men toiled one solid month building an exact replica of the Pentonville gaol near London for Mr. Cooper to languish in. In 1840 it was called the "model prison," being equipped with all the latest in whipping-posts, stocks, ball-and-chains and other stimuli to good behavior. Queen Victoria's comment after visiting it was that it was "quite humanitarian"—underlining the quite. . . . Ann Harding had a surprise birthday party while on this set. Gary Cooper and Director Hathaway ordered an elaborate cake with a reasonable amount of candles, gathered all the crew into Miss Harding's dressing room, and everyone had a good time. Everyone but Mr. Hathaway. One of the still photographers had left a few bulbs in a chair. Mr. H., his hands full of cake, sat down in this particular chair. Followed a tremendous pop, crackle and several words which Mme. Grenier would not have found strictly authentic. Mr. Hathaway, ever since the days of directing cowboys and redskins, has been noted for his virile taste in pictures. The sight of the husky director, frayed cigar in mouth, shapeless hat on the back of his head and in shirt-sleeves, directing this ethereal play was worth a ticket before the picture was anywhere near completed. Nothing, believes Hathaway, is more stale than yesterday's thrill, so he believes the public is ready to appreciate the spiritual values in this type of play. . . . Mme. Namara has long been associated with the Metropolitan Opera and the Paris Opera Comique. In spite of that fancy name, Mme. is an American, born in Cleveland, Ohio. She was born to the MacNamara's and christened Margaret. The youngest prima donna to make her début in Italy, is her proudest title.

"Frisco Kid," a fast-moving Barbary Coast tale, with Jimmy Cagney and Margaret Lindsay.

★★★ Frisco Kid

(Warners)

If you like plenty of adventure in your plots, rough and ready characters and a goodly dash of heart-interest, you'll go for this celluloider in a big way. All those brawny men with hearts of gold inclined us to feel the picture bordered on the melodramatic, and the romance savored too much of sentimentality. But with San Francisco in the days of the Barbary Coast as a setting, we are willing to overlook all. If there's any locale more conducive to thrills than the old wharves, boats and dives along a waterfront, we've yet to see it. Anything can loom out of those murky darknesses, and in this story all kinds of baddies are abroad. The story starts off with a bang from the instant James Cagney set foot inside a Coast saloon. He scorns wine, women and singing, so one meanie thinks such virtue should be rewarded. He slugs our hero and relieves him of all the gold he's dug in them thar hills. There follows a merry round of shanghai-ing, battling and a general free-for-all, climaxed by the appearance of the Vigilantes. James Cagney is good in his role, Donald Woods is excellent as the young and radical crusader and Margaret Lindsay looks appealingly pretty in the gay gowns of that era.

Preview Postscripts

Not only was this picture exciting as to plot, but everyone on the set claimed it was the most adventurous one they'd ever been on. Something was always happening to keep up the excitement. All those waterfront scenes were taken right on a set at the Warner Brothers Burbank studio. There's a huge tank out there which was used for this purpose. That tank has been used for every purpose under the sun by the studio—even to using it for a swimming pool, and at one time there was a family of swans floating regally around on it. That grand fire scene in the picture actually happened on the set. About fifteen buildings were set on fire for the effect. The studio fire department was called out to stand guard, as well as the local fire departments in Burbank and San Fernando. . . . James Cagney and the other men in the picture, all claimed that this film did more for them than a physical culture class would have done. They could feel the muscles sprouting more every day. For all those fights that take place actually did happen. Between every scene there would be wild grappling and throwing around of various members of the set. Black eyes, bruises and limps were a sign you'd been in Frisco Kid."

★★★ Show Them No Mercy

(20th Century-Fox)

"Snatched" was the former title of this picture and is the theme. It is the grim tale of a flawlessly executed kidnapping by four gangsters; Cesar Romero, Bruce Cabot, Edward Brophy and Warren Hymer. The story is of intense interest, made doubly so by the realization that the ruthless methods employed are true to life. Justice, of course, wins, but there are many moments of stark terror before the gang gets wiped out. How the federal men lay their plans and gradually close in the net on the suspects is an engrossing part of the picture. The cast, in every case, is excellently chosen. Cesar Romero, as the "brains" of the gang, shows that he has something more than teeth in his head, while Bruce Cabot displays talents heretofore unsuspected as the most fiendish of the crooks. Edward Norris, a newcomer, and Rochelle Hudson provide the romantic interest with plenty of excitement when they are trapped in the kidnapper's lair with their child and dog. The wire-haired terrier, incidentally, practically steals the picture from the competent cast. He provides the only enlivening moments in a "Show Them No Mercy," featuring Cesar Romero, Edward Norris and Rochelle Hudson.

Don't neglect your CHILD'S COLD

Don't let chest colds or croupy coughs go untreated. Rub Children's Musterole on child's throat and chest at once. This milder form of regular Musterole penetrates, warms, and stimulates local circulation. Floods the bronchial tubes with its soothing, relieving vapors. Musterole brings relief naturally because it's a "counter-irritant" —NOT just a salve. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Three kinds: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong, 40¢ each.

CHILDREN'S
MUSTEROLE
BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
MILD

Brand New NOW ONLY $17.95 & UP
TYPEWRITER
PORTABLES
10¢ a Day • Easy Terms
Sensational Low Prices and easy terms on limited supply only. All brand new, up-to-date —4 row keyboard. Fully Guaranteed.
SEND NO MONEY—10 Day Trial
Send for special new literature and money-saving, easy pay plan with 10 day trial offer. Also amazing bargains in standard size, rebuilt office models on FREE trial offer.
International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 161, Chicago

FREE HOSIERY OFFER
Send $2.00 for a box of 3 prs. of guaranteed genuine ringless, full-fashioned, fine gauge silk hosiery in sheer and service weights. Latest fall and winter shades. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Every purchaser of FOURPLUS hosiery has an opportunity of getting 9 PAIRS FREE of these same exquisite stockings without extra cost. Write us now about this free hosiery offer. Color card sent on request.
FOURPLUS HOSIERY MILLS
Dept. M1, 1451 Broadway, N. Y., N. Y.

BUNIONS Reduced Quickly
Pain Stops At Once! Write for
Free Sample of Fairyfoot Treatment.
No obligation. Dept. 2711 Fairyfoot Company
1223 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

. . . BETWEEN YOU AND ME is the fans' forum. Address your letters to this department, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

WANT A U.S. GOVERNMENT JOB?
START
$1260 to $2100 Year
Men-Women Get ready immediately.
Common education usually sufficient.
Mail Coupon today sure.
COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. D320, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush to me without charge (1) 32 page book with list of many U. S. Government Big Pay Jobs. (2) Tell me how to get one of these jobs.
Name..................................
Address..................................

story fraught with the horror of what men will do when obsessed with greed.

Preview Postscripts

The studio arsenal department saw heavy duty during the filming of this play. A member from the department has to be on hand whenever a gun is carried and has to give plenty of instruction to the player before he can shoot it. Lew Witte, head of the arsenal department, personally took charge of Rochelle Hudson. It took him a couple weeks to teach her how to fire that machine gun which she handles so nonchalantly in the picture. Rochelle always closed her eyes tight before firing which had the habit of making the machine gun look rather silly. Miss Hudson is a local Oklahoman but was educated in Hollywood. Though she was born in Will Rogers' home state and brought up in his city and spent a year on the Fox lot, where Will was under contract, Rochelle didn't meet her favorite actor until she played with him in a picture. Her hobby is making hooked rugs. She already has thirty-five to her credit and a string of blue ribbons won at exhibits. . . . The marital status of Bruce Cabot and Adrienne Ames at present is rather unpredictable. They have announced a divorce, but they are seen together at night-clubs and premières. . . . Warren Hymer had great difficulty getting to work of a morning. Before he could make the set, it was necessary to wade through an army of process servers. Warren, anyone in Hollywood will tell you, is just too generous for his own good. . . . Cesar Romero is one of Hollywood's busiest gentlemen, come the evening. He has the telephone numbers of Marlene Dietrich, Claire Trevor, Betty Furness, Virginia Bruce and practically every blonde actress in town, which is practically every actress. . . . The subject of kidnapping as a screen plot has been carefully and longingly considered by every studio in town. But it was too delicate a subject to present without excellent script work and production to bolster it. Kubec Glasmon is the lad who wrote the original story and screen play for this one.

★★★ Metropolitan

(20th Century-Fox)

As a Tibbett song-fest "Metropolitan" is one of the most satisfying pictures of the year. As a story it's the old backstage musical comedy plot done with opera. In spite of the fact that it contains several highly amusing sequences, one has the feeling that it's all been done before. However, the magic voice of Tibbett, given excellent recording for the first time on the screen, more than makes up for any deficiency in the story department.

Lawrence Tibbett and Alice Brady in "Metropolitan," the delight of music lovers.

George Raft is at his best in "She Couldn't Take It," with Joan Bennett and Billie Burke.

Among the songs you'll hear are "De Glory Road," "On the Road to Mandalay" and the Toreador Song from "Carmen." Mr. Tibbett also sings the prologue from "Pagliacci," which marks a definite milestone in cinema history. To our knowledge this is absolutely the first time a singer has passed up the opportunity to sing the "Laugh, Clown" aria, and it will probably come as a distinct shock to a few movie-goers to learn that there is music other than "Ridi, Pagliacci," in that opera. Beautiful Virginia Bruce is the love interest, and others in the cast are Alice Brady, Cesar Romero, Luis Alberni and George Marion, Sr.

Preview Postscripts

Lawrence Tibbett is a Los Angeles boy who made good in record time. Not so long ago he graduated from a high school in this city and set out to make his mark in the world. He's made it so fast that even Mr. Tibbett is slightly surprised. The preview crowd jammed into the theatre for this one, since word had got about that it was a Tibbett picture and half the population in town felt a personal interest in the picture's hero. Sound recording has been perfected to such a remarkable extent since his first picture was made that Mr. Tibbett seems to have a rosy future ahead of him in the movies if he's interested. . . . Virginia Bruce, who's known as one of the loveliest women in the movie colony, came here from Fargo, North Dakota, via New York City and Ziegfeld's Follies. Instead of practising their singing as they should have been doing on the set, Miss Bruce and Lawrence Tibbett sneaked off every available moment to practise their golf strokes on a practise putting course they'd rigged up behind a set. Virginia's mother, Mrs. Margaret Briggs, used to be state champion golfer back in Dakota. In fact, she was champion for three years at a stretch. Virginia was one of the Mrs. Jack Gilberts until a year ago when she obtained a divorce from Mr. G. She has one daughter. . . . George Marion, Sr., is one of the old guard. He's been on the stage for years and in pictures during the silent days and from the beginning of the talkie era. His son, George Marion, Jr., is theatre-minded, too. But he'd rather write than act for it. The script for this play was written by him.

★★★ She Couldn't Take It

(Columbia)

Joan Bennett is the girl who couldn't stand the gaff. George Raft is the one who finally makes her take it and like it. Besides having something new in romantic combinations, this picture has a brand new plot. Through various peculiar circumstances, Mr. Raft finds himself at the head of a large family. And wotta family! Billie Burke is the mother of the outfit. She's one of those females who thinks anything common should be ignored —including sense. Her daughter, Joan Bennett, thinks the same thing. Her son, James Blakely, doesn't think at all. Mr. Raft, formerly of the rum-running profession, is up against the toughest proposition of his career. You'll enjoy every minute of his agony and find the antics of everyone in the cast highly entertaining. It's a good story, a good cast and a swell performance on the part of Mr. Raft.

Preview Postscripts

"Meet the years with a twinkle in your eye, without worry on your heart—and keep busy!" So advises Miss Billie Burke, who has remained one of the shining lights of the stage and screen for lo, these many years. She was born to circus parents in Washington, D. C. Her father was Billy Burke, star of Barnum and Bailey's, and the most famous clown of his day. Miss Burke was christened "Ethelburt," but circus people don't have much time to waste so she was soon being called Billie. Her first stage success was in London. Twenty years ago she was a movie star in "Jerry" for Thomas Ince. But she didn't remain long in Hollywood, for at that time Flo Ziegfeld was opening the new Ziegfeld Roof, and Billie decided that it would be wise to return and keep an eye on him with all the beauteous chorus gals around. They were married and after Patricia arrived, Miss Burke was content to be just Mrs. Flo Ziegfeld for nineteen years. . . . Joan is the baby of the Bennetts. She spent her childhood and most of the time up to twenty years of age admiring her brilliant parents and dazzling sisters. An inferiority complex that only an elephant could accommodate was the result. Her first successful notice after a Broadway bit changed her life. Now Joan's stepping out way ahead of the whole family. She's Mrs. Gene Markey in private life and the mother of two daughters. . . . James Blakely had a difficult problem to solve when he came to Hollywood. His background was against him. Jimmy's listed in the Blue Book, he's heir to a neat fortune and one of the palsy-walsys of Barbara Hutton, to whom he was engaged at one time. But the young man has lived it all down, and is on his way up as a promising actor.

★★★ Annie Oakley

(RKO-Radio)

For good old-time mellerdrama, filled

Preston Foster and Barbara Stanwyck in the colorful historical drama "Annie Oakley."

with color and excitement, you can't go wrong on "Annie Oakley." Directed by George Stevens, the young man who filled "Alice Adams" with so many nice touches, it proves that this gentleman is headed for big things in pictureland. Besides, it has Sitting Bull, the Chief who sat in on Custer's Last Stand; Buffalo Bill Cody, whose flowing locks were the envy of gals the whole country over, and Annie Oakley, the shootin'est female either side of the Rockies. 'Taint in us to exaggerate, but that gal ("the acme of feminine beauty and charm," according to Buffalo Bill hisself) could shoot a cigarette out'n a man's mouth at fifty paces. That shore is some shootin', eh, pardner? Barbara Stanwyck is the lady who's so fancy with the firearms. It's the best Stanwyck performance in some time, and she has swell support from Preston Foster, who plays a hard-shootin', love-makin' fool, Moroni Olsen as Buffalo Bill, Andy Clyde as a Scotch hotel keeper and Chief Thunder Bird, whose Sitting Bull is one of the picture's most amusing characters.

★★★ The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo

(20th Century-Fox)

It is unfortunate that a Ronald Colman picture should fall below par, but the plot thread of this one is so thin that it sags in the middle under the weight of a particularly robust production. Not even the undeniable charm of the star can jolt the picture out of a persistent lethargy. However, several comedy scenes lend a helping hand and the episodes at Monte Carlo are diverting. Colman, of course, is the man who breaks the bank, divides the money among his exiled Russian friends, and falls desperately in love with Joan Bennett who, unknown to him, is engaged by the board of directors at Monte Carlo to lure him and his francs back to the gambling tables. Colin Clive is her brother. Nigel Bruce is slyly amusing as Colman's Man Friday.

Don't take it too hard that this is not one of Colman's best. He is as engaging as ever and Miss Bennett is lovely to gaze upon. The picture has sprightly comings and goings in between the dull periods and manages to maintain a balance more dignified than dramatic.

Preview Postscripts

One of the most elaborate and costly sets ever constructed for an indoor scene was built for this flicker. It was an exact replica of the famous gambling rooms at Monte Carlo. The tables were constructed from the measurements of the original ones, and curtains, furniture, crystal chandeliers, etc., all were patterned as nearly as possible after those in the famous rooms which have seen so much hilarity in Europe. And hilarity reigned on this set, too. Between every scene there was a mad rush for the gambling tables, chips were divided up and the game was underway until the director had practically to bribe them away. More money was spent than ever earned by the players on that set. The "dress extras" had a good many days' work for this set, too. Extras are rated according to their wardrobes. Once a year every extra in Hollywood joins in the dress-parade, held at a major studio. Before a critical board of judges, these girls and women walk, and are classified according to the clothes which they can sport. The "dress extras" are the highest class—and generally have a wardrobe that many a star would envy. Many of them are women, wealthy at one time, who have lost everything but their once gorgeous clothes, and now use them as a means of livelihood. $15 a day is the standard salary . . . Gene Markey left for England while this picture was being filmed, so Joan Bennett couldn't go along with him. But he called her faithfully every other day. When he called after midnight in England he could save somewhere in the neighborhood of fifty dollars. But that meant Joan had to receive the call at four o'clock here. She was always at the studio at this time and would have to hold up the entire cast for awhile until she finished talking to her husband. Mr. Markey saved money by phoning at that time, but Fox lost some thousands.

Hugh Herbert and Helen Broderick make a grand comedy team in "To Beat the Band."

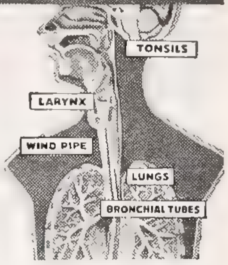
Arline Judge and Carl Brisson do excellent work in the musical, "Ship Cafe."

★★★ Rendezvous

(M-G-M)

As you may have noted by now, the war pictures are advancing on us. It may or may not be significant that in the past six or eight months there have been at least four or five films devoted to the romantic side of war while ignoring its horrors. It seems rather unfortunate, then, that a picture so lively and full of good humor as "Rendezvous" has to fall into that class. On the other hand, anyone immune from its mild propaganda will enjoy the smart portrayals of William Powell and Rosalind Russell, who turn out to be one of the screen's most attractive romantic teams. The rendezvous referred to in the title is no lovers' meeting place—it's a spot in the Atlantic where American troop ships are met by British destroyers for protection against German U-Boats. Bill Powell is a code expert at Washington and most of the picture con-

COUGH STOPPED quicker by "Moist-Throat" Method



DID you know that when you catch cold the thousands of tiny moisture glands in your throat and windpipe dry or clog? Thick phlegm irritates your throat, making you cough.

It is necessary to stimulate those glands to pour out their natural moisture. Pertussin does this. It "unclogs" the glands—loosens phlegm—soothes your cough away.

Over 1,000,000 doctors' prescriptions for Pertussin were filled in one year, according to Prescription Ingredient Survey issued by American Pharmaceutical Assn.

• • •

..."Pertussin stopped Jackie's bad cough next day!" writes Mrs. P. Fernandez, Providence, R. I. Get a bottle.

PERTUSSIN

"MOIST-THROAT" METHOD OF

COUGH RELIEF

McCORMICK'S IRON GLUE
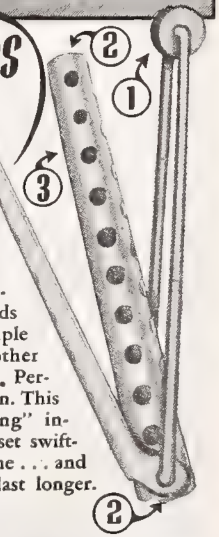
MENDS MOST ANYTHING
MENDS TOYS
Holds tight. Mends most anything. New larger bottle.
10¢

At Ten Cent Stores, Drug and Hardware Stores

"AIR-CONDITIONED" FOR RAPID DRYING AND BETTER CURLS

that's why HOLLYWOOD STARS favor this CURLER



1. Patented end lock is a beveled disc . . . not a ball. Locks curler without stopping air-circulation. 2. Ends of curler never close. Ample air flow is assured. No other curler has these features. 3. Perforations increase ventilation. This complete "air-conditioning" insures rapid drying. Curls set swiftly. Hair dress takes less time . . . and curls are softer, lovelier, last longer.

JANE HAMILTON
RKO player

HOLLYWOOD Rapid Dry CURLER

5¢ AT 5¢ AND 10¢ STORES AND NOTION COUNTERS

Rita Cansino and the popular child star, Jane Withers, in "Paddy O'Day."

cerns his efforts to locate spies who are intercepting messages. The attractive Russell is a scatter-brained daughter of the Assistant Secretary of War who follows our William about until he marries her. An excellent supporting cast is headed by Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes and Lionel Atwill.

★★ Transatlantic Tunnel

(GB)

If you like to conjecture about what will go on in the world ten years or so hence, this opus is just your dish. For us, though, we prefer just to let nature take its course! We suspect a tidy bit of propaganda in this one. Yuh see, Richard Dix as McAllen, a famous engineer who has built a tunnel under the English channel, wants to do the same thing across the Atlantic. He's an idealist and dreams that this will cement the two English speaking countries against all further wars, the yellow peril and hay fever. However, a scheming bunch of capitalists finance the thing and generally gum up McAllen's plans. The picture drags on for reels with Richard, Leslie Banks, Madge Evans, Helen Vinson and C. Aubrey Smith suffering more than you do. Madge, as Richard's wife whom he neglects for his tunnel, goes blind when secretly working as a nurse in the tunnel. Then they lose their only son in the ole debbil tunnel, too, so—by the time you leave the theater you feel as if you had crawled through the tunnel from London to New York on your hands and knees! One kind word, the mechanical contrivances of the advanced age are most intriguing.

★★★ Ship Cafe

(Paramount)

After several fairly unsuccessful ventures in Hollywood, Carl Brisson emerges in a picture which can be classed as good entertainment for anyone in the mood for the lighter type of screenfare. Mr. Brisson, who is Denmark's gift to Southern California, lends his pleasant baritone to several pleasant ballads, and also proves himself capable in the acting department. The picture's sparkle, however, is due mainly to the efforts of Arline Judge, the feminine lead, and to Bill Frawley and Inez Courtney, playing one of those comedy love teams of which the screen is so fond. The script writers have seen fit to hand Arline a goodly portion of wisecracks which she takes care of in expert fashion. A song and dance number called "I Won't Take No For An Answer," perpetrated by Frawley and Courtney, is the picture's tops for comedy, although a comic ditty entitled "My Home Town," sung by Eddie Davis of the New York night clubs, is a close second. Most of the action, as you may gather from the title, takes place aboard an ex-ship which has been converted into a night club.

Preview Postscripts

Carl Brisson is the Danish song-and-dance man who drove the ladies in several European countries simply cuh-razy. He hasn't proved such a heart-throbber to the American gals yet, but unimportant pictures have something to do with that. All Carl's time hasn't been spent being a ladies' man, though. He held the middle-weight championship of Europe for three years. While on this picture, he added another accomplishment to his list with a forty-foot dive from a steamer down at San Pedro. Doubles were scorned by him, a fact which held this production up for several expensive days. For in that shovel fight with Harry Woods, Mr. Brisson got the bad end of it and was laid up with a badly cut arm. His one means of protection is a great shaggy shepherd dog which has been trained by its master to leap on anything which looks like a hold-up man. "Shep" evidently thought every actor, director and cameraman looked like that on this set, for on the first working day he made a flying tackle at anyone who took a step towards Carl. The second day they wouldn't let him on the lot. . . . Arline Judge was presented with a gold loving cup by the newspapermen of Los Angeles while making this picture. It was awarded to the "most regular gal in pictures." From the gentlemen of the press that's tops in flattery. Between her career, taking care of husband Wesley Ruggles, and their three-year-old son, Arline manages to find time to think up Hollywood's most impractical practical jokes. Inez Courtney celebrated the picture's completion with wedding bells. The Courtney husband is Luigi Filiasi, a Los Angeles wine merchant.

★★ To Beat the Band

(RKO-Radio)

One-sentence review: Excellent cast wasted on second-rate material. With people like Hugh Herbert, Fred Keating, Helen Broderick and Eric Blore around, it seems a pity more time and thought were not spent on a vehicle for them to climb aboard. The piece has its moments of hilarity, naturally, for a good comic can always make most anything seem at least fairly funny, but people are forced to strain too much for their laughs. The plot concerns the plight of Hugh Herbert, who receives word that an aunt has left him $59,000,000 provided he marries a widow within three days. If he fails to pick the wife of some departed soul within that time the entire fortune goes to an orchestra leader, a condition which will cause any audience to pray for a widow in a hurry. Things are complicated by the fact that Hugh is in love with a cutie (Phyllis Brooks) whose only visible fault is that she's no widow. His efforts to confer that title on her within the allotted time account for most of the comedy the picture has to offer. Helen Broderick who gives unfunny lines a bounce they never possessed, will some day get some material she can go to town on.

Colonial Club

Edward Everett Horton's latest starring vehicle, "His Night Out," with Irene Hervey.

"Remember Last Night," an exciting murder mystery, with Sally Eilers, Constance Cummings and Robert Young.

Preview Postscripts

Fred Keating's reputation of being a magician gained him entrance into the film studios. But he had a clause inserted in his contract which prohibits him ever doing magic on the screen. The reason being that Mr. Keating considered himself a better actor than magician. But Fred couldn't resist being up to his old tricks long, and on this picture he spotted an opportunity to show off a good card trick, and prevailed on the studio to ignore that clause. Fred was without a stand-in for a couple days on this set. Charles Darwin, who has that job, flew to Yuma with the stand-in of Kay Francis, Miss Mary Ardell. They were married, then flew back to resume their double lives . . . Hugh Herbert had a unique dual role in this flicker. He played a female impersonator, as well as playing Mr. H. Hugh enjoyed it immensely, but the wardrobe department didn't. They claimed he was more temperamental about fittings than any female star they'd had to work with. The versatile Mr. Herbert was co-author of the first "talkie" ever produced in Hollywood. With Murray Roth he collaborated on "Lights of New York." It wasn't much of a talkie, but it was the first one. . . . Helen Broderick has literally leaped into the cinema limelight. She's been well known on Broadway for years, but the movies couldn't see her. Nor she them. But now they've both changed their minds and everybody's happy. Her husband has been in every stage play in which she's appeared for twenty-five years. Their son, aged twenty-two, is following in his parents' footsteps, too . . . Eric Blore has cost the studio more than he's worth long since. It is impossible for Mr. Blore to appear on a set without muzzling everyone else on it or shooting the scenes over and over again. He's that funny. But when those giggles of the cast, director and cameraman are recorded on the expensive sound recordings, the studio doesn't think it's such a good joke.

★★ Paddy O'Day
(20th Century-Fox)

We're short on adjectives when it comes to Miss Jane Withers. Suffice it to say that she gives her usual top-notch performance. As Paddy O'Day, the small Irish immigrant, she'll get right under your vest. This story itself is weak. There's a lack of continuity in the plot, while the song and dance revues become monotonous. But if you like to give your emotions a daily dozen, you'll enjoy this one. You can have not a few good laughs and let the tears fall where they may. That fair-haired lad of the fillums, Pinky Tomlin, lends his talents to this picture. His acting is mediocre, but when it comes to singing and strumming the old guitar, Pinky rates. One of the song-hits has been composed by him, too. George Givot brings down the house with his Greek impersonation. In order to make good in the "U.S.H." he persuades Pinky, a stuffed-bird enthusiast, to stake him for a night-club. Rita Cansino is attractive as the star of the club and the light of Pinky's life. By the time you've caught the street-car this story will be forgotten, but "Keep That Twinkle In Your Eye," which Miss Withers sings in Irish brogue, will ring through your head for days.

★★ I Found Stella Parrish
(First National)

Built on a basically sound structure, and boasting a cast headed by Kay Francis, Ian Hunter, Paul Lukas and Sybil Jason, "I Found Stella Parrish" somehow fails to realize all its possibilities. This is due, perhaps, to the slow pace of the first half of its unreeling, for after that point one finds all that can be desired in the way of drama and action. Briefly, it's a story of an innocent accomplice in a murder, who, after her parole, changes her name and eventually becomes a stage success in London. When her past confronts her once more she disappears in order to protect her child's name. A crack London reporter follows her and finally gets the story which headlines the girl into notoriety. Embittered by it all, she capitalizes on her unsavory notices by personal appearances which finally land her in burlesque. Do you think she pulls herself back once more into the glow of respectable limelight? Guess. It's a fair drama which could have been better, although there can be no complaints about the excellent acting of lovely Miss Francis and Mr. Hunter or the capable support of little Miss Jason and Mr. Lukas.

"Personal Maid's Secret," featuring Ruth Donnelly, Warren Hull and Margaret Lindsay.

There are lots of laughs in "It's in the Air." Ted Healy and Jack Benny head the cast.

Preview Postscripts

The Warner Brothers' brand new sound apparatus was initiated for this picture. It's an elaborate contraption with all the very latest fixings. The gala initiation took place out on Set 17, the largest set on the lot. Director Mervyn LeRoy broke a perfectly good bottle of champagne over the sound recorder and Sybil Jason gave a speech in honor of the occasion. Miss Jason is Warner's five-year-old English import. She's seen a lot of the world in her lifetime. Born in Capetown, Africa, Sybil was brought to London at the age of three. She was "spotted" by a film talent sleuth and rushed Hollywoodward. Her uncle brought Sybil to America, because Mr. and Mrs. Jason have a business in Capetown and thought their daughter would be coming right back, anyhow. But now they're selling out and joining their famous daughter in California. The thrill of her five years came when Director LeRoy presented her with a small chair, just like his own set-chair, and with her name printed in big letters across the back . . . This is Kay Francis' first picture since that last European jaunt. It was a reunion for Kay and Paul Lukas, as they hadn't played together since "Vice Squad" four years ago . . . Mr. Lukas is one of Hollywood's most air-minded citizens. He has his own plane and flits around the country in his spare moments. During the war he was a flyer in the Hungarian air corps. Says he is one man who didn't risk his life for his country, though. He did his duty but never took a chance, having doped it out that he was more valuable to his country alive than dead . . . Ian Hunter and Sybil Jason had to come to Hollywood to get acquainted, though they're both from darkest Africa. Since those days, Mr. Hunter has been to England, too, where he was a success on the London stage. The Hunters and their two sons live down at Malibu Beach, moviedom's fashionable beach hang-out.

★★ Three Kids and a Queen
(Universal)

Based partly on the story of Ella Wendel, the wealthy New York recluse, who refused to sell a Fifth Avenue vacant lot worth over a million dollars because it afforded her dog a playground, "Three Kids and a Queen" is a first-rate vehicle for May Robson, who plays vicious old ladies and kind old ladies with equal conviction. As Mary Jane Baxter, she finds that her dog and her millions are her only friends until, jolted out of her carriage by a pair of runaway horses, she's picked up by three kids from the wrong

DO YOU REALLY KNOW YOURSELF?

Did you know that the secret of your real character is written in the stars? It is! Each birth sign, which is an astrological division of the year corresponding roughly to the calendar months, indicates specific characteristics for the people born in that sign—indicating their vocational bents, their temperamental bents in love and in life.

Also each planet in the heavens exerts its influence on each of you. The changing position of the planets determines the changing influence upon you, day by day and year by year, according to your birth sign. Famous astrologers have combined in this new magazine, YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE, to reveal to you the effect of the planets upon your birth sign for the month of December, in general and day-by-day.

Other revelations in this new magazine will show you how to use astrology in your daily life, as a guide and staff of self-reliance.

Begin a new life today! Learn what December holds for you, and what this very day holds, by getting the December issue of

Your daily HOROSCOPE

On Sale Everywhere
Ten Cents

part of town. Since Miss Robson is unconscious, the kids bring her to the home of Henry Armetta, their adopted father. After spending a week or two recuperating, she comes to like her new friends so well she decides to stay. In the meantime a scheming nephew has obtained an order committing her to an asylum. Then, to add to the complications, the good old G-men go hunting for her on the supposition that she's been kidnapped. The whole thing is a feast for the Robson fans, and it's good entertainment for anyone looking for a pleasant evening.

Preview Postscripts

May Robson is the screen's Grand Old Lady and only great-grandmother. In spite of these imposing titles she's just known as "Muzzy" to those in the moving picture industry. Miss Robson's a native Australian, daughter of Captain Henry Robison of the Royal Navy, which accounts for her wide traveling as a young girl. Most of her education took place in Paris, Brussels and London. Miss Robson married E. H. Gore, who died a few years later. Her son, E. H. Gore, Jr., now handles all her business affairs. It is his son and daughter-in-law who made her famous as the only great-grandmother on the American stage or screen, by presenting her with May Robson Gore. Next to this episode "Muzzy" is proudest of the fact that she's covered more than 500,000 miles in America and that she hasn't missed playing in any town in this country or Canada which has a theatre. Her simple philosophy is "You're as young as you feel." . . . School was held regularly on this set for Frankie Darro, William Benedict and Billy Burrud. Which proves that movies aren't the snap they're cracked up to be for the younger generation. Frankie Darro's been in the industry since he was five, but has been a trouper since the age of two, when he appeared with his parents on the stage in an acrobatic number. . . . This is Billie Burrud's first chance to grin into a camera. He says his "pan" must be good for something, after all, since it landed him this first acting job and a contract to boot. . . . William Benedict is on the way towards making several thousand from a five-cent investment. He came to Hollywood with his two sisters who had jobs promised them here. William decided he'd get a job, too, and the movies looked as good as anything. So from a corner drugstore he phoned Casting Director James Ryan. Mr. Ryan's secretaries were out to lunch; he answered the call and was overcome by Bill's sales talk to the extent of granting an interview. It took the young Oklahoman just five minutes to appear at the studio and just ten minutes to get a role as office boy in "$10 Raise." For eight years he'd been playing that role in real life, which might account for the smash hit he made of it in reel life. . . . Henry Armetta arrived in these United States as a stowaway from Italy. He was promptly extended the courtesies of the Boston jail for his first night and was scheduled to set sail the next morning. But an Italian barber in town heard of his embarrassing predicament, bailed him out and gave the thirteen-year-old Henry a job swishing lather for him. Henry's next step up in the New World was joining the Lambs Club—as assistant barber. Raymond Hitchcock met him here, gave him a role in "Yankee Counsel" and soon Mr. Armetta gravitated to Hollywood.

Be sure to tune in on Lionel Barrymore's Christmas Carol Broadcast, 5 p.m. E.S.T., Xmas Day, over the CBS networks.

★ Personal Maid's Secret
(Warners)

Too much story bogs down what might have been an entertaining light comedy, and the result is not a particularly happy one. It's a story of a servant (Ruth Donnelly) who has given her all to Park Avenue. In her earlier days, it seems, there was a son of a wealthy employer who didn't do right by her. The young villain goes off to the war and his death, leaving her with a daughter which is promptly taken over by the chap's parents. After years on Park Avenue, Ruth takes a job with a young insurance man and his wife, and her knowledge of the social world steers the young couple into wealth and prominence. One night her own daughter is a dinner guest. The daughter is under the spell of an insincere young man who means her no good. Ruth, having been around, senses the daughter's danger and there follows the usual scene where the hard-working mother reveals her identity. The picture, however, doesn't measure up to Ruth Donnelly's first-rate performance. Others in the cast are Anita Louise, Warren Hull, Margaret Lindsay and Arthur Treacher.

Preview Postscripts

Two of the most attractive members of Hollywood's younger set were corralled for this one—blonde Anita Louise and brunette Margaret Lindsay. Anita's already a "veteran," though she's only chalked up eighteen years to date. Her stage debut was made in New York City in "Peter Ibbetson" and she's had an amazingly long list of appearances in stage plays and moving pictures since then. . . . Young Margaret Lindsay is a comparative newcomer to the theatrical world. She'll be remembered for years hence, though, as the American girl who came to Hollywood and made good—as a dyed-in-the-wool Britisher. She was born in Dubuque, Iowa, but decided to forget that for a while. She had made up her mind to get a role in "Cavalcade" and came to California with that purpose. Only English actors and actresses were going to be considered, which only made Margaret more enthusiastic about getting a role. If she could act, here was her chance to prove it. The Lindsay girl was so good that the result astonished her in the tests. She was as much "the new English discovery" to herself as to Hollywood. By the time the hoax leaked out, everyone in the industry quickly forgave such an artistic deception and admitted that Miss Lindsay's best performance was the one that preceded her screen debut. . . . This is Warren Hull's first appearance on the screen. He's familiar to most by sound rather than sight, having been on several national radio programs. Besides baritoning on various programs, Mr. Hull's been master of ceremonies for Beatrice Lillie and other luminaries. He's so crazy about ocean dips that he dashes down to the beach for one at 6 a.m. every day. Or maybe he's just crazy. But one discovery of Mr. Hull's proved that he's not so slow. He'd been in town several weeks without one person recognizing him as a celebrity. Then he invested in a pair of dark glasses and was immediately besieged by autograph-hounds. It's the surest way to recognition in Hollywood.

★★ His Night Out
(Universal)

If you're an Edward Everett Horton fan, or just think a good laugh is worth more'n anything in this world or the next, don't miss this picture! It's Mr. Horton at his best, which means you'll be off in a gale of giggles at the opening sequence and leave the theatre still chuckling. The plot of the story is weak, but you'll laugh that off, too. Edward Everett is the victim of dyspepsia and gangsters. He's been given three months to live on account of the former, but it looks more like three minutes when the gangsters get on his trail. Between saving himself and the gal friend, Irene Hervey, our hero's kept pretty busy. And dodging Jack La Rue's bullets is no joke—except to the audience. Miss Hervey gives a good account of herself, as do the rest of the cast. But it's a Horton picture from first to last.

Preview Postscripts

Electricians, cameramen, directors and actors battle for opportunities to work on sets where Edward Everett Horton is holding forth. He gives them all such a swell time. Mr. Horton doesn't know what a dull moment is and if he did would consider those moments just so much wasted time. In spite of the fact that he holds more degrees for higher larnin' than any actor in Hollywood, Edward E. is considered just a good egg by his fellow workers. His pride and joy is a de luxe ranch at Encino. Each picture means some definite improvement on it. He'll point out a grape arbor to visitors and add, "My next picture will mean a swimming pool over

---

CONTEST ENTRANTS, ATTENTION!

We are announcing the winners—one hundred in all—of our $2500.00 "Forty Days of Musa Dagh" Cash Prize Contest in the February issue of Modern Screen there." Tennis courts, squash courts, bowling alleys and a golf course in the last year prove that Mr. Horton's fans think him a pretty good guy, too. . . . Irene Hervey is a native daughter. That's enough to establish a girl in California, but Irene had her eyes on a career. She spent several years in dramatic schools in Los Angeles, then purchased a down-filled cushion and began camping every day at the casting offices. Ben Piazza, Metro's casting director, suddenly spoke to her one evening on his way out of the office. "There's something familiar about your face. Haven't I seen it somewhere before?" Irene admitted that was highly possible since she'd been sitting in his office for five days straight. Mr. Piazza was so embarrassed that he mumbled something about a screen test. Miss Hervey promptly pinned him down to an appointment for the following morning. "Stranger's Return" with Lionel Barrymore proved that Irene had some other qualities besides persistence. She's headed for bigger and better roles these days. What spare time she has, Irene spends in the Pacific, since she lives on the Santa Monica beach with her parents in the same house where she was brought up these past twenty odd years.

★★ It's in the Air
(M-G-M)

With Jack Benny as its star, "It's in the Air" should have been grand comedy fare. Instead, it's a mildly amusing drama which won't win any Academy honors for anyone concerned, although it will afford a fair quota of laughs. Class it as routine entertainment. People who think Jack Benny is the funniest guy in radio will be disappointed to find that he is, as in "Broadway Melody of 1936," playing a stooge to another comic. This time Ted Healy is handed most of the laugh lines, while Jack gets the heavy lover assignment. He does well in a romantic role, but our contention is that there are enough profile boys around any studio to take care of those assignments, and when an ace comedian is available it would seem good judgment to let him play comedy. Or maybe we're wrong about the whole thing. Anyway, Jack plays a Broadway crook who goes straight in an effort to win back his wife, who is Una Merkel and swell in the part. The rest of the cast includes Nat Pendleton, Grant Mitchell and Mary Carlisle.

Preview Postscripts

Jack Benny is the Waukegan boy who made good in the big city. Waukegan's in Illinois, and that's where Meyer Benny, Jack's father, had a small haberdashery shop in which his son was expected to work when not at school. But the son had other plans. He was learning to fiddle, and finally got together an orchestra among the town boys. Then the lure of the theatre got in Jack's blood and he decided to take his orchestra into Waukegan's only theatre. But he only got as far as the front door. He was made doorman. Then he tried the back door and was made property man. Finally he reached the orchestra pit just one week before the theatre closed of old age. During the war Jack joined the navy, but he didn't swab many decks. He was too busy entertaining the boys. By this time the violin was parked under his arm instead of his chin. It's been there most of the time since. In 1927 Jack married Sadye Marks, known on the air as Mary Livingstone. They have an adopted daughter, Joan, aged a year and a half, whose favorite recreation is tobogganing downstairs on Mr. Benny's violin. . . . Una Merkel is from Kentucky. But she prefers Hollywood to Covington any old day. If you think you'd recognize Una on Hollywood Boulevard by her inimitable gum-chewing technique, you're wrong. Una's not a bit like her screen roles in real life. She has neither so much Southern accent, nor so many wisecracks, though there's a touch of both.

★★★ Remember Last Night
(Universal)

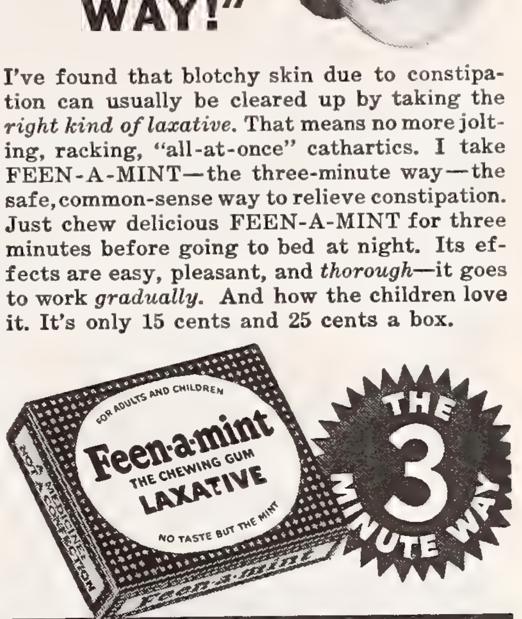
The reason no one can remember last night is because the entire cast of this one spends almost every minute of its time guzzling. In that respect, you might say it's thinner than "The Thin Man," after which it seems to be patterned. A gay group, comprised of Robert Young, Constance Cummings, Sally Eilers, Reginald Denny, Monroe Owsley, Louise Henry and George Meeker, spends an evening among the champagne bottles, and when the rest of them arrive at consciousness next morning they discover that Mr. Meeker is "slightly" dead. No one can remember what happened, so detective Edward Arnold is called in. He doesn't drink, which makes his entrance something of a relief after several reels of constantly bent elbows. The picture offers little solace for teetotalers, however, for those two-fisted drinkers, Robert Young and Constance Cummings, do much more toward solving the crime than does the long and temperate arm of the law. "Remember Last Night," if you can disregard the exaggerated drinking scenes, is a lively murder mystery which should hold your attention throughout. The large cast is swell, and it is particularly nice to see Constance Cummings back again, gin-soaked though she is.

Preview Postscripts

Edward Arnold's the most superstitious man in Hollywood. In 1928 he was touring with Viola Dana in a vaudeville act. In Long Beach a fortune teller told him that he was going to make a hit in talkies. Arnold had never been in one, was flat broke, and had been snubbed by several producers that same week. The next day he received a wire from the Theatre Guild asking him to join them in a Broadway play. He was given a two-year contract and the day after it ran out was offered three contracts from motion picture studios. His friends claim he's more patient than superstitious, waiting two years for the prophecy to come true. . . . Constance Cummings leaped at the chance to play in this flicker. She dotes on murders and reads herself to sleep every night with the more lurid ones. Her only objection to her husband, Benn Levy, British playwright, is that he can't appreciate the fine points of a good murder and writes only super-sophisticated dramas. . . . Robert Young is one young man who attained sudden success without an increase in headsize. He graduated from a Los Angeles high school and started in extra work at the studios as the best way to get some badly needed cash for his younger brother's education. A small part in one picture suddenly boosted him into the public eye. As soon as Robert found out it was Fame, sure enough, he eloped with his high-school sweetheart. Studio publicity heads wagged woeful heads and prophesied it was the end of his glamor in the public eye. But in the last two years Bob has proved that common sense can be pretty glamorous, too. . . . The Long Island mansion in this picture set Universal back just two hundred thousand dollars in cold cash. When completed the sets were so elaborate that all the actresses' gowns had to be redesigned in order to fit in with the fancy work. The wardrobe department didn't consider this picture too highly. But Monroe Owsley did. He got the biggest break in many a picture on this one. He was allowed to live almost through the entire play. It's seldom Mr. Owsley is allowed to survive more than three or four reels.

"AT THE FIRST HINT OF BLOTCHY SKIN . . .
I TAKE THE 3-MINUTE WAY!"

I've found that blotchy skin due to constipation can usually be cleared up by taking the right kind of laxative. That means no more jolting, racking, "all-at-once" cathartics. I take FEEN-A-MINT—the three-minute way—the safe, common-sense way to relieve constipation. Just chew delicious FEEN-A-MINT for three minutes before going to bed at night. Its effects are easy, pleasant, and thorough—it goes to work gradually. And how the children love it. It's only 15 cents and 25 cents a box.



THE CHEWING-GUM LAXATIVE

GRAY ROOTS

Banish Graying Hair with NUSHEEN'S RETOUCH. Easy to use. A safe, harmless vegetable liquid immediately covers unwelcome gray hair. Insure youthful appearance by coloring individual gray strands or use between dyeing applications. Send $1.50 for complete fountain applicator. Enough for 10 treatments. Refills $1.00. When ordering state shade desired.
NUSHEEN CORPORATION, 130 W. 30th St., New York, N.Y.

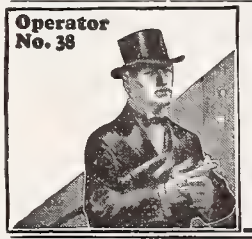
How to become A HOTEL HOSTESS is told in a series of published lectures by Beatrice Wallace, distinguished authority on professional hospitality. Every ambitious woman can now afford this information. Send for complimentary Questionnaire and Hostess Test.

BEATRICE WALLACE, Coconut Grove, Florida



Follow This Man
Secret Service Operator No. 38 is on the job! Running down Counterfeit Gang. Tell-tale finger prints in murdered girl's room. Thrill, Mystery.
Free The Confidential Reports of Operator No. 38 made to his chief. Write for it.
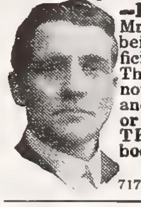
Earn a Regular Monthly Salary
YOU can become a Finger Print Expert at home, in spare time. Write for details if 17 or over.
Institute of Applied Science
1920 Sunnyside Ave.
Dept. 72-11 Chicago, Ill.

NO JOKE TO BE DEAF
—Every deaf person knows that—
Mr. Way made himself hear his watch tick after being deaf for twenty-five years, with his Artificial Ear Drums. He wore them day and night. They stopped his head noises. They are invisible and comfortable, no wires or batteries. Write for TRUE STORY. Also booklet on Deafness.



Artificial Ear Drum
THE WAY COMPANY
717 Hofmann Bldg. Detroit, Michigan

Old Money and stamps WANTED

POST YOURSELF! It pays! I paid J. D. Martin, Virginia, $200 for a single copper cent. Mr. Manning, New York, $2,500 for one silver dollar. Mrs. G. F. Adams $740 for a few old coins. I want all kinds of old coins, medals, bills and stamps. I pay big cash premiums.
I WILL PAY $100 FOR A DIME
1894 S. Mint; $50 for 1913 Liberty Head Nickel (not buffalo) and hundreds of other amazing prices for coins. Get in touch with me. Send 4c for Large Illustrated Coin Folder and further particulars. It may mean much profit to you. Write today to
B. MAX MEHL, 457 Mehl Bldg., FORT WORTH, TEXAS
(Largest Rare Coin Establishment in U. S.)

Between You and Me

TEAMING TOO

I get a great deal of pleasure from your magazine, and would like to express a sincere desire. Here it is:

I would like to see Nelson Eddy and Gladys Swarthout as a team, and my mind seems immediately to hear and see them in Bizet's "Carmen." What a Toreador Nelson would make and what a beautiful Carmen Miss Swarthout would be! Their voices would be ideally suited to each role and it would give them full scope both vocally and dramatically.

I am very anxious to know what the reaction of the rest of the fans is to this suggestion. We all loved Nelson and Miss MacDonald, too, but I know they will both want to make a change of partners in due time, so why not the combination I suggest?—M. Woolsey, Providence, R. I.

A BOY WHO'S A BOY

As a fan writer I'd probably make a swell brick layer, but I've got to admit that little Frankie Darro's name in a cast is plenty big enough to drag me in to see a picture I otherwise would have passed right up.

Oh, I like movies all right, and I have my favorites—Bergner, Greta Garbo and Shearer for the actresses; and Gable, March and Colman for the actors—but I sure get a big kick out of this tough little youngster, Frankie Darro. He's the kind of an "all-boy" every father wants and very seldom gets. It even took the screen a long time to find an hundred per cent all-boy, and now that they have found one, I hope they'll have sense enough to keep him and do right by him.—George Galey, Newark, N. J.

MONTREAL FOR MACMURRAY

May I say something about a young man who has recently come upon the screen horizon? He is a fast-growing favorite, and I think that the best reason for his popularity is that he typifies every average young man. He is not the "perfect profile" type, he has no affectation; he is just the ideal symbol of a healthy normal young American of today. His name? Fred MacMurray. His performance in "Men Without Names" and "Alice Adams" was a very welcome change from anything done by many other actors on the screen today.

(Continued from page 63)

My big favorite is Nelson Eddy, but when the golden-voiced star is not on the screen, I take Fred MacMurray, without hesitation, for my evening's entertainment. His success is well deserved. May he continue to give such clean, wholesome performances as he has done in his first screen appearances. The movies will be a better form of entertainment when more "regular guys" like Fred MacMurray invade them.—Rosemary Kent, Montreal, Canada.

MARVELOUS MELODY

All sorts of bouquets to M-G-M for their perfectly swell production, "Broadway Melody of 1936." It was one grand and novel show from start to finish. So orchids to Leo for a grand cast and a grand picture.

To Eleanor Powell, whose dancing alone is splendid, but who also proves her metal as an actress of no mean ability.

To Jack Benny, because he was funny and amusing rather than "silly."

To the designer of the distinctly "different" set for the "I've Got a Feelin' You're Foolin'" number.

And last but not least, to Bob Taylor, for a sterling performance. There should be an unlimited future for him. He has what it takes—good looks and the ability to handle any type of role with an utterly disarming naturalness. He should go far. —D. F., Germantown, Pa.

A VOICE FROM HOME

Your "Advance Model" article in the September issue is so truly Rosalind Russell that to me it is like seeing her again. Of course, this is only the "rave" of one of those "farmers" she was telling you about, but you will remember she did say we were appreciative.

When she appeared with the Little Theatre Group in Buffalo, I was delighted with her interpretations. As far as the audience in general was concerned, SHE was the Little Theatre Group. I don't know whether this proves histrionic ability or not, but she imparted to her audience such an intimate feeling that at intervals it would cause amused individual chuckles and "ahs" to burst forth from sheer joy.

It was funny—even while we sat there enjoying her work, we sensed that she was destined for greater glory.

I have seen her every performance in the motion picture field, and upon several occasions have had the pleasure of hearing an exasperated neighbor voice my personal opinion, "Why don't they give her a part worthy of her talent?" And WHY NOT? If Hollywood authorities really recognize talent when they see it, why don't they capitalize on Rosalind Russell? As yet, with the vehicles afforded her, the screen world hasn't even an idea of what Rosalind really can do."

And meanwhile, we "farmers" patiently wait until her talent is as apparent to the moguls as it is to us.—Mildred Francis, Buffalo, N. Y.

LIKES AND DISLIKES

I have read lots of your letters and most of the people have very good judgment.

All we fans are tired of Gable, Crawford, Tone, Harlow and little Temple, etc. Give us more of Patricia Ellis, Jane Withers, Grace Moore, Sybil Jason, Gary Cooper—and give us more of Eddy, but not too much.

I like Jean Harlow, but I don't like the roles she plays. Give her some good roles and let us enjoy her talent.—Martha Thornton, Dunn, N. C.

THE PUBLIC SAYS—

Leave Bing Crosby with Joan Bennett, but give him better roles because Bing is slipping. Give him a he-man role and not that of a sissy, nor yet again the role of a bad man. Somehow, in "Mississippi," he seemed to be awkward. There was absolutely nothing to that picture or "Two For Tonight." The plots were no good and Bing sang a trifle too much. Give him stories with good plots or Bing will soon be in the past. We'd certainly hate to lose him.

Separate Clark Gable and Jean Harlow if you don't want his career ruined, for that's just what she is doing to him. Walking out of a theatre after seeing one of her pictures, I can't help but feel filthy. "China Seas" would have been a four-star picture, according to me, if Jean Harlow hadn't shown her common self. The only picture we liked her in was "Hold Your Man." Give her more of this sort, and give us Clark Gable in another like "The White Sister." But please separate them.

George Raft is really the tops with us. More of Raft and Carole Lombard together. He's all right in slow dancing or in a rhumba, but for heaven's sake, he's too much of a man to be made to tap dance.

Now for Pat O'Brien—there's really a man for you. Give us more of him with Josephine Hutchinson. "Oil For the Lamps of China" was a beautiful picture.

Why not do with John Wayne what you did with Randolph Scott? I'm sure he, too, could make the grade because he can act and he certainly has the looks. We all give thanks for putting Scott into "big-time" pictures, so please give John Wayne a break!—M.M.L., Rayne, La.

More Good News

(Continued from page 59)

simply maaaa-ad about Director David Butler! And Mrs. Butler doesn't know a thing about that hop-scotch affair which is being carried on between every scene! If this should leak out Mrs. B., no doubt, will join forces with Mrs. John Boles, Mrs. Gary Cooper, Mrs. Jack Holt and a few others to put a ban on the Temple charms.

■ ■ ■

"Reunion in London" is staged every Saturday evening in an English restaurant. It's a gathering of homesick Hollywoodians. Among the recent participators were Fay Wray, Douglass Montgomery, Mary Brian and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Young. The Fredric Marches were regular attenders but have left for home by now.

■ ■ ■

Marlene Dietrich has just joined the select group of stars who close their sets to visitors. With La Dietrich the move was one of necessity, for too many people wanted to watch her emote and the sets grew so crowded there was hardly room for the technical crew. So the "No Visitors" sign was tacked up, and no visitors meant everyone but daughter, Maria, and the present romance, John Gilbert. Marlene and Maria, incidentally, are a striking pair as they stroll down the boulevard, especially since Maria has grown so that two more inches will see her as tall as mama.

The Dietrich-West war's over. Two glamor queens on one lot usually means fireworks, and for quite a time on the Paramount lot there was no friendship wasted between Mae and Marlene. As a matter of fact, they hardly knew each other. Finally, Dietrich visited a West set. Then West visited a Dietrich set. The gals began dropping in on each other's dressing room. So Marlene baked a cake for Mae, which is a sure sign of admiration, for the Dietrich hasn't turned out much pastry lately.

* * *

Film fans in the United States may go so far as to yank a flower from the lapel of their favorite star, but down in South America they stop at whatever is Spanish for "nothing." If you don't believe it just ask Clark Gable, who recently returned from what he thought was going to be a rest down there. Seems Clark was in his hotel suite quietly shaving when a bevy of Latin ladies broke down the door, rushed in and mobbed the frightened Mr. G. When the mob departed, Clark, full of lipstick and lather, found that they had taken all of his underwear, his pajamas and his handkerchiefs.

* * *

Watching a scene from "Collegiate," we noticed that one of the most interested spectators was Jack Oakie. Jack, of course, is starred in the picture, but he wasn't needed on the set that day because the scene involved only a few lovely co-eds attired in a like number of lovely you-know-whatties. "How come," we asked Jack, "you're around when you don't have to work?" "Oh," said Oakie in as off-hand a tone as he could command, "I just like to keep in touch."

* * *

If you would lead the Private Life, come to Hollywood! That's from no less an authority on the subject than Miss Greta Garbo. On her return from Sweden, the Garbo has announced, she will hibernate permanently in the Hollywood Hills. George Brent is building an elegant retreat up there now. Whether Greta will go in for solitary confinement or Mr. Brent is a moot question.

* * *

Now that the decks are cleared for the tinkle of legal wedding bells, Claudette Colbert and her fiancé, Dr. Joel Pressman, are rumored to be planning their march to the altar the very day the doctor's divorce decree becomes final.

* * *

W. C. Fields has been feeling anything but funny the past two months. The nosey gentleman has been spending his time at a sanatorium near Los Angeles, where he's reported suffering from violent headaches, stomach aches, neck aches and back aches. Every kind of trouble, it seems, except fallen arches and Baby LeRoy.

* * *

Edith Fellows is a sworn Democrat and will uphold the party to the end since President Roosevelt's Los Angeles visit. The nine-year-old Columbia starlet was chosen representative of a local C.C.C. camp, and delivered a bouquet to the chief executive when he visited the camp. Mr. R. was flattered to the extent of asking Edith for a photograph, and said he'd appreciated her acting in "She Married Her Boss." So in the next mail went the photo. It was autographed "With love from Edith Fellows—I mean, Annabelle, the brat."

Guarantee of Satisfaction

The publishers of MODERN SCREEN guarantee that you will be satisfied with your purchase of every packaged product advertised in this magazine. If for any reason you are dissatisfied, MODERN SCREEN will replace the product or, if you prefer, refund your purchase price. In either case all you have to do is to send us the unused portion, accompanied by a letter outlining your complaint. This guarantee also applies if the product, in your opinion does not justify the claims made in its advertising in MODERN SCREEN

Careful examination before publication and rigid censorship, plus our guarantee, enable you to buy with complete confidence the products you see advertised in this issue of MODERN SCREEN.

Index of Advertisers

January 1936

Allcock's Plasters 87

Bastian Brothers 79
Borden Company, The 61
Brown & Williamson Tobacco Company Kool
  Cigarettes 55

Camel Cigarettes .... 4th Cover
Carter's Little Liver Pills 83
Chicago School of Nursing 85
Chore Girl 85
Colgate Ribbon Dental Cream 57

DDD Corporation 87
Deubener's Bags 81
Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets 79
Dr. Grove's Quinine 75
Dr. Scholl's Zino Pads 77

Enterprise Dripolators 81
Ex-Lax 9

Fairyfoot Company 89
Faoen Company 73
Federal Schools 79
Feenamint 95
Fleischmann's Yeast 3
Fourplus Hosiery 89
Fox Film Corporation 18
Franklin Institute 89
Frontier Asthma Company 85

Gerber's Strained Vegetables 67
Griffin Shoe Polish 83

Hollywood Rapid Dry Curlers 91

Institute of Applied Science 95
International Typewriter Ex. 89

Justrite Push Clips 81

Kool Cigarettes 55
Kurlash Company 69

Lamont Corliss Company—
  Pond's Creams 51
La Salle Extension University 83
Lewis Company, A. H.—
  Nature's Remedy 87
  Tums 85

McCormick's Iron Glue 91
Maybelline 63
Mehl, B. Max 95
Metal Textile Company—
  Chore Girl 85
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures 5
Mifflin Mouth Wash 87
Musterole 89

Nature's Remedy 87
Northwestern Yeast 71
Nusheen Company 95

Pertussin 91
Pond's Creams 51

Remington Rand Typewriters 65
Reynolds Tobacco Company, R. J.—
Camel Cigarettes .... 4th Cover

Seeck & Kade, Inc.—
  Pertussin 91
Standard Brands, Inc.—
  Fleischmann's Yeast 3

Tums 85

Wallace, B. 95
Warner Brothers Pictures 7
Way Co. 95
Woodbury Co. 59

Yeastfoam Tablets 71

Although we make every effort to insure the accuracy of this index, we take no responsibility for an occasional omission or inadvertent error.

all joking aside... by Jack Betts

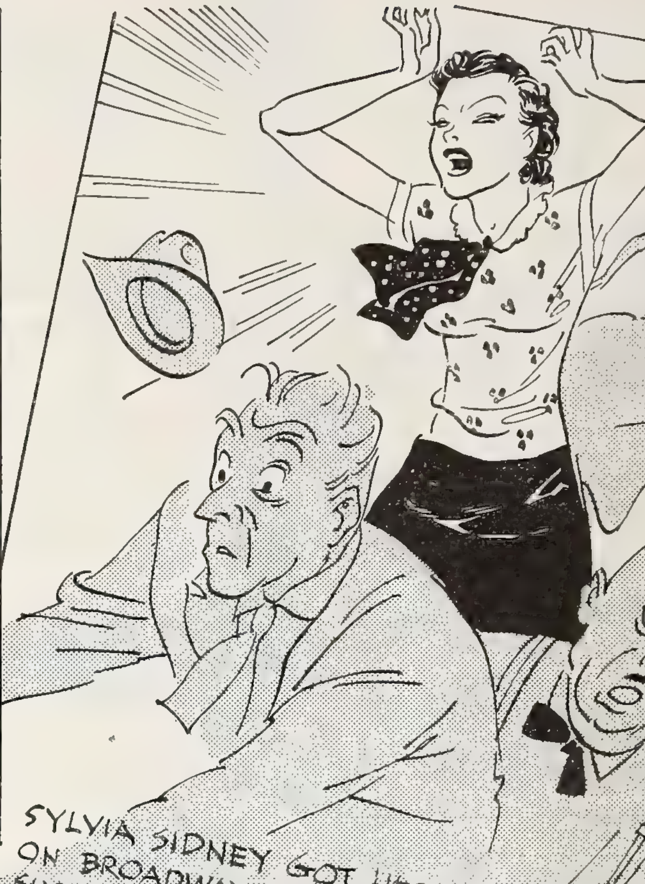
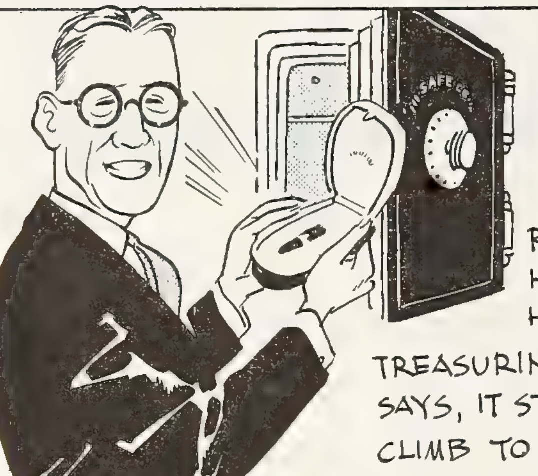
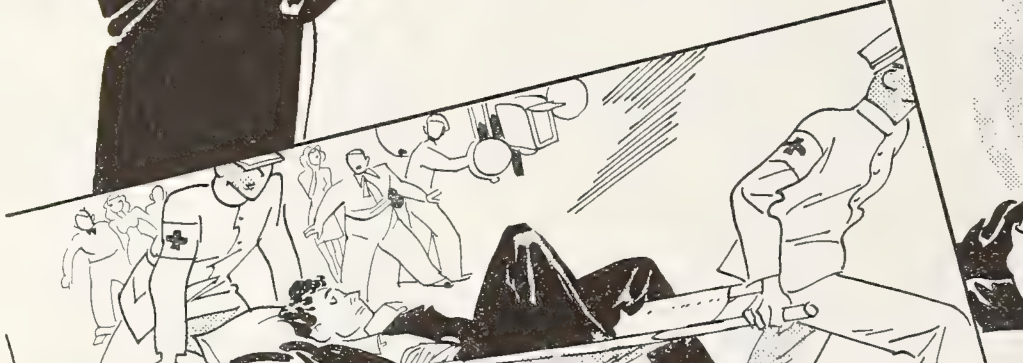
KING VIDOR, WELL KNOWN FILM DIRECTOR CAME TO HOLLYWOOD, FROM TEXAS IN AN OLD FORD--NOT WITH THE INTENTION OF A CAREER FOR HIMSELF--BUT ONLY BECAUSE HIS WIFE, FLORENCE VIDOR, WAS INTERESTED IN MOVIE' ACTING.



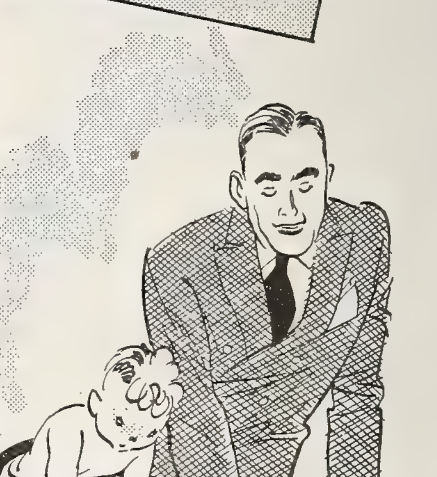
SYLVIA SIDNEY GOT HER FIRST JOB ON BROADWAY BECAUSE SHE HAD SUCH A BLOOD CURDLING SCREAM.



ROBERT WOOLSEY HAS THE FIRST CIGAR HE EVER SMOKED, TREASURING IT BECAUSE HE SAYS, IT STARTED HIM ON THE CLIMB TO FAME.



FRANCIS LEDERER BELIEVES IN STARK REALISM. THE OTHER DAY IN A DEATH SCENE HE SEIZED A DAGGER AND ACTUALLY STABBED HIMSELF. HE WAS RUSHED TO THE HOSPITAL!



PAT O'BRIEN'S DEVOTED ONE WHOLE WING OF HIS HOUSE TO HIS BABY... NURSERY, DIET KITCHEN, MAIDS ROOM, NURSES ROOM, SUPPLY ROOM, AND PLAY ROOM.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

DO YOU KNOW LILY PONS?

Has her great achievement meant sacrificing love, friends or family? Slim, small and gracious, with honest dark eyes in a mobile face, with eloquent, slender hands, you know her at once for a veritable artist. Not from any studied pose. Rather from the obvious singleness of her purpose, from the unaffected simplicity of her speech, her integrity, scornful of compromise. Looking at her, talking with her, you feel definitely conscious of her as the symbol of that clear, immortal beauty that is her exquisite singing voice. That voice that, on her debut in January, 1931, at the Metropolitan Opera House, stirred listeners to enthusiastic acclaim that has not been the reward of any singer since Adelina Patti sang. The voice that, since that day, in radio, in concert and opera, has thrilled uncounted listeners in all the world's great centers and in its humblest homes.

Meet this beautiful, talented person in this month's issue of Radio Stars Magazine. "Will Lily Pons Regret Her Promise," presents an intriguing answer to a most important question. YOU WILL ENJOY THIS GREAT ISSUE FROM COVER TO COVER! GET YOUR COPY TODAY!

RADIO STARS

MAGAZINE • JANUARY ISSUE ON SALE EVERYWHERE • 10 CENTS

SEASON'S GREETINGS

FROM
R·J·REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY
MAKERS OF CAMEL CIGARETTES AND PRINCE ALBERT SMOKING TOBACCO

NORTH POLE
PRINCE ALBERT
CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND CIGARETTES

Camels

Of course you'll give cigarettes for Christmas. They're such an acceptable gift—such an easy solution of your problem. And Camels fill the bill so perfectly. They're made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand. They are the accepted cigarette of the social, business, and athletic worlds. And their finer tobaccos give that pleasant "lift"—that sense of well-being which is the spirit of Christmas itself.

CAMELS
Seasons Greetings
To
From
Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos—Turkish and domestic—than any other popular brand
CAMEL CIGARETTES

A Christmas special—4 boxes of Camels in "flat fifties"—in a gay package.

At your nearest dealer's—the Camel carton—10 packs of "20's"—200 cigarettes.

PRINCE ALBERT
CRIMP CUT
Season's Greetings
Merry Christmas

A full pound of Prince Albert in an attractive gift package.

A full pound of Prince Albert packed in a real glass humidor.

Prince Albert

Fine tobacco for Christmas. For more than a quarter of a century, the mellow fragrance of Prince Albert has been as much a part of Christmas as mistletoe and holly. So to the pipe smokers on your Christmas list give Prince Albert, "The National Joy Smoke." It's the welcome gift. For more men choose Prince Albert for themselves than any other pipe tobacco. Let every pipeful of Prince Albert repeat "Merry Christmas" for you.

Copyright, 1935, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

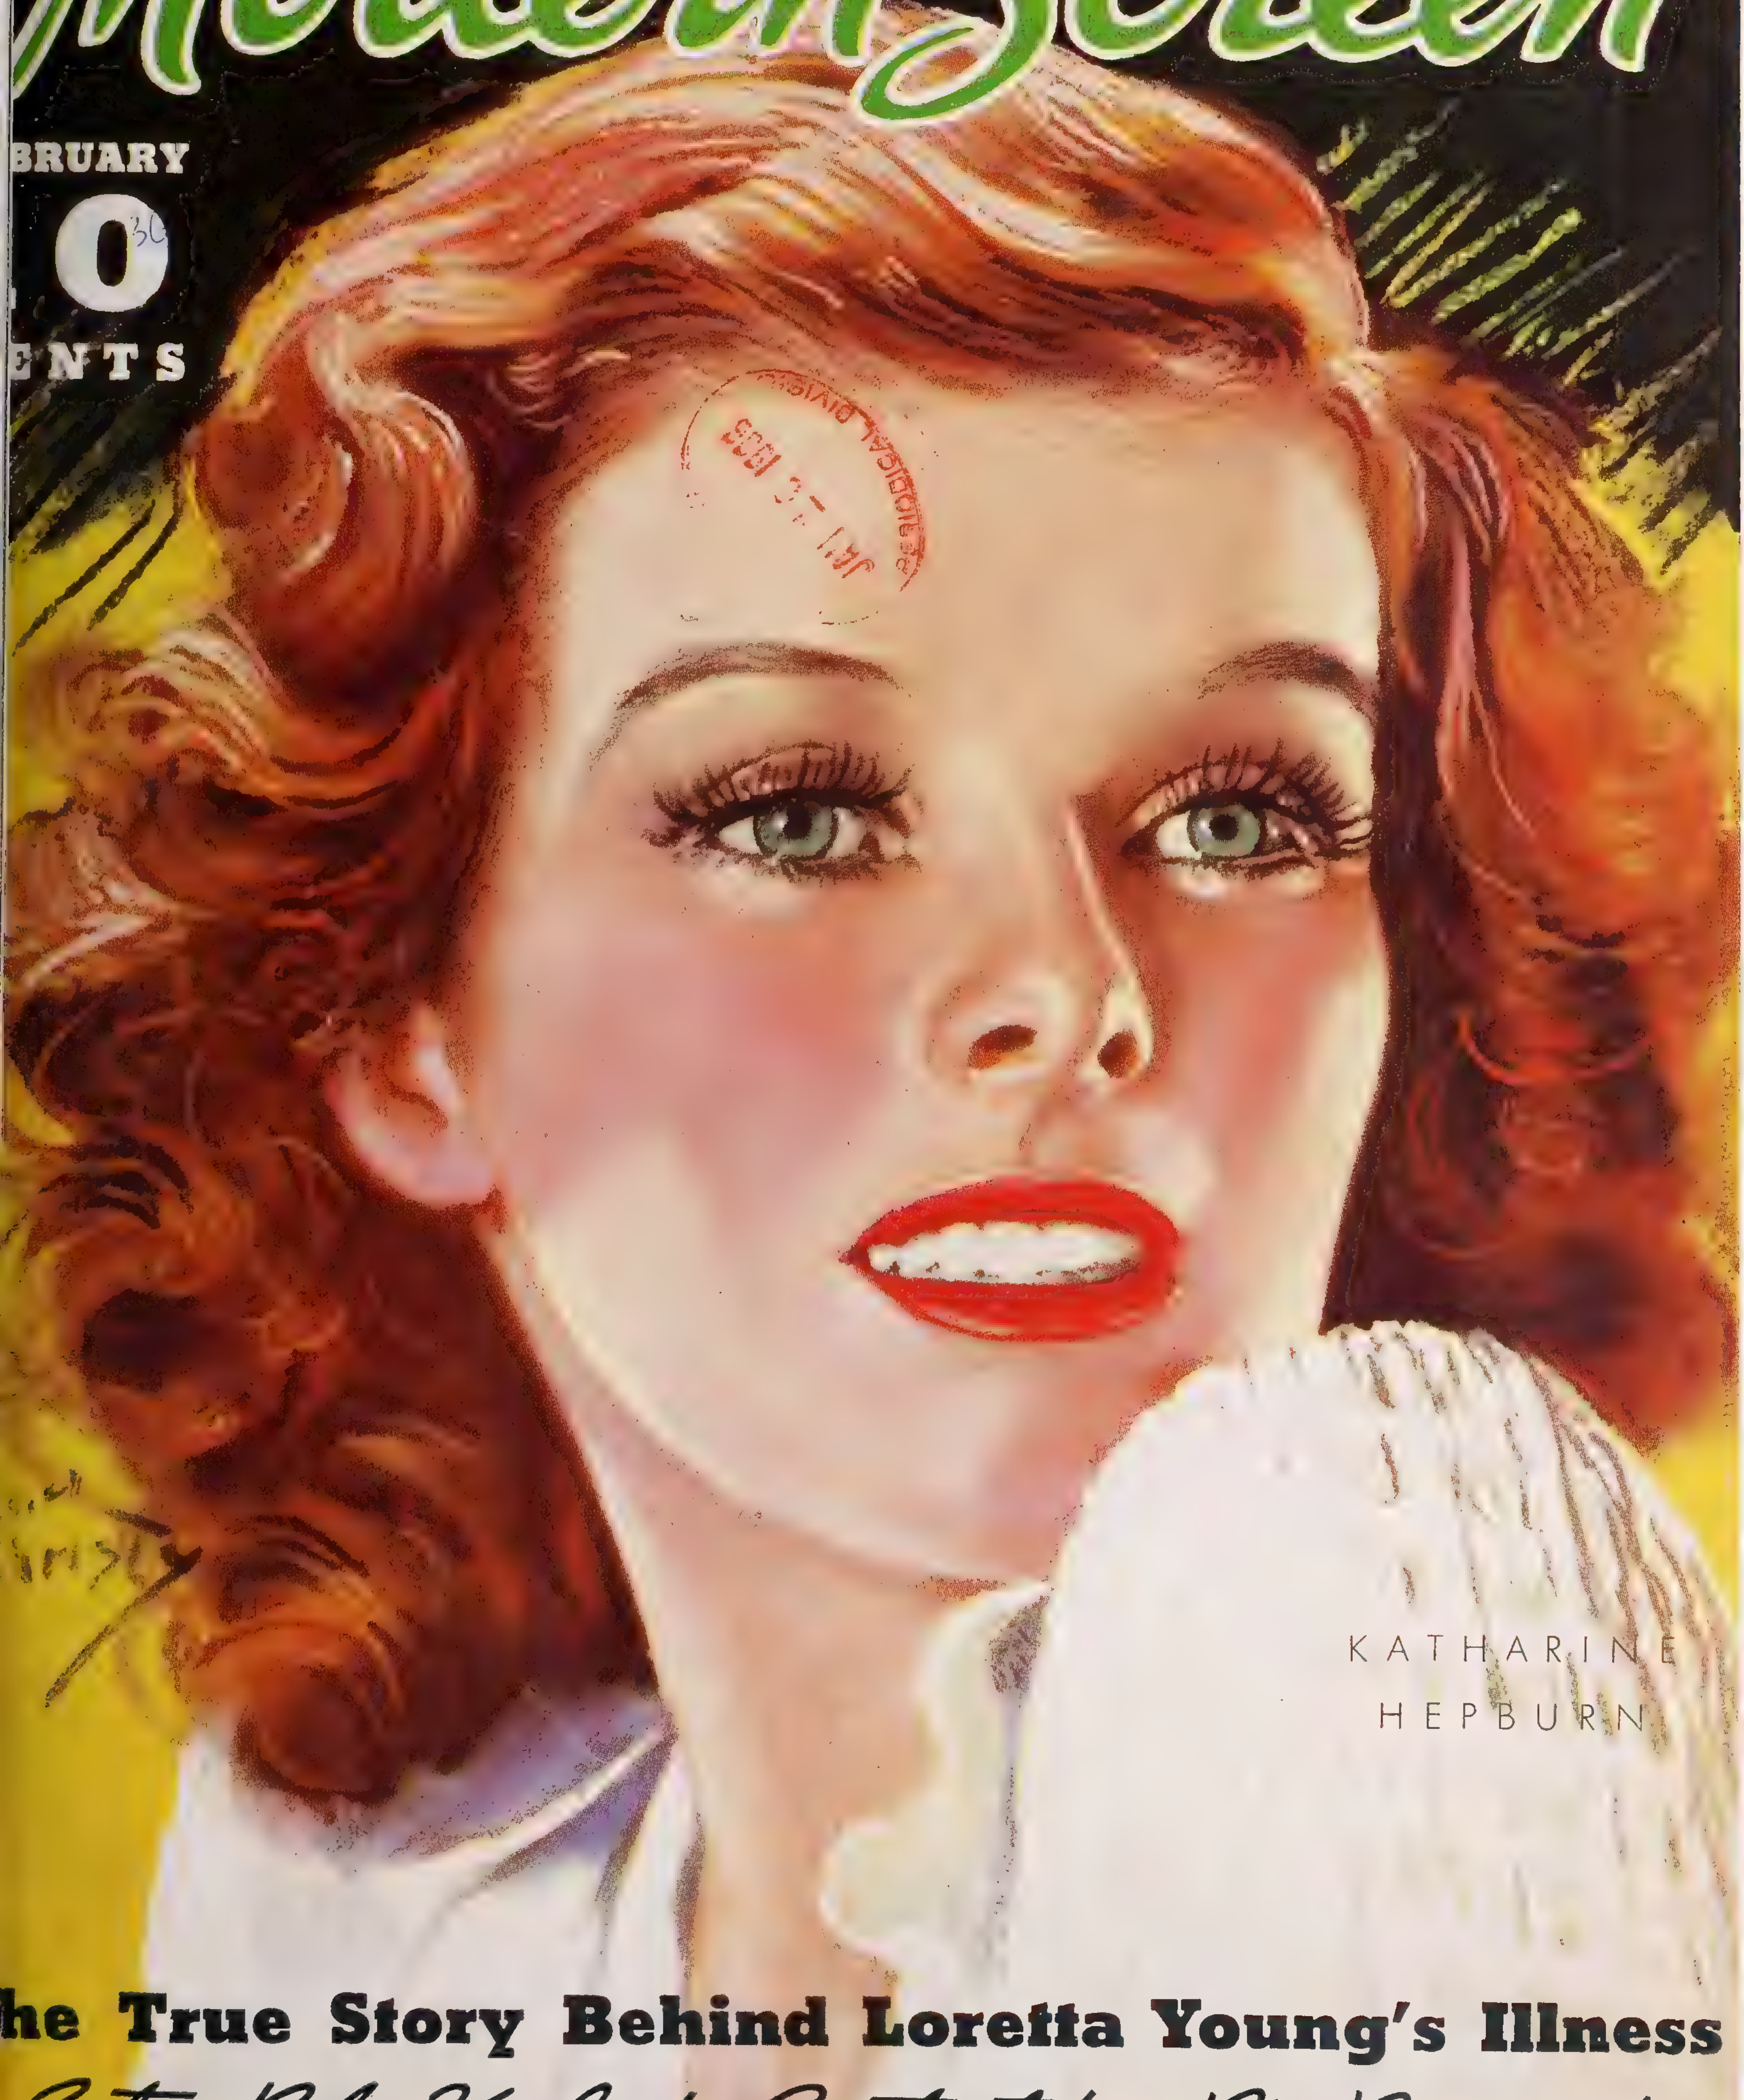
Modern Screen

BRUARY

0

36

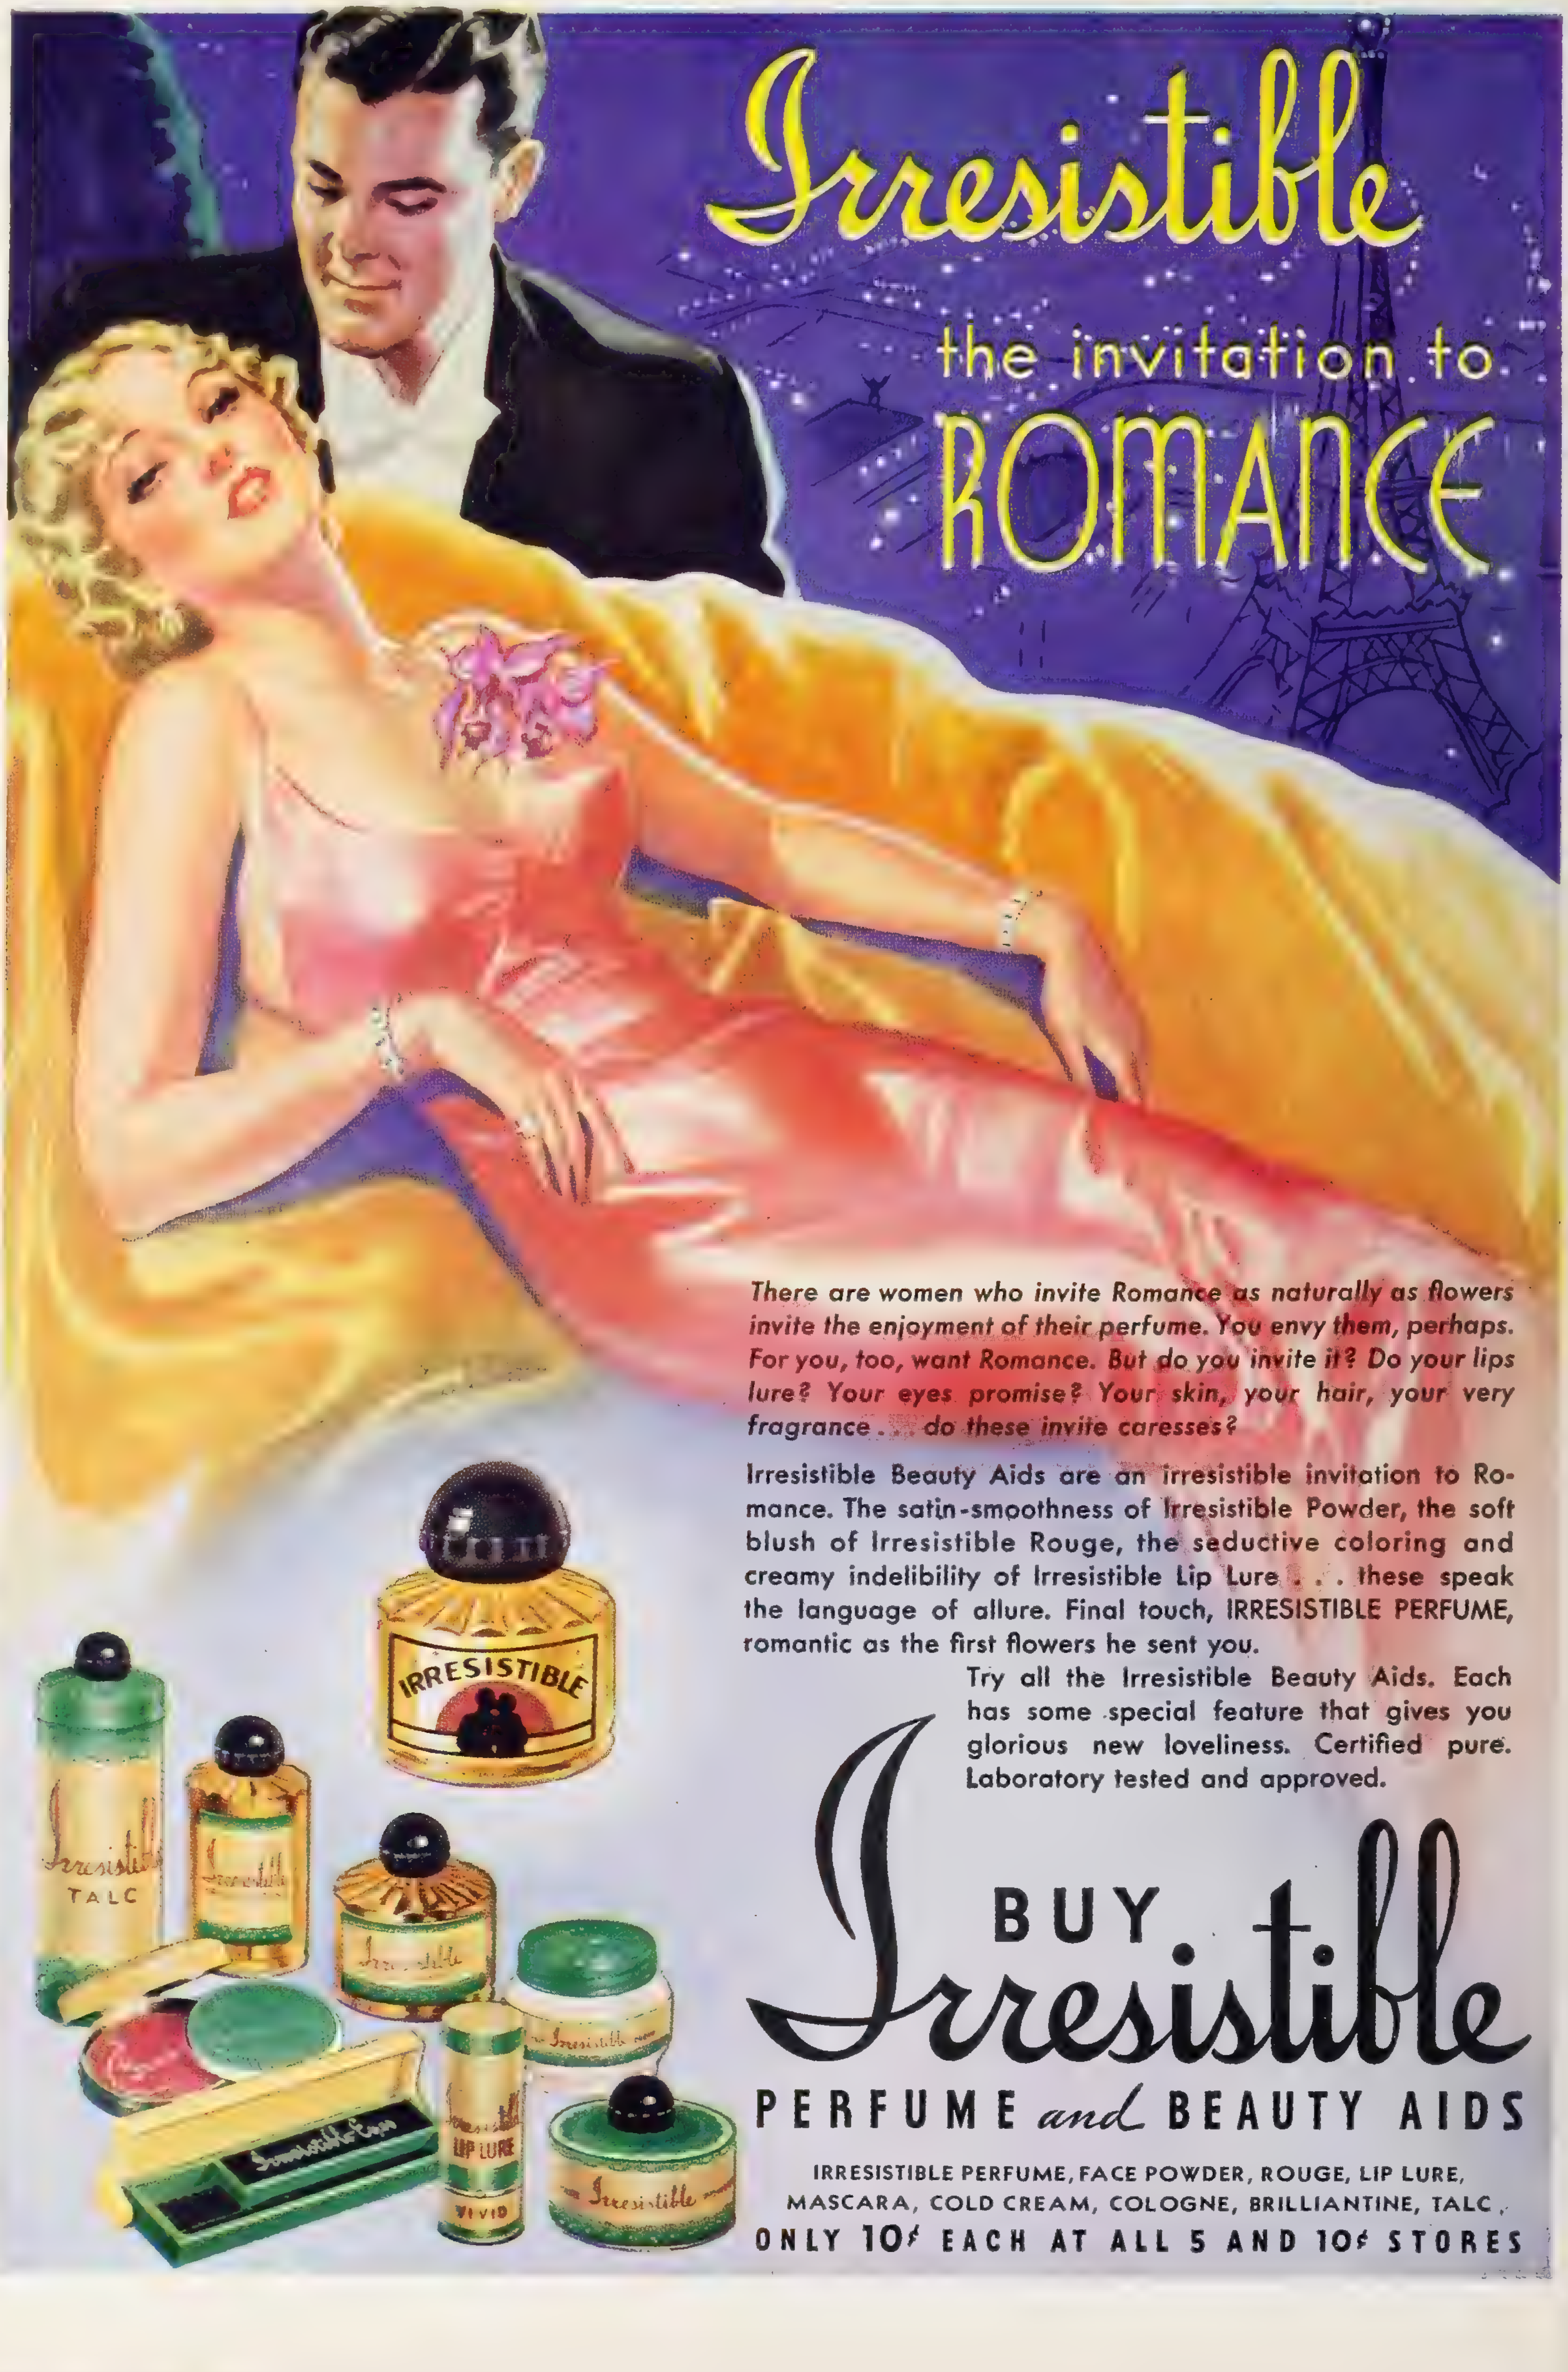
ENTS



KATHARINE HEPBURN

he True Story Behind Loretta Young's Illness

Enter Ruby Keeler's Contest!.. Big Prizes!



Irresistible
the invitation to
ROMANCE
IRRESISTIBLE
Irresistible
TALC
Irresistible
Irresistible
Irresistible
Irresistible Eyes
Irresistible
LIP LURE VIVID
Irresistible

There are women who invite Romance as naturally as flowers invite the enjoyment of their perfume. You envy them, perhaps. For you, too, want Romance. But do you invite it? Do your lips lure? Your eyes promise? Your skin, your hair, your very fragrance . . . do these invite caresses?

Irresistible Beauty Aids are an irresistible invitation to Romance. The satin-smoothness of Irresistible Powder, the soft blush of Irresistible Rouge, the seductive coloring and creamy indelibility of Irresistible Lip Lure . . . these speak the language of allure. Final touch, IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME, romantic as the first flowers he sent you.

Try all the Irresistible Beauty Aids. Each has some special feature that gives you glorious new loveliness. Certified pure. Laboratory tested and approved.

BUY
Irresistible
PERFUME and BEAUTY AIDS

IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME, FACE POWDER, ROUGE, LIP LURE, MASCARA, COLD CREAM, COLOGNE, BRILLIANTINE, TALC.
ONLY 10¢ EACH AT ALL 5 AND 10¢ STORES

"Shocking"

SAYS SOCIAL LEADER

A SOCIALITE AND A DENTIST CLASH OVER A STALK OF CELERY

"Splendid"

SAYS DENTIST

(But the civilized way to combat "PINK TOOTH BRUSH" is IPANA and MASSAGE)

"SHOCKING!" burst from a society leader. And she was shocked at this picture. Emphatically. Just as you'd be shocked by such primitive conduct at your own dinner table.

But modern dentistry disagrees sharply!

"Shocking?" would respond your own dentist. "That picture's not shocking. It's a splendid, scientific lesson in the proper way to use the teeth and gums. If more people today would only chew their food as energetically as this girl, there'd be a lot fewer gum troubles in the world."

It's only too true. Today we all eat soft foods that rob our gums of health-giving work. And without regular exercise, gums become lazy . . . weak . . . tender. It's no wonder "pink tooth brush"—a cry for help from ailing gums—appears so often.

"Pink Tooth Brush" is a Warning

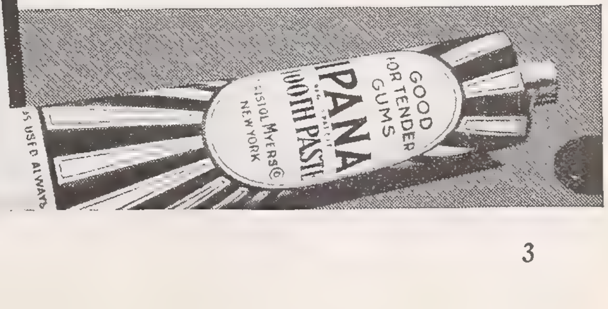
"Pink tooth brush" is a definite warning that your gums are in an unhealthy condition. And ignored, "pink tooth brush" may swing the door wide open to gingivitis, Vincent's disease, even pyorrhea.

Take care of your teeth and gums the way modern dental science urges—with Ipana and massage. Each time you clean your teeth massage a little extra Ipana into your gums. Soon you'll see—and feel—a new, healthy firmness to your gums.

For Ipana is especially designed to help combat "pink tooth brush". . . to help keep teeth bright . . . to give you a sparkling, brilliant smile.

IPANA
TOOTH PASTE

IPANA plus massage is the dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of the teeth and gums.



JAN -2 1936
©ClB 286016

MODERN SCREEN
NOW SHOWING

REGINA CANNON, EDITOR
ADELIA BIRD, Associate Editor
ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor
LEO TOWNSEND, Hollywood Editor

NOW SHOWING

ENTER RUBY KEELER'S CONTEST NOW! $1,000 in cash prizes! Many beautiful gifts 16
THE TRUE STORY BEHIND LORETTA'S ILLNESS The Young gal fights gamely Dorothy Spensley 34
TELLING TALES ON FRED Broadway pals talk about Astaire .... Nanette Kutner 36
"WOMEN WITH CAREERS SHOULD BE SHOT!" Says Bette Davis .... Gladys Hall 38
THEY HATED TO DO IT! Acting isn't all fun for stars .... Muriel Babcock 40
TRIAL ENGAGEMENT It's lasted two years for Fred MacMurray .... Dorothy Donnell 42
BARBARA'S BACK! Stanwyck has a new slant on things .... Martha Kerr 43
YESTERDAY AND TODAY Some amusing picture comparisons 44
SUCCESS A LA CROSBY Bing shelves all the old rules .... Helen Louise Walker 46
TOM'S RULES FOR SIDESTEPPING TROUBLE The Brown lad knows his stuff .... Franc Dillon 48
MARY'S METHODS FOR HOLDING A BEAU Gals, take tips from Carlisle Caroline Somers Hoyt 49
TWINKLE, TWINKLE LITTLE STARS Six small career girls talk .... Lois Svensrud 50
HER LUCK BEGAN WITH LOVE Jean Arthur tells you why .... Ben Maddox 52
HUGHIE, THE STALL GUY That Herbert chap—tsk, tsk! .... Ruth Rankin 53
IF YOU WOULD HAVE A FIGURE LIKE COLBERT What to do according to .. Mme. Sylvia 54
HOW CAN I LOOK SMARTER? Answering fashion questions you've asked ...... Adelia Bird 56
WINNERS OF "THE FORTY DAYS OF MUSA DAGH" CONTEST 100 lucky people win $2500 92

SHORT SUBJECTS

It's Thrifty to Knit Your Clothes......... 6
Information Desk.................... 8
Reviews 10
Good News........................ 12
Modern Hostess..................... 20
Beauty Advice...................... 22
Between You and Me................ 24
Exclusive Portraits................... 27
Modern Screen Movie Scoreboard...... 76

Published monthly and copyrighted 1936 by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 12, No. 3, February, 1936. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.75 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.50 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Post Office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. Additional entry New York, N. Y. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole Foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E. C. 4. England.

HUMANITY'S GREATEST LOVE STORY!

"A life for a life you love." So vowed this handsome idler! In that terror-haunted cell he asked himself what is the greatest sacrifice he could make for the woman he loved . . .

The producers of "Mutiny On The Bounty", "China Seas" and other big hits of this season are happy to bring you another million dollar thrill-drama! Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has re-created for the screen, in breath-taking realism, one of the great romantic dramas of all time, penned by Charles Dickens whose "David Copperfield" was the most treasured picture of 1935. We now confidently predict that "A Tale of Two Cities" will be the best-loved romance of 1936!

RONALD COLMAN

A TALE OF TWO CITIES

Cast of 6000 including Elizabeth Allan, Edna May Oliver, Blanche Yurka, Reginald Owen, Basil Rathbone, Walter Catlett, Donald Woods, Fritz Leiber, H. B. Warner, Mitchell Lewis, Billy Bevan, Lucille La Verne, Tully Marshall, E. E. Clive, Lawrence Grant, Henry B. Walthall, Claude Gillingwater, Tom Ricketts

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE • Produced by David O. Selznick • Directed by Jack Conway

"Yesterday.. DULL, HEAVY, LIFELESS Today-ALIVE"

THE 3 MINUTE WAY

"My system cleared of accumulated poisons the easy way"

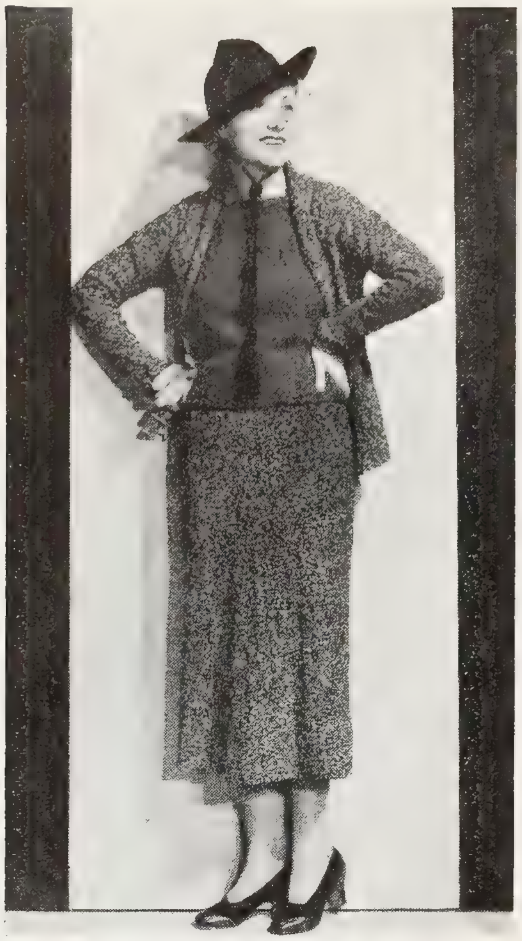
Why put up with jolting, harsh, "all-at-once" cathartics that may upset and shock your whole system! Take your laxative the 3-minute way—the modern, pleasant, easy way to clear your system of accumulated poisons. Just chew FEEN-A-MINT for three minutes before going to bed. It's those three minutes of chewing that make the difference between FEEN-A-MINT and other laxatives. You have no cramping pains—no nausea—no unpleasant after-effects. Its utterly tasteless medicinal content goes to work gradually. You wake up fresh as the dawn. In fact FEEN-A-MINT—the three-minute way—is the ideal family laxative—and it costs only 15* cents and 25* cents for a big family-size box.

*Slightly higher in Canada

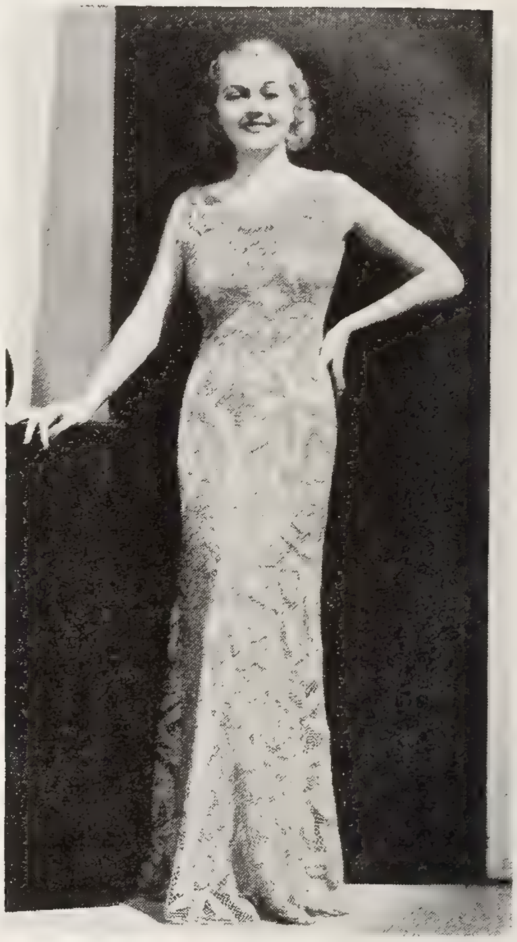
FOR ADULTS AND CHILDREN
Feen-a-mint
THE CHEWING GUM
LAXATIVE
NO TASTE BUT THE MINT

better because you chew it

It's Thrifty To Knit Your Clothes



Above (5) Genevieve Tobin wears a three-piece suit which she knitted from a green tweed yarn. You can make the suit or just the sweater.



Above (6), Patricia Ellis shows you what can be done with a bit of perseverance and a crochet hook. It's really much simpler than it looks.

MORE SMART FASHIONS FOR YOU CROCHETERS AND KNITTERS

IN this third series of knit and crochet patterns, your acquired skill is really tested. We give you two stunning costumes which every girl would love to own—two which are not hard to knit but take time and perseverance. But, after all, what's the fun of knitting or crocheting unless you can turn off masterpieces like these which two of the best knitters in Hollywood have made?

Pat Ellis says that, although her crocheted lace evening dress looks difficult, it really is not hard to make. You make the small pieces first and then crochet them together, following the pattern of a simple evening gown. Her instructions are very easy to follow.

Genevieve Tobin's suit, consisting of a skirt and jacket in tweed yarn and a plain slip-on, can be made as a three-piece unit or can just be made in separate pieces. If you need a good sweater pattern, the slip-on alone is perfect.

In order to get these instructions just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Adelia Bird, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. There is no charge, just indicate by number your preference—or you may have both, just for the asking.

No Wonder Franchot Tone calls BETTE DAVIS

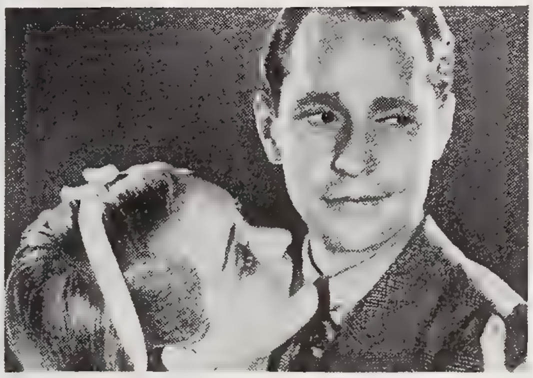
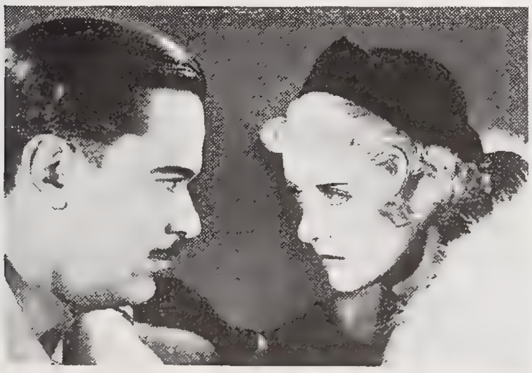
"DANGEROUS"

LOOK WHAT SHE SAYS, IN HER LATEST PICTURE, ABOUT LIFE, LOVE, MEN!



"I'm not lady enough to lie! Loving me is like shaking hands with the devil—the worst kind of luck. But you'll find I'm the woman you'll always come back to!"

"I've never had any pity for men like you. You with your fat little soul and smug face! Why I've lived more in a day than you'll ever dare live."



"It's going to be your life or mine! If you're killed, I'll be free . . . If I'm killed, it won't matter any longer... and if we both die—good riddance."

In their first film together!
THE PICTURE OF THE MONTH

YESSIR, "Dangerous" is the label Franchot tags on the screen's famous blonde temptress. And that's the title Warner Bros. have selected for their first picture together!

If you thought Bette gave men a piece of her mind in "Of Human Bondage", "Bordertown", and "Front Page Woman", wait 'til you hear her cut loose as "the woman men always come back to", in "Dangerous".

The way she talks about them—particularly about Mr. Tone—is going to be the talk of movie-fan gatherings. Maybe you'll say she's right when you see what men did to her life. But you'll certainly agree that this story of a woman whose love was a jinx to men, is the surprise package of the New Year.

Besides Bette and Franchot, Margaret Lindsay, Alison Skipworth, John Eldredge, and Dick Foran are smartly spotted in a big cast directed by Alfred E. Green. There's no use telling you you must see "Dangerous". Because you may not be able to get through the crowds to the box-office when the news of this daring drama gets around town!

EMPHASIS ON

Heart Appeal

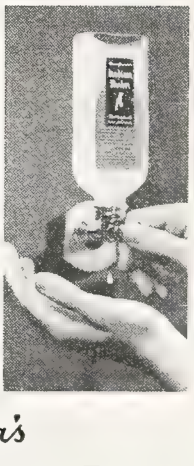
Try This Simple Treatment for a Soft, Smooth Skin

■ Wherever you find "heart appeal"—you'll find a skin that is sublimely fair.

Do you know the quickest treatment for achieving such a skin? The answer is Italian Balm—the famous Original Skin Softener that is guaranteed (or your money back) to banish chapping, roughness, redness and dryness of skin more quickly and at less expense, than anything you have ever used.

Today, Italian Balm is the largest-selling preparation of its kind in the United States and in Canada. It combines sixteen scientifically-chosen ingredients. Its mellowness is obtained by an exclusive blending process. No hands ever touch the product while it is being made. Absolute purity is essential to any preparation for use on your hands and face—and absolute purity is one of the many things that Italian Balm assures you... At drug and department stores in 35c, 60c and $1.00 bottles and in handy 25c tubes.

Free HANDY HOME DISPENSER



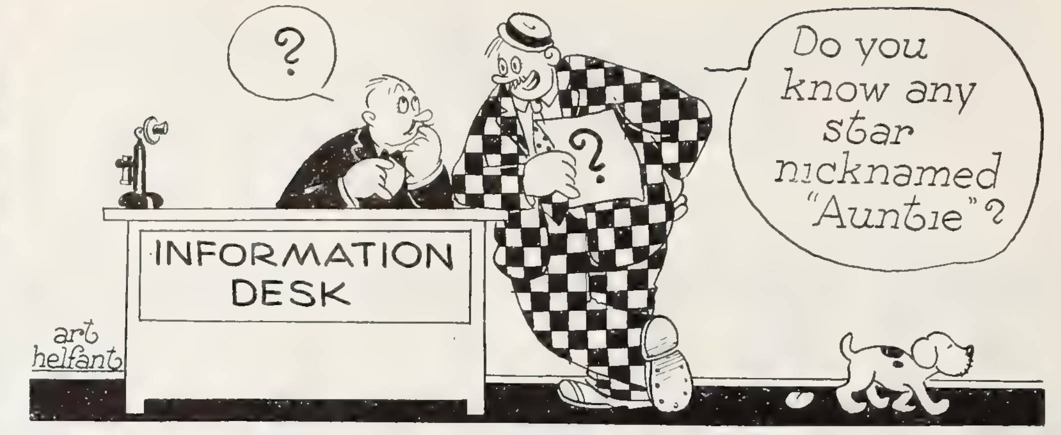
Nickel plated, 100% guaranteed Italian Balm HOME DISPENSER—attaches easily to bathroom, kitchen or laundry wall (wood or tile). Dispenses one drop when you press the plunger. Try your druggist first—ask for the Dispenser Package. If he can't supply you—then get one FREE by sending ONE 60c Italian Balm carton (and 10c to cover packing and postage), or TWO 60c cartons and NO MONEY—with your name and address—to CAMPANA, Batavia, Illinois.

Campana's

Italian Balm

THE ORIGINAL SKIN SOFTENER

"America's Most Economical Skin Protector"



?
INFORMATION DESK
Do you know any star nicknamed "Auntie"?
art helfant

THE LOWDOWN ON FAVORITES

NOTE: As was the case last month, there have been so many requests for brief life stories of the following players that it will be impossible to print the names and addresses of readers. Please consider yourself included.

CHARLES BOYER: He's back again from his European jaunt, and all ready to start work in "Invitation to Happiness" opposite Marlene Dietrich. This should give him ample opportunity to resume his conquest of American movie-goers. Long before he became the theatrical idol of France, he was born in Figeac, in that country, on August 28 and graduated from the Sorbonne where he earned a degree in Philosophy. His family wanted him to take up an honorable trade, but young Charles had different ideas and enrolled at the Conservertoire de Drama on the day of his graduation. There he studied for two years, gaining an education in the theatrical classics. He was then engaged by the Theatre Antoine, and his success was instantaneous. Paris, London and Berlin were eventually at his feet—and now America. His first American picture was "Caravan," followed by "Private Worlds" and "Break of Hearts." "Shanghai" was his last film before sailing to his Fatherland with his wife, Pat Paterson. He is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds, has brown hair and eyes and an olive complexion. Write him at Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Cal.

MARGE CREEDON, Phila., Pa.—Douglas Walton was the young man who gave the dramatic outburst at the hospital in "Dark Angel." He was also in "Captain Hurricane." As the result of the former bit part, he has been signed to a contract by Samuel Goldwyn Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., Hollywood, Cal.

CAROLE LOMBARD: Christened Jane Alice Peters, Carole was born in Fort Wayne, Ind., on October 6, 1909, of Scotch and English descent. Her parents, Elizabeth Knight and Frederick C. Peters, were fairly well-to-do and she had two brothers, both older than she. When Carole was seven her mother took her to California for a visit, and liking the climate so well, they sent for the rest of the family. So Carole was raised in Los Angeles, where she attended public schools and the Los Angeles High School, finishing with a year or two at the exclusive Marlborough School for Girls. In 1924, when she was 15, Carole joined a little theatre group where she appeared in a number of plays. She had received her dramatic training at the Miriam Nelke school of dramatic art, and had come to the conclusion that the best way to learn to act was to get experience. Her first move was to meet as many people in the movie business as possible. One of these acquaintanceships resulted in a test, which in turn brought her a leading role opposite Edmund Lowe in "Marriage in Transit" in 1925, when Carole was not quite 16. And believe it or not, she was Buck Jones' and Tom Mix's leading lady on two occasions, in a series of Mack Sennett comedies and finally made her sound picture debut in "Show Folks." It was then that she changed her name to Carol (no "e") Lombard. After a few minor pictures she was signed by Paramount to play opposite Buddy Rogers in "Safety in Numbers," which turned out to be the making of her, for she was signed to a long term contract, which in its renewed form, is still in existence. On June 16, 1931, Carole married William Powell and this Hollywood marriage was no exception. It was all over in 2 years. She measures 5 feet 4 inches in height, weighs 110 pounds, has blue eyes, blonde hair and fair skin. Her favorite sports are swimming, tennis, horseback riding, skiing and pingpong. White is her favorite color and she has two dogs, likes to cook and collects books. "Spinster Dinner" with Melvyn Douglas will probably be Carole's next picture, and you may reach her at the Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Cal.

PHYLLIS ANN FAUSSELT, Anderson, Ind.—Ross Alexander played the role of Sparks in "Shipmates Forever." He is 28 years old.

CLARK GABLE: Of course you've heard the rumor—about our hero and his wife separating—but that's putting the end of the story first, so back to the beginning. Born in Cadiz, Ohio, on February 1, 1901, he was christened William Clark Gable. His mother having died in his infancy, Clark was raised by his step-mother and grandparents. Educated in the Hopedale, Ohio, high school, he went to Akron, where he became a timekeeper in a rubber factory, until he caught the "theatre bug" and began playing extra parts on the stage. He then alternated between the theatre and odd jobs. In Portland, Ore., he met Josephine Dillon, diction and elocution instructor, and married her in 1924. In 1927 he made his stage debut on Broadway and followed it up with a series of other plays. It was in 1929 that Clark married again, this time it was Rhea Langham, New York society woman. She is the present Mrs. Gable who is planning to divorce her actor-husband. In 1931 Clark made his picture debut in "The Painted Desert," and this was only the beginning. Clark is 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 190 pounds, has gray eyes and brown hair and is known as a regular fellow. He likes to watch polo games and football, and his athletic diversions are golf, hunting, swimming and tennis. He collects firearms, and travelling is his favorite pastime. He did a marvelous bit of acting in "Mutiny on the Bounty" and will appear next in "Wife Versus Secretary" with Jean Harlow and Myrna Loy. Write him at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Cal.

MARION LEWIS, Springfield, Ill.—Sid Silvers played the part of Snoop in "Broadway Melody of 1936." Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell have started work on "Colleen" which also features Joan Blondell. George Raft's last picture was "She Couldn't Take It" and he will be seen next, most probably, in "Concertina" with Carole Lombard.

FRANCES LANGFORD: From Main Street of Lakeland, Fla., comes this young contralto who made herself known to American audiences first over the air, then in movie shorts, musical comedy, vaudeville and finally invaded Hollywood. Miss Langford's mother, Annie Newbern, was a concert pianist and although Frances was not so gifted she did have a voice that was a "natural." As a young girl she gained local popularity by singing at school and church entertainments. She later attended Southern College where she sang soprano in the glee club. Then she had her tonsils removed, emerging from the hospital a contralto. Between classes at college Frances motored to Tampa where she was heard on a commercial radio program, and it was here that Rudy Vallee, who happened to be visiting the resort, heard her during one of her programs. He was very enthusiastic about this young songstress and arranged for her to appear as guest star on his next program. In June, 1931, she came to New York where she sang on commercial programs and took a whirl at the stage in "There Goes the Bride," which failed. Next she made a stab at vaudeville and was a great success. This resulted in her being signed for a really good radio contract, which she supplemented by work in New York vaudeville and cabarets. Then came her Hollywood contract with Paramount. Her next picture will be "Collegiate." She stands 5 feet 3½ inches and weighs only 100 pounds. She is an exotic type, with a rather dark complexion and raven hair. Her favorite foods are fried chicken and Mexican chili and beans. She likes horseback riding and golf and loves sad music. Miss Langford is not married.

INEZ KEENEY, Clinton, Tenn.—Yes, it's true that Jean Harlow changed the color of her hair from platinum to what she calls "brownette." It is this color in "Riffraff." Her next picture will be "Wife Versus Secretary" with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy.

JAMES CAGNEY: This likeable toughie first saw the light of day in New York City on July 17, 1904, in an apartment over his father's saloon. One of five children (Bill Cagney, also of the movies, is his brother), James attended public school and entered Stuyvesant High School. At this time he was supporting himself by being first office boy, then bundle wrapper and finally bell hop during his spare hours. He then entered Columbia University and decided to become a caricaturist, but his family needed more money than this work produced so he gave it up. He started on a stage career first as a chorus boy, then in vaudeville, stock and finally made Broadway in legitimate plays. Appearing with Joan Blondell in "Maggie the Magnificent," they were both seen by a Warner Brothers scout and signed to contracts for the film version of that play, "Sinners Holiday." Since then he has remained in the films, and has done a big bit of all right by himself. Mr. Cagney likes to swim, play tennis and dance, to say nothing of taking daily gym workouts to keep himself fit. He is happily married to Billie Vernon, who was his partner in vaudeville days. James is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 155 pounds and has red hair and blue eyes—plus freckles. You can write him at the Warner Brothers Studio, Burbank, Cal., where he recently completely "Frisco Kid" and "Ceiling Zero." Chances are that you may see him in the role of Robin Hood in the near future.

FRANCES BARBARA, New York City—Anna Neagle and Fernand Graavey had the leading roles in "Bitter Sweet."

(Continued on page 91)

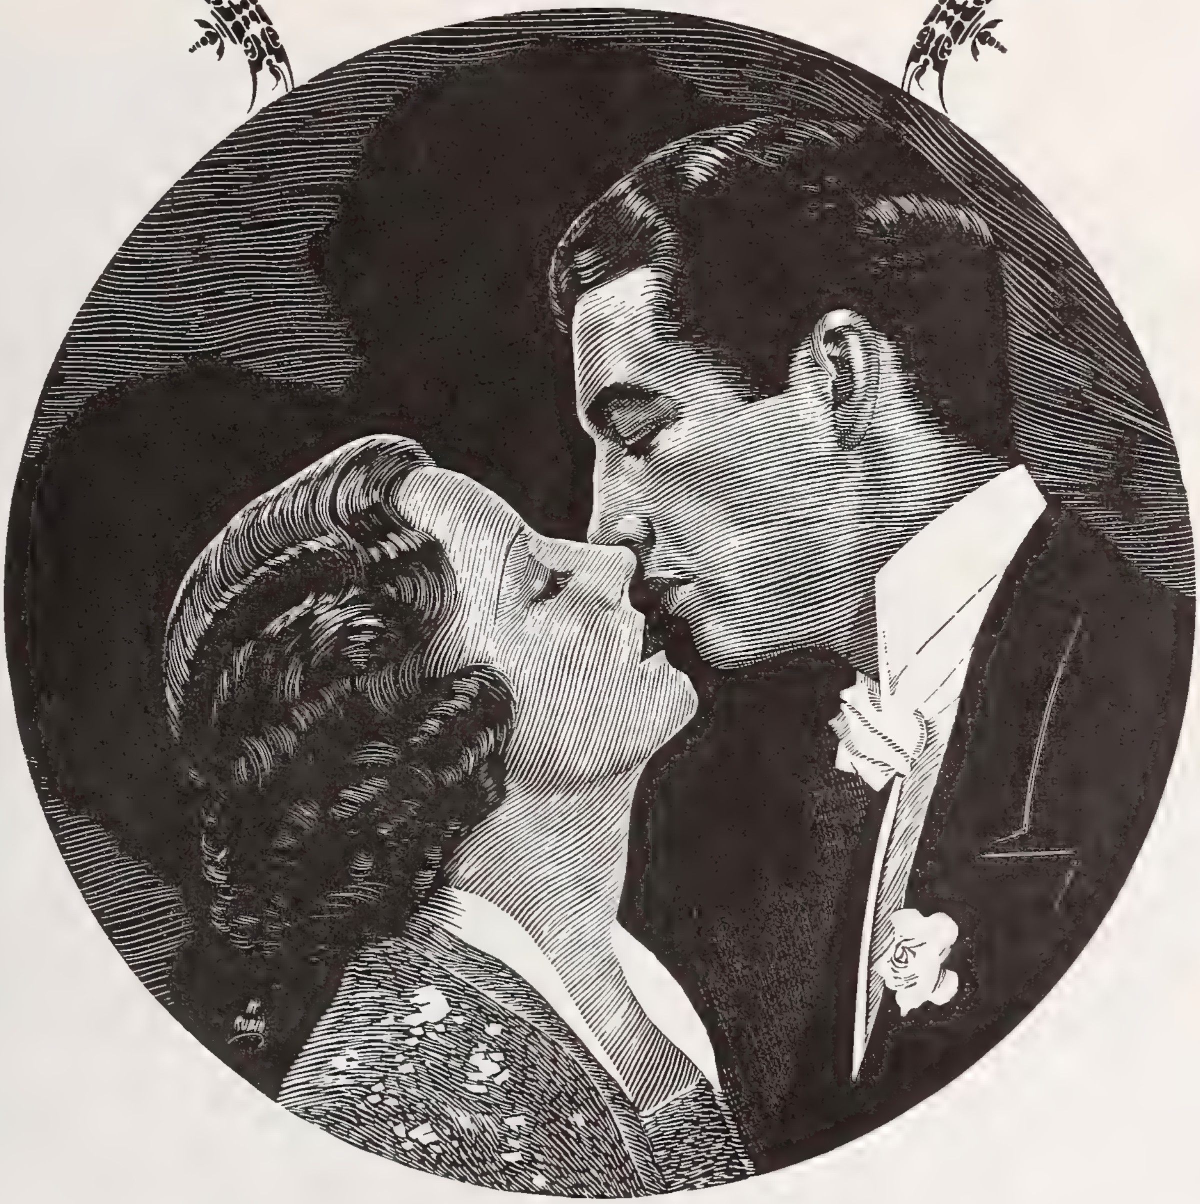
If you would like to see a brief synopsis of your favorite's life in this department, fill in and send us the coupon on page 91. General questions, of course, will be answered here, too. Those asked most frequently and the most interesting ones receive first preference. And not too many at a time, please. Address: The Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

YOU'LL NEVER BE THE SAME AGAIN!

"Something" will happen to you when you see this enduring picture —just as it did to the countless millions of people who read the strange love story from which it was filmed . . . For it fathoms that precious thing called "a woman's soul", holds it up as a blazing emblem to all humanity — for the admiration of men, for the inspiration of women!



IRENE DUNNE · ROBERT TAYLOR

IN

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION

A JOHN M. STAHL PRODUCTION

Far greater than his famous "Back Street", than his memorable "Only Yesterday", or his immortal "Imitation of Life!" . . . With

CHARLES BUTTERWORTH · BETTY FURNESS

Arthur Treacher • Ralph Morgan • Henry Armetta • Sara Haden

From the phenomenal best-selling novel by Lloyd C. Douglas

A Universal Picture presented by Carl Laemmle

Reviews

. . . A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES

BY LEO TOWNSEND

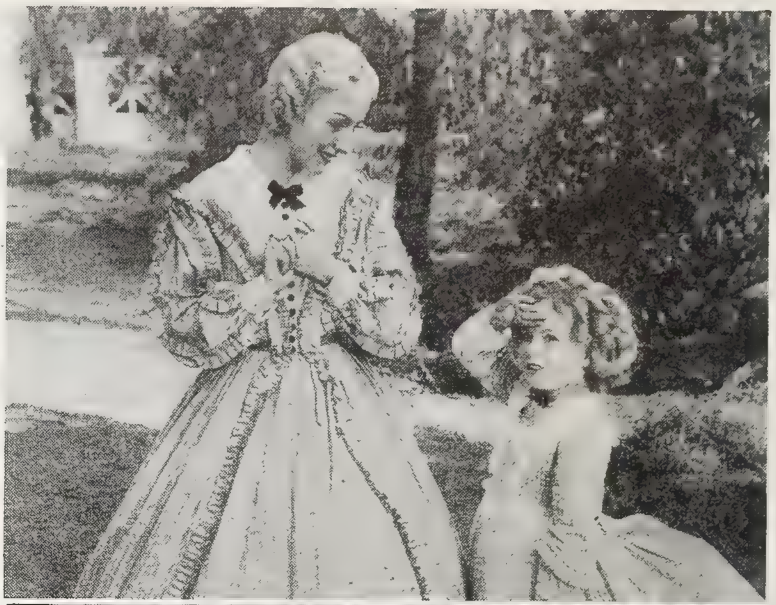
GOING TO THE MOVIES? READ THESE REVIEWS FIRST

★★★★ The Littlest Rebel (20th Century-Fox)

Shirley Temple is Hollywood's one and only star who can get away with inferior story material. She not only gets away with this but brings it up to top-notch entertainment. The audience is reduced to pulp in the hands of Miss Temple when she squeezes out a tear or flashes those dazzling smiles. If anyone can be said to share honors on the picture, it is Bill Robinson. His characterization of "Uncle Billy," the faithful slave of a Southern family through the turmoil of the Civil War, is excellent. All the Temple emotions are brought into play when her mother dies because she is unable to bear the hardships of war, and father John Boles goes off to battle. Mr. Boles' role is well played, though he accommodatingly stays in the background. Karen Morley as the mother was not such a happy choice. Slithery silver sheaths seem more the Morley forte than crinolines. Jack Holt is commendable as the enemy officer who offers his uniform and his life to save the heroine. Willie Best and Guinn Williams are well cast in smaller roles. It is all designed, of course, as a foil for Shirley's charms, and it's the best picture to date for that purpose.

Preview Postscripts

Six-year-old Shirley Temple now earns a little over five thousand dollars a week. $3,500 is her regular salary from the studio whether she is working or not, and the rest of the sum comes in from royalties on the Shirley Temple books, dolls and dresses. Mrs. George Temple, La Temple's mother, gets one hundred a week for bringing her daughter to and from work. Shirley still thinks it's all great fun to be allowed to play with all the nice people in pictures who are such prominent stars. And not one of them even touch her in salary. A gala celebration was held on the set one day during the production of this picture. The party was in honor of Jack Holt's twenty-fourth year in the profession and Shirley's second. Mr. Holt received a huge be-frosted cake with the appropriate number of candles and Shirley had a cup-cake given to her with two pink candles blazing on it. John Boles' daughter, Janet, who is just Shirley's age, was at the party, too. She was a frequent visitor on the set while the picture was being filmed, admiring her favorite actress, Miss Temple, and her favorite actor, Mr. Boles. . . . Bill Robinson is tops in taps, and was a favorite on the old Orpheum circuit for yars and yars. He first came to Hollywood to appear in "Curly Top," was an immediate success and is in such constant demand now that he may never get back to the stage again.



"The Littlest Rebel," with Karen Morley and Shirley.

★★★ Dangerous (Warner Brothers)

"Dangerous" may sound to you, as it did to us, like the title of one of those super-quickies—the kind they make over the week-end—but don't let it fool you. If you look under the nameplate you'll find one of the most satisfying screen dramas of the past months, and one that is bound to win new admirers for Bette Davis and Franchot Tone. Bette Davis, playing what might be termed the title role, does her best work since "Of Human Bondage," which proves that whenever a good role comes her way the Davis lass has no trouble demonstrating the fact that she is one of the screen's major assets. This time she's an actress whose fatal fascination has ruined two or three men and jinxed her plays so that she has dropped from theatrical heights to oblivion. Franchot Tone is a young architect about to marry into society (Margaret Lindsay) when he spies Bette. Their relations and what happens to their lives makes highly interesting and intelligent screen-fare. Along with the excellent performances of Davis and Tone, there is excellent support from Miss Lindsay and Alison Skipworth.

Bette Davis and Tone in "Dangerous."

Preview Postscripts

Director Al Green handled the megaphone from his own front porch for some of these scenes. His ranch of 1700 acres in Puente is such a beauty spot that the studio often makes use of it for pictures. Director Green is in earnest about his farming, too, having every crop that can (Continued on page 96)

Ginger Rogers and George Brent in "In Person."

TWO MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF LAUGHS!
ROARS OF DELIGHT!
RIOTOUS COMEDY
PARKYAKARKUS KING OF CLOWNS
INTOXICATING MUSIC!
HEAR EDDIE SING "CALABASH PIPE"
ARE YOU MAN OR MOUSE
THRILL TO THE GORGEOUS GOLDWYN GIRLS
BARRELS OF FUN
ETHEL MERMAN SINGS

Eddie Cantor gives you the time of your lives in this roaring comedy of a timid tailor who became a titan among men . . . He'll strike you pink with gleeful excitement as this great production winds up in the wildest climax ever brought to the screen.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN Presents

EDDIE CANTOR

IN

Strike Me Pink

with ETHEL MERMAN · PARKYAKARKUS · SALLY EILERS and the GORGEOUS GOLDWYN GIRLS Music and Lyrics by Harold Arlen and Lew Brown . . . Dance Ensembles by Robert Alton . . . Directed by Norman Taurog . . . Adapted from Clarence Budington Kelland's Saturday Evening Post Serial, "Dreamland" . . . Released thru United Artists

GOOD

WHAT GOES ON IN HOLLYWOOD? OUR NEWS SNOOP'S

BY LEO TOWNSEND

PHOTOS BY J. B. SCOTT

Those spoofers, Joan Blondell and Dick Powell, still giving an imitation of romance.

Let's start this month off with the Bright-Sayings-of-Kiddies Department. It happened out on the 20th Century-Fox lot, after the luncheon and dedication of the new Will Rogers memorial stage. Shirley Temple, a young actress of some renown, was being photographed drawing back the curtains to reveal a bronze plaque of Will. After several shots had been taken, photographers requested Shirley to repeat the process for "just one more." "Nix on that one more stuff," announced Shirley. "I've got to get back to work." An especially bright saying, when you consider that bosses Darryl Zanuck and Joe Schenck were standing at the young lady's elbow.

■ ■ ■

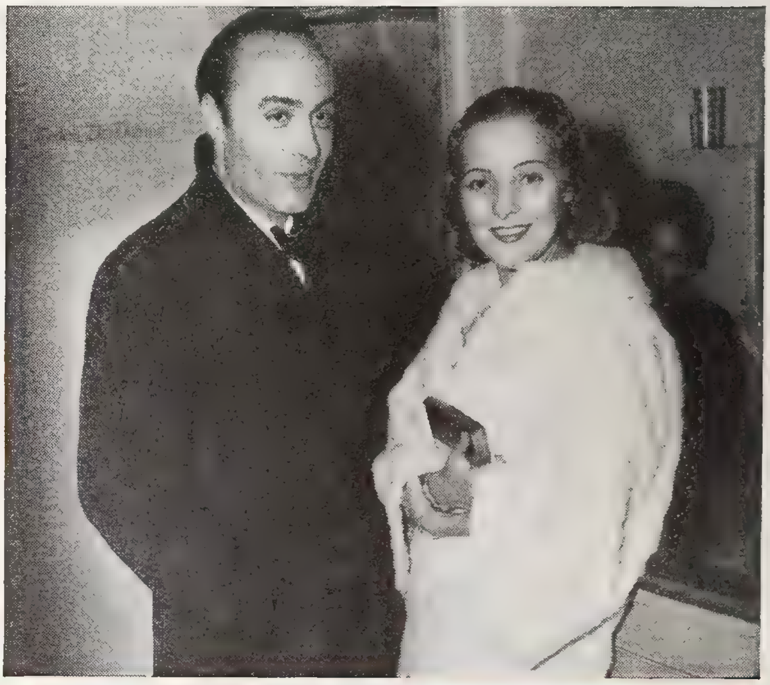
Following the preview of "Mutiny on the Bounty" an enthusiastic crowd of well-wishers, and perhaps a yes-man or two, were busy congratulating Irving Thalberg, who produced it. "A great picture, Irving," enthused one of them. "Looks like a million dollars!" "It ought to," said Thalberg. "It cost two!"

■ ■ ■

Katharine Hepburn lost that bet we told you about last month. Just before a plane trip east she bet a local photographer $1,000 that no one would snap the Hepburn likeness before she arrived in New York. All went well as far as Pittsburgh, where someone caught a somewhat brief but authentic posterior view of the eccentric Miss H. The picture was published in papers all over the country, but the trusting photographer is still waiting for his thousand bucks.

■ ■ ■

The surprise of the month is Connie Bennett. Everyone knows Connie's reputation: haughty, hard to see, and colder than a Byrd Expedition to the press. There are people around Hollywood who can prove all three accusations, and they were probably more amazed than anyone when Connie emerged a month or so ago full of smiles for everyone, being just a regular gal all over the place. In fact, she's even nice to photographers now. All of this couldn't be because M-G-M failed to pick up your option, could it, Miss B.? If so, three cheers. And maybe now you'll be more human in the future, huh?



Pat Paterson and husband, Charles Boyer, pose amicably at the party Norma Shearer gave.

NEWS

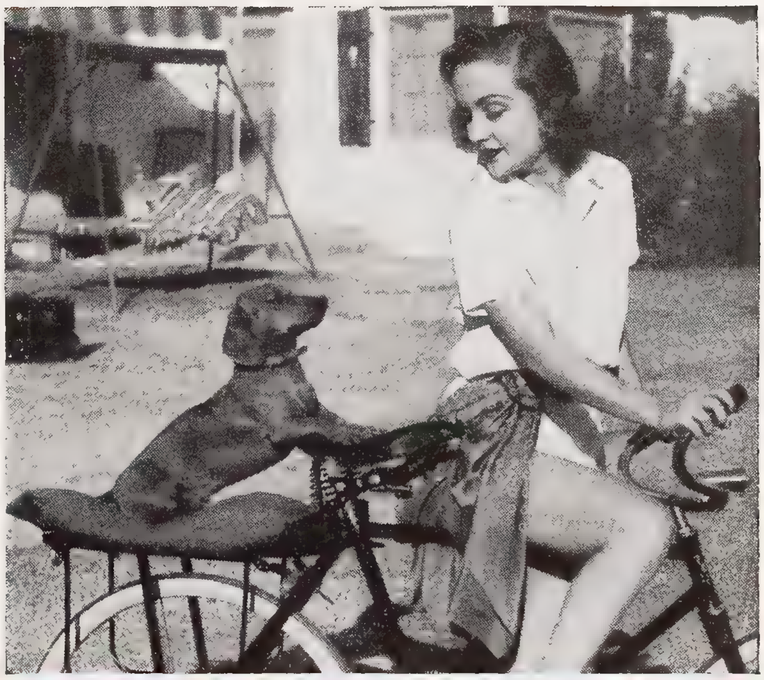
BUSY TELLING YOU ALL, FROM SOCIETY TO SPORTS

Gary Cooper has a favorite new role, and it has nothing to do with pictures. It seems Gary now answers to the title of Gentleman Farmer, for he has just filled three acres of his Brentwood estate with—of all things—avocados. They're Gary's favorite fruit, and he's making daily personal appearances in his garden supervising their growth. The Cooper products won't be on the market, though. They're for his own table and for the Cooper dinner guests, so it looks like Gary is all set for a season of very high-class bragging.

■ ■ ■

Charlie Farrell should have been celebrating his new Universal contract, but he had other things to think about. While he was home nursing a knee injury, a forest fire blazed its way down from the mountains and completely destroyed his Malibu Beach home, which had been plentifully stocked with high-priced antiques. Before the embers died down on the beach place, another fire destroyed more of Charlie's property in Altadena. Less than a week later, thieves entered his home and walked off with a few of his wife's furs. And, just as Charlie was recovering from all that, someone smacked into his new car and gave it that accordian look. It never rains, as the saying goes, especially during forest fires. Charlie, incidentally, is doing right well with his Racquet Club down in Palm Springs.

Maybe David Niven wishes it was a real bride's bouquet for lovely Merle Oberon.



Brownie, the dachshund, is no fool—, [illegible] is a swell lift, from Carole Lombard

Now that Jean Parker is back from England, here's the latest word on her romance. Jean recently announced from London that her true love was Francis Lucas, her childhood sweetheart. Young Mr. Lucas then gallantly announced that his true love was someone else again, and that he was a struggling young bank clerk who couldn't support a movie star on $65 a month. Miss P., according to reports, took issue with Mr. L's statement, saying that he was actually a member of a wealthy family and worked at the bank only as a hobby, or mayhap, a lark. The truth is that Francis is not wealthy, and part of that $65 goes to help support his family. And just to complicate matters, Jean spent one of her first evenings in Hollywood showing his mother the night life. Looks like a fellow's mother is a girl's best friend.

■ ■ ■

Love in Bloom Department: Jack Oakie continues to shower his attentions and his personality on Venita Vardon, who at present is adding to the beauty of the chorus in "The Great Ziegfeld" . . . at press time Addison Randall was all set to ask Glenda Farrell that certain question, provided his option was taken up by RKO, which means there is a strong possibility that Miss F. will be Mrs. R. when you read this . . . although Dick Powell devotes most of his free evenings to Joan Blondell, he told a friend at Palm Springs, a few week-ends ago, that he hadn't proposed and isn't discussing orange blossoms with anyone.

John Boles serenades Gladys Swarthout, his "Rose of the Rancho" co-star, at La Golondrina Cafe.

Molly Lamont, Phil Reed, Anne Shirley and John .Arledge, gayly costumed for Jackie Coogan party.

Romantic pairs at Palm Springs—Irene Hervey and Bob Taylor. Below, Shirley Ross and Henry Fonda.

Billie Burke and Will Rogers, Jr., at Rogers memorial dinner. Below, Madge Evans and Una Merkel.

Farewell-To-Elegance item: George Raft announces, possibly with a nostalgic tear in his eye, that he has given up the high-waisted trousers which have so long been identified with the Raft wardrobe. "Natty," which used to be a one-word description of all the Raft finery, has been deleted from George's dictionary and his tailors have been instructed to mold his future garments along more conservative lines. We, who always wondered how George got his hands in his pockets without breaking an arm, congratulate him on his momentous decision. Goodbye, fond memories of former splendor; so long, classy cuts and dreams of checkered magnificence; and a polite hello to a brave new—and awfully Bond Street—world!

* * *

Unfortunate indeed is the comeback attempt of Charlie Ray, America's Bashful Boy Friend of the silent—or good old—days. Time was when a Charlie Ray picture filled all the small-town opera houses of the land, and he was the ideal of every awkward youth in the country until he produced his ill-fated "Courtship of Miles Standish." His comeback picture, made by an independent company for very little money, is called, ironically enough, "Just My Luck." For Charlie's Glenda Farrell at Palm Springs.

Shearer goes to a preview.

Janet Gaynor and Freddie Bartholomew at Rogers memorial.

sake, we hope they change it.

■ ■ ■

Here's something brand new in Hollywood: Universal introduced Marta Eggerth, its continental singing star, at a dignified and highly enjoyable Sunday afternoon reception. Quietest party we've ever attended in Hollywood, due possibly to a set of Saturday night (Continued on page 103)

Be sure the laxative YOU take is mild enough for even a little child

HARSH cathartics are frowned upon. The laxative you take should be mild, gentle. It shouldn't cause strain and pain. Shouldn't leave you feeling weak afterwards.

The way to be absolutely sure is by taking the laxative that is gentle and mild enough even for little children. Such a laxative is Ex-Lax. Ex-Lax is given to more children than any other laxative. Yet with all its mildness and gentleness, Ex-Lax is effective enough for any adult. And you don't have to keep on increasing the dose to get results.

Take Ex-Lax yourself. Advise your husband to take it too. Give it to your children. It is the ideal laxative for every member of the family. 10c and 25c boxes on sale at any drug store. Get the genuine; spelled E-X-L-A-X.

GUARD AGAINST COLDS!... Remember these common-sense rules for fighting colds—get enough sleep, eat sensibly, dress warmly, keep out of drafts, keep your feet dry, and keep regular—with Ex-Lax, the delicious chocolated laxative.

MAIL THIS COUPON FREE!
EX-LAX, Inc., P.O. Box 170
Times-Plaza Station, Brooklyn, N. Y. MM26
Please send free sample of Ex-Lax.
Name..........
Address..........
(If you live in Canada, write Ex-Lax, Ltd., 736 Notre Dame St. W., Montreal)

When Nature forgets—remember

EX-LAX

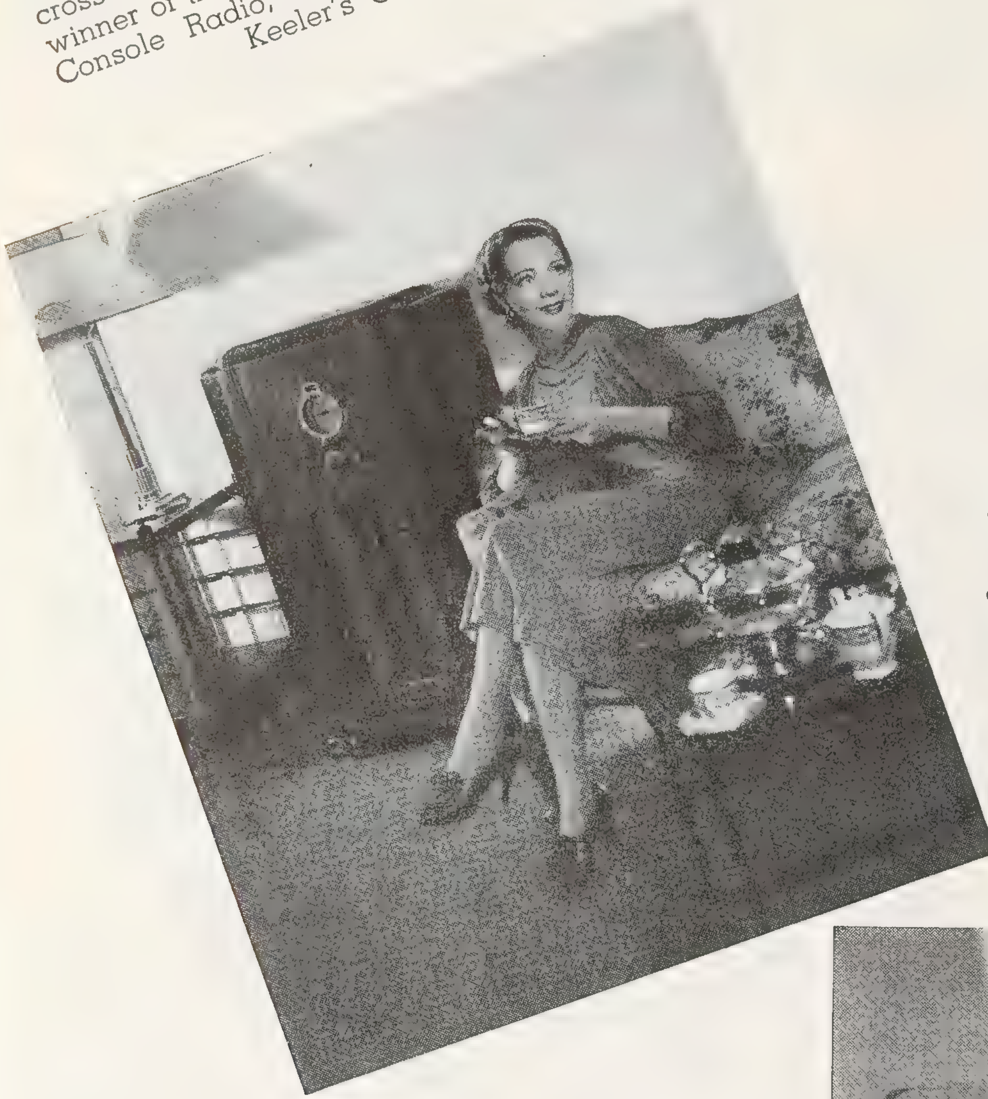
THE ORIGINAL CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

Tune in on "Strange as it Seems", new Ex-Lax Radio Program. See local newspaper for station and time.

Enter Ruby Keeler's

WIN A BIG PRIZE! IT'S

Modern Screen's fascinating new prize contest is more fun and less work than a cross-word puzzle. You may be the lucky winner of this new Crosley All Metal Tube Console Radio, the sixth prize in Ruby Keeler's Contest.



Prizes

- 1st—$400.00 in cash
- 2nd—$250.00 in cash
- 3rd—$200.00 in cash
- 4th—$150.00 in cash
- 5th—Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator
- 6th—The new Crosley All Metal Tube Console Radio
- 7th—Five prizes of 64-piece H & W China Dinner Sets
- 8th—Fifteen prizes of General Electric Hotpoint Portable Mixers
- 9th—Ten prizes of Buffeteer Toaster Service Sets

And who wouldn't want this up-to-the-minute Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator, which Ruby is busy filling with tasty food? This is the fifth prize in the contest.

IF you were going to have Ruby Keeler as your guest for dinner, what would you serve? Get out your pencils, you Modern Hostesses—and win a prize by answering this simple question in the spaces on the PRIZE MENU CARD.

There is just one rule you must observe. Every dish of your prize menu must begin with the initial given at the beginning of the line. We're giving you a filled-in menu card on page 18 to show you just what we mean.

You'll notice that the dishes appear according to the initial rather than in the order in which they would be served. You will also notice that one line has no initial, so that you can put in any dish you desire in that space. That will give you a chance to fill in your menu card so that you will have a complete and balanced meal—the sort of dinner you really would want to serve if you were entertaining such a charming guest.

When you have filled in your menu card with ten dishes (each beginning with the right initial, remember) write clearly at the bottom of (Continued on page 19)

Contest now . . .

EASY! PLAY HOSTESS TO THIS LOVELY STAR!

Contest Rules

1. On the next page you will find the Ruby Keeler prize menu. Fill in each of the blank spaces (those that are preceded by asterisks) with the name of some food or special dish beginning with the letter on that line. Your complete menu should provide a balanced and appetizing meal. Then, in the space at the bottom of the menu, give your reason in ten words or less for wishing to see Ruby Keeler in "Colleen."

2. The prizes will be awarded to the persons who submit the best menus, typewritten or printed in pencil, with all the correct spaces filled in, with each dish on the menu beginning with the specified letter, and who, in the opinion of the judges give the best reasons (in ten words or less) for wishing to see Ruby Keeler in "Colleen." Neatness will count.

3. The first prize is $400.00 in cash; the second prize $250.00; the third prize $200.00 and the fourth prize $150.00. The fifth prize is a Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator; the sixth prize the new Crosley All Metal Tube Console Radio. There are five 64-piece H & W China Dinner Sets as seventh prizes. There are fifteen General Electric Hotpoint Portable Mixers as eighth prizes. There are ten Buffeteer Toaster Service Sets as ninth prizes.

4. The contestants may submit as many entries as they choose, each entry to be accompanied by the menu card coupon on the following page. No correspondence can be entered into regarding letters submitted to this contest. All letters, upon receipt, will become the property of MODERN SCREEN Magazine.

5. The decision of the judges shall be final, and in case of ties duplicate prizes will be awarded.

6. No employees of MODERN SCREEN or members of employees' families are eligible to compete.

7. Send all entries to RUBY KEELER CONTEST, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. All entries must be mailed before midnight of April 15, 1936.

Another useful prize in this easy contest is the General Electric Hot Point Portable Mixer, fifteen of which will be distributed as eighth prizes. Get busy, folks!

This Buffeteer Toaster Service Set which Ruby Keeler is demonstrating is simply grand. Ten of these will be distributed to winners of the ninth prize in this contest.

Anyone would be delighted to own one of these sixty-four piece H & W China Dinner Sets. Enter the contest now—you may be the winner of one of the five China Sets which are being given away in Ruby Keeler's contest.

FILL IN THIS COUPON (PLEASE TYPEWRITE OR PRINT IN PENCIL) AND MAIL IT TO:

Editor, RUBY KEELER CONTEST,
MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

★R
U
★B
Y
★
K
★E
E
★L
E
★R

★C
O
★L
L
★E
E
★N

WHY I AM LOOKING FORWARD TO SEEING RUBY KEELER IN "COLLEEN"

Name
Street
City State

THIS IS A SAMPLE COUPON. YOURS SHOULD LOOK LIKE THIS WHEN YOU SEND IT TO:

Editor, RUBY KEELER CONTEST,
MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

★R ROLLS
U
★B BOUILLON
Y
★ GREEN PEAS (ANY INITIAL)
K
★E EGG AND SARDINE CANAPE
E
★L LEG OF LAMB, MINT SAUCE
E
★R RASPBERRY ICE

★C (CANNED) CORN PUDDING
O
★L LYONNAISE POTATOES
L
★E ENDIVE SALAD, ROQUEFORT DRESSING
E
★N NUTS AND RAISINS

WHY I AM LOOKING FORWARD TO SEEING RUBY KEELER IN "COLLEEN"
BECAUSE SHE IS MY FAVORITE TAP DANCER, AND SO PRETTY.
Name JANE SMITH
Street 99-22 BEVERLY AVE.
City BYRNETTE State IOWA

READ "THE MODERN HOSTESS" FOR FURTHER DETAILS

(Continued from page 16)

your menu—in ten words or less—"Why I'm looking forward to seeing Ruby Keeler in 'Colleen.'" Just state your reason simply (as we have illustrated on the sample menu card).

Of course, there are lots of reasons for wanting to see "Colleen." If you want to know more about them, just read our contest pages next month where you will find a description and pictures of "Colleen" which will be tremendously helpful in suggesting your answers.

Hard? Not a bit of it! Just study the sample menu, then fill out your menu in the same way—incorporating in it your own ideas of what would constitute an ideal meal to serve to Ruby.

Send in your menu suggestion NOW! Think it over and send in a better one next month. Write as many as you want, in fact, only be sure that a coupon accompanies each of your entries. And tell your friends about this wonderful contest, won't you? They'll enjoy it and they may have you to thank for winning one of the grand prizes.

And they really are grand—every one of them. The cash prizes are sure to arrive in time to gratify some cherished wish . . . a gay spring wardrobe, a nest egg for the summer vacation, a substantial down payment on a new car! The Crosley Refrigerator will thrill some lucky housewife and the Crosley Radio will bring perfect radio reception into your home.

The fortunate women who win the fine sets of china will be delighted with the dainty sprigs of flowers and narrow gold bands that decorate each of the sixty-four pieces.

And think of the time-saving features of owning one of those G. E. Portable Mixers; or visualize yourself presiding over the Buffeteer Toaster Tray—the sort of thing designed to make any meal a party and any party a success!

Those prizes certainly are worth trying for, aren't they? And here's a helpful hint for you! You will probably find the two "E"s and the two "L"s the hardest letters to fill in—so we suggest that you do them first, then build the rest of your menu around them. With these letters out of your way, you will discover that the rest is easy sailing—much like a cross-word puzzle when you have already filled in some of the words!

You can also get help and inspiration from the index of any good cook book. Here's the best news of all—at the end of "The Modern Hostess" article (a regular monthly feature of our magazine) you will see a Dictionary of Foods, Menu and Cooking Terms that will provide you with heaps of swell suggestions.

Van Raalte says:
"IVORY FLAKES keeps fine fabrics looking fine"
IVORY FLAKES

A three-minute date with Ivory Flakes will make your undies and sheer stockings wear longer! You see, if perspiration is allowed to linger, it attacks fine fabrics.

But if you think daily washings mean washed-out colors you've been using a too-strong soap! Change to pure Ivory Flakes—made from the same pure Ivory Soap that doctors advise for babies' tender skins.

Here's good advice from Van Raalte, makers of the famous Singlettes, "We heartily recommend frequent washings in cool Ivory Flakes suds for our lingerie, silk stockings and washable gloves because Ivory is pure—keeps colors and textures like new through many washings!"

CHIFFON-THIN FLAKES OF GENTLE IVORY SOAP $99^{44}/_{100}$ % PURE

The Modern Hostess

By Marjorie
Deen

Gene Raymond's enjoying a French Apple Pie with his coffee and, right, a special Lemon Pie.

Photo courtesy Kelloggs

YOU'LL HAVE to see "Seven Keys to Baldpate," Gene Raymond's first starring picture for RKO, to discover (with much laughter and many thrills) the secret of just why there were seven keys to that famous Inn; but meanwhile you can learn here that there are also Seven Keys to Perfect Pastry and Seven Signs of Pie Success! And those are secrets worth knowing, too!

I've often suspected that "the cakes that mother used to make" if judged by present-day standards might not live up to their reputation. But on the other hand I'm practically convinced that "the pies that mother used to bake" would cause today's daughters to turn green with envy! It's a darn shame, too, that's what it is, that we housewives have allowed ourselves to forget—if ever we knew—how to make the rich, flaky crusts and marvelous pie fillings for which preceding generations of cooks were so justly famed.

Come now, confess. Is it the mention of the legendary "pastry hand" that has scared you off? Or worse still, is it the memory of some dire failure in the past that has convinced you that baker's pie is plenty good enough so far as you're concerned?

Well, I've tasted some pretty good baker's pies in my time, I'll admit, but they certainly never seem to make the hit with the men folks that a home-baked product does. Because of this fact many restaurants try to serve pies which are as much like homemade pies as possible. And when they achieve that much-to-be desired feat you are sure to find men congregating there in large and enthusiastic numbers.

SUCH A restaurant is Hollywood's Brown Derby and there, sure enough, I found Gene Raymond eating pie! Which, as it happens, is my reason for featuring Gene's pie preferences in this article—that and the fact that I am sure there are thousands of women who would enjoy serving what Gene likes to eat at their own festive board.

Not that Gene was one bit enthusiastic over being quoted on the subject of food—by no means! For, you see, someone once said that

HOME MADE PIES MAKE A HIT WITH GENE

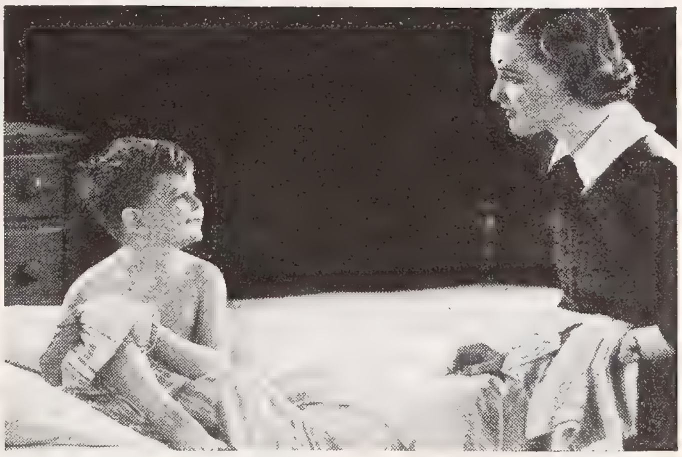
Gene was extremely partial to some such innocuous dessert as "Prune Whip." (Prune Whip! Perish the thought—I don't blame Gene for being furious.) Well, after the usually placid Mr. Raymond had recovered from his rage he declared in no uncertain terms that he'd never again allow any mention, however slight, of his food preferences. He couldn't very well deny that he liked pie, however, for on the day when we finally cornered him, Scotty, our demon cameraman, was on hand to take down the evidence on a photographic plate for posterity. Nor did it take much persuasion to get Gene to mention the various pies he likes. These he orders at the Brown Derby at luncheon time (where, as I told you before, the pies are superb) or eats them in his own home in Beverly Hills.

GENE lives in a Monterey Colonial style of house which he recently purchased for his Mother. This delightful lady divides her time between New York and California and great indeed is Gene's joy when she arrives for her Hollywood visits which last several months at a time. Naturally she assumes entire charge of the household while she is with Gene, but during her absences things still run smoothly under the competent management of a couple—a chauffeur-butler and cook-housekeeper. So you see that one of Hollywood's most attractive and confirmed bachelors enjoys a real home atmosphere in spite of his bachelorhood. And you can be sure that the Raymond cook knows how to bake excellent pies. It was to her, naturally, that I had to go to discover how to make the pies that Gene eats at home. And I'm delighted to report that it was the Brown Derby chef, himself, who told me how to make the special pie that Gene always orders at that justly famous spot.

AS IT happens, all these pies are Fruit Pies. But don't fall into the error of thinking that they are not seasonable during the winter months for that reason. Quite the contrary, because they call for such easily procured fruits as lemons, bananas, apples and rich, fruity mince meat. And the pie crusts themselves are as varied as the fillings.

The French Apple Pie is baked with a lattice top; but the individual Mince Meat Pies are fried and thereby take on a delicate brown tint and an entirely novel flavor. The Banana Cream Pie calls for a baked pastry shell, while the Lemon Pie, on the other hand, requires a visit to the refrigerator instead of the stove to achieve its (Continued on page 64)

HEY, MOM... D'YUH KNOW WHAT MRS. PALMER SAID ABOUT MY SHIRT?



"G'willikins! My shirt can't talk, Mom, but Mrs. Palmer said it tattles like anythin'."

"The trouble is, she said—your soap doesn't really wash clean. Your clothes wouldn't have tattle-tale gray, she said, if you'd only change to Fels-Naptha Soap."

(Few weeks later)

"Whe-e-e, Teddy! Mom's so tickled she's takin' me to the movies 'cause I told her how to get rid of tattle-tale gray."

"Who wouldn't be tickled! My clothes used to look as gray as a rain-cloud and now they're white as snow! It's wonderful the way Fels-Naptha's grand golden soap and lots of naptha get out every bit of dirt. Fels-Naptha is so gentle I use it for my finest silk things, too. And how nice it is to my hands!"

© 1936, FELS & CO.

Banish "Tattle-Tale Gray"
with FELS-NAPTHA SOAP!

Reading from top to bottom, Colbert as the siren Cleopatra, who bathed in milk to keep her body beautiful. Madame Du Barry, portrayed by Del Rio, sometimes chose wine for her bath. Karen Morley proves the charm of the old-fashioned girl. Mae West made moderns conscious of the Gay Nineties by means of make-up.

Beauty ADVICE

CLEOPATRA, DU BARRY AND MAE WEST APPRECIATE THE VALUE OF LURE

by Mary Biddle

IT IS true that make-up used to be considered risqué in grandmother's day, but nowadays when I hear mothers reproving their young daughters about lipstick, I wonder what the world is coming to! Of course, too much lipstick is taboo, but if a little is going to make a "teenster" happy, I can't see why the argument that "they didn't do it in mother's day" should still hold. Grandmother wore a "rat" to give her pompadour the proper swoop. If girls did that today, they would be accused of being artificial and unsanitary. Great-grandmother used to wear sawdust stuffed contraptions that were known as "false calves." They tied with tapes around the knees and ankles, and gave "shape" to legs that had no curves of their own. The modern daughter who swims and skates to mold her body would have a spasm over such things as false calves. (P.S. Do you need exercises for developing or reducing the legs? I have them for you.)

Beauty takes a hundred forms, depending on the time and the people, but more and more, science is getting under the skin. When you pat a rich lubricating cream around your eyes, you may be going through exactly the same motions that an ancient queen did when she noticed her first sign of crows' feet. The remains of past civilizations have provided evidence that the cosmetic art was well developed as long ago as 5000 B.C. But, then, those beauty secrets belonged only to the favored few. If we had lived then, you and I would probably have been left without so much as a perfume. Now all we have to do is to walk around the corner and buy a cream far superior to a costly unguent of the Cleopatra era. Today, beauty is not a luxury, it is a necessity!

AND THE fact that beauty has come to be regarded as such accounts for a great difference in the purity of cosmetics. When our grandmothers decided they knew better than Cleopatra, and that cosmetics were to be looked at askance, they didn't put the cosmetic business in very good repute. Naturally, whatever products were made then were concocted in a haphazard way with little regard for the safety of the users. Since that time cosmetics have come under the regulation of the Food and Drug Act, and any good product carries the guarantee of purity.

"Is it safe to use? Will you give me a formula so that I can make a cream of my own? Is such-and-such a brand good?" Those questions are consistently hurled at me, though the requests are fewer on the business of making "kitchen creams." It's surprising that anyone would want to fool around with a sticky mess when they have the assurance that modern creams are compounded under much more scientific conditions, more accurate measurements and workmanship, and more sanitary methods than could possibly be achieved in a kitchen by an "amateur."

As to whether a cream is good or safe to use, your brand name is your best guarantee there. A reputable, well advertised brand of cosmetics is a guarantee in itself. The manufacturer knows that his business depends upon the satisfactory results his product achieves, so surely he is going to bend every effort toward making that product meritorious and improving it in every possible way. The day of the dangerous cosmetic is passed, except where quacks are concerned. And there are quack get-rich-quick folks in any line of business. Even Hollywood is wise enough not to attempt making its own cosmetics.

WELL, HERE we are going scientific in this month of parties. In the light of Valentine's Day, remember the old proverb that beauty is a woman's mightiest weapon and her strongest defense.

If you were one of those forlorn little girls who never got many valentines, but whose pretty sister rated many, you'll be glad to know that Claudette Colbert wasn't any Cleopatra at sixteen either. In her recent films, Claudette has been busy proving that you can marry your boss, or any "Mr. Right," if you use the right tactics. She has never had a more alluring role than Cleopatra, when she turned from playing the sweet, young thing to the business of being a siren.

CLEOPATRA was the most famous exponent of the cosmetic art. She used green paint on her eyelids and applied black pigment to her eyelids, lashes and eyebrows and henna coloring to her finger nails and palms. She bathed in milk. (DuBarry sometimes chose wine for her bath.) Modern Cleopatras use green eyeshadow, too, and black mascara, and henna-colored finger-nail polish. But they drink milk instead of bathing in it. Milk diets (see coupon) are a modern means of acquiring slim or rounded silhouettes and clear complexions. Claudette had to drink milk to gain weight for her role in "Cleopatra." And more than one Hollywood star uses milk as a facial.

Of course you remember that Dolores Del (Continued on page 90)

"It's thrilling to see your skin grow

Lovelier and Lovelier"

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

It's thrilling to see your skin grow lovelier and lovelier—week after week—under Camay's perfect care.

Sincerely yours,

Ellen Conger Fernandes

November 2, 1935 (Mrs. Sim Fernandes Jr.)

This smiling lady is Ellen Conger Fernandes—slender, graceful and lovely to look at! But above all, she possesses a skin that meets the most trying test of a fine complexion—clear, youthful, enchanting even without a trace of make-up. And for that loveliness, she gives first and major credit to Camay.

You, too, will find—practically as soon as you start with Camay—new youthfulness and loveliness coming to your skin. You'll gradually become aware of a new smoothness, an exquisite freshness, a finer texture! This very day, convince yourself that Camay is a real and dependable beauty aid. Its price is so low you'll want to order at least a half-dozen cakes today.

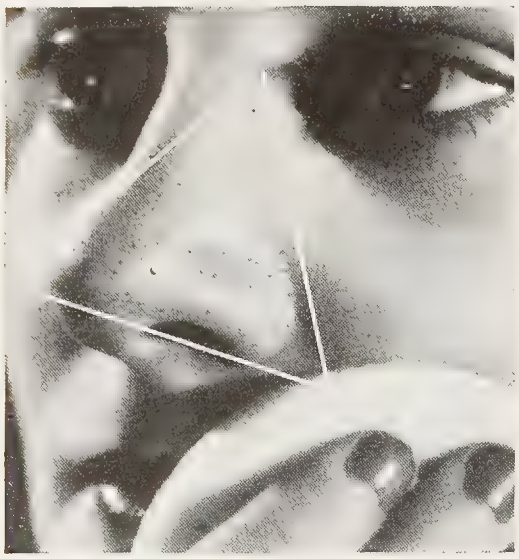
Let Camay bring your loveliness to light.

CAMAY
THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN
CAMAY
CAMAY

CAMAY

The Soap of Beautiful Women

How to combat
CONSPICUOUS SHINY NOSE
LARGE PORES, FLOURY BLOTCHES



6,000,000 women find Luxor Face Powder shine-proof!

● Conspicuous nose! Ugly large pores! Unsightly skin shine! Of course you don't want them. Then use the face powder 6,000,000 women find combats skin-moisture—Luxor, the moisture-proof powder.

Every face gives off skin moisture. Most of all, around the nose where glands are highly active and skin-moisture waits in each pore opening to mix with face powder. To cause shine, clogged pores, floury blotches.

So change at once to Luxor. It won't even mix with water in a glass, as you can easily prove for yourself. Therefore, it won't mix with similar moisture on your skin, as a trial will quickly demonstrate.

Luxor comes in many smart new shades, blended by scientists in our laboratories to flatter blondes, brunettes and in-betweens with gorgeous, natural effect. It bears the Seal of Good Housekeeping Institute because Luxor does all we claim and is wonderfully pure.

Insist on Luxor by name and get

FREE! 2 drams of $3 perfume

A sophisticated, smart French scent, La Richesse. Sells regularly at department stores for $3 an ounce. An enchanting gift to win new friends for Luxor. Powder and perfume together for the price of Luxor powder alone.

55c Luxor

Coupon brings 4-piece make-up kit!

Luxor Hand Cream Softens Like Magic

A marvelous cream guaranteed non-sticky! Amazing new skin-softener for hands. Keeps them soft, white, smooth. At all cosmetic counters.

LUXOR, LTD., 1335 W. 31st Street
Chicago, Illinois J-1

Please send me your 4-piece make-up kit including generous amount of Luxor Moisture-Proof Powder, Luxor Rouge, Luxor Special Formula Cream and Luxor Hand Cream. Here is 10c to help cover mailing. (Offer not good in Canada). Check,

POWDER: Rose Rachel ☐ Rachel ☐ Flesh ☐
ROUGE: Radiant ☐ Medium ☐ Sunglow ☐ Pastel ☐ Vivid ☐ Roseblush ☐

Name ....
Address ....
City ....

Between You 'n' Me

$5 PRIZE LETTER
The "Short Subjects" Problem

This is a plea to the studios to please relieve us of what they confidently bill as comedies. It is bad enough to have to sit through the ads, home talent demonstrations, serials and lessons in golf in order to see the feature picture, but when one of the so-called comedies (Our Gang and Thelma Todd-Patsy Kelly excepted) flashes on the screen, and we must go through a series of chasing games, house destruction, pie-throwing, barbaric battles, clothes-tearing and other forms of animal activities, it is almost too much for human endurance.

Perhaps the alleged comedies are thrown in to make the rest of the program seem better, but a really good feature needs no such contrast to display its merits.—E. D. H., Fort Smith, Arkansas.

$1 PRIZE LETTER
Fed Up On Glamor

For some time now I have been very much "fed up" on the high-powered stories and articles depicting the glamorous qualities of such stars as Garbo, Crawford and Dietrich. Glamorous they may be, but to me it seems a sort of artificial, unnatural, even unhealthy glamor.

After seeing, some time ago, a lovely, entertaining picture titled, "Accent on Youth," I hereby nominate my choice for the number one glamor girl of the screen, Sylvia Sidney.

Here is true, unadulterated glamor. Here is a lovely, natural, human appeal—she might be one's own sister, or next door neighbor—not a goddess whom we may worship from afar, but not approach. You can feel her appeal in every look, every move she makes, from those dark eyes to that utterly enchanting, breathtakingly sweet smile. Here is lovely womanhood personified.—Gail H. Grenier, Jamestown, N. D.

You get a mild idea what this gent thinks of comedy and short subject fillers-in.

MOVIE
TO-DAY COMEDIES

$1 PRIZE LETTER
One Fan to Another

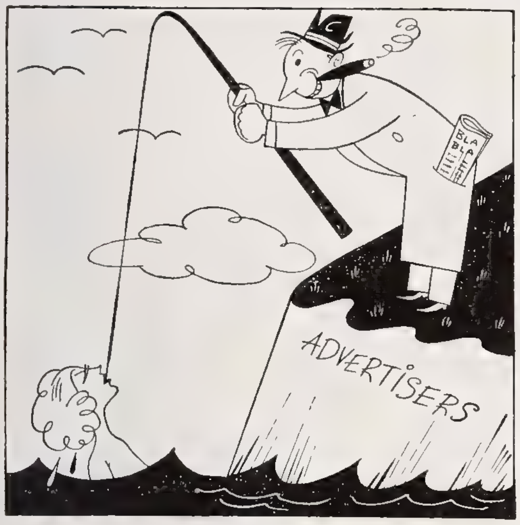
Having read the letter signed "Just Me," in the December issue, I can't help wondering why anyone should choose to vent their spleen on such an inoffensive person as Herbert Marshall. If "Just Me" knew anything about him he could not possibly find it in his heart to be so cruel and tactless as to call poor Bart a "walking flagpole." (The heartbreaking souvenir of his war-time heroism is a wooden leg, you know.) As for "conceited airs," if you, "Just Me," were blessed with one atom of Mr. Marshall's culture, refinement and finer sensibilities, you would know better than to confuse his modest self-assurance and unfailing poise, which is the very essence of good breeding, with conceit.

OH, BOY!
OH, BOY!

"Just Me," whose letter appeared in December issue, got penned spankings from many.

And now for your amazing objection to Marshall's so-o-o perfect vocabulary. If you mean to imply that his impeccable diction makes you uncomfortably aware

Write a letter and win a cash prize! Motion pictures offer a wide field for discussion. We want your criticisms, pro and con, on films, players, or any phase of movies that interests you. Ten dollars in prizes will be awarded each month for the six most interesting letters submitted—1st prize, $5; five 2nd prizes of $1 each. Be sure to send your full name and address. Modern Screen reserves the right to publish letters in whole or in part. Address: Between You and Me, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.



The female population is accused of aping stars' fashions blindly because of ballyhoo.

of your own lack of conversational grace, then I sympathize with you. However, we who admire Mr. Marshall agree that his exquisite speaking voice is an index to the irresistible appeal of his ideally charming personality. Many of our native American examples of overrated sex appeal and exaggerated histrionic ability would do well to absorb a little of the gentility of this most modest of reel and real heroes.—Gretchen Weiss, Long Island, N. Y.

$1 PRIZE LETTER
Miss Morning Glory

Jean Parker reminds me of a statue that was made to represent life and all that is beautiful. Her face signifies sincerity and sweetness. As a young actress, I believe that she has achieved the secret of expression that only one other actress has lived and she is Garbo. I might say orchids to Jean, but that would not express just what I feel, for to me she is a morning glory, fresh with the morning dew. Superb is her acting, lovely is Jean Parker and I believe that everyone who has seen her will feel as I do about her.—Marcelle, Milwaukee, Wis.

$1 PRIZE LETTER
Fair Sex Gullible?

A letter in the December issue signed "B. B., Poughkeepsie" said that "thousands of girls are dependent on Joan Crawford's pictures to give them ideas on how to

(Continued on page 95)

AFRAID?

"I'm so scared" . . . "I don't dare dance!" . . . Never again need those fears haunt you. A new kind of sanitary napkin is here. Modess—the one and only napkin that is certain-safe! The napkin that stays soft—stays safe!

JOIN THE CROWD WITHOUT A FEAR!

Yes—you're truly safe—with Certain-Safe Modess. No striking through!—as with reversible napkins. No soggy edges! For Modess has a specially treated material on sides and back. Wear the blue line on moisture-proof side away from the body—and complete protection is yours.

Modess
This is the New Modess its "CERTAIN-SAFE"

End "accident panic" —ask for Certain-Safe
Modess!

Try N-O-V-O—the new safe douche powder. Cleansing! Deodorizing! (Not a contraceptive.)
(At your druggist or department store)

THE KING OF CASTS in the picture that's THE KING OF LAUGHTER...DRAMA...SONG!

KING OF BURLESQUE

GLORIOUS SONG HITS including
'SPREADING RHYTHM AROUND'
'SHOOTIN' HIGH'
'LOVELY LADY'
'TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE'
'I LOVE TO RIDE THE HORSES
ON THE MERRY-GO-ROUND'

THE FIRST GREAT MUSICAL ROMANCE OF 1936
..ablaze with color..crowded with the drama
of a wonder-world you've never seen before!

WARNER BAXTER
Even greater than in "42nd STREET"
ALICE FAYE
JACK OAKIE
ARLINE JUDGE ★ MONA BARRIE
GREGORY RATOFF ★ DIXIE DUNBAR
FATS WALLER ★ NICK LONG, Jr.
KENNY BAKER

A Fox Picture
Associate Producer Kenneth Macgowan • Directed by Sidney Lanfield • From a story by Vina Delmar

20th CENTURY FOX

Portraits

She's so beautiful that you wouldn't dream that she started her operatic career by singing all the old witch and hag roles available, would you? Gladys Swarthout refutes that old idea that you have to be hefty to be a top-notch operatic star. Svelte and more than lovely to look at, she is the latest recruit from the Metropolitan to take Hollywood in her stride. Already she has "Rose of the Rancho" and "Give Us This Night" to her credit.

Here's a trio that will be charming you in new pictures during the forthcoming month. No need to even say "left to right," for who could confuse Jeanette MacDonald's gay smile with that of anyone else? Jeanette is busy singing the beautiful music of "Rose Marie" with Nelson Eddy. They'll do a duet of "Indian Love Call"! Is that enough to sell you? Then Robert Taylor, the chap who has sprinted through the usual toddling stages of Hollywood success. Bob and Irene Hervey are playing tag with love. At this writing it's on again. He's been cast with Janet Gaynor in "Small Town Girl." As for Marian, the beautiful ski jumper, this oldest Marsh sister had to make a flock of pictures abroad before her home cinema town gave her a tumble. Now she's so popular that a strenuous sport like this is positive repose! Marian's in "No More Yesterdays," Ruth Chatterton's next picture. Incidentally, Eddie Lowe is her most devoted swain and they say it may be love.

Miriam Hopkins is pretty fickle about her off-screen romances but, cinematically speaking, she's constant to just one, Joel McCrea! Paired for "Splendor," they're together again in "These Three." Incidentally, this particular picture catches all the individual sparkle and charm of the gal, don't you think? Paul Kelly has a knack of making his screen thugs such likeable fellows that the audience files out thinking it's too bad that that nice Kelly man couldn't have had a better break! Paul will do "The Song and Dance Man" next and it sounds like a new type of role for him.

WANT TO HAVE FUN?
THEN DON'T MISS
THESE TWO SWELL PICTURES

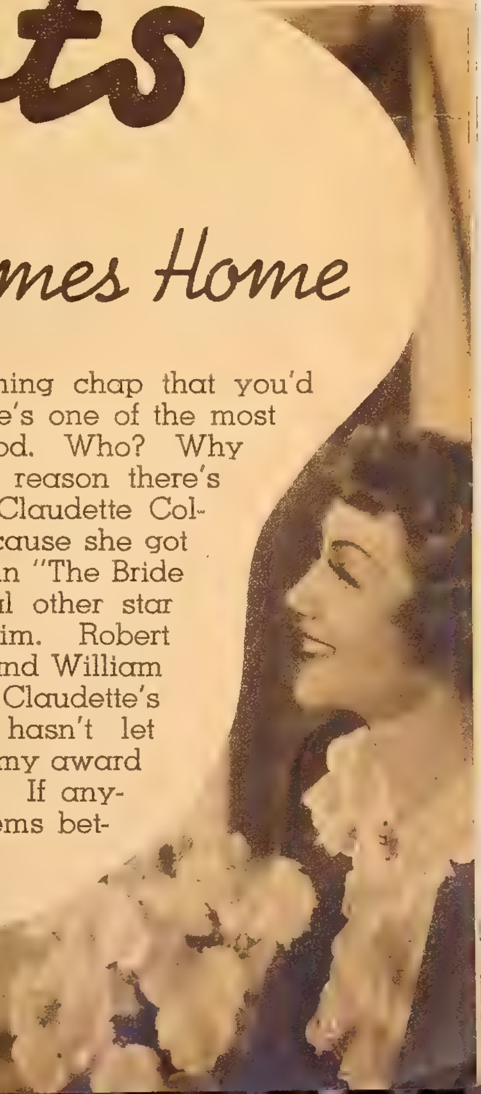
Preview Shots

Anything Goes

All other production practically came to a standstill at Paramount while the "Anything Goes" gang were in action. Such crazy goings-on what with Bing Crosby and Ethel Merman singing and trying to out-gag each other and Charlie Ruggles being hunted as "Public Enemy 13" on account of he is a gangster all done up as a bishop. Don't think that this is giving the plot away—there's more, reels more of it. Even though you've hummed and sung Cole Porter's swell tunes, you'll get a new kick out of Bing's and Ethel's duetting of "You're the Tops." And there's "I Get a Kick Out of You," too, which sounds too grand done in the best Crosby croon. Need we say more to convince you that it's the tops, with many new tunes, loads of fun and beauteous gals? You can take it from us, it's grand entertainment.

The Bride Comes Home

He's such a quiet, unassuming chap that you'd never know from him that he's one of the most pursued men about Hollywood. Who? Why Fred MacMurray. And the reason there's such a triumphant glint in Claudette Colbert's eyes these days is because she got him for her sparring partner in "The Bride Comes Home" when several other star gals were shouting for him. Robert Young is the "other" fellow and William Collier, Sr., is the latest of Claudette's screen fathers. Claudette hasn't let winning of last year's Academy award slow up her dramatic pace. If anything, every new picture seems better than the last.



(Adv't)

The true story behind

Loretta Young's illness

by Dorothy Spensley

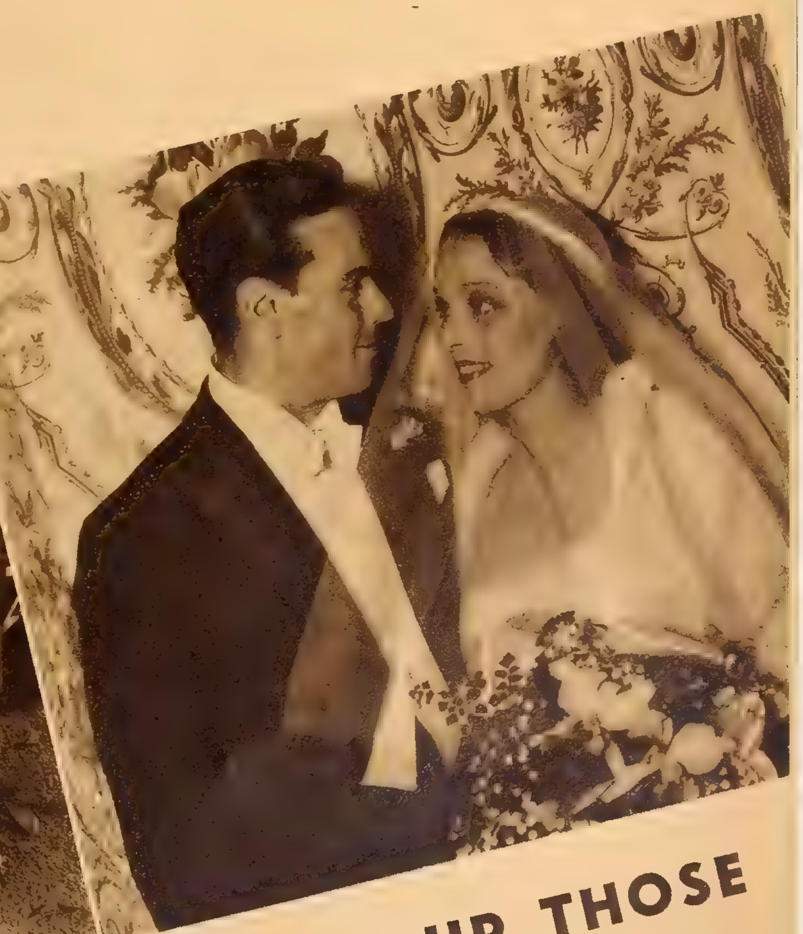
IN THE huge bed in her boudoir lay Loretta Young. Hands lax on the satin comforter, lips parted, a smile in her eyes, and perhaps a tear, she lay motionless waiting for the words of the simple Catholic marriage ritual to drift up the curving stairway of her white Colonial house.

Before the living-room fireplace, white with carnations, lilies and gardenias, Sally Blane, her sister, was being made the wife of Norman Foster. She was dressed in a sheer, cream-colored velvet dress with square neckline and corded trimming, and a short Juliet veil covered her face. There was the slow, heavy music of the Wedding March, Alan Campbell, the best man, who temporarily lost the ring, Sally's tears falling unashamed, the groom's laugh that broke the tenseness, the handsome priest, Norman's father and mother, the Young girls' mother, Mrs. George Belzer, Sally's sister, Polly Ann, Sally's half-sister, the eleven-year-old Georgiana Belzer, the thirty guests, and the exciting wedding supper . . . all these things were lost to Loretta Young, lying ill in the upper room of the lovely home that her success and money have made possible.

Too ill to join in the festivities, with a nurse at hand to see that the excitement on the lower floor was not too stimulating for her patient, Loretta Young was fighting one of the biggest battles of her career. It wasn't the battle for film success, which came with comparative ease, but it was a fight with an enemy so relentless that it caused her family and her friends the gravest concern.

WHEN LORETTA finished the co-starring role with Charles Boyer in "Shanghai," she had her trunks ready for a dash across the continent, a national network appearance in New York, and a trip to Europe. Because she was young (she will be twenty-three years old on January sixth), full of life, eager for the excitement of travel, the exhilaration of new contacts, she and her mother set out upon their holiday. She should have stayed at home and used the strength she was giving to entertainment toward the building up of her body. Sensitive, taut-nerved, for years she had made one picture after another, with not more than a few days' rest between finishing one film and beginning the next. Producers were avid for her screen services. Cecil DeMille (Continued on page 84)

(Left) Loretta Young is waging the bitterest battle of her career—a fight for her health. (Below) The Youngs, a 1936 Louisa M. Alcott family—Sally Blane Foster, Loretta, their mother and Polly Ann. (Right) The newly married Norman Foster and Sally Blane.



HERE ARE FACTS WHICH CLEAR UP THOSE RUMORS YOU'VE HEARD ABOUT THIS LOVELY GIRL

Telling Tales on Fred

by Nanette Kutner

THE FRIENDS AND CO-WORKERS OF HIS BROADWAY SHOW DAYS GIVE SIDELIGHTS ON ASTAIRE

FRED ASTAIRE has big feet. He used to dress collegiate. His hobby is composing music. When things go wrong, he cries like a baby, and his nickname is "Moaning Minnie!"

That's only the beginning of this Broadway profile, the combined stories of those who have worked close to Astaire.

First, George Gershwin, who knew him over fifteen years ago, when Gershwin was "that hot piano player at Remicks," and Fred Astaire, a hoofer trying to get a break.

"Freddie always had a swanky walk," said Gershwin. "He didn't dress the way he does now. He was collegiate, and wore a funny little round hat.

"He and his sister, Adele, were in the Sunday night vaudeville shows at 'The Winter Garden.' In those days they couldn't open their mouths. They just danced.

"I'll never forget Fred walking up to me and saying, 'Sometime I'd like to be in a regular show and have you write the music.' Later, with 'Lady, Be Good,' and 'Funny Face,' his wish came true.

"Right from the start Freddie knew exactly what he wanted. He had no outside interests. He was intent on becoming just what he became—a top musical comedy star. Take his singing. He wanted to sing, but in the early days his voice wasn't so good. Since then it has developed tremendously. He has wonderful judgment. His instinct for low-class rhythm songs is unfailing. He can always tell what will be a hit.

"I think his mother is largely responsible for Freddie's charm and culture. The big thing he has done is to bring drawing-room manners to gutsy dancing.

"He was one of the few vaudeville actors taken up by society. He wanted that. Why, with his first money he bought something that only the wealthiest can afford

Claire Luce

Carl Randall

Dorothy Stone

George Gershwin

Ginger Rogers and Fred

—a race horse in England.

"Freddie has a swell sense of humor. He used to do an imitation of John Charles Thomas singing a jazz song called, 'I'd Rather Charleston.' He did this with every inflection of the concert singer, but without the voice.

"HE CALLED his sister 'Funny Face.' They fought just as all performers fight. Adele knew Freddie's dancing ideas were invariably right, but she held out for her point until she made him so sore they would fly at each other.

"Once, while he was staging a dance, I saw him become so exasperated that he burst into tears and cried like a baby! You see," Gershwin quickly added, "he was so anxious to have it right.

"I haven't seen Freddie since he's been in Hollywood, but I've been approached to write one of his next pictures. The deal isn't set yet. All I can say is that I'd like to work with him again." And thus concluded Mr. Gershwin.

I next tackled Claire Luce, that striking looking blonde who played opposite Fred Astaire when "The Gay Divorcee," was a stage production called "The Gay Divorce."

Miss Luce was sailing for London that night. She was in a hurry. So we talked over the telephone.

"Fred takes his work very seriously. Sometimes a step of mine would be a little off, and he'd notice it. Every evening he came to the theater early and practiced. He'd sprinkle resin all over the stage and used so much of it that the stage looked like a barn, and it became a standing joke that the place was messed up from Fred's private rehearsals.

"When things went wrong, he'd break down completely." Miss Luce paused. "Wait, I have Adele Astaire's former maid, Cynthia, maybe she can give you something."

Said Cynthia. "Mr. Astaire, say, he used to jump right out of bed in the morning and start in dancing!"

Back came Miss Luce. "And he loved to sit down at the piano and try to make up tunes."

I wondered if they were bad tunes.

"Probably," said Miss Luce.

TOM WEATHERLY, who, with Dwight Deere Wiman, produced "The Gay Divorce," told me Fred Astaire is an excellent business man.

"He handles his own affairs, (Continued on page 60)

Fred Astaire is a true artist, unanimously claim those who worked with him.

HOLLYWOOD'S MOST OUT-SPOKEN STAR TALKS BACK TO YOU GIRLS WITH BIG JOB AMBITIONS!

WOMEN WITH careers should be shot on sight," said Bette Davis to me. We were lunching at that spot de luxe, the Vendome. Bette was wearing a brown tailored suit, a white shirt and a bright green hat of the type called "knowing."

Bette said, crisply, "I am about to break down and reveal to you the most carefully concealed secret in my unsecretive young life. For that I have no secrets is the truth. If I committed a murder, I would give a progressive dinner so that I could go about, from course to course, telling about it!

"I take myself to pieces, mentally, once every week. There's a room in my house especially set apart for this vivisectional purpose. It is a bare, little room in the back of nowhere. In it is one chair, stiff

"WOMEN WITH CAREERS SHOULD BE SHOT!"

Says Bette Davis to Gladys Hall

and uncomfortable — very moral. There are neither pictures on the walls, nor rugs on the floor. There is nothing in this drab self-confessional to take my mind off myself. I call it my 'deflation room.' I puncture my own ego. It takes the place of a good, old fashioned spanking.

"If I have been publicized as being 'so natural' and 'without affectation or conceit,' I have this little room to thank for it—so has the public.

"When I am alone with myself there is nothing left of la actress. I strip off all the powder, paint, and lipstick. I remove all of the publicity bunkum. And when I am done, I stand revealed (rather skinny) as what I was designed to be and what I ought to be—a wife, a woman, a mother.

"What I mean is this," said Bette, in her incisive way, "I have no business to be an actress. By the same token Lady Astor has no business to be a politician, nor Grace Moore to be an opera singer, and so on. We wimmin, in short, should not be anything other than that for which Nature ordained us when she created us female, not male.

WOMEN CAN'T cross the biological line, let them protest and 'prove themselves' to the world as they may. If they do cross that line, they become—monstrosities!

"I am a monstrosity. I know that. I admit it to myself, there in the silence.

"No woman should have a career. Which brings me back to my original statement that all careerist women should be shot. The instant a girl child manifests a talent for anything, other than making fudge or minding the baby, her parents should get down the gat.

"Women with careers harm their men far more cruelly than themselves. The thing they do to men is—murder.

"I'm entirely serious. I've read, we've all read, hundreds of controversial articles in women's magazines about 'Woman Versus a Career,' 'Can Women Have Careers and Motherhood?' etc, etc. They can't—they can—and so it goes.

"Famous women in all the arts and professions have been interviewed on the subject. Some have said one thing, some another. Most of them have begged the question, have compromised.

"Well, Nature doesn't beg the question and neither do I. At the risk of having my sister women stampede me, I declare that women not only cannot have careers and a domestic life at the same time but—they should not be permitted to. I'm tired of reading and hearing a lot of twiddle-twaddle on this subject with no one coming out and telling the truth.

"I feel more strongly on this particular subject than on any other in the world. I've been bursting to speak my mind. I may be shot for doing it, but it will be worth it.

"You might well say to me, 'Well, if you feel this way about it, why don't you stop? Why don't you cancel your contract, stay at home and keep house for Harmon? No one is compelling you to be an actress, are they?'

"No, no one is compelling me. The compulsion comes from within myself. Once caught up in the toils of a career, you just don't stop, that's all. It's like being a drug addict, striving to eject from your system the deadly virus that has entered it.

UP THERE in my little room I say to myself, 'What are you getting out of it? Are you thrilled and pleased with the work you do? Do you get sound creative satisfaction from the things you do? Do you think to yourself that you're pretty good?'

"And my honest answer to these questions is—NO. I've never yet been satisfied with anything I've done. I've never been able to pat my own shoulder blade and say, 'Well, you did it this time, my girl!' No, not even in 'Human Bondage.' I've never had the feeling that I gave all that I could have. And then, there was the fear of being typed, of having to play nasty little hussies for the rest of my life. I think I've escaped from everlasting typing. Warner Brothers have come through for me in that respect. But I also know that cycles come and go and just because I'm not worrying about studio conditions, today, doesn't say that I won't be tomorrow.

(Cont'd on page 73)

(Above, left to right) "Lily Pons meet Henry Fonda," introduced their director of "I Dream Too Much." "Now suppose you two hop into bed. . . ." Next, if Alice Brady only had been permitted to fall on her elbow in "Lady Tubbs." But she wasn't! Basil Rathbone was ready to sacrifice a fine role in "David Copperfield" because he was forced to beat Freddie Bartholomew.

They hated to do it!

by Muriel Babcock

DID YOU ever wonder how Jimmy Cagney felt about smacking that grapefruit right in Mae Clarke's shining orbs? Did you ever stop to think how he rated himself as a person when he kicked pretty Margaret Lindsay, wham! as she stood with her back to him?

Did you ever stop to consider how many things stars have to do in the course of earning their daily bread—like you and me—that they positively hate themselves for doing, things that they dislike doing intensely, that do not fit in with their characters, and which sometimes make them not only cringe with embarrassment, but really ill at the tummy?

These things, you say, are all a part of the stiff routine that is Hollywood behind the cameras. They are all a part of the work that must be done if Life (spelled with a capital L), which is often grim, often cruel, often unpleasant, is to be put on the screen in realistic fashion.

YES, I know, but don't fool yourself. The more seasoned the trouper, the more sentimental a softie he is at heart! The worse he feels when he has to do something mean and horrible, and possibly vulgar, as a part of his screen characterization. He doesn't just toss a dirty deed over his shoulder, and walk away. It hurts him. And it hurts deep.

I've been around Hollywood half a dozen years now and I never saw a sicker man than Basil Rathbone when he had to slap down little Freddie Bartholomew in "David Copperfield." Rathbone was tickled pink at getting such a fine part in such a fine picture. He needed a role like this. But when he read the script and realized what a beating he had to give Freddie, he went to David Selznick, the producer, and tried to beg off his contract. "I can't do a horrible thing like that to a child, even if it is only in acting," Rathbone said. "It will not only, deep down in his subconscious mind, make the boy hate me, but I will hate myself so."

HOWEVER, they argued Rathbone back into the role. But on the night before the scene was to be photographed, he couldn't sleep and on the day of its taking, wisecrackers on the set who had been amused at his tremendous antipathy for the scene, began to feel sorry for him. They watched him

Joan Crawford in her not-so-long-ago lace teddy days. From "Our Blushing Brides."

How do you suppose Jimmy Cagney felt about slapping Mae Clarke in "Public Enemy"? You're perfectly right.

BIG SCENES YOU APPLAUDED WERE NOT SO AMUSING TO THEIR PLAYERS

smoke one cigarette after another, pace up and down, and finally when he did hit Freddie, do it in such a sissy fashion that they had to take the scene all over again. Well, after all, if a man really treated a child with such physical violence in this day and age, people would be so horrified that they'd slap him in jail!

Joan Crawford originally objected to playing "Dancing Lady" because it harked back to the lace teddy era, when she made "Our Blushing Brides" and films of that ilk, and her show-girl days. It is said she didn't want to skid around the screen in satin pants. She didn't think it became her dignity as a woman or her standing as a star. Well, one thing for which all screen stars have to thank Mr. Joseph Breen and the censorship campaign is that they don't have to do those "undress" roles which, once-upon-a-time, all producers simply adored.

Which reminds me of Jean Harlow's indignation and fury at Howard Hughes when she was just getting launched on her screen career. I am told she yanked the telephone out of the wall and threw it at Mr. Hughes, just grazing his ear.

Now, Miss Harlow is not a temperamental individual. She keeps her temper and is known as a regular person. But this was during the days that (Continued on page 74)

Fred and Lilian Lamonte, the other half of a trial engagement. His new picture is "The Bride Comes Home," with Claudette Colbert.

Trial engagement

FRED MacMURRAY CAN'T SEE STARS—ONLY HIS BEST GIRL, LILIAN!

by Dorothy Donnell

IT MAKES me kind of mad, mildly remarked the boy from Beaver Dam, clenching his teeth hard against a briar pipe stem, "the way some of the writers keep hinting we're secretly married. When I marry my Lilian, probably next spring, I won't hide it—say, I'll tell everybody that will listen! Trouble is," he groped for expression (words aren't Fred MacMurray's strong point), "Hollywood just can't understand anybody that doesn't do things its way. Back where I come from, people don't think it's so unusual if a fellow goes with the same girl two and a half years. That isn't even a long engagement in Beaver Dam."

The perspiration sprang out on his forehead with the agonies of self-revelation. He tugged at his pipe, as if to draw inspiration through the great clouds of smoke. When he emptied it, he immediately jabbed in fresh solace with a nervous thumb. I've talked with the shyest of the movie lads, from Ronald Colman to Maurice Chevalier, who once sat through a whole luncheon without uttering a syllable, but they were all garrulous compared with this tall Scotch boy from Wisconsin whom every woman star in Hollywood is asking for as a screen lover. When he isn't wooing them before the camera—in that off-hand, nonchalant fashion which has caught the public's fancy—he invariably calls them all "Ma'am."

"Glad my acting looks natural and easy the way they say," Fred told me, "it's really just my being scared to death. I guess I'm not exactly what you might call sentimental. Lilian always says, when we come out from seeing one of my pictures, 'Why don't you ever say nice things like that to me?' Sometimes," he confessed, "I even forget to bring her a corsage when we're going to a dance. I'm afraid I make a better lover on the screen than off. You see, till I met her, I didn't have much practise taking girls out. All the time I was in college I never had a date."

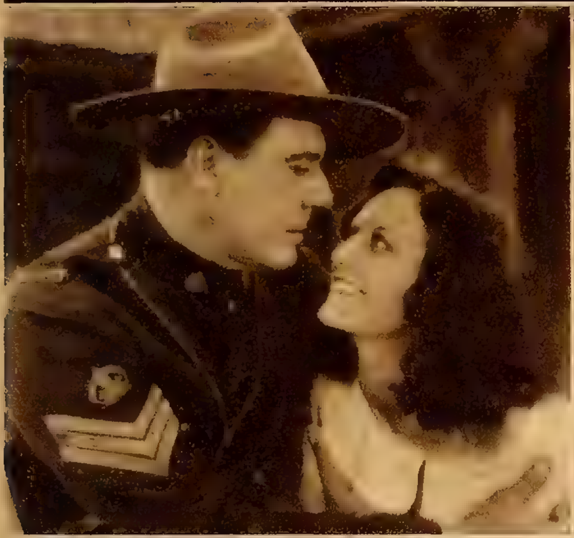
That last blunt sentence tells more about Fred MacMurray than all the fine writing in the world. A dark youngster, tooting a saxophone in the band—a handsome baritone, crooning with the Glee Club—a husky football player carrying the ball down the field for Dear Ol' Carroll—and not a date! It tells a good deal, by inference, about his Lilian, too. The romance between them is Hollywood's most unknown love story. And I think it's the sweetest. I am very certain it's the strangest.

In this day of careless courtships, after-a-party elopements to Yuma, after-another-party trips to Reno, an engagement that has lasted two and a half years has a quaintly old-fashioned sound. O. Henry might have written the story of the shy, broad-shouldered boy who came from a small town to the big city to play with a comedy collegiate band, in a Broadway revue. And of the pretty girl from the South who worked (Continued on page 86)

-TODAY

In '21 Doug Fairbanks and Mary MacLaren in "The Three Musketeers."

Fifteen years later, Walter Abel and Margot Grahame revive the roles.



Crawford and House Peters in "Rose Marie" of '28. In '25 Vilma Banky and Colman in "Dark Angel."

Today's "Rose Marie" with Eddy and MacDonald. Below, March and Oberon as the "Angel" lovers.

AND NOW EACH FINDS VOICE IN MODERN VERSIONS

Success — A LA CROSBY

by Helen Louise Walker

WOULD YOU DARE TO PLAY TAG WITH YOUR JOB THE WAY BING DOES? NEITHER WOULD WE!

MOST SUCCESSFUL actors have had some definite ambition, some goal, some plan of life. Circumstances or their own limitations may have frustrated them, altering their courses sometimes, but they have known, if not where they were going, at least where they wanted to go. But Bing Crosby's career seems to have just happened to him, like measles. He has broken every copy book maxim for success and neither his growing maturity nor professional eminence seem to have improved him one bit. He is, if anything, growing worse!

You doubtless know the story of how, at an early age, he set out from Spokane for Los Angeles to try to get a job pounding his beloved drum . . . and how he ran out of money before he arrived and had to sell the drum. So there he was, broke and drum-less. But a job caught up with him anyhow . . . and that's the way things have gone for Bing.

As for his present business and professional methods—well, he recently sold his Toluca Lake place to Al Jolson as a home for Ruby Keeler's mother. He promised to vacate the property by the first of October. But he didn't because, he averred, he couldn't find another house big enough to accommodate two careers, three young sons, a brace of nurses and the sizable staff of servants he maintains.

At this writing the Crosby family is, to all intents and purposes, homeless. They are living in Ruby Keeler's mother's house and, I must say, Mrs. Keeler is being pretty nice about it. But what if she should decide to turn them out into the California climate at this point? The evenings have been right chilly. . . . And what does Bing mean he can't find a house which is "large enough" when I have heard a dozen film luminaries wailing lately that they couldn't find buyers for their dwellings because those dwellings were too spacious? I know where there is a very pretty hotel for sale, too.

Bing's a happy-go-lucky gent who takes all things in stride including swell parts like, left, the one in "Anything Goes" with Ethel Merman in which they duet that smash hit, "You're the Tops" . . . or a mere matter of twins, another son and attractive Dixie Lee, his wife. Also above, east meets west on a bike pedalling to the set, another Crosby gag.

One doesn't know whether to cry, "Oh come now, Bing! Be your age!" or to hope that, for his own sake, he will keep on being the irresponsible playboy until he is eighty. Maybe it's partly that quality in him which makes you and you and you . . . and me . . . enjoy him so much on the screen. There is something attractive, to all of us plodding folk, about the fellow who breaks all the sober rules and still comes out on top.

YEARS AGO he obtained a release from his contract with Paul Whiteman because of a sudden whim to remain in Los Angeles when the Whiteman orchestra was going east. He refused several promising radio offers for the same reason. Then suddenly he became panicky, thought he was getting nowhere and couldn't imagine why. In his frantic search for advice, he signed with numbers of shrewd gentlemen, who

(Continued on page 62)

Tom has just signed a new Paramount contract as reward for his swell work in "Annapolis Farewell."

Tom's rules for sidestepping trouble

THIS BROWN CHAP THINKS IT'S LUCK, BUT IT'S REALLY WISDOM

by Franc Dillon

THERE IS an old legend, more popular outside the film colony than in, that Hollywood is a place where a Frankenstein lurks behind every tree, ready to jump out at unsuspecting young girls who have come here from the outside world to make their name and fame in motion pictures.

Columns and columns of newspaper space have been devoted to the dangers, real and imaginary, that confront a young girl in Hollywood.

"But," protests Tom Brown, "no one bothers to warn the screen-struck young men who come to Hollywood in search of work and adventure.

"When the little girl who has such a sweet voice in the village choir decides to try her luck at being a Grace Moore, all the folks warn her against the pitfalls of Hollywood. But when the young chap, who has been cutting such a dash with the community players, decides he will take the next train for Hollywood, his friends all say, 'Good luck! We'll be expecting Gable to resign when he hears you are in town.'

"Perhaps it is because a man is supposed to be able to take care of himself." Tom continued earnestly, "and it might be because not many people realize there is anything to warn a fellow about. The truth of the matter is that there is just as much trouble ahead for a fellow in this town as there is for a girl. The only difference is that most of a fellow's hurdles come after he has made a place for himself in the film business. Then is the time he must watch his step, for the more successful he becomes, the bigger mistakes he can make."

Now, of course you know that Tom Brown is one of the most prominent juveniles and best young actors in (Continued on page 69)

Mary's a popular gal because she listens well and knows how to profit by others' mistakes.

Mary gives Jack Benny a whirl in "It's in the Air." She's stepping along as an actress.

Mary's methods for holding a beau

CARLISLE'S TAKEN CUES FROM BOYS' CRACKS ABOUT OTHER GIRLS

by Caroline Somers Hoyt

YOU PICK up swell data dating in Hollywood," declares Mary Carlisle, one of the cutest little blondes in the picture colony.

Mary is young and terribly popular. She lives in a fashionable apartment with her mother. The telephone rings often. And although she's rushed from one good role to another, Mary goes places with the most eligible men.

While doing so she's learned a lot. She admits it, and what she has to say is most informative.

"Sooner or later the boy friends begin to talk," she asserts. "I find that a large portion of male thinking concerns women. Of course, men don't exactly rave about other girls when they're out with me. After all, they're too smart to make that mistake! Still, they do talk and I try not to pass up any helpful pointers.

"Right off, I might as well confess that nothing fascinates a man more completely than a woman who'll listen to him with rapture radiating from her eyes. So remember—be eager for his next words, even if it's the supreme effort. Then he'll brand you intriguing!"

Advice from the cuddlesome Carlisle, whose infectious grin seems essential to her sprightly personality, is indeed enlightening.

"If men are too clever to heap praise on another when escorting me, at least they feel safe in telling what's wrong with the absent misses. I've discovered the ideal sweetheart isn't what many so-modern girls have been aiming to be. Men are idealistic, yes, in spite of the realistic manners they occasionally display.

"Actually, they say that we don't stop to study their wants and we generally attempt to please other women. They tell me they are looking for a lovely, feminine sort—with intelligence wisely employed. Get this final demand, for I shall later illustrate what they mean.

"No man I know dislikes allure. Sometimes its lack is forgiven on account of characteristics which nearly compensate; still it is important. Men believe that most women are awfully misguided, that too many girls lack subtlety. Men may imagine they are being fooled, but they want to be if we aren't naturally perfect. So what? So we tip our hands!

"The whole purpose of nice clothes, for instance, is to enhance ourselves. Men are impressed by the girl with chic. Instinctively they abhor gaudiness and react to exquisite taste. But here's the hitch. Most girls go around showing off their new clothes, and that is entirely too naïve to be entrancing! Clothes should never distract, and when we chatter about them to men we're admitting we need props to get by.

"Which brings me to an observation I have heard so many Hollywood men make. Most women try to imitate some renowned beauty. This, they tell me, is sheer nonsense. In the first place, you never can be as effective as an original. Secondly, it shows shallowness. You should have enough confidence in yourself to develop what's best for your individuality.

"I must tell what men have said about make-up. Again, they're decidedly aware of our using it. And they don't mind, only they do contend that we'd be far more enchanting if we'd just pretend a little.

"They agree on this and the (Continued on page 68)

Jane Withers all set for her role in "Paddy O'Day."

Twinkle,

. . . HOLLYWOOD'S YOUNGEST CAREER GALS TAKE TIME OUT TO TELL ALL

by Lois Svensrud

Twinkle, Little Stars

(Left to right) Cora Sue Collins, who has portrayed the stars as little girls, would like to be just half as pretty as all of them when she grows up. At three years, Virginia Weidler refused to play an undressed role. Cute? Sybil Jason, the newest starlet, has come all the way from Africa to screen success in five short years. And finally, Shirley Temple, at the end of whose tiny rainbow lies the biggest pot of gold.

A HALF dozen small stars in Hollywood are threatening the thrones of the Garbos and Hepburns! They don't trade on glamor or sex-appeal either! They don't need it! Not when a single teardrop from the blue eyes of a five-year-old can tug the old heart-strings more than the sobs of a famed emoter, and the grin on a small freckled face is more dazzling than the smile of a high priced beauty.

Perhaps your Annabelle has lopsided dimples like Miss Temple's or bobbing pigtails a la Weidler. You probably think that, given a chance before the camera, she, too, could warm a million hearts as she does yours.

Do you wonder how these other little girls got that magic "chance?" And do you wonder what fame and fortune has done to them? Personal chats revealed some intimate facts, for these movie stars aren't a bit averse to discussing their private lives.

On the screen these small actresses are "naturals," but what would they be like off-screen? We were prepared for a sense of importance in some of them, but were we disillusioned! Not one of these children is impressed with the fact that she's made a mark in the world after being such a short time in it. You think of the youngsters as having "careers." They think they're having "just lots of fun."

THE MILLION-DOLLAR babies weren't born with silver spoons in their mouths. Every one came from a modest home and hard-working parents. They weren't all endowed with beauty or brains. But each and every one had "what it takes"—a rare charm. Different roads to fame were followed by all six starlets. For some of them, it has been a hard road, for others a short one and merry.

Virginia Weidler was the only child to flatly refuse her first big chance. It was a case of modesty or career—and Virginia chose to sacrifice the latter. She was three years old at the time and had been assigned a role in John Barrymore's picture, "Moby Dick." The script called for the baby to be undressed.

"I won't be in the pitcher without my pants," declared Miss Weidler firmly.

Mrs. Weidler took her home, convinced that her youngest was not for the screen, though the five other little Weidlers were in the movies. It's better than a reel of "Our Gang" to see the brood on their way to the studio. They come (Continued on page 82)

by Ben Maddox

Is it any wonder that audiences have become so interested in the new Jean Arthur? Below, Herb Marshall, Jean and Leo Carrillo in "If You Could Only Cook."

Her luck began with love

IN A RUT? BLUE? SO WAS JEAN 'TIL CUPID CAME ALONG

ANY GIRL whose life has been transformed by the magical process called falling in love will understand what has happened to Jean Arthur. She will understand all the easier, too, if she was once the same confused combination of terrific shyness and surging inner yearning as Jean was.

A few brief years ago Jean Arthur was judged "through" in Hollywood. Obviously, something important has occurred to cause her current popularity.

She was just one more of those ingenues who please momentarily and then seldom rate a second thought after the picture fades from the screen. Finally, even the studio where she was under contract forgot to consider her. With typical meekness she disappeared from the movie bustle, becoming but a pale memory.

Now everyone is suddenly conscious of her. A changed personality, she is provoking such favorable audience response that she is rising rapidly in Hollywood esteem. Each role essayed is increasing demonstration of her genuine ability.

Her hair, formerly plain brown, is a golden, flattering blonde today. Chubby cheeks have thinned, the nervousness which gave an odd pitch to her voice has vanished. Her blue eyes are gay with the uninhibited wisdom which characterizes a sophisticated young modern. Her mind, manner, and words flash with a new, keen maturity.

That love can work wonders is an old saw. Nevertheless, it is as true now as it always has been. Jean herself says so.

"Before I fell in love," she asserts, "I was bound down by the most painful of inferiority (Continued on page 78)

Hughie, the stall guy . . .

by Ruth Rankin

YOU KNOW him. That funny little guy with a face like a hot-water bottle—Hugh Herbert—the nutsy lawyer in "We're In the Money," the popularity contest judge with a bun on, in "Miss Pacific Fleet."

Hughie is the apostle of the futile ineffectual—the one who usually out-smarts the smart boys in the end. You figure he's a trifle balmy-on-the-crumpet, he entertains bats in his belfry, he is a male Winnie the Pooh for whimsey—and he hopes you keep right on figuring him like that. He really has good sense when he needs it, but you can just overlook that. Hugh is trying to keep it a secret.

He says no actor is worth his salt who hasn't worked out his "philosophy of life" and doesn't give it to you hot off the griddle. Hughie is simple, elemental, highly impractical, and he hopes you won't pay the slightest attention to it . . .

He believes in doing nothing today that can possibly be put off until tomorrow—says he is a mañana man. He would love to be a hypochondriac, it's such a lovely word to have people calling you behind your back, but the doctors won't let him. The insurance company dealt him a mortal blow by passing him 100%, and he sulked about it all one morning. When he can't sleep, he gets up and bakes a batch of bran muffins.

If the party gets too erudite and begins swapping book-titles, Hughie stops everything by remarking in a soft, confidential tone, "To tell you the truth, I can't read." (To tell you the truth it's a lot better bet that Hughie has read it than the other people.)

The reason he has managed to keep Rose happily married to him for twenty years is separate bathrooms. When Hughie was a boy, in New York, with four brothers and a sister, not to mention his mother and father, they shared one bathroom. So Hughie made up his mind to be a success when he grew up and have two. He is two and a half times the success he intended to be. He has five bathrooms.

"ALWAYS PUT OFF 'TIL TOMORROW WHAT YOU CAN DO TODAY"

—Hugh Herbert Motto

As the pleasantly "spiffed" judge of "Miss Pacific Fleet," Hughie is taken over by Misses Farrell and Blondell.

Hughie's a finger twiddler. In moments of greatest stress those fingertips entangle so helplessly, so hilariously.

HUGHIE IS in dutch with his brother, who lives in Brooklyn, on account of a process-shot. It was a New York street all right, but Hughie wasn't there. He was right out on the Warner lot all the time. But when the picture was shown, it looked exactly as if he were walking down Fifth Avenue. So finally, when he really did go to New York, his brother looked very disgusted and said, "All you hams get big heads, don't you? Why didn't you come to see me the last time you were here? I saw you in that picture."

Ensued argument, explanation with Hughie drawing diagrams of a process-shot. Brother openly and obviously skeptical. Finally he polished off the whole subject by remarking to the distraught Hughie:

"Oh, for Pete's sake, process-shot my eye. You probably were here and didn't know it!"

Well, with his own family (Continued on page 80)

If you would have a

Above, you see Claudette as she looked several years ago. Note that she hasn't glamorized herself radically—just a few changes in mouth make-up and hair.

by Madame Sylvia

I TAKE off my hat this month to Claudette Colbert, a gal who, though she is one of our finest actresses, has escaped being another stereotyped Hollywood glamor girl.

From just a beauty point of view, Claudette Colbert is not exactly ravishing. There are many far more pulchritudinous in Hollywood than she. She definitely isn't the sexy type that makes men stand up and cheer when she comes on the screen. Yet both men and women like her. She gives herself wholeheartedly to every role, often forgets her looks, even in a close-up. That Frenchy has brains, talent and ability—she'll be a lasting favorite, not just a flash in the sky like so many beautiful but untalented stars.

Claudette has been intelligent, even about glamour. It's true that in the last few years she's done things to change her face, but she hasn't been silly about it. Take her eyebrows, for instance. She raised them somewhat, but she hasn't made them look groteque, as some stars have.

When I sounded the bugle for Colbert doubles I didn't dream so many of you look like Claudette. But gosh! There are more Colbert doubles in the United States than there are high hats in Hollywood.

Claudette should be flattered at this month's response. And, believe me, you girls will be flattered right and left when you get a figure like Claudette's. She has true slenderness—and slenderness, I can tell you, is the greatest charm to possess.

Claudette looks so chic in her clothes (and you can imagine without them, too!). She is in proportion, her bone structure is swell. Even when she makes jerky movements she doesn't offend the eye. As a matter of fact, Claudette's walk is a stride. Listen, did you ever see a fat girl stride? Watch one sometime. And because she is so slim, she can get away with the frills and puffed sleeves that other girls have to go easy on.

Over and over again I've told you that ordinary massage will not take off weight properly, in fact, as far as actual reducing goes, it works against itself because it definitely increases the appetite. However, it is swell for nervous, run-down conditions, for increasing circulation, limbering up muscles and giving you that nice cozy relaxed feeling.

CLAUDETTE'S "DOUBLE" IS WARNED AGAINST BAD

figure like Colbert

Joan Koellan is the most striking Colbert likeness, according to Sylvia. She has the same triangular face and vivacious expression. What do you say?

> We believe, in addition to the story, direction, photography and the performances of the players, that one of the most vital factors in the success of a motion picture is the physical attractiveness and charm of its stars. We realize that constructive and instructive comment on this subject by a recognized authority will be of interest to our readers as well as to the actors themselves. MODERN SCREEN is, therefore, glad to announce the appointment of Madame Sylvia as Beauty Critic of Motion Pictures for the magazine.—Editor.

Claudette, who can't afford to lose a pound, has frequent massages. She's a hearty eater, too—eats what she likes. She drinks lots of milk and has a holy horror of over-exertion. Oh, sure, she plays a little tennis and swims. But she does not drink any liquor and you seldom catch her at the night spots of Hollywood, where the other belles go to show off their new clothes and their old beaux.

That just shows how smart Claudette is, not only in preserving her strength and her good looks, but in guarding the most precious thing in life—health.

And now to Joan Koellan, (Continued on page 88)

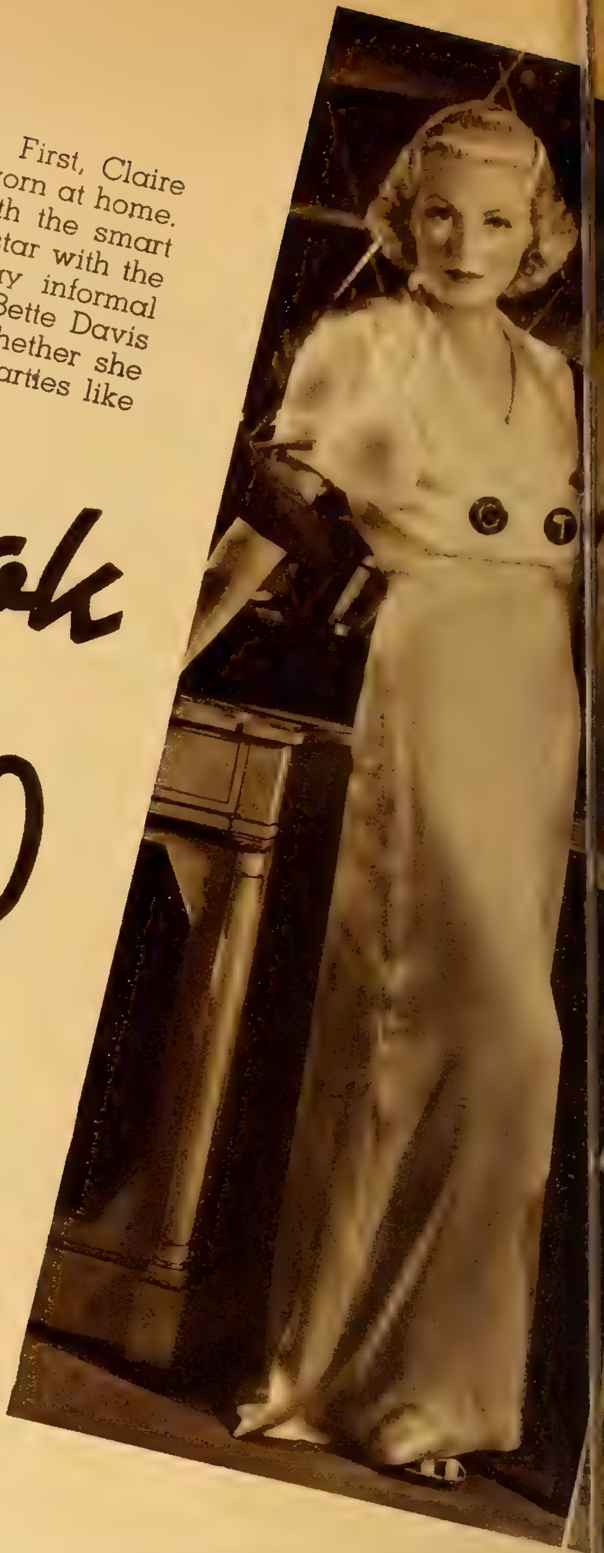
POSTURE AND DOUBLE CHIN

And Claudette today, the sparkling star of "The Bride Comes Home."

At right you see four answers to questions you've asked. First, Claire Trevor's white satin pajamas with rhinestone buttons to be worn at home. Anne Shirley's sweet taffeta frock in a new length and with the smart type of evening shoes. Next Tutta Rolf, a sparkling foreign star with the right idea about a dress for dinner in town, theatre or gay informal dances. It's metal cloth with brown velvet trim. And last, Bette Davis wears the sort of silk afternoon dress that everyone needs whether she has a nine-to-five job or can spend her afternoons at bridge parties like the girl who stays at home.

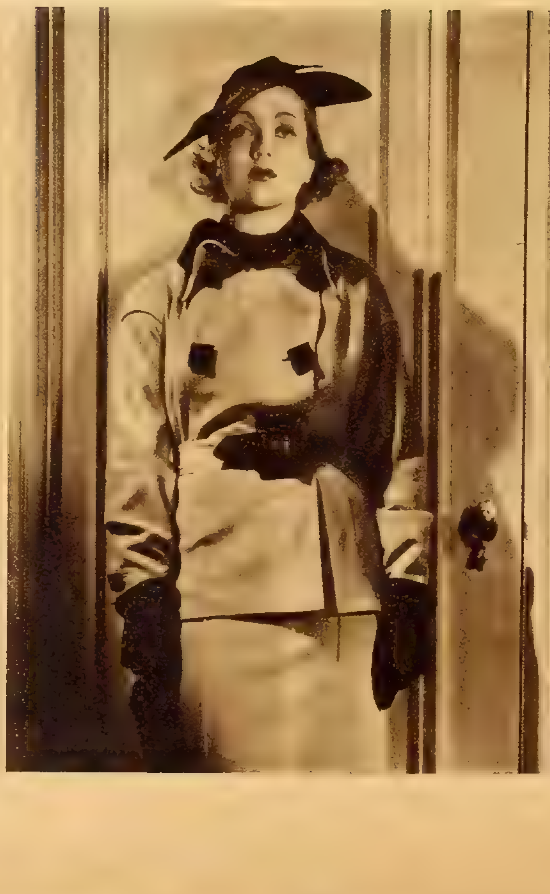


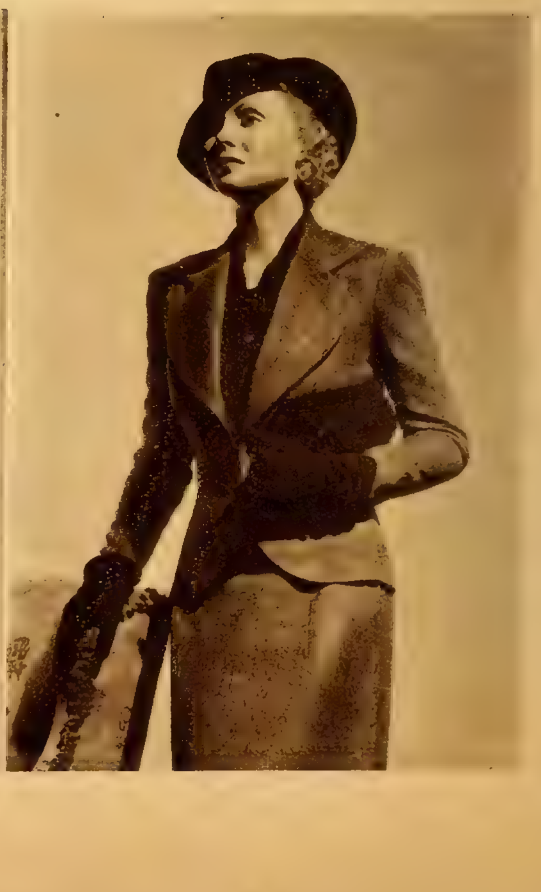
How can I look SMARTER..?

ANSWERS TO A DOZEN PUZZLING QUESTIONS YOU'VE ASKED

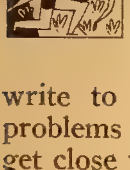
For club meetings—this charming costume of Ann Sothern's at the right. It's trim, two-piece and tailored without being too severe.

For business—at the far right, you see the perfect all year 'round business outfit. Jean Muir's gray tailored suit with black accessories.





by Adelia Bird



DO YOU know how much your letters help me? Now that is reversing the tables on you, isn't it? You would imagine that I think only how much my small bits of wisdom help you. As it happens, I receive a great deal of inspiration and information from the letters you write to me, telling me what your individual fashion problems are. Your letters are the only way that I can get close to you—the best way that I can judge what you want to read in these monthly fashion chats of mine.

This is your department, you know, and it is my greatest pleasure and satisfaction to feel that I can give you advice which will help you to meet your business, social and romantic engagements of the day with an increased sense of your own good looks and general smartness. A girl can face almost any exigency when she knows the clothes she is wearing are doing half the charm job for her!

From letters which you have written to me in the past six months, I have chosen twelve questions the answers to which I think must be of keen interest to a large number of you. Many of you will recognize your own questions used to help someone else who has a similar problem to yours. I have tried to illustrate as many of them as I have space for with pictures of stars who make excellent examples of the points mentioned.

AFTER YOU have read these questions and answers, I hope that you will sit down and write to me, telling me what you most want to see and read in these pages in the forthcoming six months. Tell me what you need to know, what stars influence you most from a fashion standpoint, and what type of costume you would like to see more often illustrated and discussed here.

Now for the questions:

Q. I am going to work in an office—it's my first job and I am anxious to make a good impression. Please tell me what type of clothes to wear?

A. Serviceable, simple and versatile clothes are what you want. I put serviceability first because business clothes get the hardest sort of use. Good fabric is the secret of long wear, so don't be led astray by flashy, cheap materials which will show you their shiny side and their limp, sleazy texture. No matter how you have to economize on other things always make yourself afford to buy good fabric—in the long run you'll save dollars.

Simplicity is next, in fact, many would rate it first as a business fashion requirement. I don't because I think that you achieve simplicity only through the use of the best materials. Fussy clothes are out of the office picture, just as they are out of the sports scene. However, you don't want to look plain in trying to gain simplicity. I have chosen a picture of Jean Muir as a perfect example of what the well-dressed business girl should wear. It's a well tailored gray suit made from the best fabric. It will work efficiently from one season to the next with no demands upon you other than careful sponging and pressing at intervals. Although the suit is cut with an eye to tailored smartness, it has just enough fit to its jacket, peak to its lapels and general dash to lift it far out of the plain class.

Myrna Loy wears just the right costume for the informal hours of late afternoon and early evening. Note her gloves and fob pin.

Ruth Weston picks Hollywood's pet costume, pajamas, for a daytime outfit at home. They're tailored silk ones with gay scarf.

Kay Francis shows the effectiveness of black offset by a white accent. A three-strand pearl choker worn with a high neck is chic.

WHAT'S MORE, Jean's suit illustrates my point that business clothes should be versatile. With the trim black felt hat, black suede accessories and black crepe blouse which Jean wears, this suit is tops in daytime efficiency. But by changing to a small hat with a veil, a ruffled silk blouse and a bouttoniere pinned to a lapel, the same suit is all dressed up for a dinner and theatre date right after five. Still another time, by wearing a sweater, a bright sports scarf and changing to low heeled oxfords, your suit goes to the country!

If you don't want to confine yourself to suits, you have a wealth of dresses from which to choose. Woolen or crepe dresses of the shirtwaist type can be changed by a fresh collar, a new scarf or a vestee. And you don't need to stick to traditional office shades of black, blue or brown—wear some of the gayer shades, just so you don't hit upon some hue that will give your boss color-blindness! The jacket dress, the two-piece, semi-sports dress and the three-piece suit are all good workers.

And just a final word, one that you probably have heard dozens of times. Don't wear too much make-up during business hours. And don't teeter about on silly high heels attached to low cut sandals or ornate strap shoes—wear opera pumps, plain straps with moderate heels or oxfords.

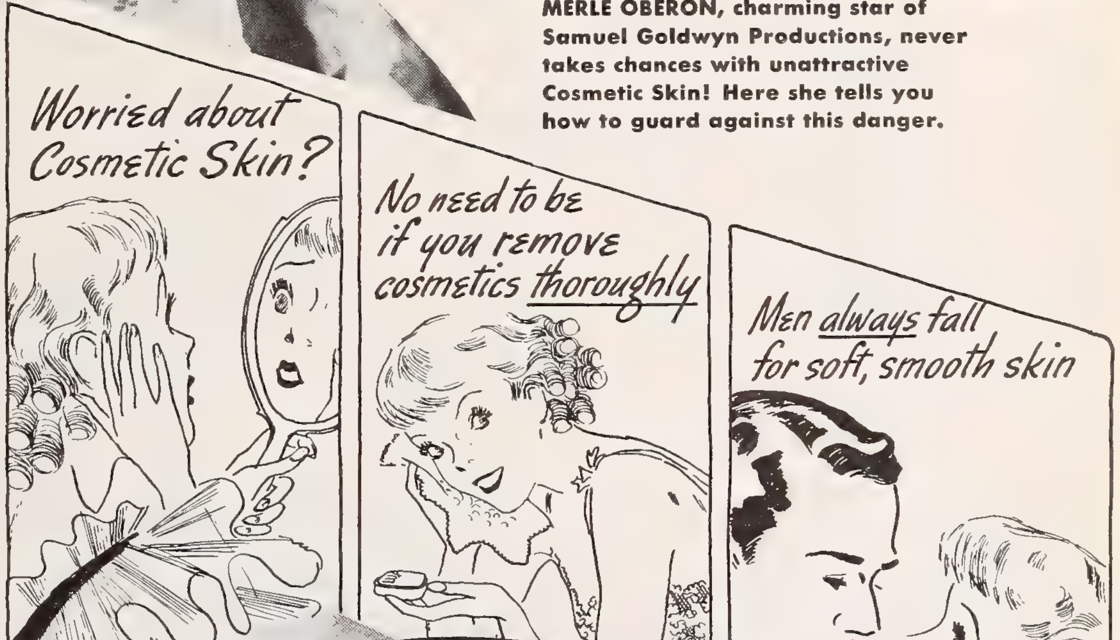
Q. Should evening slippers match or contrast with my gown?

A. Either is correct and smart. However, the general trend this year is to wear either silver or gold sandals unless you have a lot of money to spend on evening shoes and can afford to indulge in matching each evening gown.

Anne Shirley wears her formal dresses at a new length which shows most of her evening shoe. Anne's blue taffeta dress on page 57, as you can see, has a full skirt which ends just below her ankles. Her open-toed satin sandals are dyed to match her dress (Continued on page 93)

"YOU CAN'T BE LOVELY WITHOUT A SOFT SMOOTH SKIN"
Merle Oberon

MERLE OBERON, charming star of Samuel Goldwyn Productions, never takes chances with unattractive Cosmetic Skin! Here she tells you how to guard against this danger.



Worried about Cosmetic Skin?
No need to be if you remove cosmetics thoroughly
Men always fall for soft, smooth skin
LUX
TOILET SOAP

DOES Merle Oberon use cosmetics? Yes, like most other modern women, she does! "But," says this charming star, "I'm not afraid of Cosmetic Skin. I remove make-up thoroughly — the Hollywood way. I use Lux Toilet Soap!"

No girl wants to risk the dullness, enlarged pores, tiny blemishes, that mean Cosmetic Skin has developed. No wise girl will neglect Merle Oberon's advice!

Cosmetics Harmless if removed this way

Lux Toilet Soap's ACTIVE lather removes every trace of dust and dirt, stale rouge and powder so they won't choke your pores. Lux Toilet Soap keeps skin lovely—the way you want yours to be!

Why don't you use it—before you renew your make-up during the day, ALWAYS before you go to bed at night.

Telling Tales on Fred

(Continued from page 37)

and he is one of the few actors who, when he was on Broadway, had no agent. I remember him crossing out a couple of clauses in his contract, but he was scrupulously fair and never had a swelled head.

"Fred is not physically strong. He is all skin and bones. That's why he looks so well in his clothes.

"He's the most painstaking performer I've ever met. If he's convinced that part of his work should be done in a certain way, he'll just carry on until people give in to him. He was always in a stew about something, so we called him 'Moaning Minnie.' But I'll say this, I've yet to find him in the wrong. He fights for what he wants because he is conscientious, and his showman's instinct is always right.

"As for being a friend. Now that he's in Hollywood he's never too busy to write a letter. And I don't mean a hasty typewritten line either!

"You know, it was while he appeared in my show that Fred signed for pictures. Nobody thought he'd be a hit. But pictures did a wonderful thing for him. They magnified his charm.

"Before he left for the coast, the girls in the show used to say, 'What can that guy do in Hollywood?' I guess," Weatherly smiled, "they've found out now."

THEN I went to Fred Stone's daughter, Dorothy, who danced with Astaire, when, due to illness, Claire Luce was obliged to leave the show.

"Fred was marvelously patient at rehearsing with me. He'd practice seven hours a day. Such hard work turned him into a bundle of nerves. But he gave me a new slant on dancing. He taught me to make everything look as if it were done on the spur of the moment.

"He is awfully intense about his work. That's why I think pictures are the best medium for him. He was at high tension on the stage—always conscious of the audience. Anything could get his goat. If they didn't respond in the way he wanted, or if someone started talking, he was convinced they didn't like him.

"There was one break in his tap dance that occasionally went wrong. If he made this mistake he would work by himself all evening and keep saying he was no good. If he did it right, he'd be in a glorious mood throughout the rest of the show.

"He was always considerate to the people in the company. He had three minutes between numbers and should have relaxed in his dressing-room, but the rest of the company used it as a regular green room. They were always there, smoking. He never had a chance for privacy. That's because he was so nice to people, never discourteous or mean.

"He was willing to blame himself for whatever happened. Like the time Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler were out front. We were both kind of nervous. At the end of the 'Night and Day,' number, I was supposed to do a sort of back bend, while Freddie put his arm around me and lowered me down on a bench. Well—I missed the bench, and we both fell flat on the floor! Fred turned scarlet. Another performer would have lost his temper. He said nothing. But after the show he sat in his dressing-room, head in his hand, and kept repeating that he was no good. I said it had been my fault, but he insisted upon taking the blame. Then he admitted that it was silly to worry and he sat up, laughing, while the tears were running down his cheeks.

"Everyone in the show adored him. The night of his last performance before leaving for Hollywood, the orchestra played 'Auld Lang Syne,' and the chorus girls rushed out of the wings, tripping him up, football fashion. He just sat there too touched to speak.

"He couldn't believe they really wanted him in pictures. He used to point at himself in the mirror and say, 'What do they want that face in Hollywood for?'"

IT was Carl Randall, leaving for the coast to dance, himself, in Jock Whitney's next technicolor production, who told me about Astaire after he made his first picture.

"Between 'Dancing Lady,' and his second picture, Fred had to go to London for 'The Gay Divorce.' I directed the dances. By this time Fred had lost interest, his heart was in pictures. At the dress rehearsal there was no spark in the 'Night and Day' number, so I went backstage and spoke to him about it. He got so mad that he went on and gave a wonderful perform-

(Continued on page 62)

Fie on you, Gary, falling asleep like that with two such gorgeous gals with you —or is it Scotty's flash bulbs? Anyhoo, Dolores Del Rio and Mrs. Cooper don't seem to care a hang. Dolores and Sandra are related by marriage, you know.

"I PICKED THE GIRL WITH THE MOST Kissable Lips"

SAID TULLIO CARMINATI

Read how famous film star picked the loveliest lips in Hollywood test . . .

TULLIO CARMINATI, the sophisticated Hollywood screen star, picks the most kissable lips in unusual test!

● Three girls were with us when we asked Tullio Carminati what kind of lips men prefer. One girl wore no lipstick. The second wore the ordinary lipstick. The third wore Tangee. Instantly he picked the girl wearing Tangee. "Her lips are kissable, because they look natural," he said.

Most men agree with him. They like lips that are soft and natural. And that's the secret of Tangee's growing popularity. You avoid that painted look with Tangee, because Tangee isn't paint. It intensifies your own natural color . . . makes your lips lovely and alluring. If you prefer more color for evening wear, use Tangee Theatrical. Try Tangee. In two sizes, 39c and $1.10. Or, for a quick trial, send 10c for the special 4-Piece Miracle Make-Up Set offered below.

● BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES . . . when you buy. Don't let some sharp sales person switch you to an imitation . . . there's only one Tangee.

World's Most Famous Lipstick

TANGEE

ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

New FACE POWDER now contains the magic Tangee color principle

★ 4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP SET

THE GEORGE W. LUFT COMPANY MM26
417 Fifth Avenue, New York City

Rush Miracle Make-Up Set of miniature Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge, Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). 15¢ in Canada.

Check Shade ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Light Rachel

Name ____________ Please Print

Address ____________

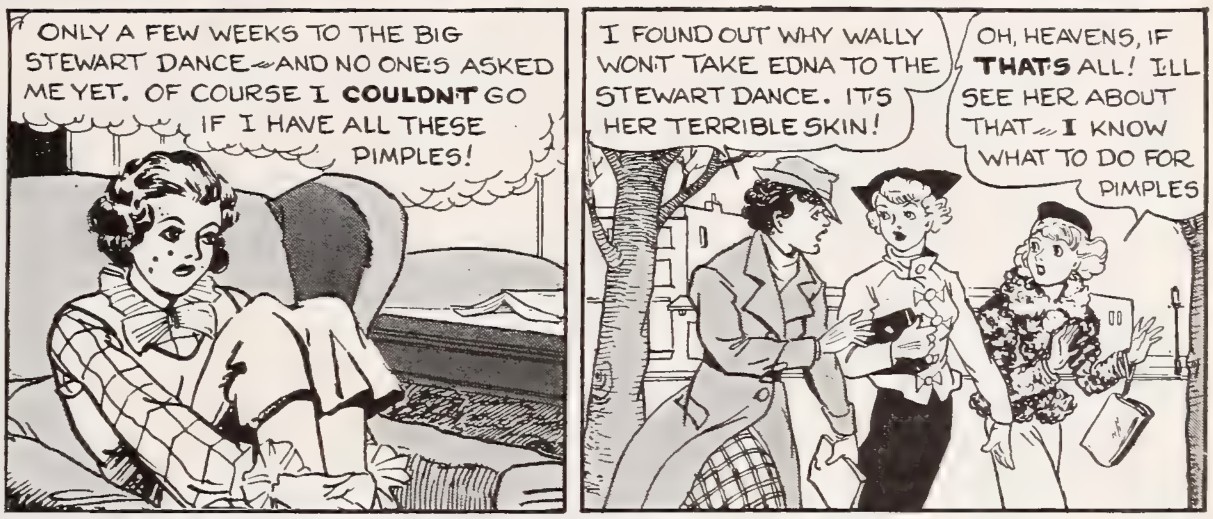
City ____________ State ____________

NO, SIS,
THUMBS DOWN
ON EDNA!

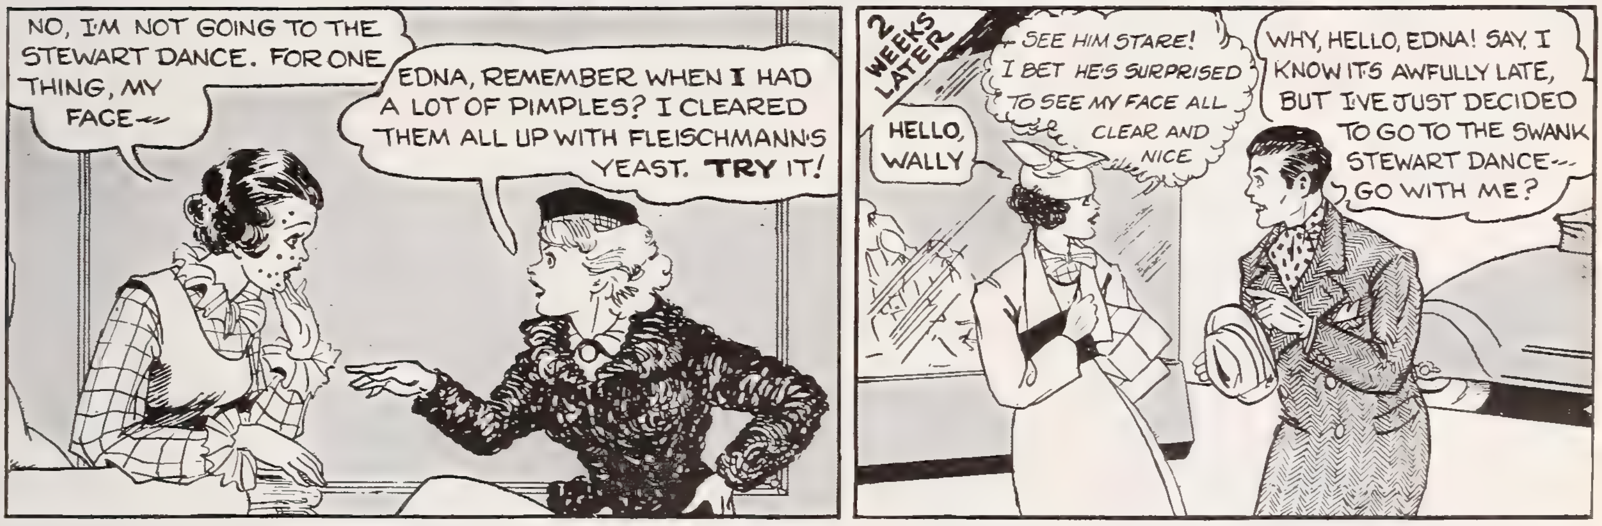
Edna had too many pimples

∽

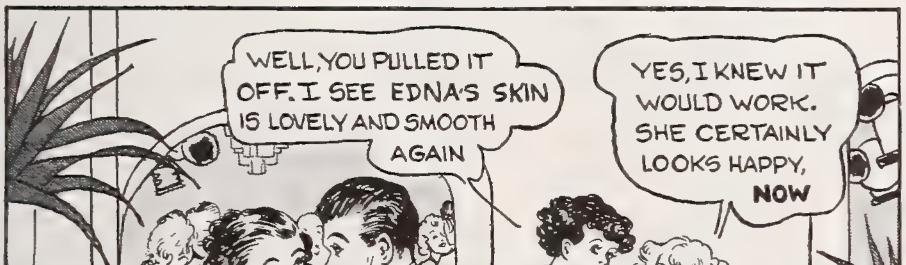
but not for long



ONLY A FEW WEEKS TO THE BIG STEWART DANCE — AND NO ONE'S ASKED ME YET. OF COURSE I COULDN'T GO IF I HAVE ALL THESE PIMPLES!
I FOUND OUT WHY WALLY WON'T TAKE EDNA TO THE STEWART DANCE. IT'S HER TERRIBLE SKIN!
OH, HEAVENS, IF THAT'S ALL! I'LL SEE HER ABOUT THAT — I KNOW WHAT TO DO FOR PIMPLES



NO, I'M NOT GOING TO THE STEWART DANCE. FOR ONE THING, MY FACE —
EDNA, REMEMBER WHEN I HAD A LOT OF PIMPLES? I CLEARED THEM ALL UP WITH FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST. TRY IT!
2 WEEKS LATER
HELLO, WALLY
SEE HIM STARE! I BET HE'S SURPRISED TO SEE MY FACE ALL CLEAR AND NICE
WHY, HELLO, EDNA! SAY, I KNOW IT'S AWFULLY LATE, BUT I'VE JUST DECIDED TO GO TO THE SWANK STEWART DANCE — GO WITH ME?



WELL, YOU PULLED IT OFF. I SEE EDNA'S SKIN IS LOVELY AND SMOOTH AGAIN
YES, I KNEW IT WOULD WORK. SHE CERTAINLY LOOKS HAPPY, NOW

Don't let Adolescent Pimples make YOU feel left out!

BETWEEN the ages 13 and 25, important glands develop. This causes disturbances throughout the body. Waste poisons in the blood irritate the skin. It breaks out in pimples.

But even bad cases of adolescent pimples can be corrected—by Fleischmann's Yeast. Fleischmann's Yeast clears the skin irritants out of the blood. And when the cause of the skin eruption is removed, the pimples disappear.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast 3 times a day, before meals, until skin clears. Start today!

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST

—clears the skin

by clearing skin irritants out of the blood

Copyright, 1936, Standard Brands Incorporated

Stop that COLD in Its Tracks!

A cold is nothing to "monkey with." It can take hold quickly and develop seriously. Take no chances inviting serious complications.

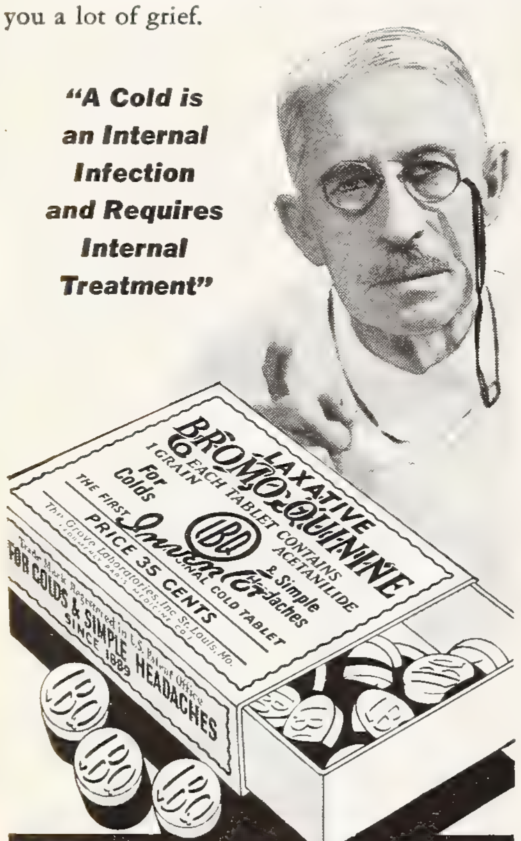
Treat a cold for what it is—an internal infection! Take an internal treatment and one that is expressly for colds and nothing else!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what you want for a cold! It is expressly a cold tablet. It is internal in effect. It does four important things.

Four Important Things

First of all, it opens the bowels. Second, it checks the infection in the system. Third, it relieves the headache and fever. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

All drug stores sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. Let it be your first thought in case of a cold. Ask for it firmly and accept no substitute. The few pennies' investment may save you a lot of grief.



"A Cold is an Internal Infection and Requires Internal Treatment"

LAXATIVE
BROMO QUININE
For Colds
1 GRAIN EACH TABLET CONTAINS ACETANILIDE
& Simple Headaches
THE FIRST Improved Original COLD TABLET
PRICE 35 CENTS
The Grove Laboratories, Inc. St. Louis, Mo.
FOR COLDS & SIMPLE HEADACHES SINCE 1889

GROVE'S LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

(Continued from page 60)

ance. He could always take constructive criticism.

He'd get sore, but he'd take it. Fred's got big feet, and he used to wear white shoes with a blue serge suit. It looked terrible—all feet. When I told him this, he was furious, but he changed to brown suede. He's as fussy as an old maid about his performance. Every prop must be just so, the table not an inch out of place, the chairs just right. But when you remember that he must jump over those chairs and tables, and that he lives in constant fear of falling; well, you can't blame him."

So ended Mr. Randall.

And there you have it—a Broadway profile, with everyone agreeing that if Fred Astaire has faults, they are due to one admirable trait, his stern striving for perfection, for he is that rare combination of nerves, talent, feeling, instinct, work, experience, ambition, yes — and the cold nightmarish sweat of self rebuke, of thinking he's not good enough. All of which spells one word—artist!

Success—a la Crosby

(Continued from page 47)

volunteered to manage him for a percentage of his potential salary. When he decided, at last, to accept the radio offer which was to bring him sudden fame and fortune, he found himself thirty-five thousand dollars in debt for advice which he had not taken.

His own account of that episode is characteristic. "My brother, Everett, took charge of me then and the first thing he did was to pay off the thirty-five thousand dollars. With this off my mind, I decided to go fishing. I forgot to tell anybody about that."

One wonders whether Brother Ev was able to dismiss that transaction so lightly from his mind, since it was his thirty-five thousand dollars which had gone to pay for the unused advice. Three days later Bing walked into Brother Ev's office to find that worthy fit to be tied. He had accepted a pretty spectacular offer for Bing from an Eastern broadcasting company . . . and then he hadn't been able to find Bing!

Brother Ev must have his troubles, even today. Bing dislikes to go to the studio unless he is actually working on a picture and one gathers that he goes rather grudgingly even then. One of the executives of his studio wished to see him on important business and Bing, notified of this fact, sent the executive an invitation to play golf. The "conference" resulted in a pleasant golf game but an unsatisfactory (to the busy executive) interview which sent that gentleman back to his office in something of a pet. (An executive in a pet is really something to contemplate. I saw one once and I've been a little jumpy ever since.) But Bing won whatever point he was trying to make, so there you are.

He won his initial success playing traps with an orchestra, his later success singing and his latest, combining singing with acting. Every rising actor I have talked to in the past two years has expounded to me about how one must work hard, study, strive, struggle, learn and grow . . . lots of things like that. It all sounds so grim! But Bing, who is one of the most highly paid singers in the country, never had a voice lesson in his life and can't read a note of music. He scarcely knows the names of the instruments which accompany him.

HAVING proved to his employers' satisfaction and that of the public that he can act passably well, he doesn't mind telling you that he never had an elocution lesson in his life, never read a volume of Shakespeare and has seen very few plays.

He doesn't waste time studying in his spare moments. He plays golf, goes fishing or fusses 'round his racing stables.

Other actors diet, exercise, and equip elaborate gymnasiums to keep their figures fit, their tummies under control. Steam baths, massage, tossing heavy balls about . . . all an uncomfortable and strenuous part of pursuing their careers.

A year or so ago Bing began to take on weight in a really alarming fashion. His employers were agitated. His brothers were agitated. Critics raised concerted eyebrows and opined that here, unless something pretty drastic was done about it at once, was the beginning of the end of the Crosby career. Whereupon the imperturbable Bing, declining to take any steps at all about this growing front of his, strolled to the studio, excess weight and all, and made his most successful picture to date, "Mississippi."

There is no use in anyone's getting into a lather over a guy like that!

Years ago, doctors told him that he had a growth in his throat which should certainly be removed at once. Bing didn't like the idea of having any snipping done about his tonsils and declined firmly to permit anything of the sort. Now, eminent specialists tell him that it is that very same little growth which has given him his special and individual style of singing. His chief capital!

NO wonder he indulges his whims and behaves like a spoilt child upon occasion. Recently he had Mae West's pet cameraman, Carl Struss, on his picture, "Two for Tonight." The company was a bit behind schedule and had not finished when it came time for Mae to start her new opus, "Klondike Lou." Mae wanted her cameraman. Bing, apparently, decided that he liked to be "photographed pretty," too, so he declined to relinquish Mr. Struss. There was considerable tartness apparent on the Paramount lot while production on Mae's picture was delayed until she, at last, consented to content herself with George Clemens, Mr. Struss' assistant. Meanwhile Mae lost her leading man. Owing to the delay in starting, we understand, it was necessary to recall Victor McLaglen to the Fox lot to prepare for "Professional Soldier."

Bing, of course, was completely within his rights . . . but, dear me! We do expect him to be a handsome so-and-so in the forthcoming picture!

Recently he notified the studio that he would like to be free of all picture assignments while the horse races are in progress at the Santa Anita track. If any assignments come up, however, one imagines that Brother Ev will take steps about that!

When he planned the house at Toluca Lake, he called an architect. "What type of house do you want, Mr. Crosby?" he was asked.

"Oh, I don't know. Just a house, comfortable and big enough for my family."

"No choice of period or style, or expense?" gasped the architect.

(Continued on page 64)

I'M GETTING TO BE LIKE THAT GIRL IN THE ADS. MEN TAKE ME OUT ONCE—AND DROP ME
BY THE WAY—DID YOU EVER READ ONE OF THOSE LIFEBUOY ADS ...CAREFULLY ?
LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP
Stops 'B.O.'

So easy to offend—without even knowing it!

EVEN ON the coldest winter day, don't take a chance with "B. O." (body odor). Clothing is heavier, rooms often stuffy. "B. O." is instantly noticed. Bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. It purifies and deodorizes pores.

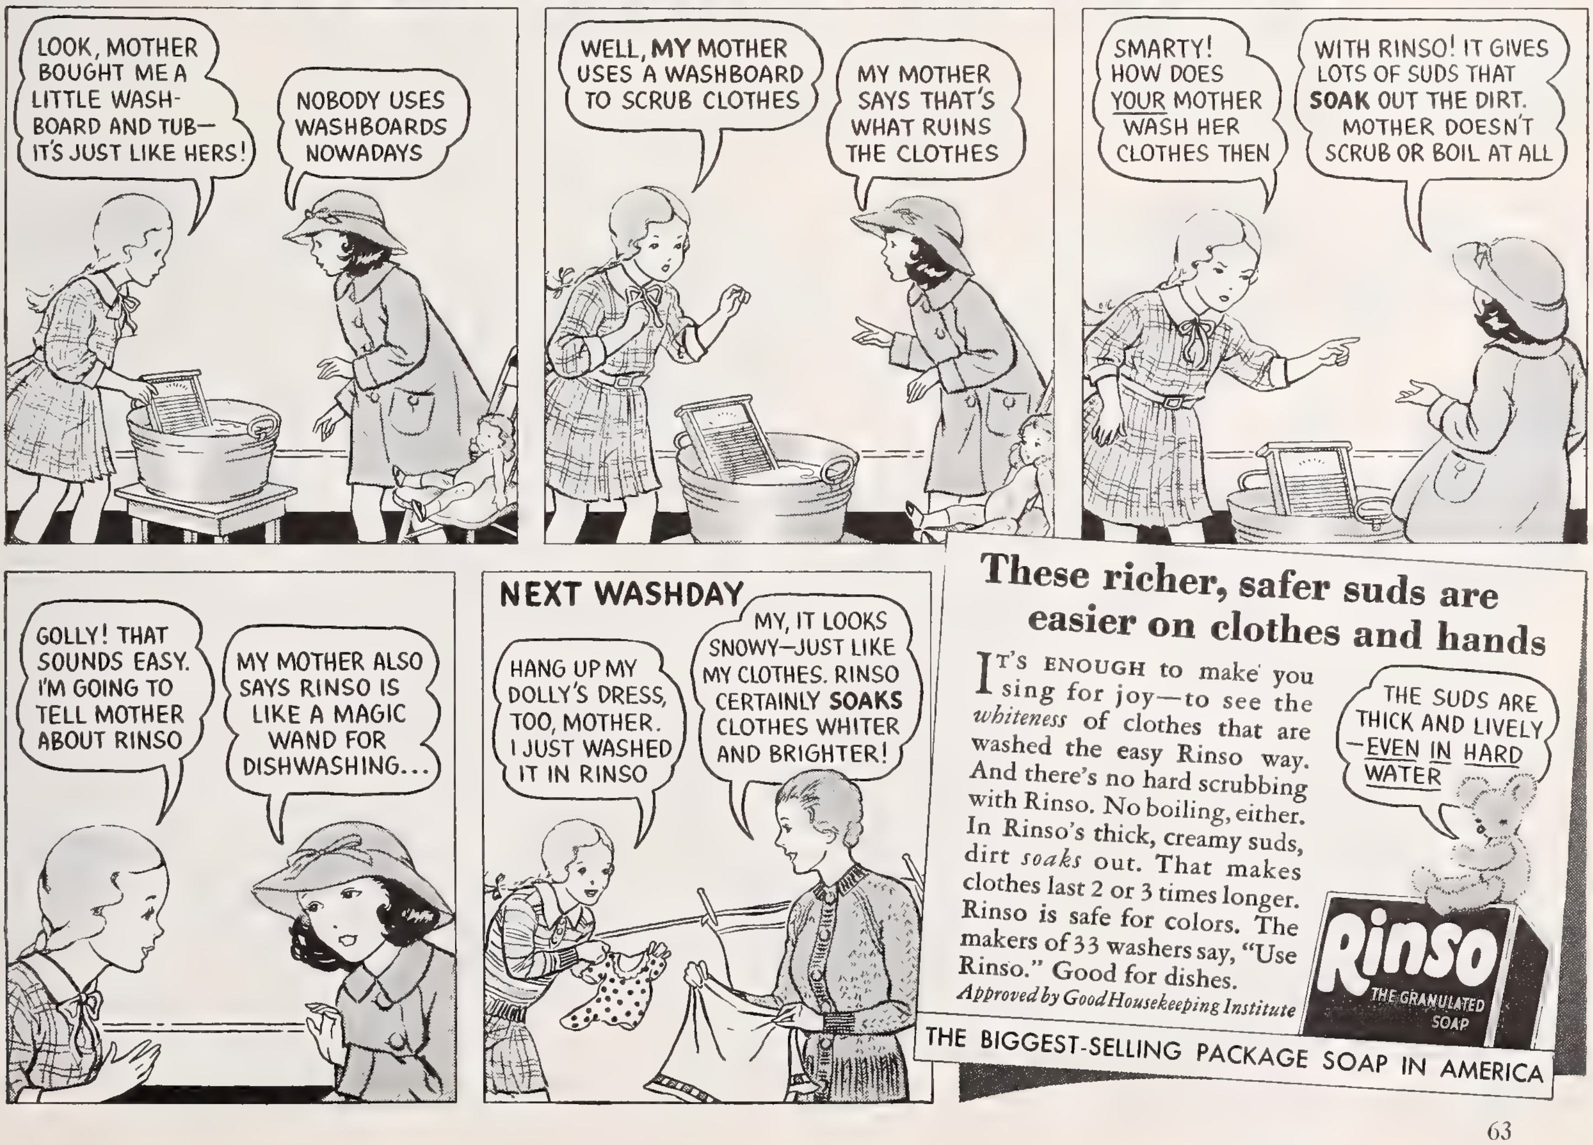
Kind to your complexion

Lifebuoy lathers richly, cleanses deeply, tones and freshens the skin. And "patch" tests on the skins of hundreds of women show Lifebuoy is more than 20% milder than many so-called "beauty soaps."

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

BATHE WITH LIFEBUOY—AND BE SAFE

MAKES WASHDAY EASY AS PIE



LOOK, MOTHER BOUGHT ME A LITTLE WASH-BOARD AND TUB—IT'S JUST LIKE HERS!
NOBODY USES WASHBOARDS NOWADAYS
WELL, MY MOTHER USES A WASHBOARD TO SCRUB CLOTHES
MY MOTHER SAYS THAT'S WHAT RUINS THE CLOTHES
SMARTY! HOW DOES YOUR MOTHER WASH HER CLOTHES THEN WITH RINSO! IT GIVES LOTS OF SUDS THAT SOAK OUT THE DIRT. MOTHER DOESN'T SCRUB OR BOIL AT ALL
GOLLY! THAT SOUNDS EASY. I'M GOING TO TELL MOTHER ABOUT RINSO
MY MOTHER ALSO SAYS RINSO IS LIKE A MAGIC WAND FOR DISHWASHING...
NEXT WASHDAY
HANG UP MY DOLLY'S DRESS, TOO, MOTHER. I JUST WASHED IT IN RINSO
MY, IT LOOKS SNOWY—JUST LIKE MY CLOTHES. RINSO CERTAINLY SOAKS CLOTHES WHITER AND BRIGHTER!
THE SUDS ARE THICK AND LIVELY —EVEN IN HARD WATER
Rinso THE GRANULATED SOAP

These richer, safer suds are easier on clothes and hands

IT'S ENOUGH to make you sing for joy—to see the whiteness of clothes that are washed the easy Rinso way. And there's no hard scrubbing with Rinso. No boiling, either. In Rinso's thick, creamy suds, dirt soaks out. That makes clothes last 2 or 3 times longer. Rinso is safe for colors. The makers of 33 washers say, "Use Rinso." Good for dishes.

Approved by Good Housekeeping Institute

THE BIGGEST-SELLING PACKAGE SOAP IN AMERICA

DON'T USE A
1/2 WAY
TOOTH PASTE

have beautiful teeth

DOES BOTH JOBS

CLEANS TEETH

Replace half way care of your teeth with a tooth paste that does a Double job. All the cleansing in the world won't keep your teeth beautiful if you let your Gums grow soft and spongy! Forhan's whitens your teeth and protects your gums at the same time.

SAVES GUMS

Forhan's is different from all other tooth pastes. It brings you the famous formula of Dr. Forhan—now used in concentrated form by dentists everywhere to combat gum troubles. It gives you two-fold protection, yet costs no more than most ordinary tooth pastes. Why take chances with half way dental care? Begin using Forhan's today.

Forhan's

The ORIGINAL TOOTH PASTE for the GUMS and TEETH by Doctor R. J. Forhan SPECIALIST IN DENTAL SURGERY NEW YORK

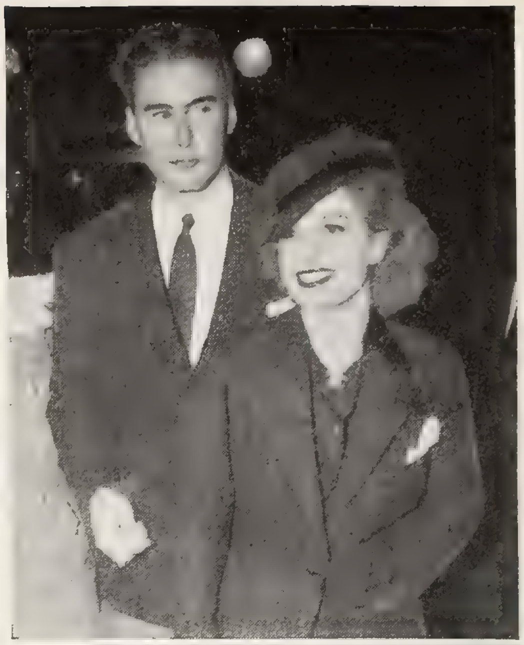
WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

THE liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile onto the food you swallow every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c at all drug stores. © 1935, C. M. Co.

Now what goes on! Eddie Cantor giving an imitation of himself as a Chinaman with that white lotus flower, Sally Eilers. Just part of the high jinks in his new picture, "Shoot the Chutes."



Lily Damita arrives with husband, Errol Flynn, for the "Mutiny on the Bounty" preview. Maybe "Captain Blood" Flynn was getting some seafaring tips to take onto the Warner set the next day!

(Continued from page 62)

"My brother will tell you how much I can spend on it and I'll leave the rest to you."

The architect had never encountered so delightful a client before, nor had the interior decorator, who followed him and received a similar carte blanche order. The results, one must say, did credit to both architect and decorator, and Bing, in his easy way, has enjoyed the whole thing very much.

It's really a pleasant way to live, when you think of it!

He has consistently broken Hollywood's most inviolable copy book maxim, which says that, in order to succeed, you must cultivate important people who may advance you by their favor. Bing does little entertaining. He has a few cronies with whom he likes to play cards, frolic or sing. None of them is likely to "advance" him. He will NOT make public appearances at which he must wear evening clothes, be gaped at or sign autographs. Despite his long exeperience as a public figure, he is really inherently shy. He used to have to do those things to earn his living. He doesn't have to any more . . . so he goes fishing.

He sulks and becomes downright pettish if anyone or anything interferes with his whims or his convenience. He was arrested a day or two ago for driving forty-two miles an hour in a twenty mile zone on a Hollywood thoroughfare. The arresting officer found a revolver in his car and Bing had left his gun permit at home. So the cop trundled him off to the station to explain these matters.

"It's a pity," Bing complained afterward, "a downright pity that I can't just drive down the street without some officer picking on me!"

Well, there you are. You and I drive our careful twenty miles an hour, smile prettily at the big shots, eat our spinach, remember that haste makes waste and that the only way to succeed at your job is to work, study, struggle and strive. And where do we get? And where is Bing?

I was a little impatient with Bing when I began to write this piece . . . but now, I dunno. I think I'll sleep until noon tomorrow, thumb my nose at the first cop I see and maybe at the first important producer. Maybe even at Will Hays! I'll let you know what happens . . . if I live through it!

The Modern Hostess

(Continued from page 21)

light, golden perfection. This last named pie has a crust made of crushed corn flakes and will delight those timid souls who fear to try their hand at making pastry.

But you really should have no further trouble in that direction if you'll just follow the directions, carefully, which I am giving you here. The number seven will prove lucky indeed to those wise women who successfully grasp the Seven Keys to Perfect Pastry and learn to recognize and achieve the Seven Signs of Pie success. But before listing these for you, let me present you with another piece of valuable advice. Send for this month's free recipe leaflet, now, before you forget.

ALL you have to do, you know, is to fill out the coupon on page 66 and mail it in to us. In return you'll receive a recipe card giving you the correct proportions for both a one-crust and a two-crust pie. You'll learn how to make a Lemon Pie with a light textured filling and a new corn flakes crust that will cause a sensation in the family. You'll be given specific directions for another novelty—Fried Mince Meat Pie. You'll know how to turn out a Banana Cream Pie that any professional pastry cook might well envy. But perhaps best of all is the fact that you'll collect for your

(Continued on page 66)

Here's Made-to-order Protection!

3 TYPES OF KOTEX

DESIGNED FOR DIFFERENT WOMEN—AND FOR DIFFERENT DAYS!

SAME PRICE AS REGULAR WONDERSOFT REGULAR JUNIOR SUPER KOTEX

IN THE BLUE BOX

Regular Kotex

For the ordinary needs of most women, Regular Kotex is ideal. Combines full protection with utmost comfort. The millions who are completely satisfied with Regular will have no reason to change.

IN THE GREEN BOX

Junior Kotex

Somewhat narrower — is this Junior Kotex. Designed at the request of women of slight stature, and younger girls. Thousands will find it suitable for certain days when less protection is needed.

IN THE BROWN BOX

Super Kotex

For more protection on some days it's only natural that you desire a napkin with greater absorbency. The extra layers in Super Kotex give you extra protection, yet it is no longer or wider than Regular.

All 3 types have these exclusive features:

"CAN'T CHAFE"

The new Kotex gives lasting comfort and freedom. The sides are cushioned in a special, soft, downy cotton—all chafing, all irritation is prevented. But sides only are cushioned—the center surface is left free to absorb.

"CAN'T FAIL"

For security Kotex has a channeled "Equalizer" center that guides moisture evenly the whole length of the pad. Gives "body" but not bulk—prevents twisting and roping. The filler is 5 times more absorbent than cotton.

"CAN'T SHOW"

The sheerest dress, the closest-fitting gown reveals no tell-tale lines when you wear Kotex. The ends are not only rounded but flattened and tapered besides. Absolute invisibility—no tiny wrinkles whatsoever.

WONDERSOFT KOTEX A SANITARY NAPKIN made from Cellucotton (not cotton)

Now A LASH BEAUTIFIER IN Creamy FORM

Ready to use . . . no water needed

A sensational new mascara called Creamy Winx

NOW every woman—no matter how skimpy her eyelashes—can have beautiful, alluring eyes—admired by all.

Easily! Instantly! Creamy Winx comes in a tube, ready to use. No mixing with water! No bother. As simple as using lipstick.

Always ready for use anywhere, any time. You simply squeeze out a bit of Creamy Winx on a dry brush and apply—instantly your lashes look longer, darker, more luxuriant. And natural, not artificial.

Creamy Winx keeps the lashes soft and silky, with no danger of brittleness and, of course, this new style Creamy Winx does not smart—it is tear-proof, smudge-proof. And absolutely harmless.

Today, buy a tube of this new Creamy Winx—Black, Brown and Blue—at all 10c counters.★

• • •

Winx Mascara is also presented in cake form, Black, Brown and Blue, 10c.★

CAKE
10c
WINX
WINX
CREAMY MASCARA
CREAMY

WINX

for Lovely Eyes

★If you are not near a 10c store, you may order direct from Ross Company, 243 West 17th Street, New York City, by sending 10c, checking whether you wish ☐ Creamy ☐ Cake ☐ Black ☐ Brown ☐ Blue.

Name ....

Street ....

City .... State ....

M-2-36

(Continued from page 64)

files an honest-to-goodness Brown Derby pie recipe! Only by taking a trip to Hollywood could you eat one just like it—or by writing in to me for the recipe! For I found out, in complete detail, how to make this perfectly marvelous pie—so that all you have to do is send in the coupon to get your copy of this recipe as well as the others.

Why not, when you are cutting out the coupon on page 67, clip the following directions, too, and mount them on filing cards for future reference.

The Seven Keys to Perfect Pastry

1. Everything used in the pastry-making must be cold—the mixing bowl, the ingredients, the rolling pin, the floured board, even the hands!
2. The flour should be sifted before being measured, then sifted twice more with the salt added.
3. Fresh, thoroughly chilled shortening, should be used. (Lard, vegetable shortening or butter, or a combination.) This should be cut into the flour with pastry mixer or two knives until mixture is full of lumps the size of small peas.
4. Ice water only should be used—and as little of that as possible. More pastry is spoiled by too much water than for any other reason.
5. Pastry should be handled as little as possible. When rolling, roll from the middle out to the edges, using light strokes.
6. Pastry should have a thorough chilling in the refrigerator, preferably before rolling; although it can be rolled at once, fitted into the pie plate and then chilled.
7. All pies should be baked at a high temperature for the first 10 or 15 minutes. The heat should then be reduced and the pie baked according to recipe instructions for that particular kind of pie.

The Seven Signs of Pie Success

1. A golden brown pastry shell without breaks or "bubbles" and with an attractive fluted edge, or—
2. A flaky two-crust pie—the under crust tender, not soggy; the upper crust well browned, or—
3. A flaky one-crust pie for fruits with well-spaced strips across the top in a lattice design, or—
4. A "novelty" pie shell made of sweetened cracker crumbs, bread crumbs, corn flakes, etc. These can be truly delicious but should be used only when specifically called for in the recipe.
5. A firm but not stiff cream or custard filling in any one of hundreds of different flavors, or—
6. A juicy but not runny fruit filling that retains the true flavor of the fruits used.
7. An even, golden-brown meringue that is fluffy, tender and fine textured that stands in tempting peaks of goodness and does not shrink or separate from the pie filling.

RUBY KEELER CONTEST NEWS

Our Modern Hostess Editor has made out the following list which should be of great assistance to everyone who plans to enter the Ruby Keeler Contest, described on pages 16, 17 and 18.

Listed below are food and cooking terms, arranged in alphabetical order. Naturally—at the present time—you're interested only in those which can be used in the contest. Therefore, we are giving you words beginning with B, C, E, L, N and R—since these are the letters that appear at least once in your Ruby Keeler Menu.

You are not restricted to the use of the words given here, of course. Probably you, yourself, will think of many that we have overlooked. But remember, whether you use a selection of the following words exclusively, or your own words, or a combination of both, your menu must provide a balanced meal—not one with two meats, three desserts and no vegetables.

So out with your pencils and paper, all of you, and try your skill at this fascinating new pastime. There's no reason why the men folk shouldn't be as good at it as the women, either, for here's their chance to tell the world what they like to eat without having to know how to prepare the things they mention.

Come along, then, everybody. Here's a long list of helpful words to start you off on the right track. And there are splendid prizes, as you probably know. They are pictured for you on page 16—except the money, and we'll leave it entirely up to you to make your own picture of what you could do with that, if you should win it. All these wonderful prizes are ready and waiting to be sent to the lucky winners—The Editor.

DICTIONARY OF FOOD, COOKING AND MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH B, C, E, L, N and R

"FOOD TERMS" refers to the names of foods, such as eggs, meats, bread, milk, fish, etc.
"COOKING TERMS" refers to different ways of preparing foods, such as broiling, stewing, mashing, baking, etc.
"MENU TERMS" refers to the names of special dishes, such as Bavarian cream, ragout of beef, scalloped potatoes, breaded cutlets, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "B": Beans, Broccoli, Bread, Beef, Butter, Beets, Bran, Bacon, Bananas, Bass, Brazil Nuts, Brussels Sprouts, Beans (string, baked or lima), etc.

SOME COOKING TERMS BEGINNING WITH "B": Baked, Boiled, Boned, Browned, Beaten, Buttered, Breaded, Braised, Broiled, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "B." Boston Baked Beans, Beef à la Mode, Brownies, Biscuit Tortoni, Brisket of Beef, Brown Betty, Butterscotch Sauce (or Pie), Brown Sauce, Bechamel Sauce, Bouillon, Boston Cream Pie, Breaded Veal Cutlet, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "C": Cabbage, Cream, Cauliflower, Chocolate, Chops, Celery, Cheese, Caviar, Calf's Liver, Cocoanut, Carrots, Chicken, Crackers, Cranberries, Coffee, Chutney, Chow-Chow, Corn, etc.

SOME COOKING TERMS BEGINNING WITH "C": Creamed, Candied, Canned, Caramelized, Chopped, Curried, (in) Chafingdish, (en) Casserole, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "C": Compote of Fruit, Caramels, Consomme, Creamed Soups, Crab Ravigote, Crab Meat Cocktail, Corn Fritters, Cornbread, Cheese Soufflé, Chowder, Canapés, Cocktails, Camembert Cheese, Conserve, Coleslaw, Corned Beef Hash, Cobbler (apple or peach), Croquettes (of veal, chicken or other meats), Croutons, Curry of Lamb, Club Sandwich, Claret Cup, Crepes Suzette, Chicken Maryland, Chicken (roasted, fried, broiled, en casserole, etc), Cinnamon Toast, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "E": Eggs, Eggplant, Endive, Escarole, Elderberries, Eels, etc.

SOME COOKING TERMS BEGINNING WITH "E": (All taken from the French) Escalloped (thin slices); Emince (in small pieces); En Brochette (on a skewer); En Casserole (cooked and served in a casserole); En Coquille (cooked and served in a shell); etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "E": English Mutton Chops, English Chow-Chow or Chutney, Eclairs, Egg Nogg (frozen); Eggs Benedict, (Eggs Goldenrod, Cocotte, Rivoli, au Gratin, Shirred, Baked, and countless others); Egg garnish for spinach, salads, etc.; Eggplant (stuffed, fried, scalloped); Egg Custard (or Egg Custard Sauce); Egg Canapes (with Sardines, Caviar, Ham, Watercress, etc.); Egg Balls for Soup, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "L": Lamb, Lamb Chops, Liver, Lobster, Lentils, Lettuce, Lemons, Leeks, Lapin (rabbit), Lamb Kidneys, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "L": Loin of Pork; Leg of Veal, Lamb, or Mutton (roasted); Lady Fingers; Lamb Croquettes (Lamb Fricassee, Barbacued, Stewed, Crown of, Casserole of, Breast of, Saddle of); Lemon Pie (Lemon Pudding, Sauce, Cake, Butter); Lemonade; Lemon Ice; Lettuce and Cucumber Salad (Lettuce and Tomato Salad or other combinations); Liver en Brochette, Liver and Bacon; (Lobster Thermidor (Lobster Creamed, Broiled, Newburg, Canapes, Etc.); Luncheon Rolls; Lyonnaise Potatoes; Lentil Soup; Layer Cake; etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "N": New Potatoes, New Asparagus, Noodles, Nuts, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "N": Noisette of Lamb, Napoleons, Neapolitan Ice Cream, Nesselrode Pudding, Neufchatel Cheese, New England Boiled Dinner, New England Clam Chowder, Newburg Sauce, Noodle Soup, Nut Bread (Nut Candies, Cakes, Bars, Salted, Glaced), Nut and Cream Cheese Balls, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "R": Rabbit, Romaine Salad, Rusks, Rolls, Ry-krisp, Rice, Raspberries, Radishes, Rhubarb, etc.

SOME COOKING TERMS BEGINNING WITH "R": Roasted, Rechauffée (reheated in brown sauce), Riced, Raised, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "R": Russian Dressing, Riced Potatoes, Ravioli, Roquefort Cheese (or Salad Dressing), Russian Tea, Rhubarb Pie (or Pudding), Raisin Pie (or Pudding), Raspberry Cream Pie, (Raspberry Sauce, Ice, Pudding, Jelly, Sherbet, etc.

THE MODERN HOSTESS
MODERN SCREEN MAGAZINE
149 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

Please send me a free leaflet containing Gene Raymond's recipes for special pies.

NAME..............................

STREET..............................

CITY................STATE..........

I'M SAVING MONEY ON FOOD BILLS EVERY WEEK AND WE HAVE THE MOST DELICIOUS MEALS EVER!

Read what this thrifty mother says—

"WHEN food prices—meat especially—started to go up, I was frankly worried," admits Mrs. A. L. Lippitt of Pelham, N. Y. "But I've learned how to feed my family well on even less than I used to spend. And my husband says we're 'living high'!

"Franco-American Spaghetti is such a help. We enjoy it so, I have it several times a week. Often I serve it for lunch or supper in place of meat. It's marvelous to combine with leftovers, too, and to 'dress up' cheaper cuts of meat. I simply couldn't get along without it."

Franco-American is a real "find" in these days of rising prices. It costs so little, tastes so good! Its rich, savory cheese-and-tomato sauce, made with eleven different ingredients, adds zest and flavor to the whole meal. Highly nourishing, too—a grand "energy food" for growing children. And they love it!

Franco-American comes all ready to heat and serve, no work at all. A can is usually no more than ten cents—less than three cents a portion. You couldn't buy all your ingredients and cook your own spaghetti for so little. Think of the work you're saved, too—the time and trouble. No need to fuss and bother with home-cooked spaghetti now.

"Franco-American has a far better sauce than mine," women say. See for yourself. Order a can from your grocer today.

Franco-American
SPAGHETTI

MADE BY THE MAKERS OF CAMPBELL'S SOUPS

Skin So Bad That PEOPLE TALKED!

This advertisement is based on an actual experience reported in an unsolicited letter. Subscribed and sworn to before me.

NOTARY PUBLIC

"All my friends had begun to talk about my complexion — it was so bad."

"Hearing over the radio how Yeast Foam Tablets had helped others, I decided to try them."

"Now my complexion is grand. My friends are amazed at the change."

THE BEST PROOF of what Yeast Foam Tablets may do for you is what they have actually done for others. That's why we have based this advertisement on a true experience—one of hundreds reported by grateful users of this convenient, easy-to-eat yeast.

If you would like to have a clearer, smoother skin, begin now to eat these tablets regularly. Their rich stores of precious corrective elements will quickly help to rid your system of the poisons which so often cause bad skin. And you should feel better as well as look better.

Ask your druggist for Yeast Foam Tablets today. Refuse all substitutes.

NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO.
1750 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free introductory package of Yeast Foam Tablets. M M 2-36

Name

Address

City State

Marys Methods for Holding a Beau

(Continued from page 49)

question can be put: why do girls put on so much and why do they let men catch them doing it? Touch up skillfully, but not extravagantly. They don't like us to freshen make-up when and wherever the mood strikes us. It's a give-away.

"Now I'm getting to the intelligence they all wish in a woman." Mary leaned back on the davenport in her living-room. She was going to town on this fascinating subject.

"We have read oodles about how men like us dainty, but dumb. This is not so any more, if it ever was. Dainty? Yes! But blotting paper? No! I believe that even in the days when women apparently had to be mentally backward, men yearned for real companions.

"Men say they are captivated by clever girls and it takes plenty of intelligence to have sense enough to be scintillating. The way to be their ideal, I've gathered from what they've told me about others, is to be able to reflect every male mood.

"Men don't care for girls who are given to spouting facts and theories, because men want to do the talking themselves. However, a girl should have as many accomplishments as she can possibly master. Then, whenever her boy friend chooses to speak on a particular topic, she can listen understandingly. Men don't get a kick out of simple yes-girls either. Being with this kind, I've been told, is as peppy as riding in a rumble seat by your lonely.

"In this connection we movie ladies take a rap. As I've said a one-track mind is not the thing. I must confess that this is what most Hollywood girls have. And when our single track is a career-one, it's all the worse. To be a success with a man, he must come first.

SHOULD a girl work at whatever talent she possesses? As a whole, men have no objections, provided a woman goes about it correctly. A man falls in love with a girl, remember, and not with her job. So, if she has a job it should merely serve as an occupation for that part of her day domesticity does not fill. Her career should never dominate.

"Now comes a chance for me to give still more advice," Mary sighed happily. A boy friend who'd driven up was allowed to wait outside until she finished her revelations.

"Don't waste time trying to become the life of the party. Men don't want to share you with a crowd and they hate loudness. Save all wisecracks for your girl chums.

"Be tactful when you're out socially. You may be dying to dance at that elegant place where your dolling up will be envied. But never do more than casually suggest heading there. And once is enough. It's sad, but men want to do the suggesting.

"Never nag. Men shun girls who attempt to boss them. Advice is a gift to be accepted from a man, but don't hand him any. And as for reforming him—a thousand times no! It's no use anyway. The only way to change a man is to be cautious and manage it so that he himself will alter to please you as a surprise!

"Men don't like a girl to drink. They want you to be a pal and at the same time to stay on your pedestal. They don't like girls who swear or tell off-color stories. They may play around with them, but they'll never get serious.

"The other men you've dated are a taboo topic. Men want girls who are wanted, but the boy friend isn't a fool. He'll investigate when he's sufficiently intrigued, so don't advertise. Men detest being obviously impressed. They don't care to hear where that handsome gent took you.

Isn't she cute? It's Marie Wilson who is busy stealing scenes in Warner Brothers' pictures these days. She's tiny, pert and blonde. Watch for her in "Miss Pacific Fleet." She's going places.

"Cattiness is a calamity. When he makes a remark about so-and-so being a wonder, don't say that the creature is a so-and-so if he'd only realize it. Spare him the truth. It'll merely bore him. And it robs you in his eyes of that understanding he must be certain you have.

OUTRIGHT jealousy is a vicious trait. If you are fond of him, trust him. Don't throw him at another girl and contrive to out-maneuver your rivals when it's necessary. But don't ever call him down for showing interest in a competitor.

"Let him beat you at sports. Men mechanically have a yen for dominating. You undermine his self-pride when you show him up as inferior in any athletic encounter. Fumble if you're too apt!

"Acquire the splendid trait of graciousness. A man will pardon so much if you're invariably affable and a superb hostess. Take his friends automatically as yours, even when he rushes them in on you. A man, however, should be made to respect you, so protest if you've not been treated politely.

"Flatter — constantly! Appreciation is an infallible trick. I've noted that older men are partial to being told they're just dear boys at hearts; the younger ones beam if you insinuate they're perfect devils.

"Be hard to get and a puzzle to hold. Sizzle with vitality—it's contagious!"

The handsome hero could be held off no longer. But before this canny Mary Carlisle let him in and me out, she added, "In this hectic Hollywood I haven't time to keep a diary. But I couldn't afford not to make memos of the things men tell me about other potential rivals!"

Tom's Rules for Sidestepping Trouble

(Continued from page 48)

pictures. What you may not know is that he is just as popular off the screen as on. He is an important member of Hollywood's younger social set and well liked by both men and women.

He always has a girl—usually three or four—but he has never been known as a Romeo. He has had his little love affairs and gotten over them. His name has never been mentioned in any sort of scandal and he has kept himself free from all sorts of entanglements. He seemed the ideal young man to ask what rules he follows to avoid making costly mistakes in Hollywood.

"There are a lot of don'ts for young men in Hollywood," he said seriously, and then confided some of his rules for keeping out of trouble.

"Don't drink in public, if you must drink, that's one of the important rules.

"Don't get a reputation as an habitual night clubber.

"Don't keep a bachelor apartment, if you can live any other way.

"Don't be seen too often with the same girl unless you have serious matrimonial intentions.

"Don't borrow or lend money.

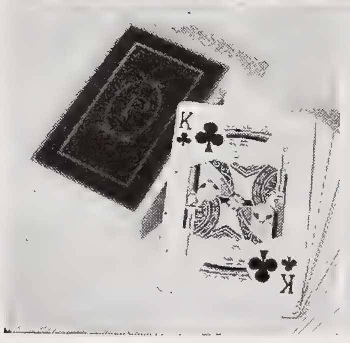
"Don't live beyond your means.

"I don't want to give the impression that I've sidestepped all the mistakes,"

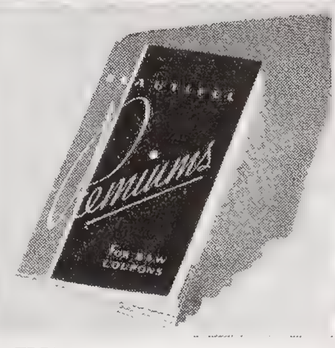
WARM HEARTS NEED KOOLS—Mounting sales tell us we hit the mark by offering a smoke that cools your throat while pleasing your palate. We've cork-tipped KOOLS to save lips and added a valuable B & W coupon in each pack good for handsome articles (offer good in U. S. A., only). Get a pack of KOOLS today. Cross our hearts, you'll love 'em! Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, Louisville, Kentucky.

KOOL
MILD MENTHOL
Cigarettes
CORK TIPPED
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
SAVE THIS VALUABLE B&W COUPON
REDEEMABLE
15¢
25¢ in Canada
COUPON

SAVE COUPONS . . . MANY HANDSOME NEW PREMIUMS



Playing Cards—Initial or fancy back. Best quality. 60 coupons. 2 decks—100



FREE. Write for illustrated 24-page B & W premium booklet No. 10

Men's Toilet Case—Leather. Complete fittings. Zipper close . . . 850 coupons

RALEIGH CIGARETTES...NOW AT POPULAR PRICES...ALSO CARRY B & W COUPONS

PARK & TILFORD'S

FAOEN

(FAY-ON)

PERFUMES

FAOEN romantic
Nº 3
FAOEN
PARK & TILFORD
alluring
Nº 19
enchanting
FAOEN
PARK & TILFORD
Nº 12
entrancing

PARK & TILFORD'S

FAOEN

(FAY-ON)

Beauty Aids

10¢ IN TEN CENT TUCKAWAY SIZES AS ILLUSTRATED AT ALL 5 & 10¢ STORES

he added hastily, "but I have been lucky. A lot depends on luck, you know. I've observed other fellows, some of them pals of mine, who may have been more careful than I have been, but sometimes they haven't had the breaks and they've gotten into entanglements of different kinds.

"When I came to Hollywood my parents came with me, which was my good fortune. And I had the added advantage of having had a theatrical background. Most of my life had been spent on the stage and I had done some picture work in the East."

TOM was one of those children who literally was born on the stage. His parents were vaudeville stars and from the first day he fluttered an eyelid, Mamma and Papa Brown were sure he would be a great actor. He more than fulfilled their fondest hopes when he made his first appearance at the age of eighteen months. He was carried on the stage and made an instantaneous hit by howling at the top of his voice. Professional jealousy must have entered in, for on his next appearance Tom was calmed by a piece of zweibach.

When he came to Hollywood he was just eighteen. He knew the game pretty well. He had seen more of life than the average boy his age.

"I was 'wiser' than most boys, just starting in pictures, and not as susceptible as I might have been," Tom said. "And one of the first important incidents that came under my observation in Hollywood impressed me more than anything has since.

"In the cast of one of my first pictures was another boy, a bit older than I, and a woman much older than either one of us. She was beautiful and experienced and we felt flattered when she seemed to take an interest in us. She said it was a motherly interest, but after a few days I began to think it was a queer kind of motherly interest. At every opportunity she would get one of us off in a corner and I began to feel very uncomfortable. However, at eighteen nothing is a serious problem and I didn't worry much about it.

"One night when we had finished looking at the day's rushes the director asked us to stay behind. He said he had something to show us. When we were alone he had some sound track run off. It was one of those long, quiet conversations between this woman and the other chap which a microphone, hanging directly over their heads, had picked up and recorded. Hearing it in the dark projection room, with every inflection of her voice, presented the whole thing to us just as it was, an ugly episode. The director, a very wise and understanding man, realized that it might be a very valuable lesson for us, and it was—for me, at any rate. I've steered clear of women who want to "mother" me ever since.

"The big, strong, silent men that women really 'go for' have their problems, too. It seems that the more glamorous a woman is, the better she likes a man who is as simple as an old wool sock. I could mention names, but I won't, and besides everyone knows some of the young men who have gotten away to a good start in a career and had it nearly ruined by a so-called love affair with the wrong woman.

THEN there is the danger of blackmail. Not for me, you understand. I'm just the boy they like to mother. But take a chap like Dick Powell, for instance, and there are many others. Dick is young,

You don't have to be told who this wistful looking little tramp is. Charlie Chaplin, of course, and as you will see him in his new picture, "Modern Times."

handsome, popular and making a lot of money. There must be a lot of girls who would like to marry him, and some of them might not be too scrupulous as to the methods they would employ to bring about that happy state. He must have to watch his step every minute to avoid heart balm suits, matrimonial entanglements and other troubles."

But let's take Tom's "don'ts" and see how he explains them. He mentioned the drinking problem first.

"I mentioned it first because it's one of the most important 'don'ts'," he said soberly. "Most people like a cocktail before dinner, but let an actor take one in a public place and it's all over Hollywood in an hour that he's a drunkard.

"Just the other night I was out with my mother. At another table sat a young actor, a friend of mine, with a drink in front of him. My mother looked over and then made a remark to me about his drinking so much. Imagine, my own mother!" And Tommy looked very distressed at the idea of a Brown making such a mistake.

"That's the way reputations are ruined in Hollywood. I might be up for a part some time and someone might just mention that I drink too much. One little remark like that might kill my chances of getting a good part. So you can see how important it is not to let such rumors get started.

"The night clubbing habit goes hand in hand with drinking. It's bad to get the reputation of being out every night. It hurts you in the business. Executives and directors see you out too often when you should be studying your lines for the next day's work and they get the idea you're not interested in your job. And if an actor isn't interested in his career, no one else is.

"As to the bachelor apartment, it's just that I know fellows who have had a lot of trouble because they had to live alone. There's nothing wrong about living alone, of course, but it's very easy for a gang of chiselers to get the habit of barging in on you if you do. They wouldn't think of it if you lived at home. As long as you have a drink in the house, the gang will come.

"I must sound like a lecturer," Tom laughed. But, urged a little, he continued.

"I avoid seeing too much of one girl because I'm not going to be married until I've saved $100,000," he declared, by way of explaining this rule.

"I've set that amount because most of the girls I meet are actresses who make a lot of money and are used to nice things and I don't think it would be fair to ask a girl to marry me without having something to offer her. And when I get married I want to take a six months' honeymoon. I've never been to Europe and I want to go there with my bride. And when we come home I want to come to a home—a nice home that belongs to me and not to some mortgage company.

"If you don't intend to get married, it's silly to go out steadily with one girl. It's dangerous, too, because you never know when you may fall in love. If I find myself falling in love with a girl, I don't see her for a while. A good way to have a lot of fun and avoid romance is to go out in a foursome.

"Another drawback about having serious affairs is that most of the girls I know are leading women. Well, you have a romance with a girl and sooner or later you are bound to break up. Then the next thing you know you have to play opposite her in a picture. And that's darned embarrassing." And Tom blushed and looked as uncomfortable as though he had gone through that very experience.

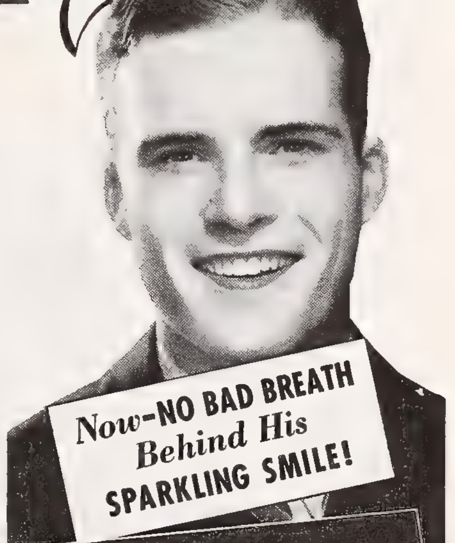
"That old saying about lending money

ALL RIGHT! WHAT DID I DO WRONG TONIGHT?
SINCE YOU ASK ME...HERE IT IS! YOU SIMPLY MUST SEE THE DENTIST —ABOUT YOUR BREATH!
THE DENTIST! WHAT IN THUNDER!
HE TOOK HELEN'S HINT
BILL, YOUR WIFE IS RIGHT. I ADVISE COLGATE DENTAL CREAM. ITS SPECIAL PENETRATING FOAM REMOVES THE CAUSE OF MOST BAD BREATH—AND MAKES TEETH SPARKLE, TOO.
RIGHT, DOCTOR! COLGATE'S FOR ME!
COLGATE'S SURE IS OKAY! MY MOUTH NEVER FELT SO CLEAN AND FRESH!
AT THE NEXT PARTY
DEAR, YOU'RE MUCH TOO POPULAR...I'VE HARDLY SEEN YOU ALL EVENING!
DON'T BLAME ME, HONEY... BLAME COLGATE'S!
NEVER HAD ANY TOOTHPASTE THAT MADE MY TEETH SO BRIGHT AND CLEAN, EITHER!

Most Bad Breath Begins with the Teeth!

MAKE sure you don't have bad breath! Use Colgate Dental Cream. Its special penetrating foam removes all the decaying food deposits lodged between the teeth, along the gums and around the tongue—which dentists agree are the source of most bad breath. At the same time, a unique, grit-free ingredient polishes the enamel—makes teeth sparkle.

Try Colgate Dental Cream—today! Brush your teeth . . . your gums . . . your tongue . . . with Colgate's. If you are not entirely satisfied after using one tube, send the empty tube to COLGATE, Jersey City, N. J. We will gladly refund TWICE what you paid.



Now—NO BAD BREATH Behind His SPARKLING SMILE!

20¢ LARGE SIZE
Giant Size, over twice as much, 35¢
COLGATE RIBBON DENTAL CREAM
Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Institute

A new and daintier technique for Feminine Antisepsis

Personal charm need no longer be threatened by a common and perplexing problem.

Zonitors, a new technique in feminine hygiene, provide complete antisepsis to end persistent odors and relieve other embarrassing, mentally disturbing occurrences. Zonitors are little snowy-white and greaseless suppozettes. The active ingredient is the world famous antiseptic, Zonite—high in medical esteem because completely effective yet free from "burn" danger to delicate tissues.

Quick, convenient Zonitors are ready for instant use. No mixing, fussing, or apparatus. They remain in effective contact for over eight hours (a requirement doctors stress) yet being greaseless, are completely removed with water.

Each dainty, white, odorless Zonitor is sealed in a separate glass vial, immaculately clean. Complete instructions in the package. At all druggists'. Mail coupon now for informative free booklet.

Zonitors FOR FEMININE HYGIENE
Snowy White • Greaseless

Zonitors, Chrysler Bldg., N.Y.C. Send, in plain envelope, free booklet, "The New Technique in Feminine Hygiene"
MS-62
Name and
Address...................................

Your Kodak Picture ENLARGED

FREE 8x10 Inch ENLARGEMENT of any SNAPSHOT

Your favorite snapshots of children, parents and loved ones are more enjoyable when enlarged to 8x10 inch size—suitable for framing. These beautiful, permanent enlargements bring out the details and features you love just as you remember them when the snapshots were taken. Just to get acquainted, we will enlarge any kodak picture, print or negative to 8x10 inches—FREE—if you enclose 25c to help cover our cost of packing, postage and clerical work. The enlargement itself is free. It will also be beautifully hand tinted in natural colors if you want it. We will acknowledge receiving your snapshot immediately. Your original will be returned with your free enlargement. Pick out your snapshot and send it today.

GEPPERT STUDIOS Dept. 239 Des Moines, Iowa

Two favorites who have been acting in England. Elissa Landi and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as they appear in "The Amateur Gentleman." Elissa looks lovely, doesn't she? She's back in this country now doing a Broadway play.

and losing a friend goes in Hollywood, just as it does any place else. And if you don't live beyond your means you won't have to borrow," he continued.

"Financial security means more in Hollywood than making a splash. What you have counts more than what you are and money in the bank means more than a lot of specially built cars and a stable of race horses."

TOM lives with his parents, nicely but not extravagantly. He has a good time and goes out a lot except when he is working. During production he doesn't go out at all. He lives just about as normal a life as it is possible for a popular juvenile to live. And he is one actor who hasn't a grievance. He is perfectly happy over his new Paramount contract.

He even thinks his salary is all right, which is something new in Hollywood, and is saving half of it every week—toward that $100,000 no doubt.

There is just one tiny disturbing element in the whole picture for Tom and that is the habit people have of referring to him as a "kid."

"In this business you have to keep young," he said. "But, on the other hand you have to be sophisticated. It's confusing because you never know when one or the other characteristic is going to play a dirty trick on you. I'm usually cast as a very young juvenile. Then if I happen to go out to dinner and take a cocktail, someone is sure to see me who has seen me in the picture as a very young boy. So what? So they are disillusioned.

"But all the minor sacrifices we have to make are more than compensated for by the benefits of a successful career. There's no other business that would pay me as well as acting and there's nothing else that I know of that I could do.

"I want to continue acting as long as I'm young. But when the cops stop saying 'Move over, buddie,' I want to quit because I never want to be old on the screen. Perhaps then I can be a writer. I want to write now and I get wonderful ideas for stories but when I start to work on them I realize my ideas are way above my ability to develop them. So it looks like I will have to wait until I grow up to my ideas."

Realizing that youth is a fault that will be overcome inevitably, Tom has written the following epitaph for himself:

"Dust is Brown and Brown is dust," which anyone must agree is descriptive and to the point.

Tom can take his rules as well as make them, as evidenced by his appearance last week on three separate occasions with three different girls. It didn't seem, to an observer, that this was particularly hard to take, moreover, for the girls were Mary Carlisle, Marsha Hunt and Maxine Doyle. It proves, however, that Tom used his head when he made his rules for watching his step.

. . . THERE'S GOOD NEWS ON PAGE 92 FOR MANY OF YOU WHO PARTICIPATED IN OUR $2500 CASH PRIZE "FORTY DAYS OF MUSA DAGH" CONTEST

"Women with Careers Should Be Shot!"

(Continued from page 39)

I'm a prize worrier. Careerist women always worry about themselves instead of about their husbands. . . .

"I know that the reason I drive around town in a small rattle-trap Ford, the reason I stay at the auto camp with Harmon, when I go North to be with him, is because I am trying to compensate him for the real wife I am not.

"If I were just Harmon's wife, I probably would expect what is known as a 'mo-tah' to drive about in; I would stay at a comfortable hotel in the North. But if I did that now, as Bette Davis, 'moom pitcher' actress, I would only make Harmon more uncomfortable, more humiliated than he probably is already. Oh, he doesn't know that he is—but I know it.

"Here's a funny thing—I'll tell about it first and explain it afterwards: I'm a fanatic about my house. I have a cleanliness complex. My house always looks as though I were just about to move out because half of the time the rugs and drapes are at the dry cleaners or there are professional cleaners in the house taking chairs and divans to pieces.

"I imagine I see dust where no one else can see a mite. I keep dusting things that are already dustless. I place and replace objects that were already in place. When I have guests, I sit on the edge of my chair, digging my fingernails into the palms of my hands for fear that someone will move a cigarette box half an inch or spill a drift of ash on the rug. Most of my friends know this and love to kid me by turning things upside down and flicking ashes about.

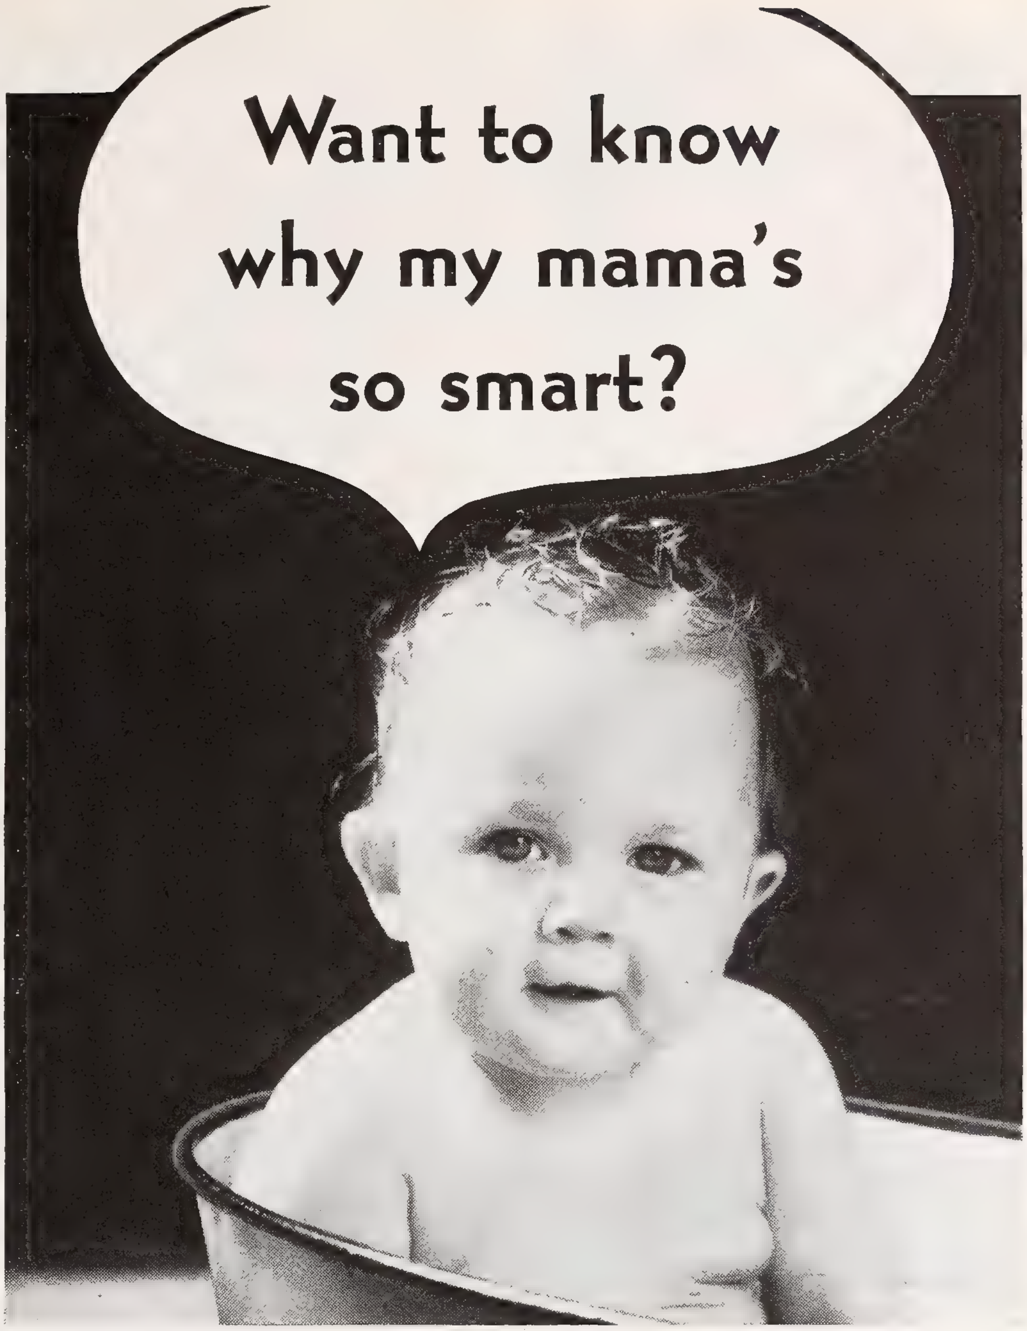
I FRET myself to death about whether the ice box is functioning as it should, whether the vacuum cleaner is working properly, whether the screens need painting, the floors need re-finishing. I clean out bureau drawers and book-shelves until I work myself—and my family—into a lather.

"Know why? It's because I'm a housewife at heart.

"I probably will never have a baby—a statement both tragic and true. And I won't have one because I was brought up to believe that motherhood should be sacred and very private. And I know that were I to be 'expecting' out here, I would be interviewed about it ten months before the blessed event. And I will NOT be subjected to that, nor subject any possible children to a career mother.

"I remember," said Bette, the while her alert, gray-blue eyes grew soft with reminiscence, "the way I dreamed when I was a child at home, in Boston. I thought that I would finish school and graduate in organdy. And then a tall, handsome stranger would appear and we would be married and live happily ever after. That is what should have happened to me—and to all women.

"I used to imagine the little white house 'we' would have and how my husband would refer to me, patronizingly but very tenderly, as 'the little woman' . . . and of what we would name the first boy and then the first girl. I thought of my future husband as a very important figure in the world and I saw myself in back of him, encouraging, stimulating, believing in him,



Want to know why my mama's so smart?

A tip from a young man 8 months old

THIS cute little rascal thinks he's got a very smart mama. And he has.

She's smart—because whenever he needs a laxative she gives him one he loves to take —Fletcher's Castoria! And does it taste good!

Mothers! You'll be glad to know that Fletcher's Castoria is made especially for children—even to the taste. You won't have to force it between their protesting lips. And that's important! For the revulsion and gagging a child goes through when taking a laxative he hates can shock his nervous system—and upset his tiny stomach.

Remember, Fletcher's Castoria is safe! There isn't a harmful ingredient in it. It contains no drugs, no narcotics. It is not a harsh purgative—won't cause griping pains.

Fletcher's Castoria is a child's laxative pure and simple.

It works gently, blandly—yet thoroughly.

Depend upon Fletcher's Castoria for your children—from babyhood to 11 years.

Get the thrifty Family Size bottle from your druggist. The signature Chas. H. Fletcher appears on every carton.

Chas H. Fletcher
CASTORIA
The Children's Laxative

from babyhood to 11 years

The 8th WOMAN gets more out of life

Eight million women have had to always consider the time of month in making an engagement — avoiding any strenuous activities on certain days.

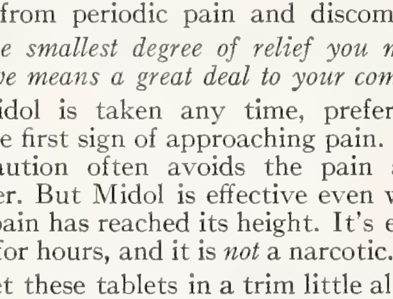
Today, a million escape this regular martyrdom because they have accepted the aid of Midol. A tiny white tablet, is the secret of the eighth woman's poise and comfort at this time.

Are you a martyr to regular pain? Must you favor yourself, and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol might change all this. Might have you your confident self, leading your regular life, free from periodic pain and discomfort.

The smallest degree of relief you might receive means a great deal to your comfort.

Midol is taken any time, preferably at the first sign of approaching pain. This precaution often avoids the pain altogether. But Midol is effective even when the pain has reached its height. It's effective for hours, and it is not a narcotic.

Get these tablets in a trim little aluminum case — they are usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or, a card addressed to Midol, 170 Varick St., N.Y., brings a trial box in plain wrapper.



ALWAYS HERSELF

That enviable woman who is never at a disadvantage, never breaks engagements, never declines dances (unless she wants to!) is apt to be the eighth woman who uses Midol.

hearing him say, at the end of a well-spent life, 'if it were not for you . . .'

"We will never hear that from our men, we women with careers. Never in that sweet, old-fashioned way. We may hear them say, 'If it had NOT been for you . . .' and they will be quite right. If it had not been for us, most of them would have kept their dignity and their self-respect. They would have preserved their traditional right to go out into the world and fight for us, feed us, clothe us, amuse us, take care of us. Of all these things we have robbed them—for what man needs to fight for me, who spends my days ably fighting for myself? What man needs to dress me, feed me, amuse me, take care of me? It would be a farce if Harmon should try—and he knows it.

"YOU may wonder," Bette said, with a short, unamused laugh, "what good it does me to tear myself to bits like this? Well, it does this much good, it keeps me from becoming smug and self-satisfied. It makes me laugh at myself when I put back my make-up, my lipstick, rouge, blondined hair and 'cute' clothes. It forces me to realize what a poor thing an actress is compared to a woman. About the same difference as there is between a pretty mechanical doll, which can do tricks, and a flesh and blood child.

"I can, and do, say to myself, 'So, what are you? You don't know much about anything, other than your own bag of tricks. You don't know music, not really. You know jazz because Harmon knows it and plays it. But if you heard a Bach concerto, you wouldn't recognize it even if it came up and spoke to you. You seldom read anything very worth while. You're reading scripts in your reading moments. You don't know anything about painting, or sculpture, or the law of atomic energy. You haven't time for anything other than to paint your own face and keep the chassis renovated. You don't even contribute peace and harmony to your husband.'

"I love to fight. I don't like to fight in the studio because I'd be accused of having 'temperament.' So, I take my love of fighting out on Harmon. I deliberately pick fights with him for the sheer love of fighting. No, not for the feminine joy of making up, either. I pass that up. I just like good fights and have 'em. I don't know what they're about—nothing, as a rule.

"Well," said Bette, "now you have it. I find, when I take myself to pieces, that I have sacrificed my dream of home, husband and motherhood to a career. Over the woman I have built the shell of the actress and within that shell the woman is pretty unhappy.

"And now I must dash for the studio to have a story conference. There's a laugh for your tag line!"

And Bette was gone, leaving me in the act of pulling the trigger!

They Hated to Do It

(Continued from page 41)

Howard was loaning her to one producer after another for sirenish and more sirenish roles. La Belle Harlow felt that she was being stamped for the rest of her natural life as a platinum siren. She almost cried as she told a friend of mine about it.

"EVEN my neighbors believe I am thoroughly bad," she said. "If I am recognized anywhere publicly, people turn and stare at me and I can see that accusing look in their eyes. There's a certain amount of animosity in the women's eyes and a certain amount of predatory acquisition in the men's. I hate myself. If I never do another picture, I will not do any more of these cheap roles."

And Miss Harlow was right. Although an extremely voluptuous looking individual, she proved herself a fine comedienne once given the chance. And an equally good dramatic actress. But she was forced in those early days to do things for which she positively hated herself.

Of course, I don't know whether Lily Pons actually disliked herself for this or not, but I think it extraordinarily funny that this famous operatic diva had her introduction to studio work in one of the most intimate boudoir scenes imaginable. She was hysterical with laughter when she talked about it afterward, but from reports I heard when I checked up on the incident, she was even more giggly while the scene was going on.

Before, I tell you this, get a mental picture of Lily Pons. Here she is, a star of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company! She has been flattered by movie producers and told that they want her in pictures because of her lovely, lovely voice. Yes, she would have to act a bit—but the voice, it was the important thing! And so, as you may see, she was quite unprepared for her first day in the movies.

Told to report on the set at 9 a.m. in a pair of pajamas for tests with Henry Fonda, she merely shrugged her shoulders with, "These pictures, they are veree strange, but I want to be good sport." Imagine her amazement upon arriving to see twin beds and standing beside one of them, in pajamas, too, a handsome dark young man. The director, John Cromwell, introduced him.

"Miss Pons, I should like to have you meet your leading man, Mr. Henry Fonda. He's going to play this scene with you. Now, Miss Pons, if you will just climb into bed, Mr. Fonda will follow."

The thing that Bill Powell positively detests with all his heart and soul is being pointed out as the ladies' man of the screen. He writhes at the thought. He foams at the mouth and explodes in profanity when the publicity department of his studio asks him to give interviews on his male sex appeal.

RECENTLY they phoned to ask him to give a story on "Ten Things To Do To Hold a Woman." Bill's language when told the subject of the article would have resulted in his having his 'phone yanked if the A. T. and T. girls had heard him!

He fought against his part in "Escapade," not because he was playing with Luise Rainer, who was then unknown and which would be reason enough to deter some stars from making this film, but because he thought the film made him out a "ladies' man."

"I tell you," he told me, when, tactfully as possible I brought up the subject, "my stomach turns over when anyone mentions ladies' man!"

Rosalind Russell, then new to the screen, was disturbed over her bad woman role in "West Point of the Air," in which she was continually luring a nice young man, as played by Bob Young, into compromising situations.

"Not only did this make me feel despicable and make me wonder if the characterization might be taken seriously by young girls who would see me and maybe in real life try to emulate the character, but," said she with her unusual frankness, "I was worried for fear I would become typed in siren roles."

George Raft, the sinister-looking patent leather shoe boy from New York, got about the maddest he's ever been in Hollywood, when they tried to make him say some derogatory lines about a boy's mother in the picture, "Bolero."

Georgie, who loves his own mother dearly and spends a great deal of his time when in New York with her, went white with rage when they asked him to say something like this:

"C'mon boys, take a pitcher of me puttin' posies on me old lady's grave. It'll make swell publicity!" Mr. Raft wouldn't do it. He expressed himself openly on the subject, and in conclusion vehemently remarked, "I'd have hated myself if I'd done it."

In "Diamond Jim," Jean Arthur objected so strenuously to some of the extremely low cut dresses she was supposed to wear that she ripped and stamped on them in the privacy of her dressing-room and said she would positively detest herself if she had to wear them.

I happen to know how ZaSu Pitts felt being photographed for a Universal comedy as she was bending over, getting out of a Pullman berth. The shot was taken of her back. ZaSu protested the scene and when that got her nowhere, refused to make it.

NOTHING daunted, the director took the shot with her stand-in. When ZaSu heard this, she went to Dave Diamond, the producer, and cried, "It's not for myself that I am objecting so strenuously," she said. "But my children are growing up. They are at the sensitive age, fourteen and fifteen years old; they go to pictures with their friends and how would they feel if, while sitting in a movie theatre some night, there was flashed on the screen a picture of their mother in such a position. It makes me ill to think of it."

Diamond removed the scene from the picture.

Alison Skipworth was offered the role that Alice Brady played in "Lady Tubbs." When she read the script, she found a scene in which she fell off a horse, flat on, what is sometimes called, the "fanny." She returned the script to Alan Crosland with, "That you should insult me by offering me such a thing!" "Is it that bad?" asked Crosland. "It's awful," returned Skippy. "I won't do it, even if Paramount sues me."

Alice Brady eventually did the picture and did the scene but with a light comedy touch which removed any taint of vulgarity. If Skippy, an elderly woman, had played this, I am sure it would not have suited her nor pleased audiences. She would have hated herself for the job.

As I remarked before, this subject has great possibilities and we could go on and on, for, the more seasoned a trouper, the more sensitive he is about doing unpleasant things upon the screen.

However, I began by asking how you supposed Jimmy Cagney, who is a pretty swell person and a real man, felt when he tossed the grapefruit and planted that well-aimed kick in "Public Enemy"? . . .

Yes, you're right, he hated himself for days! Mrs. Cagney had to nurse his ego back to normal by telling him that "after all, dear, it was only in acting."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Eventually, Cagney bought himself a yacht so, you see, there's always a way to heal bruised feelings!

3 Brunettes—

WHICH SHOULD USE
A BLONDE POWDER ?

Over 200 girls' skins color-analyzed!

LOOK AT THEM! All 3 true brunettes—yet no two have skins alike. They don't dare use the same shade of powder!

Dark-haired Helen Kirk-Jones, in the center, has that very white skin which a brunette powder simply kills. It takes a blonde's favorite shade—Pond's Rose Cream—to give it the radiance she needs.

Mary Blagden, at the top, knows that her creamy skin clears up and sparkles best with Pond's Brunette. While brown-haired Sally Hanford has a darker skin which lights up glowingly with Pond's Rose Brunette.

It just goes to show—never be too quick to use "dark" powder, simply because you have dark hair. You may be the Helen Kirk-Jones type! Let your skin decide . . .

TO FIND OUT what makes certain skins luminous—others deadly dull!—Pond's analyzed over 200 girls' skins. They discovered that hidden skin tints make the difference.

The loveliest creamy skin owed its glow to a hint of sparkling green. While dazzling fair skins had a brilliant blue to thank!

Now Pond's has blended these amazing tints into entirely new shades. No matter what beauty tint your skin lacks—one of the new Pond's shades gives it to you! One warms up faded pallor. Another turns sallow skins faintly rosy . . . Florid skins tone down . . . Muddy skins clear and brighten!

Try them free with the coupon below. See how—

ROSE CREAM gives radiance to fair-skinned blondes and brunettes
NATURAL makes blonde skin transparent
BRUNETTE clears and brightens creamy skins
ROSE BRUNETTE warms up dull skins
LIGHT CREAM gives pearly tone

Texture? Not airy-light. Not heavy, either. Pond's Powder is fine—spreads evenly and clings. It comes in glass jars—to "hold" its perfume, to show the shade clearly. Jars at reduced prices, 35¢ and 70¢. Boxes, 10¢ and 20¢, increased in size.

FREE 5 Lively New Shades Mail coupon today
(This offer expires April 1, 1936)

POND'S, Dept. B-94, Clinton, Conn. Please rush, free, 5 different shades of Pond's new Powder, enough of each for a thorough 5-day test.

Name____________________
Street____________________
City______________State________

Copyright, 1936, Pond's Extract Company

modern screen movie scoreboard

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Accent on Youth (Paramount)	3★
Age of Indiscretion (M-G-M)	2★
Alias Bulldog Drummond (GB)	2★
Alias Mary Dow (Universal)	2★
Alibi Ike (Warners)	3★
Alice Adams (RKO)	4★
Anna Karenina (M-G-M)	4★
Annapolis Farewell (Paramount)	2½★
The Arizonian (RKO)	3★
Bad Boy (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Barbary Coast (United Artists)	3★
Becky Sharp (RKO)	3★
The Big Broadcast of 1936 (Para.)	3★
The Bishop Misbehaves (M-G-M)	3★
Black Fury (1st Nat'l.)	4★
Black Sheep (Fox)	2★
Break of Hearts (RKO)	3★
Brewster's Millions (United Artists)	2★
The Bride of Frankenstein (Univ.)	3★
Bright Lights (1st Nat'l.)	3★
Broadway Gondolier (Warners)	3★
BroadwayMelody of 1936(M-G-M)	4★
Call of the Wild (20th Century)	3★
Cardinal Richelieu (United Artists)	4★
Car 99 (Paramount)	3★
Case of the Curious Bride (1st Nat'l.)	3★
The Case of the Lucky Legs (1st Nat'l.)	2★
Charlie Chan in Egypt (Fox)	3★
Charlie Chan In Shanghai (20th-Fox)	2★
China Seas (M-G-M)	4★
The Clairvoyant (GB)	2★
Clive of India (20th Century)	4★
College Rhythm (Paramount)	3★
Crime and Punishment (Columbia)	3★
The Crusades (Paramount)	4★
Curly Top (Fox)	3★
Dante's Inferno (Fox)	2★
The Dark Angel (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
The Daring Young Man (Fox)	2★
David Copperfield (M-G-M)	5★
Diamond Jim (Universal)	3★
Don't Bet on Blondes (Warners)	2★
Doubting Thomas (Fox)	3★
Dr. Socrates (Warners)	2★
Escapade (M-G-M)	3★
Escape Me Never (United Artists)	3★
Every Night at Eight (Paramount)	2★
The Farmer Takes a Wife (Fox)	3★

Picture and Producer	General Rating
A Feather in Her Hat (Columbia)	2★
The Flame Within (M-G-M)	2★
Forsaking All Others (M-G-M)	3★
Four Hours to Kill (Paramount)	3★
Frisco Kid (Warners)	3★
Front Page Woman (Warners)	3★
The Gay Deception (20th Cent.-Fox)	3★
The Gilded Lily (Paramount)	3★
Ginger (Fox)	3★
The Girl Friend (Columbia)	1★
The Girl from 10th Ave. (1st Nat'l.)	2★
The Glass Key (Paramount)	3★
Goin' to Town (Paramount)	3★
Go Into Your Dance (1st Nat'l.)	3★
The Good Fairy (Universal)	3★
Goose and the Gander (1st Nat'l).	2★
Grand Exit (Columbia)	1★
Hands Across the Table (Par.)	3★
Hard Rock Harrigan (Fox)	2★
Harmony Lane (Mascot)	2★
Here Comes Cookie (Paramount)	3★
Here Comes the Band (M-G-M)	1★
Here Is My Heart (Paramount)	4★
Here's to Romance (20th Cent.-Fox)	2★
Hold 'Em Yale (Paramount)	3★
Hooray for Love (RKO)	2★
I Dream Too Much (RKO)	3★
I Found Stella Parish (Warners)	2★
I Live for Love (Warners)	2★
I Live My Life (M-G-M)	2★
The Informer (RKO)	4★
The Irish in Us (1st Nat'l.)	3★
The Iron Duke (GB)	3★
It Happened in New York (Univ.)	3★
It's in the Air (M-G-M)	2★
Jalna (RKO)	3★
Java Head (First Division)	2★
King Solomon of B'wy. (Universal)	1★
Laddie (RKO)	3★
Lady Tubbs (Universal)	2★
The Last Days of Pompeii (RKO)	4★
The Last Outpost (Paramount)	2★
Let 'Em Have It (United Artists)	3★
Let's Live Tonight (Columbia)	2★
Life Begins at Forty (Fox)	4★
Little Big Shot (Warners)	2★
The Little Colonel (Fox)	3★
Lives of a Bengal Lancer (Para.)	5★

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Living on Velvet (Warners)	2★
Love in Bloom (Paramount)	2★
Love Me Forever (Columbia)	4★
Loves of a Dictator (GB)	3★
Mad Love (M-G-M)	2★
Manhattan Moon (Universal)	1★
The Man on the Flying Trapeze (Par.)	3★
The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo (20th Cent.-Fox)	2½★
Mark of the Vampire (M-G-M)	2★
Mary Burns, Fugitive (Paramount).	3★
McFadden's Flats (Paramount)	2★
The Melody Lingers On (U. Artists)	2★
Men of Tomorrow (London Films).	1★
Men Without Names (Paramount).	3★
Metropolitan (20th Century-Fox)	4★
A Midsummer Night's Dream (Warners)	5★
Mississippi (Paramount)	3★
Mr. Dynamite (Universal)	2★
Murder in the Fleet (M-G-M)	2★
Murder Man (M-G-M)	2★
Music Is Magic (20th Century-Fox)	1½★
Mutiny on the Bounty (M-G-M)	4★
Naughty Marietta (M-G-M)	4★
Nell Gwyn (United Artists)	3★
New Adventures of Tarzan (Rep.).	1★
A Night at the Ritz (Warners)	2★
No More Ladies (M-G-M)	3★
Oil for the Lamps of China (1st Nat'l.)	4★
One More Spring (Fox)	4★
Orchids to You (Fox)	2★
O'Shaughnessy's Boy (M-G-M)	3★
Our Little Girl (Fox)	2★
Page Miss Glory (Warners)	3★
Paris in Spring (Paramount)	3★
The Payoff (Warners)	2★
The People's Enemy (RKO)	2★
People Will Talk (Paramount)	2★
Peter Ibbetson (Paramount)	3★
Princess O'Hara (Universal)	3★
Private Worlds (Paramount)	4★
Public Hero No. 1 (M-G-M)	3★
The Public Menace (Columbia)	1★
The Rainmakers (RKO)	1★
The Raven (Universal)	2★
Red Salute (Reliance-United Artists)	2★

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Rendezvous (M-G-M)	3★
The Return of Peter Grimm (RKO)	3★
The Right to Live (Warners)	3★
Roberta (RKO)	5★
Sanders of the River (United Artists)	2★
The Secret Bride (Warners)	3★
Shadow of Doubt (M-G-M)	3★
Shanghai (Paramount)	2★
She (RKO)	2★
She Couldn't Take It (Columbia)	2½★
She Married Her Boss (Columbia)	4★
Shipmates Forever (1st Nat'l.)	3★
A Shot in the Dark (Chesterfield)	2★
Silk Hat Kid (Fox)	1★
Smart Girl (Paramount)	2★
Society Doctor (M-G-M)	3★
So Red the Rose (Paramount)	3★
Special Agent (Warners)	2★
Splendor (Goldwyn)	2★
Star of Midnight (M-G-M)	3★
Stars Over Broadway (Warners)	3★
Steamboat Round the Bend (Fox)	3★
Thanks a Million (20th Cent.-Fox)	3½★
The 39 Steps (GB)	4★
This Is the Life (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Three Kids and a Queen (Universal)	2★
The Three Musketeers (RKO)	3★
Thunder in the Night (Fox)	2★
Times Square Lady (M-G-M)	2★
Thunder Mountain (20th Cent.-Fox)	1★
Top Hat (RKO)	4★
Transatlantic Tunnel (GB)	3★
Transient Lady (Universal)	2★
Traveling Saleslady (1st Nat'l.)	2★
The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes(GB)	2★
Two for Tonight (Paramount)	1★
Vagabond Lady (M-G-M)	2★
Vanessa (M-G-M)	3★
Way Down East (20th Century-Fox)	2★
The Wedding Night (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
We're in the Money (Warners)	2★
The Werewolf of London (Universal)	2★
West Point of the Air (M-G-M)	3★
Wings in the Dark (Paramount)	3★
The Woman in Red (Warners)	2★

Here is a condensed version of the Modern Screen Movie Scoreboard! You'll find it simple to follow and a valuable guide in choosing your film entertainment. Instead of giving you the individual ratings of Modern Screen and authoritative newspaper movie critics all over the country, we have struck an average of their ratings. You'll find this average under the heading, General Rating, beside each picture. Ratings: 5★, extraordinary; 4★, very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor.

She Got $400 for a

I will pay CASH for OLD COINS, BILLS and STAMPS

Amazing Profits! For Those Who Know OLD MONEY!

Up to $80 for certain copper cents

There are single pennies that sell for $100.00. There are nickels worth many dollars — dimes, quarters, half dollars and dollars on which big cash premiums are paid. Each year a fortune is offered by collectors for rare coins and stamps for their collections. THE PRICES PAID ARE AMAZING.

It Pays To Post Yourself on the Big Values of Old Coins and Stamps

Up to $50 for this Nickel

Knowing about coins pays. Andrew Henry, of Idaho, was paid $900 for a half-dollar, received in change. A valuable old coin may come into your possession or you may have one now and not know it. Post yourself.

HUGE PREMIUMS FOR OLD STAMPS—Some old stamps bring big premiums. An old 10c stamp, found in an old basket, was recently sold for $10,000. There may be valuable stamps on some of your old letters. IT WILL PAY YOU TO KNOW HOW TO RECOGNIZE THEM.

Will pay up to $50

Let Me Send You My Big Illustrated Coin Folder! It Will Open Your Eyes!

Mrs. Dowty of Texas, sold B. Max Mehl one-half dollar for $400.

I Will Pay Up To $6,500.00 FOR ONE OLD COIN

I PAID $200.00 TO J. D. MARTIN OF VIRGINIA FOR JUST ONE COPPER CENT.

"Please accept my thanks for your check for $200.00 in payment for the copper cent I sent you. I appreciate the interest you have given this transaction. It's a pleasure to do business with a firm that handles matters as you do. I wish to assure you it will be a pleasure to me to tell all my friends of your wonderful offer for old coins." Julian D. Martin, Virginia.

This is but one of the many similar letters I am constantly receiving. Post yourself! It pays! I paid Mr. Manning, of N. Y., $2,500 for a single silver dollar. Mrs. G. F. Adams, of Ohio, received $740 for some old coins. I paid W. F. Wilharm, of Pa., $13,500 for his rare coins. I paid J. T. Neville, of N. Dak., $200 for a $10 bill he picked up in circulation. I paid $1,000 to Mr. Brownlee, of Ga., for one old coin. Mr. Brownlee says: "Your letter received with the check for $1,000 enclosed. I like to deal with such men as you and hope you continue buying coins for a long time." In the last 34 years I have paid hundreds of others handsome premiums for old bills and coins.

All Kinds of OLD COINS, Medals, Bills and Stamps Wanted

$1.00 to $1,000 paid for certain old cents, nickels, dimes, quarters, etc. Right now I will pay $50.00 for 1913 Liberty Head nickels (not buffalo), $100 for 1894 dimes, "S" Mint; $8.00 for 1853 quarters, no arrows; $10.00 for 1866 quarters, no motto; $200.00 each for 1884 and 1885 Silver Trade Dollars, etc., etc.

I HAVE BEEN BUYING OLD MONEY FOR 34 YEARS

Any bank in Fort Worth or Dun & Bradstreets will testify as to my responsibility. My volume of business, built on fair and prompt dealings for 34 years, is such that I own and occupy my own building devoted to my coin business. You will find every representation I make to be true and not exaggerated. It will pay you to do business with me.

Copr. 1936

USE THE COUPON BELOW!

Send the coupon below and 4c for my Large Illustrated Coin and Stamp Folder and further particulars. Write today for this eye-opening, valuable wealth of information on the profits that have been made from old money. No obligation on your part. You have nothing to lose--everything to gain. It may mean much profit for you. Est. 34 years.
Largest Rare Coin Company in U. S.

Up to $225 for this one

FILL OUT & MAIL NOW

To B. MAX MEHL, 187 Mehl Bldg., FORT WORTH, TEXAS

Dear Mr. Mehl:—Please send me your Large Illustrated Coin and Stamp Folder and further particulars, for which I enclose 4 cents.

NAME____________________________________

ADDRESS________________________________

CITY____________________STATE____________

B. MAX MEHL [illegible]
187 Mehl Building FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

than Hemorrhoids, or, more frankly, Piles?

The suffering is well nigh inexpressible and the sad part of it is that, on account of the delicacy of the subject, many hesitate to seek relief. Yet there is nothing more crushing or more liable to serious outcome than a bad case of Piles.

Yet blessed relief from Piles of all forms is found today in the treatment supplied in Pazo Ointment. Three-fold in effect, Pazo does the things necessary.

3 Effects

First of all, it is soothing, which relieves soreness and inflammation. Second, it is lubricating, which makes passage easy and painless. Third, it is astringent, which tends to reduce the swollen blood vessels which are Piles.

Results!

Pazo comes in Collapsible Tube with Detachable Pile Pipe which permits application high up in rectum where it reaches and thoroughly covers affected parts. Pazo also now comes in suppository form. Pazo Suppositories are Pazo Ointment, simply in suppository form. Those who prefer suppositories will find Pazo the most satisfactory as well as the most economical.

Try It!

All drug stores sell Pazo-in-Tubes and Pazo Suppositories, but a trial tube is free for the asking. Just mail the coupon or a penny postcard.

Grove Laboratories, Inc.
Dept. 18-M, St. Louis, Mo.

FREE

Gentlemen: Please send me, in PLAIN WRAPPER, your liberal free trial size of PAZO Ointment

NAME______________________________
ADDRESS___________________________
CITY___________________STATE_________

(Continued from page 52)

complexes. Love freed me!" She is surprisingly analytical. "I am sure that when I left Hollywood to marry I drew my first independent breath. The general opinion was that my career was finished. I agreed. It was a relief to have the whole thing over!"

Not having come up to her goal, she faced the fact that apparently she was not destined for acting. She had too much pride to hang on.

The real explanation for her "revival" is an emotional one. Actually, she insists, her luck began with love!

For the right slant on the strange twist romance has given to Jean's life, let's skip back for a brushing-up on her as she was before her "break."

She had no theatrical heritage and her three brothers, all years older than she, grew up to have average lives. The daughter of a portait photographer she was born in New York City.

"We moved about to a number of towns while I was in the grammar grades and I was always on the verge of making friends when we were off again." They returned to New York when she was ready for high school and the great building full of pupils was a new, bewildering problem, for Jean was a shy child.

Jean wanted a safe future, one which would allow her to stay in her shell. Meeting people was customarily sheer agony. She dreamt of being irresistible and then invariably turned up so tongue-tied that she frightened folks away.

She planned to go to college, and become a teacher. Posing for commercial artists, she earned the money to realize this objective. A movie scout admired her youthful charm and looked up the original. He offered her a test. She knew he couldn't be very serious, not about her! But he was, for he signed her to a contract and she and her mother were whizzed off to Hollywood. Jean was only sixteen.

Naturally she was unprepared to act with experienced performers, which was precisely what was expected of her. That was the silent era when one could get by easier, and somehow she managed to satisfy. Those years were full of constant adventure for the bashful girl who lived them.

She was habitually humble. Jean sat on the edge of the sets, between shots, as inconspicuously as possible. Inevitably she went through her scenes as she was told. No one requested her own interpretation and she would have been flabbergasted if they had. She was with elders who, automatically, were wiser.

"It wasn't so much fun, playing in pictures then. My roles were vapid. And I didn't speak up.

"As for going to parties and premières—oh, I was petrified at every invitation! It is silly to remember now, but it was no joke to me in those days. Honestly, I used to try to think of a clever reply to make, and it took me so long that when I'd formulated it the conversation was already off on another track! I was too anxious, too convinced I was going to seem dumb. Instead of relaxing, I was so self-conscious that I built a barrier around myself."

Along came the miracle—love. How slyly she was led to open her eyes to her absurdness!

The man was a prosperous young New York realtor who was spending some time in California. Indeed, he was residing with his grand-parents on the identical street in Beverly Hills where Jean's house was. They were thrown together by a mere coincidence, but Frank Ross was discerning enough to keep pursuing Jean until she admitted she loved him.

It so happened that he was able to do her a little courtesy. Subsequently, he wondered aloud if she'd care to go to the fights that evening. Jean had never been to the fights, nor had she ever contemplated attending them. But here was this exceedingly attractive man proposing a date, and she didn't want him to think she was high-hat. Which conclusion he'd surely reach if she declined, her feminine intuition reminded her.

So he hustled her down to the noisy stadium and his enthusiam was contagious. He had such a direct, healthy attitude towards everything. He was, principally, unafraid. Jean had a glorious hunch that she was going to adore him.

They said good night, but not goodbye. He hinted that he would be telephoning very shortly.

This debonair Frank Ross is the kind of man who, when he declares he's going to do a thing, follows through. He soon informed the astonished, thrilled Jean that he was going to marry her.

At last Jean made her first mature decision. She examined herself as an actress. More importantly, as a person. In the former guise she saw that no one had any particular faith in her. As a person, she sensed that Frank's love was more precious than any mere fame could be. It promised a whole lifetime of happiness, the companionship which only a man can bring to a woman. It was what she had lacked, really.

"Hollywood has given me this second chance because now I am more nearly what's wanted," she contends. Fortified by stage training and a poise which only well-rounded living brings, she has a career that the yesteryears never foresaw. "And had I not fallen in love, and so escaped from the one-track rut I was in, I doubt if I'd have succeeded like this.

"I was fortunate, of course, that Frank is as he is. Unconsciously I absorbed his natural confidence. I came to comprehend how colorless I'd been, how I'd limited myself, and how needlessly! Everyone has wonderful potentialities, but often it takes the influence of a beloved one to develop a girl or a boy.

"We settled in an apartment in the heart of New York City. I had nothing in view but being a good wife." This is no mean goal, and that Jean fills the requirements is shown by the devotion which exists between these two after four years.

HER husband is a Princeton man and he has a genial, amusing way that has won him friends among the most charming people in New York. Jean was promptly accepted as a member of this crowd. It never dawned on them that she might be shy. She, in turn, was delighted to find that some people today are devoid of pretensions. Their opinions intrigued her, so she began cultivating ideas of her own. She noticed that they went places to enjoy themselves, and did it without worrying about who had the latest gown or boy-friend. They were accustomed to a reasonable use of luxury and leisure.

"I believe most of us are swayed by our environment, unwittingly. In Hollywood the chief danger, for me anyway, was not the fancied hey-hey lure. It was the other extreme. One is apt to become

POPULAR PEGGY uses easy Tintex for Faded Apparel and Home Decorations

1

Peggy has not a lot of dollars. But she has a lot of sense. So, every so often she goes over her entire wardrobe and restores smart new color to everything that needs it.

2

To accomplish this, Peggy, of course, uses Tintex. She knows that no other tints and dyes will give her such beautiful, perfect results . . . so quickly and easily.

3

And Peggy does not forget to use Tintex for her faded home decorations, too. Her curtains and drapes, lamp shades, slip covers, etc., are fresh and gay after their Tintexing.

4

Peggy's friends envy the variety and vivacity of her wardrobe. They say that is why she is so popular. And when they ask her secret, she says, frankly—"Tintex".

Tintex

World's Largest Selling

TINTS AND DYES

41 Brilliant long-lasting colors. At all drug, notion and toilet goods counters.

PARK & TILFORD
Distributors

Tintex
TINTS AS YOU RINSE
ECRU
(Bisque)

TINTEX IS COLOR-MAGIC FOR EVERY FADED FABRIC

Free
DRAWING TEST

If you like to draw, test your sense of design, color, proportion, etc., with our simple Art Ability Test. An opportunity to get a frank opinion, free, as to whether your talent is worth developing.

Magazines, newspapers, publishers and advertisers spend millions yearly for illustrations. Design and color influence the sale of most things we buy. Artists have become important to industry. Machines can not displace them. If you have talent, train it. Drawing may be your surest road to success.

The Federal Schools, affiliated with a large art, engraving and printing institution, has trained many young men and women now serving industry as designers or illustrators, capable of earning from $1,000 to $5,000 yearly. Its Home Study courses in Commercial Art, Illustrating and Cartooning, contain exclusive illustrated lessons by many famous artists. Practical instruction by experienced men is the reason for its many years' outstanding success. Courses sold on easy payments.

Send today for Art Test and Free Book explaining present opportunities in art. Just fill out and mail coupon below.

FEDERAL SCHOOLS, INC.
2996 Federal Schools Bldg.
Minneapolis, Minn.

Send me, without obligation, your Art Test and Free Book.

Name..
Address.....................................
....
Age...... Occupation... ....

BUNIONS Reduced Quickly
Pain Stops At Once! Write for
Free Sample of Fairyfoot Treatment.
No obligation. Dept. 2712 Fairyfoot Company
1223 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

BE A NURSE

MARRIED WOMEN EARN $25-$35

You can learn at home in spare time to be a "practical" nurse. One graduate saved $400 while learning. A housewife earned $430 in 3 months. Clear, simple lessons. Course endorsed by physicians. Est. 37 years. Thousands of graduates. Equipment included. High school not required. Easy tuition payments. Men, women, 18-60. Add to your family income!

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 232, 100 E. Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 32 sample lesson pages.

Name ____________________
(State whether Miss or Mrs.)
City ____________ State ____________ Age ____

too solitary, to be so intent on success that the world is gradually shut out and one's self looms bigger and bigger. Or smaller and smaller, as it was with me."

She and Frank had been taking in the current dramas and so it wasn't strange that the stage finally beckoned. Someone asked her why she didn't try out for a certain role, and it was not until then that she again thought of acting. And although she had never been behind footlights, she instantly "belonged." Her career has since progressed steadily, for Hollywood was impressed by her stage triumphs and proffered her flattering terms.

"This is the first time I've talked so much about my husband. We are happy and we've seen the hazards picture folk have created for themselves by publicizing what should be personal!"

But Jean Arthur is unusually honest and loyal. When credit is due, she is specific. She isn't hesitant in declaring it has been love which has released the pent-up powers and endowed her with the courage to be herself.

Hughie, the Stall Guy

(Continued from page 53)

breaking the ice like that for me, I guess I can tell about the night Hughie got in late and hungry and raided the ice-box. A certain bowl of something that looked good was carefully covered and hidden in a corner. "Uh huh, probably saving it for tomorrow," tittered our hero. So, lightly tossing away his scruples, he poured on lots of cream and sugar and had himself a refreshment. Conscience bothered him when he went upstairs, and he compromised with it by remarking to Rose, "Best rice pudding I ever ate."

"What rice pudding?" inquired Rose.

"In the refrigerator," said Hugh.

"Oh, that was half a can of Vitamont for the pup's breakfast," said Rose, going back to sleep. Being married to a comedian seldom keeps her awake as you might think it would. She thought it was merely another joke. Hughie says it was—on him.

It's nobody's business how old Hughie is and anyway, he won't tell. He is one of those men who has no age and it really doesn't matter. The point is, he is just about the funniest man on the screen today—the funniest in his own line, and he happens to be the only one in it. His humor is distinctly individual, he has the field to himself, he has created his own type of wit—and it is practically all ad lib. The writers give him a general idea of a character and he does the rest. The script might as well say "Enter Hugh Herbert who Hugh Herberts around until the scene is over."

HE can go back to the time he was a bell boy in the Pabst Hotel, where the Times Square Building now stands. Then there was some ushering after school in the theatre where Maurice Barrymore was playing "Roaring Dick,"—thus began a dawning ambition—anyway, he says he caught it from a Barrymore. Then a small part in a melodrama called the "Bells of Hazlemere" in the Hundred and Twenty-Fifth Street Theatre, where he shared dressing room 12B with a calf which also was in the cast.

The funny part of it is, his first successes were in serious dramatic roles. "When I was a kid I loved to make people cry," Hugh says. In "The Son of Solomon," he played a pious old orthodox Jew with a long beard, and rated first page stories in three Sunday supplements at once. He was very very young and terribly profound when all this went on. He played Jewish dialect parts for years. His origin is Scotch-Irish, actually. He says your nationality doesn't matter if you are really an actor. He is a marvelous mimic. There is no dialect he cannot lapse into without a moment's warning.

Since his theatrical career began, Hugh has written a hundred and fifty short sketches for vaudeville and he wrote (with Murray Roth) the story for the first all-talking picture, "The Lights of New York." He directed Lowell Sherman in "He Knew Women." He first met his wife when he wrote a vaudeville sketch for her. Rose said she went to the theatre where he was playing and he had a sore throat, so he sent her out to buy some medicine for it—she certainly thought he had his nerve. She didn't like him. Hughie says no, she didn't like him till she found out his salary, and then she married him. Well, all I have to say is, maybe more girls ought to conduct their romances the same way if it will keep them married for twenty years.

Rose operates one of the smartest hat shops in Hollywood and is a stunning looking woman. Hugh says it's a great relief to him that she goes to business and stays all day, because when she's home, she's a natural for those door-to-door sob stories. He says Rose would buy a lace trimmed dustpan if somebody happened to be peddling them.

OUTSIDE of his other accomplishments in the major or professional line, Hugh is a pretty fair amateur carpenter, he can hoe a mean garden and give you all the correct horticultural names for things, and he knows his way around the kitchen. It seems like quite a mess of talent to be localized in one comedian, and you don't find out about all of it until you've known him for some time. He ranks A1 as a story teller, too—with gestures.

Hugh and the Missis just bought a ranch out San Fernando way, and are about to build a house on it. They have a hundred and fifty fruit trees, some turkeys, chickens, mutt dogs, and a goat. The goat is really a little kid so far, they call her Puss and she is a gay and playful pet—does tricks. She is so cute the Herberts have started a rage for kids as pets. Margaret Sullavan was out there the other day and wanted to adopt Puss.

Hughie has a swell idea for getting his house built and a lot of us are waiting around to see if it works. Several of his pals brag about what good carpenters they are, so he's going to invite them out and hand 'em all a hammer, a saw and lots of nails. He intends to build the bar first, and have plenty of liquid encouragement handy. It ought to be quite a place when they get it finished. He has a huge totem pole out front, so they will be sure to find it. The Herberts will keep their house in town, and perhaps it's just as well. This one was built when they first arrived and didn't know many people to help them, so just ordinary carpenters did it. It is large and substantial, very durable. Has a nice Dickens-y atmosphere about it—no jimcracks. One of the nicest houses anywhere around.

Hughie was looking rather peaked there for a while, but he has picked up the last few days, a new sparkle in the eye, a lighter step. I investigated and found out that Francis Lederer with the Mrs.-Lederer-to-be, Mary Anita Loos. They were snapped at Palm Springs, where Lederer is vacationing between pictures. Miss Loos is a niece of Anita Loos, famous writer.

Joe Lim is gone—Hughie hopes forever!

Joe Lim was the Chinese house-boy, who called everybody "madame," including Hughie who could see no reason to object, except, possibly, on the grounds of being the wrong sex. He knew that wouldn't make any difference to Joe, so why argue. Also, Joe had the confusing habit of naming everybody who called up "Mr. Fee." It might be Mr. Warner, or Mr. Schenck, or Mr. Mayer, or Mr. Smith—they were all Mr. Fee to Joe. So Hughie went around in a fog most of the time, wondering who really had called him up and if, by any chance, it might have been important.

The pay-off occurred while Rose was up in San Francisco visiting and Hughie invited a few of the boys up to the house for dinner and cards. He left the house that morning, telling Joe Lim he would be home at six o'clock.

Later in the day, discovering he was in some late scenes, he telephoned his house to tell Joe Lim. The conversation proceeded thus: "Ho. Missy Herbert's residence."

"Joe, this is Mr. Herbert."

"Missy Herbert six o'clock, madame."

"Joe, I can't get there at six o'clock. I'm delayed at the studio."

"Missy Herbert not here. Six o'clock."

"Joe, I'm telling you I CAN'T BE THERE at six o'clock, possibly not until eight!"

"Six o'clock, Missy Herbert," repeated Joe firmly.

So Hughie hung up and went home as soon as he could. "Anybody call?" he asked Joe.

"No madame, no calls," said Joe Lim.

Joe Lim doesn't live there any more. Hugh is sorry, awfully sorry. He really liked Joe, they seemed to have a lot in common. He plays Joe Lim, without the accent, in practically every performance he gives.

"I know Helen is thin, but she's so active we can't put an ounce on her"

IS YOUR CHILD GROWING FAST—but not gaining enough?

Here's how thousands of thin, underweight children are adding a pound a week—or more

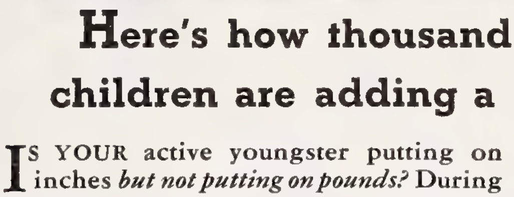
IS YOUR active youngster putting on inches but not putting on pounds? During the fast-growing years, children need and must have certain important food essentials—without which their physical development is usually retarded.

That's why more and more mothers are turning to Cocomalt—the scientific food-drink that supplies six important food essentials that help children to gain in weight and strength—aids them in building strong bones and sound teeth. Cocomalt is rich in calcium, phosphorus and Vitamin D for building strong bones and sound teeth. It contains Iron for red blood and strength—and proteins for the building up of solid flesh and muscle. It is rich in carbohydrates which supply food energy needed for the activities of children.

Mothers write words of praise

Cocomalt is helping thousands of thin, underweight youngsters gain weight in a very short time. If your child is thin because his diet is deficient in one or more of the food essentials mentioned, don't fail to give him Cocomalt as directed every day—at every meal. See if his body doesn't fill out, his weight go up week by week.

Cocomalt comes in powder form only and is designed to be mixed with milk. Delicious HOT or COLD. At grocery, drug and department stores in ½-lb., 1-lb. and 5-lb. air-tight cans.



IN MANY HOSPITALS today Cocomalt is added to the regular diet to help thin, underweight and undernourished children gain faster.

"MY LITTLE BOY was outgrowing his clothes but hardly gaining an ounce. A nurse told me about Cocomalt. At the end of the first month he had gained 5 pounds."

Mrs. M. Dalton, 530 E. 29th St. Brooklyn, N. Y.

"FOR THE LAST 4 MONTHS I have been giving my little girl Cocomalt. Once she was thin. But today, she is five pounds heavier, and the picture of health."

Mrs. J. Hogan, 17 Addison St. Larchmont, N. Y.

Cocomalt

Cocomalt is the registered trade-mark of the R. B. Davis Co., Hoboken, N. J.

IN THE 30'S YOU'RE STILL A YOUNG WOMAN
GRAY HAIR
IS ONLY TIRED HAIR

Keep ALL your hair one even lively lustrous, natural, youthful appearing color.

FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR

Most modern, perfected preparation; cleanly, economically used in hygienic privacy of home. Costly expert attention not needed. Will not wash off nor interfere with curling. $1.35. For sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE
BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. M.G. 30
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.
Send in plain wrapping.
Name..........
Street..........
City..........State..........
STATE ORIGINAL HAIR COLOR

Revolutionary NEW WALL CLEANER A Gold Mine For AGENTS!

HERE'S something brand new, needed in every home. Amazing Wall Cleaning Invention banishes old-style housecleaning mess and muss forever. No rags—no sticky "dough"—no red, swollen hands. No more dangerous stepladders. Literally erases dirt like magic from walls, ceilings, window shades, upholstered furniture, etc. Ends drudgery! Saves redecorating! Low priced. Lasts for years. Housewives wild about it. Agents making phenomenal profits. SAMPLE OFFER—Samples sent at our risk to first person in each locality who writes. No obligation. Get details. Be first—send your name TODAY! KRISTEE MFG. CO., 2792 Bar St., Akron, O.

CONSTIPATED

SINCE HER MARRIAGE FINDS RELIEF AT LAST IN SAFE

ALL-VEGETABLE METHOD!

It dated from her marriage—her trouble with intestinal sluggishness, nervousness, headaches. Nothing gave her more than partial relief until she tried a natural plant and vegetable laxative, Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets). She felt so much better immediately—more like living. Try NR's yourself. Note how refreshed you feel. NR's are so kind to your system. So effective in clearing up colds, biliousness, headaches. Non-habit-forming. Only 25c, at all drug stores.

NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

FREE: Beautiful five-color 1936 Calendar-Thermometer. Also samples of NR and Tums. Send stamp for packing and postage to A. H. Lewis Co., Desk 68B-10, St. Louis, Mo.

Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Stars

(Continued from page 51)

flying down the Boulevard in a big open car, Mrs. Weidler at the wheel and all six hanging on behind. That is, there are six of them since Virginia changed her mind about the movies.

It was almost four years later, when Mrs. Weidler again took her to a studio. Then it was sheer necessity, since there was no one at home to take care of Virginia. So she watched the set where Constance Bennett's picture, "After Tonight," was in production. A little French girl was supposed to play the role of Connie's niece. But no little French girl showed up. The director was distraught when Virginia stepped up to him.

I'LL talk French to the camera," she said. What's more, she could have talked German or Italian to it. After this picture, she was cast as "Europena" in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." The youngest Weidler was on her way to stardom. Now there is no sacrifice too great for her art. In "Peter Ibbetson," her latest picture, Virginia allowed her brown braids to be turned to blonde without a qualm.

We asked what kind of roles she liked to play best. "I think I like to play me best," said Virginia, "like in 'Laddie' and 'Mrs. Wiggs,' where I have a lot of brothers and sisters and pigs and chickens and things."

The Weidler house is in the Hollywood hills. The big back yard is filled with every kind of pet imaginable "except a rhinoceros," according to Virginia.

"We have rabbits and dogs and birds. I had to give away my two ducks last week, though, because the neighbors complained about them being so noisy. But I have some more now—quackless ones."

We wondered why they didn't quack.

"Because the neighbors complain," explained Virginia patiently.

They have a real theatre in that back yard, too, built by the combined Weidler forces. They write and stage their own plays. The elaborate "props" come from a big trunk which their grandmother sent from Germany. In it were all kinds of costumes she had worn on the operatic stage, and best of all some real wigs, which have seen service as mustaches, horses' tails and fur neckpieces. Virginia had just completed writing a play and we thought it would be nice to know what it was about.

"We-ell, it isn't copyrighted yet," she hesitated, so we hastily changed to the less delicate subject of directing plays. Mr. Taurog, Hollywoods famous children's director is one of Virginia's favorite people. Her eyes sparkled as she said, "I played a good joke on Mr. Taurog, all right. When I started playing 'Europena,' I had a tooth out right here—see—in front. Mr. Taurog said it didn't matter very much. But the next day," she added triumphantly, "I came with two more out!"

One small actress has only nine birthdays to her credit, but over a hundred roles! This veteran is Edith Fellows. It sounds as if the movie moguls just plied her with offers to be in their pictures, doesn't it? But the bitter truth is that not until the last year was Edith even given more than a passing glance by the Powers That Be. Most of those roles were just in mob scenes, or "bit" parts that weren't important enough to count. Edith was brought to Hollywood from South Carolina when she was three. But no golden opportunity was in sight. It isn't much fun, either, for a little girl to be dragged from one studio to another, with no one wanting her songs and dances. She got her first "chance" because she could hiccup!

"You see, they wanted a baby with a nice hiccup," she explained. "I was only three and I got the part. It was in a Charlie Chase comedy."

We wanted to know if she were surprised to see herself on the screen, the first time.

"No, I wasn't," Edith said, "but I was certainly surprised at how well I sounded!"

Six years of irregular and unimportant roles followed this one. Then Gregory La Cava was looking for a child to play the exasperating step-daughter of Claudette Colbert in "She Married Her Boss." Edith was brought to his attention, but Mr. La Cava took one look at her curls and friendly smile, then said she looked too sweet for what he wanted. Instantly Edith's cherubic look gave way. Blue-green eyes blazed in her small freckled face.

"Mr. La Cava," said Miss Fellows, drawing herself up to her full four feet, one inch. "I am an actress, so I can certainly be disagreeable enough for you." She not only got the part, but stole the picture.

EDITH'S main ambition in life is to be just like Miss Colbert. "I think she is terRIFic!" she said earnestly. "Miss Colbert has dramatic ability. She has everything." Edith drew a fervent breath at the mere thought of Miss Colbert. "Of course," she went on, "I think some other actresses are very good, too. I think Shirley Temple is such a beautiful little girl." And added admiringly, "Not a freckle."

When asked what kind of acting she liked to do best Edith exclaimed, "Oh, I like to be laughing real hard or crying real hard. I don't care much about just talking."

"But isn't it hard to cry?"

"Oh, crying!" Edith dismissed that problem airily. "My only trouble is stopping, not starting!"

A much longer visit with Edith would have suited us, but she had a harp lesson. She's as intense about her music as everything else. "Besides," said Miss Fellows, "I may have to be an angel some day. You never know in this business."

Mrs. Collins was so convinced that Cora Sue had definite talents for screen work that they left their home in Virginia when her small daughter was three, and headed for Hollywood. She came literally on a shoestring, but luck was with her. They had hardly been in Hollywood two weeks when a Universal studio official noticed Cora Sue in a department store with her mother. He asked them to come to the studio the next day for an interview. When they arrived over a dozen children were there. Cora Sue took her place at the end of the line and watched the proceedings. The director was trying out the little girls for a role in which a good display of emotion was necessary. The small girl he was working with would laugh, but cry she would not. "Come on, now," he said patiently, "let's have some tears." Still no tears. Cora Sue walked from the end of the line and stood beside him. "I'll be glad to cry for you," she said. So Cora Sue wept and won.

After meeting Cora Sue it's easy to imagine her offering her services to that director. Her poise would do credit to a woman of the world. On entering the Collins' living-room we stumbled over a big brown spaniel lying on the floor. "I'm always falling over 'Rusty'," said our small hostess, putting us immediately at ease.

She was dressed up for the occasion in a flowered organdy belonging to her big sister. A green satin sash held up the skirt, and slippers, at least three sizes too large, were on her feet. But somehow you got the impression that it was the shoes that wobbled, not Cora Sue.

She was far more interested in talking about her love-birds and canaries than she was about Miss Collins. The canary obligingly took a bath for us and the love-birds flew around the room. Then with a bird on each shoulder, Cora Sue drew up a chair.

"And now," she said, "what was it you wanted to interview me about?"

Faced with such a direct question it took a moment to collect our thoughts. We asked how she liked portraying the stars as little girls. She's "doubled" for all the most famous ones—Greta Garbo, Norma Shearer, Myrna Loy and has just finished stealing the picture from her grown-up self, Merle Oberon, in "The Dark Angel." Cora Sue thought it was fun and when asked which one she'd rather be like really, when she grew up, she said thoughtfully. "Well, I'd like to be half as pretty as all of them.

"Of course it isn't all fun working in the movies," she reminded me. "I believe that a person should always try harder. I think no matter how high you climb you can always fall."

Jane Withers knows from actual experience how fickle is fame. At the age of two, down in Atlanta, Georgia, this sturdy, dark-haired little girl was a celebrity. She was considered one of the city's most talented tap-dancers and radio performers. Her mother listened to so many people tell her that Jane should capitalize on those talents that she prevailed on her husband to give up his business and move the family to Hollywood. Jane suddenly found herself a nobody. For three years she and her mother haunted the studio gates without ever getting so much as a peek inside. It was just by accident that she finally got that "Bright Eyes" break. Director James Ryan came out of the studio one day and stopped as he was getting into his car by a small girl with a fringe of dark bangs above earnest grey eyes.

"Please," she said, "I'd like to do a little skit for you." And forthwith she broke into an impersonation on the sidewalk. Mr. Ryan was impressed in spite of himself and decided to give her a screen test. The rest is history.

We visited Jane in her own bungalow out on the 20th Century-Fox lot. It's any little girl's idea of a perfect play-house. Blue and yellow curtains, low white shelves filled with books and toys, and wing-chairs made just to fit their small owner.

WORD came from the studio that Jane's latest starring picture, "Paddy O'Day," was to be previewed that evening. "Oh, goody!" exclaimed Jane, jumping up and down, "and what's the other picture?" A remark unique in the annals of movie stars.

If you saw "Ginger," you saw the real Jane Withers. She's a bundle of energy and high spirits. When her mother sees several children piled up on the front lawn she always knows where Jane is—on the bottom. And it's Jane, not a double, whom you see whisking around on the handlebars of policemen's motorcycles and jumping off trains in those pictures.

We were curious to know if she always had such grand times making movies.

"Nope, not always," admitted Miss Withers. "There's drawbacks. Like down at Ocean Pier when we were working on 'This Is The Life' and I wanted to go on the merry-go-round down there. But it was costing the company $2000 an hour so I couldn't go. Anyway Mother took me down the next Sunday and I rode for a dime."

The way the very youngest of the young ladies got her chance at stardom really was like magic, for one day she received a mysterious message sent over a continent and under an ocean, asking her to come to Hollywood and be in the movies. That little girl was Sybil Jason, whom you saw in "Little Big Shot." She was in London at the time and the cable was mysterious because neither Sybil nor her parents had any idea that Irving Asher, a Warner studio official, had seen her sing and dance and then sent pictures of her to the Hollywood studio.

Into her five years Miss Jason has crowded more living than lots of people get at fifty. For she was born in Capetown, Africa, and from there to London to Hollywood is something of a jaunt.

Sybil is the tiniest five-year-old you ever saw, with the biggest blue eyes that ever were.

And what did she like best about these movies, we wanted to know.

"I don't exactly know," she said, wrinkling her forehead, "but I think I like Dickie Moore about as well as anything."

"Wasn't it fun seeing yourself on the screen the first time?" we asked.

Miss Jason considered this for a moment. "Well, yes it was," she agreed, "but I was so afraid I'd forget my lines that I kept saying them right along with me." Which might complicate lesser minds than Miss Jason's.

SEE CHAPPED SKIN
Melt
INTO SMOOTHEST TEXTURE

IN FROM A RIDE
SKIN'S ROUGH... FLAKY
OUT FOR A DANCE
SMOOTH ALREADY ...THANKS TO POND'S VANISHING CREAM!
HOME AGAIN
MORE OF THAT BLESSED CREAM... FOR EXTRA SOFTENING

IMAGINE YOURSELF —one minute with a dry, chapped skin that catches powder . . . The next minute, skin so smooth you can't feel a single rough place! That's how fast a keratolytic cream softens your skin.

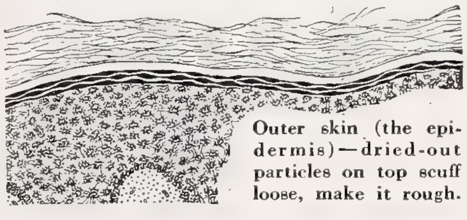
That chapped skin is just on top. It's a layer of dried-out particles, always scuffing loose—"aching" to come off entirely. But they keep on clinging, getting harsher, until you take steps to—MELT THEM OFF!

A leading dermatologist tells how to do this. He says:

"Surface skin is constantly drying out. Exposure hastens this condition. When a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream) is applied, the dried-out cells melt away, revealing the smooth skin beneath. Vanishing Cream also preserves the skin's natural moisture and prevents further chapping."

That's why Pond's Vanishing Cream is so grand for rough, chapped skin—so perfect a powder base! In an instant, it brings out your own young skin—exquisitely smooth, completely "unchapped."

For a smooth make-up—Never powder or rouge without first smoothing away roughnesses with Pond's Vanishing Cream. Now your skin is satiny—powder goes on evenly without flaking. And even bitter-cold winds can't cause new chappings!



Outer skin (the epidermis)—dried-out particles on top scuff loose, make it rough.

Overnight for lasting softness—Every night after cleansing, smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream for extra softness. It won't shine—won't smear the pillowcase. In the morning, your skin surprises you. So baby-soft!

Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker II of Philadelphia, says: "Pond's Vanishing Cream makes every little chapped place on my skin smooth out. Powder goes on beautifully!"

8-Piece Package Pond's, Dept. B136, Clinton, Conn. Please rush me special 9-treatment tube of Pond's Vanishing Cream together with generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ for postage and packing.

Name____________________

Street____________________

City______________State________

Copyright, 1936, Pond's Extract Company

Free Sample
DEMONSTRATES Doubly Effective
MARRIAGE HYGIENE

Doctor's Prescription WINS PRAISE of MILLIONS . . Over 45 Years of Supreme Satisfaction for Users!

"HAVE USED BORO-PHENO-FORMS FOR 17 YEARS AND WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM" says MRS. A. B

"MARRIAGE HYGIENE"—how much depends on those words! Supreme happiness for those who find a dependable way—untold doubt and fear for those who do not. Why risk uncertain solutions of but dangerously brief effectiveness? Dainty Boro-Pheno-Form suppositories offer DOUBLE effectiveness—IMMEDIATE effectiveness on application, CONTINUED effectiveness afterward.

Send now for FREE SAMPLE which so fully demonstrates Boro-Pheno-Form superiority. Learn how convenient. No bulky apparatus. No danger of overdose or burns. Used in perfect secrecy too—no telltale antiseptic odor. Originated as a doctor's private prescription, Boro-Pheno-Form quickly swept to nation-wide popularity. Thousands have told of continuous satisfaction for 5, 12, 17, 20 years and longer.

Send no money; mail the coupon for FREE SAMPLE and booklet, "The Answer," which sheds welcome new light on "Marriage Hygiene."

Dr. Pierre Chemical Co., Dept. B-30
162 N. Franklin St., Chicago, Illinois.

Dr. Pierre's BORO-PHENO-FORM

DR. PIERRE CHEMICAL CO.—Dept. B-30
162 N. Franklin St., Chicago, Illinois
Rush me FREE SAMPLE of Boro-Pheno-Form and FREE BOOKLET of Marriage Hygiene Facts.
Name
Address
City State

MICKEY MOUSE WRIST WATCH! GIVEN! or Choice of Cash Commission — Send No Money — Send Name and Address! Boys! Girls! Mickeys on the dial and band in colors! Chrome finish case and bracelet — Unbreakable crystal. American make. WHAT A WATCH! SIMPLY GIVE AWAY FREE pictures with famous White Cloverine Salve which you sell at 25c a box (giving picture FREE!) and remit as per premium plan book. Other watches. 39th year. Be First. Write for trial order dozen salve and pictures NOW!
WILSON CHEMICAL CO. INC., Dept. 10-F. Tyrone, Pa.

GRAY HAIR!
The Best Remedy is Made at Home

YOU can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. Do not be handicapped by gray hair when it is so easy to get rid of it in your own home.

Hollywood's tomboy, Jane Withers, goes all girl and ruffles for Joyce Horne's party. Oh, her escort? He's Mickey (Puck) Rooney, no less.

And cinema's problem child, Edith Fellows, looks like a very gay little girl in this pose with her clever little white poodle dog. He's a performer, too.

AND, of course, there is Shirley Temple who has found the biggest pot of gold of all at the end of her rainbow. Adulation has been showered on that golden head and gifts have fallen thick and fast at her small feet. Yet Shirley remains just a lovable little girl, blissfully unconscious that she's done anything remarkable in her six years. The only thing she was concerned about the other day was her rabbits.

"My goodness," said Miss Temple, "they're getting to be such a family I don't know what we will do with them. At first I started to give them names, but now," she bestowed on me one of those dazzling dimpled smiles, "now there's so many, I just call them all Pet."

Mrs. Gertrude Temple didn't have the vaguest notion of a career for Shirley when she put her in that dancing class three years ago. It was there that a talent scout from Educational Pictures succumbed to the Temple charms and asked her to be in the "Baby Burlesque" shows. This was followed by a Fox offer and Shirley was given a role in "Stand Up and Cheer." Which is just what the public has been doing ever since for this diminutive star.

This then is the story of Hollywood's brightest constellation—the six little girls who made good. It would be another story if we wrote of the six hundred little girls who, this year alone, failed in the industry. Some of them were prettier, some brighter, some even had bigger and better "chances" than our six starlets. But they didn't make the grade. The Hollywoods are full of them. So think twice before you sell the homestead in order to launch Annabelle in Hollywood. Shooting stars are few and far between in the cinema skies.

The True Story Behind Loretta Young's Illness

(Continued from page 35)

delayed finishing his "Crusades" so that she could play "Queen Berengaria" in it. She was busy, then, with Twentieth Century's "Call of the Wild," in which she shared starring honors with Clark Gable.

In London, Loretta became ill. Hurriedly, she and her mother returned to Hollywood. Her family doctor there prescribed a complete rest, so that she might build up the strength which had ebbed away. After that, his edict said, a minor, but exceedingly delicate operation, and then more rest to recover her strength. It was a brutal order for a girl like Loretta. Of all the film girls, none enjoys more, the trappings of success. . . . The parties, the dances, the gaieties, the pretty attentions, the masculine conquests, that are offered beauty. And Loretta is undoubtedly one of Hollywood's most beautiful actresses.

There is about Loretta a certain naïve sophistication that is absolutely charming. Tall, as slim as a reed, she wears clothes well, loves to buy them, loves to display them. At six she was designing masquerade and dancing costumes for herself, making them out of oilcloth. Under the influence of Mae Murray, with whom she lived for one and one-half years, from the age of four, she was sure she was going to be a dancer. Preferably a Pavlowa. As a youngster she watched, with rapt attention, the inspired performances of Pavlowa and Nijinsky, on their celebrated American tour.

With Miss Murray as her temporary mother, she had all the advantages of an artistic background. The way the Murray temporary "adoption" came about was amusing. Studio workers called Miss Murray's attention (she was then the wife of Director Robert Z. Leonard) to the typical Mae Murray pout of Loretta's rosebud lips which she could not entirely close because of two small, protruding front teeth. So entranced was Miss Murray by this tiny replica of her own famous moué that she asked Loretta's mother if she couldn't "borrow" her daughter for a time. Loretta adored the idea of house-guesting with dainty, blonde Mae, and asked that Colleen, her cousin, be included in the invitation so that she would have someone to play with. In that way Mae Murray, for a period of eighteen months, became responsible for two small charges.

Loretta made her Hollywood entrance when her mother (then Mrs. Young) brought her brood of three girls (a son Jack made his home elsewhere) to the film city, from Salt Lake City, after her husband had left her. The oldest was Polly Ann, now twenty-six, dark-haired, sweet, the "Meg" of Hollywood's 1935 version of "Little Women."

Sally Blane, now Mrs. Norman Foster, was eighteen months younger. And then came Loretta (christened "Gretchen," nicknamed "Gretch"), almost twenty-three, and a veteran of nine years of motion picture work. It seems incredible that this child, now at an age when most girls are leaving college or commencing a career—domestic or professional—is already the possessor of a successful career, an unsuccessful marriage (to Grant Withers) and a divorce. She was married at seventeen and divorced about a year later.

A happy hodge-podge of ingenuousness and sophistication, Loretta, after her divorce, proceeded to establish a record for romances. Large-eyed, wistful-faced, soft-lipped, she was meant for well-staged romance . . . the dance floor of the Mayfair Club to the accompaniment of provocative music, the sands of The Beach Club, the plunge at Palm Springs' El Mirador Hotel. All of these places have been the backgrounds for Loretta's many romances. There was a rumored Ronald Colman romance, a Fred Perry romance, she admitted a mighty heart-throb for Spencer Tracy, then separated from his wife. The Tracy romance, in the eyes of the Hollywoodians, was the "high" in Loretta's romances. They thought she was serious about Spencer. But the next week she was dancing at the Mayfair, sometimes with Bernard Newman, sometimes with someone else. Her conquests were legion. And she loved the reputation as a heart-breaker that they gave her. What woman wouldn't?

But Hollywood noted that Loretta's conquests never carried her as far as the altar. It might have been her religious scruples. It might have been something else. Out of the attentions lavished upon her, came the legend that Loretta was "unlucky in love." "She falls in love with all of her leading men," said the gossip columns. The idea was that she couldn't give an efficient emotional interpretation to her role unless there was some semblance of reality in her love scenes. "Phooey," say those who know Loretta.

Then she and Spencer Tracy indulged in some verbal gymnastics about their feelings towards each other. When the split-up occurred, that, too, was given reading space. The total of these columns upon columns was the legend that Loretta

Is there Romance in Your Hands?
PLAT-NUM
CREME
Nail Polish
Holly Red hands

IT'S a clever girl who keeps her hands an ardent invitation to romance. One certain way is to use a superior dependable nail polish. PLAT-NUM is a better blend of polish. One application will convince you. It applies smoothly and sets evenly with a lasting lustre, and does not chip, crack, peel, fade or streak. Try PLAT-NUM today. Its generous, oversize 10c bottle is on sale at all 5 and 10c stores.

FREE this booklet

Send 4c in stamps for this booklet on beautification of hands.

PLAT-NUM

PLAT-NUM LABORATORIES
80 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK

Nail Polish

was "unlucky in love." They even had her pining away (in her recent illness) for the love of a star who promised to divorce his wife and marry her. And didn't. The whole unfounded story gave both members to it a loud and long laugh.

The true Loretta, her intimates will tell you, is "a little scalp-collector." In other words, Loretta's favorite sport is bagging male hearts. And she has a nice collection. She is as fickle and inconstant a coquette as ever flourished in the South or a Booth Tarkington novel. At the end of what was rumored to be one of her "biggest moments," she was so bored it was awful . . . for the family.

People who know Loretta well will tell you that she seldom lets her heart get out of bounds. True, she may permit it to beat twice as hard toward an ineligible gentleman, but her rule is never to allow herself to become involved romantically with anyone who is not a peg or so higher, professionally or socially, than she is. Her attitude is "if you can't better yourself, why bother?" It's the antithesis of the "unlucky in love" story.

The Young family is a 1935 Louisa M. Alcott family, set in luxury. The same close-knit devotion, warmth of feeling, generosity, love, is there. "Nothing must happen to Loretta," said Sally Blane Foster, just home from her honeymoon. "We've never had anything like death come to us and it simply can't come now. We have been through so much together, so much fun, so much struggle, it's frightful to even think of 'Gretch' being ill, the poor darling."

With "Bet" (Sally was christened Elizabeth Jane) married and living in the apartment they sublet from the Hardie Albrights (Martha Sleeper), and "Poll" (Polly Ann) planning for her January 1936 marriage to Carter Herman of Pasadena, whose name appears frequently in the society columns, the big Colonial house on the hill is temporarily vacated by the Youngs, and leased to another family.

Report says it will be a year before Loretta will appear before the cameras again, but Sally insists that it will be a much shorter time than that. "She'll be up and out in a few weeks," she says, confident that her sister will soon take an active part in the family life again. Sally's assertion seems to be correct because Loretta is improving rapidly—so much so that her studio is planning to give her the title role in "Ramona," which goes into production in the course of the next few months.

"Polly Ann is the sweet one," continues Sally, whole-heartedly. "She is the one to whom you can say, '"Poll," will you do this for me?', and she always answers, no matter how difficult the task, 'Why, yes, of course.' And it's done. Or if she has a new dress, and has never worn it before, one of us can say, '"Poll," let me wear your new dress, will you?' and the reply is always, 'Of course, darling.'

"Loretta is so self-sufficient, so self-contained. She has so many resources to draw upon from within herself. She can sit by the fire for a week and never want to go out, but I—I have to be doing something all of the time. And she is so full of poise. Even when she was a little girl and someone would call upon us to do some parlor entertaining, Loretta would get up with the poise of a countess and dance, while 'Poll' and I were always scared to death. Loretta has always been a little different from us," continued Sally.

"Her illness has made her more like us, though. She is so pleased over trifles. Before that she was always busy and she didn't have time to be excited over watching children's eyes pop out when you gave them candy, or anything like that. Now she does, and it's sweet to see her.

"I can remember when Loretta started a film career in earnest—that was when she was thirteen, she turned fourteen in the Lon Chaney picture 'Laugh, Clown, Laugh'—she would come home with the broadest 'a' accent you ever heard. And people would laugh at her and think she was cute, because we were all Westerners and she would affect this pronounced English accent. She always was an actress. She always will be."

At one time Sally was the stellar light of the family, not Loretta. She got fifty dollars a week more than Loretta and had a studio contract. Then Loretta got the major attentions from the rest of the family, all anxious to further her career and speed her on toward success. "I never applied for anything but Western pictures, never bothered to do anything with my hair but shampoo and brush it, never lacquered my nails. No wonder I didn't do so well in films. Loretta was always so dainty, always performing some small beauty chore. People say to me now, 'But, of course, Sally, you never cared about a career!' I did, that's the funny thing. And I still do."

However, she cares more about the dark-haired Norman Foster, son of Quaker parents, who is her very new husband. She adores the way his ears grow, faun-like, and the funny way he crinkles his eyes when he laughs . . . and love is certainly grand. Meanwhile, her sister Loretta shares another very real experience of life—the battle for health. There isn't a heart in Hollywood that is not beating with Loretta's in the courageous fight she is making to win her way back to the life she so dearly loves.

Trial Engagement

(Continued from page 42)

as a show girl to pay for the art lessons she wanted. O. Henry might have had more words than Fred MacMurray with which to describe their meeting, but he would not have been more eloquent.

"I was doing a puzzle with the rest of the fellows in the band during rehearsal," he said, filling his pipe again. He smoked it in six puffs—five when he speaks of his Lilian. "It was called 'Try Your Nerve'—you held a long pin steady and pricked different sized dots. Lilian came over to watch—cute as the dickens in a pair of brown slacks and a white jersey top. She said, 'You must have been out late last night, Big Boy!' After I saw her, the dots went every which way and it was like that with her, too, I guess. We never talked about it much afterward, just sort of took things for granted—ours is sort of a trial engagement. I haven't looked at another girl since then. I haven't even seen another girl."

The merciful smoke hung between us. His voice came from behind it, laying reluctantly the one treasure of his heart before the inspection of a stranger. "After all, we didn't have much time for love. Lilian was studying dress designing. You ought to see the clothes she made for herself. She always looked—well, she looked"—he sought a dazzling, elegant word to describe his girl in the dresses she made for herself—"she always looked

GRIFFIN-A·B·C
for a real shine
GRIFFIN
A·B·C
BLACK
SHOE POLISH
NEW CAN 2/3 LARGER
ALL COLORS
10¢
EASY OPENER
Griffin Manufacturing Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

IF YOU HAVE GRAY HAIR
and DON'T LIKE a MESSY MIXTURE.... then write today for my
FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

As a Hair Color Specialist with forty years' European American experience, I am proud of my Color Imparter for Grayness. Use it like a hair tonic. Wonderfully GOOD for the scalp and dandruff; it can't leave stains. As you use it, the gray hair becomes a darker, more youthful color. I want to convince you by sending my free trial bottle and book telling All About Gray Hair.
ARTHUR RHODES, Hair Color Expert, Dept. 3, LOWELL, MASS.

DENISON'S PLAYS
60 YEARS OF HITS
Musical Comedies, Operettas, Vaudeville Acts, Minstrels, Comedy Songs, Make-up Goods.
Catalog Free
T.S. Denison & Co. 623 S. Wabash, Dept. 25, Chicago

U. S.
GOVERNMENT JOBS!

START
$1260 to $2100 Year

Get ready immediately
New 40 Hour Week Means Many Post Office Appointments
Mail Coupon today sure.

COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. E-322, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush to me without charge, (1) 32-page book with list of many U. S. Government Big Pay Jobs, (2) Tell me how to get on of these jobs.
Name.....................................
Address.....................................

swell. A millionaire would have been proud to take my Lilian out. But she didn't want any millionaire."

The show in which they both worked was "Roberta," with its lilting melodies of young love. Her name on the program was like a thousand other charming, silly chorus girl names, "Lilian Lamonte." Fred sang a song—Lilian danced. After the show they had chop suey at Joe's Place—or Pete's Place. More often there was only time for a word, either because Fred's band was in demand for supper clubs, or Lilian had a chance to pose for a commercial photographer. They were twenty-two and they owned Broadway. They said, "Some day"—and didn't finish the sentence. Then Fred was made understudy for the leading man and Lily sold a dress sketch, while they waited for that mystic moment known to Mazda Lane as "the breaks."

"One day a movie scout saw the show," Fred said. "He came backstage afterward and asked had I ever thought of the movies. I told him that was a laugh, because I'd spent six months in Hollywood once, getting a daily 'nothing doing, Bud,' from studio gatemen. But he offered me a test and I took it. I didn't tell Lilian, because I never expected to hear from it again, but a week later I got a contract to come to Hollywood. I showed it to her after the final curtain. I thought she'd be pleased, but Lilian is different from most girls."

HIS eyes were still bewildered as he mused over the unexpected things Lilian had said, looking up from the contract he had brought her so proudly, "It's splendid, Fred! But I'm not going. I've read in all the fan magazines how it hurts a new actor's popularity to be married. You've got to have your chance. Besides I'm just beginning to get somewhere with my designs. We'll write every day. We'll be sensible and wait and see."

Like a thousand other chorus girls did I say? "Show me Lilian," I asked him. "The picture of her you keep in your breast pocket."

He protested that he didn't have one. He made a great show of rummaging. He pretended surprise when he found one. "It doesn't do her justice," he grumbled proudly, handing me a snapshot of a slim young beauty. You can see, looking at her, why Hollywood stars have not succeeded in catching Fred MacMurray's eye; you can see something more, if you look closely, and that is the firm little chin under the ornamental dimple.

"She wasn't afraid to let you come alone to a place where every woman is a famous beauty?" I suggested, looking down at Miss Lilian Lamonte.

"Why should she be?" said Fred. "None of them are any prettier than my girl." It came dangerously close to being sentimental. He stuffed a fresh supply of tobacco into the briar bowl and puffed furiously. "I was out here six months," he admits, "without making a single scene. You can be more alone in Hollywood than anywhere on earth. I was discouraged. I suppose I must have given her the satisfaction of knowing I was darn lonesome in my letters. Anyhow, one day she was here."

When Hollywood saw the luscious Southern girl with the magnolia petal skin and lovely clothes, she was always with that new leading man, who didn't look like an actor. And immediately the rumor hounds were on their trail. "When are you going to get married?" they wanted to know night and day. "When—when—WHEN?"

FRED MACMURRAY would have been glad to have answered their questions, but he didn't know himself. It appeared that Lilian Lamonte had not given up her job in a Broadway revue, nor her career as a fashion artist to come to Hollywood for marriage. Fred was lonely, he needed her to talk to. He needed her to kid and boss him. But he didn't need a wife yet, not with it looking more and more as though his contract would never be renewed and even if it were—well, newcomers to the movies don't get fancy salaries and he had his mother to look after. Besides. Lilian said Hollywood changed people. Anybody, who read fan magazines, knew that. Sometimes it even made them completely different. She liked Fred the way he was—but how did she know she would like him if he became a famous picture star with everybody crowding around to get his autograph, fans writing love letters, a big salary and all that?

"I'm going to get a job," said Miss Lamonte, setting her firm little chin. "I'm going to work in a store, modeling, right here where I can keep an eye on you and see you don't go Hollywood."

"And she did," said Fred MacMurray, as simply as though it were quite natural for a beautiful girl to give up her own career just to keep him happy. And perhaps—looking at his six feet three of boyish good looks—it is quite natural. "She's modeling at Howard Greer's," he added.

"She doesn't especially want to go into the movies," Fred said. "Still, I wouldn't mind. Maybe it would be a good thing if she understood just what it means to work in a studio—like staying evenings and not always being able to telephone, or do things just the way you plan."

"And you wouldn't be afraid, either?" I suggested wickedly. "Hollywood has broken up romances before, you know."

Clings till you wash it off...spreads farther

does not clog the Pores!

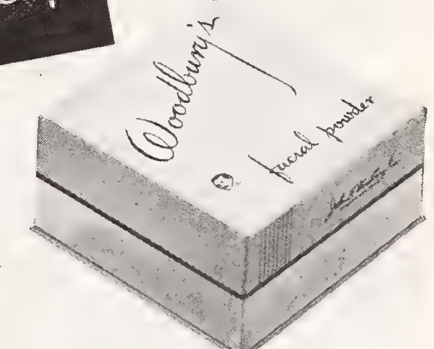
A LOVELY, fragrant face powder that clings for hours—till you wash it off! That spreads farther* and does not clog the pores. That gives your skin a finish as smooth as velvet! This is the facial powder that Woodbury skin scientists make for you.

Smooth a pinch of it on your arm. Do the same with the powder you're accustomed to use. Notice what a large area of your skin Woodbury's covers! That is because it stays on the surface. Does not crowd down into the pores and clog them.

Lovely shades, too—six of them. One will harmonize with your complexion. $1.00, 50c, 25c, 10c.

*Determined by Gar-Baker Lab., Inc., New York

★ MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST!



WOODBURY'S
Facial Powder

FREE—TRY ALL SIX SHADES!
John H. Woodbury, Inc., 9162 Alfred Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario.

Please send me—free—all six shades of Woodbury's Facial Powder, enough in each sample packet for several powderings. (Paste coupon on penny postcard or mail in envelope—NOW!)

Name____________________

Street____________________

City________________State________

© 1936, John H. Woodbury, Inc.

"Yes, Madam—
NOT ONLY THAT,
THEY GIVE ADDED PROTECTION, AND ARE SO CONVENIENT AND DEPENDABLE."

PAR-I-O-GEN

(Pronounced PAR-'I-O-JEN)

• TABLETS •

SOUND reasoning and commonsense recommend the form, the convenience, and the dependability of PAR-I-O-GEN Tablets, features which are often so difficult adequately to describe.

They are neatly packaged in tubes almost as small as the daintiest fountain pen, each tube containing twelve tablets, and may be conveniently carried in one's purse or hand-bag, for use while traveling or at home.

A tablet dissolves in a few moments and the solution thus formed has been found by thousands to be entirely adequate and dependable without the use of water or other accessories.

PAR-I-O-GEN Tablets are non-caustic, stainless, greaseless. They provide an effective deodorant although practically odorless. It is a long-acknowledged fact that they offer the practical, commonsense answer to the problem of

FEMININE HYGIENE

The Price of the Regular Size Tube of 12 Tablets Is $1.00

FREE OFFER: If you can find a Druggist who does not have PAR-I-O-GEN Tablets when you ask for them, send us his name and address and we'll send you a trial package FREE. Simply address:

AMERICAN DRUG & CHEMICAL CO,
Dept. 102, 420 S. Sixth Street
Minneapolis, Minn.

CATARRH AND SINUS CHART—FREE

Guaranteed Relief or No Pay. Stop hawking—stuffed-up nose—bad breath—Sinus irritation—phlegm-filled throat. Send Post Card or letter for New Treatment Chart and Money-Back Offer. 40,000 Druggists sell Hall's Catarrh Medicine. 63rd year in business. . . Write today!

F. J. CHENEY & CO. Dept. 32 TOLEDO. O.

YARN Send for 400 FREE Samples Detailed instruction FREE. 4 Color Afghan Yarn $2.64 lb. Pompadour and Saxony $3.00 lb. Shetland $2.25 lb. Tweed Coat Yarn $2.75 lb. All latest Yarns, 80 different kinds. Est. 20 yrs.

YARN NOVELTY CO. 42 (AJ) North 9th St. Phila, Pa.

ENTER RUBY KEELER'S CONTEST NOW!

New Perfume!

SUBTLE, alluring, enticing. Sells regularly for $12.00 an ounce. Made from the essence of flowers. Exquisite!

A single drop lasts a week! It is:—

"Temptation"

To pay for postage and handling, enclose only 10c silver or 12c stamps. (Est. 1872)

Free Trial Bottle

Paul Rieger, 177 Davis St., San Francisco

The smoke from the briar pipe became a veritable volcano.

"If two and a half years wouldn't show a fellow and a girl that they were suited I don't know how they would know," said the Scotch Mr. MacMurray cautiously." Lilian has been in the show business quite a while. She's had chances to marry men with more money than I'll ever have. And if she's going to fall for a movie actor, well, what's the matter with me? She thinks I'm grand—on the screen! I don't see why Hollywood should change either of us. We like to do the same things, which means not much of anything. Sit around and talk, sing a little, go down to the beach and eat a steak or go over to mother's house for dinner. Sometimes we see the fights. Once in a while we go to a night club. Lilian likes to dance, I don't, so we don't go often. That's the kind of a girl she is!

"I like the movies. But I don't care for most of the things that go with being a Hollywood star. Crowds scare me pink! In college I was so shy I couldn't stand up to recite without blushing.

"I'll always live, wherever I am, just about the same way I would have been living, if I'd stayed on at Beaver Dam. Now that things seem to be turning out pretty well for me"—a mild way of referring to one of the spectacular successes of the year!—"I'll soon be where I can buy a house, but it won't be one of those movie mansions. A fellow with a name like MacMurray doesn't go in for extravagances! Of course, I know a screen career doesn't last long. I read the fan magazines myself! But I've still got the old saxophone saved for a rainy day."

He rose to his feet, tucking his chaperone, the briar pipe, tenderly away. "Now that I've told you about Lilian and me," he said wistfully, "you see, don't you, why that secret marriage stuff makes me kind of mad? Lilian is so—well she's so—" he hunted for the perfect word, the romantic word, "she's so swell!" finished Fred MacMurray.

If You Would Have a Figure Like Colbert

(Continued from page 55)

of Elmhurst, New York, whose picture is published this month. Joan, you look more like Claudette Colbert than any girl who sent in her picture. I've got to hand it to you. You are much braver than the Hollywood girls to send in a picture (in a bathing suit) that's absolutely unretouched. Because those babies out there never do that. You practically never see an unretouched Hollywood photograph. They can't take it. But, listen Joan, mama's going to do some retouching on you, without even touching you. You are going to do the touching yourself.

You have a fuller face than Colbert has but, like Colbert, you've got those fat pads on the cheek bones. Colbert has a triangular face. But when those cheek muscles are over-developed it's an infernal triangle. Watch Claudette, Joan, and you'll notice sometimes, when she smiles on the screen, at certain angles those fat pads on her cheeks stick out beyond her nose. Guard against that. My personal letter to you will tell you how to take them off.

Claudette's chin tapers off into a little point. It's a nice tailored chin. Your lower face is heavier than hers. And it looks to me as if your chin is all set to double. Never mind what Mr. Culbertson says, don't let it re-double! For by working together, baby, you and I will make a grand slam.

You have bangs like Colbert and I imagine that's because, like her, you have a high forehead. Well, that's smart.

But with the face, darling, the likeness stops. At present Claudette has you all beaten when it comes to a figure. But never mind, we'll fix that. In a few days you'll get my personal letter telling you all the things that will make you over, but since I've had so many requests from readers about posture and that fat on the back, I'm going to tell you about that here.

You look to me as if you're a popular kid. Well, get one of your many friends to help you straighten up by giving you a good slap between the shoulder blades every time she catches you slumping.

No, I'm not kidding. And that slap is not just a reminder, it does actual good. There are important glands in the back and they tend to grow sluggish. That slap wakes them up, gives them a kick, stimulates them. So, I mean that as part of the routine. Have your friend give you several good firm slaps on the back two or three times a day.

British Brian Aherne and Frau Marlene Dietrich are a popular foreign alliance that lunch and dine frequently together. They look pretty happy, too, doncha think? How about it, pals, is it romance?

THAT fat back mars the looks of your figure and ruins your posture. So here's what you must do to correct it. Here's the right exercise. In a standing position, slump slightly forward—make your back as round as possible, as if you were trying to make your shoulders meet in front. Bend your arms slightly as if you were hugging yourself but keep them a little out from the body. In this position, relax the arms. Now move the right shoulder to the front as much as you can, stretching and pulling as hard as possible. Twist your right arm inward at the wrist. This arm should be across the body, but not higher than the chest. Repeat the same thing on the left side without straightening up. Don't relax the shoulders between times. And do that fifteen minutes every day. Oh baby, how that takes down the fat back!

Remember to straighten your shoulders as often during the day as you feel inclined to slump, as that will make your abdomen good and strong. Also keep your back supple and limber. All these things combine to keep your shoulders straight and to give you good posture.

(Aside to Lorraine Page. Your mother sent me your picture from New Orleans telling me that you were in Hollywood dancing in M-G-M pictures. Well, honey, you were a close runner-up of the Claudette Colbert doubles. You bear, at a glance, a resemblance to Colbert, but taking you feature by feature you are not as much like her as the girl I picked. But Lorraine, you're beautiful and it should be a cinch for you to go far in pictures. Your mother sent me just a head picture of you but, if your figure is as beautiful as your face, some day I may be writing about you when you're a big star. I mean a big star at the box office. Not through the hips, remember that!)

All of which reminds me that there is still plenty of time for you girls who look like Katharine Hepburn to send me your photographs, the one looking most like her to have her picture published in MODERN SCREEN and to receive a long, personal letter from me giving her a complete routine for remodeling herself.

Also I want pictures of little girls whose mothers think they look like Shirley Temple. Because I'm going to write an article in answer to the many letters I get from sensible mothers who want me to tell them how they can preserve their daughters' health and beauty so that the children, in later life, won't have to fight the handicaps these mothers had to conquer.

By the way, what happened? Doesn't anyone want to look like Constance Bennett or is there only one in captivity? I asked for Bennett doubles and what did I get—practically none. I know it's a big order because the first time I set eyes on Connie I said to myself, "Oh, baby, you'd be hard to match!"

However, my offer still holds. If there are any Connie Bennetts in the world I want to see them. I'll be patient. I'm still waiting. Address: Madame Sylvia, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Your letters keep pouring in. That's swell. It shows me that every woman wants loveliness. And every woman can have it, too. String along with Sylvia. I'll tell you things about the body beautiful you never heard before.

DOES YOUR SKIN LOOK LIKE SILK OR CANVAS?

It's that Hard-to-Get-at "Second Layer" of Dirt that Makes Your Skin Coarse and Gray

By Lady Esther

A black slip under a white dress will make the white dress look dark—grayish!

The same holds true for dirt buried in your skin. It will make your skin look dark—give it a grayish cast. It will also clog your pores and make your skin large-pored and coarse.

It's safe to say that 7 out of 10 women do not have as clearly white and radiant and fine a skin as they might, simply on account of that unsuspected, hidden "second layer" of dirt.

There is one sure way to remove that underneath dirt and that is to use a cream that penetrates the pores.

A PENETRATING Face Cream

Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream is a penetrating face cream. It does not merely lie on the surface of your skin. Almost the instant it is applied, it begins working its way into the pores.

It goes to work on the waxy dirt, breaks it up, makes it easily removable. When you cleanse your skin with Lady Esther Face Cream you get dirt out that you never suspected was there. It will probably shock you when you see how really soiled your skin was.

Two or three cleansings with Lady Esther Face Cream will actually make your skin appear whiter—shades whiter. You would think almost that you had bleached it, but that's the effect of thoroughly cleansing the skin. When your skin has been thoroughly cleansed it blooms anew, like a wilting flower that has been suddenly watered. It becomes clear and radiant. It becomes fine and soft.

Supplies Dry Skin with What It Needs

As Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream cleanses your skin, it also does other things. It lubricates the skin—resupplies it with a fine oil that overcomes dryness and makes the skin velvety soft and smooth.

Cleansing the pores as thoroughly as it does, it allows them to function freely again—to open and close—as Nature intended. This automatically permits the pores to reduce themselves to their normal, invisible size.

Also, Lady Esther Face Cream makes so smooth a base for powder that powder stays on twice as long and stays fresh. You don't have to use a powder base that will ooze out and make a pasty mixture on your skin.

No Other Quite Like It

There is no face cream quite like Lady Esther Face Cream. There is no face cream that will do so much definitely for your skin. But don't take my word for this! Prove it at my expense.

Let me have your name and address and I'll send you a 7-days' supply. Just mail a penny postcard or the coupon below and by return mail you'll get the 7-days' supply of Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream; also all five shades of my Lady Esther Face Powder. Write today.

(You can paste this on a penny postcard.) (20) FREE

Lady Esther, 2010 Ridge Avenue, Evanston, Illinois.

Please send me by return mail your 7-day supply of Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream; also all five shades of your Face Powder.

*Name*____________________

*Address*____________________

*City*________________*State*__________

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Ltd., Toronto, Ont.)

SUFFERERS from

PSORIASIS

Use DERMOIL

DERMOIL is being used by men and women throughout the country to secure freedom from this ugly, stubborn, embarrassing, scaly skin disease, often mistaken for eczema.

MAKE THE ONE SPOT TEST

Apply DERMOIL externally. Does not stain clothing. Watch the scales go, the red patches gradually disappear, and enjoy the thrill of a clear skin again.

J. F. "Suffered nine years. Had spots on my scalp, forehead, arms, legs and fingernails. Nothing I ever used before has worked like Dermoil. You cannot see the places where the scales were."

SEND FOR GENEROUS TRIAL SIZE FREE

DERMOIL is backed with a positive guarantee to give chronic sufferers definite benefit in two weeks time or money is refunded. You risk nothing. Prove it yourself. Trial bottle FREE to make our famous "one spot test." Write today, stating how long troubled and extent of your Psoriasis. No obligation.

LAKE LABORATORIES
Box 6, Northwestern Station, Dept. 601
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

MUSCULAR RHEUMATIC PAIN

It takes more than "just a salve" to draw it out. It takes a "counter-irritant"! And that's what good old Musterole is—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in drawing out local congestion and pain when rubbed on the sore, aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly to this treatment, and with continued application, blessed relief usually follows.

Even better results than the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong, 40¢ each.

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

MUSTEROLE

BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

Beauty Advice

(Continued from page 23)

Rio made an exquisite "Madame Du Barry," whose charms kept a King entranced at a time when the French court was mad with extravagance. Men in those days took part in the drama of dressing, too. The ladies spent half their time getting their hair fixed. Such coiffures as were achieved! They looked like wedding cakes, tier upon tier, with puffs and floating curls, and ribbons, pins and flowers. Contrast the comfort of a modern day permanent with the ordeal of having such a coiffure concocted for you every day of your uncomfortable life. And if you can't get a permanent, you can at least get the kind of new metal curlers that are genuinely comfortable to sleep on. I don't want you to go to the Valentine ball without your rightful heritage of curls.

While the aim of each head may once have been to carry as large and impressive a load as possible, the face has of recent years asserted itself as the dictator. Lovely contour is more important than decoration in hairdressing. Do you remember Charlotte Henry in "Alice in Wonderland" saying, "The face is what one generally goes by?" And so it is. Though sometimes, in the winter, one would think it was the nose. (Don't say modern cosmetics don't belong in Wonderland. I can even tell you something to do for a red nose!)

If the face is the dictator, it ought to demand a search for gold. The Alaskan Gold Rush took place somewhere around the time of Diamond Lil, Mae West's sister under the skin. But the 1936 rush for gold is going to be a feminine one, a youth movement, a discovery in cosmetic chemistry. Naturally, you have always thought of gold as a symbol of wealth. But today this same gold is bringing new beauty to women. El Dorado has been rediscovered in a cream.

ONE of the ancient beauty rituals was the use of gold mixed with wine as a beauty lotion. Women found it beneficial to the skin, but it was a mystery why this was so. Years passed before medical science found a method for developing the beneficial qualities of milk. Then a process made it possible to prepare gold in a soft, fluid form consisting of millions of infinitesimal atoms. Each atom is charged with a natural electrical impulse, and is in constant movement. Now we have this activated gold put into two new creams. The tiny atoms of gold in the cream, because of their constant movement, penetrate easily and quickly to the innermost corners of the pores, attract to them the dust and other impurities lodged there, and carry this debris to the surface of the skin where it can be removed. The result is a tonic effect on the tissues. It's mysterious and has a lot of scientific angles to it regarding negative and positive electrical charges. However, these new creams—one a skin clarifier, the other a rich lubricating cream—arouse circulation, with a cleaner, healthier, more vibrant skin as a result. You'll want to rush for a pencil to write for the name of this modern gold rush product.

There may be gold in them thar' hills, but, there is milk on your breakfast table. Milk had a place in ancient beauty rituals, too, before vitamins were discovered. Carole Lombard, Heather Angel, Karen Morley and Constance Bennett are a few of Hollywood's exponents of milk as a beautifier.

Mary Biddle,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 Madison Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Kindly send me your bulletin on "The Milk Diet."

Name............................

Address............................

Please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Personal problems are always gladly answered by Mary Biddle.

This handsome Irishman is Brian Donlevy, a new screen find. He's appeared in "Barbary Coast" and "Another Face" to date, and the New Year will see him in many more.

Information Desk

(Continued from page 8)

This was made in England.

RUBY KEELER: Halifax, Nova Scotia, has the honor of claiming Ruby, who was born there on August 25, 1909. But she only lived there three years before the family moved to New York, where she attended public school and later the Professional Children's School. At 13 Ruby made her stage debut and appeared in choruses of Broadway shows while still going to school. Texas Guinan's floor show first brought her to the public eye, and Ziegfeld signed her as chief tap dancer in "Whoopee." 1928 brought Al Jolson and Ruby together, and they were married, after which she was starred in "Show Girl." Her first movie was "42nd Street" in which she made such a hit that she has been tops at Warners ever since. Off the screen she is shy and retiring, dresses modestly and is a grand little wife and a swell mother to their adopted baby, Albert, according to Al. She likes to fish, play golf and ride horseback. A typical Irish beauty, Ruby has brown wavy hair and blue eyes. Her weight is 105 and her height is 5 feet 4 inches. Her next picture will be "Colleen" with Dick Powell and Joan Blondell. Write her at Warner Brothers Studio, Burbank, Cal.

ELSA JANE MILLER, Wheeling, W. Va.—What ever started the rumor that Shirley Temple was going blind? She most certainly is not—or anything like it. Right now she is busily working on "Captain January" which will follow "The Littlest Rebel." Lee Tracy is not married, but rumor has it that he and Isabel Jewell have made up. You can write Richard Dix at the RKO-Radio Studios, 780 Gower St., Hollywood, Cal., where he recently finished "Mother Lode."

RALPH BELLAMY: This attractive gentleman was born in Chicago, Ill., on June 17, 1904, where he attended public schools. When he was still in college he ran away from home to join a Shakespearean repertory company touring the middle west. From that time on he stuck to the stage persistently playing with stock companies and the like. In 1930 he came to New York, determined to crash Broadway. He obtained a role in "Town Boy" and then went on the road with two other shows. Back to New York again, Ralph obtained an important part in "Roadside" when he was signed to a motion picture contract, and made his screen debut in "The Secret Six." Married to Catherine Willard, they have no children. His hobby is collecting old music boxes and old books. His pastimes include golf, tennis and horseback riding. He is 6 feet 1½ inches tall, weighs 178 pounds, and has light brown hair and blue eyes. He is a free lance player, but is working now on "Dangerous Intrigue" for Columbia Pictures, 1438 N. Gower St., Hollywood, Cal., where you can reach him.

SARAH ANN RAY, Albuquerque, N. M.—Robert Montgomery had a vacation in Europe from which he returned recently. He is about to start work on "The Unguarded Hour" with Rosalind Russell.

BUCK JONES: Charles "Buck" Jones was born in Vincennes, Ind., December 4, 1889, of American parents. He was educated in public schools and for a while worked as a mechanic. Later on he went to Montana and took up the life of a cowboy. Next he joined the U. S. Cavalry for service in the Philippines, following which the Miller Brothers "101" Ranch Wild West Show engaged him as an expert rider. During the World War, Buck went to France with the First Air Squadron and after the war remained in Europe performing his remarkable feats of horsemanship before the various monarchs. He is married to Odille Osborne, and Maxine is their daughter's name. His hobby is mechanics, his height 6 feet and his weight 173 pounds. He has gray eyes and brown hair. Buck is under contract to Universal Studios, Universal City, Cal., where you can reach him. "Silver Spurs" and "Sunset of Power" are his two most recent pictures.

E. G. HULA, New York, N. Y.—William Powell was born on July 29, 1892, in Pittsburgh, Pa. On May 2, 1904, Bing Crosby was born in Tacoma, Wash. Waterbury, Conn., is Rosalind Russell's birth place.

HENRY FONDA: On a certain May 16, this young man was born at Grand Island, Neb., of non-professional parents. His father, William Brace Fonda, moved his family to Omaha when Henry was a small child, and here he attended public and high schools with a writing career in view. He worked his way through the University of Minnesota, where he studied journalism. After his graduation, Henry tried in vain to land a newspaper job. He then became interested in the Omaha Community Playhouse where he appeared in plays, but was principally concerned with the technical end of the stage. In 1928 he came East to play in summer stock and in the fall came to New York where he was engaged by the Theatre Guild as an extra and understudy. He finally got a break and was recommended to Marc Connolly for the role of the farmer lad in "The Farmer Takes a Wife." At the same time, Fonda came to the attention of Walter Wanger who signed him to a long-term contract and loaned him to 20th Century-Fox for the screen version of that play, for "Way Down East" and to RKO-Radio for "I Dream Too Much." Now Mr. Wanger has given him a splendid role in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Fonda is 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighs 170 pounds. He has black hair and blue eyes. At one time he and Margaret Sullavan were married, but no more—in fact he's not married to anybody. Write him at the Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Cal.

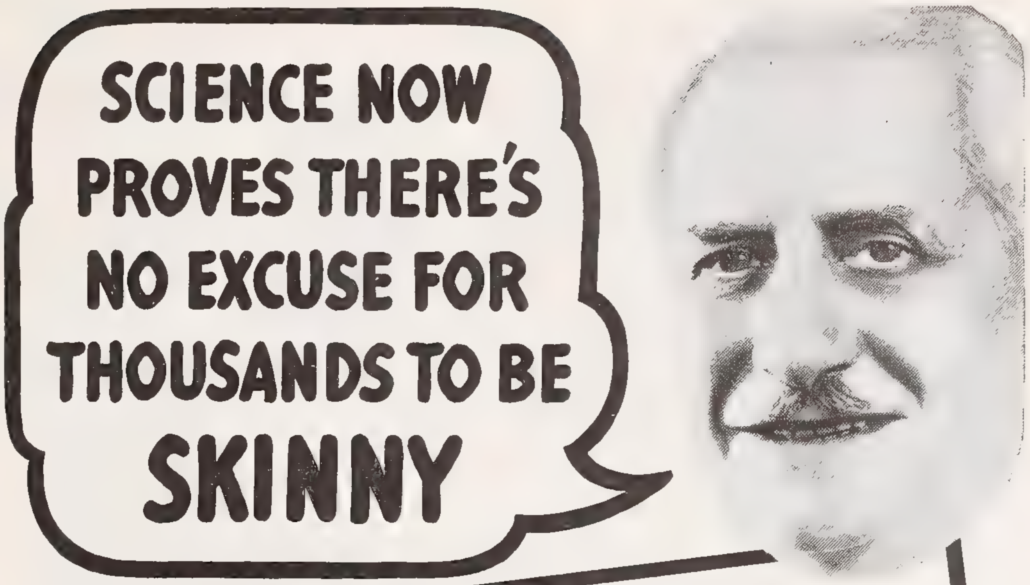
INFORMATION DESK, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Please print a brief life story of..........

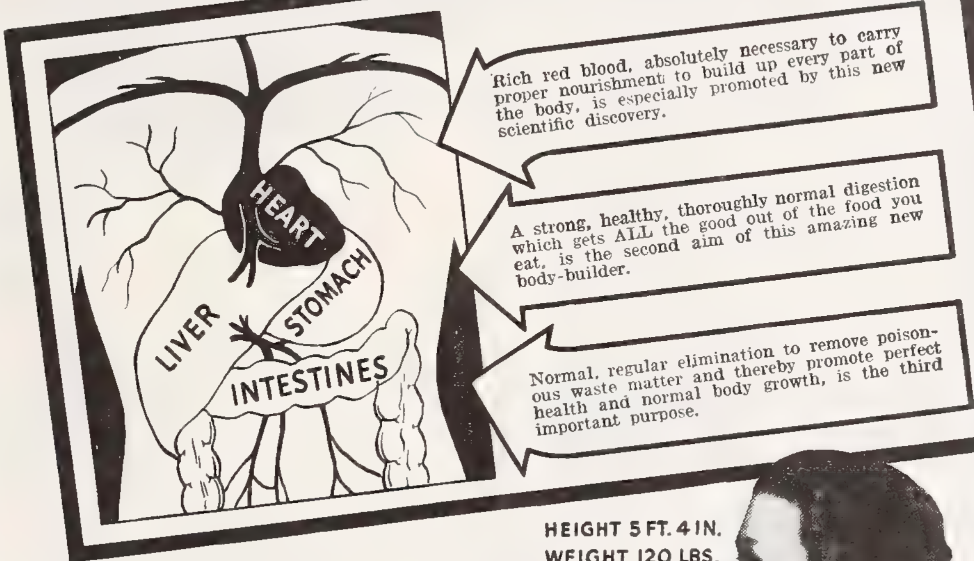
......................in your department.

Name.... ....

City..................State..............



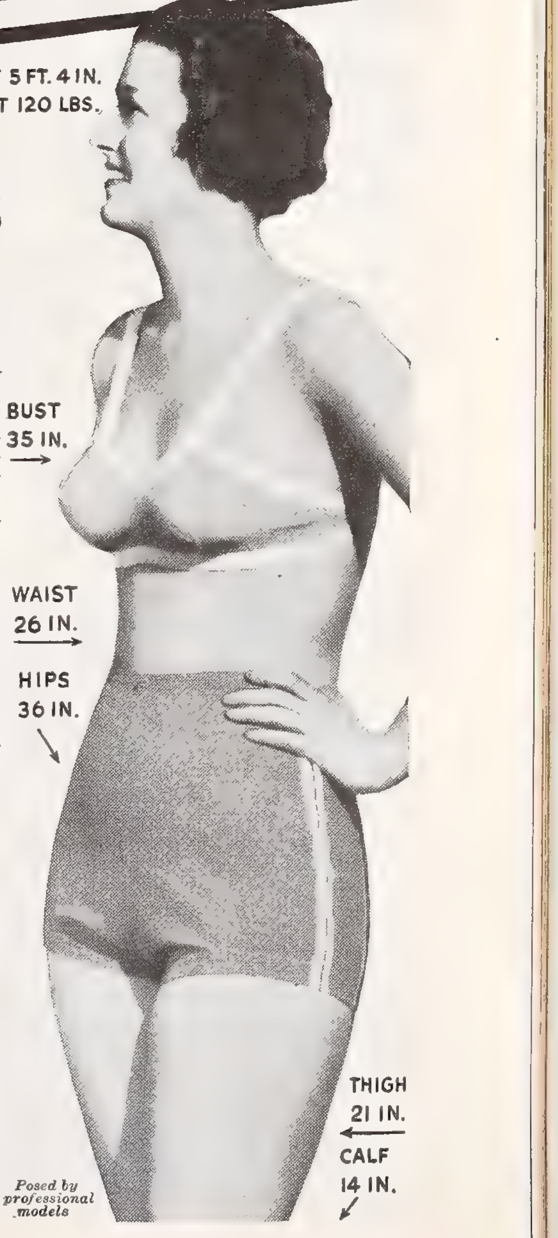
SCIENCE NOW PROVES THERE'S NO EXCUSE FOR THOUSANDS TO BE SKINNY



Rich red blood, absolutely necessary to carry proper nourishment to build up every part of the body, is especially promoted by this new scientific discovery.

A strong, healthy, thoroughly normal digestion which gets ALL the good out of the food you eat, is the second aim of this amazing new body-builder.

Normal, regular elimination to remove poisonous waste matter and thereby promote perfect health and normal body growth, is the third important purpose.



HEIGHT 5 FT. 4 IN.
WEIGHT 120 LBS.
BUST 35 IN.
WAIST 26 IN.
HIPS 36 IN.
THIGH 21 IN.
CALF 14 IN.
Posed by professional models

10 TO 25 LBS. GAINED QUICK—SAY THOUSANDS

NOW there's no need for thousands to be "skinny", even if they never could gain before. Here's a new, easy treatment for them that puts on pounds of naturally attractive flesh — in just a few weeks!

Doctors now know that the real reason why many find it hard to gain weight is they do not get enough digestion-strengthening Vitamin B and blood-building iron in their food. Now with this new discovery which combines these two vital elements in little concentrated tablets, hosts of people have put on pounds of firm flesh, normal curves — in a very short time.

Not only are thousands quickly gaining normal good-looking pounds, but also naturally clear skin, freedom from indigestion and constipation, new pep.

7 times more powerful

This amazing new product, Ironized Yeast, is made from special cultured ale yeast imported from Europe, the richest known source of Vitamin B. By a new process it is concentrated 7 times — made 7 times more powerful. Then it is ironized with 3 kinds of strengthening iron.

If you, too, need Vitamin B and iron to build you up, get these new Ironized Yeast tablets from your druggist at once. Day after day, as you take them, watch skinny limbs and flat chest round out to normal attractiveness, skin clear to natural beauty. With new health and glorious pep you're an entirely new person.

Results guaranteed

No matter how skinny and rundown you may be from lack of enough Vitamin B and iron, this marvelous new Ironized Yeast should build you up in a few short weeks as it has thousands. If not delighted with the results of the very first package, money back instantly.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body." Remember, results guaranteed with the very first package — or money refunded. At all druggists. Ironized Yeast Co., Inc., Dept. 32, Atlanta, Ga.

My Friends expect it!
Drip-O-lator Coffee

• The appetizing, fragrant aroma of Drip-O-lator coffee and its clean, rich body, free from muddy sediment has firmly established a nation wide preference for the Drip-O-lator.

• Your dealer has many attractive models in both aluminum and china for party or every day use. Decide now to select one of the new models on your next shopping trip. You will find the name stamped in the bottom of the genuine Drip-O-lator. Make sure of it.

THE ENTERPRISE ALUMINUM CO. - MASSILLON, OHIO

THE ORIGINAL DRIP-O-LATOR IS SOLD BY ALL LEADING CHAIN, DEPARTMENT & RETAIL STORES

Hair OFF Face Lips Chin

Happy! I once had ugly hair on my face and chin . . . was unloved . . . discouraged. Tried depilatories, waxes, liquids . . . even razors. Nothing was satisfactory. Then I discovered a simple, painless, inexpensive method. It worked! Thousands have won beauty, love, happiness with the secret. My FREE Book, "How to Overcome Superfluous Hair," explains the method and proves actual success. Mailed in plain envelope. Also trial offer. No obligation. Write Mlle. Annette Lanzette, P. O. Box 4040, Merchandise Mart, Dept. 245, Chicago.

THAT NEW WAY

To get lovely soft French Laundered effects in all you iron...no trick at all.

Special TRIAL OFFER

Just see and feel the amazing difference in your ironings when you change from the bother and uncertainty of lump starch to Quick Elastic. It's that pulverized, complete starching and ironing mixture thousands are talking about. No sticking. No scorching. Wonderfully penetrating, it restores elasticity and that fresh new look and feel to things. Your iron fairly glides.

THANK YOU

THE HUBINGER CO., No. 979, Keokuk, Ia.
Send me your trial offer check good for 5c on the purchase of a large 10c package of Quick Elastic Starch, and your free folder, "That Wonderful Way to Hot Starch."

Name ....

Address ....

QUICK ELASTIC
HOT STARCH IN 30 SECONDS

Here Are Winners of "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh" Contest

FIRST PRIZE	SECOND PRIZE
$1000.00	$500.00
Marion Craig Wentworth, 112 Chapala Street, Santa Barbara, Cal.	Kathryn Mansell, 401 West 44th Street, Ashtabula, Ohio

THIRD PRIZE

$200.00

Mrs. M. M. McLaren,
Alhambra Hotel,
Miami, Fla.

FOURTH PRIZES

Seven at $50.00 Each

Mrs. Nancie S. Brann,
59 Fort Pleasant Ave.,
Springfield, Mass.

Nectar Davidian,
1800 San Lorenzo Ave.,
Berkeley, Cal.

Elmer Green,
16 East Fourth Street,
Alton, Ill.

W. McQuade,
637 S. Presa Street,
San Antonio, Tex.

Olga M. Rasmussen,
7334—26th Ave.,
Kenosha, Wis.

Robert C. Schenken,
3600 Magnolia Blvd.,
Seattle, Wash.

Robert Seklemian,
c/o R.C.A. Communications, Inc.,
66 Broad Street,
New York, N. Y.

NOTE: Due to lack of space, it is impossible to list here the names of the ninety winners of the fifth prizes (five dollars each). The prizes have been sent to the ninety lucky ones, and their names are on file at this office.

Stu Erwin and June Collyer Erwin are all dressed up for big sea doings at the "Captain's Banquet." Everyone was very nautical.

How Can I Look Smarter?

(Continued from page 58)

color. This same type of sandal is very popular about Hollywood and appears in various fabrics as well as gold and silver kid.

Q. Please tell me when I can wear pajamas and where? Can I wear them to dinner? On a boat trip? Or to breakfast when a guest in a friend's home?

A. A few years ago there was a great vogue for wearing pajamas to dinner. These pajamas were made very much like evening gowns only they had trouser legs instead of skirts. However, today it is not smart and the only time you may wear pajamas to dinner would be for an informal gathering of very close friends in your own home. Even then, a hostess dress would be smarter. On a boat trip it is permissable to wear sports pajamas of the shirts and slacks type for deck games, but never anything of a dressy character.

You could wear pajamas to breakfast at your friend's home if you find out first whether the other members of the family will be wearing similar costumes.

Of course, in Hollywood where life is much more informal, the great majority of stars wear pajamas to the studio for work and for general sports wear. These are of a tailored type and are made in fabrics and styles that look appropriate outside the home. Two typical Hollywood pajamas are shown. Clair Trevor wears a white satin suit at home. It's very tailored, the double breasted blouse being trimmed only with black buttons upon which are Claire's initials done in rhinestones. Claire has a three-quarter jacket to top this. So simple and in such good taste is this that she often wears it to dinner when she is having a few friends in. Ruth Weston, the New York stage star, who went to Hollywood for her screen debut in "Splendor," wears a favorite style of Hollywood pajama. It's a two-piece silk affair, very tailored, with a bright plaid scarf as its sole trimming.

Fool-proof Chocolate Frosting

EAGLE BRAND CHOCOLATE FROSTING

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1⅓ cups (1 can) Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
1 tablespoon water

Melt chocolate in double boiler. Add Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk. Stir over boiling water 5 minutes until it thickens. (Imagine! Takes only 5 minutes to thicken perfectly!) Add water. Cool cake before spreading frosting.

● Only 5 minutes' cooking instead of 15! And it never fails! Never too thick nor too thin. Goes on in lovely rich swirls. ● But remember . . . Evaporated Milk won't—can't—succeed in this recipe. You must use Sweetened Condensed Milk. Just remember the name Eagle Brand.

MAGIC RECIPES
Quicker easier surer to succeed

FREE! New Cook Book of Wonders!

New! New! NEW! Just off the press! "Magic Recipes" is a thrilling new successor to "Amazing Short-cuts." Gives you brand-new recipes—unbelievably quick and easy—for pies, cookies, candies, frostings! Sure-fire custards! Easy-to-make refrigerator cakes! Quicker ways to delicious salad dressings, sauces, beverages, ice creams (freezer and automatic). Address: The Borden Sales Co. Inc., Dept. MM-26, 350 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Name________________
Street________________
City__________ State______
(Print name and address plainly)
This coupon may be pasted on a penny postcard.

Borden Quality

Margot Grahame and Gene Raymond together at a studio party. Margot is working in "Two O'Clock Courage" and Gene will soon be seen in "Don't Bet on Love."

Yes!
IT'S THE SAME GIRL
LOVELY
MARIAN MARSH
COLUMBIA PLAYER ILLUSTRATES
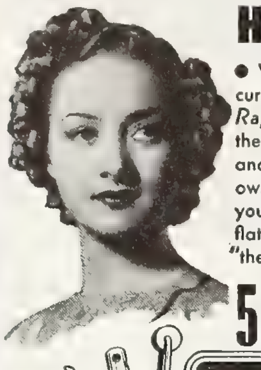
TWO HOLLYWOOD CURLER HAIR STYLES



● Whether you want lots of curls or just a few, Hollywood Rapid-Dry Curlers will give them to you quickly, easily, and beautifully right in your own home. Add new charm to your personality with a smart, flattering hairdress made with "the Curlers used by the Stars."

5¢ AT 5¢ AND 10¢ STORES AND NOTION COUNTERS

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

HOLLYWOOD Rapid Dry CURLER

FREE

★ HOLLYWOOD RAPID DRY CURLER
Box 800M, Hollywood, California

★ Please send FREE Hollywood Curler and booklet of smart Hollywood Hair Styles.

★ Name__________
★ Address__________
★ City__________ State__________

Women up to $22 in a Week and Your Own Dresses FREE Showing Latest FASHION FROCKS ... Direct from Factory!

as low as 3 DRESSES $3.98

No House-to-House Canvassing Necessary
New kind of work for ambitious women demonstrating gorgeous Paris-styled dresses at direct factory prices. You can make up to $22 in a week, full or spare time, and get all your own dresses free of any cost to wear and show. Fashion Frocks are nationally advertised and are known to women everywhere.
No Investment Ever Required
We send you an elaborate Style Presentation in full colors and rich fabrics. Write fully for details of this marvelous opportunity, giving age and dress size.
FASHION FROCKS, Inc. Dept. BB250 Cincinnati, O.

Mercolized Wax

Pure
Mercolized Wax
Beautifies The Skin
Bleaches—Cleanses—Nourishes
Softens and Protects

Keeps Skin Young
Absorb blemishes and discolorations using Mercolized Wax daily as directed. Invisible particles of aged skin are freed and all defects such as blackheads, tan, freckles and large pores disappear. Skin is then beautifully clear, velvety and so soft—face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. At all leading druggists.
Phelactine removes hairy growths—takes them out—easily, quickly and gently. Leaves the skin hair free.

Powdered Saxolite
Reduces wrinkles and other age-signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in half-pint witch hazel and use daily as face lotion.

Q. Are people wearing evening gloves this year?

A. Yes, quite a number are seen at formal parties. The most popular type is the gauntlet or pull-on of metal cloth or fabric, rather than the more conventional buttoned glove of white kid. Myrna Loy wears a very attractive pair of satin gauntlets with a short sleeved, black velvet dinner dress. A color to contrast with the gown is the popular choice.

Q. I am very short waisted, can I wear sweaters and skirts? Can I wear suits?

A. You can wear sweaters and skirts, provided you don't tuck your sweater into your skirt top. Instead, wear it like an over-blouse with a narrow belt placed slightly below your normal waistline.

You can wear a tailored suit with a one- or two-button closing like the Jean Muir suit, mentioned earlier. Jean is quite short waisted but you would never guess it from this picture, would you? Always avoid wide belts on both dresses and suits, in fact, whenever possible, try to have your costumes made so that the belt line is lower than that worn by a girl whose waistline is more normal.

Q. What should I wear to informal dances? (I don't like ankle length dresses.)

A. The perfect answer to this is Tutta Rolf's attractive metal cloth shirtwaist dress. It is a regulation afternoon length, yet it achieves an air of party formality by the clever use of gold metal cloth with brown velvet trim. It's a grand dress for girls in school, in business, or for you who stay home and have to dash about to informal dancing and bridge parties. Tutta's choice of a giddy little velvet turban is an extra dash of smartness. Grace Moore has one of these semi-formal shirtwaist dresses in a sherry brown satin with jeweled buttons. It's a pet Hollywood cocktail, theatre and dancing costume.

Q. Could I wear sports clothes to a bridge party? If not, what should I wear?

A. You might wear a sports dress or suit for an afternoon of bridge when a foursome of you get together at a friend's house. But for a real party, I think you would feel rather out of place. Bridge parties are usually carefully planned by the hostess and it is only fair to her to appear in some attractive afternoon costume. Bette Davis wears a nice type of informal dress suitable for either afternoon or evening bridge gatherings. The soft, full sleeves, the flared and shorter skirt and the graceful cowl neckline are all good details but not fussy ones. The use of shirring and the added touch of the rhinestone clips are perfect.

Q. When should veils be worn on hats?

A. I am certainly glad that this question came up because I think the veil is a very much misused item of our current fashions. Veils are a dress-up accessory and, therefore, should not be worn for sports or for general tailored daytime use. If you want to trick up a daytime hat to look more festive for an evening date, use a veil by all means—but don't go wearing a veil trimmed hat with a woolen dress and a tweed coat. Wear veils on hats that top afternoon, cocktail, theatre and dinner costumes. Wear them, too, with your best winter coat. An excellent example of a veil worn correctly is the one adorning Myrna Loy's little velvet turban—it accompanies her semi-formal velvet dinner gown and looks right. And, if you feel self-conscious in a veil, never wear one.

Q. Recently I was elected president of our local woman's club and I am uncertain about what type of costume would be most appropriate for me to wear to meetings. Will you make some suggestions please?

A. Any attractive afternoon or tailored costume would be right. Some clubs vary in the degree of formality for clothes—some women like to wear real afternoon dresses to club meetings, while others prefer rather tailored clothes. In general, however, I think you would be well dressed if you struck a happy medium between the two. A dress somewhat like the one worn by Ann Sothern and illustrated this month. Her's is two-piece—of suede finished fabric in a warm chamois color. Brown is used for the buttons and trim, also for the attractive scarf cleverly draped above the collar. Ann's accessories and her brimmed felt hat are smart details. This costume is not formal yet it is dignified and quite suitable for a club meeting. Where you are an officer of a social club, meeting in members' houses, you can wear the softer type of afternoon dress in silk or velvet.

Q. What, oh what, can I do about my long thin neck?

A. This is the complaint of so many girls. The best way to camouflage neck length and thinness is to wear scarfs, soft collars and jewelry that give a rounded line to the base of the neck. Avoid V-shaped necklines and off-the-shoulder effects. Kay Francis wears a high collar set off by a three-strand choker of pearls which is a grand way to hide that scrawny neck. Not that Kay has one, but it just happens that this neckline is becoming to thin necks, too. Bulk around the neck is the thing, not a real swaddling effect, but a careful use of fabric to cleverly cover up bones and prominent neck features. Wearing the hair softer and longer is also a good way to cut down the length of the neck.

Q. I have very fat legs, do you think I should wear my daytime skirts long to cover them up?

A. No I do not. I think an awkward skirt length calls attention to big legs. The best daytime skirt length for you is just long enough to cover the upper part of the leg calf. In other words, where the calf of the leg starts tapering down toward the ankle, place your hemline. The best way to judge the correct length for you is to stand with your back to a long mirror, and looking over your shoulder, hitch your skirt up and down until you strike the most becoming spot. Measure that and then adjust your skirts to that height.

Q. What does a girl do when she hasn't an evening coat and feels she can't afford to buy one? Also are bunny wraps still worn for evening?

A. You can always wear your winter coat—but don't wear a hat just because you are wearing your daytime coat. Of course, you could make a short evening cape or jacket for very little cost and then you would feel perfectly dressed. Fur trimming is not an essential, you could even make a cape with one of those cute hoods that forms a cowl collar at back when not covering your hair.

Bunny wraps are still worn by college girls. However, they aren't as popular as lapin because they shed so badly on gowns and escorts. Some of the new lapin capes and jackets look so much like ermine that you get a real kick out of owning one, especially when you know how little you had to pay for it.

SPECIAL KNITTING AND CROCHETING OFFER ON PAGE 6

Between You'n'Me

(Continued from page 25)

wear their hair and if it weren't for movie stars to set the styles everyone would look alike."

To me that statement is ridiculous. I am tired of reading and hearing "do as Hollywood does." Nearly every piece of clothing from handkerchiefs to stockings, is advertised as being exactly like that worn by Ginger Rogers in this picture or Jean Parker in that one. That goes for cosmetics and shampoos, etc., too.

Why? That's simple enough. Just because the fair sex of the U. S. A. is gullible enough to bite every single time. Because this gown made Lombard appear glamorous in her latest picture, they must snatch it and buy it immediately, even if it doesn't suit their personality. They are satisfied because it is an "exact" copy.

Many people seem to think that our very lives hinge on Hollywood doings — the latest romances, blessed events and divorces. I don't give a hoot about the private lives of the stars. What I am interested in is seeing a good movie. I appreciate the beauty and handsomeness of the actresses and actors, but I certainly don't agree that Hollywood rules our lives.—B. Chamberlin, Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

$1 PRIZE LETTER

Carrillo, Picture Saver

If there were more Leo Carrillos we would be assured of more good pictures. Given half a plot he can inject enough human interest into it to hold anyone's attention. While his recent picture, "Love Me Forever," proved to be a masterpiece, it was certainly not due to a good plot. Even so, Carrillo put so much real acting into it that unconsciously one forgot the inconsistency of it all. He gave one the impression that he was not just going through some pre-directed motions and emotions, but he made that character live and stand out.

Even with such a ridiculous part as was assigned him in "The Winning Ticket," he showed the good taste to walk through, and not try to recklessly dramatize a slapstick comedy. (They stopped just short of throwing the pies.)

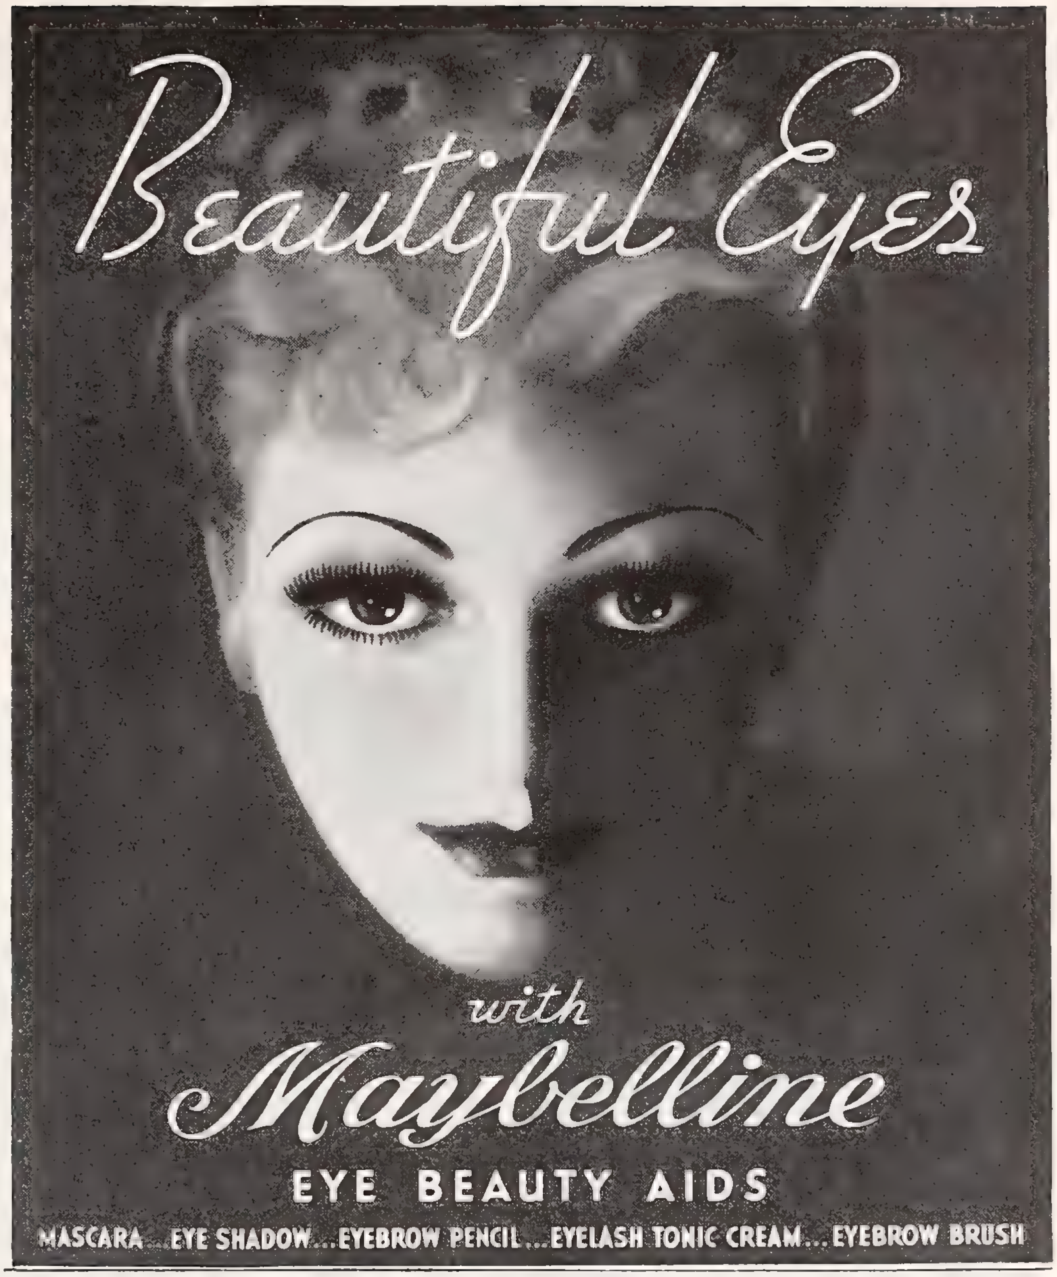
Maybe I'm all warmed up about this Carrillo person, but I'm not the only one. And, from what I have learned about him he must be a pretty worth while gentleman off the screen, as well as an actor.—Laura McCampbell, Knoxville, Tenn.

Attention, Folks!

I've read letters praising Gable, Harlow and every other screen star, but I haven't seen many praising John Howard, a newcomer to the screen. I went to see "Annapolis Farewell" because of Richard Cromwell, but came out raving about John Howard. I think that he, like Robert Taylor, should rise to screen fame because he's got what it takes to make the female heart throb—a healthy handsomeness, a grand speaking voice, plus acting ability. Those of you who have seen him must surely agree with me.—Movie Fan.

This and That

Why all the fuss simply because someone called Joan Crawford "the essence of artificiality?" Everyone has a right to his own opinion.



Beautiful Eyes
with Maybelline
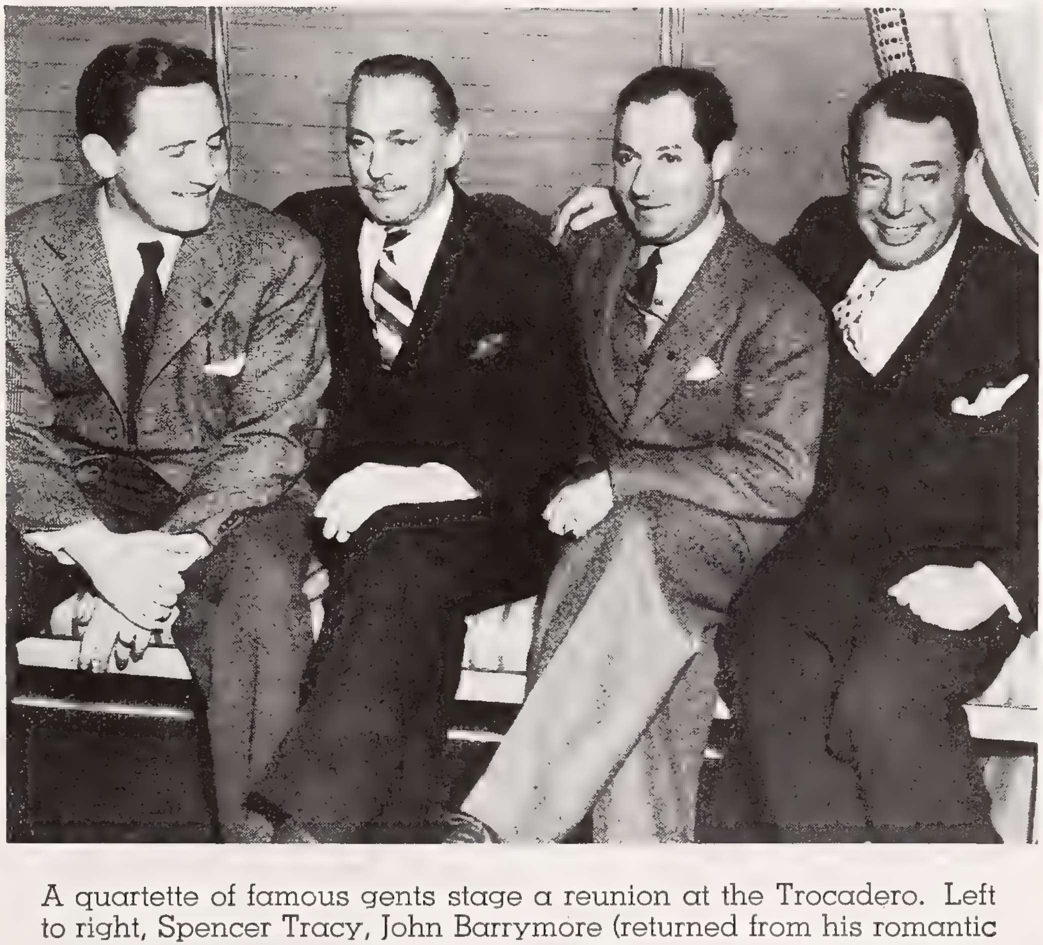
EYE BEAUTY AIDS
MASCARA ... EYE SHADOW ... EYEBROW PENCIL ... EYELASH TONIC CREAM ... EYEBROW BRUSH



A quartette of famous gents stage a reunion at the Trocadero. Left to right, Spencer Tracy, John Barrymore (returned from his romantic wanderings), George Jessel and Joe Lewis.

If a day goes by
take a Beauty Laxative

Keep regular as clockwork if you want to feel like a million and look the same way.

If one day goes by without proper elimination of body wastes, take a "beauty laxative" and get rid of those accumulated poisons.

Olive Tablets are ideal for assisting Nature in keeping a regular schedule. Gentle and mild and non-habit-forming, they bring prompt relief.

Keep a supply always handy on the bathroom shelf. They'll make a hit with the whole family. Three sizes—15¢-30¢-60¢. All druggists.

DR. EDWARDS'
OLIVE TABLETS
THE Beauty LAXATIVE

WANTED

Women to make hooked rugs for our stores. No experience necessary. Steady work. We do the selling. Write at once.

HOLLYWOOD STUDIO STORES
5657 Hollywood Blvd., Dept. 3
Hollywood, California

ITCH

... STOPPED IN ONE MINUTE...

Are you tormented with the itching tortures of eczema, rashes, athlete's foot, eruptions, or other skin afflictions? For quick and happy relief, use cooling, antiseptic, liquid D.D.D. PRESCRIPTION. Its gentle oils soothe the irritated skin. Clear, greaseless and stainless—dries fast. Stops the most intense itching instantly. A 35c trial bottle, at drug stores, proves it—or money back.

Free for Asthma During Winter

If you suffer with those terrible attacks of Asthma when it is cold and damp; if raw, Wintry winds make you choke as if each gasp for breath was the very last; if restful sleep is impossible because of the struggle to breathe; if you feel the disease is slowly wearing your life away, don't fail to send at once to the Frontier Asthma Co. for a free trial of a remarkable method. No matter where you live or whether you have any faith in any remedy under the Sun, send for this free trial. If you have suffered for a lifetime and tried everything you could learn of without relief; even if you are utterly discouraged, do not abandon hope but send today for this free trial. It will cost you nothing. Address

Frontier Asthma Co., 112-A Frontier Bldg.
462 Niagara Street, Buffalo, New York

Personally, I can't see that Joan is the essence of anything. She is merely a mediocre actress, whom one might like, mildly, but forget easily if it weren't for her press agent. And that goes for Franchot Tone, too!

Some others that I've tried hard to rave over, but can't, are: Constance Bennett, Gloria Swanson, Francis Lederer, John Boles, Spencer Tracy and Ronald Colman.

On the other hand, despite the fact that they're not widely ballyhooed, I never miss a picture of: Ralph Bellamy, Otto Kruger, Charles Bickford, Marion Nixon, David Manners and Jack Holt.—Ruth King, Cranford, N. J.

Youth Speaks Up

I guess it's about time "we young 'uns" spoke up. Where I hail from, practically two thirds of the movie-goers are between the ages of twelve and eighteen. Because of this fact, Hollywood ought to make the kind of pictures WE like to see. Humor and romance are a combination we crave.

Between you and me, "The Gay Deception" is an excellent example. Francis Lederer and Frances Dee were heart-filling. They fit perfectly into that type of role.

To the producers: Please let us have more of them (together, of course.)—"Fifteen," Worcester, Mass.

Open Letter to Mr. Dix

You've worked mighty hard, Richard Dix, kept your nose close to the proverbial grindstone—eleven years of stardom and eighty starring pictures! You made many sacrifices, old timer, "stayed the limit" when the going was tough. What a career you have had, combined with all the glory of achievement, fame, success, worry, trouble and unhappiness—all of which goes to make up a film star's life.

It hasn't all been in vain, however, Richard Dix—for we, your staunch and tried fans, will never forget your sterling portrayals brimming full of drama, in "The Christian," "The Vanishing American," "Cimmaron," and a score of others. —Hal Revine, Ottawa, Canada.

Watching a Climber

It is indeed gratifying to see Rochelle Hudson get recognition at last, and screen material worthy of her ability. She acts natural and is a likeable and interesting girl. She gave a grand performance in "Way Down East." What a grand picture! Simple and realistic!

I have watched her, with eager expectancy, climb the ladder of success ever since I saw her first in "Are These Our Children?" I am anxiously waiting to see her performances in "Show Them No Mercy" and "Rollin' Along."

I hope she will continue to play in pictures for many years to come.—Helen Talbott, Idaho Springs, Colo.

More of Melton

Having just seen James Melton in "Stars Over Broadway," I think that Warner Brothers should be congratulated upon having added such a beautiful voice and magnetic personality to their bevy of stars!

I know that Mr. Melton's admirers will be very happy to see their radio favorite and that they, like myself, will not be disappointed.

The best of luck to Jimmy Melton, and here's to his next film, "The Desert Song." —Vera Appleton, Bronx, N. Y.

Good Work

The movie industry is certainly finding out what the public likes in the way of pictures, because we have seen some splendid pictures during the last year or so. Those which stand out most in my mind are "Naughty Marietta," "Eskimo," "Imitation of Life," "David Copperfield," "Les Miserables," "Cardinal Richelieu" and "The Crusades."

I like a picture that has some weight, and sincerely hope that the Mae West variety is fading.—R. S., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Reviews—A Tour of Today's Talkies

(Continued from page 10)

grow in California on the place, including grain, fruit and nut trees. He boasts that it has already practically paid for itself and when directing palls on him he's going to become a farmer. . . . Margaret Lindsay goes to the movies for a good cry. She even sheds tears over her own performances on the screen. You can take this or not, but Margaret's favorite dish is a mixture of limburger cheese and Bermuda onions on toast. . . . Alison Skipworth swore that she would never go into the fillums. But after 26 plays in succession on Broadway which all flopped, Miss Skipworth decided to try the movie pastures. She only signed a contract for four weeks, however, but that was five years ago and she hasn't left Hollywood since. Miss Skipworth loathes dogs of any kind, but adores cats of every description. Her home is a mecca for every feline in the community. . . . Bette Davis is the least superstitious actress in the colony. A broken mirror only bothers her thrifty nature and she's never been to a fortune teller in her life.

★★★★ Ah, Wilderness

(M-G-M)

This is Eugene O'Neill in his softest mood and M-G-M has wrought a tender, nostalgic picture from his great play. If you like an occasional evening at the movies where you can sit steeped in memory and moved by the charming home life of a simple Connecticut family of 1906, you will leave "Ah, Wilderness" with a great sense of satisfaction. Lionel Barrymore is magnificent as the understanding father of a large family. His scenes with his son, Richard, played with fire and pathetic youthful emotion by Eric Linden, are deeply moving. To say that they point a moral to all parents makes this sound too stuffy which it never is. Spring Byington as the mother, Wallace Beery as her roistering, tipsy brother, and Aline MacMahon, Cecilia Parker, Frank Albertson and Bonita Granville all give excellent performances. It's a homespun evening for all your family.

★★ The Bride Comes Home

(Paramount)

It's about time that everyone stopped trying to make another "It Happened One Night" out in Hollywood. To waste good talent like Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray and Robert Young on a thin little story like this is a shame. Poor Fred MacMurray looks completely unhappy as a mulish magazine editor who has the bad luck to fall in love with Claudette, a cheeild of the idle rich who has to go to work on account of Pop, William Collier, Sr.,

Clark Gable and Charles Laughton in that grand film, "Mutiny on the Bounty."

is busted. Bob Young is the rich playboy with an unquenchable thirst and ditto love for Claudette. There are some laughs and smart lines but on the whole you end up not caring too much whether the bride gets home or not. Collier, Sr., deserves a special bravo for giving you some of the most entertaining moments in the picture.

★★★★ Mutiny on the Bounty

(M-G-M)

When a producer spends something like $2,000,000 on a production he is entitled to expect from his director and the cast something well above the ordinary run of picture fare. "Mutiny on the Bounty" looks like two million dollars of any producer's money. Faithful to the Nordhoff-Hall best-seller of several years ago, it presents a vivid picture of the cruel Captain Bligh and the men to whom mutiny seems the only means of escape from his brutalities. Personally, we can't understand why the men of his majesty's ship, "The Bounty," didn't toss their captain into the briny, but perhaps we don't understand British naval regulations. Those who have read the book know that some of the mutineers were hauled back to England to stand trial, while the others remained on Pitcairn's Island to establish a new colony and, no doubt, a sequel to "Mutiny on the Bounty." Of the cast, Charles Laughton's Captain Bligh is villainously superb, and the portrayals of Clark Gable and Franchot Tone are first-rate, Tone being especially good in an impassioned plea at the trial for the mutineers. Here is really an epic of the sea.

Preview Postscripts

Production costs for this picture soared because of traveling expenses. Almost a year was spent in Tahiti by Director Frank Lloyd, a crew of cameramen and actors to get that realistic scenery. Mamo, the South Sea Island maiden, is a genuine article, too, for she was discovered while the crew was on location and signed to a contract. The entire cast was on location at Catalina Island for several weeks. Clark Gable rented a house over there and regaled his cronies with nightly bachelor dinners. Those scenes on the briny deep weren't faked on a puddle in the studio's back lot, either. Many of them were shot in Catalina Bay and at San Pedro. The "Pandora" and "Bounty" were as exact replicas of the original vessels as months of research and careful construction could make possible. Research on the picture has taken over three years. Natalie Bucknall, head of the M-G-M research department, and a

LONELY GIRL—

NOW THE ONLY GIRL
BLUE WALTZ
FACE POWDER

Why does a girl in love blossom gloriously? Because she has the thrilling assurance that to one person in the world she is wonderful . . . adorable . . . beloved.

Why do Blue Waltz cosmetics help the "lonely" girl to blossom into the "only" girl? Because they give her confidence; they make her feel desirable. She discovers her own loveliness through the romantic fragrance of Blue Waltz Perfume; the satiny texture of Blue Waltz Face Powder; the tempting colors of Blue Waltz Lipstick.

Say "Blue Waltz" when you buy cosmetics. Certified pure, laboratory tested. 10¢ each at 5 and 10¢ stores.

Blue Waltz
FIFTH AVENUE • NEW YORK

BLUE WALTZ PERFUME • FACE POWDER • LIPSTICK • TALCUM POWDER • COLD CREAM • BRILLIANTINE

THE UNWED BRIDE!

The crowd swept Candy and Greg into the room where half the college was waiting to greet them with cheers. The whole thing seemed like a nightmare to Candy. The congratulations, the music, the dull guilty ache in her heart. Only last night she had been a carefree silly girl and now—now she was living a lie! For she dared not tell the truth.

It was just then that Tops yelled over the heads of the crowd. "I'll tell you what I know. Listen, everybody! I'm going to tell you about Greg and Candy. They aren't married! I know, because I heard the manager of the roadhouse talking. They were up in one of the private suites when the place was raided! They just said they were married to stop a scandal!"

"Of course we have a license," said Greg. "We'll go get it now!" Hand in hand Candy and Greg ran down the walk to his car. Candy was trembling so that her teeth were chattering. It was all so ghastly! "What—what are we going to do?" she whispered. . . .

What did they do? Carol Kenyon tells you in her thrilling story, "NAUGHTY GIRL"

In the FEBRUARY

SWEETHEART STORIES
Now on Sale Everywhere 10c

"PEPPY.. that's me all over!"

● "I've just been taking SERGEANT'S CONDITION PILLS . . . and I feel like a million dollars. We dogs need an occasional tonic just like you folks."

"Give me CONDITION PILLS for loss of appetite, or after I've been ill. Even if I'm well a few now and then will help me resist disease. They help my blood after fever. Don't wait, till your dog's sick. Keep a box handy. Thanks."

SERGEANT'S CONDITION PILLS are made of the finest ingredients carefully compounded. You can depend on them. Sold by dealers everywhere. Write for your FREE COPY of Sergeant's Book on the care of dogs. It may save your dog's life.

FREE ADVICE. Our veterinarian will answer questions free about your dog's health. Write fully.

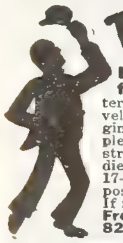
POLK MILLER PRODUCTS CORPORATION
1970 West Broad Street . . . Richmond, Va.

Sergeant's
CONDITION PILLS
ASK FOR FREE DOG BOOK

Learn Photography at HOME

Splendid opportunities. Prepare quickly in spare time. Easy method. No previous experience necessary, common school education sufficient. Many earn while learning. Send for free booklet "Opportunities in Modern Photography", particulars and requirements.

AMERICAN SCHOOL OF PHOTOGRAPHY
3601 Michigan Ave. Dept. 2362 Chicago, Illinois



TAP DANCING

LEARN AT HOME NEW EASY WAY. Professional Stage Method. Surprise and entertain your friends. Be popular, earn extra money, develop hidden talent. No music or experience needed. Begin dancing first day. Beginner's fundamentals and complete Professional Tap Dance included. Equal to $40 instruction. Easy way to reduce or build up figure. For ladies or men. Send only $3.75 money order for Complete 17-Lesson Course. Or send no money (if in U. S.) and pay postman $3.98 on delivery. No more to pay. Try 5 days. If not delighted, money refunded. Limbering exercises Free if you enroll now. THORNTON DANCE STUDIOS
827 Irving Park Blvd., Suite 147 Chicago, Ill.

BRUSH AWAY GRAY HAIR and Look 10 YEARS YOUNGER

Here is a quick, safe and approved method. With a small brush and BROWNATONE you just tint those streaks or patches of gray to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. Easy to prove by applying a little of this famous tint to a lock of hair. Cannot affect waving of hair. Over twenty-three years success. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable.

If BROWNATONE does not give your gray, streaked or faded hair alluring, rich, youthful-appearing color, your money back. Only 50c. At drug and toilet counters everywhere.

Peter Lorre and Marian Marsh in "Crime and Punishment."

group of assistants devoted months to tracking down every clue on the real "Mutiny" trials, obtaining photostatic copies of material and unearthing every possible bit of information. The uniforms worn by the crew in the film are exactly like those in fashion on board the "Mutiny" a couple of centuries ago. Credit for this feat goes to Charles Laughton, who happened on the firm in London which has been in business for over two hundred years and were the makers of the original outfits. They were handed the costuming contract by the studio for the whole works. Director Lloyd can take dozens of bows on this one. He has had a hand in every phase of the picture including research, script writing, photographing and acting. Turning this story into a celluloider was Lloyd's idea in the beginning, some four years ago. He had visions of a top-notch thriller, but the studio biggies didn't. Perseverance in the face of such objections doesn't generally win out. So Mr. L. can take another bow. . . . That distracted look which the camera caught on the faces of Mr. Tone and Mr. Gable occasionally during the making of this picture can be understood now. Franchot was contemplating marriage, of course, and Clark a divorce. So that's that for awhile for both of them.

★★★★ I Dream Too Much

(RKO-Radio)

With the arrival of Lily Pons, opera has now completed its invasion of Hollywood. And in Mlle. Pons' case, at least, it's all for the best, for while the young lady is not beautiful she is good to look upon, possesses an engaging accent, a surprising flair for comedy, and the best feminine voice that the sound screen has ever offered. In fewer words, Lily Pons is a hit in pictures. Her rendition of the bell song from "Lakme" is sure to be one of the high points of the present movie season. Its only fault is that it makes the excellent modern numbers by Jerome Kern suffer by comparison. The story concerns a young French girl who has a voice but whose only ambition is to have babies. During a night of revelry she meets and marries Henry Fonda, an American composer. While trying to sell his opera to an impresario (Osgood Perkins) she gets herself discovered and becomes an opera star. Husband resents his enforced role of a Mr. Nobody and walks out. Things straighten themselves out, however, and the result is a bright and merry musical which should have considerable appeal. Henry Fonda stamps himself as an excellent leading man, and Osgood Perkins, seen too infrequently in pictures, makes his minor role stand out. Quite a few additional laughs are supplied by Eric Blore and The Duchess. The Duchess is a seal.

Preview Postscripts

Not content with luring stage luminaries to Hollywood, the movie moguls are raiding the Metropolitan ranks. Lily Pons is the latest to appear on the silver screen to the accompaniment of her canned golden voice. The diminutive Miss Pons was born in Cannes, daughter of an Italian mother and a French father. A delicate child, she was given vocal lessons for the deep breathing benefits. Her voice delighted everyone but Lily. She wanted to be a concert pianist and it was not until she had graduated from the Paris Conservatory of Music that she took up singing in earnest. Miss Pons' Metropolitan debut was made in 1931 and her transatlantic flight in 1934. This was a trip from Rio de Janeiro to Germany on the Graf Zeppelin. She has a passion for pets. Baby panthers, monkeys and a young zebra number among her favorites, though she's very partial to Jerry, the seal in this picture. The singer was a great favorite of Jerry's, too, who finally got to the point where she snubbed her trainer and would obey none but Miss Pons. The seal is a star in her own right. Her screen name is "The Duchess" and she hails from a tank at the San Diego Exposition. Jerry is talented—plays the bugle and flute—but temperamental. She took a great dislike to her stand-in, a blown-up rubber seal, and would not perform when it was on the set. Ronald, the rat who makes his debut in this picture, is also quite a personage. He received $7.50 a day for his services according to the contract, while his trainer earned $5. . . . Henry Fonda is the young man of a million ideas. He's an actor by accident, having decided on everything but a profession. Back in the Nebraska high school days Hank was a window-trimmer, ice-man and soda-jerker. Then he took the Minnesota University's journalism course, with an eye on playwriting and the Great American Novel. On Saturday afternoons he councilled a Boy Scout troop, coached basketball in the evenings and taught English at a Community Centre on the Sabbath. It wasn't a nervous breakdown, after all, but a financial one that forced him to accept a position with the Omaha Playhouse for a paltry sum. But it paved the way to Broadway where he married Miss Margaret Sullavan, was divorced by the same, and later made a hit in "The Farmer Takes a Wife."

Sylvia Sidney and Alan Baxter in "Mary Burns, Fugitive."

Randolph Scott and Margaret Sullavan in "So Red the Rose."

★★★ Crime and Punishment

(Columbia)

You might call this "The Return of Von Sternberg." We don't mean that Joe is just back from his ancestral home in Brooklyn; we mean that this is his first really good picture in some time. You may recall that his last several efforts turned out to be nothing more than a series of lovely photographs of Marlene Dietrich. His new picture is completely equipped with motivation, a story, and two examples of fine acting. The story is Dostoievsky's, and is mainly concerned with the fear that grips a man who has committed a murder. The two acting lessons are furnished by Peter Lorre, as the criminal, and Edward Arnold, as the police inspector, who do much to give the story a vitality it would lack in the hands of actors less expert than they. Briefly, the story is this: Lorre, brilliant university graduate, finds himself unemployed and penniless. Recognized as an authority on crime, and actuated by a desire for enough money to bring him food and shelter and to prevent his sister from marrying a wealthy middle-aged dolt whom he detests, he commits what he believes to be a perfect murder, only to find himself driven almost mad by fear the minute suspicion is turned his way. It's a grim unreeling most of the way, with very little comedy relief, but it should win Lorre many new fans in America. In lesser roles, Marian Marsh and Tala Birell are both capable.

★★ Stars Over Broadway

(Warner Bros.)

Here's a picture worth seeing just to hear. James Melton, screendom's newest songster, proves he has what it takes in the vocal line. After his "Celeste Aida" you will forget that the young man can't act. Pat O'Brien, in the role of a Broadway agent, thinks anyone who can render operatic arias like that should be pretty good crooner material. So he takes our hero in hand and makes him a "Star Over Broadway" via the ether waves. Mr. O'Brien, incidentally, is proving more versatile with every picture. In this he is a cynical guy who never cracks a smile until the fade-out. Jane Froman does some very satisfactory warbling while Frank McHugh furnishes the laughs as a song-plugging pest. Marie Wilson, another newcomer to the fillums, promises to be a fine comedienne and Jean Muir is pleasantly pretty in the romantic lead.

★★ Millions in the Air

(Paramount)

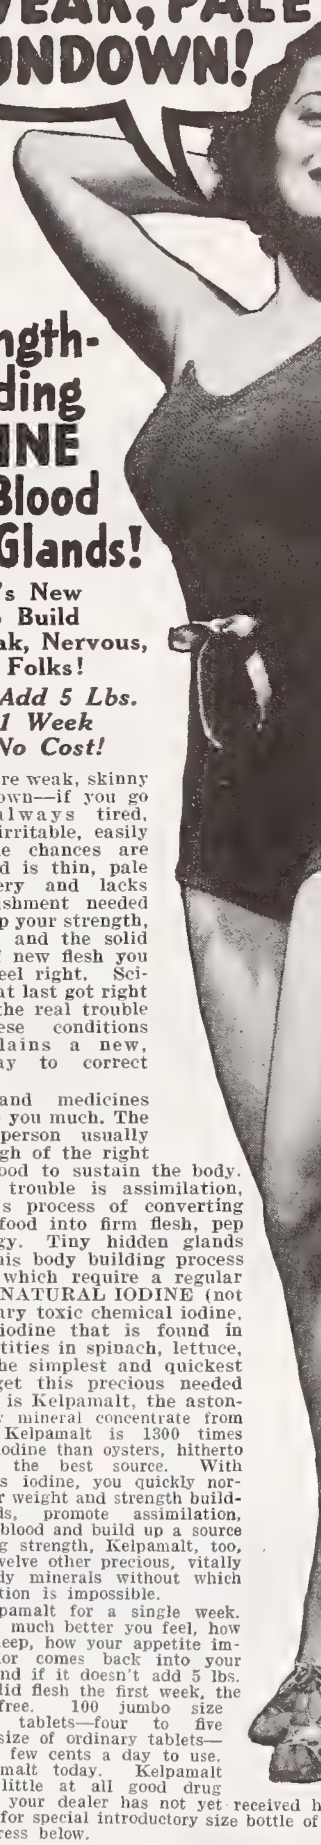
With Major Bowes' radio amateur hour as its inspiration, "Millions in the Air" presents a fairly entertaining bit of diversion which ought to bring joy to the hearts of all loyal devotees of the gong. If memory isn't fooling, this is the first motion picture built entirely around an amateur hour, so—who knows?—maybe we're in for a series of them. The romance in this one is carried by Wendy Barrie, as the daughter of George Barbier, the program's sponsor, and John Howard, a crooning milkman. They meet—the handsome young milkman and the sponsor's daughter—and go on the hour with a song number. While their singing is not Grade A it seems to appeal to the audience, which yells for more, and thus a romance is started. The real entertainment in this exhibit is furnished by Willie Howard, for years one of Broadway's favorite comedians, who makes an auspicious screen debut as a would-be opera star who has been strictly amateur for twenty-five years. His burning ambition is to finish something—anything—from "Rigoletto" without accompaniment of the gong. There'll be more of Mr. Howard in pictures. Eleanore Whitney is a cute and capable tap dancer, and others who furnish amusing bits are Robert Cummings and Inez Courtney.

★★★★ So Red the Rose

(Paramount)

The South, before and after the war, comes to life again under the able supervision of King Vidor, and with considerable help from Margaret Sullavan, whose performances are always interesting. "So Red the Rose" tells what the Civil War did to the South, not by exhibiting battle scenes, but by singling out one southern family and showing what it did to them. The Bedfords, headed by Walter Connolly and Janet Beecher, live a happy and peaceful existence with their plantation and their daughter, Margaret Sullavan, a real flower of the old South who is in love with her cousin, Randolph Scott, who manages the plantation. The war breaks out, and the head of the house and his son go off to battle and to their death. When cousin Randolph the last to go, returns home at the end of the war he finds the Bedford mansion burned to the ground and the women of the family living in the old slaves' quarters. "So Red the Rose" should appeal to everyone.

Paul Muni and Josephine Hutchinson in "The Story of Louis Pasteur."



IF YOU ARE SKINNY WEAK, PALE RUNDOWN!

Get Strength-Building IODINE into Blood and Glands!

Science's New Way to Build Up Weak, Nervous, Skinny Folks!

Must Add 5 Lbs. in 1 Week Or No Cost!

If you are weak, skinny and rundown—if you go around always tired, nervous, irritable, easily upset, the chances are your blood is thin, pale and watery and lacks the nourishment needed to build up your strength, endurance and the solid pounds of new flesh you need to feel right. Science has at last got right down to the real trouble with these conditions and explains a new, quick way to correct them.

Food and medicines can't help you much. The average person usually eats enough of the right kind of food to sustain the body. The real trouble is assimilation, the body's process of converting digested food into firm flesh, pep and energy. Tiny hidden glands control this body building process—glands which require a regular ration of NATURAL IODINE (not the ordinary toxic chemical iodine, but the iodine that is found in tiny quantities in spinach, lettuce, etc.). The simplest and quickest way to get this precious needed substance is Kelpamalt, the astonishing new mineral concentrate from the sea. Kelpamalt is 1300 times richer in iodine than oysters, hitherto considered the best source. With Kelpamalt's iodine, you quickly normalize your weight and strength building glands, promote assimilation, enrich the blood and build up a source of enduring strength, Kelpamalt, too, contains twelve other precious, vitally needed body minerals without which good digestion is impossible.

Try Kelpamalt for a single week. Notice how much better you feel, how well you sleep, how your appetite improves, color comes back into your cheeks. And if it doesn't add 5 lbs. of good solid flesh the first week, the trial is free. 100 jumbo size Kelpamalt tablets—four to five times the size of ordinary tablets—cost but a few cents a day to use. Get Kelpamalt today. Kelpamalt costs but little at all good drug stores. If your dealer has not yet received his supply, send $1.00 for special introductory size bottle of 65 tablets to the address below.

Kelpamalt Tablets

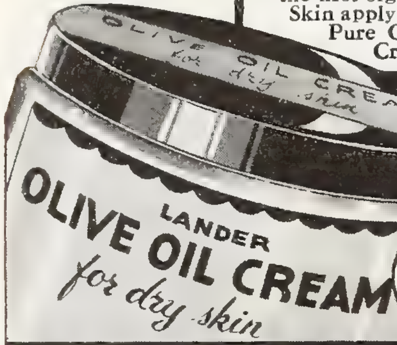
SPECIAL FREE OFFER

Write today for fascinating instructive 50-page book on How to Add Weight Quickly, Mineral Contents of Food and their effects on the human body. New facts about NATURAL IODINE. Standard weight and measurement charts. Daily menus for weight building. Absolutely free. No obligation. Kelpamalt Co., Dept. 662, 27-33 West 20th St., New York City.

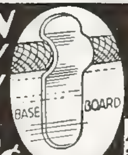
DRY SKIN!
Asteatosis
ROBS VICTIMS OF SKIN BEAUTY!
Exposure to winter—failure to remove cosmetics properly—harsh effects of alkali soaps—all do their part to bring on ASTEATOSIS—the medical name for DRY SKIN! LANDER'S OLIVE OIL CREAM helps to prevent and correct this condition. Use it for your cleansing and nourishing cream—notice how it lubricates your skin as only olive oil can. 10¢ at all dime stores.
WHAT IS ASTEATOSIS?
Asteatosis is the failure of sebaceous glands to feed oil to the skin. To treat this condition, which sometimes produces serious skin disorders, physicians recommend Olive Oil. At the first sign of Dry Skin apply Lander's Pure Olive Oil Cream!



LARGE JAR 10¢
LANDER FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK

HUSH
HUSH Cream Deodorant
HUSH Stick Deodorant

"HUSH" FOR BODY ODORS AT ALL 10¢ STORES



NEW EASY WAY 10¢ JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP
KEEP WIRES OFF FLOOR (LAMPS AND RADIO)
A neat job instantly. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords. 10c. At Kresge's

LEARN TO DANCE AT HOME
Easy as A-B-C. Each course complete in illustrated booklet. Your choice of:
BEGINNERS or ADVANCED TAP or BALLROOM COURSE $1 EACH (Includes Plain Waltz; Fox Trot; Tango; Carioca; Continental, etc.)
ALL 3 COURSES $2
Sent prepaid or C.O.D. (in U.S.A.) plus postage.
FREE with $2 order—your choice one pair dancing taps or latest "Top Hat" exhibition dance.
BILLY TRUEHART Dept. O 5308 Almida Way, Houston Texas

HAIR Lovelier THAN EVER BEFORE

ELSA BUCHANAN
Feature Player

STAR-SHEEN Liquid Rinse and Tint is used and praised by thousands of women: STAR-SHEEN brings out natural color, fascinating high-lights. Creates a new, lustrous softness . . . counter-acts dullness, brittleness. Safe, simple to use Use STAR-SHEEN after every shampoo.
SEND 10c FOR FULL SIZE BOTTLE
CHECK SHADE ( ) PLATINUM ( ) HENNA ( ) BLACK ( ) BLONDE ( ) DARK BROWN ( ) GOLDEN BROWN
★ STAR-SHEEN
HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA
SOLD AT ALL 10c STORES

Preview Postscripts

The sons and daughters of the Old South in this play really are from Dixie; Margaret Sullavan was born in Virginia, a direct descendant of Robert E. Lee. Randolph Scott is also a Virginian and a graduate of the University of North Carolina. Harry Ellerbe is a native of Georgia and Elizabeth Patterson comes from Savannah, suh. An entire Southern village and countryside was constructed for the setting. A plantation sprung up in Sherwood Forest, forty miles from Hollywood. Over a hundred carpenters and painters lived on the location for three weeks. Beside building the large mansions, quarters had to be put up for five hundred slaves. The battlefield of Shiloh took more than two weeks to complete. All shrubs, flowers and vines were transported to Sherwood, planted and watered for three months before they could appear a natural part of the scenery. Interior scenes were shot on the studio sets. These contained some of the costliest "props" ever to be assembled on a set. For neither expense nor effort was spared to find authentic antiques to re-create the spirit of the time. William G. Beymer, noted authority on the Civil War period, was sent through the South to collect antiques and check on all the props and costumes to be used. Randolph Scott found that all those "horse operas" in which he was cast for his first few years in Hollywood weren't all lost time. But he wishes he had learned to be as much at home with a gun as he is on a horse. While doing a quail hunting scene on location, Randy pulled the trigger of an old-fashioned rifle and the ancient firearm promptly exploded, hurling the copper percussion cap into the flesh below his eye. First-aid treatment by the doctor, on location with the company, was administered and the ex-cowboy was advised to use only slingshots from then on.

★ Broadway Hostess

(Warner Bros.)

If Broadway were as uninteresting as some of the pictures about it, a wholesale evacuation would seem to be in order. This little number is not completely bad, nor is it good. Its theme is that startlingly new one which states that while Broadway and Park Avenue are but a drink or two apart on the city map, there's a social wall between them which is rarely scaled, and then only by guys with courage and persistence, such as, in our case, Lyle Talbot. Lyle is a Broadway boy who manages Winifred Shaw, a night club torch chanter. On Park Avenue we have Genevieve Tobin, who plays around with Lyle merely for the laughs. She's not sincere, see, but guess who is? The Broadway chanteuse. But Lyle wants the daughter of Park Avenue, and he starts a campaign to dazzle her with his wealth by opening a swank gambling joint. The place prospers until he gets himself in a jam with Genevieve's brother, a cad if ever we saw one—and we've seen one. From there on things are a bit too complicated to report, so let's just say that Phil Regan sings well in a supporting role and Allen Jenkins furnishes the so-called comedy relief.

★ One Way Ticket

(Columbia)

Perhaps you'd prefer a round-trip ticket on this one, for you may not want to stay long. Anyway, it's all about Lloyd Nolan, who is caught robbing a bank of $47.98, or some such sum, which is the exact amount his father had hoarded there when the bank closed its doors permanently. Lloyd gets a one-way ticket to the state penitentiary, where he captures the eye of Peggy Conklin. Peggy is not, as the country club set puts it, in stir—she happens to be the daughter of the captain of the guards, who is Walter Connolly. All of which elevates Lloyd to the post of gardener for the Connollys and the Conklins, and goes to prove that stone walls do not a prison make, for when Peggy goes off to college whom do you suppose she finds in her trunk? Right. Lloyd takes it on the lam, and turns up later as gardener at Peggy's sorority house. When the authorities close on him he grabs Peggy and dashes away to a hideout. The law is not to be denied, however, and both Lloyd and Peggy are apprehended. This time they both go to jail, promising, of course, to wait for each other. Somehow there didn't seem to be much choice in that decision.

★★★★ Mary Burns, Fugitive

(Walter Wanger-Paramount)

If you're looking for excitement, this picture will provide plenty. Thrills and chills are packed into the plot, besides as absorbing a love story as you've seen in many a movie moon. You'll be glad to find Sylvia Sidney in a role that does her justice, even if the law doesn't. She is Mary Burns who turns fugitive because of an unjust prison term given her for supposedly aiding U. S. A.'s current Enemy No. 1. Alan Baxter is the meanie who causes all the trouble for Mary and the G-Men. The characterization doesn't allow this screen newcomer much sympathy, but it should reap him a goodly supply of fan mail. Melvyn Douglas does a good job of making a snow-blind explorer romantic, while Pert Kelton and Brian Donlevy are too convincing for comfort as the toughest toughs ever to leer into a camera. The entire cast is competent and with a good yarn to boot this picture comes under the heading of excellent entertainment.

★★★ In Person

(RKO-Radio)

Seems rather strange seeing Ginger Rogers without Fred Astaire these days, but it should help to prove that the Rogers gal is capable of stepping out on her own when she's called upon to do so. In this one she is paired with George Brent, who, let us assure you right now, executes not one single dance step in the entire picture. George, in fact, is a sullen sort of guy who finds himself encumbered (the thought is Mr. Brent's) with Ginger as his guest at a cabin in the mountains. Miss R. is a movie queen who is suffering a nervous breakdown from an over dose of autograph fiends. In a disguise which is second only to a Karloff horror picture, she is "getting away from it all" in the pleasant mountain surroundings. For Mr. Brent's fans, it must be said that his intentions are nothing but honorable. He doesn't know Ginger is a Glamor Girl, and he has taken her to the mountain retreat only as a favor to his uncle. Yes, we said uncle. From there on things get complicated, as well they might, and in the process you are witness to a bright and diverting comedy and a couple of excellent Rogers' song and dance numbers. Alan Mowbray, Grant Mitchell and Samuel Hinds do well with the supporting roles.

BROWN BLONDES WANT GOLDEN HAIR?

Shampoo-rinse Washes Hair 2 to 4 Shades Lighter

WHAT girl with dull, brownish hair wouldn't give a fortune to be the possessor of gloriously radiant, golden hair? Any girl, of course. But now, thanks to Blondex, the unique shampoo-rinse, the drabbest, most faded hair can be made to gleam with gold for just a few cents. If you want golden hair, try Blondex today. One shampoo with Blondex will wash your hair 2 to 4 shades lighter. And safely, too, for Blondex is not a harsh bleach or dye. Start today with Blondex. Bring back the golden beauty of childhood. Be a true, alluring golden blonde. Get Blondex at any drug or department store.

BLONDEX THE BLONDE HAIR SHAMPOO-RINSE

Connie Bennett is leaving Hollywood for awhile to do a couple of pictures for GB in London. She will do "Everything Is Thunder" and "The Hawk."

★★★ Splendor

(Samuel Goldwyn)

If it may be said that Samuel Goldwyn has a standard, it may also be said that "Splendor" is not up to it. Goldwyn productions, as a rule, are known for their excellent stories as well as for their handsome settings. In this latest number, the inferior quality of the story seems more obvious against the commendable backgrounds Mr. Goldwyn has provided for it. What we're trying to say is that "Splendor" is good, average entertainment, and perhaps we shouldn't expect more than that, so let's get on with the story. Briefly, it's this: Joel McCrea, son of a proud and once wealthy family, marries Miriam Hopkins, much to the aforesaid family's horror, for they expected him to marry Ruth Weston, an heiress friend who could have paid off the McCrea mortgage. Under the pressure from the family, and in an effort to get Joel on his feet financially, Miriam is forced into a situation with his cousin, Paul Cavanagh. Comes the denouement, and finally a happy understanding between the co-stars. Miss Hopkins has never been photographed more beautifully, and her presence adds considerably to the picture's entertainment value. The rest of the cast is first-rate, with a special nod in the direction of Ruth Weston, who makes the heiress believable and human.

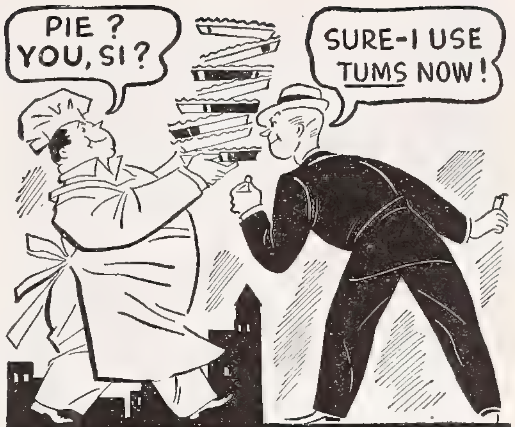
★★★★ The Story of Louis Pasteur

(Warners)

This is definitely not one of those "fair and Warner" pictures. It is tops in entertainment and marks an important step forward in the motion picture industry. The studio has given us here the biography of a great man. And when they prove how absorbing a drama can be built from the drab facts of a scientist's life, a whole new field for screen material is opened. The story of Louis Pasteur's love for humanity has more intense interest than any screen romance yet unreeled. Paul Muni's characterization of Pasteur is beautifully done. The great kindliness and patience of the scientist is portrayed so understandingly by Muni that he makes him an unforgettable personality. Josephine Hutchinson is well cast as the wife of Pasteur who comforted and believed in her husband when the world was scorning his theories. They are driven from Paris by the King's wrath after Pasteur discovers the cause of child-birth infections which have resulted in innumerable deaths. Then Pasteur is scorned by the French Medical Academy for his theory of vaccination and is subjected to the world's ridicule over his cure for hydrophobia. In the midst of his troubles, the scientist is stricken with paralysis. The plot is engrossing throughout, packed with suspense and dramatic situations. Anita Louise and Donald Woods are capable in minor roles, as is Fritz Leiber.

Preview Postscripts

This picture took only six weeks to shoot, but actual work took over two years. Research for the story was a long and involved procedure. All the instruments used in the laboratory scenes were authentic to the period. The microscopes were genuine ones used in that day, and other instruments which could not be traced were made according to Pasteur's sketches of them. The palace set was the most elaborate constructed on the studio sets, although the amphitheatre and Pasteur home necessitated weeks of construction. The French Provincial farmhouse was located after scouring the entire countryside. It took all of three weeks to perfect



PIE ? YOU, SI ?
SURE-I USE TUMS NOW!

SIMPLE SIMON
MET A PIEMAN
AND ORDERED THREE OR FOUR;
HE NOW EATS TUMS
WHEN HEARTBURN COMES . . .
DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE!

Stop SAYING "NO" TO FAVORITE FOODS!

IT isn't only pie that disagrees with some people. Many say that even milk gives them a gassy stomach. The very best foods may bring on acid indigestion, sour stomach, gas, heartburn. Millions have found that Tums bring quick relief. Munch 3 or 4 after meals or whenever smoking, hasty eating, last night's party, or some other cause brings on acid indigestion. Tums contain no harsh alkalies, which physicians have said may increase the tendency toward acid indigestion. You will like their minty taste. Only 10c at all drug stores.

TUMS FOR THE TUMMY

TUMS ARE ANTACID . . NOT A LAXATIVE

EAT LIKE CANDY
TUMS
10¢
STOMACH DISTR
10¢

HANDY TO CARRY

FREE: Beautiful five-color 1936 Calendar-Thermometer. Also samples of Tums and NR. Send stamp for packing and postage to A. H. Lewis Co., Dept. 2B-50, St. Louis, Mo.

BUNIONS
Torture Needless

Pain stops almost instantly. The swelling and inflammation is so quickly reduced you can wear smaller, neater shoes with ease. Prove it on your own bunion. Just write and say, "I Want To Try Pedodyne." No obligation.
Pedodyne Co., 180 N. Wacker Dr., Dept. R-210, Chicago, Ill.

First Aid TO DULL LIFELESS HAIR

★

Bring out its natural color!

LOOK FOR THIS GIRL ON THE PACKAGE

Lovely hair is your greatest beauty asset! Bring out its natural color—its lustre—its beauty with Sheila Color Rinse. Made in 12 individual colors. It's harmless and may be washed out by shampooing. For sale at all 10c stores—2 rinses for 10c.

FREE package of Sheila Egg & Olive Oil Shampoo. Send empty carton of Sheila Color Rinse and 3c stamp to cover postage and mailing to Sheila, Inc., Cleveland, Ohio.

Sheila
COLOR RINSE
WAVE POWDER
· EGG & OLIVE OIL SHAMPOO

Alkalize with Alka-Seltzer
AT ALL DRUGGISTS 30¢-60¢
WHAT?— NO FUSSY APPETITE?
NOPE, ALKA-SELTZER SET ME RIGHT
SOUR STOMACH
I'VE GOT A COLD, I DON'T FEEL WELL, SIR
YOU SHOULD HAVE TAKEN ALKA-SELTZER
COLDS
AM I WOOZY? BOY, AND HOW!
TAKE ALKA-SELTZER, IT'S A WOW!
HANGOVER
Be Wise Alkalize
Alka-Seltzer
TUNE IN THE NATIONAL BARN DANCE SATURDAY NIGHT NBC-NETWORK

This sparkling Alkaline drink, combined with an Analgesic (sodium acetyl salicylate) gives prompt pleasant relief for Sour Stomach . . . Colds . . . Headaches, and other common Aches and Pains caused by excess acidity—(deficient alkalinity)

The "doubles" for famous stars make an interesting group. The stand-in for Claudette Colbert is Pluma Noisom; for Crawford, Kasha Le Seuer; for Garbo, Chris Meeker and for Mae West, Virginia Rendell.

Jean Parker's back from England where she made "The Ghost Goes West" with Robert Donat.

Paul Muni's make-up. The pictures of Pasteur showed a fuller face and higher forehead than that of Muni. Finally a make-up was perfected which looked exactly like the pictures of the scientist, though it took three hours every day to get it on the Muni face.

★★ Another Face
(RKO-Radio)

This was originally titled "It Happened in Hollywood"—and such a series of situations could have happened in no other place. It's as hilariously improbable as the town itself and just as worth seeing. The yarn concerns an ex-killer (Brian Donlevy) who has his pugilistic nose remodeled. With the new streamlined profile he heads for Hollywood and is an over-night sensation. It looks like this novel form of hideout from Uncle Sam's sleuths is going to work for several reels before the dashing Donlevy gets tripped up. Molly Lamont, a new English actress, gives an excellent performance as the tripper-upper and Phyllis Brooks is good as the romantic blonde. Wallace Ford, the publicity-mad press agent, and Alan Hale, as the distraught "quickie" producer, furnish a year's quota of laughs. There is no lack of suspense, either, up to the climax when our hero holds G-Men and studio officials at the point of a gun after they have set an elaborate trap for him. Sure, it's drammer in large doses and completely silly in spots, but this celluloider is worth the price of admission any day. The good performances of the various members of the cast will surprise you considering that there isn't a prominent name in the entire list.

Preview Postscripts

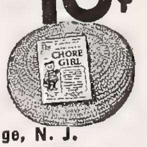
This was a phenomenal picture, for most of it was shot without sets of any kind. The important scenes were taken at the studio gates, outside the sound sets, on the cat-walks (those high beams across the studio stages) and in odd corners of the lot. So if you want the low-down on the interiors of the studios you'll get the real thing here. To the luck of the Irish is what Brian Donlevy attributes his speedy rise in the cinema. Though he was born in Wisconsin, Brian's parents came from the Emerald Isle, and belong to the Donlevy whiskey tribe. He was enrolled by his hopeful parents in a military academy, but learning didn't take, so Brian ran away at sixteen and joined the army. After developing that jaw in military combat, Mr. Donlevy offered the Arrow Collar people the chance to photograph it. He was the best known Arrow Collar lad in the country. Jack Mulhall and Neil Hamilton were working in the same business in those days. . . . Wallace Ford has never been to school a day in his life. He was an orphan at nine and adopted by a Manitoba farmer. But tilling the good earth didn't appeal to Wallace so he hopped a freight train to St. Joseph a year later and began looking around for a means of livelihood. Theodore Roberts' Stock Company was in that town and Master Ford was given a job ushering. He finally worked up to be doorman, stage hand and at last got onto the stage itself. Now he's a member of the Lambs' Club in good standing and is famed as Hollywood's super story teller. No dialects excluded, including Ethiopian. Eric Rhodes, attention Mr. Ripley, is a Phi Beta Kappa. You can check with the University of Oklahoma on that.

I'm THE

The All - Copper, Sponge - Cushioned Pot Cleaner. Yes, ma'am. I do quickly and thoroughly all the work you've looked upon as "drudgery" for years. Those pots, pans and oven glass, for instance. Why rub and scrub when I remove grease, grime and oven-burn instantly. It doesn't bother me to be in "hot water"— and think how it saves your hands! I don't shred, splinter or rust either. I'm just an honest, workaday girl and I'll do a month's work for 10c.

for you

10¢



METAL TEXTILE CORP., Orange, N. J.

SAFE... because it is easier to clean
HYGEIA
NURSING BOTTLE

GIVEN—LADIES! 34 pc. COLORED GLASS DINNER SET or big cash commission. Send name and address. Beautiful Cherry Blossom design. CHOICE of green or pink glass: 6 plates, 6 tumblers, 6 cups, 6 saucers, 6 nappies, 1 each, sugar, cream, vegetable and platter. This is only one of nearly a hundred articles featured in our catalog, which we GIVE for selling our famous WHITE CLOVERINE SALVE for cuts, burns, sores, chaps, etc. to friends at 25c a box with a beautifully colored Art Picture FREE and remitting as per new premium plan book. 39th year. WE ARE FAIR AND SQUARE. Start now by sending for one dozen boxes. SEND NO MONEY—We trust you. BE FIRST.
WILSON CHEM. CO., Inc. Dept. 10-A Tyrone, Pa.

BACKACHES NEED WARMTH

Thousands who suffered miserable backaches, pains in shoulders or hips, now put on Allcock's Porous Plaster and find warm, soothing relief. Muscle pains caused by rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, sciatica, lumbago and strains, all respond instantly to the glow of warmth that makes you feel good right away. Allcock's Plaster brings blood to the painful spot . . . treats backache where it is. Allcock's lasts long, comes off easily. Only Allcock's is the original porous plaster . . . guaranteed to bring instant relief, or money back. 5 million users. 25¢ at druggists, or write "Allcock, Ossining, N. Y." ALLCOCK'S

The Jan Kiepura stories continue to drift in. The Polish tenor, while making his first American picture, "Give Us This Night," with Gladys Swarthout, had the boys at Paramount pretty much on edge with his temperament. Perhaps you've heard that he never speaks for two hours before he is to sing, and that he once made Bing Crosby put out a pipe in his presence. The best Kiepura tale, however, concerns Jack Oakie and his man Henderson. The Hendersons claim to fame in Hollywood is that Cracker acts as combination stooge and valet for Gary Cooper, and Cracker No. 2 fills the same position for Jack Oakie. During the making of "Collegiate," Jack sent his man to the wardrobe to bring back the clothes he was to wear for the day's scenes. Two hours later Cracker No. 2 returned empty-handed and announced: "I can't get a thing, Jack. Everybody over there is running around getting clothes for a guy named John Shapiro!"

■ ■ ■

Here's more foreign news. Mlle. Simone Simon, who arrived in these hills only a few months ago with no knowledge of English, is learning, but not rapidly. The other evening at a night club the little lady was shocked to note a lengthy split in the seam of her gown which revealed considerable Gallic anatomy. She hastened to a dressing room attendant who sewed it up, after which the Mlle., full of gratitude, smiled and said: "I beg your pardon very much." At that, the gal is making better progress than Anna Sten, but Sten was handicapped—she learned English from Sam Goldwyn!

■ ■ ■

Binnie Barnes is one of Hollywood's most consistent party throwers—and you'd be, too, if you had a swell little home in the hills such as Binnie possesses. A big affair recently honored Sophie Tucker, the last—

Stop Baby's COUGH
he "Moist-Throat" Way

● Tender little throats should be healed the "moist-throat" way with Pertussin, which stimulates the flow of natural fluids, loosens phlegm and soothes the throat. Contains no harsh or injurious drugs. not upset the stomach or spoil the tite. It checks coughs quickly and safely. ors have prescribed it for 30 years.

r 1,000,000 doctors' prescriptions for ssin were filled in one year, according to ription Ingredient Survey issued by can Pharmaceutical Association.

ERTUSSIN
MOIST-THROAT" METHOD OF OUGH RELIEF

FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

& Kade, Inc., 440 Washington St., N.Y.C.
I want a Free trial bottle of Pertussin—quick!

Name____________________
Address____________________ MS-2

BECOME AN EXPERT
ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $3,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. Only 12,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U. S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A's, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession that Pays."

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 2318H, Chicago
The School That Has Trained Over 1,200 C. P. A.'s

AVOID COLDS

MIFFLIN
Antiseptic
MOUTH WASH

Large SIZE 20c

4 oz. SIZE 10c

AT LEADING 5c and 10c CHAIN STORES

Tested and Approved
3954
Good Housekeeping Bureau
GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE

TOILET SANITATION
Made Easy

You don't have to scrub and sco smelly disinfectants to insure a cle toilet. Sani-Flush is made especiall this job for you. It is quick, thoro harmless. It is odorless. It makes t glisten like new . . . kills germs . . .
the hidden trap that no amount bing can reach.

Just sprinkle a little Sani-Flush in toilet. (Directions are on the can.) Flush it, and the job is done. You don't rub or scrub. Don't touch it with your hands. Rust and stains go. Odors vanish. The toilet is safe! Sanitary! Sani-Flush is also effective for cleaning automobile radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores—25 and 10 cent sizes. The Hygienic Products Company, Canton, Ohio.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

WOULD YOU LIKE TO KNOW

?

How a murderess was trapped merely because she got a permanent wave . . .?

The truth about a love affair so powerful that it led to murder . . .?

The story of the jilted suitor whose jealousy led him to commit a most shocking crime . . .?

Then, read the February

INSIDE DETECTIVE

"America's Most Interesting Fact-Detective Magazine"

Now on Sale Everywhere . . . 10c

A more down-to-earth barroom banquet tossed by Pinky Tomlin and Coy Poe. Looking around for an excuse to celebrate, they found a swell one when they learned that their original screen musical, "The Arkansas Traveler," had been sold to 20th Century-Fox. It was one of those typically cornfed gatherings where all the gals were given rural costumes and the men folks were stopped at the door and adorned with whiskers. Among the neighbors, who carried on until almost milkin' time, were Ginger Rogers and Lew Ayres, who seldom go partying, Tom Brown with Phyllis Fraser (Ginger's cousin), Toby Wing and Bob Hoover, and that retired old millionaire, Jackie Coogan, with Betty Grable. Music was provided by a one-man band, which gave everybody a chance to get up and shake the hay out of their hair.

■ ■ ■

You probably didn't know that Joan Bennett has an extra large yen to become an interior decorator, but hubby Gene Markey knows it, and with regrets. When Gene arrives home late from the studio he usually expects to find all the furniture in his room completely switched around. He doesn't mind that so much, but what really gets him is to find that his own private den has suddenly become the kiddies' playroom, and that his bedroom, since he last saw it, has been converted into a nursery. Joan really does some tasty decorating, according to Gene, but he wishes she'd furnish maps before she swings into action.

■ ■ ■

Funny how rumors spread in Hollywood. A couple of months ago, gay Saturday night affairs were hushed by the report that Claudette Colbert had been killed in an auto accident on the way to Palm Springs. The fact that there was no authentic source for the rumor doesn't mean a thing out here, for one of the we'll gladly [illegible] The portly Mr. A. says he's played so many detective roles that he looks exactly like one—from the top of his head to the flat of his feet, you might say. To prove it he says he once followed a rough looking gent along the Bowery in New York, getting pointers for a detective play he was about to go into. After an hour of amateur sleuthing, the guy, according to Eddie, suddenly turned around and said, "All right, brother, take me to the station. I guess you got me."

■ ■ ■

Want to know what a chorus girl thinks about, or aren't you caring? Well, a questionnaire submitted to over forty charmers on "The Great Ziegfeld" set reveals that their favorite living person is Franklin D. Roosevelt, with Marconi a rather surprising second. Their favorite author is Dickens, by a nose, with Somerset Maugham at his heels. Even Leslie Howard drew a vote in this department—someone must have been reading his mail. Asked what they would do with a million dollars, one lovely lady replied: "Try and keep it." Others would buy yachts, take piano lessons, endow hospital rooms, and several would simply relax and spend it. About the only thing the girls agreed upon was that Bill Powell is their favorite actor. There's a bit of a bribe connected with that admission, however, for every afternoon during production Bill kept the shapely misses well stocked with hot dogs and ice cream cones.

■ ■ ■

Despite indignant denials from both sides, the big romance of the month is that of Sybil Jason and Dickie Moore. Moore, one of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors, still single despite his seven years, was working in "Anthony Adverse" when the brazen Jason spied him. She liked his looks, asked him to lunch, and he accepted. Since then they've been seen together on several occasions, and those in the know predict wedding bells, unless some streamlined siren like Shirley Temple steps into the picture.

* * *

Speaking of the Temple miss, that young lady is doing mighty well for herself these days. During 1936, what with her studio contract and royalties from commercial products, Shirley's income will approximate $5,000 per week, which is enough, according to reports, to keep even a movie queen in kindergarten. With her father a bank employee and her mother one of the shrewdest business managers in Hollywood, it is safe to assume that most of Shirley's shekels are being tucked away for what is referred to, outside of California, as a rainy day.

* * *

At the preview of "The Story of Louis Pasteur," practically everyone connected with this good picture was on hand to share the bows and applause except the guy who deserved most of them. Paul Muni was decidedly missing. Even Mrs. Muni didn't know where the wandering husband was, although she intimated he had been spending a good deal of his time in the Chinese quarter of Los Angeles—just walking around getting in the mood for his role in "The Good Earth." Either Mr. M. is a thorough, painstaking sort of guy, or Mrs. M. is the best press agent in town.

* * *

Add to the Powell-Blondell romance notes: Joan recently sold her house on Lookout Mountain, where she and George Barnes staged their "ideal marriage," which was received so well by the critics but flopped after a brief run. Now Joan has herself a home at Toluca Lake, not far from the menage of Dick Powell. You might say it's just around the crooner, but you probably wouldn't.

* * *

A stage star's understudy gets a break once in a while in movie versions of Broadway musicals, but you never hear of a movie hero's stand-in except in an occasional fan story when he is allowed to tell the interviewer what a great guy the star is. So try and act surprised when we tell you that Bill Powell's stand-in will actually be seen in a picture. For five years, W. W. Dearborn, who is a chiropractor in his off moments, has faced the lights for Powell. In "The Great Ziegfeld," in which Bill has the title role, you'll see his chiropractor-stand-in portraying Daniel Frohman.

* * *

Can you imagine a crooner on horseback? You'll be seeing one in Paramount's "Rhythm on the Range," which will have Bing Crosby doing his husky baritone stuff astride a spirited nag. It's a western with music, and it is to be hoped that it doesn't give the regular western stars ideas—or the horses, either, for that matter. The nags are no strangers to Bing, who has a string of them burning up the turf at Santa Anita right now, so we look for a very swell picture. Besides, a horse opera now and then ought to take off some of the crooner's excess avoirdupois.

* * *

One of the most rabid autograph hounds in Hollywood is Fred Keating, the guy who

Guarantee of Satisfaction

The publishers of MODERN SCREEN guarantee that you will be satisfied with your purchase of every packaged product advertised in this magazine. If for any reason you are dissatisfied, MODERN SCREEN will replace the product or, if you prefer, refund your purchase price. In either case all you have to do is to send us the unused portion, accompanied by a letter outlining your complaint. This guarantee also applies if the product, in your opinion does not justify the claims made in its advertising in MODERN SCREEN

Careful examination before publication and rigid censorship, plus our guarantee, enable you to buy with complete confidence the products you see advertised in this issue of MODERN SCREEN.

Index of Advertisers

February 1936

Alka Seltzer ... 102
Allcock's Plasters ... 104
American Drug Company ... 88
American School of Photography ... 98
American Tobacco Company ... 4th Cover

Barbo Compound ... 84
Blondex ... 101
Blue Waltz Cosmetics ... 97
Borden Company ... 93
Brookline Chemical Company ... 82
Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. ... 69

Camay Soap ... 23
Campana's Italian Balm ... 8
Carter's Little Liver Pills ... 64
Cheney Medicine Company ... 88
Chicago School of Nursing ... 80
Colgate Toothpaste ... 71
Cocomalt ... 81

DDD Company ... 96
Denison Company, T. S. ... 86
Dr. Grove's Quinine ... 62
Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion ... 104
Dr. Pierre Chemical Co. ... 84

Enterprise Dripolators ... 92
Exlax Company ... 15

Fairyfoot Company ... 80
Faoen Cosmetics ... 70
Fashion Frocks ... 94
Federal Schools ... 80
Feenamint ... 6
Fels Naptha Soap ... 21
Fleischmann's Yeast ... 61
Fletchers Castoria ... 73
Forhan's Toothpaste ... 64
Fort Orange Chemical Co. ... 3rd Cover
Fox Films ... 26
Franco-American Spaghetti ... 67
Franklin Institute ... 86
Frontier Asthma Company ... 96

Geppert Studios ... 72
Griffin ABC Polish ... 86

Hollywood Rapid Dry Curlers ... 94
Hollywood Studio Stores ... 96
Hubinger Elastic Starch ... 92
Hush Company ... 100
Hygeia Nursing Bottles ... 104

Ipana Toothpaste ... 3
Ironized Yeast ... 91
Irresistible Cosmetics ... 2nd Cover
Ivory Flakes ... 19

Justrite Push Clips ... 100

Kelpamalt ... 99
Kenton Pharmacal Co. ... 98
Kool Cigarettes ... 69
Kotex Company ... 65
Kristee Manufacturing Co. ... 82

Lady Esther Cosmetics ... 89
Lake Laboratories ... 90
Lander Powders ... 100
Lanzette, Mlle. Annette ... 92
La Salle Extension University ... 103
Lewis Medicine Company, A. H.
  Tums ... 101
  NR ... 82
Lifebuoy Soap ... 63
Lucky Strike Cigarettes ... 4th Cover
Lux Toilet Soap ... 59
Luxor Cosmetics ... 24

Maybelline ... 95
Mehl, Max ... 77
Mercolized Wax ... 94
Metal Textile Co. ... 104
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ... 5
Midol ... 74
Mifflin Antiseptic Mouth Wash ... 103
Modess ... 25
Musterole ... 90

Olive Tablets ... 96

Paramount Pictures ... 32, 33
Pazo Ointment ... 78
Pedodyne Company ... 101
Pertussin ... 103
Platinum Nailpolish ... 85
Polk Miller Co. ... 98
Pond's Powders ... 75
Pond's Vanishing Cream ... 83

Rhodes, Arthur ... 86
Rieger, Paul ... 88
Rinso ... 63

Sergeant's Dog Medicines ... 98
Shelia, Inc. ... 101
Standard Brands, Inc. ... 61
Star Sheen ... 100

Tangee Lipstick ... 60
Thornton Dance Studios ... 98
Tintex ... 79
Truehart, Billy ... 100

United Artists ... 11
Universal Pictures ... 9

Warner Brothers Pictures ... 7
Wilson Chemical Company ... 84
Wilson Chemical Company ... 104
Winx ... 66
Woodbury Powder ... 87

Yarn Novelty Company ... 88
Yeastfoam Tablets ... 68

Zonitors ... 72

Although we make every effort to insure the accuracy of this index, we take no responsibility for an occasional omission or inadvertent error.

gave up magic for the movies. Fred doesn't get his signatures from the stars, though. He gets them from his fans. When he received his first request for an autographed picture he offered an even trade—a photo for a photo. Right now the Keating den contains what is probably the only collection of fan pictures in the world. And some of them, it is our duty to report, are pretty weird.

■ ■ ■

Talked to Nelson Eddy on the "Rose Marie" set shortly before its completion, and found him in a high state of uncertainty. Seems he had been asked to sing on one of Grace Moore's radio programs. Miss Moore, who does her chanting for a product which keeps one's larynx in shape, was ill with—heaven forbid!—a sore throat. "Do you think I ought to do it?" asked Mr. E. "They've offered me $3,000, and I certainly could use it." So he sang for Gracie, and do you know why he needed that three grand? Well, he bought himself an electric organ.

■ ■ ■

If you saw Lily Pons sing her "Lakme" number in "I Dream Too Much," you'll probably remember that the costume revealed an ample portion of Mlle. Pons. Well, it seems the little lady was posing, in costume, for an advertisement when the photographer politely informed her that the president of the firm was something of a strict old gent, and would mademoiselle mind—well, covering up a bit. Lily complied, but not without comment. In her very best American, she announced, as she flung a robe about her: "You can tell Meestaire President for me—noots!"

■ ■ ■

Playing a circuit of famous Hollywood homes right now is an extremely amusing film, called "Blow-Ups." It consists of shots, with sound, of a number of our better-known stars, taken a moment after they've blown up their lines or forgotten a piece of business in a scene. Most of the epithets unfurled are strictly for private consumption, especially the vivid exclamations of one of your favorite portrayers of sophisticated roles. That gal knows more words than the Truck Drivers' Union!

■ ■ ■

Ever since Carole Lombard rented the Fun House at Venice and tossed a party that had everyone rubbing liniment on their spines for weeks, Hollywood hostesses have been frantic for novel (Hollywood for "screwy") party ideas. Sooo, when Grace Bradley came forth with the announcement that she was to sponsor a hay-ride party and barn dance, there was much tearing of blondined locks along the Boulevard. One star even offered Grace a check for $500 for the idea, but Grace turned her down and the Bradley bucolic goings-on are now part of Hollywood history.

■ ■ ■

Dropped in on the "Follow the Fleet" set and watched Ginger Rogers deliver a song number to a gang of sailors and their sweethearts. It was a dance hall scene, with the steppers picked from a local dime-a-struggle emporium, and their fancy ballroom manners furnish a lot of amusement for Fred Astaire, who was watching them from the sidelines. Ginger's stand-in, by the way, is Marie Osborne, who is about Ginger's age and bears an amazing resemblance to the Rogers gal. She was once Baby Marie Osborne, one of the best known child stars of the old silent days. At that time Ginger's only claim to fame was that her mother, Leila Rogers, wrote the scripts for the Osborne epics.

■ ■ ■

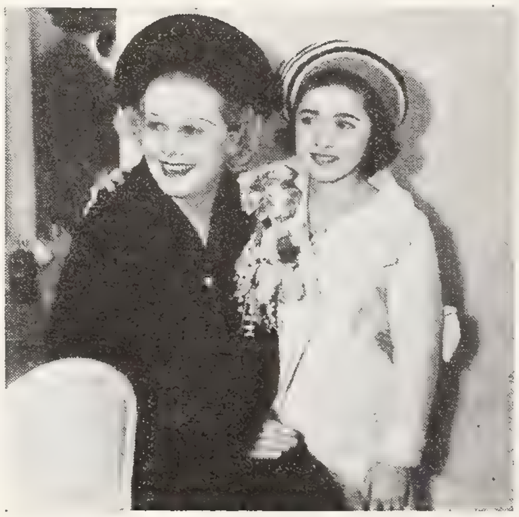
The rage at Palm Springs this year is the Racquet Club, and every week-end its pool and bar are cluttered with film favorites. All of which brings considerable joy to Ralph Bellamy and Charlie Farrell, who own the place. The boys must be taking their work seriously, for we saw them in the Brown Derby the other day in a huddle with the management over an ice-encrusted Planter's Punch. The B. D. was busy explaining and demonstrating their specialty, and Messrs. Farrell and Bellamy, between sips, industriously jotted down directions for making them.

■ ■ ■

Now that Joel McCrea is once more a proud pap, this little item can be told. A few days before he started work on "These Three" with Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon, his studio wanted him for a series of special poses with the two gals. The morning of the appointment arrived, as did a frantic call from McCrea to the studio. "Look," yelled Joel, "I can't possibly pose today. I've just had a baby, I've been up all night, and I look terrible!" Before the studio man could learn that it was a boy, and that it was really Frances Dee who had it, Mr. McC. had hung up. What price fatherhood?

■ ■ ■

It's always pleasant to ballyhoo an oncoming youngster. In this case it's blonde Marie Wilson, who furnishes the only bright moments in "Miss Pacific Fleet," and who is destined to go places. As the ga-ga young lady who wanders about the screen looking for a sailor named Smith, Miss Wilson's performance is just about tops in the dead pan department. Our spies tell us that she is a local product, hailing from a nearby small town, and that her natural shyness makes this type of role quite simple for her. And that's probably the first time bashfulness ever paid in Hollywood.



How do you like Harlow's new brownette locks? She's with Edith Fellows at the opening of Max Factor's new salon. And isn't that some hat?

■ ■ ■

Now that "Anthony Adverse" has finally gone before the cameras, probably the busiest guy on the set is George E. Stone. Mr. S. plays the role of "The Cat," and he is only too glad to buttonhole anyone within buttonholing range and impart the information that his make-up requires three and a half hours every morning, and that its application requires the assistance of two men. The worst part of it is, says George, that the finished product doesn't look at all like the original. That's what worried him the other day on the set when a fair weather friend told him he was looking great.

■ ■ ■

Gertrude Michael has recovered from her unfortunate automobile accident and she's devoting most of her spare moments to Dr. Wallace Neighbor, the medico who pulled her through. Some say it's gratitude, but there are those who call it love.

■ ■ ■

Michael Bartlett's most cherished possession these days is a concert grand piano, the gift of Theodore Steinway. The piano is installed in Bartlett's Bel Air home, and the reason he's so fond of it is that Steinway has presented only one other piano in these parts, and that one went to Lawrence Tibbett.

■ ■ ■

And Paula Stone, one of the town's lovelier red-heads, has just put her signature on a long-term contract with Warner Brothers. Daughter of Fred Stone, and one of the most beau-brummeled gals in Hollywood, Paula drew her first movie pay-check several years ago as an extra in the Will Rogers picture, "They Had to See Paris." Incidentally, over the fireplace in the Stone home hangs an oil painting of Rogers which is the most lifelike portrait of Will we've ever seen.

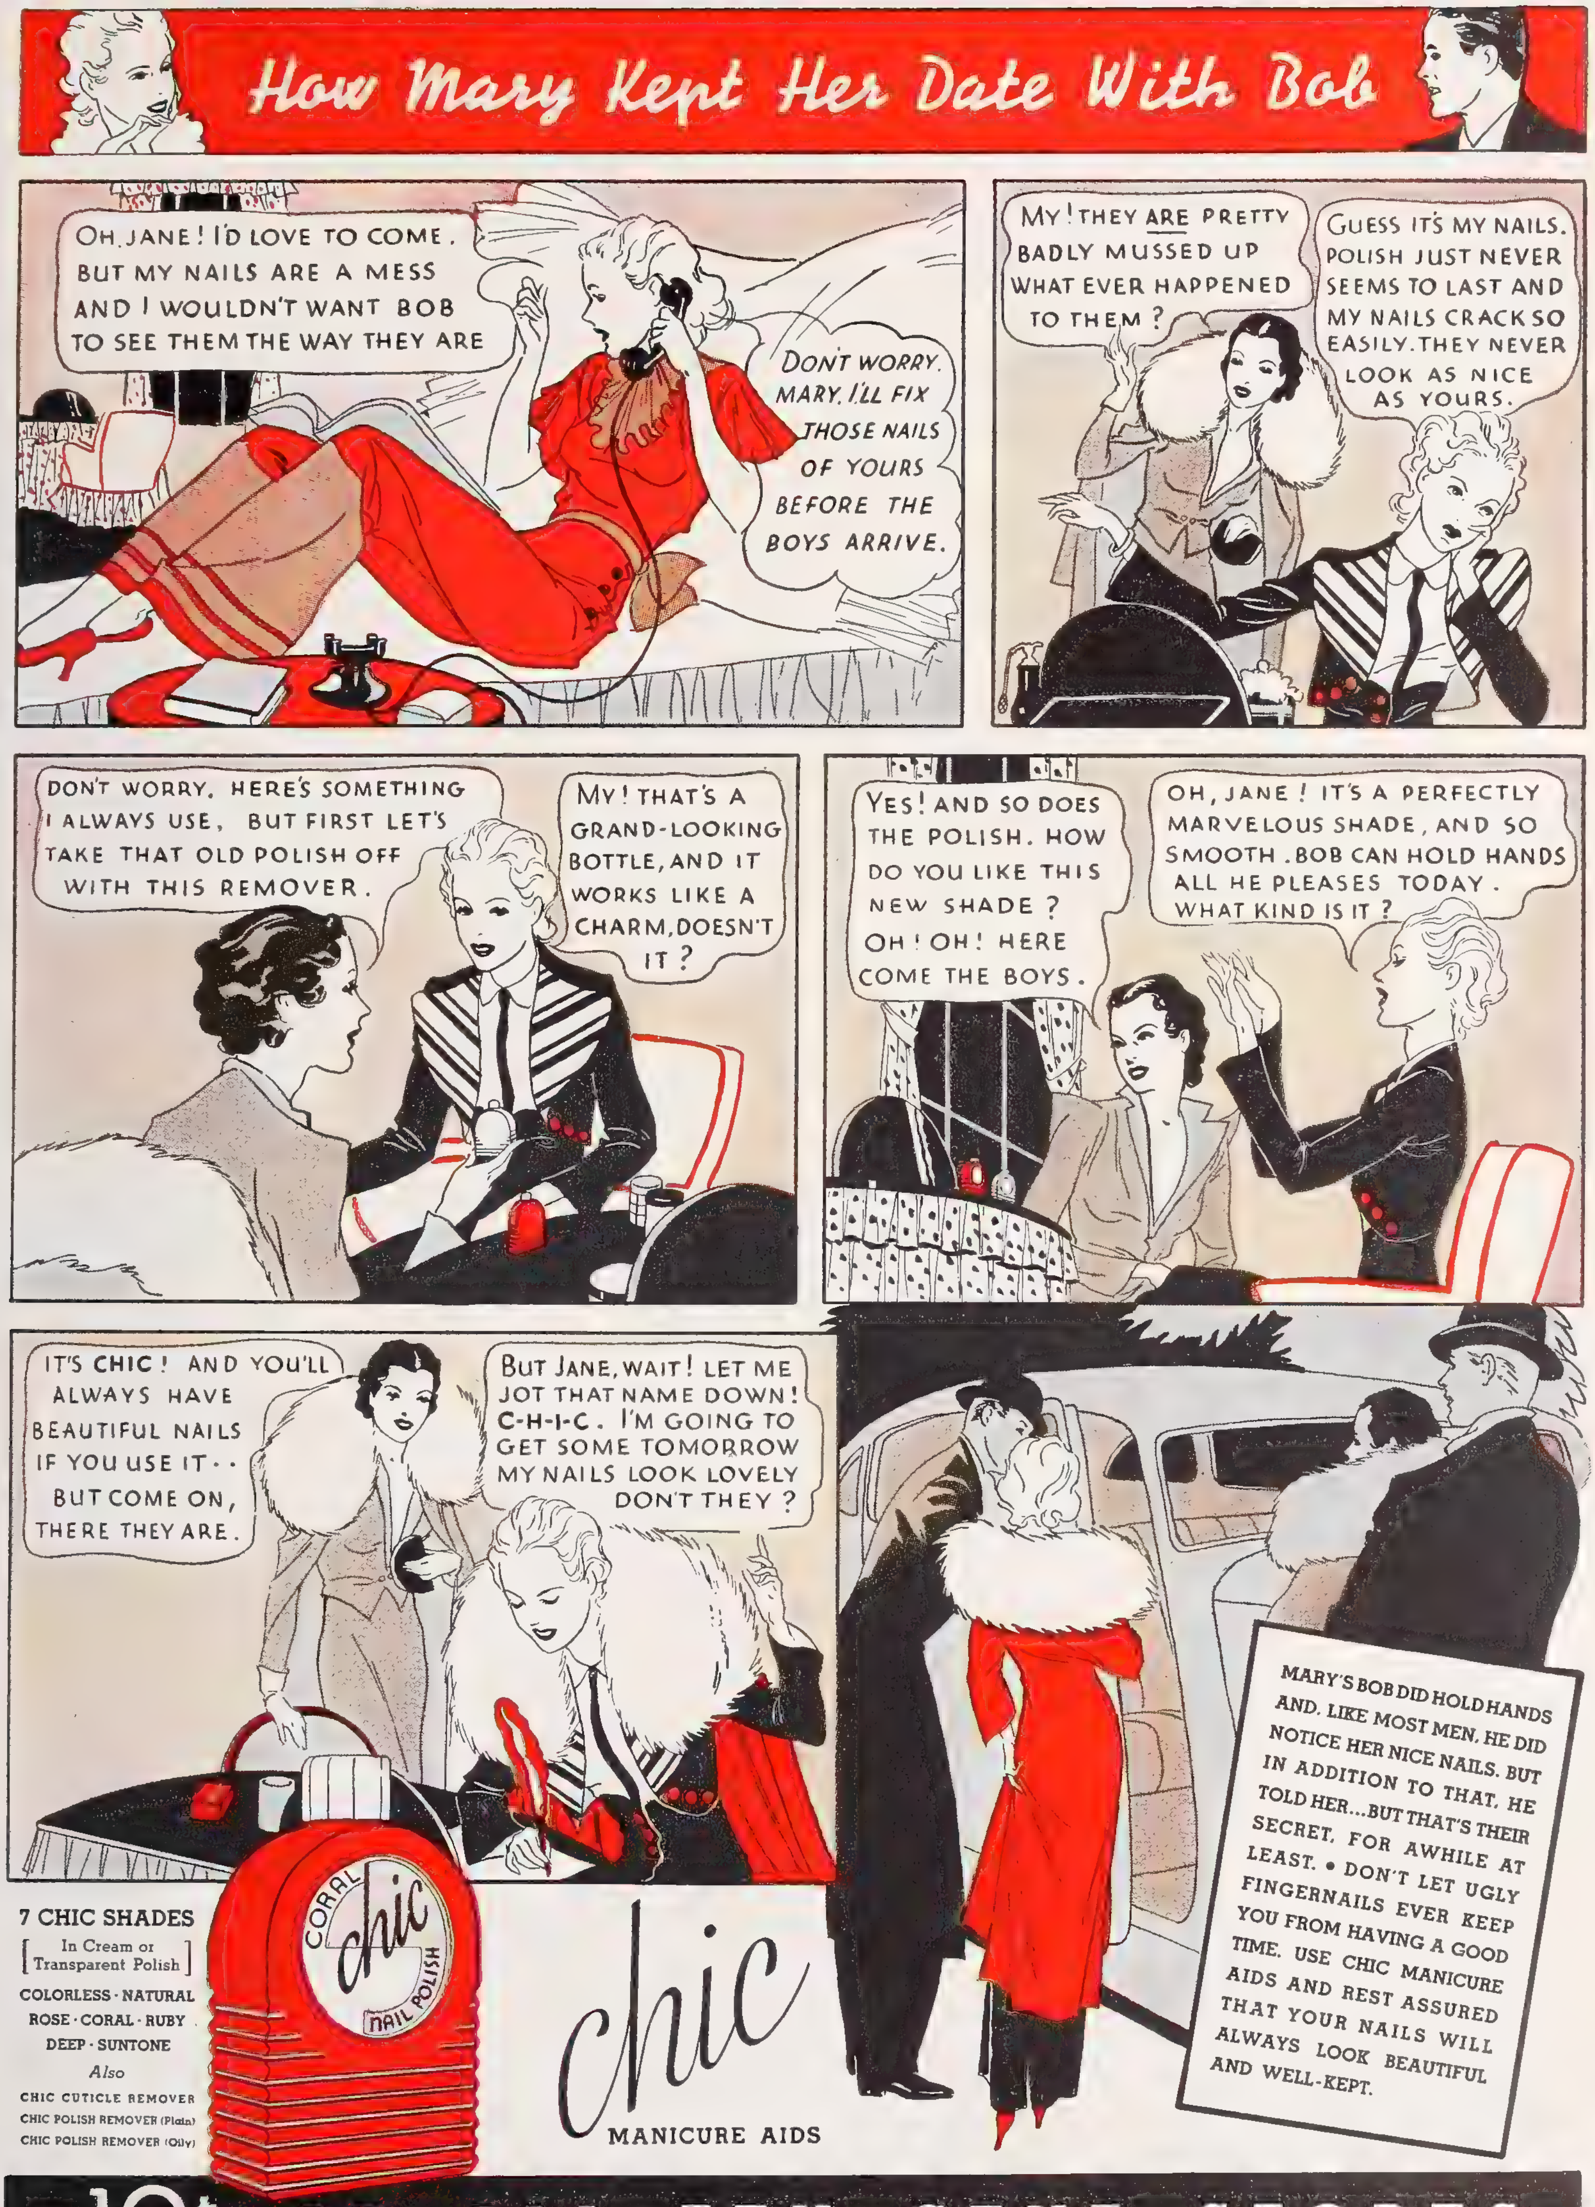
■ ■ ■

Gals, if you want to know how Grace Moore keeps that figure, here's her secret. She says tennis does it. When asked how many sets a day she indulges in, she replied that she never plays the game—she just watches it. Her husband, Valentin Parera, does the tennis playing for the family, and Grace is his gallery whenever she's not working. How watching tennis keeps a gal's figure Miss M. doesn't seem to know, but she insists it's worth a try.

■ ■ ■

A lot of youse guys will no doubt be pleased to learn that George Bancroft has returned to the screen. In fact, "Hell Ship Morgan" will probably be at your local theatre any minute now. Remember when George was all the rage in the days when he was the screen's Number One portrayer of he-men roles? Back in them days they used to say that Mrs. B. woke George every morning by waving half an orange under the Bancroft nostrils. Now that George is back playing tough guys once more, they're saying the orange doesn't work any more. He's so tough he insists on half a lemon.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.



How Mary Kept Her Date With Bob
OH, JANE! I'D LOVE TO COME, BUT MY NAILS ARE A MESS AND I WOULDN'T WANT BOB TO SEE THEM THE WAY THEY ARE DON'T WORRY, MARY. I'LL FIX THOSE NAILS OF YOURS BEFORE THE BOYS ARRIVE.
MY! THEY ARE PRETTY BADLY MUSSED UP WHAT EVER HAPPENED TO THEM?
GUESS IT'S MY NAILS. POLISH JUST NEVER SEEMS TO LAST AND MY NAILS CRACK SO EASILY. THEY NEVER LOOK AS NICE AS YOURS.
DON'T WORRY, HERE'S SOMETHING I ALWAYS USE, BUT FIRST LET'S TAKE THAT OLD POLISH OFF WITH THIS REMOVER.
MY! THAT'S A GRAND-LOOKING BOTTLE, AND IT WORKS LIKE A CHARM, DOESN'T IT?
YES! AND SO DOES THE POLISH. HOW DO YOU LIKE THIS NEW SHADE? OH! OH! HERE COME THE BOYS.
OH, JANE! IT'S A PERFECTLY MARVELOUS SHADE, AND SO SMOOTH. BOB CAN HOLD HANDS ALL HE PLEASES TODAY. WHAT KIND IS IT?
IT'S CHIC! AND YOU'LL ALWAYS HAVE BEAUTIFUL NAILS IF YOU USE IT·· BUT COME ON, THERE THEY ARE.
BUT JANE, WAIT! LET ME JOT THAT NAME DOWN! C-H-I-C. I'M GOING TO GET SOME TOMORROW MY NAILS LOOK LOVELY DON'T THEY?
CORAL
chic
NAIL POLISH

MARY'S BOB DID HOLD HANDS AND, LIKE MOST MEN, HE DID NOTICE HER NICE NAILS. BUT IN ADDITION TO THAT, HE TOLD HER...BUT THAT'S THEIR SECRET, FOR AWHILE AT LEAST. • DON'T LET UGLY FINGERNAILS EVER KEEP YOU FROM HAVING A GOOD TIME. USE CHIC MANICURE AIDS AND REST ASSURED THAT YOUR NAILS WILL ALWAYS LOOK BEAUTIFUL AND WELL-KEPT.

7 CHIC SHADES
[In Cream or Transparent Polish]
COLORLESS · NATURAL
ROSE · CORAL · RUBY DEEP · SUNTONE
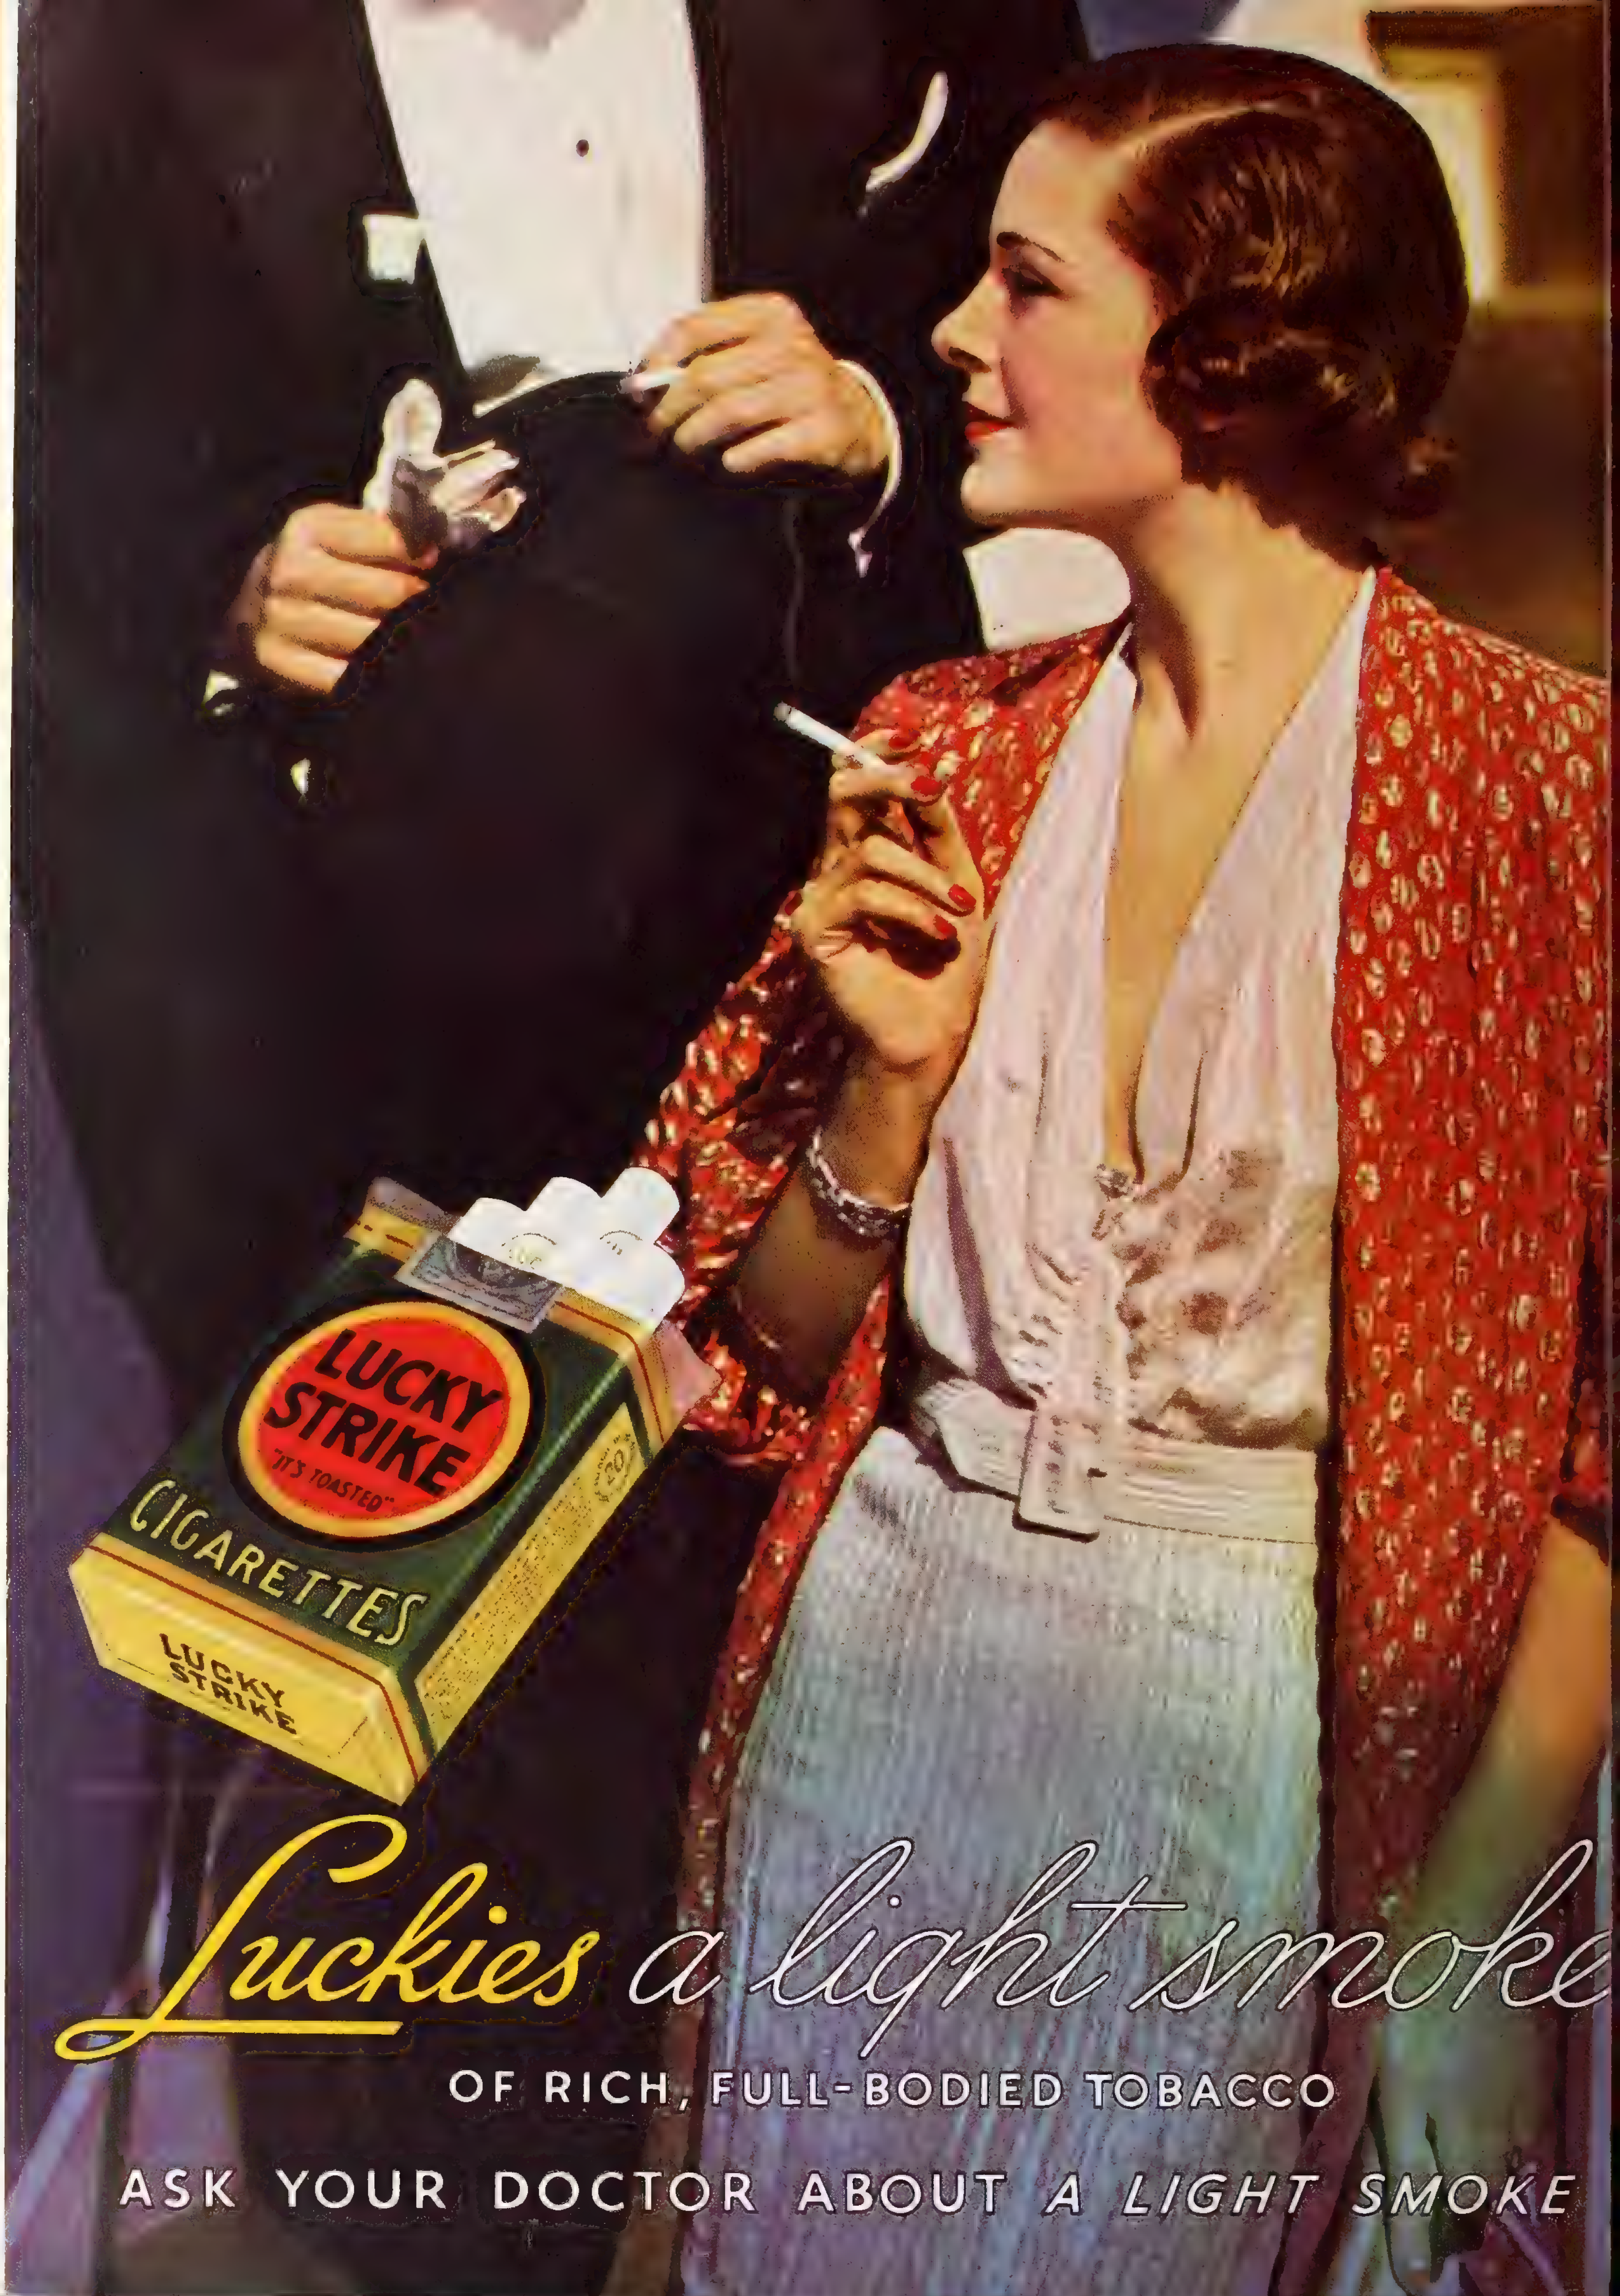
Also
CHIC CUTICLE REMOVER
CHIC POLISH REMOVER (Plain)
CHIC POLISH REMOVER (Oily)

chic
MANICURE AIDS

10¢ AT ALL TEN CENT STORES



LUCKY STRIKE
"IT'S TOASTED"
CIGARETTES
LUCKY STRIKE
Luckies a light smoke
OF RICH, FULL-BODIED TOBACCO
ASK YOUR DOCTOR ABOUT A LIGHT SMOKE

Modern Screen

ARCH
0
ENTS

FEB 11 1936
PERIODICAL DIVISION
36
79

Earl Christy

Inside Stories About GABLE · DIETRICH · CHAPLIN
OBERON · SWARTHOUT and many others . . .

Pursued... Adored... Irresistible
IRRESISTIBLE
Irresistible TALC
Irresistible LIP LURE VIVID
Irresistible BRILLIANTINE
Irresistible COLOGNE
Irresistible
Irresistible Eyes
Irresistible

The Victorians had a word for it, "Charm"; we have a word for it, "Irresistible." We not only have a word for it, we have a way for it.

Buy IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME if you want to be Irresistible. Be fragrant if you want to be pursued. Men adore fragrant hair, fragrant lips, and soft fragrant skin. The satin-smoothness of Irresistible Face Powder, the soft blush of Irresistible Rouge, the seductive coloring and creamy indelibility of Irresistible Lip Lure . . . these speak the language of enchantment.

"Irresistible" is the word to say when you buy cosmetics. "Irresistible" is the way to attain allure. Certified pure. Laboratory tested and approved.

BUY Irresistible

PERFUME and BEAUTY AIDS

IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME, FACE POWDER, ROUGE, LIP LURE, MASCARA, COLD CREAM, COLOGNE, BRILLIANTINE, TALC

ONLY 10¢ EACH AT ALL 5 AND 10¢ STORES

A Moment of Magic

[UNTIL SHE SMILES]

"PINK TOOTH BRUSH" makes her evade all close-ups—dingy teeth and tender gums destroy her charm

TWO PEOPLE meet. Perhaps there's a quick flare of mutual admiration . . . Then—she smiles.

A flash of white teeth set in firm gums—that's a lovely sight to see.

But a glimpse of dingy teeth and tender gums—and that magic moment is smashed into bits.

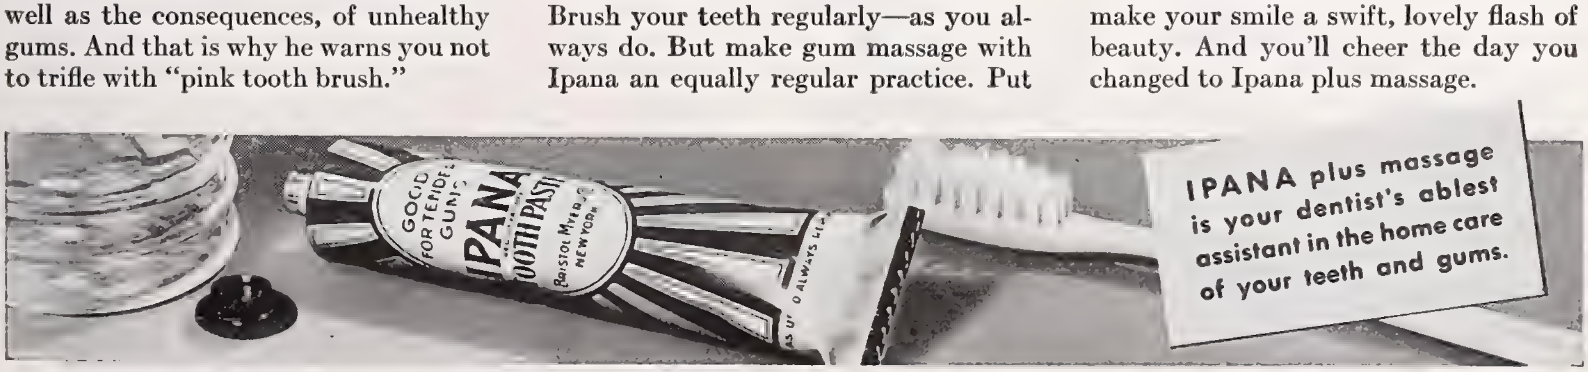
"PINK TOOTH BRUSH" IS SERIOUS

Your dentist wants to save you from the embarrassment, the inconvenience, as well as the consequences, of unhealthy gums. And that is why he warns you not to trifle with "pink tooth brush."

Unhealthy, ailing gums are common because coarse, fibrous foods have disappeared from our menus. And the soft, modern foods that have replaced them do not give teeth and gums enough work to do. Naturally, they grow flabby, tender and sensitive . . . and "pink tooth brush" is a signal that they need help.

Start today to massage your gums with Ipana—your dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of your teeth and gums. Brush your teeth regularly—as you always do. But make gum massage with Ipana an equally regular practice. Put a little extra Ipana on brush or fingertip. Rub it into your gums. Massage them well. Back comes new circulation through the gum tissues. New firmness develops. There's a new and livelier feel to the gums. A healthier, brighter look to the teeth.

Remember that modern dentistry encourages this double duty. So make it an unfailing part of your daily routine. Keep pyorrhea, Vincent's disease and gingivitis far in the background. Keep your gums as healthy as you keep your teeth. You'll make your smile a swift, lovely flash of beauty. And you'll cheer the day you changed to Ipana plus massage.



GOOD FOR TENDER GUMS
IPANA
TOOTH PASTE
BRISTOL-MYERS NEW YORK
IPANA plus massage is your dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of your teeth and gums.

FEB -1 1936

©CIB 289721

"My complexion cleared up like Magic!"

THE 3 MINUTE WAY

"I RELY ON THIS TRULY MODERN LAXATIVE"

A dull skin, blotches, and bad breath—these may be warnings of constipation—accumulated poisons in your system. When you notice such telltale signs, do as millions of others do—place your confidence in FEEN-A-MINT and the "three-minute way." The "three-minute way" means that you simply chew delicious FEEN-A-MINT for three minutes,* preferably while going to bed—and in the morning you will find gentle but thorough relief. The very act of chewing makes FEEN-A-MINT better. Its tasteless, medicinal content mixes thoroughly with saliva and goes to work easily, gradually—not all at once. No unpleasant after-effects. And the children love it for its clean, refreshing taste. Get a box for the whole family, 15 cents and 25 cents—slightly higher in Canada.

* Longer, if you care to better because you chew it

FOR ADULTS AND CHILDREN
Feen-a-mint
THE CHEWING GUM
LAXATIVE
NO TASTE BUT THE MINT

MODERN SCREEN

NOW SHOWING

ENTER RUBY KEELER'S CONTEST NOW! 16
LIGHTS! CAMERA! IT'S THE QUINTS! .... Gladys Hall 34
IF YOU ARE JILTED—THEN WHAT? .... Mary E. Parks 37
GABLE'S NEW FREEDOM .... Gladys Hall 38
ARE WOMEN INFERIOR TO MEN? .... Faith Service 40
FROM EIGHT TO EIGHT WITH SHIRLEY 42
CHARLIE CHAPLIN, THE SERIOUS FUNNY MAN. Karen Hollis 44
HE'S GOING TO BE MARRIED .... Martha Kerr 46
SHE'S SINGLE AGAIN .... William French 47
ADVENTURE'S NOT AN ACT WITH FLYNN .... Harry Lang 48
BEHOLD DIETRICH! .... Hilary Lynn 50
HE'S A TRAVELLIN' MAN .... Franc Dillon 52
PLAY YOUR HUNCHES .... Dorothy Herzog 53
SYLVIA'S ADVICE TO THE "NEW GIRLS" .... Mme. Sylvia 54
WHAT THEY LIKE TO WEAR .... Adelia Bird 56

SHORT SUBJECTS

Modern Screen Movie Scoreboard 8
Sport of Movie Kings 10
Good News 12
Reviews 14
It's Ruby's Treat to the Modern Hostess 18
Between You and Me 20
Be Individual! 22
Exclusive Portraits 27

REGINA CANNON, EDITOR
ADELIA BIRD, Associate Editor
ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor
LEO TOWNSEND, Hollywood Editor

Published monthly and copyrighted 1936 by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 12, No. 4, March, 1936. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.75 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.50 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Post Office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole Foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E. C. 4, England.

Again they thrill you with Glorious Melody!

"YOU BELONG TO ME! I BELONG TO YOU!"

The singing stars of "Naughty Marietta" now lift their golden voices to excite all the world with the immortal melodies of the most vibrant and stirring musical of our time — "Rose Marie" . . . The romantic drama of a pampered pet of the opera and a rugged "Mountie" torn between love and duty, whose hearts met where mountains touched the sky . . . How you'll thrill with delight as they fill the air with your love songs — "Rose Marie, I Love You", and "Indian Love Call"! It's the first big musical hit of 1936—another triumph for the M-G-M studios!

Thrill to Jeanette MacDonald as she sings "The Waltz Song" from Romeo and Juliet, and with Nelson Eddy, the immortal duet "Indian Love Call"

'SONG OF THE MOUNTIES!' 300 rugged male voices led by Nelson Eddy in the most stirring song of our time!

Jeanette MacDONALD
NELSON EDDY
IN Rose Marie

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture
with
REGINALD OWEN • ALLAN JONES
Directed by W. S. Van Dyke • Produced by Hunt Stromberg

EXCITEMENT RIDES THE Hollywood RANGE . . . AS THE "TRADE" CRITICS Preview

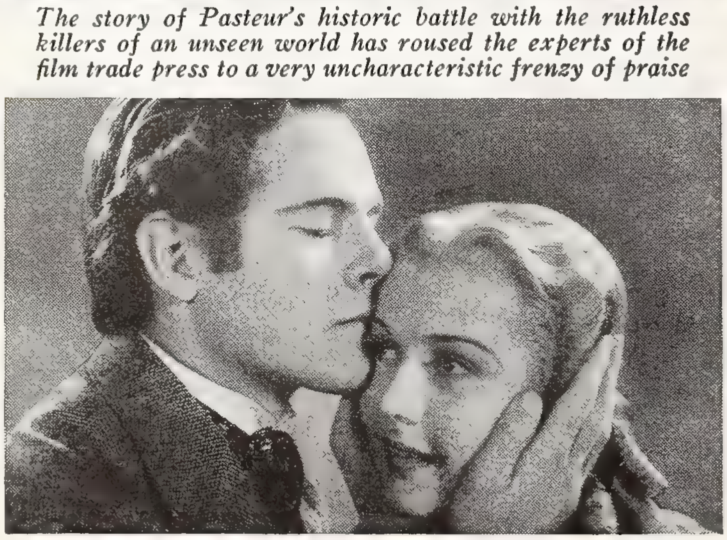
*"THE LOUIS

PAUL MUNI's sensational new success throws the spotlight on some important personalities you never knew till now.

The story of Pasteur's historic battle with the ruthless killers of an unseen world has roused the experts of the film trade press to a very uncharacteristic frenzy of praise



Moving performances by Josephine Hutchinson, Anita Louise, Donald Woods, Fritz Leiber, and many others, have been a vital factor in the salvos of applause for "Pasteur"

WHAT is it that even the most conscientious film fan never hears about—yet is as well known and important in "picture business" as famous stars, directors, or producers?

Answer—a movie "trade paper" publisher.

If you were in the movie business the publications presided over by these gentry would be as familiar to you as your daily newspaper. Their reviews of new pictures are the first impartial comments published anywhere and usually have an important influence in determining at what theatres a production will be shown and for how long.

Being steeped in picture affairs to the eyebrows, these "inside" reviewers never hesitate to call a spade a spade and a flop a flop. Praise is the exception rather than the rule and it's rare indeed for the boys to agree unanimously in favor of any one production.

So you can understand why the film industry practically in toto sat up with a jerk one recent morning when they picked up paper after paper and found every one of them not only praising, but gushing like schoolgirls about the same picture—Paul Muni in The Story of Louis Pasteur.

FOR instance, they found seasoned, cynical Jack Alicoate's Film Daily notifying the world that "The Story of Louis Pasteur is distinguished and gripping drama that blazes a new trail in pictures. Warner Bros. have fashioned a story that grips from the start. Muni's performance is something to cheer about. William Dieterle's direction deserves lavish praise."

Veteran publisher Martin Quigley's Motion Picture

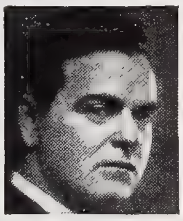
STORY OF PASTEUR"

Magnificently Muni re-creates the famous hero of humanity who fought a jeering world that we might live

JACK ALICOATE

Herald simultaneously informed the industry that "in The Story of Louis Pasteur the screen makes a great departure from prosaic formula....There is not a single trace of theatrical artificiality. . . . Expertly acted and directed, . . . its power to create and hold interest immediately, gripped the preview audience and kept it in hushed silence all the way through. . . . Here is a picture the worth of which is almost certain to impress both class and mass alike."



MARTIN QUIGLEY

At the same moment Motion Picture Daily under the editorship of peppery, astute Maurice Kann was broadcasting the news that "the theme of The Story of Louis Pasteur is so absorbing that the film is sure to win terrific word-of-mouth endorsement."

The daily edition of youthful, aggressive Sid Silverman's famous Variety chimed in with the unqualified statement that "in The Story of Louis Pasteur Warner Bros. have made a truly great picture. . . . It stands among the significant works of the screen. . . . Told in such fashion as to grip every audience it will reach, The Story of Louis Pasteur is headed for big acclaim. Profoundly stirring as sheer drama, it will widen the range of picture venturings. . . . Muni is superb. . . . Seldom has a picture preview shown so strongly-shared interest of men and women. Men were openly in tears of emotional response throughout the audience."

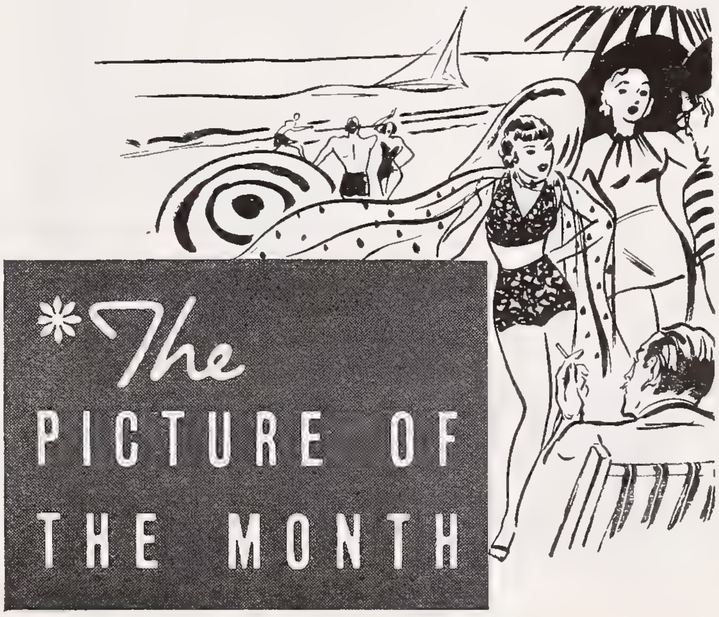
MAURICE KANN

"CHICK" LEWIS

And dynamic, hard-hitting "Chick" Lewis of the Showmen's Trade Review informed his followers that "this outstanding hit will send patrons away talking. A powerful production, impressive entertainment and a stand-out characterization by Paul Muni make this a prestige picture of importance with world-wide appeal."

THESE are strong words, dear listeners. But we subscribe to every one of them! And we've reprinted them here as the most impressive tip-off we can give you on the extraordinary importance of this brilliant Cosmopolitan production.

Naturally it's been the talk of film circles ever since these remarkable reviews appeared. And you're going to hear a lot more about it before it's released by First National late this month.



*The PICTURE OF THE MONTH

How Old is your Mouth?

Five Years Younger

• Use a lipstick that's warranted to make your Mouth look Young and Appealing

IF YOUR LIPS are ever dry and rough looking . . . marked with little crinkly aging lines like the lines on a peeled orange . . . try the new Cutex Lipstick. See if it doesn't take off 5 years!

Cutex Lipstick is warranted to contain a special oil to nourish your lips and keep them young looking. Cutex Lipstick stays on for hours without drying your lips. It's delightfully smooth, yet never, never greasy.

No streaking, no ugly color rim. There's no excuse today for dry, rough lips. Try Cutex Lipstick today and be young! At your favorite store. 50¢ in 4 smart colors—Natural, Coral, Cardinal and Ruby to harmonize with Cutex Liquid Polish.

Northam Warren, New York, Montreal, London, Paris

CUTEX
Lipstick

MODERN SCREEN MOVIE SCOREBOARD

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Accent on Youth (Paramount)	3★
Age of Indiscretion (M-G-M)	2★
Ah, Wilderness (M-G-M)	4★
Alias Bulldog Drummond (GB)	2★
Alias Mary Dow (Universal)	2★
Alibi Ike (Warners)	3★
Alice Adams (RKO)	4★
Anna Karenina (M-G-M)	4★
Annapolis Farewell (Paramount)	2½★
Annie Oakley (RKO)	4★
The Arizonian (RKO)	3★
Bad Boy (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Barbary Coast (United Artists)	3★
Becky Sharp (RKO)	3★
The Big Broadcast of 1936 (Paramount)	3★
The Bishop Misbehaves (M-G-M)	3★
Black Fury (First National)	4★
Black Sheep (Fox)	2★
Break of Hearts (RKO)	3★
Brewster's Millions (United Artists)	2★
The Bride Comes Home (Paramount)	3★
The Bride of Frankenstein (Universal)	3★
Bright Lights (First National)	3★
Broadway Gondolier (Warners)	3★
Broadway Hostess (First National)	1★
Broadway Melody of 1936 (M-G-M)	4★
Call of the Wild (20th Century)	3★
Captain Blood (Warners)	4★
Cardinal Richelieu (United Artists)	4★
Car 99 (Paramount)	3★
Case of the Curious Bride (First National)	3★
The Case of the Lucky Legs (First National)	2★
Charlie Chan in Egypt (Fox)	3★
Charlie Chan in Shanghai (20th Century-Fox)	2★
China Seas (M-G-M)	4★
The Clairvoyant (GB)	2★
Clive of India (20th Century)	4★
College Rhythm (Paramount)	3★
Coronado (Paramount)	1★
Crime and Punishment (Columbia)	3★
The Crusades (Paramount)	4★
Curly Top (Fox)	3★
Dangerous (Warners)	3½★
Dante's Inferno (Fox)	2★
The Dark Angel (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
The Daring Young Man (Fox)	2★
David Copperfield (M-G-M)	5★
Diamond Jim (Universal)	3★
Don't Bet on Blondes (Warners)	2★
Doubting Thomas (Fox)	3★
Dr. Socrates (Warners)	2★
East of Java (Universal)	2★
Escapade (M-G-M)	3★
Escape Me Never (United Artists)	3★
Every Night at Eight (Paramount)	2★
Fang and Claw (RKO)	2★
The Farmer Takes a Wife (Fox)	3★
A Feather in Her Hat (Columbia)	2★
The Flame Within (M-G-M)	2★
Forsaking All Others (M-G-M)	3★
Four Hours to Kill (Paramount)	3★
Frisco Kid (Warners)	3★
Front Page Woman (Warners)	3★
The Gay Deception (20th Century-Fox)	3★
The Gilded Lily (Paramount)	3★
Ginger (Fox)	3★
The Girl Friend (Columbia)	1★
The Girl from 10th Ave. (First National)	2★
The Glass Key (Paramount)	3★
Goin' to Town (Paramount)	3★
Go Into Your Dance (First National)	3★
The Good Fairy (Universal)	3★
Goose and the Gander (First National)	2★
Grand Exit (Columbia)	1★
The Great Impersonation (Universal)	2★
Hands Across the Table (Paramount)	3★
Hard Rock Harrigan (Fox)	2★
Harmony Lane (Mascot)	2★
Here Comes Cookie (Paramount)	3★
Here Comes the Band (M-G-M)	1★
Here Is My Heart (Paramount)	4★
Here's to Romance (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Hold 'Em Yale (Paramount)	3★
Hooray for Love (RKO)	2★
I Dream Too Much (RKO)	3★
I Found Stella Parish (Warners)	2★
If You Could Only Cook (Columbia)	4★
I Live for Love (Warners)	2★
I Live My Life (M-G-M)	2★
The Informer (RKO)	4★
In Old Kentucky (20th Century-Fox)	3★
In Person (RKO)	2★
The Irish in Us (First National)	3★
The Iron Duke (GB)	3★
It Happened in New York (Universal)	3★
It's in the Air (M-G-M)	2★
Jalna (RKO)	3★
Java Head (First Division)	2★
King Solomon of Broadway (Universal)	1★
Laddie (RKO)	3★
Lady Tubbs (Universal)	2★
The Last Days of Pompeii (RKO)	4★
The Last Outpost (Paramount)	2★
Let 'Em Have It (United Artists)	3★
Let's Live Tonight (Columbia)	2★
Life Begins at Forty (Fox)	4★
Little Big Shot (Warners)	2★
The Little Colonel (Fox)	3★
The Littlest Rebel (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Lives of a Bengal Lancer (Paramount)	5★
Living on Velvet (Warners)	2★
Love in Bloom (Paramount)	2★
Love Me Forever (Columbia)	4★
Loves of a Dictator (GB)	3★
Mad Love (M-G-M)	2★
Manhattan Moon (Universal)	1★
Man of Iron (Warners)	1★
The Man on the Flying Trapeze (Paramount)	3★
The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Mark of the Vampire (M-G-M)	2★
Mary Burns, Fugitive (Paramount)	3★
McFadden's Flats (Paramount)	2★
The Melody Lingers On (United Artists)	2★

(Continued on page 104)

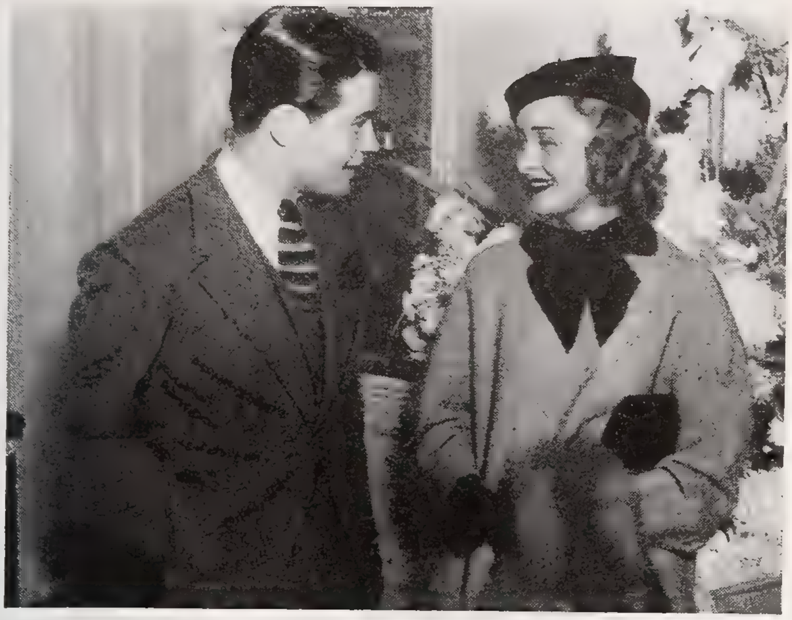
Here is a condensed version of the Modern Screen Movie Scoreboard! You'll find it simple to follow and a valuable guide in choosing your film entertainment. Instead of giving you the individual ratings of Modern Screen and authoritative newspaper movie critics all over the country, we have struck an average of their ratings. You'll find this average under the heading, General Rating, beside each picture. Ratings: 5★, extraordinary; 4★, very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor.

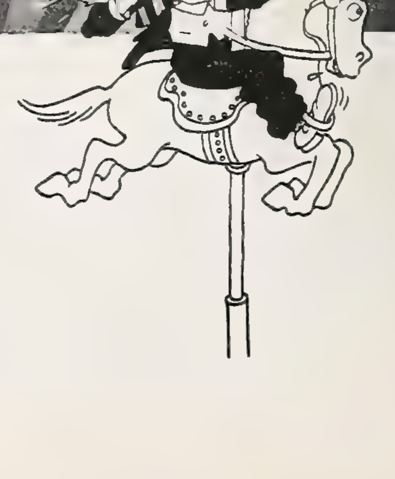
HOLLYWOOD SHOTS..

ALL-STAR SPECTATORS AT RECENT CINEMA DOINGS

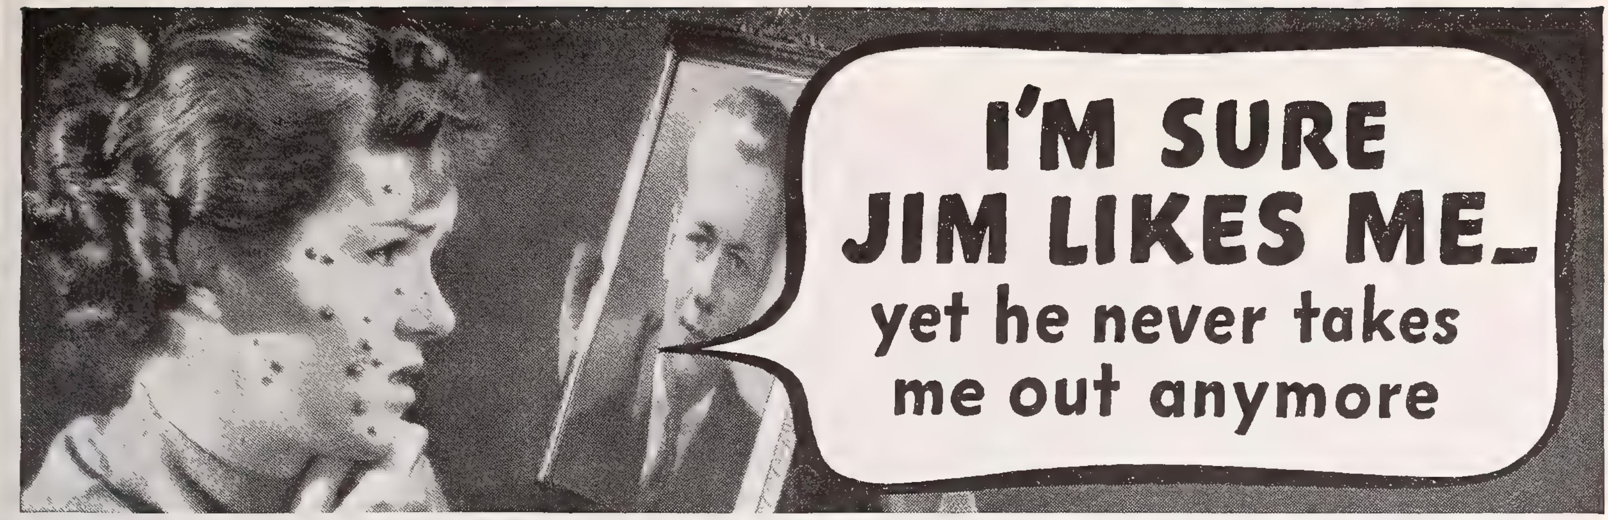


Cinema folks love to relax at some exciting sports event and they don't care much whether it's racing, fights, polo or tennis. Two recent events brought all the big names out to the sidelines—the pro tennis matches at the Ambassador Hotel and the polo match at the Uplifters' Club. Top row, left to right, you see the tennis rooters—Tom Brown with Marian Marsh, snapped in the hotel lobby. And next Bob Montgomery, plus sideburns, watches with Kay Johnson. Next row, left to right, Mary Pickford with Bob Taylor at the Uplifters' polo match. Did you ever see Mary looking any younger or more charming? And some indoor sports—harmonizing. Dick Powell, Edward Arnold and Bob Taylor, with Binnie Barnes at the piano. Right, Mickey Rooney, Edith Fellows and Freddie Bartholomew dolled up for a big party.

The year's first gee-gee running at Santa Anita race track brought forth every Hollywoodite who could get away from work. And here are some of the biggest betters and better biggies of the film colony. Below, Carole Lombard, looking very chic, arrives with Robert Riskin. Also below, Michael Bartlett, minus his moustache, squires Florence Rice (this looks romantic). Right, bottom to top, the Cedric Gibbons look pretty snooty as they pass Scotty's camera. Dolores Del Rio Gibbons also looks very elegant. Next Roger Prior arrives with—guess who?—of course, Ann Sothern. They still say it ain't love but they're always together just the same. And last, Cesar Romero gives Betty Furness some good betting tips. Betty's wearing one of those daffy hats she's famous for.

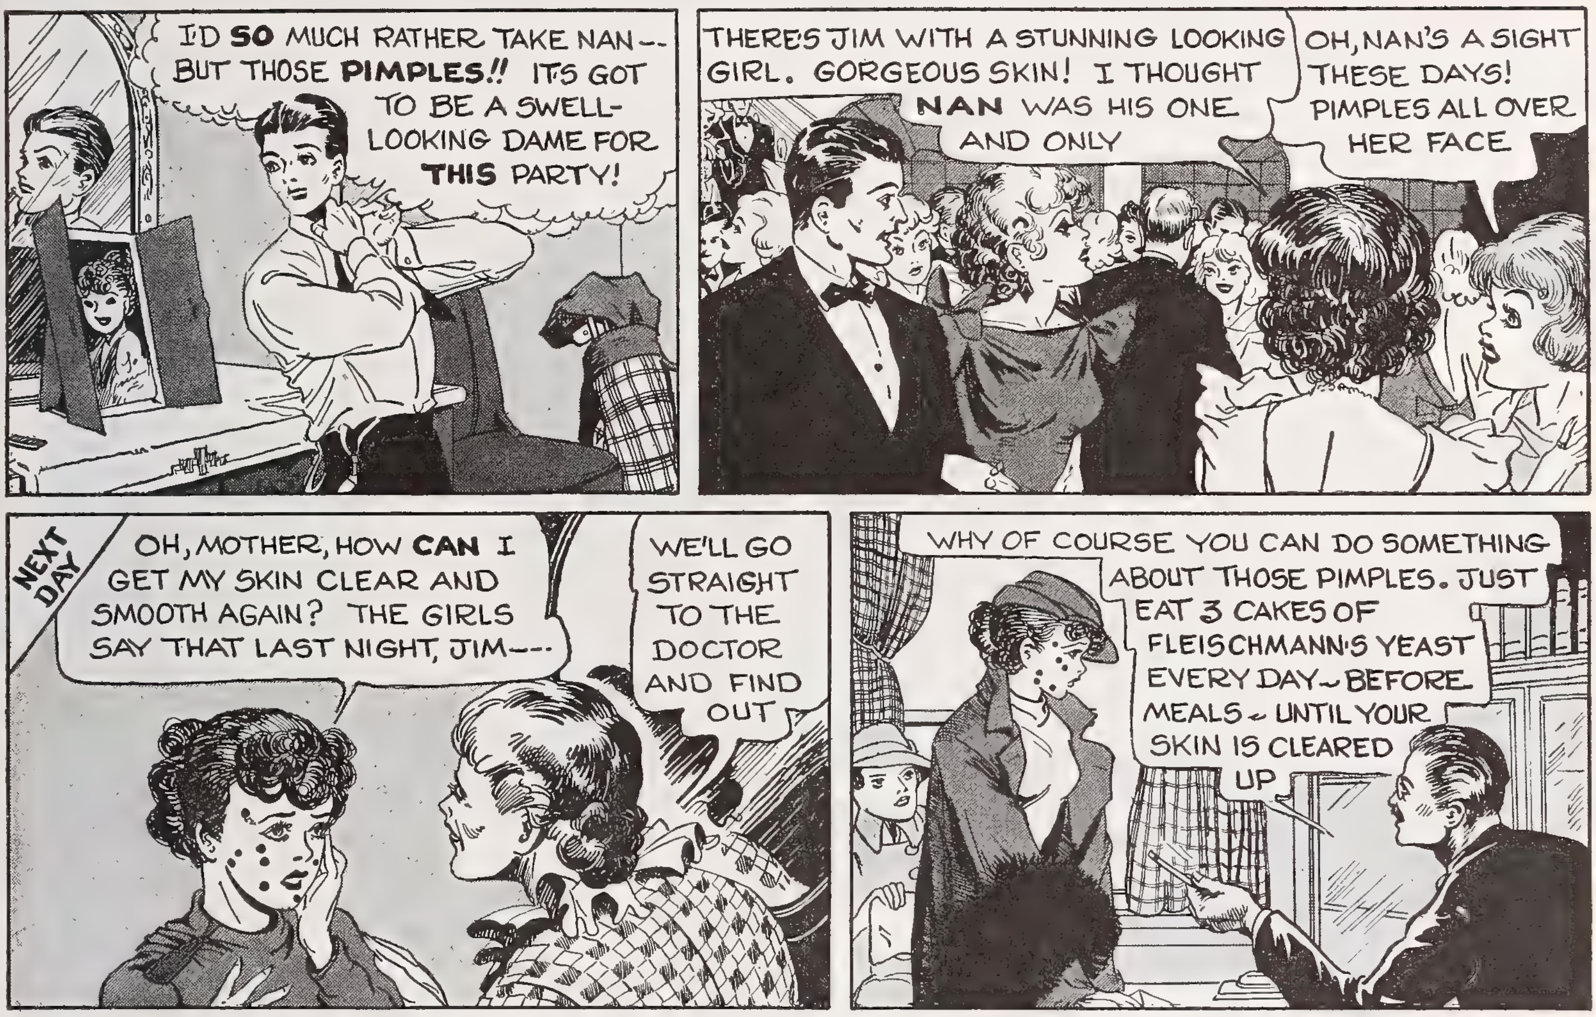


SPORT OF MOVIE KINGS



I'M SURE JIM LIKES ME_
yet he never takes me out anymore

BOYS CAN'T BE PROUD OF A GIRL WITH PIMPLY SKIN—



I'D SO MUCH RATHER TAKE NAN-- BUT THOSE PIMPLES!! IT'S GOT TO BE A SWELL-LOOKING DAME FOR THIS PARTY!
THERE'S JIM WITH A STUNNING LOOKING GIRL. GORGEOUS SKIN! I THOUGHT NAN WAS HIS ONE AND ONLY
OH, NAN'S A SIGHT THESE DAYS! PIMPLES ALL OVER HER FACE
NEXT DAY
OH, MOTHER, HOW CAN I GET MY SKIN CLEAR AND SMOOTH AGAIN? THE GIRLS SAY THAT LAST NIGHT, JIM---
WE'LL GO STRAIGHT TO THE DOCTOR AND FIND OUT
WHY OF COURSE YOU CAN DO SOMETHING ABOUT THOSE PIMPLES. JUST EAT 3 CAKES OF FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST EVERY DAY – BEFORE MEALS – UNTIL YOUR SKIN IS CLEARED UP

LATER
-THEN I'LL CALL FOR YOU TONIGHT. IT'S GOING TO BE A SWELL PARTY
SOUNDS LIKE FUN! WELL, I'LL BE SEEING YOU
JUST LIKE OLD TIMES – NOW MY SKIN IS CLEAR AGAIN

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST

—clears the skin

by clearing skin irritants out of the blood

Copyright, 1936, Standard Brands Incorporated

Don't let Adolescent Pimples keep YOUR boy friend away

PIMPLES are all too common in the years that follow the beginning of adolescence—from about 13 to the age of 25, or even longer. Important glands develop and final growth takes place during this time. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin becomes oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin, causing pimples.

Clear up these adolescent pimples—with Fleischmann's Yeast. This fresh yeast clears the skin irritants out of your blood. Pimples go. Your skin is fresh and smooth again . . .

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast 3 times a day, before meals—plain, or in a little water—until your skin clears. Start today!

GOOD NEWS

It's open season for big social and sports doings

Arline Judge gets a corner in gents! Jack Oakie, Ed Robinson, Clark Gable, Arline and Carl Brisson.

Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Norma Shearer and Dolores Del Rio at the Di Frasso's shindig.

Russell Patterson

"Why not lead off this month's news with a Mae West item?" we have just asked ourselves, and hearing no reply at all, here is this month's Mae West item: As you know, Mae's leading man in "Klondike Lou" is Victor McLaglen. Now, Vic is big and tough, but around the ladies he's not exactly what you'd call a Gablemore. He is, briefly, shy. So our Mae took him in hand during a love scene, and in conspiracy with director Raoul Walsh, gave Vic what is known in technical circles as "the works." By the time the scene ended, the McLaglen countenance was crimson, and he still doesn't know that the torrid love episode was filmed, not for the picture but for Raoul Walsh's private collection of scenes that Mr. Hays and his hirelings will never view.

* * *

While we're on the subject of Mr. Walsh, it might be nice to mention a fine gesture on his part during the shooting of "Klondike Lou." During several weeks before Christmas, Walsh shot scenes which required the presence of a number of old timers. Instead of choosing his players at random from the casting office, Walsh ordered a couple of assistants to check on the financial status of the candidates. As a result, the neediest cases were given jobs and a much more pleasant Christmas than they anticipated.

* * *

Here's a conversation between a photographer and Claudette Colbert's in our gay cinema town . . . By Leo Townsend

Cook's night out! The newly wedded Tones dine at the Cafe Lamaze. Joan looks very elegant but a trifle glum about something.

Grace Moore without hubby, Val Parera, is news! George Brent, left, and Clifton Webb squire the gal for this party picture.

Photos by Scotty

Doctor Pressman we thought you'd like to hear. Cameramen, as you know, are anathema to the good doctor—in fact, he doesn't like them. One of them cornered him a few weeks ago, however, and asked him to explain his aversion to the lensmen. "It's purely a question of ethics," replied the Dr. "News photographs hardly lend themselves to the dignity of the medical profession." "That's funny," said the photographer, preparing for a quick getaway, "the Mayo brothers never objected!"

■ ■ ■

We dropped in on Eddie Cantor's "Strike Me Pink" set the other day, hoping, to be frank with you, to get in on one of the big chorus numbers. Instead we drew Cantor and Parkyakarkas, with the latter suspended in mid-air by a series of wires. After a few attempts at the scene, director Norman Taurog called time out for lunch. We all marched over to the studio cafe, where all was serene until along about coffee-time when Eddie suddenly yelled: "Hey, where's Parkyakarkas?" A startled assistant rushed back to the set, and there was Mr. P., dangling just where he had been left. "Strike Me Pink," by the way, was originally "Shoot the Chutes." The title change came about when it was discovered that in England, where the Cantor epics make considerable money, "Shoot the Shutes" is an unknown expression.

■ ■ ■

Perhaps by this time Bob Montgomery and his studio have patched up their troubles, but as we go to press Mr. M. is not on the friendliest of terms with his bosses. Bob, it seems, objects to the philandering playboy type of role he has been playing, while the studio insists that the Montgomery public expects and likes him in that type of thing. Bob's major complaint, however, is that he wanted to play Romeo opposite Norma Shearer's Juliet. Bob doesn't begrudge Leslie Howard the role, but everyone knows he was disappointed in losing out on it.

■ ■ ■

Norman Foster and Sally Blane are tops among the film colony's lovebirds these days, and Hollywood is pointing with pride to what it believes to be an ideal—"ideal marriage."

(Continued on page 15)

REVIEWS

A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES

Above, Cary Grant and Katharine Hepburn give excellent performances in "Sylvia Scarlett." Next, Joseph Calleia, Jean Harlow and Spencer Tracy in the swiftly-paced "Riffraff." And, right, a scene from the Dickens' classic, "A Tale of Two Cities," with Ronald Colman and Elizabeth Allan.

By Leo Townsend

★★★★★ A Tale of Two Cities (M-G-M)

Fans of Ronald Colman owe a debt of gratitude to Charles Dickens for creating Sydney Carton. Playing the cynical and chronically inebriated young lawyer, Colman's performance can only be spoken of as perfect. It is highly doubtful, according to historians, that Mr. Dickens had Ronald in mind when he wrote his classic tome, but were he alive, and about today, he would agree with M-G-M that there is no better Sydney Carton in all Hollywood than Ronald Colman. It is his portrayal that lifts "A Tale of Two Cities" to the top in the month's ranking. Everyone is aware that Carton's destiny is the guillotine, where he makes the supreme gesture for the woman he loves, but one's interest is held throughout by the excellent acting of Mr. Colman and his colleagues. Notable among the large cast are Blanche Yurka (whose Madame DeFarge is second only to the star's performance), Elizabeth Allan, Edna May Oliver, and, in minor roles, Isobel Jewell, Walter Catlett, Billy Bevan and E. E. Clive.

Preview Postscripts

Mr. Dickens would have been staggered at what his brain-waves cost M-G-M. No expense was spared to make "A Tale of Two Cities" authentic in every detail. Over a year was spent in research alone. Costumes, scenery and properties were studied and collected from every available source. The largest set for this picture was that of the Bastille. Over 5000 extras were employed for this scene alone, which took several days to shoot. An interesting comparison between the mode of life in the French Revolution days with the elaborate and costly French palaces on one set and alongside was the set of the dreary, rotting hovels of the laborers and the famous gaol with its darkly stained floors and cobwebs swinging in the breeze. Those rats scuttling across the dirt floor were the real thing—at $5 a day. All the principal character actors and a large percentage of the supporting cast were English so four o'clock tea became imperative. An atmosphere of great dignity always pervades a company in which Mr. Colman is starred. Mr. C. indulges in great thought and little conversation while at work. The only time he seemed to be enjoying himself was on the way to the guillotine. The horse turned temperamental when faced with the milling mobs so the star took him in hand. Five days were needed to shoot this scene which takes less than five minutes on the screen. The

(Continued on page 92)

(Continued from page 13)

Note: When Fritz Leiber and his wife, Virginia Bronson, opened their new home in Beverly Hills they spent their first day there interviewing prospective cooks. After looking over all the candidates, they chose a middle-aged Mexican woman, who said she had several children to support and had been on home relief for months. Hired, she removed her hat and set to work, but Mrs. Leiber couldn't conceal her amazement at the gal's elaborate coiffure. Questioned about it, she said: "My hair? Ah, all my life have I wanted a permanente, so when the presidente put us on the gratificacion—what you call it?—I send my niños away to our relatives and save up two weeks to get one!"

■ ■ ■

Grace Bradley's hay ride party was probably the chilliest affair of the season. Guests arriving at the Bradley ranch in Van Nuys, were plumped into trucks spread with hay and transported to the Malibu Country Club at Malibu Lake, which had been given a bucolic going-over for the evening. Cornstalks decorated the walks, and everyone sat on bales of hay—everyone except Dorothy Lee, who sat on the prostrate form of a peacefully smiling young gentleman who had evidently done too much rehearsing for the affair.

■ ■ ■

Another highly unusual gathering was Paula Stone's cocktail party on the afternoon of the Bradley festivities. Paula's soiree was to honor her sister Dorothy and her husband, Charles Collins. At the appointed time everyone was present but the hostess and her guests of honor. An hour later, the first of the Stones came rolling in. It was Paula, in screen make-up, and she had just returned from a location trip. Another hour passed, and in marched Dorothy, fresh from a screen test. Her husband was also making tests, and couldn't be present at all. And at the last minute papa Fred Stone arrived, attired in backwoods costume. He had just come from work on "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." P. S. to the Stones: it was a swell party; you should have been there.

■ ■ ■

Competition for novel party ideas in Hollywood is so keen that Carole Lombard is reported to have offered Grace Bradley $500, and finally $1000, if she would sell her the "rights" to her hay ride party. After all, the Lombard gal has a reputation to maintain, for she is Hollywood's Number One novel party thrower. Her tops to date are the rough-and-tumble affair she sponsored at the Venice Fun House, and her Hospital party, at which food was wheeled in on stretchers and guests ate with scalpels and other physician's tools. It was all too, too medical, really. And now, just to give Carole more sleepless nights, comes the Countess Di Frasso with plans for a Physical Culture party—whatever that may be—at the Rollerdome in Culver City. Some fun, eh, Countess?

■ ■ ■

Little Jean Parker has been seen here, and occasionally there, with Igor Gorin, the baritone, but you can discount any rumors of hearts and flowers since they are both under contract to the same studio and Igor is in the process of getting a romantic build-up. Incidentally, Jean, who owns a style shop, should be told by her employees that organdie gowns in mid-winter don't really set a girl off at parties.

(Continued on page 24)

Unprintable

...but TRUE!

They're unprintable! The things that happen to your system when you take a harsh, quick-acting cathartic. Good taste forbids a detailed description

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW, for your health's sake, what happens when you introduce a harsh, drastic laxative into your system. One that works too quickly. One that upsets you, one that creates a violent disturbance...that rushes unassimilated food through your system . . . that rips and tears its way, leaving you weak, dragged down — internally abused.

But . . . we cannot tell you the graphic details here because they are too graphic. This is a family magazine . . . not a medical textbook.

This much we can say: whenever you need a laxative, be sure the one you take is correctly timed. Be sure it is mild and gentle. Ex-Lax meets these important specifications.

Avoid quick-acting cathartics!

Beware of laxatives that work too quickly! Ex-Lax takes from 6 to 8 hours to accomplish its purpose. It relieves constipation without violence, yet it is completely effective. Elimination is thorough. And so close to normal you hardly know you've taken a laxative.

Because of its gentle action, Ex-Lax doesn't leave you weak, as harsh cathartics do. It doesn't cause stomach pains. It doesn't nauseate you. And you don't need to fear any embarrassment afterwards. It is best to take Ex-Lax at night, when you go to bed. In the morning you will enjoy complete and thorough relief. Ex-Lax works overnight without over-action.

Good for the whole family!

Another thing people like about Ex-Lax is the fact that it is equally good for children and adults. Thus, you need only one laxative in your medicine chest. Millions of families follow this practice.

Ex-Lax has been recognized as a standard, reliable laxative for 29 years. More people use it than any other brand of laxative in the world.

A joy to take!

And here is still another pleasant thing about Ex-Lax . . . it tastes just like delicious chocolate. Isn't it foolish to offend your taste with some bitter, nasty-tasting laxative? Don't ever do it again . . . it's so needless.

Stop at your druggist's and get a box of Ex-Lax today, if it isn't already in your medicine chest. A box costs only 10c. There is a big, convenient family size at 25c, too.

GUARD AGAINST COLDS! . . . Remember these common-sense rules for fighting colds — get enough sleep, eat sensibly, dress warmly, keep out of drafts, keep your feet dry, and keep regular, with Ex-Lax, the delicious chocolated laxative. At all drug stores.

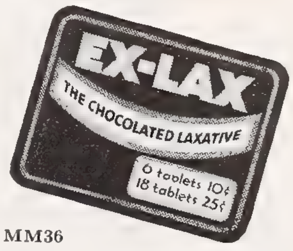
PLEASE TRY EX-LAX AT OUR EXPENSE!

(Paste this on a penny postcard)

Ex-Lax, Inc., P. O. Box 170
Times-Plaza Station, Brooklyn, N. Y.

I want to try Ex-Lax. Please send free sample.

Name____
Address______________________________________
City____________________________Age________
(If you live in Canada, write Ex-Lax, Ltd., 736 Notre Dame St. W., Montreal) MM36



Tune in on "Strange as it Seems", new Ex-Lax Radio Program. See local newspaper for station and time.

Enter

RUBY KEELER'S CONTEST NOW!

6th prize—Crosley All Metal Tube Console Radio.

Play hostess to this lovely star and win a big prize! It's easy!

Contest Rules

1. On the next page you will find the Ruby Keeler prize menu. Fill in each of the blank spaces (those that are preceded by asterisks) with the name of some food or special dish beginning with the letter on that line. Your complete menu should provide a balanced and appetizing meal. Then, in the space at the bottom of the menu, give your reason in ten words or less for wishing to see Ruby Keeler in "Colleen."

2. The prizes will be awarded to the persons who submit the best menus, typewritten or printed in pencil, with all the correct spaces filled in, with each dish on the menu beginning with the specified letter, and who, in the opinion of the judges give the best reasons (in ten words or less) for wishing to see Ruby Keeler in "Colleen." Neatness will count.

3. The first prize is $400.00 in cash; the second prize $250.00; the third prize $200.00 and the fourth prize $150.00. The fifth prize is a Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator; the sixth prize the new Crosley All Metal Tube Console Radio. There are five 64-piece H & W China Dinner Sets as seventh prizes. There are fifteen General Electric Hotpoint Portable Mixers as eighth prizes. There are ten Buffeteer Toaster Service Sets as ninth prizes.

4. The contestants may submit as many entries as they choose, each entry to be accompanied by the menu card coupon on the following page. No correspondence can be entered into regarding letters submitted to this contest. All letters, upon receipt, will become the property of MODERN SCREEN Magazine.

5. The decision of the judges shall be final, and in case of ties duplicate prizes will be awarded.

6. No employees of MODERN SCREEN or members of employees' families are eligible to compete.

7. Send all entries to RUBY KEELER CONTEST, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. All entries must be mailed before midnight of April 15, 1936.

THIS is your last chance to enter the Ruby Keeler Prize contest and your big chance to compete for one of the wonderful prizes we are offering. One of the nicest features of this contest—apart from the useful awards—is its simplicity. You don't have to be a cross-word puzzle addict, a jig-saw puzzle expert or even a cook! All you have to do is to decide what you would serve to Ruby Keeler if she were to be your guest at dinner!

There is one rule that you must observe, however, so listen carefully and look at the sample menu on the opposite page as you read the explanation here. For this is important: every dish of your prize menu must begin with the initial given at the beginning of each line. The filled in menu card will illustrate what we mean.

The dishes do not need to be listed in the order in which they would be served. You can start off with dessert and end up with soup, if you choose, so long as you keep to the RUBY KEELER, COLLEEN line-up. One of the blank spaces, you will notice, has no initial heading it. In that space, therefore, you can add any dish you care to. This enables you to complete your menu (Continued on page 90)

5th prize—Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator.

Three more prizes—H & W China Set, Portable Mixer and Buffeteer Toaster Set.

Prizes

- 1st—$400.00 in cash
- 2nd—$250.00 in cash
- 3rd—$200.00 in cash
- 4th—$150.00 in cash
- 5th—Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator
- 6th—The new Crosley All Metal Tube Console Radio
- 7th—Five prizes of 64-piece H & W China Dinner Sets
- 8th—Fifteen prizes of General Electric Hotpoint Portable Mixers
- 9th—Ten prizes of Manning-Bowman Toaster Sets.

FILL IN THIS COUPON (PLEASE TYPEWRITE OR PRINT IN PENCIL) AND MAIL IT TO:

Editor, RUBY KEELER CONTEST,
MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

★R
U
★B
Y
★
K
★E
E
★L
E
★R

★C
O
★L
L
★E
E
★N

WHY I AM LOOKING FORWARD TO SEEING RUBY KEELER IN "COLLEEN"

....
....
Name...
Street...
City.................................. State...........................

THIS IS A SAMPLE COUPON. YOURS SHOULD LOOK LIKE THIS WHEN YOU SEND IT TO:

Editor, RUBY KEELER CONTEST,
MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

★R ROLLS
U
★B BOUILLON
Y
★ GREEN PEAS (ANY INITIAL)
K
★E EGG AND SARDINE CANAPE
E
★L LEG OF LAMB, MINT SAUCE
E
★R RASPBERRY ICE

★C (CANNED) CORN PUDDING
O
★L LYONNAISE POTATOES
L
★E ENDIVE SALAD, ROQUEFORT DRESSING
E
★N NUTS AND RAISINS

WHY I AM LOOKING FORWARD TO SEEING RUBY KEELER IN "COLLEEN"

BECAUSE SHE IS MY FAVORITE
TAP DANCER, AND SO PRETTY.
Name JANE SMITH
Street 99-22 BEVERLY AVE.
City BYRNETTE State IOWA

THE TREAT'S ON RUBY!

La Keeler wants you to crunch cookies with her

By Marjorie Deen

HAVE YOU a cookie jar in your home?

Well, if you have, here's your golden opportunity to secure new recipes from Ruby Keeler which will enable you to fill this kitchen treasure chest of yours with crispy, crunchy rounds of goodness.

But did I hear some of you say that you have no cookie jar? And no knack for making cookies? Well, that's too bad, really! For there is nothing more universally popular than the cookie family and nothing in the dessert line easier to make. Such at least is the opinion Ruby Keeler expressed to me the other day. And Ruby should know, for she is an enthusiastic "cookie cruncher" if your Modern Hostess ever saw one.

"AS A KID," said the petite Miss Keeler, "when I had a penny to spare (and those occasions were few), I'd never buy a lollypop or 'a penny's-wortha-candy' at the corner stationery store down under the elevated tracks. No, indeed, I'd get cookies—the two-for-a-penny kind at the bakery on the next street. I can still remember the delicious warm smell of baking bread that came out of that place as I stood—my little nose pressed against the window pane—feasting my eyes on the trays of goodies inside. With but a single cent, fairly burning a hole in my pocket, I'd put off the glorious moment of entering the shop while I pretended to myself that I couldn't make up my mind between the chocolate layer cake or the white frosted angel food. Naturally, I knew all the time that I couldn't possibly afford either. But do you think I cared? Not I! I knew I had money enough for two cookies and I asked no more of fate. To this very day I'd choose cookies in preference to cakes any old time at all."

I forgot to ask Mrs. Jolson whether her famous husband shares her enthusiasm for these baked sweets. But I'm perfectly sure, without asking, that there is one person who soon will be making very definite inroads on the cookie supply in the Jolson household. That's young Albert Jolson, Jr. For children adore cookies—from the tiniest tot who begs for one at Mother's tea table to the school child who cheers joyfully when cookies are included in his lunch box. And if it's true (which you know it is) that "men are just grown up little boys," it is just as true that they carry their liking for cookies on into manhood. Why only recently a man wrote a

THE MODERN HOSTESS,
MODERN SCREEN MAGAZINE,
149 MADISON AVENUE,
NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

Please send me a free leaflet containing Ruby Keeler's recipes for special cookies.

NAME...

STREET...

CITY.................STATE.........

Courtesy Borden's

A plateful of goodies.

popular song called "Lookie, Lookie, Lookie, Here Comes Cookie"—and meant it as a sincere compliment!

So let's be wise, follow Ruby's advice and reëstablish the old-fashioned cookie jar as a regular item of household furnishing. Let's fill it to overflowing with not one style of cookie, but several! You can buy these, of course, as Ruby once did, at the baker's. But better still you can have the home-made kind that Ruby now enjoys.

FOR THIS little lady has recipes for several kinds of cookies to which she is especially partial. Furthermore she allowed me to choose from among her favorites an outstanding example of each different type of cookie. Cookies, you know, fall under four groupings. Rolled Cookies, Dropped Cookies, Refrigerator Cookies and Filled Cookies, with a thousand variations possible on each theme. Later on we will discuss the four groups just mentioned in a very general way. But right here I want to tell you more about the recipes I have for you this month—those four pets of Ruby Keeler's. (I also want to tell you that you, too, can have copies of these recipes just by mailing in the coupon on the opposite page.)

The first of the cookie recipes in the leaflet, which is yours for the asking, is one that tastes just like an old-fashioned sugar cookie, but which is actually as up-to-date as the tap dancing feet of the person after whom it is named. The "Keeler Cookie" is delicious served plain, sprinkled with sugar, or frosted. Personally, I favor a frosted cookie for special occasions so I've included directions for

(Continued on page 66)

I WON'T STAY IN THIS HOUSE ANOTHER MINUTE! THE BIG BRUTE—COMPLAINING THAT HIS SHIRTS ARE FULL OF TATTLE-TALE GRAY.. AFTER I'VE SIMPLY SLAVED OVER THEM.

WHAT A LOT I'VE LEARNED IN TWO SHORT WEEKS! LOOK AT HIM TODAY... ALL KISSES AND SMILES BECAUSE HIS SHIRTS ARE SO NICE AND WHITE. MOTHER WAS RIGHT. THERE'S NOTHING LIKE FELS-NAPTHA SOAP FOR GETTING RID OF TATTLE-TALE GRAY... THAT SHOWS CLOTHES AREN'T REALLY CLEAN.

FELS-NAPTHA SOAP holds two marvelous dirt-looseners—richer, golden soap with lots of naptha added to it! When these two cleaners tackle the wash, even deep-down dirt hustles out. Fels-Naptha is safer, too. Grand for silk undies and stockings. And it's easier on hands—because there's soothing glycerine in every golden bar. Get some today at your grocer's. © 1936, FELS & CO.

Banish "Tattle-Tale Gray"

with FELS-NAPTHA SOAP!

Now! two forms of Winx Mascara which gives you

LONG, LOVELY LASHES so fascinating to men!

by LOUISE ROSS

FROM Paris comes the secret of this super-mascara called Winx. Instantly, it gives your lashes a natural accent. It makes skimpy, pale lashes look luxurious, sparkling, alive!

You'll never realize the power of beautiful eyes until you try either Cake or Creamy Winx—my perfected formula of mascara that keeps lashes soft, alluring. Your eyes—framed with lashes darkened by Winx—will have new mystery, new charm.

So safe—smudge-proof, non-smarting, tear-proof—Winx is refined to the last degree. Yet so quick to apply—a morning application lasts until bed-time.

Millions of women prefer Winx to ordinary mascara. New friends are adopting Winx every day. Without delay, you, too, should learn the easy art of having lustrous lashes. Just go to any toilet counter and buy Winx. Darken your lashes—note the instant improvement.

Winx is presented in two convenient forms—the ever-popular Cake (in a box) and the new Creamy (in a tube). Each includes my perfected formula. They differ only in form. Each form has its enthusiasts—hence I offer both. They are for sale at all 10c counters.★

CAKE 10c CREAMY

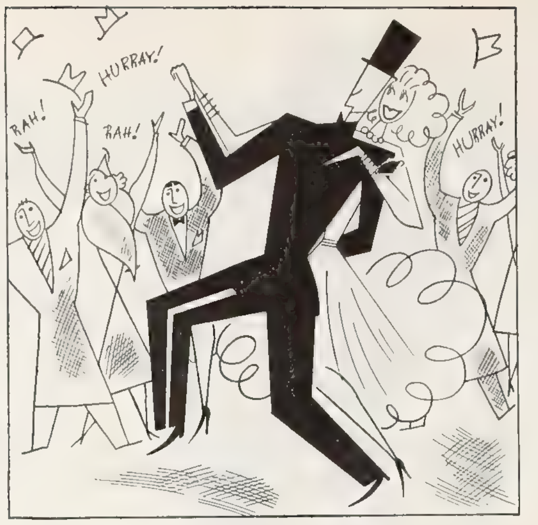
WINX for Lovely Eyes

★If you are not near a 10c store, you may order direct from Ross Company, 243 West 17th Street, New York City, by sending 10c, checking whether you wish ☐ Creamy ☐ Cake ☐ Black ☐ Brown ☐ Blue.

Name ....

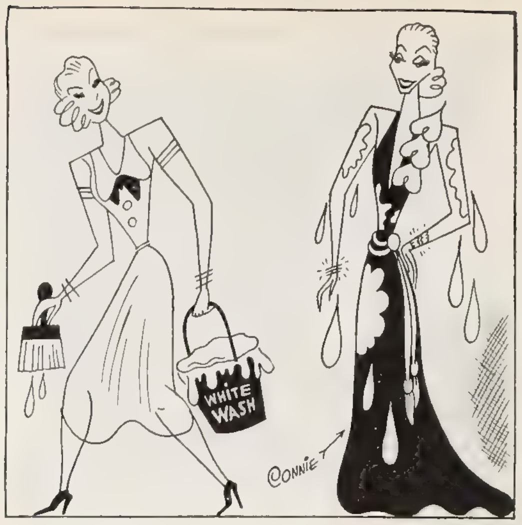
Street ....

City .... State M-3-36



RAH!
RAH!
HURRAY!
HURRAY!

The Rogers-Astaire team can't be topped for perfection, says one reader.



'Tain't fair the way everyone pans La Bennett, a reader laments.

Between You 'n'

Write a letter and win a cash prize! Motion pictures offer a wide field for discussion. We want your criticisms, pro and con, on films, players, or any phase of movies that interests you. Ten dollars in prizes will be awarded each month for the six most interesting letters submitted—1st prize, $5; five 2nd prizes of $1 each. Be sure to send your full name and address. Modern Screen reserves the right to publish letters in whole or in part. Address: Between You and Me, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

$5 Prize Letter

Rogers vs. Powell

I guess I'll never be as burned up, riled, or irritated as I was when I glanced at a letter in your January issue concerning Ginger Rogers. To say that "as a dancing partner, Ginger Rogers is not good enough for Fred Astaire" and that Eleanor Powell would be "a tremendous sensation with Astaire" is certainly using very, very bad judgment. It is recognized that Miss Powell is a great feminine tap dancer, but her style and technique would not compare with the rhythm and charm of the Rogers-Astaire combination.

Astaire's and Roger's dancing blends into a completely harmonious delivery, expressing the very words harmonious rhythm. They so completely belong together as a dancing pair that they are beyond compare, both in ballroom and tap dancing.

Miss Powell's main forte is her tap dancing, which is superb, but she is most certainly not on a par with Ginger Rogers in any other respect.—Miriam Barr, Tucson, Arizona.

$1 Prize Letter

Romantic Lady

For some time I have been missing a little lady from the screen, and, when I say lady I mean just that. To me she has always been a sweet, modest girl, a pleasant change from the half-draped females with artificially slanted eyes, affected walks, etc.

Many of us have looked at her and found the qualities we should like a daughter to possess, in fact I wish she were my daughter so that I might know her better.

We have laughed with her, cried with her, and left the theatre with her pictures fresh in our memories. I shall never forget "Merely Mary Ann," "Daddy Long Legs," and "Sunny Side Up." I can still hear her singing "I'm a Dreamer."

So let's have more pictures with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, for together they spell ROMANCE.—Blanche Mott, New York, N. Y.

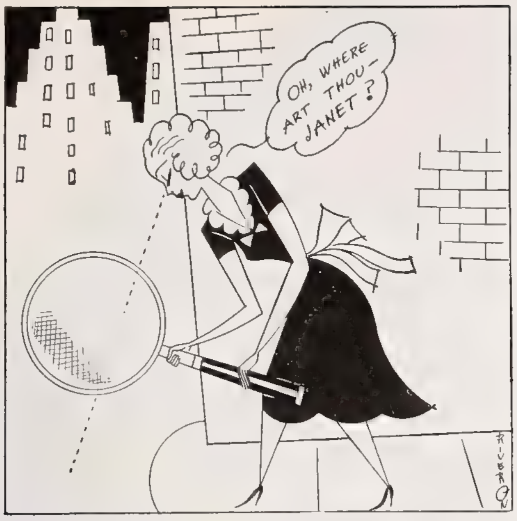
$1 Prize Letter

Defending Connie

It's about time someone came to the defense of Connie Bennett. Every magazine I pick up has some dirty crack about her in it. Once and only once have I read an article on her which stated that she was deathly afraid of crowds. Did it ever occur to anyone that Connie's so-called "high hat" is merely put on in self-defense?

She is accused by one of your readers of "posing with a cigarette in one hand and hot air in the other." If the script

Arizona girl wins $5.00!



OH, WHERE ART THOU— JANET?

The Gaynor gal's roles haven't been significant enough, says this lady.

me ..

calls for it, she's got to do it. Very few actresses could pull the same act and get away with it. Connie is the screen's prime sophisticate, one who can really put over the lousy parts handed to her. Let's have her in a picture where she really has a chance to shine.

Just as long as people sling sarcastic remarks about Constance, I'll be right here to defend "the most misunderstood actress in Hollywood."—Joan Goodwillie, Chicago, Ill.

$1 Prize Letter

Right You Are!

I second, third and fourth M. Woolsey's suggestion of Eddy and Swarthout in "Carmen." I'd second a motion for Nelson Eddy to sing anything, but he certainly would be some Toreador, and for a picture that part could be built up beautifully.

Harriet Bossard has the right idea about starved-looking stars. Some pictures leave us with the same impression we might have after a visit to a sanatorium. Too many of our leading players have an overwrought, high-strung look. That is probably why a fine, healthy specimen like Eddy made such a hit—Clark Gable, too, has always radiated sound health with nerves under control. I'm no Tarzan fan, but I don't like to see taught nerves or the evidence of them on display.—R. E. Dee, Peoria, Ill.

$1 Prize Letter

A Teetotaler Says—

In the December issue one of your readers said he was disgusted with the great amount of nudity on the screen. I believe there is another thing which is shown entirely too frequently on the screen and that is drinking.

Do producers and directors think that the only way to show people enjoying

(Continued on page 100)

So can you!

PANICKY?

Like a shadow, fear haunts you. Every minute you wonder—"Am I safe?"

But why—why risk that fear? Modess—the new and utterly different sanitary napkin—now banishes "accident panic." It's certain-safe! It stays soft! It stays safe!

SAY GOODBYE TO YOUR FEARS!

Dance and play—you're truly safe—with certain-safe Modess!

No striking through—as often happens with ordinary reversible napkins. No soggy edges! For Modess has a specially treated material on the sides and back. Wear blue line (the moisture-proof side) away from body and protection is complete!

Modess
This is the New Modess its "CERTAIN-SAFE"

End "accident panic"
—ask for Certain-Safe
Modess!

Try N-O-V-O—the new safe douche powder. Cleanses! Deodorizes! (Not a contraceptive.)
At your druggist or department store

Which type are you and do you know tricks to bring out your individuality? (Top, left) The Irish-American Alice Faye and, right, our own American Loretta Young. (Bottom, left and right) Two dark beauties, Mademoiselle Simone Simon and Señorita Rita Cansino.

BE INDIVIDUAL

By Mary Biddle

MAYBE IT'S the Irish in us, but this month we've decided to get fighting mad and go individualistic with a vengeance.

It—individuality—is the life of international trade in beauty. Think of Hollywood's imports; Garbo from Sweden, Dietrich from Germany, Merle Oberon from England, Dolores Del Rio from the romantic land of Mexico . . . a long string of names forging to the front. You'll find some talented newcomers on this page, and they're all youngsters with individuality. Here we have a tiny Parisienne, a Spanish señorita, a little blonde as Irish as a shamrock, and a young American girl. They are all as different as night is from day, so I've chosen them to support our individualistic theory in beauty, since they have already registered a "personality" trademark.

"In our make-up department, we don't merely put cosmetics on faces," declared Mel Burns, who is master of the greasepaint at RKO-Radio. "Rather, we deal in personality. The fact that it is radiated through the eyes and mouth means that we have to decide in which feature more personality lies, and bring out that feature through proper make-up."

"Then beauty itself is of minor importance?" I ventured.

"Yes," he responded frankly. "Show me an actress with a flawless face and, nine times out of ten, I'll show you a dumb actress."

Burns believes that women should learn to look at their faces impersonally, and that once they discover their best points and make the most of them, the battle is over. Moreover, he emphasized that by "best points," he didn't necessarily mean from the standpoint of mere physical perfection, but those through which their personalities are evident to the outside world.

Once upon a time Gloria Swanson fussed and fretted and worried over her nose as a screen liability. And it turned out that her turned-up nose became an asset; her profile became her "personality trademark," an intriguing part of her individuality.

Now let's turn our noses toward Paris. There is Simone Simon, the exciting French stage and screen star, who is making her debut in America with Ronald Colman in "Under Two Flags." Would you call her beautiful? Certainly not from a classical viewpoint. But she has something more important—an individuality, enhanced by her tiny unclassical nose. She accents her piquancy by make-up. Her long lashes and pert mouth are made up enticingly with mascara and lipstick, and her chiseled brows are accentuated with eyebrow pencil. She uses a Rachel Claire powder to enhance her naturally creamy skin. She wears smart, snug little dresses to enhance her figure. Yes, she is a pretty clever young sophisticate, we must admit.

Take these stars' beauty advice

Rita Cansino is the dancing daughter of a famous dancing family. Hers is the colorful charm that belongs to the beauties of Old Spain. It isn't beauty that she has . . . it is color, verve, vividness. She has an ivory complexion, dark brown hair and large brown eyes. She makes the most of her striking coloring by using a brilliant shade of lipstick and no rouge on her cheeks. Her powder is usually a dark rachel shade. She always pays particular attention to keeping her brows beautifully arched; too straight a line would detract from her special kind of distinction; too heavy a line would tend to coarsen her brunette coloring. Rita is wise enough to keep her hair sleek and smooth and long. "Long may the permanent wave," say I, but if in this permanented age you can wear long, straight hair, be individual enough to capitalize upon it.

FROM brunette to blonde, and to the palest of silken blonde hair we come to Alice Faye, a provocative vixen if there ever was one. She is of Irish-American ancestry, and we don't need to have kissed the blarney stone in order to call her "alluring." But beautiful? Certainly not. That isn't important where an Irish Faye is concerned. Alice has two important "personality trademarks," her eyebrows and her mouth. It takes the fairest of fair skin, wide-set eyes, and the most provocative of profiles to "carry off" eyebrows like hers. To most girls, they would give a ludicrous, doll-like artificiality, but to Alice they give a pert individuality. Such eyebrows would be utterly out of keeping with Loretta Young's flower-like beauty, but they're actually part of Alice Faye. Then her mouth. She is as generous with her lipstick as with her smile.

If you're interested in Alice's make-up, her powder is of a light naturelle shade, in consideration of her fair complexion. If you're lucky enough to have a fair complexion, use a light enough shade of powder. How many times I've seen a fair skin coarsened in appearance by the use of too dark powder. And you blondes, use brown mascara, not black!

Now we come to a different type of American sweetheart, with a little of the Irish, too, in her big brown eyes. It's Janet Gaynor, who, according to strictly academic standards, hasn't a single outstanding feature, and yet the wistful charm of her face has given her a hold on the heartstrings of the public. Part of her personality and appeal is her tininess. So many girls bewail the fact of their littleness; you want to go glamorous and sophisticated, and well, yes, (Continued on page 92)

"Let Camay open your eyes to Your Own Loveliness"

MC From the very first time I tried it, I knew it was the beauty aid I needed. Camay can really open your eyes to your own loveliness.

Sincerely,

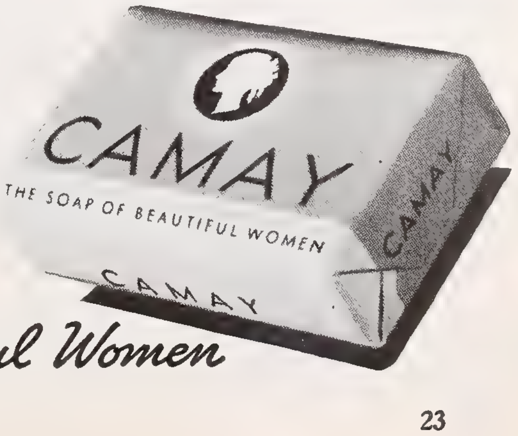
Boise, Idaho
September 3, 1935

Nellita Courtney
(Mrs. Stanhope Courtney)

THE "picture" of what every little girl hopes to look like when she grows up—describes Mrs. Courtney perfectly. Blue eyes, golden hair and a complexion as smooth and as fresh as a flower—a complexion Mrs. Courtney generously credits "to Camay!"

There's never any doubt about "Camay's beauty aid." You can feel those energetic little bubbles clean your skin in a way you know must be good for it. You can see the effect of its luxurious, creamy lather. You can fairly watch your skin grow smoother, clearer, and more attractive. Begin with Camay—today! Buy at least a half-dozen cakes from your dealer. The price is very low.

Let Camay bring your loveliness to light.



CAMAY

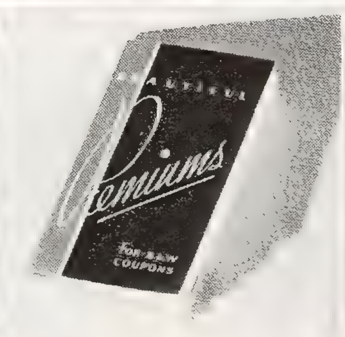
The Soap of Beautiful Women

WE'RE FOOLS ABOUT KOOLS—Who doesn't rave about this cigarette that's mildly mentholated to refresh the throat, smoothly blended to please the taste, cork-tipped, and packed with a valuable B & W coupon good for handsome premiums? (Offer good in U. S. A. only.) If you've never tried KOOLS, you're missing the parade! Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., Louisville, Ky.

KOOL
MILD MENTHOL
Cigarettes
CORK TIPPED
REG U S PAT OFF
SAVE THIS VALUABLE B&W COUPON
REDEEMABLE
15¢
25¢ in Canada
COUPON

SAVE COUPONS . . . MANY HANDSOME NEW PREMIUMS

Cigarette Box—Two shades of laminated wood. Chrome knob. 100 coupons



FREE. Write for illustrated 24-page B & W premium booklet, No. 10

Silex Coffee Maker—Pyrex and chrome. Electric. Makes 8 cups . . . 475 coupons

RALEIGH CIGARETTES...NOW AT POPULAR PRICES...ALSO CARRY B & W COUPONS

More Good News

(Continued from page 15)

Questions-Without-Answers: What well known director, promised a bonus if he finished a picture within a certain time limit, had his schedule and his dream of extra cash wrecked by the he-man star of the production, who had a habit of sleeping late mornings? A few nights after the finish of the picture, the director sat in a night club brooding over his loss when the star ambled in. What would have been a beautiful fist fight was spoiled by an army of waiters, who separated the two belligerents.

■ ■ ■

The most insured person in Hollywood these days isn't Garbo or Gable, as you might suspect, but Shirley Temple, a streamlined blonde whose presence is so valuable to her studio, 20th Century-Fox, that they have just taken out life insurance totalling $2,000,000. The policy was so large it had to be divided between four insurance companies, and it makes little Miss T. one of the most expensive young ladies in the world. With Shirley rated as the world's best box-office bet, we don't blame her studio a bit for taking such precautions.

■ ■ ■

We talked to Loretta Young, who has had her own romantic troubles, about Sally and Norman Foster recently, and she said, "It almost makes me weep to see two people so happy. If this marriage doesn't last, then nothing can survive in Hollywood."

■ ■ ■

The last shot on "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" was hardly completed when Henry Fonda breezed into New York for the holidays. He stayed at The Gotham, the cinema crowd's popular rendezvous.

(Continued on page 105)

Joan Bennett and husband, Gene Markey, have a quiet family game of billiards, at Arline Judge's recent party. Joan doesn't look as if she expected Gene to top her shot!

One woman gave him the thrill of reckless kisses. The other gave him the glow of a deathless love. And in the burning crucible of three souls in conflict is born this triumphant heart song of a million wives and sweethearts.

ANN HARDING and HERBERT MARSHALL

in "The LADY CONSENTS"

with
MARGARET LINDSAY
WALTER ABEL · EDWARD ELLIS
HOBART CAVANAUGH · ILKA CHASE
Directed by Stephen Roberts

AN RKO—RADIO PICTURE

"You are the best I could get. And now I've got you—she'll never be able to win you back again!"

THE STAR OF "DAVID COPPERFIELD!"... THE HERO OF "WHAT PRICE GLORY!"

THE DIRECTOR OF "CHINA SEAS!"

Together they give their greatest in Damon Runyon's story of rollicking and exciting adventure!

"I TAKE MY FIGHTS WHERE I FIND 'EM!
I CAN LICK THE COCKEYED WORLD!"

VICTOR McLAGLEN

Freddie BARTHOLOMEW

IN

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER

Timely as a radio news flash! Tender as a big brother's love! Thrilling as a machine-gun's rat-tat-tat! Uproarious and romantic as only a Damon Runyon yarn can be!

with

GLORIA STUART • CONSTANCE COLLIER
MICHAEL WHALEN • C. HENRY GORDON

A DARRYL F. ZANUCK
TWENTIETH CENTURY PRODUCTION

20th CENTURY FOX

Presented by Joseph M. Schenck
Associate Producer Raymond Griffith • Directed by Tay Garnett

NORMA SHEARER

Juliet, loveliest and most romantic of all Shakespeare's heroines, is reincarnated for the screen by Norma. We've waited so many months to know who Romeo would be, but the wait was worth it when the decision was made to give Leslie Howard the much coveted role. Norma never has looked more beautiful and don't you love her softly curled coiffure, which Adrian created for her as a perfect Juliet head-dress, copying it from a famous old painting?

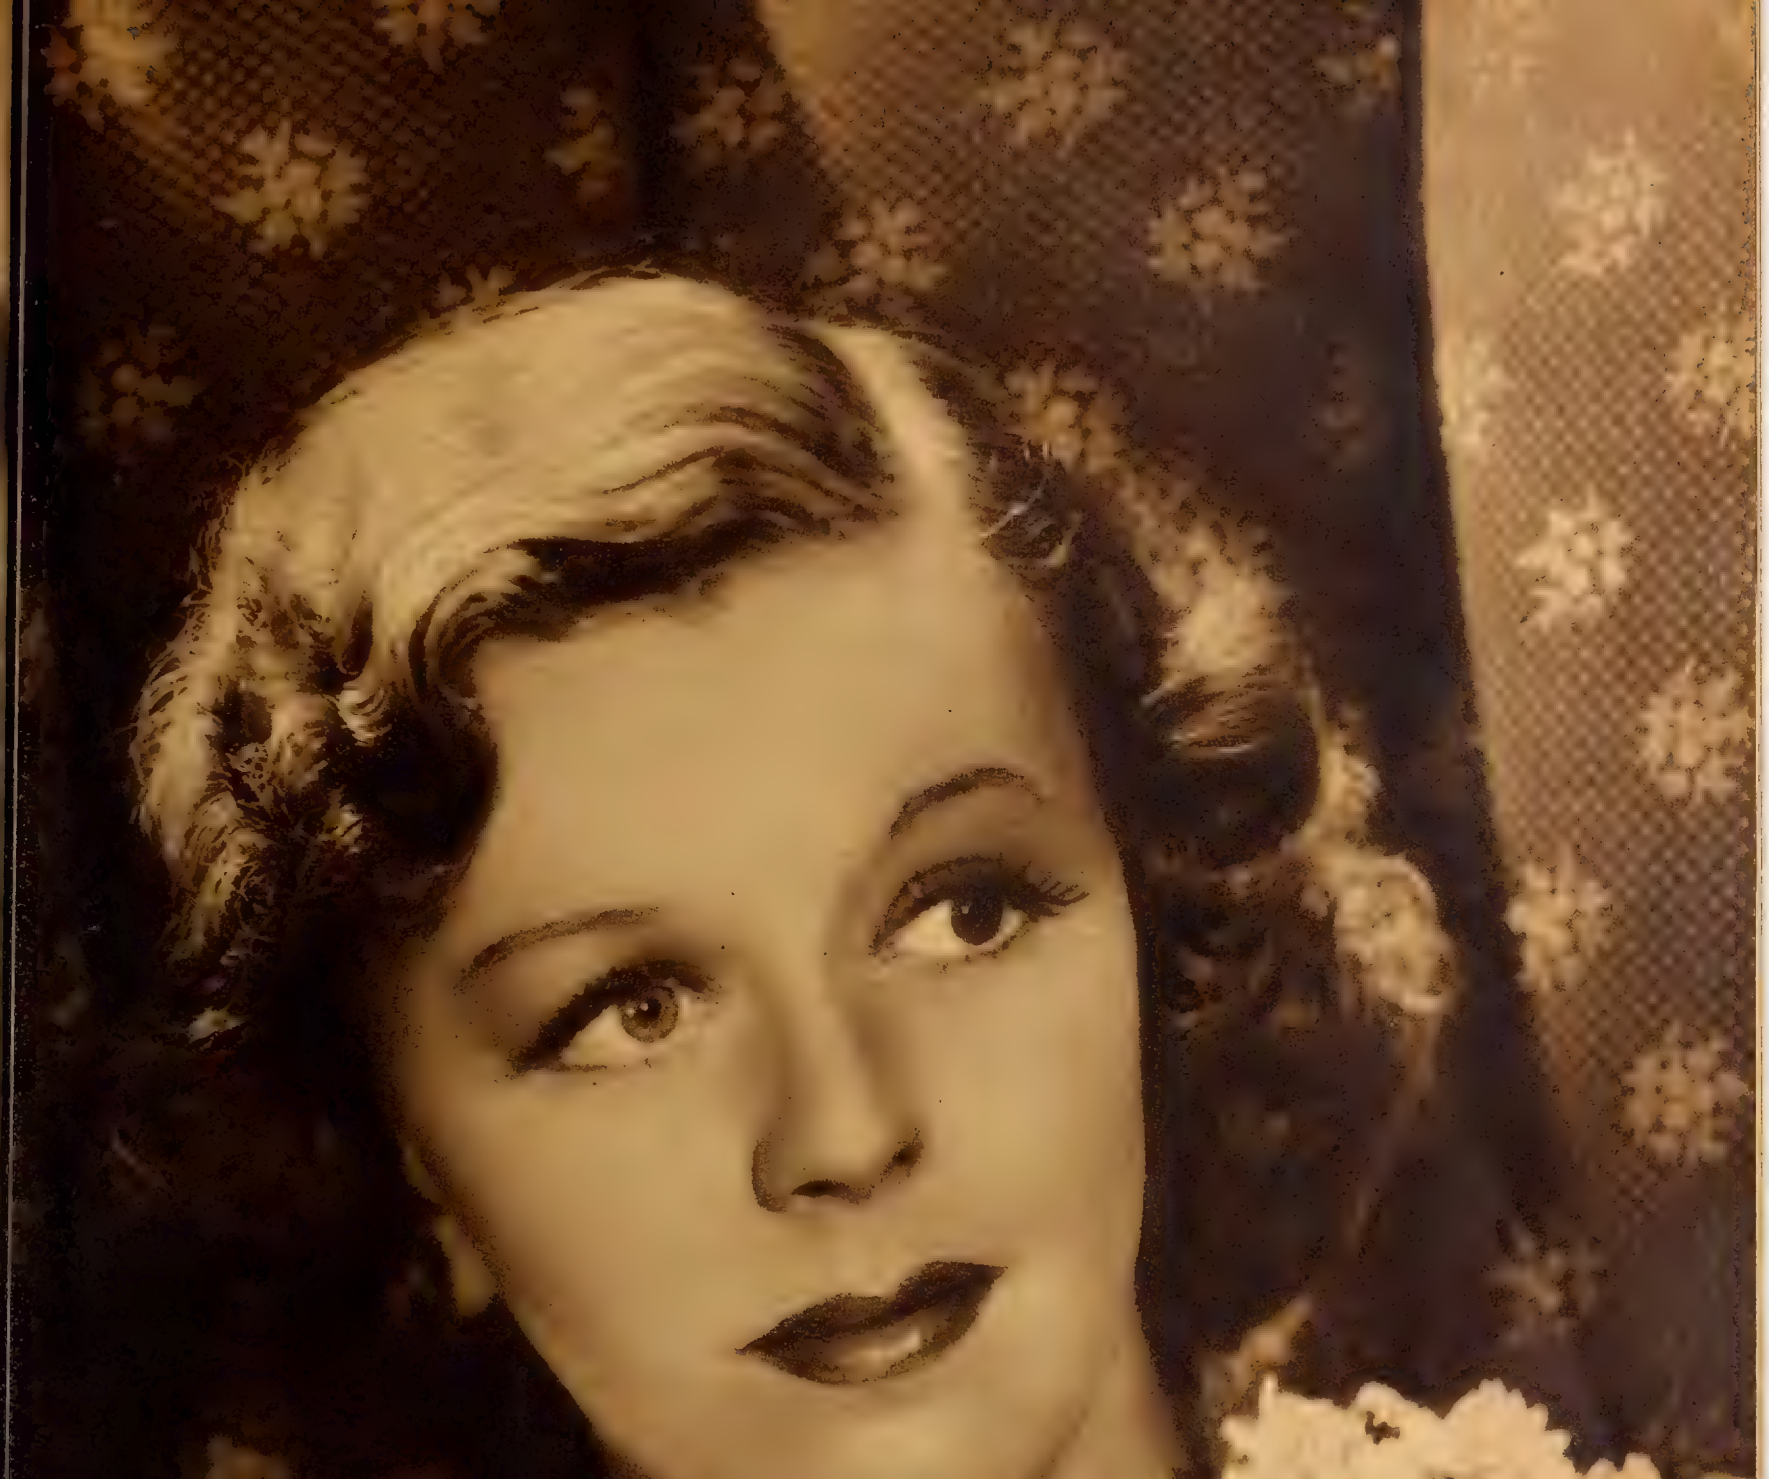
CLAUDETTE COLBERT

and HENRY FONDA

For the first time in months, Claudette has time on her hands. And being one of the busiest stars in the cinema town, it must seem swell to have no immediate picture scheduled after "The Bride Comes Home." Don't think the dynamic Colbert is relaxing for a second, however. Between getting her beautiful new home organized and nimbly dodging the news sleuths who dog her steps since she has eloped with her Dr. Pressman, she's as busy as a bird dog. As for Henry Fonda, you'll be seeing him in color! The rugged Fonda charm is going to set the femme fans palpitating when they see him mountaineering in that rip-snorting old melodrama, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," now being revived in full color. Henry's heart interest is Shirley Ross, who may be Mrs. F. by now.

JOHN BOLES

A busy fellow is Boles. Hardly had he wiped off his make-up for "Rose of the Rancho" before he was putting on a fresh one for "A Message to Garcia" with Barbara Stanwyck and Wallace Beery.



MARGARET SULLAVAN

This is a very serious study of the prankish Maggie, who delights in playing practical jokes off screen. Perhaps she's in character for the romantic drama, "Next Time We Love," with James Stewart.

Charming Elizabeth Allan, having made a hit in "A Tale of Two Cities," has gone back home to England to play in a picture for Gaumont-British. Transatlantic commuting seems to be Hollywood's pastime these days.

ELIZABETH ALLAN

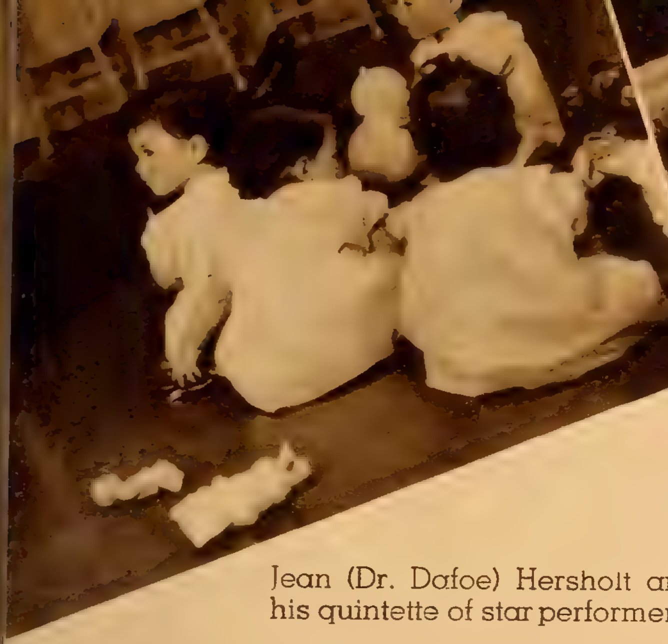
DESIRE

The best news of the year is that one of the screen's most thrilling twosomes is united again. Remember Gary Cooper and Marlene Dietrich in "Morocco"? If you do, you will know what an exciting pair they are as screen lovers. "Desire" is a romantic comedy involving Marlene, a beautiful Continental jewel thief, and Gary, a stalwart and very honest young American engineer. What happens when they meet and fall in love is something that will have you amused and charmed. Dietrich never looked lovelier than she does in this, her best picture—and her clothes! They are a whole fashion bulletin in pictures for all you feminine fans. Gary, of course, is the same grand romantic fellow who always turns out a swell performance. "Desire" is directed by Frank Borzage, who did such a fine job with Gary in "A Farewell to Arms."

(Adv't.)

LIGHTS !

Courtesy NEA Service, Inc.



Jean (Dr. Dafoe) Hersholt ana his quintette of star performers.

CAMERA ! IT'S THE QUINTS !

Here's the first story of five little Garbos who crashed pictures

By Gladys Hall

FROM the pocket of his coat, reverently, Jean Hersholt extracted a tiny wooden whistle in the shape of a doll. The round head was nicked and chewed, unmistakable marks of tiny teeth. I held it in my hand. It had been teethed on by —the Quintuplets!

And Jean, returned that very day, with Dorothy Peterson, Director Henry King & Co., from Callander, where they had been working with the famous babies in "The Country Doctor"—Jean, who owns, among other priceless treasures the most complete set of Hans Christian Andersen manuscripts in existence, said to me, "This little whistle is my most valuable possession, my treasure beyond any price. I carry it with me, always, for good luck."

Courtesy NEA Service, Inc.

From left to right, the five stars, Yvonne, Marie, Emilie, Annette and Cecile. Marie looks very meek but she's the executive of all the "Quints."

"And I also want to tell you," said Jean, laughing, "that for the first time in my life I went up in my lines when I did my first scene with Mademoiselles Yvonne, Annette, Marie, Emilie and Cecile. I did the worst bit of acting I have ever done in my twenty odd years on the screen. I was terrible. I, who have worked with Garbo more often, I think, than any other one actor, was knocked right off my feet. I was awkward and ill at ease before those five self-possessed, incredible little personalities. They were not camera-shy. I was. They went to it like little veteran troupers and were what all fine actors must be, completely natural and uninhibited. No wonder I was floored. Why, I felt as though the Garbo personality had been turned on me not once, but five times!"

And then I heard all about them. Jean gave me the first and the exclusive interview on that fabulous excursion to one of the shrines of the world. The snow from Callander was barely melting from his shoes when we talked. And then, later, I talked with Dorothy Peterson and she gave me the woman's reaction to the five famous babies. And so, these are first-hand, eye-and-ear witness facts about the "Quints"—from Jean Hersholt, who plays the part of their beloved Dr. Dafoe and from Dorothy Peterson, who plays their nurse, two people who worked with them and played with them in their hospital nursery every day for six days.

THEY ARE identically alike, the Quintuplets (and by the way, you pronounce the much disputed word "Quint-uplets' with the accent on the first syllable, Jean told me. Thus does Dr. Dafoe pronounce it—and he should know!)

Anyway, they are identically alike, physically. They have precisely the same shade of hair, the same color eyes, the same tone of skin and shape of head, hands and feet. Their voices are alike, with the same tone and timbre. Rich little voices, all five of them.

But they are NOT alike in their personalities. Each one is a definite and distinct-from-the-other little individual. Each one has her own mannerisms and cunning "ways." Each one reacts differently. Dr. Dafoe cannot tell very easily which one is which when he comes up on them sleeping side by side. But the instant they are awake and at play anyone, who has been with them for an hour or two, can tell Cecile from Marie, and Marie from Annette and so on.

Marie, for instance, is by far the most independent, the most domineering of the five. She is the one from whom the others do not dare to snatch toys or make too free. She has been reported to be the smallest and frailest of the five. She is, Jean told me, actually only a few ounces lighter than her sisters. She is, too, the only one of the five who does not walk as yet. But the difference is not so marked as it has been said to be. And such slight physical difference, as there has been, is more than made up for by small Marie's sturdy independence of mind. She is the leader and the dictator of the group.

Dorothy Peterson told me that, while Marie does not walk, she has an extremely rapid and effective method of getting about. She puts her two hands flat on the floor, propels herself with her feet, her small behind sticking aggressively up in the air as she skitters about.

Yvonne is the most emotional of the five. She is the readiest to laugh, the quickest to respond to affection. She is the only one of the five who cried at all during the six days Jean worked with them. And that only for a very few moments. She has, Dr. Dafoe explained, reached the "shy stage," the coy feminine stage of being whimsical. She decided one day, said Miss Peterson, that she was "through with pictures" and retreated into a corner from which she had to be wooed and won again. It was obvious, Jean told me, chuckling, that she knew she was employing woman's most potent weapon—tears. She peered out from behind her fingers and gauged the effect nicely.

Cecile, Dr. Dafoe told Jean, went through this same shy stage a few weeks ago but had emerged from it, a new and very debonair woman by the time "The Country Doctor" company arrived. And she is, now, the most casual and off-hand of the five. A sort of "take things as I find them" attitude.

EMILIE and Annette are the most observant of the five. Emilie, for instance, recently discovered the electric light switch near her crib. She was overjoyed when she found out that, by pressing the button, she could turn the light on and the dark off. Dr. Dafoe had to send for an electrician to move the switch and install it elsewhere, electric appliances not being exactly the toys for eighteen month oldsters. Annette discovers the door knobs and toys that have rolled under chairs, things out of sight. She misses nothing.

They were not camera-shy in the least. As secluded as they have been, they never once cried or shrank back or evinced the slightest degree of fear when the company began to work with them. They were not nervous. They were merely healthily curious and interested. They are perfect demonstrations, Jean told me, of what science can do when it raises human beings—even little human beings as handicapped as these babies were at birth.

"They are also," Miss Peterson (Continued on page 84)

by Mary E. Parks

Gay, pert Wendy—you'd never know she'd been jilted recently. She's in "Don't Bet on Love," an apt title. Above, with Louis Hayward, a friend.

Wendy Barrie tells how to patch a broken heart

IF YOU ARE JILTED—THEN WHAT?

AFTER YOUR heart is broken—what?"

We sat in the garden of Wendy's Westwood Hills home. And pungent chrysanthemums and vivid China lilies flowered about the feet of the China-born young Wendy Barrie as she repeated my sad question, with a laugh—though the laugh, like the question, held a knife.

"After your heart is broken," she said, "violence! Do something violent, just at first. Do something different. To cut the cord, you know. Run away from wherever you are. If you live in a small town, go to a big city. If you live in a big city, go to some rural village. Anywhere—anywhere—so long as it is away!

"Or do something violent! Turn into someone you never were before. Do something radical and desperate. Do anything but one thing. Don't pity yourself.

"And another 'don't' to girls who have had their hearts broken—don't try to lick heartbreak by plunging into another love affair. It isn't a panacea, it's an irritant. It's the worst thing you can do. It's like trying to contract diphtheria in order to forget that you have measles. It doesn't work. It's stupid.

"And don't sit around dramatizing yourself. Yours isn't the only broken heart in the world—it's just one of many.

SERIOUSLY," said the wand-like child, with the honey-colored hair and the topaz eyes, "seriously, heartbreak is not a gentle malaise of the imagination. Heartbreak is an illness, just as the break of any bone or the breakdown of any organ in the body is illness. It belongs to the surgeons. Heartbreak is an actual physical disease. I know that no one has ever described it thus literally before. No one has ever thought of it clinically—always romantically. That's because of the poets. They've dramatized it. But I know whereof I speak.

"I lost twenty pounds when my heart was broken. And I say this exactly as I would say that I'd lost twenty pounds when I had typhoid

(Continued on page 64)

Above, Clark rests between shots at a "skeet" shoot. He and Gary Cooper, with him, are among Hollywood's best.

GABLE'S

How will Clark

THE ONLY possession I have ever craved, the only goddess I can serve faithfully for all my life is FREEDOM!" So said Clark Gable.

"I'm a tramp at heart," he continued. And with those words he gave the real "inside" story of himself, of all that he wants from life, even of the marital events recently headlined and hysterics-lined.

For though Clark, in due course of time, will be "in circulation" again—he won't be. Not really.

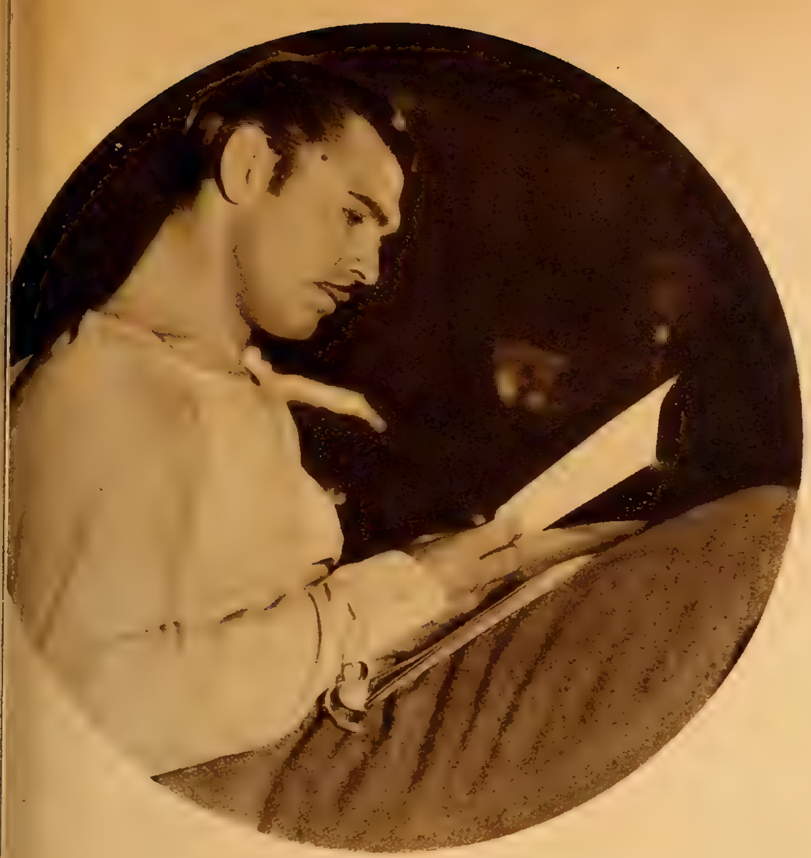
He looked magnificent as he sat there, in his dressing room. He seemed too big and vital for the narrow confines of the room. I could see marriage, domesticity, routine—all submerged beneath tempestuous seas.

No, not for one acre of ground, this man—not for four walls, nor for one woman, nor for the hearth—but for veldts, the prairies, the jungles, the untrammeled reaches of the air.

That is the "story" back of Clark Gable and all that he has done and all that he may do—freedom. The wide, wide world wherein he may stretch his arms and yawn, laugh and adventure.

We talked for three hours, for this is the first interview he has given since he took off for South America.

Now and then we were interrupted by a call from the director and Clark departed, perforce, to do a scene with Jean Harlow. Once Jean herself poked her "brownette"



Clark is no Beau Brummel, off-screen. He loves casual, slouchy clothes like these. He's reading some fan mail.

Another favorite Gable pastime, fishing. Note the proud grin as he holds up two beauties from a day's catch.

NEW FREEDOM

use it? Of course you know, he's alone now

By Gladys Hall

head in the door and summoned him. "Hi, there, you!" she said—and "Hi, there, right back at you," laughed Clark. They both carolled, "Love at first sight!"—and winked.

During Clark's absences on the set, I combed my hair with the Gable comb, brushed my suit with the Gable clothes brush, renovated my face with the Gable powder puff—and emerged disappointingly unchanged.

The Gable coat and hat—a careless looking raincoat and a brown Fedora—hung on a rack. A pair of the Gable socks were rolled up and thrown on the floor. The Gable dressing-table bore the comb, the clothes brush, one rather dreary-looking powder puff. A book on Astrology was on the couch, dog-eared. That was all. No dressy make-up box. No framed and autographed beauties—just a few meagre masculine necessities, neither very new nor very shiny. No "man" stood in attendance to dust off the risen star. Clark combed his own hair and forgot his face.

A YOUNG daughter of one of the studio firemen presented Clark with a home-made cake just as he was called to the set. I asked if I might have a piece while he was gone. "Certainly not!" said Clark-the-big-meanie, departing. He called back, laughing, "Well, just one piece—if you can find a knife."

I found one. I shaved off a piece of the crust and hid the rest of the cake. When Clark returned he eyed the shaving with amazement and me with disbelief and said, "For Pete's sake!"

The coyly hidden cake was produced and Clark ordered tea for two and we settled down again.

And that little incident is Gable all over—fun. He likes to kid. He likes to have a laugh, to give and receive snappy comebacks. If a lady languished at him, he'd list to starboard and be seen no more.

He said, gravely now, "Let's get one thing straight. I don't know what you want me to talk about, but I have my suspicions. And you may as well know that I will not discuss Mrs. Gable—not with anyone. I haven't discussed our affairs, I never shall. Not even my most intimate men friends have got a word out of me. All they know is what they have read in the papers. And if anyone 'quotes' me, which will be definitely *mis*quoting, since there aren't going to be any statements, I'll—" And Clark's expression was one to strike terror into the nerviest questioner.

"I know," he continued, "that all kinds of editorial articles have been and will be (Continued on page 80)

ARE WOMEN

Whether or not you

A LITTLE, curly-headed girl of thirteen stood on the platform of the Opera House in her home town, Deep Water, Missouri. She was giving her first recital. All the folks were there, family, friends, neighbors, schoolmates. There came the high note in a difficult aria, when to the horror and consternation of both family and friends, to the special anguish of the little girl's elder sister, Roma—she failed to make that high note.

Something like a long-drawn sigh echoed in that auditorium. Tears in the mother's eyes, and in the sister's . . . a suppressed titter perhaps, from the schoolmates, with the young cruelty of their age, who had long been impressed with the story "Gladys is going to be a very great singer, you know."

And then, to the astonishment of everyone in the audience, the child wheeled round on the platform and demanded of her teacher, who was accompanying her, that they start over again from the beginning! The teacher whis-

Successful Gladys Swarthout whose answer to a burning modern question should be of interest to every man and woman.

INFERIOR TO MEN ?

agree, la Swarthout's answer sets you thinking

pered frantically that this was never done. The small girl whispered back that that didn't matter, it would be done now. And the teacher, too embarrassed to persist in the maintenance of precedent, went back to the beginning. Perhaps she recognized dimly, in that unheard of moment, that she was in the presence of a smasher of precedent. On the second valiant attempt the little girl sang the high note so truly, so triumphantly that the entire audience rose to their feet and burst into wild applause—applause for the high note; applause, no less, for the high courage that had produced it.

And thus a great career was launched—for members of a wealthy Kansas City family were present that night and they offered, then and there, to finance the little Ozark Mountain girl's career—Gladys Swarthout was on her way.

There is nothing of the "Great Diva" about Gladys Swarthout. She doesn't believe in the legendary "operatic temperament." She wrinkles her nose in the way she has and says, "Singers who fly off the handle are usually trying to substitute temperament for voice."

No trumpets ring out when Gladys Swarthout approaches. She is, very simply, a dark, vividly alive young woman. She has nut brown hair and eyes and an olive skin. She wore, the day we talked, a navy blue cape suit, topped by a small navy hat. She wore dark lipstick and no other make-up. She sat on a divan in her dressing-room on the Paramount lot, her young and very good-looking husband, Frank Chapman, at her side. She might very well have been just young Mrs. Frank Chapman, spending her days playing golf, her evenings playing bridge, a member of a smart suburban set. She defers to her husband, as every good wife should. And it is well known, in Hollywood, that he is constantly with her, on the set as well as off, advising, consulting, encouraging.

AND SO when I said, "There has been so much talk about women being inferior to men—whether or not they are—it struck me that it would be intensely interesting for you, so successful a woman, to say what your honestly think." I said it, confident that Gladys Swarthout is the sort who would be interested in any question involving the human equation. She is. She smiled at Mr. Chapman and he smiled at her. It is quite obvious, to the most casual observer, that this is one of those rare marriages which is a perfect duet—the bass and the treble, harmonizing perfectly.

She said, "Oddly enough, Frank and I were discussing your question only last night. And I really do believe that I have the right answer.

"Women are inferior to men when it comes to real creative work. Women never create. They excel most when they handle material already created. They are inferior to men when it comes to great inventions, scientific discoveries, the building of things, the creating of the sources of material. I don't believe that we could find two women in all history who have achieved greatly in any real creative field. Oh yes, Madame Curie, I know. But even she worked with her husband. Edison, Rembrandt, the Wright Brothers, (Continued on page 70)

By Faith Service

Left below, Gladys Swarthout with Jan Kiepura and Benny Baker, centre, in a scene from "Give Us This Night." And right, relaxing from work with husband, Frank Chapman.

ABC
Breakfast dinner
Shirley
Shirley's Fan Mail

FROM TO EIGHT

Eight o'clock and no breakfasting on ice cream even for stars! Shirley drinks milk with fruit and toast close by, even as other girls.

Wheel! A spin before setting out for the studio. Shirley told us a Big Automobile Man—but very Big—sent her this snappy motor.

What a whirl! Every day is a busy one for little Miss Temple

EIGHT WITH Shirley

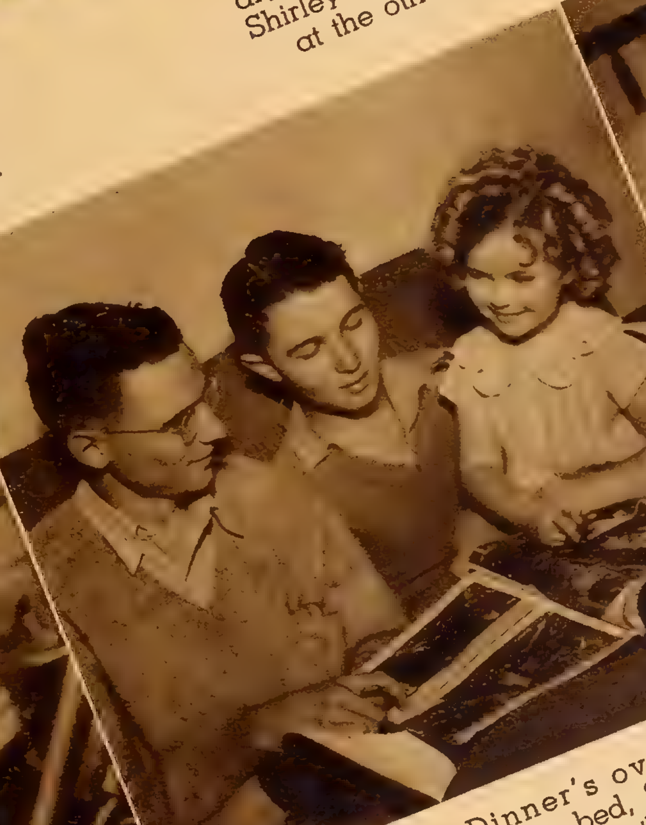
Readin' and 'rithmetic at the studio between scenes. But our star and her stand-in, Mary Lou Isleib, admit it's as much fun as acting.

There's a swell spiral stairway on the "Captain January" set and it's from there Shirley likes to peer down at the others working.

"Dere frend:" But even her typewriter won't supply words for the fan letter Shirley's so puzzled over.

Home, after a hard day's work, and quick into her bathing suit for a plunge in the pool. Shirley just loves to swim.



Dinner's over and before bed, Shirley's two big brothers take a hand at entertaining their famous sister.

And so to bed—but not before prayers. All the Temple pets are included in these.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN, THE

In reality, this lovable screen tramp is a

AT LAST, there is another Charlie Chaplin picture to be chuckled over, and thousands of youngsters who have grown up to movie-going age since four and one-half years ago, when his last picture was shown, are having the fun of discovering him for the first time.

During that long lapse between "City Lights" and "Modern Times," I've burst into guffaws at the most unexpected and embarrassing moments, remembering a scene from "City Lights." I and a few million others. It was one of those subtle scenes that would take a psychology professor to figure out. He swallowed a whistle, and from then on, whenever making a sound would do him the most harm, he hiccuped and the whistle blew.

A lot of long-faced professors would have us believe that Chaplin is much more profound than that. They have put him into college textbooks on the psychology of humor. Reams of learned and very dull interpretations of his pictures have been written, but don't let that fool you. The actor who slips and gets his backstop stuck in a pail of water just when he is trying to make a dignified impression belongs to us shouters more than to the thinkers.

There ought to be a law providing that everyone see each Chaplin picture at its very first showing. Then we could shout down all the wet blankets who try to tell us about the mysticism, symbolism, and assorted hooey they discovered in his picture.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN himself is all things to all people. Stop any five of his most intimate friends (and you never saw a man who has so many intimate friends from here to Japan) and they will all tell you a different story. Mary Pickford, who counts him first among her friends, thinks he is the wisest and most dependable man she ever met. A famous author, who has often gone from New York to Hollywood at Charlie's invitation, only to find that Charlie has left town, considers him the most flighty minded and most undependable person he knows. But he'd go from here to Timbuctoo to spend five minutes with him.

Marion Davies thinks Charlie is the perfect party guest. When you have once been entertained by his untiring antics, all parties without him are a frost. A Hollywood delicatessen owner, who is one of his oldest friends, enjoys Charlie as a daily companion. He says he will sit silently munching rye bread and liverwurst for hours, then go out and prowl around the streets, and along the most sordid waterfront never saying a word, but obviously enjoying himself. H. G. Wells, who wrote "The Outline of History," and who has come from England to be Chaplin's house guest for several months, admires him tremendously because his unquenchable curiosity about

By Karen
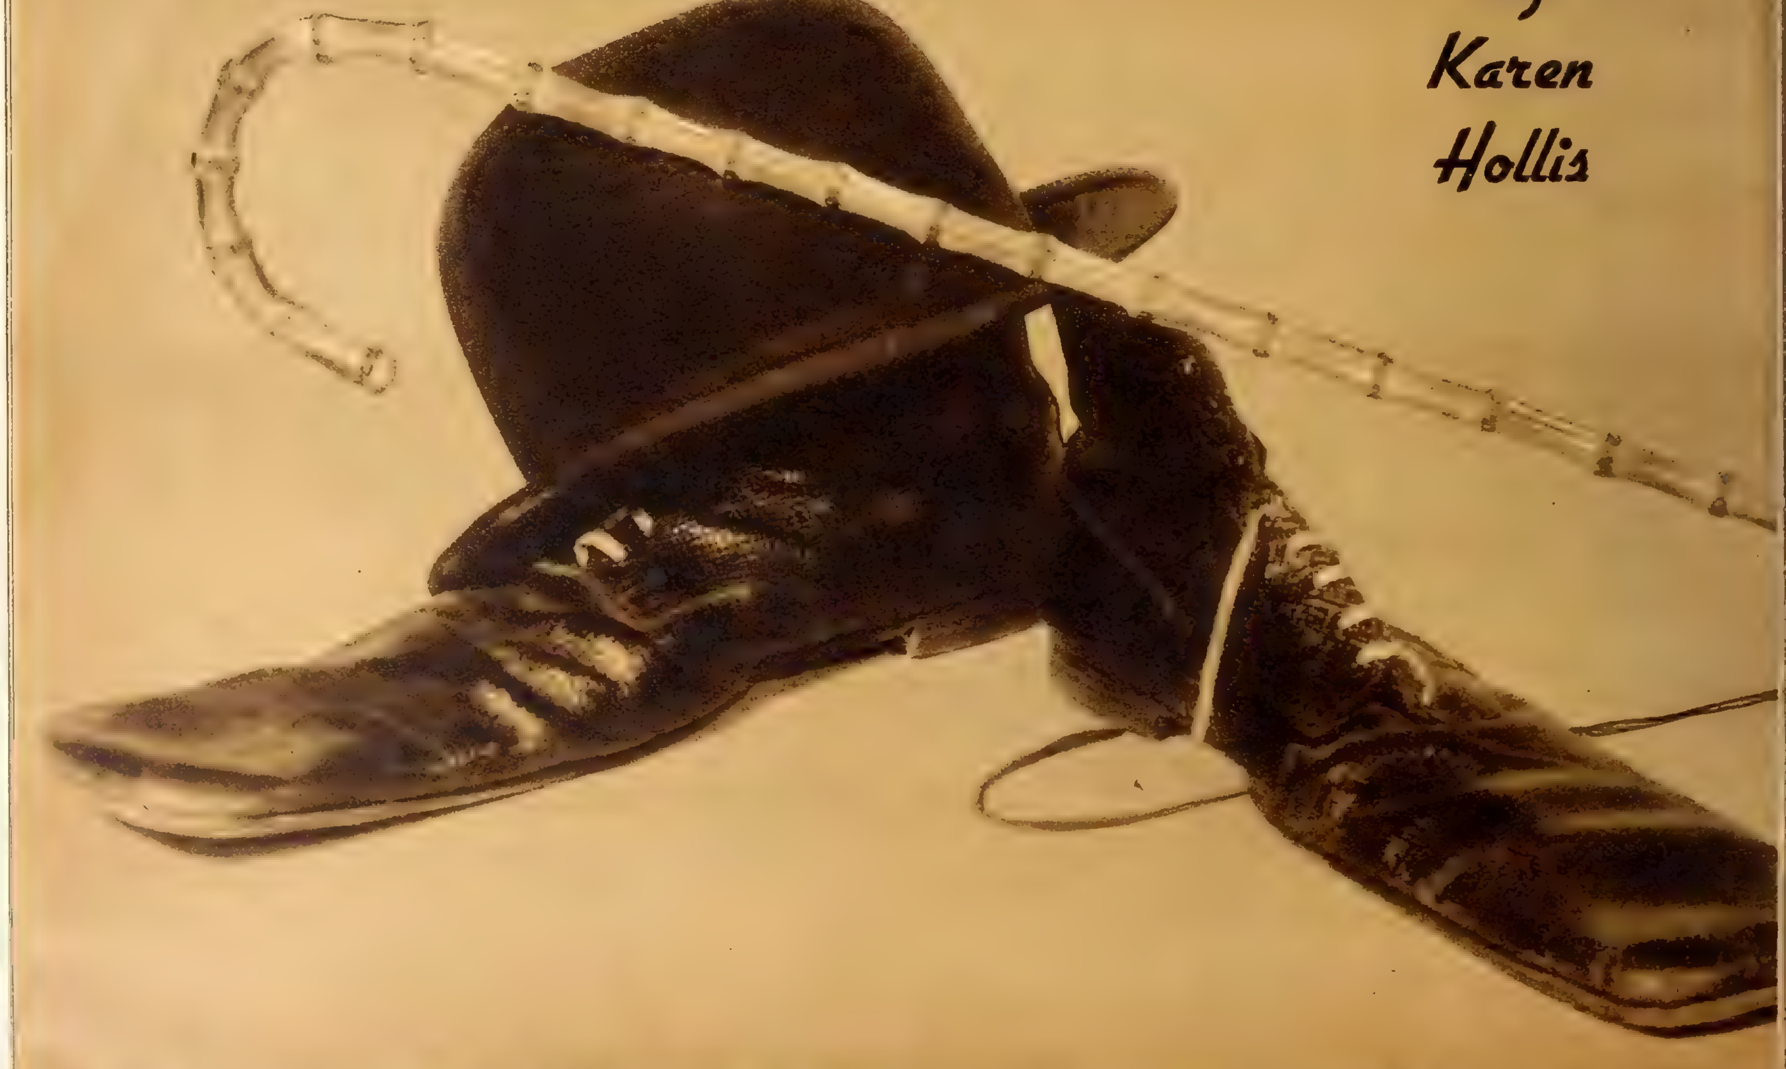
Hollis



SERIOUS FUNNY MAN

charming scamp, or a solemn chap at will things and people has made him make up for his lack of schooling as a child by reading everything he gets his hands on, and listening intently to all the great men he meets. And he has met practically every great person alive in the world today from diplomats to bull fighters, from Professor Einstein to Peggy Hopkins Joyce. At their request, incidentally.

When I hear acquaintances talking about Charlie Chaplin, even people who have known him much longer and better than I have, I want to get up on a soap-box and scream, "He's not like that, he's like this." But everyone else feels the same way, so you can't hear a thing for the noise we make.

If you will let me ramble on, I'll tell you some of my most vivid memories of meeting Chaplin. Before anyone can get through an introduction, he says, "But surely we have met before." Nine times out of ten, he has guessed right. And does everyone get thrilled at that bit of kindly tact. Even if they have not met him before.

You are apt not to remember anything he said at your first meeting. That's because you probably did all the talking. He has a sweet, ingratiating way about him, that Chaplin.

I LIKE best to remember him at big parties. I have seen him stand behind a phonograph imitating an orchestra conductor. His anxiety, then relief, over a brief solo from the first violin, his dismay over a sour note, his frantic efforts to get more volume from his orchestra, make you see every one of the stodgy or temperamental, sleepy, or nervous, or arrogant players in his imaginary orchestra. His despairing shrug, as if to say, "I have to do everything around here, you men just aren't trying," is a masterpiece of caustic wit.

I have seen him walk around the guests at a party, impersonating a desperate man who thinks that perhaps he will take up picking pockets as a profession. It is nothing short of magic the way he makes you follow every thought of his, without words, almost without gestures. He makes you see what he thought of doing, but decided against. He makes you agonize over the poor man's temptation, and roar because a pretty girl distracts his attention from a fat bankroll.

Best of all is his parlor portrayal of a man visiting an art gallery. With his back toward you and a blank wall in front of him, you know that he is looking at beautiful landscapes that make him feel shut in from all the fragrance and freedom of the outdoors. You know that the still life of fruit and a dead fish make him hungry. Then he comes to a nude. He doesn't want to be caught staring at it, but he cannot resist. He rises to a perfect frenzy of curiosity and shyness that makes him look, turn away, look again, and turn away until his fellow guests are so worn out from laughter that they beg him to stop.

Don't get the idea that Chaplin is always the inspired clown. Quite the contrary. Back in June, 1929, he and Lindbergh were fellow guests at a small luncheon party on a yacht anchored in the Hudson. Lindbergh had recently returned from his solo flight across the Atlantic, and Manhattan was one shoving, screaming, persistent lot of maniacal hero worshippers who all wanted to get close to him and talk to him. At luncheon Lindbergh experienced the first moments of quiet in a hectic day. He seemed happy and hurried away to pressing engagements with obvious regret. As the dinghy bearing him toward shore splashed its way through the water, the disconsolate little figure of Chaplin practically hung over the rail waving "Good-bye."

THERE HE stayed, watching Lindbergh land, get in a car, and drive away. Eventually, Chaplin straightened up and turned a curiously wistful face toward the others on deck.

"I wish I'd had nerve to ask him for an autograph," he said earnestly.

The first time I met Chaplin was in his studio in California and I was disappointed in a way. He looked so sleek and polished and spoke with such a clipped British accent. He was kindly and deferential (I was with old friends of his) and frankly I wanted either the gay little clown I had seen on the screen or the curt, temperamental madman I had heard he was.

He explained to me patiently, as if it were a recitation he had repeated thousands of times, that in his screen character the mustache stood for vanity, the derby for attempted dignity, the tight coat and the cane an attempt to put up front, the baggy trousers and enormous scuffed shoes, inescapable poverty. The most important part of the tramp's make-up, he assured me, was the part you couldn't see, the rose-colored glasses through which the character sees everything. He expects the best, you see, when he has every reason to know the worst.

Another time he was at the home of friends, and a studio associate told me that no one had seen him for days, because although the company was waiting for him on the set, he had locked himself in his study and played mournful tunes on the violin all day. No one had felt sure enough of his job to go and disturb him. He told me about learning to play the violin as a boy. He just could not stick to tunes, but imitated animals instead.

STILL later, some years later, he was at a big luncheon in a private dining room at the Ritz-Carlton in New York. He had been smuggled in a back door, because unruly mobs surged around wherever he was—admiring, adoring mobs, but over-enthusiastic, to say the least. It used to make him quite ill when he heard that women had been hurt in crowds pushing forward to see him. He seldom travels now and that is one of the reasons.

However, in spite of precautions, several people learned where he was and a cordon of waiters had to hold the crowds outside the door. Finally a waiter came in and begged Mr. Chaplin to see a

(Continued on page 89)

Randy Scott discusses his personal plans

HE'S GOING TO BE Married

By Martha Kerr

RANDOLPH SCOTT spoke definitely.

"I'm going to be married. I've been jilted twice. I've had my heart broken. I'm going to stay married once I enter the holy estate. I'm not going to marry an actress. I'm not going to marry for a pretty face. I'm going to marry for companionship, not sex appeal.

"There is no such thing as 'love at first sight' for me. It is more important to me to feel respect for my wife than to feel emotional attraction. I want a living woman, not a pastime. I want a home, not a hotel. I want children, not lap dogs. I want stability."

And with these twelve or more headlines Randy Scott prefaced a talk which revealed the heart of a man.

We sat together, in a closed office, on the Paramount lot. And as I listened to the tall, bronzed Virginian talk it was difficult for me to believe that this was a business office. I could sense the old country place near Orange, Virginia, where Randy and his brothers and sisters were raised on "Shortenin' Bread." I could visualize the kindly father, an engineer and a gentle husband and father. I could imagine the sweet mother counselling with her sons.

When I came to, Randy was saying, "The title 'He's Going to be Married,' may be misleading at first sight, when I tell you that I have not yet found the woman. I wish I could. I want to be married. I wish that I could walk out of this door and find her there, waiting for me. But I won't," Randy said, with a smile, though his level gray eyes under that crown of russet gold hair were serious. "I won't because I wasn't trained that way. I was brought up very conservatively, you see. My mother instilled into me, into all of us, from infancy, the importance of self-control. She gave us a belief in dignity. She gave us to understand that we must control our emotions, discipline our impulses. She was gentle, but she was firm. I have not outgrown her teachings. In some minor ways I have had to conform to the change in the times. But, basically, I believe what she taught me to believe, and the sanctity of marriage is one of those beliefs.

Randy's next will be "Follow the Fleet."

I THINK that one of the real reasons why I have not married before this is because of what I have observed about marriage here in Hollywood.

"I said that I've been jilted twice. I have. Practically at the altar.

"The first girl was from my home town in Virginia. We went together for eleven years. She was the only girl I saw constantly all the time. And I believed, with all my heart and soul, that we would be married. So did she. I was terribly in love with her. I loved her as we love, perhaps, only once in a lifetime. The first love, you know. One that we never forget.

"I worshipped her. She was tall and very fair and utterly charming. She was old-fashioned in her ideals and modern in her love of life. She didn't smoke or drink, not because she disapproved of these things for others but because she disliked them for herself. She played the violin exquisitely. She played tennis. She loved golf and football and dancing. She was in love with life, and I—I was in love with her.

"There was only one tiny cloud on our horizon. Her mother had ambitions for her. I knew this and feared it. And constantly and sweetly she reassured me. She told me that she was aware of the plans and hopes her mother had. And she would seem to accede to them but, of course, nothing would come of them, for we had loved each other all our lives, hadn't we, and so we would be married. I was not to be silly about it at all.

"Then, I went to Florida and stayed there for two months. When I came home we had a date to go to a football game together. On the drive home, when the two of us were alone, I suddenly said to her, 'You are engaged to ——.' And she said only, 'How did you know?'

"I couldn't explain how I knew, how my heart had eyes, but I did know, and now she has been married for several years and perhaps it is better so.

"I thought that my heart was broken. I still think that it was. But broken hearts, like broken china, can be mended and if, through the slight (Continued on page 78)

Norman Scott Barnes, Joan's male heart interest.

SHE'S SINGLE Again

By William F. French

Joan did an about-face when marriage failed

ON THE NIGHT of the preview of "Shipmates Forever," a mysterious blonde stole the spotlight. Stepping from a car in the parking lot directly behind Warner Brothers' Hollywood Theatre, she gave the preview crowd the shock of the month.

She was a deliciously feminine, fashionably dressed, gorgeous girl that even the sharp-eyed autograph hounds (who can ferret a star out of any sort of make-up or disguise) were scratching their heads to tab.

"Who's that?" demanded one jumpy youngster, whose two well-thumbed, thick autograph books gave evidence of wide experience at previews, premieres and local rendezvous.

"Looks like Joan Blondell, only a lot classier," replied another.

"She's taller than Joan," announced a third, as they crowded closer. "Maybe it's her sister, Gloria."

We paused. She looked like Joan, only different. A lot different. For one thing, this girl did seem taller, and a lot snappier and more attractive.

We stopped. This was a mystery that had to be solved, for the girl had a carriage our easy-going Joan had never dreamed of. We stared and gasped.

THIS WAS Joan Blondell. A sly grin at us as she passed proved that. It was really Joan, but what a Joan! She was plumb gorgeous.

And the next day Warners' studios were buzzing with speculations and explanations of what had bitten their friendly, good-natured and somewhat careless Joan. Making up to knock the villagers' eyes out was not one of this blonde's weaknesses. Heretofore she had always been content to shuffle along in something comfortable, and to let the other girls do all the dazzling. So Joan's sudden bursting into bloom had everybody a little dizzy, though all were agreed that if divorce could accomplish a miracle like this it was worth looking into.

Of course, Joan's divorce is not the cause of this remarkable change in her, but she admits that the sudden awakening that accompanied that unhappy episode is directly responsible for it.

"I must admit," confesses Joan, "that I am looking at things quite differently than I did two months ago. Since then I have found out that I was all wrong, that I had to do an about-face, that I had to change my viewpoint, and a lot of other things, too.

"The difference

(Continued on page 74)

Joan Blondell, 1936 Model, has taken a new lease on life.

ADVENTURE'S NOT AN

Errol is a real

He's roamed the world for thrills, but finds acting worth its pay only!

HE'S ONLY twenty-six years old and into those twenty-six years, he's crammed more adventuring than you can find in the lives of any hundred ordinary men.

It was in the north of Ireland that Errol Flynn squalled his first challenge to the world, on a June day of 1909. His father, professor of biology at Queen's University in Belfast, looked upon the infant, marvelled at the processes of the science he taught, and wondered how much the baby had inherited of the traits of its ancestor, Fletcher Christian, who led the mutiny on the Bounty. Papa was soon to see, for young Errol wasn't yet out of his 'teens before he was a swaggering roistering, come-what-may and be-damned to-the consequences adventurer.

Still in his 'teens, he started out to sampl what there was in life to make it tangy. I 1928, he went to Amsterdam, as one of th British Olympic boxing team. There h whaled the stuffing out of assorted lads c various nationalities. It made him feel goo And that taste of the world made him wa more—the next thing he knew, he found hin self over in New Guinea, of all places, whe head hunters still eat human flesh and sho poisoned darts into white people. He ask

BEHOLD Dietrich

You'd like the witty, mischievous Marlene whom only her close friends really know

By Hilary Lynn

Above, a romantic close-up with Cooper in "Desire."

MARLENE DIETRICH is a vibrant personality, sparkling almost as brilliantly as the jewels she loves to wear. First and foremost, she has a grand sense of humor. She could live by her wit alone—without ever having to depend upon her beauty to fascinate. Too bad you can't meet her in person!

I'm not indulging in the favorite Hollywood pastime of telling you that "for the first time," the real Dietrich will be revealed. You will see Dietrich as she really is. In other words, through the eyes of those intimates who were allowed, to share her life-apart-in-Hollywood. People who saw her day and night during that period when she built a wall about herself and pretended, in between pictures, that she actually was living that sophisticated, high-tension life she had left abroad.

The make-believe drama which Marlene played in that special salon of hers, made brilliant by her presence and her tantalizing wit, was helped by the fact that none of her friends spoke English. Only to those who understand Marlene Dietrich's mother tongue has been made known the power of her personality—something, I am sure, never mentioned in anything you've read about her.

This remote-from-Hollywood life was helped also by the constant interchange of cablegrams between her and her family and friends abroad. There were never less than twenty a day. And whenever the illusion began to grow thin, Marlene would telephone across the sea and have a long conversation about trivialities—the sort of talk that goes on between friends who are sure to see one another every day. On one of these occasions she even asked her friend to close the window of her apartment because the roar of the foreign city's street cars was too loud in Hollywood!

Those privileged ones, who were allowed to see her true personality, will rave by the hour of her keen brain and dazzling wit.

"If Marlene could write as well as she can talk, she would be considered one of the most important writers of this age," her closest friend told me. "The comments she makes are worthy of the best wags of the day. Unfortunately, most of them are untranslatable because she always employs her native slang and colloquial expressions, and these can never be transferred from one language to another. But if you speak her language, you have the desire to take down her conversations in shorthand. Her graphic epigrams are smarter than the wisecracks of the most sophisticated Broadway comedy.

"However, you have to suppress your desire and hide your pencil because Marlene would consider that impulse as foolish as the adjectives which writers used to describe her.

"For example, she remarked of a certain rather crude Hollywood director, who was putting on ridiculous airs because his sudden success had gone to his head:

" 'He looks like a hay-seed with a monocle in his eye!'

"And about a gaudy feminine star, who had just lost her husband, and wasn't being very convincing about her 'great bereavement':

" 'Here comes the Merry Widow again!'

"One of her grandest little jokes," he continued, "is to suddenly break off in the middle (Continued on page 88)

George won't act where he can't breathe fresh air. That's why he's made hoss operas a business. He and Marguerite Churchill are bringing up daughter, Orin, with travelling ideas, too!

HE'S A TRAVELLIN' MAN

By Franc Dillon

George O'Brien can't stay put, so the world's his riding range

A GREAT director and an eager, young actor walked across the old Fox lot to the stage where the boy was to make a test for his first important role. What he lacked in experience, he more than made up for in appearance and he attracted more than one approving glance as he swung his lithe body easily along. He was being given this opportunity for two reasons: First, everyone around the studio liked him and, second, having tested every available leading man in Hollywood without finding the right one, they were jolly well up against it and ready to give any young man a trial. Especially if that young man were good looking and six feet tall.

"You haven't a chance, you know that, George," said the director, as they walked along.

"Yes, I know," George replied.

"You mustn't set your heart on it," the elder man continued kindly. "You know we've tried out about fifty fellows, all experienced actors."

"Yes, I know," George repeated stubbornly, as he set his lips in a firm, straight line and squared his shoulders as though to shake off any doubt in his own mind.

The following day it was announced that George O'Brien was the choice of William Fox for the leading role in "The Iron Horse," the most important picture to be made by Fox that year, but up to the last minute there was dubious shaking of the wise heads of the studio. He was so inexperienced and it was such an important picture. But they came to a decision at last.

"Well, we'll kill him or cure him in the first scene," said Director John Ford. "If he gets through the first day he'll do."

The first scene they made showed George swinging off a galloping horse onto a speeding train. He did it and the rest is history. George appeared in many important Fox pictures after that and in "Sunrise" established himself as a really fine actor.

But he was irked by the confining walls of the studio. He liked the outdoors. He could ride any horse that had four legs and, due to his athletic ability, had done quite a lot of doubling for stars in dangerous stunts. It was a natural sequence that when the Fox Company decided to make a series of Western pictures, George should be chosen as the star.

Audiences all over the country, fed up with too much sex and too little scenery in their screen fare, began to follow the George O'Brien pictures and he became one of the most popular of the cowboy stars. And although Hollywood producers have been repeating, with monotonous regularity, the verdict that "Westerns are out. The public is tired of 'Horse Operas'," George has kept right on making them, year after year. He has not only held his fans but made thousands of new ones with each picture.

Having had his fling at the (Continued on page 81)

PLAY YOUR HUNCHES

It's the way Merle Oberon bet on stardom!

by Dorothy Herzog

IT IS some 7,000 miles from Hollywood to a city in India named Darjeeling. Merle Oberon is the only actress in motion pictures who has made that long trek successfully. She traveled by way of London to click first in British, then in Hollywood pictures.

If the truth be known, Merle comes from even a greater distance than Darjeeling, India. That was but one stopping off place in her journey to the top. She was born in "down under"—in Hobart, Tasmania, an island off the coast of Australia. At the age of seven, she went on to India. At sixteen, she continued on to London. At 23, she arrived in Hollywood.

But if you want the real, inside picture of Merle Oberon—and she has never given it before—you'll have to travel back with her to Darjeeling, a small, slumbrous town high in the mountains—far from the bedlam of automobiles, street-cars, any sort of noise.

It is the darkest hour before dawn. A party of five people venture from a house in the more populated section of the town. Five horses have been saddled. The party mounts. They gallop toward the mountains.

No one in the party speaks. No sound is heard but the sounds of the night and the cozy clump of horses' hoofs. Forming a circle of phosphorous white before them is the snow-line of the mountains. It is the only light in the deep darkness. It is cold—very cold. The party reaches the ridge toward which they have been ascending. They quietly wait in the silence for the dawn. They face to the north and to the east. To the north they gaze into the mystery that is the "top of the world," the country of Tibet. To the east, they look to China and the direction of the sunrise to come.

A bird suddenly calls through the stillness. Another. Then, in the east, a ribbon of light melts through the blue-black sky. In swift beauty, the flowing light etches its pageantry of warm coloring through the heavens. The darkness retreats. A dazzling halo heralds the rising of the sun. Majestically, its rising is orchestrated by the singing of the birds, the cloudless ball of red ascends above the emblazoned horizon and a scene of mountainous grandeur is revealed in all its vital aloneness.

Merle Oberon has never forgotten that dawn.

"Though I've never been back since I left, some years ago," she said.

She left because a picture came to her with that dawn, a picture she is even yet not fully aware of.

"I left," she put it, "because of a hunch."

"And that?" I asked. (Continued on page 72)

Merle is soon to be seen in "These Three."

What have these new favorites that older stars

(Above) Hard work and training have made Eleanor Powell as graceful as she is. Next, the charmingly wistful Luise Rainer.

SYLVIA'S ADVICE TO

THEY SAY comparisons are odious—or is it odorous? I never can remember. Anyway, odious or odorous, I have a few comparisons on my mind and you know by this time I have a habit of speaking that mind of mine. These comparisons are going to do you some good and give you some hints, so pay attention, babies.

I've been going to lots of movies lately, partly because it's my job and partly because I've heard such tales about four newcomers to the screen that I had to go and see for myself.

"See 'Broadway Melody'!" they told me. "Eleanor Powell is marvelous!" Well, I had seen Eleanor Powell dance and while I admitted that her feet are the slickest that ever donned tap shoes, I wondered how the screen would treat her.

"See 'I Dream Too Much'!" they said. "Lily Pons' voice would win applause from a wooden Indian!" I said I'd heard her at the Metropolitan in New York—I will admit good music is one of my weaknesses—and while I had beaten my palms numb at her skyscraper notes, I wondered how she'd look on the screen.

"See Luise Rainer!" I was commanded. "She's new, lack? What have they which you haven't?

Left, Lily Pons offers a lesson to the pint-sized gals, who are too thin in spots, and if you have a figure like Rosalind Russell's (next) you must watch your hips.

By Madame Sylvia

THE "NEW GIRLS"

she's lovely, she's entrancing!" Uh-huh—I thought back upon Anna Sten—remember all the raves about her? And the girl from Austria—what was her name? And that girl from Germany—isn't it terrible, I can't remember her name either. And all the other lovely ones who were supposed to have made Europe forget all about its war debts. Fräulein Rainer, however, was supposed to be different.

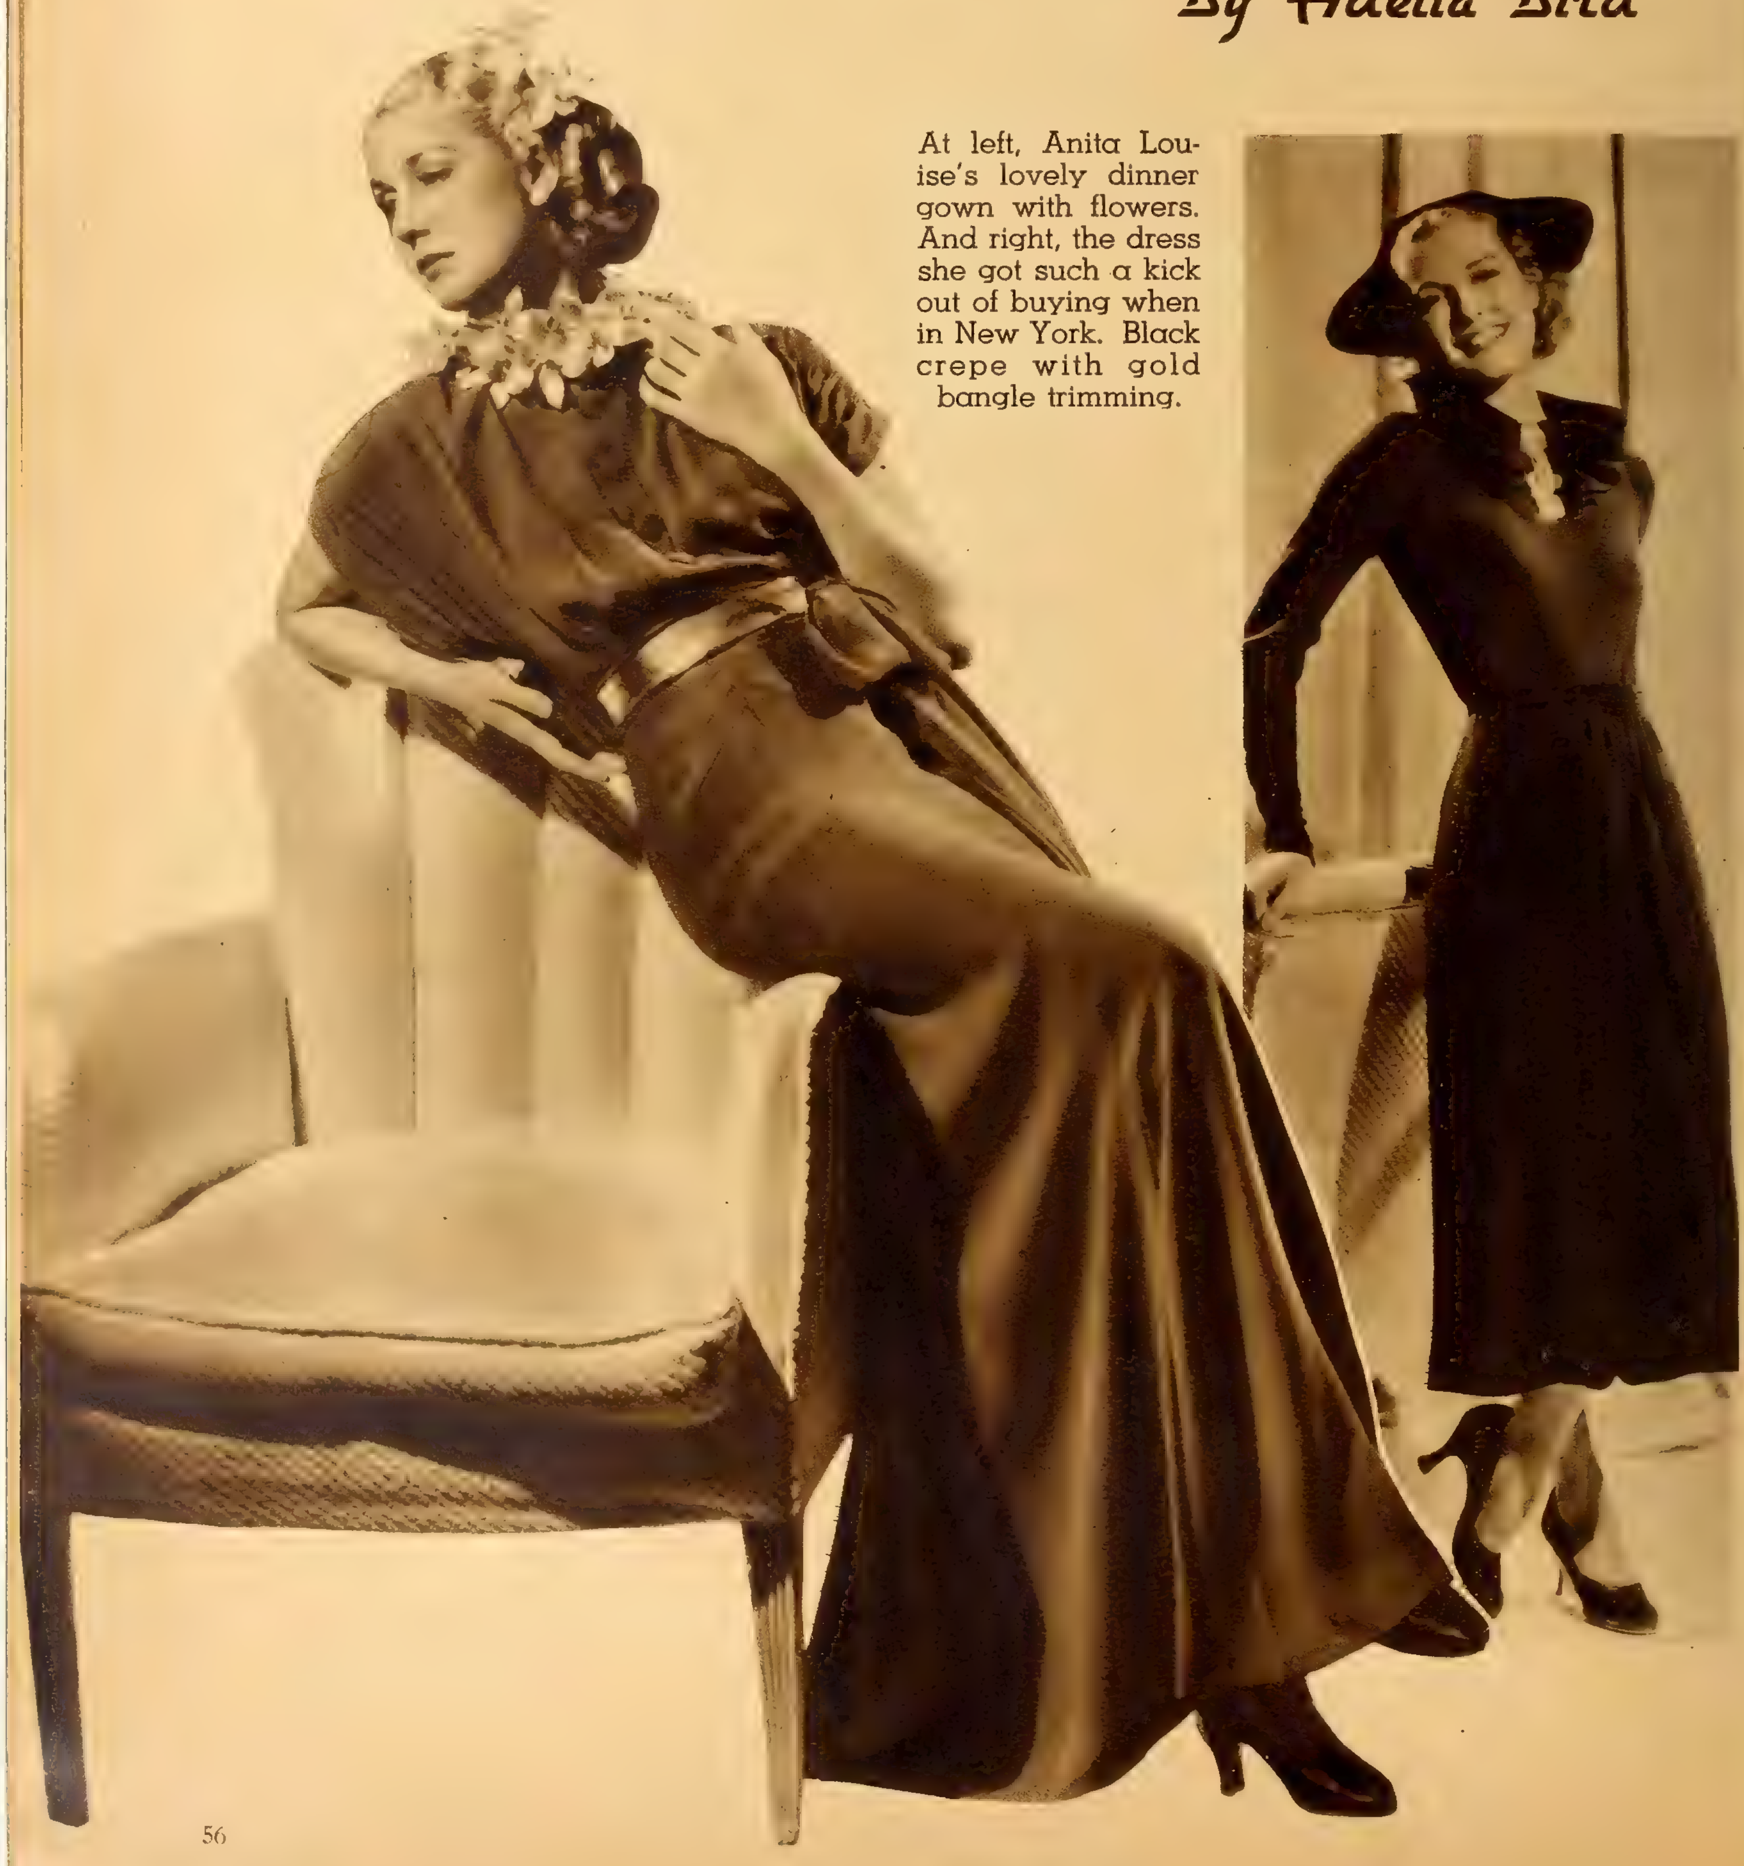
And then there were those who said, "See Rosalind Russell! Smart, chic, slim—ah, Rosalind will go places!" But I had them there—I had seen Rosalind, in person and on the screen, and I am all set to agree that she will go places, if she watches carefully each step she takes on the way to those places.

While I was watching Eleanor Powell—and having a swell time, too—I kept thinking, "There's a girl named Ruby Keeler who can tap dance like a streak. She has a nice figure and pretty legs. But what is it that Eleanor has which Ruby lacks? Well, there is trained bodily grace, for one thing, but, of course, that comes from Eleanor's rigid ballet training. While her feet do everything but spell "Hooray for (Continued on page 76)

WHAT THEY LIKE

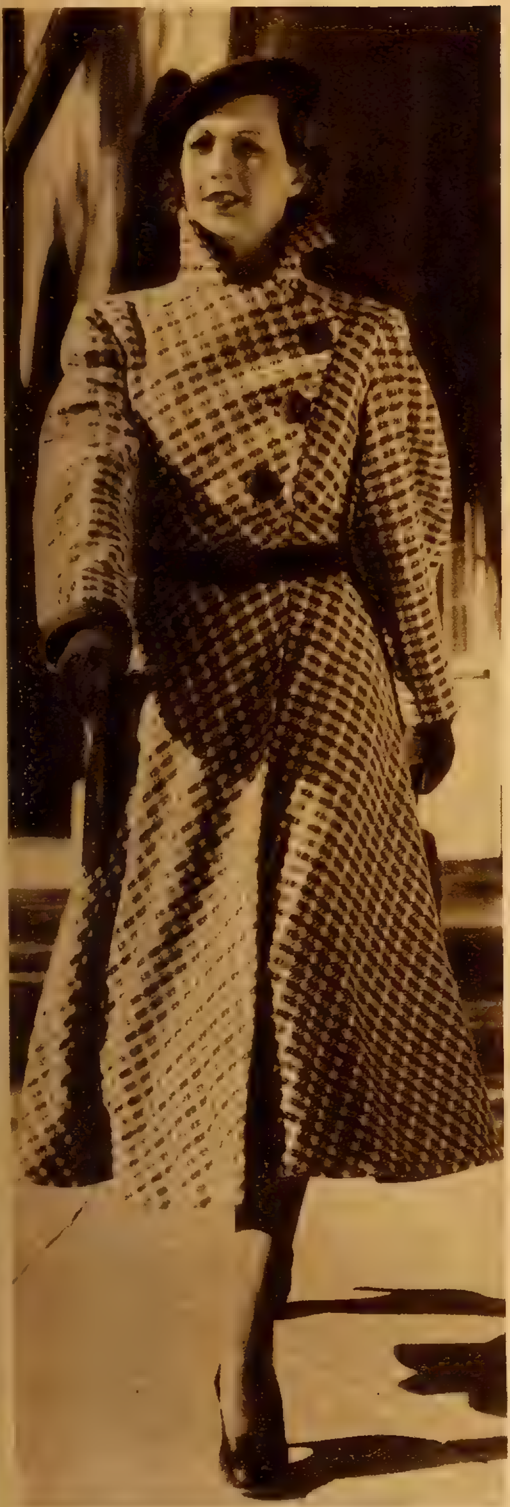
Anita Louise, Betty Furness and Jane Froman talk about their pet clothes hobbies and aversions

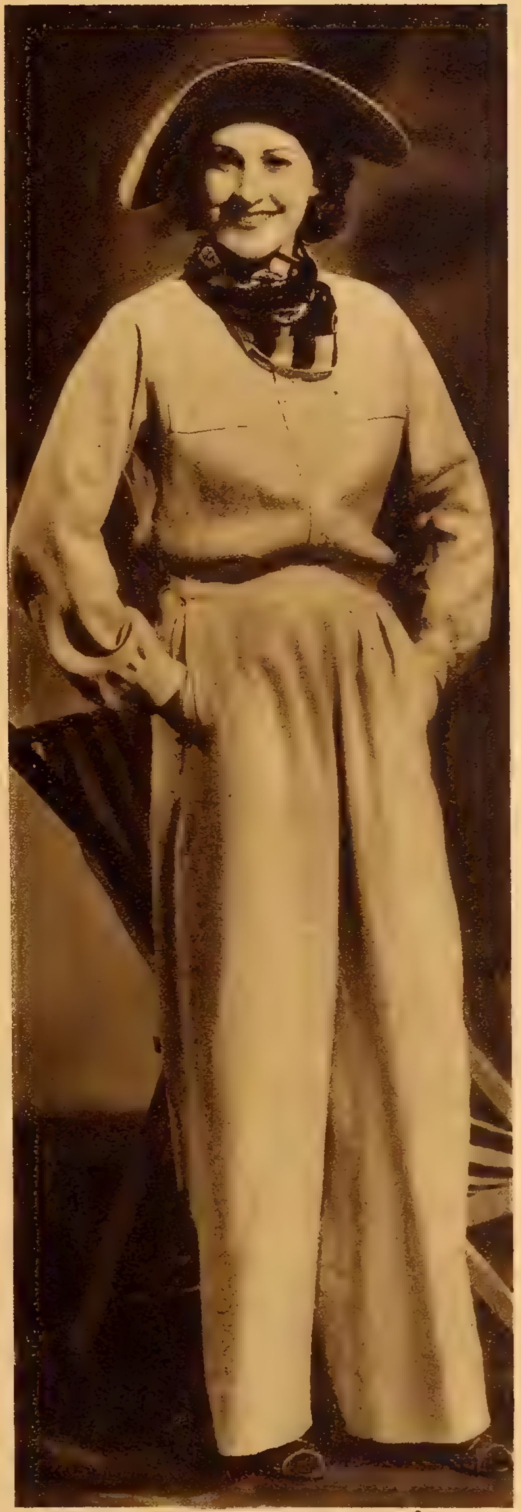
By Adelia Bird

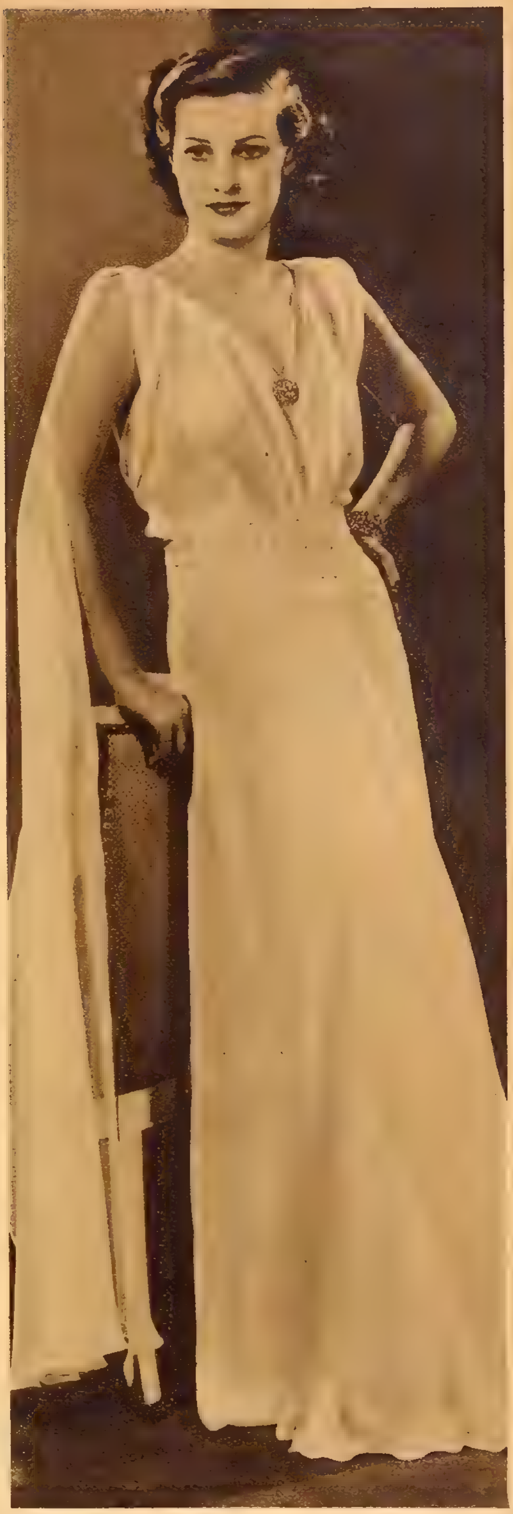


At left, Anita Louise's lovely dinner gown with flowers. And right, the dress she got such a kick out of buying when in New York. Black crepe with gold bangle trimming.

TO WEAR







Left to right, you see three of Jane Froman's favorite costumes. First the checked wool coat she wore in "Stars Over Broadway" and which she bought afterwards for her personal wardrobe. Next, two-piece rustic linen pajamas to go back to California with her. The pockets are uniquely placed high on the blouse. And isn't the beach hat giddy? And last, one of her pet evening gowns of graceful white chiffon.

I HAD a date with Anita Louise for three o'clock at her hotel. I thought that we would just sit and talk about clothes—her likes and dislikes. But no, Anita Louise was looking for a Dubonnet red afternoon dress and nothing would do but that we must shop for it that very afternoon.

On only a brief visit to New York for the premiere of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," she was using every spare moment, between personal appearances and interviews, in relentlessly tracking down her red dress. You'd have to know Anita to understand how seriously she takes her clothes. There's no hit-and-miss system with her, she knows beforehand what she wants and she'll go without rather than to buy a color, fabric or line that doesn't become her.

When we were out of earshot of Anita's mother, she confided to me that we were heading for an exclusive and expensive shop that her mother frowned upon for her.

"We'll just look," she said, "because I can't afford to spend as much as they probably would charge for a simple afternoon dress. But I would love to have just one dress from there!"

I suggested that they had a debutante department where the prices might be a little lower. She doubted it, but anyway we soon were in the dress salon, where models were trailing up and down the room in very stunning costumes. Seated on a lounge, with practically everyone in the room staring at us, Anita carefully explained what she wanted, a very simple afternoon dress in Dubonnet red. Dresses came forth in every imaginable shade of wine red, but not in Dubonnet.

"Wouldn't you think that it would be easy to find a dress in the particular shade I want, especially when it is so smart this season?" wailed Anita. "This has gone on for days and I have tried one place after another, but nothing comes of it."

I was amused at her sad plight because so often I had had the same experience myself and had finally compromised with something else rather than go on with the tiring search. I imagine you have, too, haven't you? But not Anita. We looked at a dozen dresses while the whole sales force became increasingly upset at not being able to please their young Hollywood client. Finally, with regrets, we departed. I allowed as how her mother would be relieved to know that she hadn't succumbed to any of the dresses, for frankly I was rather thrown by the price-tags on the simple little models. Anita Louise grinned.

"Really, you don't think for a minute that I buy expensive clothes all the time, do you?" she asked. "I buy good things, but not a lot of them. The reason that I want to spend a little more on this particular dress is because I don't expect to buy another this winter. I wear so many plain dark colors, like navy blue and black, that once in awhile I get a kick out of buying a dress in some color that is smart just for a season, like this lovely Dubonnet shade. (Continued on page 86)

Betty Furness joins the chiffon worshippers; Anita Louise and Jane Froman are the other two. Grecian simplicity in line with the modern dash of a gold kid belt. Her diamond mesh bag is smart. And below, cocktails in the Savoy Room in blue and silver metal shot crepe, a gay fuchsia hat with feather flowers and a new Schiaparelli bag. Also her pet sports jacket and a new fob scarf pin.

DISCRIMINATING WOMEN ARE TALKING . . . ABOUT CAMEL'S COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

Miss Mary de Mumm

"Camel's flavor is so mild that you enjoy the last one as much as the first. In the enjoyment of smoking and in its effect, Camels certainly make a great difference."

Miss Vivian Dixon

"I always smoke Camels—they're so much milder and smoother. And I never get tired of their flavor. Camels never give me that 'I've been smoking too much' feeling."

Miss Mimi Richardson

"Smoking a Camel is the quickest way I know to relieve fatigue. Camels always refresh me. And I love their taste. They seem to be milder than other cigarettes."

Mrs. Langdon Post

"Enthusiasm is very contagious. Look at the way the smart younger set are all smoking Camels. I think I know why. Camels never affect your nerves."

You either like Camels tremendously or they cost you nothing

We have a vast confidence in Camels. First, we know the tobaccos of which they are made—and what a difference those costlier tobaccos make in mildness and flavor. Then, too, we know the genuine enthusiasm so many women have for Camels.

We are, naturally, most anxious to have you try Camels—to smoke a sufficient number to be able really to judge them. And of course it's only fair that such an experiment be made at our risk. If you don't like Camels, they cost you nothing. If you do like them—and we're sure you will—their flavor, their mildness, the new pleasure you'll get from smoking them, will make this experiment worth your while.

We invite you to read and accept our money-back offer.

Money-Back Invitation to try Camels

Smoke 10 fragrant Camels. If you don't find them the mildest, best-flavored cigarettes you ever smoked, return the package with the rest of the cigarettes in it to us at any time within a month from this date, and we will refund your full purchase price, plus postage.

(Signed)

R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY
Winston-Salem, North Carolina

CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND CIGARETTES
CHOICE QUALITY

© 1936, R. J. Reynolds Tob. Co.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

Love Call

The romantic Eddy-MacDonald team could not have gotten a better break than to have "Rose Marie" as the follow-up to their triumphs in "Naughty Marietta." Nelson, as the stalwart Northwest Mountie, and Jeanette, as the Canadian gal, are just what the fans ordered. All your favorite tunes from this beautiful operetta are resung in the MacDonald treble and the Eddy baritone—especially "Indian Love Call," which never fails to thrill despite years of repetition.

"Ashamed of BLACKHEADS!"
"PORES larger every day!"
"Bothered by BLEMISHES!"

Miss Phyllis Konta, whose fresh, glowing beauty startled society at her debut, says: "I use Pond's Cold Cream—how could I have blackheads or blemishes!"

3 Common Skin Faults

with the same Starting Place—Your Under Skin

Miss Eleanor Roosevelt

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt of Washington, D. C. Her skin is fine textured, delicate. "Pond's Cold Cream," she says, "freshens and tones my skin. For years it has kept my pores fine as can be."

ASK any girl what skin fault bothers her most—A surprise, if it isn't one of these! Blackheads and blemishes are forever coming, once they get a start. Every new one, a new embarrassment. And who does not fret over coarse pores?

The three commonest skin faults—and the ones that show up most. Any one of them can spoil the prettiest face!

All three have the same secret beginnings—in the under layers of your skin! Learn to strike at them there, where they start—and you have the key to getting rid of them.

Underneath, tiny oil glands are overworked. They give off a thick clogging oil. Pores stretch. Dirt settles in them. Blackheads! . . . Later, blemishes.

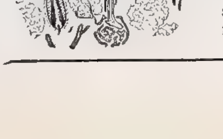
But it's simple to fight off all three. You can rouse that faulty underskin, keep little glands, nerves and cells functioning healthily—with the regular use of Pond's Cold Cream. For, Pond's specially processed oils sink deep—loosen that clogging matter. As you pat it in smartly, you reach your underskin—stimulate it deep down!

Every Night, bring out the dirt, make-up, and skin secretions with Pond's Cold Cream. Wipe it all off. Now apply more cream. Pat it in hard—to get at that neglected underskin!

Every Morning, and during the day, repeat this treatment. Your skin comes softer every time. Powder goes on beautifully.

Keep up these Pond's patting treatments. As blackheads soften, take a clean tissue—press them right out. Now blemishes stop coming. Your skin becomes finer textured. Your whole face takes on new winning charm!

Pond's Cold Cream is pure. Germs cannot live in it.



How they begin

Below that dark top layer, oil glands, nerves, cells must be active to keep your outer skin fine, smooth, clear. When they fail, skin faults start!

SPECIAL 9-TREATMENT TUBE

and 3 other Pond's Beauty Aids

POND'S, Dept. C-50, Clinton, Conn.

Rush special tube of Pond's Cold Cream, enough for 9 treatments, with generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ to cover postage and packing.

Name________________________________

Street________________________________

City____________________State________

Copyright, 1936, Pond's Extract Company

BRIGHT EYE DEAS

by Jane Heath

NINE women out of ten turn their backs to the light because they think it unflattering; but make this test; you'll never do it again!

First, make up your face. Then take your KURLASH and curl the lashes of one eye. Touch them with LASHTINT and put a little SHADETTE on the upper lid. Now take your hand mirror and seek the full light of your brightest window. You'll find that one side of your face seems infinitely better looking . . . softer, lovelier in coloring, with starry eye and sweeping lashes.

You'll know then why the loveliest women use KURLASH daily. ($1 at good stores.)

At the same window you'll have a chance to see how naturally LASHTINT darkens and beautifies your eyelashes . . . without looking "made-up" either! It comes in 4 shades, in a special sponge-fitted case to insure even applications. $1, also. And the same holds true of SHADETTE. Even in the daytime it isn't obvious—just glamourous. In 10 subtle new shades at just 75c each.

• Have you tried TWISSORS—the new tweezers with scissor handles—marvelously efficient—25c.

Write JANE HEATH for advice about eye beauty. Give your coloring for personal beauty plan. Address Dept. MM-3.

Kurlash

The Kurlash Company, Rochester, N. Y. The Kurlash Company of Canada, at Toronto, 3.

Adventure's Not An Act With Flynn

(Continued from page 49)

liked it, and decided that when he went back to civilization, he'd tackle the stage or screen. But first, he had something else he wanted to do—some pearl fishing. He made some money at it and got enough fun to be able to write a book about it. He's doing that now.

Right in the middle of his pearl-fishing, he got a cable from the film company he'd hired his boat out to. They said they could use him at Tahiti. He sold his pearl business and went to Tahiti where he discovered he had a role in the British version of "Mutiny on the Bounty." This isn't to be confused with the American-made picture. It was just an English quickie and it's never been shown in this country. "Thank the patron saints!" says Flynn.

He liked acting, and when the picture was done, he sailed for England. There he got some stage work, had a film test made, came to Hollywood—and now here he is, playing one of the season's finest roles, "Captain Blood," and is married to Lili Damita.

He met up with Lili in the middle of the Atlantic ocean. . . . !

You know how it is on shipboard, don't you? There was a moon, shining full and sensuous—and there was Lili Damita—young, alluring and vivacious. Lili superbly aloof, however, with that disdainful arrogance that is characteristic of her, giving not one of the shipboard Romeos a tumble. Not one, that is, until . . .

"It was her darned arrogance that made me hopping mad," Errol told me. "I'd worshipped her in Paris, though she didn't know I was alive. Then when I met her on shipboard, I thought it was my big chance. So I got her alone. And then that darned high-hat stuff. I tell you, I never wanted to see the stuck-up little so-and-so again, ever! And I told her so. She hated me just as cordially. We never got within ten yards of each other again, the whole voyage."

AND Lili told me, afterward, "Yes, of a certainement, I hated thees fellow. He was so—what you call heem?—so cocky, so stuck-up, thees young fellow w'at nobody even heard of before! He was unbearable. I nevair wanted to see heem again, evair!!"

. . . and so what? Well, so six months later these two, who hated each other, eloped from Hollywood to Yuma because they were in such a hurry to get married that they couldn't wait the three days California interposes between license and wedding.

That's the kind of a guy Flynn is. He takes a gal who hates him on sight and makes her marry him.

How'd he get the "Captain Blood" role? Well, Warners had been trying out a lot of Hollywood leading men for the part, but none of them had the fire, the recklessness, the to-hell-with-things air that they wanted the character to have. Flynn, who'd come over on one of those wishy-washy contracts, itched for a chance at the role, but nobody even thought of him.

"I'd have given a leg to play it, but I didn't have a chance. I was an unknown," he explained. And then somebody saw him swaggering down one of the streets on the Warner Burbank lot. They saw him rolling along, his eyes sparkling with an indefinable something that has died, long since, in most Hollywood actor's eyes. Some big shot, it was who saw him, and the next thing Flynn knew, he was being tested for the role. He got it!

And so here I was, in the green room of the cafe on the Warner lot, talking to him. His hair was long, for the role. He came stomping in, hitched up his leather knee-breeches, picked up a menu, and beckoned a waitress. I rather expected him to bellow something like, "Yo ho ho! Come hither, my pretty wench, and bring me a sizzling joint of beef and a bottle of rum, and bestir your pins, lass!"

INSTEAD, he lifted eyes which were paradoxical in that they snapped with a masculine vigor and fire, and yet were actually beautiful! He turned them on the waitress, and she melted into a fluttery smile.

"What," he asked, "is this egg foo yung?"

"It's a Chinese omelette," she explained, "with bamboo shoots, almonds and herbs and . . ."

A shudder ran up and down "Captain Blood." He gasped.

"Enough, enough!—er—bring me an egg-yolk, a raw egg yolk—some ketchup—and some worcestershire sauce. . ."

She scurried away. I grinned. I know what egg yolk, worcestershire sauce and ketchup betoken. Flynn smiled wanly at me. "Uh-huh," he admitted, "it was that sort of a night."

After he had swallowed the raw yolk with the burney sauce, he felt better. He rounded out some empty spots in his life story. He told me of the time he and a pal joined up with the Hong Kong Volunteers for the Chinese trouble, a few years ago.

"We thought we'd find some fighting and some looting and some—well, never mind. But instead, they made us shovel snow for five days on end, so we deserted and went to Manila, where there isn't any snow, ever."

He roamed the world in his talk. I asked him, finally, how Lili liked his wanderlust.

"She doesn't," he said.

"And what are you going to do about it?" I asked.

"Well—I'm going to stay here, for a while. There's so much money to be made in Hollywood. I want to make enough to be free of the petty tyrannies of not having it. I want to go places, without having to travel third class. But I do want to go places."

"You can't go places and make a success here, at the same time," I pointed out.

"I know it, damn it," he growled, and that faraway look shone in his eyes. "But after all, life is only what you get out of it in the living, isn't it? I do want money but I won't pay too much of myself to get it. I hate discipline. Time clocks are abhorrent to me.

"But—bosh!—I'll be good for a few years, I think. I hate the very sound of 'settling down,' but I've got responsibilities now! And so I've got to settle down—for a while, anyway.

"Lili says she'll go with me, to faraway places, some time in the years to come—after I've made good here. She'll go with me to India, where she has some important friends. She's never been there. I have, but I traveled third class. Only punks travel third class there—and natives. This time, I want to go back,

(Continued on page 64)

"Girls with soft smooth skin have appeal"...

says
MARGARET SULLAVAN

YOU want the charm men find so irresistible. Margaret Sullavan, lovely star of Universal's "Next Time We Love," tells you how to win it.

Don't let Cosmetic Skin steal away good looks—romance!

"USE all the cosmetics you wish," Margaret Sullavan advises. This charming star knows it's easy to guard against Cosmetic Skin if you remove cosmetics thoroughly.

It's when stale rouge and powder choke your pores that Cosmetic Skin develops . . . dullness, tiny blemishes, enlarging pores. "I avoid Cosmetic Skin by removing make-up with Lux Toilet Soap," Margaret Sullavan says.

Lux Toilet Soap's ACTIVE lather goes pore-deep, removes every trace of dust, dirt and stale cosmetics. It's made to keep skin lovely—and it does! That's why 9 out of 10 screen stars use this soap.

LUX
LUX
TOILET SOAP

(Continued from page 62)

first class, and show them. Lili says she'll go with me in a few years. And to Australia, too. She rather imagines when she gets within a mile of Australia, they'll start shooting arrows at her. I want to show her Australia. Maybe New Guinea, too. She's heard a lot about it.

"But I don't mind telling you, that if I didn't have responsibilities I could go right now, couldn't I?"

And he scratched the sole of one foot with the tip of the other.

If You Are Jilted—Then What?

(Continued from page 37)

fever. I was anemic. My glands played hob with me. My skin and hair were lifeless. My circulation was off. My blood count was down. I just didn't function, that's all.

"And so, the first and most important thing to do after heartbreak is what you should do after any shock, any illness—build up the body. Get your health back. That's what I did. Systematically. Deliberately. Under doctor's orders.

"Oh, there were the first few, crazy weeks of bitterness, of course. The natural, melodramatic reaction of a sick person thinking I'd be better off dead, considering the relative advantage of poison, guns, dizzy roofs. After that, I got down to the business of convalescence."

I knew something, as you who read may know something, of the tragic tale of young Wendy. The newspapers carried accounts, mostly garbled. The young heir to many American millions . . . the pretty girl who came to America to marry him . . . .

SOME of the details I learned that day as Wendy talked. She was saying, "You know that I was born in Hong Kong, China? Dad's a K. C. there—King's Counsellor. Rather a jolly thing to be. My sister and I were born there. I lived there until I was eleven. All I wanted in those dreamy days was to look pretty and to have—a baby. I've always wanted to have a baby, more than I've wanted anything else in my life. I was forever dressing up, as a child, in scarves and bits of lace and things and posing in front of mirrors. And I always posed with a doll in my arms.

"When I was eleven I was sent to London to enter the Convent of the Assumption. Five years there and then to finishing school in Lausanne, Switzerland. When I returned to London, Mother and I were lunching one day at the Savoy Grill. Have I mentioned that I believe in Fate? Oh, but absolutely! I have nothing much to do with my life. Fate is the supreme dictator. And so, that day at the Savoy, Alexander Korda was also lunching there. He saw me. He came to my table and asked me whether I had ever been in pictures. I told him never. He asked me whether I would like to be. I said 'So much.' And so I began by playing the feminine lead in 'Wedding Rehearsal' opposite Roland Young. Dad was furious. He will not admit, even today, that he sees me in pictures. But he does. I've found out! And so I made several pictures, over there in England. And then I fell in love! Oh, a dreadful, dizzy, crashing head-on fall.

"I'd known Bill for ages. I'd gone to his cousin's wedding in Paris. We'd all played around together, in London, in Paris and the Lido and Biarritz. It had all been terribly glamorous and exciting and colorful and sweet. He was a spoiled child, with a heart of gold, and I was a spoiled child who had given my heart away and didn't have one anymore—and most of my senses, too, I guess. I was terribly happy and really quite terribly in love and very terribly and triumphantly sure that we would soon be married and have a home and a baby of our own.

"And then he asked me to come to America. His mother was there. In New York. He would go ahead, he said. I should follow in a week's time. He would meet me at the pier. We'd be married.

"I broke my contract in order to go to America to be married. That didn't matter. Nothing mattered to me save that he had gone ahead to prepare for me, that he would be there waiting for me when my ship came into port.

"I had," laughed Wendy, not too gaily, "the most incredible trousseau. You see, everyone in Europe knew about us, knew that we were to be married. And everyone, of course, knew him—and his millions. And all of the leading jewellers, furriers, designers in London and Paris simply pleaded with me to help myself—and I was young and very greedy. Tomorrow I would be married with youth and love and gold and—a baby.

"And so I sailed. The ship drew into harbor. We docked. I stood, with my friends, all laughing and excited, at the ship's rail, looking over, confidently, for that one beloved face. He was not there. No one was there. No one, for me. He had not come to meet me. No one had come to meet me. But it wasn't possible! I'd had cables aboard ship. I had his letters, making our plans, telling me what ship to sail on, advising me that he had engaged a suite for me at a smart hotel.

"And he was not there. I knew, then.

AND then and there I did the best piece of acting I have ever done, or ever will do so long as I live. I laughed. I laughed, a lot. I said that, of course, I'd known it all along, known that he wouldn't be able to meet me, that he had been called out of town on urgent business (he, who never had any business, who even had police escorts when he went to football games, lest he be delayed in getting in). He'd cabled me the change of plans, I said. He was returning within the week. We would be married then. I'd just been a cut-up, not telling them sooner. I couldn't let them see my heart break, you know. That is a horrid sight.

"I went off alone, protesting gaily that it was quite all right, just what I'd expected, but just what I had known for days. I probably deceived no one, but I didn't 'lose face,' as the Chinese say.

"I didn't know a soul in New York. Only his friends whom I had known, casually, abroad. I didn't know where to go so I went to the hotel where the suite had been engaged for me. I had very little money. I was terrifically in debt. The furs and jewels I had been flattered into buying began to weigh me down like the solid gold they were to cost me—are still costing me. I had burned my bridges—my contract—behind me. I couldn't, I wouldn't go back.

"But why resurrect the whole horrid

(Continued on page 66)

Lovely hands

DEMAND A POLISH THAT DOESN'T STREAK OR PEEL

GLAZO'S AUTHENTIC COLORS WEAR 2 TO 4 DAYS LONGER

WHAT are the things that every smart woman expects of her nail polish? It must be outstandingly lovely! It must apply easily and evenly, without streaking. It must wear long and gracefully, without peeling or chipping—or your nails will soon look shabby.

Glazo's glorious colors are approved by beauty and fashion authorities. Glazo has solved the streaking problem—and it's the easiest to apply, with its special, improved brush. And because Glazo is so superior in quality, it wears days longer than you've been accustomed to expect.

Just try Glazo, and discover how lovely your hands can be. Formerly much more, Glazo Manicure Preparations are now only 20 cents each.

Just 20 CENTS

GLAZO
Liquid Polish
SHELL

GLAZO

. . The Smart Manicure

WHY SHOULDN'T I TAKE IT EASY ON WASHDAY WHEN THERE'S A MODERN SOAP THAT SOAKS CLOTHES WHITER AND BRIGHTER WITHOUT SCRUBBING OR BOILING? NOT ONLY THAT, BUT—

Rinso actually makes my clothes last 2 or 3 times longer. That's because Rinso's active suds safely lure out dirt and get clothes whiter and brighter without harsh washboard scrubbing. Even stubborn dirt on cuffs and edges yields to a little gentle rubbing between the fingers.

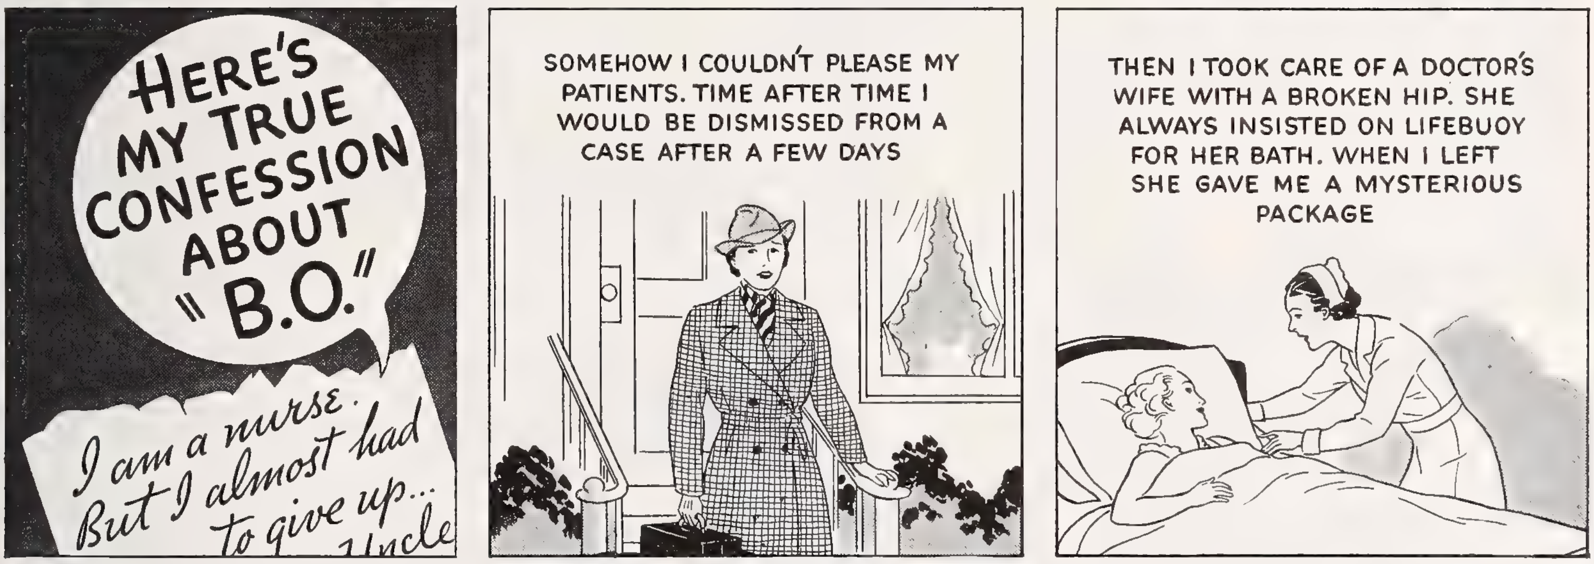
Rinso gives thick, sturdy, lasting suds—even in hardest water. No chips, bar soaps or powders ever needed. Wonderful suds for dishwashing and all cleaning. They get rid of grease like magic. Dishes don't have a greasy film left on them. And Rinso is kind to your hands—it doesn't make them red, rough looking. Try Rinso—and see!

Grand for washers, too

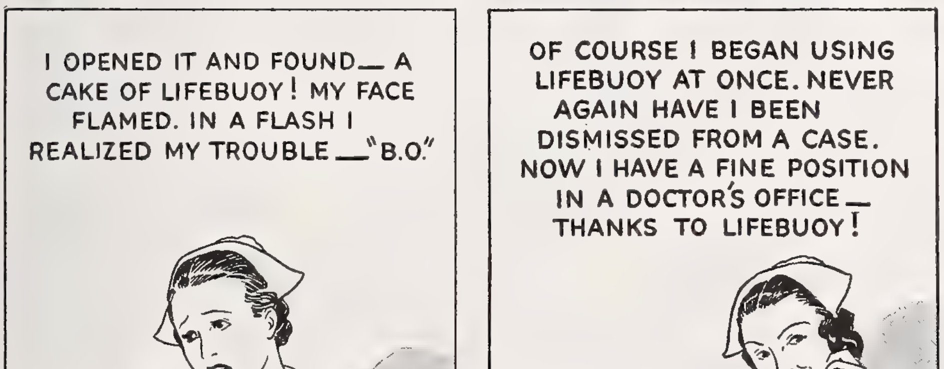
Rinso is recommended by the makers of 33 famous washers for safety and for whiter, brighter washes. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Buy the BIG economical household package.

Rinso
THE GRANULATED SOAP

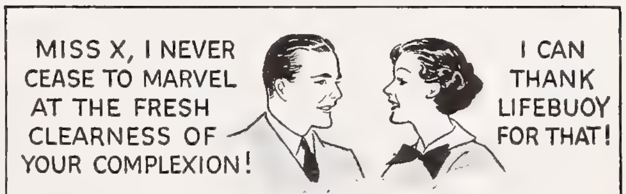
THE BIGGEST-SELLING PACKAGE SOAP IN AMERICA



HERE'S MY TRUE CONFESSION ABOUT "B.O."
I am a nurse. But I almost had to give up... Uncle
SOMEHOW I COULDN'T PLEASE MY PATIENTS. TIME AFTER TIME I WOULD BE DISMISSED FROM A CASE AFTER A FEW DAYS
THEN I TOOK CARE OF A DOCTOR'S WIFE WITH A BROKEN HIP. SHE ALWAYS INSISTED ON LIFEBUOY FOR HER BATH. WHEN I LEFT SHE GAVE ME A MYSTERIOUS PACKAGE



I OPENED IT AND FOUND— A CAKE OF LIFEBUOY! MY FACE FLAMED. IN A FLASH I REALIZED MY TROUBLE—"B.O."
OF COURSE I BEGAN USING LIFEBUOY AT ONCE. NEVER AGAIN HAVE I BEEN DISMISSED FROM A CASE. NOW I HAVE A FINE POSITION IN A DOCTOR'S OFFICE— THANKS TO LIFEBUOY!



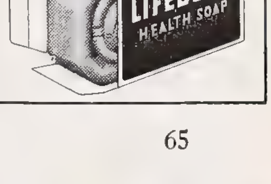
MISS X, I NEVER CEASE TO MARVEL AT THE FRESH CLEARNESS OF YOUR COMPLEXION!
I CAN THANK LIFEBUOY FOR THAT!

PROTECT your complexion with gentle, deep-cleansing Lifebuoy! See your skin grow smoother, younger! "Patch" tests on the skins of hundreds of women prove Lifebuoy is 20% milder than many so-called "beauty soaps."

A timely warning!

This letter in picture form, from a real nurse, is a real warning to everybody. Use Lifebuoy! It purifies pores, stops "B. O." (body odor).

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau



LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

(Continued from page 64)

body of the facts?" Wendy said. "Let the dead past bury them, as I hope it will. I had a letter from him, quite soon. His mother had sent him away. She would not allow him to marry an 'actress.' He couldn't marry without his mother's consent. There would be no money. What could he do without money? He had never even thought. He wrote that he had instructed his valet to meet me. The valet had had the order countermanded, of course. If he had met me, he would have lost his job.

"His mother wouldn't see me. None of them took the trouble to know me, to find out about my family. Horrid things were said about me. I couldn't go about chanting, 'I am the daughter of a Counsel of the King, the niece of a surgeon to the King.' I only know this—that I could forgive everything but the lack of courtesy. If I should announce to my mother today that I was about to marry a ne'er-do-well she might try to dissuade me, but she would certainly meet him, accord him courtesy.

"A few of his friends came to call. One of them, a woman, was very kind. She took the pains to see the cables and letters he'd sent, asking me to come. Another friend of the family persuaded me to give those letters and cables into his 'safe keeping.'

"And there I was," said Wendy, "jilted. Broken-hearted. Figuring the sweetness of death as against the bitterness of life.

AND then the need for violence came upon me. I had to move, to get away, to shift the scene. I came, instinctively, I think, to Hollywood. I don't know why. I had exactly $500 between me and—what? I had never been on the stage. I had never made an American picture. I had broken my English contract.

"How would I stand—or fall? I didn't really care.

"Perhaps because I didn't care, probably because of clever maneuvering on the part of my agents, I found myself with a Paramount contract. I have half a dozen other exciting propositions to consider, too. I shall remain here in Hollywood until I have made good. Then New York and the stage. He could not marry an actress. But I shall work until I am such an actress as adds lustre to that calling. And only until then. I shall not spend my life on either stage or screen. I'm really not an actress. I want to have a home of my own.

"And so," said Wendy, relaxing in the gold sunlight, "I think I have answered your question—'after a broken heart—what?'

"I made a drastic change first. Violence. I set about building up my body. I ate correctly. I played tennis strenuously, at first, so that I would be physically tired, and able to sleep. I took no chances on those wide-awake night watches when the ticks of a broken heart become intolerable. I didn't read much. I advise against reading for those suffering from the heart malady. Too inactive. Action is the thing. I worked like a dog. I began to regain my shattered health—and I can tell other girls that once they feel sound and healthy again their 'heart trouble' will trouble them no longer.

"I didn't go about with other boys. I knew that that sort of thing would serve only to irritate the wound. I let love alone.

"I am still working hard. I am paying off my debts. I am proving to myself, and to the world, that I can stand on my own two feet, earn my own money, make my own name, mend my own heart.

"I don't hate him. I don't know how I feel about him. I won't know until I see him again, and one day, I shall. I've had cables from him, asking me to meet him in Paris, things like that. I haven't gone. But I shall see him again. I wouldn't be positive that I was cured until I could prove myself immune through contact.

"I'm going out a little now. And I have one very close, dear friend, Louis Hayward. I met him in London. We've a lot in common. We spend a great deal of time together. Love? I don't know. I am still letting it alone.

"One of these days I shall love again, of course. And then I shall say good-bye to my career. I shall have my own home, my baby. And I shall remember heartbreak as one remembers a troubling dream, stirs and sighs—and forgets."

The Treat's on Ruby

(Continued from page 19)

making a couple of simple frostings on the same recipe card. You can embellish these cookies further by using fancy cutters, bits of citron or maraschino cherry, nuts, raisins or white frosting curleycues on chocolate, as suggested in the picture accompanying this article. You can be as imaginative as you please along these lines—making the decorations suit the occasion—as long as you have a cookie as worthy of embellishment as this one is to work on.

The second card will give you a Brazil Refrigerator Cookie. Here's a really new flavor for all of you. You'll find these easy to make as well as delicious.

YOU also have a "date" right now to try out Ruby's third cookie recipe which calls for dates (just as you suspected) and oatmeal—these need neither rolling nor chilling. These cookies when mixed are dropped from a spoon onto a greased cookie sheet—a fact which will endear them to many of you.

The fourth card gives you directions for making "Whirligigs" which are a bit tricky, I'll admit, but honestly don't you long to surprise the family sometimes with something that looks ever so professional? Well, then, here's your chance. Like most tricks, it's easy once you know how. Each of the things you must do is carefully given so you will have no difficulty following directions, step by step. And the results? Crisp little rounds, topped with circles, each circle filled with a spicy, fruit filling that makes these cookies very special indeed.

You'd have a hard time, I'm thinking, choosing between these four cookies, but fortunately no choice is necessary for they are all included in this month's Modern Hostess leaflet. Just fill out that coupon and mail it in to secure these cookie successes.

The first, and most usual type of cookie to come under consideration is the "rolled" variety. As is the case with all cookies, the mixture for this type must be well seasoned and thoroughly blended. It must be baked at the required temperature for the right length of time. After cooling

(Continued on page 68)

because she used a HALF WAY tooth paste

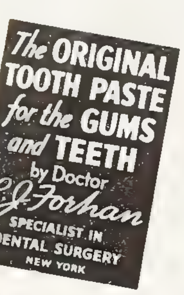
Don't waste another day on half way dental care. Superficial cleansing may keep your teeth white—for a while! But when your neglected gums grow soft and tender, all the half way measures in the world won't preserve your teeth.

Now—while your teeth are still firm and sound—replace half way care with the tooth paste that does both jobs. Forhan's whitens your teeth and fights the menace of spongy gums at the same time.



The ORIGINAL TOOTH PASTE for the GUMS and TEETH
by Doctor R. J. Forhan
SPECIALIST IN DENTAL SURGERY
NEW YORK

Why quit half way in caring for your teeth when Forhan's gives two-fold protection at the price of most ordinary tooth pastes? Be safe. Get Forhan's today!

Forhan's

DOES BOTH JOBS CLEANS TEETH SAVES GUMS

Your Kodak Picture ENLARGED

FREE 8x10 Inch ENLARGEMENT of any SNAPSHOT

Your favorite snapshots of children, parents and loved ones are more enjoyable when enlarged to 8x10 inch size—suitable for framing. These beautiful, permanent enlargements bring out the details and features you love just as you remember them when the snapshots were taken. Just to get acquainted, we will enlarge any kodak picture, print or negative to 8x10 inches—FREE—if you enclose 25c to help cover our cost of packing, postage and clerical work. The enlargement itself is free. It will also be beautifully hand tinted in natural colors if you want it. We will acknowledge receiving your snapshot immediately. Your original will be returned with your free enlargement. Pick out your snapshot and send it today.

GEPPERT STUDIOS Dept. 24J Des Moines, Iowa

A FREE, EASY LESSON . . .

BY THE TINTEX COLOR MAGICIAN

Read how you can give new fashionable color to faded apparel and home decorations

1 Go over your entire wardrobe . . . select your dresses, sweaters, lingerie, "undies," stockings, etc., that are faded or whose colors are dingy or out-of-date . . . .

2 And don't forget your home decorations. Are curtains and drapes faded? . . . . Would you like to change the color-scheme of slip-covers, luncheon sets, table-scarfs, etc.? . . . . It's very simple!

3 Now . . . . here's all you do. Choose the colors you want from the 41 brilliant Tintex Colors. Dissolve the powder in a basin of water, according to directions . . . . then just "tint as you rinse." Faded things become their original color. Or you can give anything an entirely different color if you wish.

4 That's all there is to it. Easy, isn't it? And what perfect results . . . . just sheer color magic. But be sure you use Tintex. Don't accept substitutes. Tintex, the world's largest selling Tints and Dyes have been proven "best by test" of millions of women.

Tintex

World's Largest Selling

TINTS AND DYES

PARK & TILFORD, Distributors

AT ALL DRUG, NOTION AND TOILET GOODS COUNTERS

A SOILED TOILET WILL Glisten Again

Don't be annoyed by rust stains, spots and incrustations in a toilet bowl. They're easy to remove. Without unpleasant scrubbing. Let Sani-Flush do the work for you.

Sani-Flush is a scientific formula, created to remove ugly marks from toilet bowls. Buy a can. Try putting a little in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Flush the toilet. See how the porcelain sparkles! Odors are killed, not covered up. Sani-Flush is odorless.

You can purify the hidden trap under the toilet bowl with Sani-Flush. No other cleaning method can do this. Sani-Flush is also effective for cleaning automobile radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores—25 and 10 cent sizes. The Hygienic Products Co., Canton, Ohio.

Sani-Flush
CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

Your Iron Fairly Glides!

ELASTIC STARCH

QUICK ELASTIC
HOT STARCH IN 30 SECONDS

This modern way to hot starch offers you advantages worth knowing. Simply add boiling water to dissolved Quick Elastic—no mixing, no cooking, no bother as with lump starch. Ends sticking and scorching. Restores elasticity and that soft charm of newness.

Special TRIAL OFFER

THANK YOU

THE HUBINGER CO., No. 980, Keokuk, Ia.
Send me your trial offer check good for 5c on the purchase of a large 10c package of Quick Elastic Starch, and your free folder, "That Wonderful Way to Hot Starch."

Name..........

Address..........

(Continued from page 66)

on a wire rack, the finished products should be stored in a jar with a tight fitting cover. In addition to these general rules the following suggestions should also be followed if you want to get good results.

The cookie dough, mixed and seasoned according to recipe directions, should be rolled with a lightly floured rolling pin on a lightly floured board so that as little flour is added as possible. Sometimes, you know, the dough is a bit on the soft side and we are tempted to add flour indiscriminately during the rolling process. However, since this will make your cookies brittle, rather than crisp and tender, I suggest instead that you try chilling the dough for half an hour in the refrigerator. It will then be much easier to handle.

Of course, there are some folks who seem to have a deep and abiding dislike for a rolling pin except as a weapon of attack! For such as these I suggest "refrigerator" cookies for this type does not need rolling. The dough is shaped into a long cylindrical roll which is then carefully wrapped in waxed paper and stored in the refrigerator. It will keep for days! When you want cookies you simply slice off as many as you have time to bake and in ten minutes or so you have a fresh tempting supply. Yummy! It makes me hungry just writing about them. Guess I'll make up a batch of those Brazil cookies of Ruby's tomorrow—for they are a perfect example of refrigerator cookie.

THE cookies that are "dropped from a spoon" come under our third heading. "Dropped" cookies are perhaps the easiest of them all—but there is a "perhaps" about it. For if the dough is not just right, the cookies have been known to run together in the pan during the baking process—which definitely is not as it should be! You'll never have this difficulty, however, if you follow the Oatmeal Date Cookie recipe I am giving you in the leaflet. These cookies are soft, not crisp. And let me remind you here that soft cookies and crisp ones should not be stored in the same container or you will discover to your sorrow that the supposedly crisp ones get soft, too!

The dressiest members of the cookie family are the filled cookies, which require both rolling and filling, skill and patience. The fruit filled "Whirligig" recipe of Ruby's will teach you how to acquire the necessary skill, but if you haven't any patience I advise you to stick to other varieties. However, those of you who like an unusual cookie—the sort to make your family happy and cause your friends to ask to borrow your recipe—be sure to try making these filled cookies. The recipe in the leaflet will prove extremely helpful.

And speaking of friends borrowing recipes, why don't you suggest to your friends that they send in for recipe leaflets, too? Surely they would be delighted to have a set of their very own and would have you to thank for this suggestion.

The following is a simple macaroon recipe you'll probably like to make up now. Before giving it to you, however, I want to urge all the readers of this department to enter our Ruby Keeler Prize Menu Contest. There are many wonderful prizes for folks who enjoy cooking and I don't know a single soul who'd turn up her nose at a couple of hundred dollars!

COCOANUT DROPS

⅓ cup sweetened condensed milk
1 cup shredded cocoanut, firmly packed
½ teaspoon almond extract
1 egg white
a few grains salt

Add the condensed milk, almond extract and salt to the cocoanut. Blend together thoroughly. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a well oiled baking sheet. Bake in a slow oven (300°F.) about 15 minutes, or until firm and golden brown.

Ruby Keeler Contest News

Our Modern Hostess Editor has made out the following list which should be of great assistance to everyone who plans to enter the Ruby Keeler Contest, described on pages 16 and 17.

Listed below are food and cooking terms, arranged in alphabetical order. Naturally—at the present time—you're interested only in those which can be used in the contest. Therefore, we are giving you words beginning with B, C, E, L, N and R—since these are the letters that appear at least once in your Keeler Menu.

You are not restricted to the use of the words given here, of course. Probably you, yourself, will think of many that we have overlooked. But remember, your menu must provide a balanced meal—not one with two meats, three desserts and no vegetables.

So out with your pencils and paper, all of you, and try your skill at this fascinating new pastime. There's no reason why the men folk shouldn't be as good at it as the women, either, for here's their chance to tell the world what they like to eat without knowing how to prepare them.

Come along, then, everybody. Here's a long list of helpful words to start you off on the right track. And there are splendid prizes, as you probably know. They are pictured for you on page 16—except the money, and we'll leave it entirely up to you to make your own picture of what you could do with that, if you should win it. All these wonderful prizes are ready and waiting to be sent to the winners—Editor.

Dictionary of Food, Cooking and Menu Terms Beginning with B, C, E, L, N and R

"FOOD TERMS" refers to the names of foods, such as eggs, meats, bread, milk, fish, etc.

"COOKING TERMS" refers to different ways of preparing foods, such as broiling, stewing, mashing, baking, etc.

"MENU TERMS" refers to the names of special dishes, such as Bavarian cream, ragout of beef, scalloped potatoes, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "B": Beans, Broccoli, Bread, Beef, Butter, Beets, Bran, Bacon, Bananas, Bass, Brazil Nuts, Brussels Sprouts, Beans, etc.

SOME COOKING TERMS BEGINNING WITH "B": Baked, Boiled, Boned, Browned, Beaten, Buttered, Breaded, Braised, Broiled, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "B." Boston Baked Beans, Beef à la Mode, Brownies, Biscuit Tortoni, Brisket of Beef, Brown Betty, Butterscotch Sauce (or Pie), Brown Sauce, Bechamel Sauce, Bouillon, Boston Cream Pie, Breaded Veal Cutlet, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "C": Cabbage, Cream, Cauliflower.

Calf's Liver, Cocoanut, Carrots, Chicken, Crackers, Cranberries, Coffee, Chutney, Chow-Chow, Corn, etc.

SOME COOKING TERMS BEGINNING WITH "C": Creamed, Candied, Canned, Caramelized, Chopped, Curried, (in) Chafingdish, (en) Casserole, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "C": Compote of Fruit, Caramels, Consommé, Creamed Soups, Crab Ravigote, Crab Meat Cocktail, Corn Fritters, Cornbread, Cheese Soufflé, Chowder, Canapés, Cocktails, Camembert Cheese, Conserve, Coleslaw, Corned Beef Hash, Cobbler (apple or peach), Croquettes (of veal, chicken or other meats), Croutons, Curry of Lamb, Club Sandwich, Claret Cup, Crepes Suzette, Chicken Maryland, Chicken (roasted, fried, broiled, en casserole, etc), Cinnamon Toast, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "E": Eggs, Eggplant, Endive, Escarole, Elderberries, Eels, etc.

SOME COOKING TERMS BEGINNING WITH "E": (All taken from the French) Escalloped (thin slices); Emincé (in small pieces); En Brochette (on a skewer); En Casserole (cooked and served in a casserole); En Coquille (cooked and served in a shell); etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "E": English Mutton Chops, English Chow-Chow or Chutney, Eclairs, Egg Nogg (frozen); Eggs Benedict, (Eggs Goldenrod, Cocotte, Rivoli, au Gratin, Shirred, Baked, and countless others); Egg garnish for spinach, salads, etc.; Eggplant (stuffed, fried, scalloped); Egg Custard (or Egg Custard Sauce); Egg Canapés (with Sardine, Caviar, Ham, Watercress, etc.); Egg Balls for Soup, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "L": Lamb, Lamb Chops, Liver, Lobster, Lentils, Lettuce, Lemons, Leeks, Lapin (rabbit), Lamb Kidneys, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "L": Loin of Pork; Leg of Veal, Lamb, or Mutton (roasted); Lady Fingers; Lamb Croquettes (Lamb Fricassee, Barbecued, Stewed, Crown of, Casserole of, Breast of, Saddle of); Lemon Pie (Lemon Pudding, Sauce, Cake, Butter); Lemonade; Lemon Ice; Lettuce and Cucumber Salad (Lettuce and Tomato Salad or other combinations); Liver en Brochette, Liver and Bacon; Lobster Thermidor (Lobster Creamed, Broiled, Newburg, Canapés, Etc.); Luncheon Rolls; Lyonnaise Potatoes; Lentil Soup; Layer Cake; etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "N": New Potatoes, New Asparagus, Noodles, Nuts, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "N": Noisette of Lamb, Napoleons, Neapolitan Ice Cream, Nesselrode Pudding, Neufchatel Cheese, New England Boiled Dinner, New England Clam Chowder, Newburg Sauce, Noodle Soup, Nut Bread (Nut Candies, Cakes, Bars, Salted, Glacéd), Nut and Cream Cheese, Balls, etc.

SOME FOOD TERMS BEGINNING WITH "R": Rabbit, Romaine Salad, Rusks, Rolls, Ry-krisp, Rice, Raspberries, Radishes, Rhubarb, etc.

SOME COOKING TERMS BEGINNING WITH "R": Roasted, Rechauffée (reheated in brown sauce), Riced, Raised, etc.

SOME MENU TERMS BEGINNING WITH "R": Russian Dressing, Riced Potatoes, Ravioli, Roquefort Cheese (or Salad Dressing), Russian Tea, Rhubarb Pie (or Pudding), Raisin Pie (or Pudding), Raspberry Cream Pie, (Raspberry) Sauce, Ice, Pudding, Jelly, Sherbet, etc.

"THIS IS WHAT I CALL A "MILLIONAIRE'S DISH!"
YET IT COSTS LESS THAN 3¢ PER PORTION!

WHAT A SURPRISE WHEN YOU TASTE IT!

"A MILLIONAIRE'S DISH" is exactly right. If you had a high-priced chef in your kitchen, he couldn't prepare spaghetti that would taste any more delicious than Franco-American!

Eleven different ingredients are used to make the sauce. Zestful tomato purée is smoothly blended with golden-mellow Cheddar cheese, then skillfully seasoned to savory, mouth-melting goodness. "Perfect!" you'll exclaim when you taste it. "The best spaghetti I ever ate."

Costs less than home-cooked

Imagine, you actually pay less than 3¢ a portion for this delectable dish. A can holding three to four portions is usually no more than ten cents. That wouldn't cover the price of all your ingredients plus the cost of cooking them at home, to say nothing of the time and trouble you're saved. No cooking or fussing needed; simply heat and bring to the table. "And it actually tastes better than home-cooked," women declare. No wonder so many are changing to Franco-American.

Delicious "economy" meals

Are you worried over rising food costs? Is it hard to plan economical menus your family will enjoy? Call on Franco-American to help you! Its tempting, piquant sauce adds savory zest to a simple meal, gives cheaper cuts of meat a truly "expensive" flavor, transforms left-overs into a dish fit for a king. And here's another saving. Franco-American contains so much real food value it can easily take the place of meat at lunch or supper. Order several cans from your grocer today. Your family will love it—and so will your budget!

MADE BY THE MAKERS OF CAMPBELL'S SOUPS

Eye make-up
DONE IN GOOD TASTE

Maybelline
Maybelline Eyebrow Brush
Maybelline Eyelash Tonic Cream
Maybelline Eye Shadow

MAYBELLINE eye beauty aids have been the choice of fastidious women the world over for more than 18 years. From chic Paris to smart Newport, these pure and harmless cosmetics may be found on the dressing tables of the most exquisitely groomed women. The name MAYBELLINE is synonymous with highest quality and absolute purity. To insist on MAYBELLINE is to be definitely assured of eye beauty at its best. All MAYBELLINE eye beauty aids are obtainable at leading ten cent stores.

Maybelline Mascara is prepared in Black Brown Blue

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau
All Maybelline preparations have this approval.

Maybelline

MASCARA . . EYE SHADOW . . EYEBROW PENCIL
EYELASH TONIC CREAM . . EYEBROW BRUSH

Are Women Inferior to Men?

(Continued from page 41)

Marconi, Michael Angelo, Verdi, many more—all were men.

"Women are splendid entertainers. They are good singers and musicians, clever aviatrixes, actresses and designers—but they seldom, if ever, author their own plays, build their own planes, weave their own materials, write their own music. They use, you see, the material man has created for them.

"I believe this," said Miss Swarthout, with a glance at her husband who was listening attentively, "I believe that women have the creative force, quite as much as men—but it is biological. It is used for the bearing of children, it has to be. We are so designed by Nature and therefore we cannot divert our creative force into other channels. It always has been, it always will be, impossible.

"Women with natural gifts," said Miss Swarthout, "would seem to be the exceptions. They're not, really. For even they are using the material of others, as in the case of a singer. I, for instance, didn't create the instrument in my throat. I sing naturally. I always sang, quite as I always talked and breathed. I would sing in the kitchen, in the nursery, on the open road, wherever I happened to be. I couldn't help singing—it was born in me.

"But I do think—don't you, Frank?—that given a natural ability women are often superior to men."

"I know it," said Frank Chapman, his bright blue eyes meeting her brown ones, with a challenging smile.

"NO, but really," Gladys Swarthout said, with her serious eagerness, "I believe that women have more patience than men, more persistence, more true courage—just because we have more fear, more timidity to overcome. I know that whenever I am faced with a new job, as when I had my first audition at the Metropolitan and was accepted, I suffered agonies, actual torments of fear. I felt that I couldn't make it. . . . I thought I would faint or collapse before the curtain rose. But once I began to work I worked until. . . ."

"Let me interrupt for a moment," Frank Chapman said, removing a pipe from his mouth. "I can say things that Gladys probably won't. For whatever is the answer to this question of women's inferiority to men, they are certainly more modest than men. I believe—and I should know—that women are superior to men in almost all of the things that make for great success. They may not be able to create as men create. I agree with Gladys that the creative force of woman is directed, by Nature, into the maternal channel. But it may also be that man has conspired with Nature to keep woman's creative force directed that way. We men have kept women in the nursery, in the kitchen or in the drawing room. During the last few years, they have escaped into the arena with some amazing results. But whether that is so or not, women certainly top men when it comes to what they do with success.

"I have watched Gladys display more energy, more patience, and persistence than nine out of ten men who occupy similar positions to hers in the musical world. She proved her determination when, a child of thirteen, she broke all precedent and turned failure into success. She proved it again, a year later, when she sacrificed her beautiful dark curls to adopt a hairdress that made her look eighteen so that she could fulfill an engagement as soloist in a Kansas City church. And also when, terrified, she sang with the Minneapolis Symphony with the result that she was so flooded with concert offers, after her rendition of Max Bruch's 'Ave Maria,' that she couldn't meet half of them. Later when she was prevailed upon to try for an audition with the Chicago Civic Opera Company, she didn't know one role, completely—yet she went for the audition and was accepted. She devoted that entire summer to work, learned twenty roles and gave fifty performances.

"She proved her capacity for hard and

That seedy-looking gent with Paula Stone is none other than Harold Lloyd. Harold chews on hay for local color at the Bradley Barn Dance and Paula is all done up as a pioneer farm wife.

unremitting work the summer she spent abroad where we met—" and again he smiled at her with that sharing look. "There were three seasons with the Ravinia Opera Company and then the 'Met'—during her first season there she gave fifty-six performances, topping all of her associate artists, men and women, in the number of performances.

"She has been afraid but she conquered her fear, tired but she disregarded it, unprepared but she dared.

"They say that women have not the moral integrity of men. Yet Gladys lived for several years in small boarding houses, without any of the rich caparisons of the rising operatic star so that, on the night of her first appearance at the Metropolitan, she could sign her last check—final payment of the debt she owed the Kansas City friends who had financed her.

"We met in Florence and fell in love—and once again, Gladys proved her courage—"

"Oh, no," Gladys Swarthout said, her hand on her husband's arm, "that wasn't courage, Frank, it was love. You see," she turned to me, "he means that it took courage because there had been a first marriage for me which was not successful. My first husband was a business man. He couldn't understand professional life. And just as I believe that the right love, the right marriage is absolutely necessary to a woman's success, so I know that the wrong sort of marriage can wreck it. My first marriage would have wrecked me, had it lasted. But when I met Frank—I knew. From the first moment I knew a great many things—and one of them is this—that the real answer to your question is that women and men are, or should be, equals. We are interdependent. Which is as it should be. Male and female—halves of the perfect whole and only when the halves are united can achievement be full and mature.

FRANK and I speak the same language—not only musical but in all ways, little and large. We have the same likes and dislikes, the same hopes and ambitions. We both love country life, even though our work keeps us in cities. We console one another by promises about someday—a home in the country, flowers and animals, sons and daughters. We both love the same 'little things' of life—Robert Louis Stevenson is our favorite author, Noel Coward our favorite playwright, our pet play is 'Private Lives' and of the operas, 'Falstaff," with Verdi as our preference in composers and the collecting of French furniture for a hobby."

"I detest parlor games, pajamas for women and stupid gossip . . . so does Frank. I never smoke and Frank bites his pipe. Frank proposed to me the night I made my debut at the Metropolitan, in the role of a blind old mother, wrinkled and grotesque. It has been right, you see, from the very beginning.

"I won't go so far as to say that I wouldn't go on, that I would fail if it were not for Frank. I do know that it would take me twice as long to reach my goal, that the way would be terribly lonely and doubly burdensome. It took courage to come to Hollywood. I might have put it off, if Frank had not encouraged me, come with me."

"You really came to Hollywood," interposed Frank, "because you are avidly curious about ventures in new mediums."

"Yes, of course. But I was terrified. I didn't know how I would photograph, after all, I'd had some success at the Metropolitan—I didn't know how this new medium would affect me or my career. And I don't know yet," smiled Gladys. "It was so blistering hot the whole time we were

● "Oo-hoo, Mother! Come right away—Sister's getting all fixed for a big cry. And you know how catching it is! If she cries, I'm going to, too—'cause she's my own twin and I feel so sorry!"

● "See here—this woolly sweater's making her a little bit prickly. How well I know the feeling! Wouldn't a few shakes of our slick, smooth Johnson's Baby Powder be just the thing?"

● "Some for me, too? Oh, how nice! I just love to feel that soft, slippery powder going all tickly down my neck. Let's not have it just at bath-time—let's have it often! Then we'd never cry!"

Johnson's Baby
Powder
Johnson & Johnson
Borated Talcum

● "I'm Johnson's Baby Powder . . . the best caretaker for babies' tender skins! My silky smoothness wards off chafes and rashes—for I'm made of finest Italian talc. No gritty particles and no orris-root . . . Try Johnson's Baby Soap, Baby Cream and Baby Oil, too."

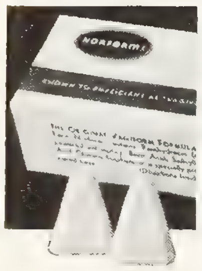
Johnson & Johnson
NEW BRUNSWICK N. J., U. S. A.

FEMININE HYGIENE
made easy



NOTHING COULD BE EASIER
Norforms are small, convenient, antiseptic suppositories completely ready for use. They require no awkward apparatus for application. They leave no lingering antiseptic smell around the room or about your person. They are dainty and feminine, soothing and deodorizing. Many women use them for this deodorizing effect alone.

EVERY DAY, more and more women are adopting Norforms as the most modern, convenient and satisfactory form of feminine hygiene.

Norforms are easy-to-use antiseptic suppositories that melt at internal body temperature, and spread a protective, soothing film over delicate internal membranes —an antiseptic film that remains in effective contact for many hours.

- A distinctive and exclusive feature of Norforms is their concentrated content of Parahydrecin—a powerful yet harmless antiseptic developed by Norwich, makers of Unguentine. Parahydrecin kills germs, yet Norforms are positively non-injurious. There is no danger of an "over-dose" or "burn."

MILLIONS SOLD EVERY YEAR

Send for the Norforms booklet "The New Way." It gives further facts about modernized feminine hygiene. Or, buy a box of Norforms at your druggist's today. 12 in a package, with leaflet of instructions. The Norwich Pharmacal Co., Norwich, New York.

NORFORMS
for modern feminine hygiene

© N. P. CO. 1936 Known to Physicians as "Vagiforms"

making 'Rose of the Rancho' that I was barely conscious. I wasn't conscious at all of the camera. I believe that I photograph, on the screen, more like myself than I do in still pictures.

"The point is that although women are inferior to men when it comes to creating, they balance that by creating in their own sphere, in their own predestined channel . . . as mothers. In all other ways, I should say, men and women are equal, the woman needing the man, the man the woman . . ."

The front office called Miss Swarthout. She was due to record. We said goodbye, as old friends, not acquaintances of a few moments. She is easy to know, this dark and beautiful young woman with the magical mezzo-soprano voice. She is human before she is anything else, a woman before she is a star of any medium.

As I walked along the row of star dressing-rooms, I felt that a new star had come to Hollywood . . . not the diva of the "Met" but the little, courageous girl from the Ozark Mountains . . . for the friendly, alert young woman I had been talking with is still that little girl who would turn back and "begin from the beginning"—and because of this sturdy human quality, Gladys Swarthout will end her career, as she began it—on a true, triumphant note.

Play Your Hunches

(Continued from page 53)

She considered. "It's following an overwhelming urge to do something without apparently any logical reason for doing it."

"Was that the hunch that made you leave?"

"Yes, to try the movies."

She was living, at that time, with her uncle and aunt. Her uncle is an officer in the British-Indian army.

"They didn't approve of my idea," Merle continued her story, "but I'd already decided to carry on with my hunch."

"Do you always follow a hunch?"

"Always. It's right, you know. But with me, I had no notion how to begin a movie career, especially so far away from any of the studios. The first thing I had to decide was which studios I would tackle, London or Hollywood. I decided on London—also a hunch. Then I had to find out what people I should see and where they were located. I got that information from movie magazines, and one day I was just on my way."

But even when she arrived in London from India, Merle was still "just on her way," for the going was hard and no doors were opened to her. She worked in a night club. She went the studio rounds. Insignificant parts came her way. It didn't look any too hopeful, until one day Alexander Korda enjoyed one of those daring moments that directors do enjoy on occasion. He was looking for an actress to play the role of Ann Boleyn in his talkie, "The Private Life of Henry VIII." He happened to remember the Oberon girl. He gave her a screen test. She made good. He cast her for the part. She played it to a fare-you-well. Korda placed her under contract in London. United Artists placed her under contract in Hollywood. Merle Oberon found herself in the dawn of her talkie career.

"It's most gratifying," she expresses it.

But she still functions according to "hunches." It's highly probable, now that she has become a figure of importance in pictures, that this faculty may one day be used against her. As soon as a star doesn't agree with her producer and advisors she is said to be hard to get along with.

"But if I've a hunch it is or it isn't right to do certain things," Merle questions, "isn't it to the advantage of everyone that I follow it?"

I don't know. But it was just that sort of action that prompted her to break off with a well-known star when their romance was on the verge of his getting a divorce to marry Merle.

"He adores his children," she recognized. "Sooner or later, if we had married, he would have missed them so keenly that he would have longed to be with them. I couldn't stand between him and this happiness."

She severed that relation without leaving any loose ends dangling around to knot up the premises later on.

SHE'S extraordinarily frank in talking about herself. She doesn't mind in the least speaking about David Nivens, the handsome young British juvenile, who dashed on to New York from the Coast to meet her when she landed from London this last trip.

"Are you going to marry David Nivens?" I asked tactfully.

She laughed. "There's no marriage for me for at least two years."

"Why?"

"I shan't really be settled for two years," she explained, and added, "if I am then. You see, I have to alternate with pictures in Hollywood and London. That keeps me pretty much on the go, and I detest traveling."

"You've covered plenty of mileage already," I commented.

"I don't think about it," she replied.

"Well, then," I questioned, "if marriage is out—what about romance?"

"I suppose I shall be reported engaged when I get back to Hollywood," she anticipated with lively interest.

"Aren't you engaged to Mr. Nivens?"

She shook her head. "But when one goes out with a man she is said to be engaged to him, isn't she?"

"Do you mind?"

She smiled. "It does no harm, does it?"

"It depends who's talking about you," I countered.

"Well, we all run that chance." She let it go at that.

As you may suspect, she's quite a decisive personality. Douglas Fairbanks, Senior, is one person who perceives and respects this trait in her.

Doug was in the party that Merle took to see the premiere of "The Dark Angel" when that picture bowed into London. She asked Doug, on that occasion, if he thought she should make "Cyrano de Bergerac," the picture Alexander Korda wanted her to co-star in with Charles Laughton.

Doug answered pointblank, "You're going to do what you want to do anyway. Why ask me?"

She decided not to do the picture. The chances are she had already decided before asking Doug, but opinions, even when asked for, don't sway her. They merely serve to light her ideas.

She is an interesting mixture, this Oberon youngster. Five feet-two of vitality, she gives the impression of being all over the place—which isn't true. She merely makes sure that she knows what is going on that concerns her. She wastes no time fencing about what she wants. She uses words of one syllable to say what she has to say. Her favorite jewel is her aquamarine ring. She doesn't go in very much for jewelry. She loves riding horseback. She likes the water. On the Coast, she lives in Santa Monica, her front yard dipping into the Pacific Ocean—the same Pacific that will one day take her back to India via the west. She wears very simple clothes—sports things, usually, during the day. When she wears evening dress, she goes without stockings. She has a trick of looking at a person candidly and calmly.

SHE is a little cynical about love. As an experience it has its whirl but it isn't too trustworthy. She has had her horoscope read once, but she forgets what she was told. She has never been to a fortune-teller. Once, a woman at a Hollywood party read her palm and told her some things that later happened. She thinks that sort of outside help might become a weakness, unless a person was careful to use his own discretion in facing life and conditions.

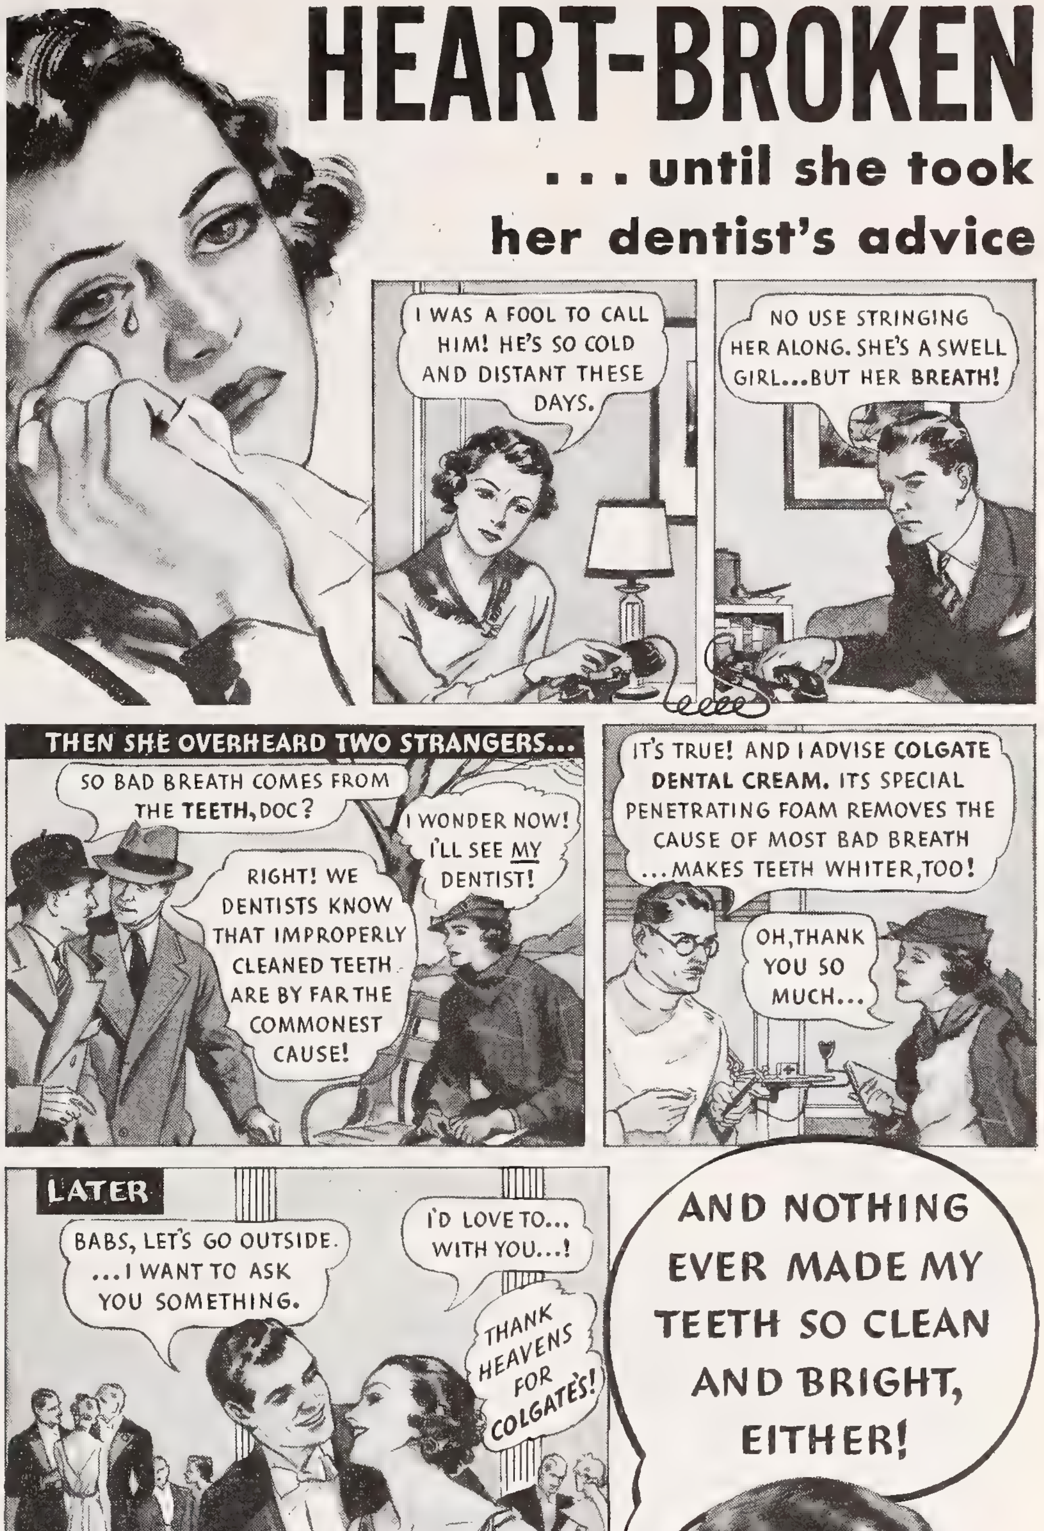
She likes people. She likes good food, too. She doesn't diet—never has—never has any notion of doing it, though she doesn't make any definite decision about such future problems. She isn't fearful about herself or her career. Success is nice, but she has known obscurity and she lived in and through that without fear. She isn't money conscious. It isn't what something costs, to her; it's what it means to her that counts. She likes perfume but has no favorite. A spring green is her favorite color. She has never gone in for "isms." She isn't impressed by names. She is impressed when she reacts favorably to meeting names. She is just as impressed if the person is unknown.

She enjoys reading but she doesn't speak of this voluntarily. She's amazingly tactful, though her frankness might give the opposite impression. She sees through people but doesn't embarrass them by letting them know that. She plays no politics, which might give the idea that she is doing just that.

She doesn't mind being talked about. She loves dogs. She brought an airedale puppy over from England this last trip, which sends her canine quota to three. She isn't extravagant but she isn't parsimonious, either. She has chestnut hair and chestnut eyes and that young, clean charm that goes with health, and courage, and vitality.

She has no dream she wants to realize, but there is a dream she is going to realize. She's a girl who has seen the dawn on "the top of the world." She'll live it as she once saw and felt it and she'll follow her hunches in the doing, both in and out of emergencies. She'll hold her own no matter where she is because she understands where she fits into the picture.

. . . Between You and Me offers you cash prizes each month for your movie thoughts. Have you sent in your contribution?



HEART-BROKEN
. . . until she took her dentist's advice
I WAS A FOOL TO CALL HIM! HE'S SO COLD AND DISTANT THESE DAYS.
NO USE STRINGING HER ALONG. SHE'S A SWELL GIRL...BUT HER BREATH!
THEN SHE OVERHEARD TWO STRANGERS...
SO BAD BREATH COMES FROM THE TEETH, DOC?
RIGHT! WE DENTISTS KNOW THAT IMPROPERLY CLEANED TEETH ARE BY FAR THE COMMONEST CAUSE!
I WONDER NOW! I'LL SEE MY DENTIST!
IT'S TRUE! AND I ADVISE COLGATE DENTAL CREAM. ITS SPECIAL PENETRATING FOAM REMOVES THE CAUSE OF MOST BAD BREATH ...MAKES TEETH WHITER, TOO!
OH, THANK YOU SO MUCH...
LATER
BABS, LET'S GO OUTSIDE. ...I WANT TO ASK YOU SOMETHING.
I'D LOVE TO... WITH YOU...!
THANK HEAVENS FOR COLGATE'S!
AND NOTHING EVER MADE MY TEETH SO CLEAN AND BRIGHT, EITHER!

Most Bad Breath Begins with the Teeth!

MAKE sure you don't have bad breath! Use Colgate Dental Cream. Its special penetrating foam removes all the decaying food deposits lodged between the teeth, along the gums and around the tongue—which dentists agree are the source of most bad breath. At the same time, a unique, grit-free ingredient polishes the enamel—makes teeth sparkle.

Try Colgate Dental Cream—today! Brush your teeth . . . your gums . . . your tongue . . . with Colgate's. If you are not entirely satisfied after using one tube, send the empty tube to COLGATE, Jersey City, N. J. We will gladly refund TWICE what you paid.

Now—NO BAD BREATH behind her SPARKLING SMILE!
20¢ LARGE SIZE
Giant Size, over twice as much, 35¢
COLGATE RIBBON DENTAL CREAM
Tested and Approved 2273 Good Housekeeping Bureau

DON'T DISTURB

"GERMS – you might as well scram. I'm covered with Mennen Oil"

"Sleeping's such a pleasure and comfort, nowadays. Not much reason left to cry—'cause my skin feels so good, and I know I'm protected 'gainst germs and infection—with this famous Mennen Antiseptic Oil. They told my wonderful mummy about it at the hospital. Seems nearly all the hospitals* now give their babies a body-rub with this oil—all over, every day. Gee, hospitals and mothers are swell to babies—protect us from chafing, chapping . . . and most of all from those nasty, dangerous germs that cause infection. Well, I think I'll dream now. . . ."

Nearly all the hospitals that are important in maternity work use Mennen Antiseptic Oil on their babies, daily.* You baby deserves it, too. W. G. Mennen

MENNEN
Antiseptic
OIL

She's Single Again

(Continued from page 47)

you see in me is the result of that about-face. The results are far greater than you can see on the surface, even though you say the visible change in me is astonishing. Because the change inside is even greater than that which is visible to the eye. It simply had to be.

"When I discovered that my marriage was a failure, that I had failed where I wanted most to succeed, I settled down to do a little real thinking. I was going to find my faults and remedy them."

IN this connection it is interesting to note how differently this Joan regards divorce from the other Joan—Joan Crawford. My shorthand notes show that, in talking with me shortly after her divorce from Doug, Jr., Joan Crawford said: "Some people may think our marriage was a failure. I don't, personally. I don't think it was a failure because both Douglas and I gained something from it. I don't care what experience a person has, it is not a failure if he gains as a result of it. From my marriage I gained experience, self-respect, character, insight and I didn't lose anything. I gained more, too—self-sufficiency."

Regarding her divorce, Joan Blondell says: "I cannot convince myself that my marriage was not a failure. It was a terrible failure. I should have been able to put it above anything else and make a success of it. But I couldn't.

"I said to myself. 'I have failed in marriage, but I am going to succeed in my work. I am going to find my faults and remedy them. I am going to change as much as is necessary to get all I can out of life.'

"Before that, I didn't have any great urge to win all the success I could. I was willing to go along and take things easy, and not submerge myself in order to gain efficiency.

"But now I have something to work for. I have my beautiful son to think of. I have his future to protect. So I am going to do the things that are necessary to succeed to the point where I can have a nice bank account for the young man, and where he will be proud of his mother.

"To accomplish that I am going to make the most of whatever I have, and am going to use angles to success that I have never used before. I shall be nice to people I have never been nice to before, and play the game to the best of my ability. I am dressing the part and acting the part, and I am trying to develop qualities I always neglected heretofore.

"When I weighed myself I found I was wanting in many respects. Six months ago I couldn't be annoyed extending myself to be gracious to somebody who didn't strike my fancy. I preferred to go around in pajamas and sneakers, doing as I pleased and worrying about nobody. I would much rather be chummy with a property man or an electrician I liked than to try to please a visiting celebrity or someone about the studio who could help me.

"I was sure I was right in this, and congratulated myself on being absolutely sincere and above catering to anyone. I felt my world was secure, and that I could go on doing just as I pleased.

"But I got a shock that knocked all that out of my head, and that set me to finding my faults and trying to remedy them.

"Now that I dress carefully and do everything a girl should do to make the most of herself and her opportunities, people show decidedly more interest in me. I attract more attention and hear more favorable comments than ever before. This new personality of mine gives me added confidence. It has made me feel important. And, altogether, it has given me quite a new outlook on life."

Of course, everyone has been talking of this change in Joan, of this new Blondell. For there is a new Blondell. You can see it in her face, her manner, her clothes. You can hear it in her laughter. You can recognize it in her work, oh so plainly. It has given her a new appeal.

Don't imagine for a second that it has turned Joan into a flippant butterfly, or into a calculating woman. Joan's love of solid, substantial, down-to-earth things would prevent the one, and her frankness, generosity and sincerity would prevent the other.

An hour on the set with Joan brings out a dozen definite examples of the change of attitude of other players and studio workers toward Joan. What a marvelous object lesson she would be for any girl who is debating the possibilities of remaking herself, and wondering if it would really be worth while.

And if a girl wanted a very pleasant evidence of what this has done for Joan, she should see Dick Powell glow at Blondell's approach. Having Hollywood's most eligible young man sort of "hangin' around" is quite a testimonial in itself. And, believe you us, that's just what Dick is doing.

Both Joan and Dick will tell you they're just friends, and have been for a long time. But even on that basis, Dick will tell you Joan is getting "pretty nifty."

We happened to be with Joan on Dick's birthday, and you should have seen the merrymaking that went on at the little informal party they gave that lad on the "Colleen" set, with Joan officiating.

Of course, Joan is still pretty blue over her failure to make a go of her marriage. And she is too honest to attempt to shift the blame. She doesn't put the responsibility on Hollywood, either. Instead she says:

"OUR failure wasn't the fault of marriage or of Hollywood. And certainly not of our work. I would be ashamed to attempt to alibi by saying that we failed because of the demands of our profession. Because marriage has as good a chance in Hollywood and in pictures as it has in New England. The trouble was with George Barnes and me, not with outside influences.

"There is nothing wrong with marriage. Every girl should marry when the right time and the right man comes along. I think it would be a very lonely and useless existence without marriage. You can make marriage successful no matter where you are. Public life has nothing to do with it. You could be happy living in a revolving door, if you loved each other and were willing to pay the price of a successful marriage."

No dodging of issues here, is there? Because Joan Blondell is too honest and too frank to put up any such smoke screen.

Although Joan has been hard hit, she doesn't mope or whine. She doesn't believe in dramatics, or in being morbid. And she hates the sight of a long suffering appearance. Nor does she try to laugh it all off, for it is a serious thing to her.

The discovery that her marriage was a failure made Joan very unhappy. But it didn't whip her, for with the realization that her dream of happiness was over came the knowledge that she would have to pull herself together. The simple and unpretentious way in which she did this may be a recipe of great value to someone else who is facing unhappiness.

"If you have something hard to take," says Joan, "instead of thinking it's the end of the world and settling down to let it eat your heart out, make up your mind to snap out of it. Instead of suffering in silence, do something to take your mind off it. I would look about until I saw something pleasant to rest my eyes upon. Perhaps it would be a painting, a beautiful scenic view, or best of all, my baby.

"After centering my mind on something pleasant, and building more pleasant thoughts around it, the unpleasant memories and worries would disappear. So, little by little, the tension and the gripping unhappiness let go.

"I discovered that a number of pleasant little things will finally overcome one unpleasant big thing."

And these are the reasons for the remarkable change in Joan Blondell.

Dorothy Lee, as a jazzy Annie Oakley, dances with Johnny Arledge at Grace Bradley's Barn Dance. These kids seem to be enjoying the fun.

"Near Blonde"
—till the right powder changed her into a True Blonde

DON'T you often find yourself being called a blonde by some—"not a blonde" by others? This girl, too . . .

Her hair still has some of its baby blondeness. Her skin is very fair. Yet, with the powder she used, she looked mousy, dim—a plain in-between.

The Color Analyst told her to try a blonde's pet shade—Pond's Natural. It made her over! Her skin brightened with a delicate flush, a luminous look. She, herself, said: "Pond's Natural lights up my skin so much that even my hair and eyes have more of that true-blonde sparkle!"

New shades add life

What Natural does for near-blondes—one of the other Pond's shades will do for you. They all add life to the skin.

A new discovery made this possible. With an optical machine (see small picture above) Pond's color-analyzed over 200 girls' skin—all types. They saw what Nature uses to bring beauty. Actual tints hidden in the skin itself!

Take a blonde skin, for instance. A hidden tint of bright blue gives it that dazzling transparency. While a creamy skin gets its glowing enchantment from a hidden note of brilliant green!

Now Pond's has invisibly blended these beauty tints into new, different shades of powder. Thus, you can powder "life" into your skin! Dull skins, pale skins, sallow and florid—each gets the very tint it needs from one of these . . .

NATURAL brings a fine transparency
ROSE CREAM brings a brighter radiance
BRUNETTE brings soft, creamy clarity
ROSE BRUNETTE brings a warm glow
LIGHT CREAM brings a pearly tone

Pond's Powder spreads evenly, clings. Glass jars show shades, keep the perfume. Prices reduced—35¢ and 70¢. Boxes, 10¢ and 20¢, increased in size.

Over 200 girls' skin color-analyzed to find hidden beauty tints—now blended invisibly in Pond's new powder shades!

FREE 5 Lively New Shades Mail coupon today
(This offer expires May 1, 1936)

POND'S, Dept. C94, Clinton, Conn. Please rush, free, 5 different shades of Pond's new Powder, enough of each for a thorough 5-day test.

Name____________________

Street____________________

City____________State________

Copyright, 1936, Pond's Extract Company

If you feel tired, nervous and out of sorts

—there is usually a definite reason for this

Now let's reason sensibly

Don't try to get well in a day . . . this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried.

But there is a certain scientific way you can assist by starting those digestive juices in the stomach to flowing more freely and at the same time supply a balanced mineral deficiency the body needs.

Therefore, if you are pale, tired and run-down . . . a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve—by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Much more could be said—a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road of feeling like yourself again. You should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food . . . sound sleep . . . steady nerves . . . a good complexion . . . and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today.

© S.S.S. Co.

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest that you gamble with substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

SSS TONIC

Makes you feel like yourself again

Sylvia's Advice to the "New Girls"

(Continued from page 55)

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer," her body sways with a charming balance, as if it had been put together by some special, secret trick. Which it hasn't. Just hard work, determination and training have gone to make one think so. And her face—it's so animated! That's it—what Eleanor lacks in regularity of feature and longness of eyelash, she makes up in animation."

But I was more concerned about the legs. I know how these dancing stars have to go on working like galley slaves, thinking up new steps and stunts. Their legs may be as strong as steel, but they mustn't get bulgy muscles or the close-ups will tell on 'em. And when they put on poundage—especially around the hips, which is usually the first spot Mama Nature picks on, I know how hard it is to get rid of that solid, dancer's poundage.

And that goes for any of you active, healthy young gals whether you know anything about tap-dancing or not, but who, suddenly, in spite of an average, healthy life begin to develop a bulge on the hip or an ungraceful line of the thigh or leg. So before I go any further, I'm going to give you a few exercises that are good for keeping you limber and supple, and which will correct certain figure faults which are the result of too much dancing, too much swimming, too much sitting or too much what not. Here they are. Hop to it!

The first one is so simple that it makes rolling off a log look difficult. It's the old-fashioned polka step. (In case you can't remember that far back . . . it's a dance!) Come on now, we'll do it together. Ready? One, two, three and hop. Now on the other side, one, two, three and hop! Keep it up, first on one side then the other. Put plenty of spring into it, baby) and hold your arms up above your head. Let your body sway in rhythm. Be as light and graceful about it as possible. And don't forget the hop! A good fast tune on the radio is a great help. Do this every morning for five minutes.

Now for the next one. Sit down on the floor. Your legs are straight out in front of you with the knees straight, please. Your feet can be about eighteen inches apart. Now with arms up, bend the body forward and touch your forehead to your knees. Don't let me catch you bending those knees. Go on, keep trying—even if you can't do it the first crack out of the box. And if you hear a few cracks . . . never mind . . you are just loosening up those rusty joints.

The third exercise is the famous back-bending one. Stand about eighteen inches from the wall, with your back to the wall. Bend over backwards and place the palms of your hands on the wall. Keep on bending as far as you can, placing your hands further and further down on the wall toward the floor. Now walk along sideways, using your hands to help you balance yourself. Maybe some day you'll get to the point where you can bend over backwards—way, way over—without the help of the wall. But don't try to do that until you have had plenty of wall-practice.

There you are girls, do each one of these exercises for five minutes each morning and you won't know yourselves. You'll get rid of those bulges and be healthy besides. (Incidentally, these exercises will greatly help to relieve constipation.) But wait a minute now, there's more to come.

The other night we went to see "I Dream Too Much," and like a good many others I came out of the theatre humming an aria. My husband said, "What's the matter, darling. (Yes, he still calls me darling), don't you feel good?" And I said, "I was thinking." He said, "About what?" I said, "About Grace Moore. Remember Grace when she came to Hollywood the first time?" He said, "Uh-huh," with the accent on the "Huh," because the Grace Moore of those days, was not the Grace Moore of today. Grace was a patient of mine, one of my prize babies. I had Gloria Swanson in tow at the same time and Gloria was my first responsibility—I was supposed to drop everything when Gloria needed me. And I was in a constant state of dropping, I can tell you! Well, Grace came to Hollywood with a first-string music teacher in her entourage. Gloria, whose voice had a few kinks in it that had to be ironed out for the talkies, wanted the music teacher. And Grace, whose figure had a few kinks in it that had to be ironed out for close-ups, wanted me. They got to arguing about it all. Me, I didn't care as long as my conscience was clear and I could catch up on my sleep.

But it seems that Grace won her point and acquired me. And Gloria won her point and got the Italian do-re-mi boy. So, okay, I told Grace to come on over and we'd get to work. Well, sir, I'd no sooner have Grace ready for the cameras before she'd get a peeve on at somebody and then she'd up and go away on a vacation, take it easy all day and undo all the good work that had been done. That was one of the reasons she left Hollywood with considerably less fanfare than when she came in. And one of the reasons that, when she came back the second time, she didn't make the same mistakes. The second time she put up the stiffest fight for success you've ever seen. She won. And I still cheer for Grace, because I love a good fighter.

To get back to Mademoiselle Pons . . . Lily Pons will not make the mistake of putting on weight. But she may make the mistake of putting it on unevenly and in the wrong spots. That little prima donna offers an object lesson to all pint-sized girls . . . to thin girls with narrow chests . . . to underweight girls who just can't seem to put on a pound where they want it. Remember this: when you want to develop and gain correctly, you must build-up all over; then keep the excess weight off the spots where it is not wanted, by special exercises for those spots. I mustn't take up the space for it now, but I have a "Special Building-up Diet" that will help you put on firm, healthy flesh. If you would like to have it, just write and ask me for it and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

More comparisons. I watched Luise Rainer in "Escapade," and I saw at once what she had which so many other European stars-of-one-picture lacked. She is exotic without being peculiar. She is piquant without being too itsy-bitsy and cute about it all. She has a touch of charming wistfulness without that heavy, melancholy, boogey-man effect of some of the stars. She has an aloofness that is quite intriguing, but she doesn't shut herself up in a phoney shroud of mystery at the drop of a hat. These are mental and spiritual characteristics that I am merely mentioning so that, if the shoe fits, you can put it on. In private life she is natural, without being a hoyden. She wears no make-up except lipstick, but she never looks ill-groomed. Her hair is cut in a Raggedy-Ann style, but not so raggedy that it looks untidy. In other words, she shows good taste—does not overdo things. Either instinct or much study has taught her the difference between the charm of an artistic, carefully-careless appearance and freakishness. I see lots of girls who I wish would devote a little study to that art.

If you are the sort of person, then, who in type or temperament at all resembles this vivacious little Fräulein, watch out for these things: if it pleases you to go about with no make-up, be sure that your skin is faultless and clear enough to stand it; if you cannot be bothered with the fuss and detail of a formal coiffure, make sure your hair is glossy enough to look pretty without a definite wave, and well brushed enough to have some contour; if you adore to put on careless old clothes and have a couple of fits at the mere sight of a girdle, be sure your figure is slim and straight, as a matter of fact it has to be just about perfect.

DO you know what struck me most forcibly about Luise Rainer? While everyone was remarking about her big eyes and cute accent, I was watching her walk. She is a small person, yet she walks with the dignity of a queen. So few people walk really well, that I think I'll give you a hint or two about that very necessary everyday function. Many of you point your toes out when you walk. That's wrong. Always put your feet straight in front of you. Never spread your feet at an angle. Strengthen the muscles in your knees, so they won't sag. (I have an exercise for this.) When your leg muscles are pulled up, you will have the springiness in your walk that is necessary for a graceful carriage. Keep your shoulders back and your head up. I don't mean to exaggerate and stick out your chin like an English Bull dog. Just be natural about it.

And now for the last of these four "new girls"—Rosalind Russell. In a way, the most "average" of these four, because Rosalind is neither a marvelous tap-dancer nor a phenomenal singer nor has she the kind of glamor which the girls from abroad bring over with them in their trunks. She is just a nice, well-bred, clever young American girl who happened to devote her time to acting. She also happened to find her way to the M-G-M lot, where there was already a girl named Myrna Loy. The M-G-M moguls took one look at Rosalind's brunette beauty and heard her crisp, precise diction come over the sound track and they thought, "This one will do. And if anything should ever happen to Myrna . . ." Oh, they wouldn't admit that in a thousand years, but don't tell me they didn't think it. However, that's beside the point. A few months ago, something almost did happen to Myrna, but that difficulty is apparently patched up and the two girls are there on the lot, both busy and happy.

Casting my critical eye over these two girls, at present I find very little fault with either. Their figures are straight and graceful. But Rosalind has to watch her hips and Myrna mostly the upper part of her body and her chin-line. Their make-up is clever and restrained—except for the false eyelashes which—oh, well, most of the stars are wearing them, so I guess I'll just have to wait until the fad blows over. Their voices are pleasant and well-modulated. But there is one thing that always irritates mama and which I want to mention as a word to the wise. It's mannerisms. You know Myrna Loy's trick of chin-lifting—that quick lift of the what Greyhound means to

THIS MAN'S FAMILY

"Here comes Helen—within a minute of the time she promised in her letter! Isn't it grand she can get home so often . . ." (You see, Helen comes home from Stevens College nearly every week-end—without losing an hour of class time, or making a big dent in her allowance.)

Give Dad credit . . . he's the one who started this Greyhound habit, four years ago. It was Dad who showed his boss how to cut sales travel expense in half, by switching to Greyhound. At once, they found that they could reach dozens of new towns, and dig up a lot of profitable new business. No wonder Dad is slated for the sales manager's job.

Mother was a little blue when the family moved here from Centerville, but how she has brightened, since Greyhound has given her a quick, easy way to visit her friends back in the old home town, and to make occasional shopping trips to the big city!

Isn't it fine when old folks take a new lease on life? Grandmother will never forget that eventful trip last spring, through the glory of western mountains, to visit her daughter out on the Coast. She contends that Greyhound bus drivers are just as gallant as the young men of her girlhood.

But let Jimmy have the last word . . . "Say! I oughta know all about Greyhound buses! Our basketball team chartered one of 'em for our last out-of-town game—and we'll save enough this season to get new uniforms."

Greyhound travel is at its best in winter and early spring . . . buses thoroughly warm and comfortable, manned by drivers who have held highest national safety records for years. Why not plan your next trip this way?

PRINCIPAL GREYHOUND INFORMATION OFFICES

CLEVELAND, OHIO . . . . . E. 9th & Superior
PHILADELPHIA, PA. . . . . . Broad St. Station
CHICAGO, ILL. . . . . 12th & Wabash
NEW YORK CITY . . . . Nelson Tower
BOSTON, MASS. . . . . 230 Boylston St.
WASHINGTON, D. C. . . . . 1403 New York Ave., N. W.
DETROIT, MICH. . . . . Tuller Hotel
CINCINNATI, OHIO . . . . . 630 Walnut St.
CHARLESTON, W. VA. . . . . 1100 Kanawha Valley Bldg.
FORT WORTH, TEXAS . . 8th & Commerce Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., Pine & Battery Streets
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. . . . 509 6th Ave., N.
LEXINGTON, KY. . . . . 801 N. Limestone
NEW ORLEANS, LA. . . . . 400 N. Rampart St.
MEMPHIS, TENN. . . . . 146 Union Ave.
ST. LOUIS, MO. . . . Broadway & Delmar Blvd.
RICHMOND, VA. . . . . 412 E. Broad St.
WINDSOR, ONTARIO . . . 1004 Security Bldg.
LONDON, ENGLAND . . . . A. B. Reynoldson, 49 Leadenhall St.

GREYHOUND Lines

MAIL THIS COUPON FOR PICTORIAL FOLDER, TRIP INFORMATION

Fill out and mail this coupon to nearest Greyhound information office (listed above), for interesting pictorial folder, low rates and suggested routes for any trip you may have in mind. Place check mark here, if you wish information on trips to: FLORIDA, GULF COAST, NEW ORLEANS ☐, CALIFORNIA ☐, GREAT SOUTHWEST ☐.

Name ______________________________

Address ____________________________ MM-3

YOUR SKIN'S SO LOVELY DARLING!

TO CLEAR UP SKIN TROUBLES

Try This Improved Pasteurized Yeast That's Easy to Eat

In case after case, pimples, blotches, and other common skin troubles are caused by a sluggish system. That is why external treatments bring you so little lasting relief.

Thousands have found in Yeast Foam Tablets an easy way to correct skin blemishes caused by digestive sluggishness.

Science now knows that very often slow, imperfect elimination of body wastes is brought on by insufficient vitamin B complex. The stomach and intestines, deprived of this essential element, no longer function properly. Your digestion slows up. Poisons, accumulating in your system, cause ugly eruptions and bad color.

Yeast Foam Tablets supply the vitamin B complex needed to correct this condition. These tablets are pure yeast—and yeast is the richest known food source of vitamins B and G. This improved yeast should strengthen and tone up your intestinal nerves and muscles. It should soon restore your eliminative system to healthy function.

With the true cause of your condition corrected, pimples and other common skin troubles disappear. And you feel better as well as look better.

Don't confuse Yeast Foam Tablets with ordinary yeast. These tablets have a pleasant, nut-like taste that you will really enjoy. And pasteurization makes them utterly safe for everyone to eat. They cannot cause fermentation and they contain nothing to put on fat.

Any druggist will supply you with Yeast Foam Tablets. The 10-day bottle costs only 50c. Get one today. Refuse substitutes.

YEAST FOAM TABLETS

Free! MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY
You may paste this on a penny post card

NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO. MM—3-36
1750 North Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Please send free introductory package of Yeast Foam Tablets.

Name ____________________

Address ____________________

City ____________________ State ________

chin which she uses to emphasize her words? It's very attractive—the first eight times. If you have personal mannerisms which your friends—or your mirror—tell you are attractive, watch out that you don't overdo them. In fact, I'd say that the minute you begin to get conscious of them, discard them entirely. I've seen girls with pretty hands who used those hands prettily—so prettily and so often that, as the brother said in "Alice Adams," the air was full of them. Then there are the nose-wrinklers and the eyebrow-lifters. The girls who flutter their eyelashes, the gigglers and the girls who toss back their heads when they laugh, on account of it shows off their pretty throats to advantage. Don't overdo things like that.

Now, darlings, I've finished today's lesson. I want you all to get busy and get all the loveliness and health that belong to you. Are there any questions? Write me your problems, whatever they are. I will help you with your beauty, your figure, general health and other difficulties. It is my work and I love it. And remember this: to me your problems are more important than the movie stars' and furthermore I read and answer every one of your letters myself, and everything is strictly confidential. Let's work together. Sit down and WRITE NOW! It doesn't cost a thing. Just a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

And here's a surprise for you! I've just finished a special consultation and measurement chart. It will help you check and control your weight. Would you like to have one? You would? Okay, darlings, just send in the little coupon below.

Madame SYLVIA,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 Madison Ave.,
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Madame Sylvia:

Please send me your SPECIAL CONSULTATION AND MEASUREMENT CHART for weight control.

Name ....

Street ....

City .... State ....

(Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope)

He's Going to Be Married

(Continued from page 46)

remembering colors my desires, my emotions, my standards even now—well, how could it be otherwise? Eleven years are very long years when one is very young, and they sink deep.

"The other—ah—jilting," said Randy, this time with an amused smile, "happened after I came to Hollywood. And the lady was very different from the girl back home. She was dark. She was vivid. She was beautiful. She was very modern. She had been twice married and twice widowed. Perhaps she was afraid. Perhaps she did not love me enough. Whatever the reason, whatever her motive, she decided, at the last moment, that she had rather not. . . .

"The first time," said the tall Southerner, who has played so many Westerners, "the first time I loved with my heart, all of it. The second time with my emotions. And the third, and last time, I shall love with my head.

"I am looking, now, for very definite qualifications. I mean, I believe that marriage should have a basis, that one should say, 'I want such and such from marriage.' It sounds very much like a vital statistic—an 'Intention To Wed' with a detailed list of requirements.

"My standard has nothing to do with physical qualifications. I have no picture of an ideal girl which I carry around in my mind's eye. I'm sure that I would not recognize the future Mrs. Scott if she stood before me at this moment. For I don't care particularly, what she looks like. I have no preference for either a blonde or a brunette. I don't care how old she is, or how tall, or even," Randy laughed, "how fat!

"I do care what she is like inside. She must not be an actress. I will not marry a professional. Not, at any rate, one occupied in screen work.

"She must be domestic enough to want to supervise my home with competence and dignity and charm. Because I want a home—with the linens kept in lavender and the silverware shining and the floors waxed and the table bountiful. I do not want a hotel where people I barely know 'drop in' for drinks.

"She must be a woman who wants motherhood. Because I want children. I want a family. And I want a woman who will mother that family and not turn our children over to nursemaids.

"She must be a woman for whom I can feel a profound respect. Such a respect, I hope, as she will be able to feel for me. I have seen enough marriages where both parties have fallen off their pedestals, and the shattered pieces, for some weird reason, remain together. With horrid results.

"If anyone should ask me what I think is the most absolutely necessary ingredient in love and marriage I should say, mutual respect.

"Which brings me back to what I said a few minutes ago—that watching many of the Hollywood marriages has kept me from erring on more than one occasion.

"Not that I am often tempted. I'm not. I'm not easily attracted to women. I don't believe that I could fall in love at first sight. I'm not emotionally impulsive.

"And the very nature of my work is my safety-valve. For, after all, the very basis of our work in pictures is sex. We make love to the most beautiful women in the world in every picture we make. And while it would be gross exaggeration to say that I fall in love with every lovely lady I'm cast opposite, it would also be grossly untrue to say that there is no emotional element between us. Of course, I feel attracted while we are working together. Of course, I feel an emotional appeal. And the result is that I get rid of a great deal of surface emotionalism that would, otherwise, be pent up inside of me.

"Since it is a part of my day's work to make love to pretty girls I am somewhat immunized. I am not so likely to be carried away by a pretty face after working hours. I am not like the chap in an office who may see one or two beautiful girls in the course of a week's work, may have a personable secretary and being thus curtailed, emotionally, he falls madly in love the first time a fair charmer trips across his line of vision.

Farmer Frank Albertson and his wife step out to neighbor Grace Bradley's for her big hay-de-ho party!

"Then, too, the nature of my work teaches me how superficial sex attraction can be. A momentary thing. Gone, as some sun-breathing flowers are gone, with the setting of the sun. I have learned, through my work, that I must look for something more than mere sex attraction when I decide to marry. There must be something between my wife-to-be and myself which will develop and strengthen and mature.

"And so," the tall young Virginian said, rising and walking to the window and back again, "I am going to be married with the hope, the profound hope of staying married. My head rules my heart now. And I am hoping that my head will dictate wisely for me and for—for her, wherever she may be, whoever she may be. But if I make a mistake—as anyone may—then I should, of course, divorce. For if there is one thing in the world more important than any other it is harmony.

"I am going to be married—and it is my prayer that our marriage will be a true one, housed by the four walls of a home, made substantial by the rearing and raising of children, made holy by time and respect and love and faith."

To spank or not to spank?

Would you punish a child for this?

SHOULD A CHILD be spanked when he refuses to take a laxative he hates? Millions of mothers say: "NO!"

They believe in working with the child —not against him. So when their children need a laxative they use one all youngsters love to take — Fletcher's Castoria!

Do you know that even the taste of Fletcher's Castoria is made especially for children? It's one laxative they take without struggling. And that's mighty important. For the gagging a child undergoes when forced to take a bad-tasting laxative can seriously upset his digestion.

But good taste is only one reason why you should rely on Fletcher's Castoria. Another reason is . . . Fletcher's Castoria is SAFE, gentle—yet thorough.

Unlike some "grown-up" laxatives, Fletcher's Castoria has no strong, purging drugs. It won't form a habit—and it will never cause griping pains.

Your druggist sells Fletcher's Castoria. Get the thrifty Family-Size Bottle tonight. The signature Chas. H. Fletcher appears on every carton.

Chas H. Fletcher
CASTORIA
The Children's Laxative
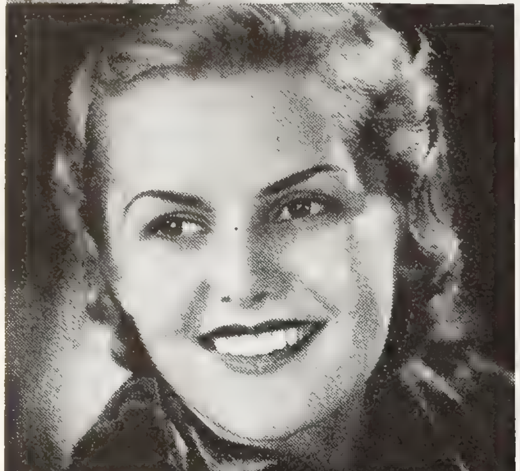
from babyhood to 11 years

"SHE HAD THE KIND OF LIPS MEN LIKE TO KISS"

SAID

GARY COOPER



Popular male star gives his reasons for choosing the Tangee Girl

GARY COOPER, star of "Desire", a Paramount Picture, picks the most kissable lips in lipstick test.

● We presented three lovely girls to Gary Cooper. One wore the ordinary lipstick... one, no lipstick... the third, Tangee.

"Her lips look kissable," he said, choosing the Tangee girl, "because they look natural."

And other men agree. They don't like to kiss lipstick either, and that's why Tangee is so much in vogue today. Tangee makes your lips glow with natural color, but it avoids "that painted look," because Tangee isn't paint. If you prefer more color for evening, use Tangee Theatrical. Try Tangee. In two sizes, 39c and $1.10. Or, for a quick trial, send 10c for the special 4-Piece Miracle Make-Up Set offered below.

● BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES... when you buy. Don't let some sharp sales person switch you to an imitation... there's only one Tangee.

World's Most Famous Lipstick

TANGEE

ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

New FACE POWDER now contains the magic Tangee color principle

TANGEE
TANGEE ROUGE
TANGEE
TANGEE CREME ROUGE

★ 4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP SET

THE GEORGE W. LUFT COMPANY MM36
417 Fifth Avenue, New York City
Rush Miracle Make-Up Set of miniature Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge, Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin) 15¢ in Canada.

Check Shade ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Light Rachel

Name____________________
Please Print
Address____________________
City____________State________

Gable's New Freedom

(Continued from page 39)

written. I can't help that. I will not have authorized them. And I don't care what they say as long as they don't quote me as saying it. My name will be linked, as it has been, ridiculously, with every feminine letter of the alphabet. I don't give a hang for myself. I do hate to be a source of embarrassment, however unintentional, to any woman. And that's that!"

"But your life from now on? Will you talk about that?"

"Why not?" said Clark. "My new freedom will consist in my living as I've always lived—only more so. I never did much partying about. Now I'll do less. I haven't been anywhere since my return from South America. I always have worked all day and gone home at night to read or play bridge. I always went hunting or fishing when I had time off. I always attended the races. I'll do the same now—plus.

I HAVE a new clause in my contract which gives me six weeks of every year free for a trip. This year I went to South America. Next, I'll go to China. The year after to India and then to Tibet, Greece, the Isle of Malta and to all of the remote corners of the globe. I'll always fly. That's what I want and that's what I have—now.

"And I'll travel alone. Kipling says, doesn't he, that 'He travels fastest who travels alone?' Well, he must have meant me, among others. Alone and by air. The combination should get me places.

"I don't even want another man to go with me. Too apt to impose restrictions, and no matter how congenial you may be, there's bound to be a conflict of opinions.

"I'm a lone wolf at heart and always have been. My mistakes have all come from disregarding this basic law of my nature. Now I shall observe it. That's all."

And I thought again, as he talked, sitting on the edge of a chair too fragile for him, "No one woman could hold this man. He isn't a woman's man at all. He's too charged with a restless, reckless vitality, too untamed of spirit. He's a gypsy. He has a huge impatience of shackles. He has no place—he simply doesn't belong in night clubs, boudoirs, salons.

He doesn't care for clothes. He never uses screen make-up—a powder puff is poison to him. He doesn't want possessions. He wouldn't know what to do with luxury. He scorns softness, small talk and coquetry. He laughs, uneasily, in the face of feminine adulation. He is like a bull in the china shop of marriage.

He was saying, "I'm living in a hotel in Beverly Hills. I like that, too. I don't want a home. I have no sort of use for a place which binds me with taxes, upkeep and the fetters of possessions. At the hotel I can sleep and eat, come and go, as I please and when I please. I can breakfast at five in the morning if I feel like it—and I often do—and no routine is disturbed. I can't abide routine. It stifles me as physically as a pillow over my face."

"So many things money can buy," I suggested.

"What?" demanded Clark. "Huge estates, you mean, swimming pools, flocks of cars, interior decorators, parties—the things that belong to the luxury standard?

"But I have all those things and no strings to 'em. The world is huge enough to do me for an estate. I can jump a tramp steamer any day without responsibility. I can swim in the seven seas which don't have to be drained, scraped or sterilized. I can only wear one suit at a time, sleep in one bed, read one book and eat one meal.

"No, I wouldn't know what to do with vast possessions. But they would know what to do with me. And here's what: They would drive me mad in time. I want to move and keep moving. I want to inherit the earth, not ten fenced acres of it."

IS this all you want of life?" I ventured, thinking of all the richness at his very hand, the romance, the proffered hearts of the composite femininity of the world.

"What d'you mean, 'all'?" Clark asked, his laugh resounding. "I've just told you I've got the earth and more. I've got my work, too. I like to work. I've done it for so long that it doesn't hold any particular excitement for me, no novelty, but it keeps me moving, gives me an interest. And now, between times, I can go where I please. What more is there to want?"

"Well," I said, fascinated by the vision of the thousands of women who have mobbed him for his autograph, a word, a smile, a nod—"well, I mean women. Don't you ever think it might be fun to adventure amorously—just a dash of Casanova, y'know?"

"Gosh, no!" laughed Clark. "I like women, of course. I like companionable women with a sense of humor, women who can laugh with a fellow. I don't know what to do with strange ones who look at me goggle-eyed. They make me feel uncomfortable. They always have. It's not going to be any different now. My new freedom is the freedom of the seas—and no sirens on the rocks, either.

"Besides, it's a lot of hooey—women being 'crazy' about a star— whether it's me or the next one. They can't care about me because they don't know the real me, the man behind the star. It doesn't make sense. Every time I appear in public I imagine people are saying 'Oh, so that's Gable, is it?' (which is ridiculous, for Clark is handsomer off the screen than he is on—and "regular").

"Look," said Clark, in the tone of voice one uses to teach a very dumb child a simple lesson, "the day I was leaving South America a crowd came to the airport. How they knew I was leaving, I'll never know. They are more rabid fans down there than they are up here, if possible. I kept as much to myself as I could and as I was waiting to take off, I found myself standing next to a nice looking girl of about twenty. She looked sensible and she was staring at me. I said to her, on an impulse, 'Look here, what made you come down here to see me?' And she answered, 'Curiosity.' She spoke the truth and I liked her for her honesty. Curiosity—that's the answer. But I'm not a curiosity, I'm just a man like any other and all I ask is to live my life in comfort and freedom."

I recalled the very first interview I ever did with Clark. It was right after M-G-M realized what manner of star they had "in the bag." I remember saying, "How will you feel if at the end of the year you find yourself in the spot Valentino once occupied—when women literally tear the clothes off your back?" And Clark answered, an honestly naïve horror in his fine eyes, "I think it would be sorta repulsive." Well, he still thinks so.

"When you're in Hollywood and working, what do you do evenings?"

"I usually go home to the hotel, lock the door, go to bed and read."

I said briefly, but with feeling "Pig!"

"'Pig'?" inquired Clark politely.

"Pig," I reiterated firmly—"with all the romance in the world just waiting 'round the corner, with all the eager-eyed girls, all the amorous adventures, and you shut yourself up in your room to read!"

"I can't seem to make you understand," said Clark, in the loud, rather labored tones in which one speaks to the slightly deaf, "that's just what I want to do! And, that's what freedom is for!"

Clark laughed. His hands made a gesture dispensing with the world, the flesh, the devil and all the angels.

I said, "Is it out of turn to ask whether you think you will ever marry again?"

"Nope, not out of turn. But I don't know. I can't say that I won't. I may, but it's a bit soon. I'm not unmarried yet —and I never look ahead. Some day, no doubt, I shall have encompassed the earth, since there are limitations even there. And when that day comes, and after the screen has hung a 'To Let' sign on my dressing-room door, I may buy a ranch out here in California and settle down—some.

"But first," said Clark, stretching out his arms, that lazy smile curving his mouth, "there are the seas to be sailed, the skies to be explored, the lakes to be fished and the mountains to be scaled. There's freedom—and it's mine!"

He's a Travellin' Man

(Continued from page 52)

other kind, George prefers to make Westerns. He doesn't make them just because he can ride a horse.

"Of course I prefer them," he will tell you enthusiastically. "But we don't call them Westerns any more. You know a Western used to be a picture in which the heroine wore a sunbonnet and the hero rode a horse. If the hero was called upon to act he simply expanded his chest and followed it in a straight line across the stage.

"But that's the old-fashioned idea," George laughed. "We're making 'outdoor dramas' now. We buy the best stories available and hire actors who can act as well as ride a horse. In my last two pictures—'Thunder Mountain' and 'Whispering Smith Speaks'—there aren't any horses. They're both railroad stories. We go wherever the script sends us for background. I went to England for exteriors for 'Cowboy Millionaire' and recently I've worked in Arizona and Mexico. There is more drama, to my way of thinking, in some of the wonderful scenery we have photographed for our pictures than there is in any film made in a studio. While the Clark Gables sweat away under the hot lights, I'm outdoors on a horse having a swell time—doing the sort of thing I like to do."

A year ago George terminated his contract with the Fox Company by mutual consent.

"Westerns are out," Fox executives told him. "You'll have to get back into the parlor."

"I don't believe Westerns are out," he

A beauty bath like unbelievable magic!

✿ The whole world is diligently striving to educate women to develop greater personal charm and beauty — and the now recognized outstanding beauty secret is the Linit Bath, for its results are immediate, and it is amazingly economical.

✿ Just imagine stepping out of your bath and after drying, finding that your skin is soft and satiny smooth as a rose petal.

✿ Prove to yourself this claim made for the Linit Bath, by making this simple test on your hands. Dissolve some Linit in your basin water, wash your hands as usual and, after drying, feel your skin. It will be soft and smooth as the rarest old velvet. This is also the immediate result obtained when Linit is used in your tub water, for the Linit Bath accomplishes the same thing for the entire body.

✿ And remember, the Linit Beauty Bath does away with the damp or semi-dry feeling of the skin that usually follows an ordinary bath. Linit leaves on the skin an exceedingly fine porous coating of powder which absorbs perspiration without clogging the pores, makes dusting with bath talcum unnecessary and imparts to the body an exquisite sense of personal daintiness.

for fine Laundering

Don't overlook the directions on the Linit package—recommending Linit for starching. Linit makes even ordinary cotton fabrics look and feel like linen.

Linit

LINIT
FOR THE BATH
LINIT
FOR THE BATH

LINIT IS SOLD BY ALL GROCERS

The Bathway to a Soft, Smooth Skin

Do you know the 8th WOMAN?

Why be miserable, or even uncomfortable certain days of every month? Be that eighth woman who lets Midol carry her serenely through those difficult days. There used to be eight million sufferers every month. Today a million women are smart enough to use Midol and escape this regular martyrdom to pain.

You can depend on Midol. Tiny tablets, perfectly pleasant to take. Not narcotic. A merciful medicine which specialists recommend for regular pain. Nature doesn't make the woman who uses Midol give up a cherished "date" for the theatre — or even a dance. It means freedom!

This truly remarkable medicine may be taken any time, preferably at the first sign of approaching pain, to avoid the suffering altogether. But Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It is effective for hours, so two tablets should carry you through your worst day.

You get these tablets in a trim little aluminum case. All druggists have them —they're usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or, clip coupon:

An enjoyable evening, no trace of pain; the time of month forgotten—thanks to Midol.

Try it MIDOL free!

For the proof that Midol does relieve periodic pain, send for a free trial box to MIDOL, Dept. E-36, 170 Varick St., New York.

*Name*____________________

*Street*____________________

*P. O.*____________________

And just what goes on? Erik Rhodes, with a Harpo Marx touch, rests his leg in Glenda Farrell's and Addison Randall's laps. At the Bradley hick party.

told them, "and I'll not be a parlor hero. I like making Westerns. I'll quit."

AND he was just confident enough to form his own company with Sol Lesser and John Zanfdt, and begin a new series of "outdoor dramas." And who do you think releases these pictures? Certainly! Twentieth Century-Fox! So George is still a Fox star.

His contract calls for a three months' vacation after each picture, so the minute he finishes work and the picture is cut, off he goes on a trip.

George is married to the beautiful Marguerite Churchill who, in talking with a friend recently, confessed that she was first attracted to her husband because he travelled so much.

"He made a lot of pictures," she said, "but he managed to have time to travel all over the world. There was no place you could mention that he had not visited or contemplated visiting in the near future."

What was at first a mutual interest developed into an enthusiastic love affair and George and Marguerite were married.

"And we've been travelling between pictures ever since," he laughed.

"I'm strictly not a routine man," he said. "I can't stay put. I don't want to stay in one place and be the pillar of the town and rust and rot and grow stale. I want to go every place and see everything before I'm too old and it all passes me by.

"Marguerite is the same way. She likes to travel and see everything and is the best sport about packing up and leaving at a minute's notice. A lot of girls wouldn't do that," he added, with a note of pride.

"We thought having a baby would change all that, slow us down for a while, you know, but we had taken two trips before she was three months old. We left her home because she's better off there with the nurse, but we'll soon be taking her along. You see children every place you go. They're on boats, trains and planes. They seem to have every convenience for them these days," he said hopefully. For it is one of his dreams to take his little Orin Ynez (named Ynez because that is the name of the Mexican town where George and Marguerite were married) all over the world with them.

"Of course, when she is older and going to school, we can't be jerking her out in the middle of a term and taking her to Japan or Singapore, but that is all the more reason why we want to do our traveling now," he said firmly.

"We have a home at the beach. It's not a big place but comfortable, and we call it headquarters."

Recently the house next door to the O'Briens' temporary home caught fire in the middle of the night and burned to the ground. Immediately George got his family organized. The baby and the nurse and all the important baby things were bundled into the limousine, which stood in front of the house ready to leave at a word. That attended to, George climbed onto the roof with the garden hose and kept his house wet until the fire chief said the danger was over. Then the O'Briens went back to bed.

"Now let's get organized," George said, when his company arrived at a location near Sonora a day early and found camp wasn't prepared. "Let's fix the beds for those who have to work early in the morning and the rest can go to town to a hotel."

In no time this was done and everything was "organized" for an early start next morning.

A FEW miles away Warner Baxter and his company were making exterior scenes for "Robin Hood of El Dorado," and every night while George was in that camp, Warner was his dinner guest. For the O'Brien company is noted for its good food and every actor in Hollywood knows it. When on a distant location they have a chuck wagon, but when they are working within fifty miles of Hollywood they never eat box lunches, as every other motion picture company does. They have a caterer and the best food money can buy is served them from the swank Victor Hugo in Beverly Hills. Good food, George thinks, comes under the heading of organization.

"You save money, there is better feeling and the men work harder if they are well fed," he declares. "All we were up there for was the scenery and we got, in eleven days, what it took Warner's company five weeks to get—even with Warner taking his meals with us!

"Good food on location is insurance against temperament, which is old-fashioned anyway. We have to have good feeding in making outdoor pictures, we work so hard."

George introduced the chuck wagon while he was a Fox star, but before it was put into use he had to show the business manager that for 24c a meal he could feed the men on location better meals than they were getting in the 50c box lunches.

His vacations were always spent at some job that kept him outdoors. It was during one vacation that he met Tom Mix. Because George was husky and looked able to carry the heavy camera equipment over the hills, he was taken on as a camera assistant. That was his introduction to Hollywood and he stuck to the camera for six months. His fine physique got him small parts in pictures and he began doubling for stars. "It wouldn't be fair to tell who they were because some of them are still stars," he explains.

You'll hear it often said by stars that they wouldn't ask a double to do anything they wouldn't do themselves. In George's case it is true. Only last week in a scene for "Whispering Smith Speaks," his latest picture, George was supposed to jump from one moving train to another, speeding in the opposite direction. George wanted to do it himself but the director refused to allow him and sent for a double.

"We can't afford to take a chance," the director argued. "If anything happened the picture would be held up."

GEORGE agreed. But when the double arrived and was told what he had to do he refused, and a second double was sent for. While they waited the director made closeup shots of George about to make the leap. Frank Good, who has been George's cameraman for years, sidled over to George and whispered: "Are you going to do it?"

"Sure," George replied. So Good set up his camera to catch the whole scene instead of just a closeup. The engineer, not knowing that George was going to jump, speeded up and the entire company gasped as our hero landed lightly on his feet on the other train.

"It was nothing," George said afterward. "I can do my stunts better than most stunt men and it's better for the picture if I do them myself."

"Well, we won't retake it," the director commented grimly.

George is mindful of the fact that to his youthful fans he is a hero and for that reason he never takes a drink or smokes in a picture.

"I always get my man before I'm so embarrassed I have to light a cigarette," he laughs. But, strangely enough, George is never seen smoking or drinking off the screen, either.

At the opening of the operatic season in New York last Fall, George and Marguerite were present. During intermission a strange gentleman approached George in the lobby and said: "It seems strange to see you here. I thought you didn't belong, but on second look I guess you do."

"Why were you surprised?" George asked. "Because I haven't my horse with me, or don't you like me in evening clothes?"

"I love music," he continued, putting the gentleman at ease. "I studied piano for eight years. I ride my horse for a living. This is my pleasure."

A huge crowd as well as a vast radio audience was treated to a bit of his ready Irish wit at the premiere of the picture, "Midsummer Night's Dream" in Beverly Hills. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien were a handsome couple as they arrived in front of the theatre. Marguerite was pushed in front of the microphone in the lobby, introduced as "Miss Churchill" and asked to say something, which she did charmingly.

Maureen O'Sullivan has answered the call to London, too. She'll do "Soldiers Three" for GB.

"And now we have George O'Brien," said the announcer, as he pushed George toward the microphone. "Tell our radio listeners what you think of the Warner Brothers for bringing Shakespeare to Hollywood, George."

Smilingly George stepped up to the "mike." From his debonair manner you would never guess that he had a problem. He must let everyone know that the beautiful woman who had just spoken was his wife; he must say something nice about the picture and he must do it quickly. He did all those things in a most forthright and subtle manner when he said:

"I always agree with Mrs. O'Brien."

POWDER TROUBLE
CAN'T PUT POWDER ON THIS ROUGH SKIN!
1 SECOND LATER
GRAND! POND'S VANISHING CREAM FIXES THAT BEDTIME
OVERNIGHT, TOO—FOR EXTRA SOFTNESS

ROUGH "POWDER CATCHERS" Melt Away AT A TOUCH!

SKIN FEELS BABY-SOFT... SMOOTH

You know those flaky little bits that rough up your skin?—especially on your nose and chin. Such powder catchers!

They are really countless little cells, forever drying up. Flaking off on the top of your skin! This is a natural process which goes on day in, day out—the skin's way of throwing off old dead cells.

"Then how can skin come smooth?"

You can melt away those powder catchers! A leading dermatologist says:

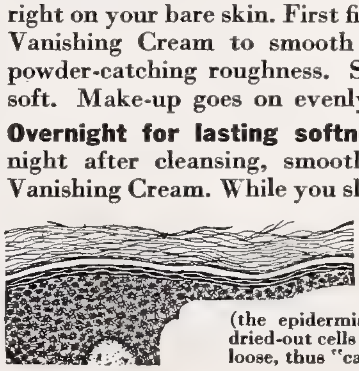
"Although cells on surface skin are constantly drying out, becoming horny—they can be melted off instantly with a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream). Then the young cells beneath come into view and the skin has the smoothness of a child's."

Do this yourself with Pond's Vanishing Cream. It has that keratolytic property which melts off dried surface cells. This explains how Pond's Vanishing Cream smooths skin so quickly!

Touch it to your face. There and then you feel every roughness melt away, disappear. Look again and see how soft your skin is. Powder can't "catch" on a skin like this!

For a smooth make-up — Never powder right on your bare skin. First film on Pond's Vanishing Cream to smooth away every powder-catching roughness. Skin becomes soft. Make-up goes on evenly and clings.

Overnight for lasting softness — Every night after cleansing, smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream. While you sleep, it brings your skin an extra softness. Your face is cool, not a bit greasy. Next morning, you'll find your skin decidedly softer!



Cross-section of outer skin (the epidermis) showing how dried-out cells on top skin flake loose, thus "catch" powder.

Mrs. Alexander Cochrane Forbes
Grandniece of MRS. JAMES ROOSEVELT says: "Pond's Vanishing Cream melts away roughnesses... keeps my skin smooth for powder."

8-Piece Package POND'S, Dept. C-136, Clinton, Conn. Rush 8-piece package containing special tube of Pond's Vanishing Cream, generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ for postage and packing.

Name____________________

Street____________________

City____________State______

Copyright, 1936, Pond's Extract Company

Lights! Camera! It's the Quints!

(Continued from page 36)

told me, "something of an advertisement for children who have never had the emotional stimulus of petting and adoring aunts and uncles, grandmas and grandpas. Science has been mother and father to them, aunt, uncle and grandparents. The results are so perfect, so glowing and healthy that, as Jean said, "I can only say that were my wife and I to have another child, I could wish for nothing better than one exactly like any one of the Quintuplets. I have never seen more perfect specimens, mentally and physically, anywhere."

They are jolly babies, good-natured, friendly among themselves and with others. They never whine. They never fret. When they roll about on the floor, pulling each others' hair, kissing and laughing it is all happy play. They are never little "meanies." They have, each one of them, sunny dispositions.

Their habits are, of course, 100 per cent normal. They sleep sixteen hours a day. Jean told me that when they arrived in Callander and reached the famous hospital, the babies were having their naps. And they were out of doors in their leather perambulators, side by side. The perambulators were covered with snow, the thermometer registering 17 degrees below zero! And when the babies were brought in, at the appointed time and not a minute before or after, their eyes were like dark diamonds and their cheeks were damask peonies. They always take their naps out of doors and below zero weather holds no terrors for them.

They eat the food prescribed for the average husky eighteen months old child. Chops and cereals, fruit juices and spinach. They all love spinach! Not one of them, in fact, is fussy about her food. They eat anything given them and love it! They have never been "problem children" either as regards to their food or any of their other habits.

And they all eat the same things. There is no special diet for Cecile and another one for Emilie. Once in a great while, Dr. Dafoe told Jean, one of them may break out with a slight rash and when that happens, he changes the diet for a day or two until the rash clears up. But that is the only time any difference is made in their feeding.

THEY have the requisite number of teeth. In fact, they are slightly above normal both in their physical and mental development. Once every month two psychiatrists, one from New York, the other from Toronto come to Callander to observe them. And they report that the babies are far advanced in some ways for their ages and a bit behind in some others—but that their average is above normal.

And it must be borne in mind, as Dr. Dafoe pointed out to Jean, that the babies are not really eighteen months old—they are, really, only about fifteen months, having been two and a half months premature at birth. And so, when they are checked as eighteen months old children, this should be taken into consideration.

They all speak a few words in English. They say "Da-Da" to Dr. Dafoe. They say "ta-ta" very politely when they are given anything. They can say "ball" and "doll" when they are playing with these toys. But the rest of their infant patter is in French. They are learning to speak French before they speak English. Their two nurses, Mlle. Cecile and Mlle. Yvonne are French and talk French to them entirely. But as Dr. Dafoe speaks English to them, they are well on the way to becoming accomplished linguists before they are two.

Nurse Yvonne, Jean told me, takes a little extra-special pride in the accomplishments of Mlle. Yvonne Dionne while Nurse Cecile takes the same extra-special pride in Mlle. Cecile Dionne.

They have a storeroom under the hospital full of toys—every kind of toy ever devised by the ingenuity of Santa Claus—toys contributed by friends and "admirers" from every corner of the globe.

And their favorite toys are clothes-pins! The old fashioned clothes pins of the kind that nip on.

They adore their combs, too. They love to play with them and to comb each other's hair—they do it very gently, there is never any pulling and crying about it.

They will, in fact, pass up balls, dolls, games and all kinds of glittering playthings for their clothes pins and their combs. They all like small toys better than large ones. Thus the small wooden whistle, now so proudly owned by Jean. He put it in his pocket one day, while working with them, mistaking it for a clothes-pin which he was supposed to have in his pocket for one of the scenes in the picture.

They each have five tiny sets of garments, complete from the rosy skin out. And each garment, even the small panties, has the name of the owner embroidered thereon. Each set is exactly alike except that the small frocks are different colors . . . pastel blue for Emilie, Marie the pastel pink, Cecile the pastel green, Annette the pastel yellow and Yvonne the white.

While Jean and Miss Peterson were up there, five small fur coats were sent as gifts, white rabbit fur, with caps to match. And even these had their names embroidered in the linings and each lining was a different pastel color.

They call Dr. Dafoe "Da-Da" and they are, Jean told me, crazy about the good doctor—as well they might be! They know him, of course, better than they do anyone save their nurses. The balance of their household consists of a housekeeper and there are ever present, of course, the Canadian Provincial guards doing sentry duty around the high wall surrounding the hospital.

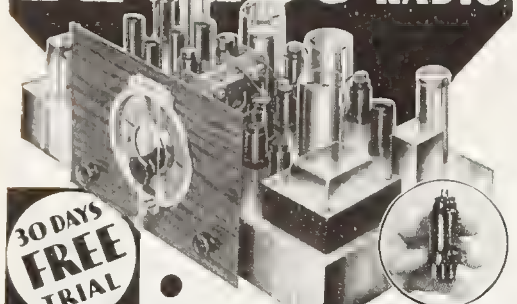
Dr. Dafoe visits the babies twice daily. And the first thing in the morning one of the nurses calls him and reports the morning weights and the developments, if any, of the night.

WHEN the good doctor enters the nursery they run to him, all five of them en masse and make a concerted drive for his attention. And their reactions are perfectly feminine. For if he picks Cecile up first, Annette claws and tugs at his trouser legs until her turn comes—and so it goes, five times.

"We were only allowed to work with them for a short time each day," Jean said, "and Dr. Dafoe was right there with us, his eyes on the babies, every minute. His word is law. The longest stretch of time we ever worked with them, at any one time, was fifty-five minutes one day. Another day we only worked eight or nine minutes. The babies became very hilarious and Dr. Dafoe stopped us, saying that they were over-stimulated.

"Every care and precaution was used by each one of us. I had to have my nose and throat sprayed each day as I entered the

BUY DIRECT FROM LABORATORIES!
Amazing New 1936 Super Deluxe
METAL TUBE MIDWEST
14-Tube 5-BAND RADIO



30 DAYS FREE TRIAL
TERMS AS LOW AS $5.00 DOWN
TUNING RANGE OF 9 TO 2400 METERS
VISUAL BAND SELECTION
5 WAVE BANDS
NEW ACOUSTI-TONE
SPLIT HAIR SELECTIVITY
MONEY-BACK Guarantee

$39.50 with NEW Deluxe AUDITORIUM-TYPE SPEAKER ··LESS TUBES··

EVERYWHERE — radio enthusiasts are praising this amazingly beautiful, bigger, better, more powerful, super selective 14-tube 5-band radio. Out-performs $150 to $200 radios on a side-by-side test — and will thrill you with its glorious Acousti Tone, crystal-clear "concert" realism—and magnificent foreign reception. Never before so much radio for so little money! Before you buy any radio, write for the FREE 40-page 1936 catalog TODAY!

50 ADVANCED 1935 FEATURES

Scores of marvelous features, many of them exclusive, explain Midwest super performance and thrilling world-wide reception...and prove why nationally known orchestra leaders like George Olsen, Jack Denny, Fred Waring, use the Midwest in preference to more costly makes. This advanced 5-band set enables you to switch instantly from American programs to Canadian, police, amateur, "secret," experimental, airplane and ship broadcasts — to the finest and most fascinating programs from Europe, Asia, Australia, and S. America.

U.S. Design Pat. No. 96750

DEAL DIRECT WITH LABORATORIES

No middleman's profits to pay—you buy at wholesale price direct from laboratories . . . saving 30% to 50%. Increasing costs mean higher prices soon. Take advantage of Midwest's sensational values. As little as $5.00 down puts a Midwest in your home on 30 days free trial. You are triply protected with: Foreign Reception Guarantee, Parts Guarantee, Money-Back Guarantee!

SAVE UP TO 50%

MAIL COUPON TODAY for Free 30-DAY TRIAL OFFER and 40-PAGE FOUR-COLOR Free CATALOG

MIDWEST · QUALITY RADIOS SINCE 1920

MIDWEST RADIO CORP.
Dept. 182R, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Without obligation on my part, send me your new FREE catalog and complete details of your liberal 30-day FREE trial offer. This is NOT an order.

User - Agents Make Easy Extra Money Check Here ☐ for details

Name__________
Address__________
Town__________ State__________

Check ☐ if interested in Midwest All-Wave Battery Radio

WORK FOR THE

RAILWAY POSTAL CLERKS CLERKS
CITY CARRIERS

GOVERNMENT

START $1260 to $2100 YEAR

Common Education Usually Sufficient
MEN— WOMEN
Mail Coupon Today SURE.

COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. F-323, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush without charge, (1) 32-page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to get one of these jobs. Send sample coaching.
Name....................
Address....................

hospital, as did the others. They allowed us only one cameraman and one electrician. These two men, with Director Henry King, Miss Peterson and myself comprised the cast and crew in Callander. Both Mr. King and I were very anxious to take our wives with us on the trip and planned to, but we were asked, courteously but firmly, to bring with us the very minimum number of people we could. The children are so sedulously guarded, you know. The public may come and look at them at certain hours in the afternoon—but only from a distance. No one but Dr. Dafoe, the nurses and the housekeeper actually ever breathe the air they breathe. And their parents, too, of course, whenever they come to see them. Which is whenever they want.

Jean said: "I have played all kinds of parts, bits, leads, starring roles—and I certainly consider this the greatest part, the biggest thing that has ever happened to me in my whole career. I couldn't believe it when they sent for me to come to talk about 'a picture.' In fact, I had made up my mind that I would turn it down, no matter what it might happen to be. I had just been assigned one of the biggest parts I've had in some time in a picture on my home lot, and I was grimly determined that I would not be switched. And then, when I was asked, 'How would you like to play the part of Dr. Dafoe in "The Country Doctor"?'—Well," said Jean, "I tell you, I had to run right home and tell my wife about it, I was so excited! And do you know, when it was announced that I was to play the title role, I had cables from Denmark and London, congratulations from almost everywhere. On our return trip complete strangers would come up to me and ask to shake my hand—the hand that had fondled the Quintuplets. Twenty-two newspaper men and women went with us, representatives from almost every big newspaper and syndicate in the country.

"This may be the 'Quints' only picture. I do know that they are never to be 'exhibited'—as the word is used in connection with the Siamese Twins or the Singer Midgets—or any other departures from the norm. They have, now, a trust fund of $200,000 and the Government is going to make a park of the acreage surrounding the hospital so that they may have a safe and roomy playground. I believe that the present plan is for them to have governesses and tutors for a time and then, eventually, to go to school with other children.

"I spent four evenings, while up there, with Dr. Dafoe in the pine-panelled library of his comfortable home nearby. We sat and talked half the nights through. I saw some pictures of the babies, taken at birth, which made me realize, as I had not before, the miracle which Dr. Dafoe has wrought. It's difficult to believe that the five lively, bright, satin-skinned youngsters I played with ever had been these weird little atoms, all tummies and heads, no legs and arms to speak of.

"The doctor and I had many things in common. For the doctor collects first editions and so do I. The doctor has an eighteen-year-old son named Alan—and I have an eighteen year old son named Alan. We did not," Jean chuckled, "have motion pictures in common, certainly. Dr. Dafoe had never heard of me until I was on my way to Callander. He had never, I think, heard of any screen personality. He has only seen two pictures in all his life and one was an ancient film called 'Sunshine Sue' or something like that—the other a short of the Quintuplets. He is simple, kindly and deeply wise. He is completely unworldly. He could go to any city in the world and turn patients away by the thousands. He will remain where he is, and as he is.

NOSE PORES

Largest Pores on Your Body—
A Test of Your Cleansing Methods!

By Lady Esther

The pores on the nose are the largest on your body. For this reason, if allowed to become clogged with waxy excretions, they will become conspicuously large and noticeable.

The pores on your nose, therefore, are a good test of your skin-cleansing methods. If the pores are plugged with waste matter and gaping large, it's a sign your methods are insufficient. By keeping your pores—and this includes the pores of your nose—thoroughly clean, you can keep them normal in size, invisibly small.

A Penetrating Cream Required

To get at the dirt and waxy matter that accumulates in your pores, you must use a face cream that penetrates, one that actually works its way into the pores. Such a cream is Lady Esther Face Cream. It does not merely lie on the surface of your skin. It actually penetrates the pores, and does it in a gentle and soothing manner.

Penetrating the pores, Lady Esther Face Cream goes to work on the imbedded dirt and waste matter. It dissolves it—breaks it up—and makes it easily removable. In a fraction of the usual time, your skin is thoroughly clean.

Cleansed perfectly, your pores can again function freely—open and close as Nature intended. Automatically then, they reduce themselves to their normal small size and you no longer have anything like conspicuous pores.

Lubrication, Also

As Lady Esther Face Cream cleanses the skin, it also lubricates it. It resupplies it with a fine oil that overcomes dryness and keeps the skin soft and smooth.

Make a test on your face of Lady Esther Face Cream. See for yourself how thoroughly it cleans out the pores. Mark how quickly your pores come down in size when relieved of their choking burden. Note the new life and smoothness your skin takes on. One test will tell you volumes.

See For Yourself!

All first-class drug and department stores sell Lady Esther Face Cream, but a 7-days' supply is free for the asking. Just mail the coupon below or a penny postcard and by return mail you'll receive the cream—PLUS all five shades of my exquisite Lady Esther Face Powder. Write today.

(You can paste this on a penny postcard.) (21) FREE

Lady Esther, 2010 Ridge Avenue, Evanston, Illinois.

Please send me by return mail your 7-days' supply of Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream; also all five shades of your Face Powder.

*Name*______________________________

*Address*______________________________

*City*________________ *State*__________

(If you live in Canada, write Lady Esther, Ltd., Toronto, Ont.)

That + + + something extra: fragrance!
FRAGRANT FROSTILLA LOTION

When you see a new brand of face powder, you sniff it—and like it better if it's pleasantly perfumed.

In the same way, you're sure to prefer Frostilla Lotion for your hands. It has that something extra—fragrance—and it's much nicer than lotions with no odor or a medicinal smell!

No need to tell you how well it corrects chapped skin and brings smooth loveliness—for it's been doing that successfully for years!

35c, 50c, $1 sizes. Travel size at ten-cent stores.

fragrant
FROSTILLA
Lotion

SKIN Beauty WITH Mercolized Wax

● Any complexion can be made clearer, smoother, younger with Mercolized Wax. This single cream is a complete beauty treatment.

Mercolized Wax absorbs the discolored blemished outer skin in tiny, invisible particles. Brings out the young, beautiful skin hidden beneath.

Just pat Mercolized Wax on your skin every night like cold cream. It beautifies while you sleep. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty.

USE Saxolite Astringent — a refreshing, stimulating skin tonic. Smooths out wrinkles and age lines. Refines coarse pores, eliminates oiliness. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel.

TRY Phelactine—the "different" depilatory. Removes superfluous hair quickly and gently. Simple to use. Odorless.

At drug and department stores everywhere.

"I do not," Jean said, "in any way attempt to imitate Dr. Dafoe in the picture. I am not using his name even. I am called 'Dr. Luke.' I have not tried to copy his mannerisms, nor even his appearance other than to gray my hair and mustache. I am playing, simply, a country doctor who steps into the limelight of a wondering world when five babies are birthed—and live. I only hope," Jean said, "that I will be able to convey something of the fine and modest spirit of the man I am supposed to represent . . . well, it was a tremendous, an unforgettable experience."

And—"It was thrilling," said Dorothy Peterson.

What They Like to Wear

(Continued from page 58)

"You know," she continued, "everyone thinks that the minute you get to be anybody in Hollywood, you buy a mink coat. Well, mother won't even let me think about having one until I'm twenty-one. I did persuade her to let me have this summer ermine that I am wearing but that was only because she hates cheap furs and thought this was youthful enough for me."

THE result of the shopping trip was that the right dress finally was found at Hattie Carnegie's—but it wasn't red, it was black. Carnegie's is one of the most exclusive dressmaking establishments in New York, a great favorite with many of the older stars such as Katharine Hepburn and Connie Bennett. Anita Louise was so excited about buying a dress there that it wasn't until she had made the purchase and was about to leave that she discovered one terrific drawback. Looking at the neck of the frock, she said wistfully:

"Oh dear, there isn't a label in this and I did so want a label." Fortunately, the Carnegie labels are sewn into the side seams so everything was swell.

That shows you what a kid Anita is, despite the fact that she is a poised young woman and a star who should be quite blase about any label in a dress. She gets as much kick out of buying a dress at a famous dressmaker's as you or I would.

She's a very sensible gal, wears simple clothes and not very expensive ones, except for a few sprees now and then like the Hattie Carnegie dress. Incidentally, you can see the dress on page 56, for Anita posed in it especially for me before returning to the coast. It's the cute black crepe afternoon dress with its full gathered peasant-like skirt and fitted bodice set off by an unique draped collar. The gold gypsy bangle clip on the collar is duplicated on her black, off-the-face felt hat that looks so much like a French peasant's bonnet. You can see it up under the wing-like brim at the left side of the Chapeau.

In evening gowns, Anita likes soft, clinging fabrics best, especially chiffon. One of her favorite evening gowns is photographed. It's more of a dinner gown with its deep shirred armholes and buttoned bodice with high neckline. The girdle is silver kid fastened with a tie of the fabric. A charming detail is the flower necklace and the two matching flowers caught in her hair. Anita knows how to add these touches skillfully, in fact, in her clothes she has the taste and sophistication of a much more mature person, yet she never wears clothes that are too old for her.

Looking critically at her, I would say that one of her greatest charms is her clean, scrubbed look and her beautifully cared for golden hair.

Quite the opposite of Anita Louise is Betty Furness, a New York bred girl, who spends her brief holidays in the city, snooping out bargains in the smaller shops along Madison avenue and in such huge emporiums as Macy's and Bloomingdale's.

Over cocktails in the Savoy room of the Savoy Plaza hotel, we talked clothes and more clothes. Not only talked but later took photos of some of her pet purchases. Betty, like Anita Louise, is blonde and has a great flair for smart things.

"I won't wear or pose in anything that I don't think suits me," she told me. "That's not being arbitrary either, I just can't feel at ease in clothes that don't suit my personality and you can't be truly smart unless you do feel comfortable in your clothes."

I ASKED her about the difference in the type of wardrobe she needs for Hollywood and what she needs in New York.

"Oh, there's a great difference," she said. "For instance, there's no need for what you call a street dress. You know, like the dress you have on, a black wool or silk crepe that is tailored and that you would wear all day to business. Our need is sports clothes in Hollywood. I wear them all day long. When I want to dress up for a cocktail party or dinner, I either wear a dress like this one that I have on, or an ankle length dinner gown."

The dress which she had on was the metal shot crepe which she is wearing in one of the photographs on page 58. Utterly simple, its outstanding detail is the high neckline with gathered collar that stands up like a ruche around the neck. This is in a beautiful shade of blue with silver threads woven in it and is regulation afternoon length. Betty said I could tell you that she only paid sixteen dollars for it—imagine! With this she wore a small fuchsia colored antelope hat with two feather flowers poised like bat wings right in front. The centers of these were the same color as the blue of her dress. The smart bag is an original Schiaparelli model in black patent leather with a new cloisonne trimming in a blue to match her dress. Very smart and very new.

In adjusting her hat for the photographer, she turned to me and said, "I wear it straight because I think it looks newer than all the hats that are tipped to one side or another. I love mad hats and indulge myself in them—it's really my one great extravagance. You see I have created a reputation for wearing crazy hats in Hollywood and I can't let my public down!"

She was crazy about the clothes she wore in "The Magnificent Obsession."

"John Stahl, our director, was very fussy about the clothes and so they were all sent out from Carnegie's and especially selected for Irene Dunne and myself. I bought several of them after the picture was finished."

Continuing on the bargain theme which we had started earlier, she said, "I have a friend here in New York who is constantly on the search for cute, but inexpensive clothes for me. She knows all the little shops and when I arrive for a short stay, all I have to do is to go with her and pick up the clothes she has already snooped out for me. It's a grand system and saves me time. For instance, that white chiffon evening gown—I simply adore it and yet I only paid eighteen dollars for it because I knew just where to go and find it at that price. The gold kid belt is a terribly smart detail on a frock of such simple Grecian character." The dress mentioned is the one shown on page 58. With it Betty carried an evening bag of a new diamond mesh with a chain handle.

The trim yellow jacket, also photographed, is the sort of thing that she finds indispensable in Hollywood. She wears this with all sorts of skirt and dress combinations and various changes of accessories. The day she posed in it, however, she was wearing brown accents. A brown Ascot scarf and a jaunty brown felt with a huge beige-flecked feather. The smart monogrammed fob pin was a new gift—gold with brown wood. She had an amusing bracelet that would make a slick accessory for all of you—we couldn't get a good picture of it so I shall have to describe it. It was gold, also, and was formed by her nickname "Betty" in letters, each linked together like a slave bracelet and backed by a thin chain.

Betty thinks one of the focal points in good grooming is the hair, although she apologized for the way her hair looked because she didn't seem to think it was quite right. I thought it looked charming. She paints her lip rouge on with a small camel's hair paint brush, which I thought was a swell extra tip for all of you. The results were so smooth and perfect in outline.

After having talked fashions and shopped with two blondes, I was delighted to get some tips for all you brunettes, from a new star in Hollywood but a long standing favorite of radio, pretty Jane Froman.

Jane was back from the coast for a brief stay after having finished her first picture. She confessed that it was a joy to discuss fashions after so many interviews about her career and marriage. As it happened, we got off on marriage before we were through! Jane is very happily wed and can't resist mentioning her husband even when talking about clothes.

New York doesn't mean a shopping binge for her like it does to Betty and Anita Louise. In fact, she doesn't buy clothes except when she feels she hasn't another decent thing to put on.

"You see," she explained, "I was brought up in a convent and from wearing uniforms, year in and year out, clothes became terribly vital to me. So much so, that when I started to earn my own living, the first thing I thought of was accumulating a wardrobe of smart clothes. I didn't earn much so I really had to plot to buy nice ones. Why, do you know that I still wear the first fur coat I ever bought and nothing will ever seem so exciting to me again in the way of clothes!" Now that she can have all the clothes she could possibly wear, she doesn't care a hoot for them—she thinks that there isn't any kick to shopping unless you have to worry over whether or not you can afford this or that thing.

"My needs are comparatively simple," she continued. "I have to have more evening clothes than anything else because of my broadcasting. It's lucky that I love them or else I would be bored to death having to shop for so many. My only other requirement is sports things. In Hollywood I adore the custom of wearing pajamas or slacks and shirts for daytime. They are so comfortable and convenient. What's more, they save wear and tear on your good things. I really haven't another dress, outside this one that I have on that is suitable for daytime wear here in New York!" The costume she referred to was a charming deep red affair with a broad brimmed hat to match. She didn't like the hat because it didn't "do" anything for her. Does that sound familiar to you?

JANE doesn't have any system or rules about her shopping. She buys what she likes in both color and style—she selects accessories to go with whatever fancy she pursues. She's very natural looking with lovely dark brown hair and hazel eyes. She was simply thrilled at what the studio did for her in make-up. I asked her if she didn't resent a little the fact that they saw fit to change her make-up. She said emphatically no because she never realized how much there was the matter with her until she was made up for screening. To hear her talk you would think she was some sad, mousey little soul that had just found glamor through the studio, rather than the tremendously vivid, attractive person she is.

She was crazy about the clothes which Orry-Kelly designed for "Stars Over Broadway." So much so, that she bought several after the picture was finished. One of her pets is photographed, the stunning checked sports coat with full skirt and diagonal buttoned closing. She said that Orry-Kelly is a perfect genius at making the lines of the figure show up to their best advantage in clothes. Where a hip is inclined to be a little broad, he

THE Loveliest MOMENT OF ALL

PLAT-NUM
CREME
Nail Polish
Holly Red

Try PLAT-NUM today. It's 10c and comes in 12 true-tone shades in the oversize bottle to which you are entitled. You'll find it on sale at any 5 and 10 cent store.

HANDS play an all-important part in the drama of romance. Intimate little gestures, subtle handclasps, pulse-stirring contacts . . . truly, hands speak the language of love. Is it not essential, then, that they be kept always well groomed — that finger nails be kept petal-pink and shining, the lovely complement to a lovely hand? PLAT-NUM nail polish has the unusual ability to transform your nails . . . gives them a soft, shimmering, satin-like surface. PLAT-NUM goes on smoothly, sets evenly, is long lasting and does not chip, crack, peel, fade or streak.

FREE this booklet

Send 4c in stamps and we will send to you this interesting informative, stiff cover booklet on the beautifying of your arms, hands and fingers.

PLAT-NUM Nail Polish

PLAT-NUM LABORATORIES 80 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK

carefully cuts the skirt so that the fullness falls in just the right spot to create an allusion of an unbroken, slender line. She loves his evening clothes.

Jane, like Betty, gave me a swell tip on make-up. The day we lunched she was suffering from a miserable cold which had made faint shadows under her eyes. She asked me if I wanted to see how to get rid of that tired look by the simplest sort of dodge. It's this, she takes her dry rouge puff and dusts a faint glow of pink under her eyes and across the bridge of her nose. Then she powders lightly over it—the result is simply amazing.

Blondes, brunettes, red heads and in-betweens! Do you want a preview of flattering new spring colors? If so, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Adelia Bird, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y., and ask for the ADVANCED SPRING COLOR CHART FOR TYPES.

Behold Dietrich!

(Continued from page 51)

of a sentence, when she has us all roaring, make her eyes go starry, arrange herself in one of her most languorous attitudes, and say: 'Ach, ja, I am so glamorous, so exotic, so seductive—that it hurts!' "

Being Marlene Dietrich's friend is a career in itself. Those who enjoy this privilege have time for little but this all-absorbing relationship. Haven't you known people who affected you so powerfully that all your own problems vanished into thin air? People who made you feel there was nothing so important as their whim of the moment, their interests, their desires, who made you their willing slave and constant shadow? Marlene Dietrich is one of these fabulous creatures.

But don't misunderstand. She doesn't mean to be commanding or imperious. On the contrary, Marlene is the soul of generosity and kindness. She seems to spend her waking hours thinking up ways to enrich the lives of her friends and to entertain them. When she isn't telling funny stories, she is plying them with savory dainties prepared by her own hands—all much too rich for a steady diet, but so delicious they can't be resisted. One of the favored few told me that during his six months as a member of the inner Dietrich circle he gained twenty pounds.

That's how the legend grew that Marlene, off-screen, becomes the domestic, retiring hausfrau whose chief delight is to stand over the oven in her perfectly appointed kitchen and bake a luscious cake. True, Marlene likes to cook and she does it expertly. But she does it, not because she is essentially domestic, but because she believes—to paraphrase Lord Byron that "man can do without poetry, music and books, but certainly man cannot do without cooks!"

This role of bountiful hostess Marlene plays to perfection. She doesn't confine it to her few intimate friends. For instance, on the set, her generosity is outstanding. Every other week is gift week for her co-workers and the crew when Marlene's around.

The day she finished "Desire" she distributed a few gifts on the set. Gary Cooper received an imported leather traveling case. The assistant directors and most of the technicians and crew each received wallets in which crackled crisp new fifty-dollar bills. The set hairdresser rated a pair of Italian marble lamps.

Recently she gave Jessmer Brown, her maid, a new coupe just because she thought Jessmer's car was growing shabby. And on an average of every ten days, Jessmer's mother, who happens to be the studio janitress, finds twenty-five dollars pinned to a note with her name on it in "Miss Dietrich's" dressing-room.

Witty, brilliant Queen Dietrich—as capricious as a ruler with power of life or death.

A benefactress who sincerely wants to make life pleasanter for her devoted subjects! Yet—and here's the rub—every move she makes is motivated by sudden, unpredictable impulses. Not even a psychologist could chart her behavior or prophesy her next move. Which is one reason why she will always be fascinating.

Which is also the reason we label Marlene by such adjectives as sensational—exotic—erratic. She does whatever comes into her mind at the moment, without any thought of how people might interpret her actions. She never does anything for effect, having no desire to startle or shock. But if she happens to do so, it never troubles her.

When she decided to wear trousers and top hats, she did so only because she felt more comfortable in them. The ensuing publicity bewildered and irritated her. "Why should people be so interested in what I do?" she asked naïvely.

I tried to explain to her that she, more than any other screen actress, excepting Garbo, represented to these same people all the color, romance and mystery which they find lacking in their own lives. She laughed and shrugged her shoulders.

Most women can be catalogued. Some more easily than others. In each, there is usually a predominant quality which is obvious to the most casual observer.

But Marlene Dietrich falls into none of the usual categories. Sometimes she hovers on the verge of one, other times she's completely immersed in the opposite. Any one of a hundred alternate roles in real life seems to suit her as perfectly as either trousers or clinging feminine garments. She's as volatile as mercury and as changeable as a chameleon.

She's the dramatic, capricious, slightly terrifying woman of mystery and intangible allurement one hour—drooping hands and drooping eyes, misty far-away thoughts, with a general pervasive air of melancholy about her. The next, she's a romping child up to no end of mischief.

And when you finally settle down with a sigh of relief, all worn out trying to keep up with her sleight-of-hand character changes, she turns around and shows you a Madonna. The mother brooding over her child, Maria.

And now for the surprise which I've been saving up 'til last. It disproves all those ridiculous stories current about a year ago, concerning the harmful Svengali-Trilby influence Von Sternberg exerted over Marlene. If there was anyone who wielded the influence it was Marlene. Was—and always will be!

Seeing her for the first time when he went to Germany to search for an actress who could play the starring role in "Blue Angel," Von Sternberg said, "If that woman doesn't accept the role I am offering her, I shall never make a picture!"

And he meant it.

I know the IMPORTANCE OF GOOD COFFEE TO men

EVERY CUP ALWAYS THE SAME

WHEN COFFEE IS MADE THE Drip-O-lator way

Most men take their coffee seriously. Meals may not always be a perfect delight, but there is no reason why that one finishing touch —GOOD COFFEE—should ever fall short of perfection. If you follow the instructions, with every genuine Drip-O-lator you can make perfect coffee every time. Look for the name in the base. It is your guarantee of satisfaction.

THE ENTERPRISE ALUMINUM CO.
MASSILLON, OHIO

THE ORIGINAL DRIP-O-LATOR IS SOLD BY ALL LEADING CHAIN, DEPARTMENT & RETAIL STORES

I'm the CHORE GIRL

The All-Copper, Sponge-Cushioned Pot Cleaner. The Big Moment in anyone's kitchen. I do all the things you don't like to do. I keep clean and bright all those pots and pans (and oven glass) that are forever getting greasy and grimy and soiled with burnt-in fats or charred with pastry crust. It's no trouble for me to whisk it all away in jig-time and save at least 15 minutes after each meal. I'm a glutton for work, yet I'm kindly on pans and never dangerous on hands because I'm a well-knit, all-copper cleaner that doesn't shred, splinter or rust. I'm ready to move in and go to work today. Salary: 10c a month.

10¢

METAL TEXTILE CORP., Orange, N. J.

BECOME AN EXPERT

ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $3,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands of firms need them. Only 12,000 Certified Public Accountants in the U. S. We train you thoroly at home in spare time for C.P.A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous experience unnecessary. Personal training under supervision of staff of C.P.A's, including members of the American Institute of Accountants. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession that Pays."

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 3318H, Chicago

The School That Has Trained Over 1,200 C. P. A.'s

LARKIN invites You!

HERE'S an invitation to be a Larkin Club Secretary. Just by introducing our new Edna May Dress Club you can earn charming frocks for yourself, as well as other big Rewards. Get our new Edna May Dress Folder just off the press! It brings you America's greatest dress bargains like the smart little street frock in this advertisement.

260 A BROAD CLOTH 98¢

14-44 BROWN OR COPEN.

Mail a postcard to-day. Just say: "Send me the Edna May Dress folder and Club information."

Larkin Co Inc

664 Seneca St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Charlie Chaplin, the Serious Funny Man

(Continued from page 45)

little girl just for a moment. She would not leave, and she was simply heartbroken to think that he was so near and she could not see him. So he told the waiter to escort her in, greeted her cordially, and chatted for a few moments. After she left, he glanced around a little dazed.

"I hope that I struck the proper paternal note," he said to the people nearest him, "but you see it was difficult. Neither of my wives was much older than that."

Chaplin's affairs of the heart have not been happy until now. No one seems to know whether he and the lusciously-beautiful Paulette Goddard are engaged or married, but anyone with half an eye can tell they are grand, congenial friends.

Chaplin today seems happy on the surface, but if he really were I do not think he would keep us waiting nearly five years for a new picture from him. He must be brooding over his early hardships, the death of his mother who never fully recovered from a London air raid though she lived on for years, the raffish mudslinging of the two young wives who divorced him for neglect and cruelty, the gaudy vixens who have momentarily interested him and who have screamed to the world that he was too stingy to buy a ton or so of diamond bracelets for them, the suits for back taxes from the government, the plagiarism suits by the dozen (all of which he won), the European vacation so long anticipated and during which he managed in one way or another to antagonize almost every country he visited.

Maybe you think he should rise above brooding because he stands alone as an idol of the world, with only Mickey Mouse as a possible rival.

But Chaplin in one of his rare bursts of confidence to a newspaper man recently said, "I got most of the things I wanted, but I found out after I got them that I should never have wanted them."

Two seasons at the Bradley Barn Dance, i.e. June 'n' January or your old pals, Toby Wing and Sir Guy Standing doing a fast gallop about the floor! What is this twosome, huh?

Your Beauty Shop gives you added charm. Go there every week. And, to help beautify the natural shape of your mouth and lips, enjoy DOUBLE MINT gum daily.

WRIGLEY'S
DOUBLE MINT
CHEWING GUM
PEPPERMINT FLAVOR
MADE IN U.S.A.
WRIGLEY'S
DOUBLE MINT
PEPPERMINT FLAVOR
FIVE STICKS

International stage and screen star — Miss Heather Thatcher

TATTOO YOUR LIPS

with transparent South Sea red, as the tropic enchantress does Pasteless, transparent, highly indelible color for lips . . . instead of pasty coating. That's TATTOO! Put it on like lipstick . . . let it set a moment . . . then wipe it off, leaving nothing on your lips but clear, tempting South Sea red that only time can remove . . . and that will give your lips a touch-thrilling softness they have never had before. Five luscious shades . . . each attuned to the spirit of red adventure! Make your choice at the Tattoo Color Selector by testing all five on your own skin. CORAL . . . EXOTIC . . . NATURAL . . . PASTEL . . . HAWAIIAN.

$1 at drug and department stores

TATTOO

A Discovery About DRY SKIN

Asteatosis

ROBS VICTIMS OF SKIN BEAUTY!

Asteatosis makes your complexion rough, dry and unattractive.

Overcome DRY SKIN by using Lander's new OLIVE OIL CREAM for cleansing and nourishing Dry Skin.

WHAT IS ASTEATOSIS?

Asteatosis is the medical name for the failure of the sebaceous glands to feed oil to the skin. Physicians recommend OLIVE OIL to treat Asteatosis. Lander's pure OLIVE OIL CREAM will nourish and lubricate dry skin. Try it today!

LANDER OLIVE OIL CREAM for dry skin

LARGE JAR 10¢

LANDER FIFTH AVE. NEW YORK

Scotty, shame! That's no way to take a picture of a gal at a party. Ginger Rogers digs hayseed out of her orb while husband, Lew Ayres, sits by unhelpfully!

Enter Ruby Keeler's Contest Now!

(Continued from page 17)

card in such a way that you will have a well balanced meal—a dinner such as you would be proud to serve to a delightful guest, like Ruby.

When you have filled in your menu with ten dishes (beginning each with the right initial, remember) write clearly at the bottom, in the space provided—in ten words or less—"Why I'm looking forward to seeing Ruby Keeler in 'Colleen'." Just state your reason simply, as we have illustrated.

Of course, there are lots of reasons for wanting to see "Colleen." On page 91 you will find a short synopsis of the story, with pictures of some of the outstanding scenes in this amusing musical. These will suggest so many reasons for enthusiasm that you should have no difficulty in deciding on a ten word one that will be a knockout!

Doesn't it all sound like fun? And easy too, if you'll just study the contest rules and the sample menu carefully. Then fill out your own prize menu and send it in. Send in several if you wish to, only be sure that coupons accompany each of your entries.

Tell your friends about this wonderful contest, too. For they'll enjoy working out a menu (it's really like a game) and what's more they may have you to thank for winning one of the prizes.

And such prizes! Several money awards—each sufficiently large to gratify some long cherished wish! An electric refrigerator with the practical Shelvador feature that women rave about! A big Crosley Radio to bring the world into your home! Five complete sets of china—gay with sprigs of tiny flowers! Fifteen General Electric Mixers—the portable kind that win instant favor! And ten Manning-Bowman toaster trays that are simply the last word for entertaining. These prizes certainly are well worth trying for, aren't they?

Here are a couple of helpful hints to make things easier for you. Fill in the two "E's" and the two "L's" on your coupon-menu first. Once you have them out of the way you'll find that the rest is smooth sailing, just as it would be in a cross-word puzzle if you already knew some of the words! The index of any good cook book will be of great assistance to you also. But here perhaps is the best news of all—at the end of our regular cooking article, (which this month features Ruby Keeler's Cookies) you will find Food, Menu and Cooking Terms, listed in alphabetical order. Be sure and look at them for they will prove most helpful.

The Story of "Colleen"

Donald Ames (Dick Powell) is the heir to a large New York estate, but instead of being the proverbial good-for-nothing heir, Don is the efficient and business-like "brains" behind the management of the estate's many properties. In fact, he has tactfully contrived to keep his very eccentric uncle, Cedric Ames (Hugh Herbert), busy at harmless tasks in an impressive office, and at the same time convince him that he is running the show.

Among the Ames' properties is a building leased to the Modiste Shop of Carlo (Luis Alberni), whose first assistant, and the only one in the near-bankrupt establishment with an ounce of intelligence, is Colleen Reilly (Ruby Keeler). Comes the day when Joe Cork (Jack Oakie) who assumes he is Colleen's fiance, overhears the Ames name mentioned in connection with Carlo's shop. Quick-witted Joe immediately decides to make the gullible Cedric the first victim of his newest get-rich-quick scheme. Instead, he manages to land a job as Cedric's executive assistant.

In this capacity, Joe prevails on Cedric to make a tour of the Ames properties—the first stop being a candy factory. Here Cedric, who is as putty in a pretty woman's hands, encounters Minnie (Joan Blondell), a chocolate dipper. Deciding that her present job is unworthy of her, Cedric buys out Carlo's shop and sets up Minnie as manager.

Don hears of this incident and rushes to Carlo's to see what can be done. There the attractive assistant, Colleen, convinces him that the shop can be made to pay if properly managed. Impressed with the girl's arguments and finding himself falling in love with her, he decides not to close the shop.

Meanwhile, thwarted Uncle Cedric takes it upon himself to spite his meddling nephew by adopting Minnie as his daughter. Horrified at this new turn of events, Cedric's wife, Aunt Alicia (Louise Fazenda) and Don appoint a lawyer to draw up settlements for Minnie and Joe, and order the shop to be closed.

In the ensuing confusion Colleen's name is included in the settlement list, and she is handed a check for $10,000. Hurt at this seeming insult as well as the closing of the shop, Colleen accepts the money and takes a job operating a modiste shop on a transatlantic liner.

Don, when he learns of this mistake, searches in vain for Colleen and finally, in despair, decides to go to Europe with Cedric and Alicia.

The liner on which they book passage is also the one on which Colleen is working. Don and Colleen meet in the radio room where each is planning to send the other a message. Don tries to explain the mix-up, pursuing Colleen to the ballroom, and finally convinces her that he loves her. She, in turn, forgives and admits her love for him.

Meanwhile Cedric, now in pursuit of a willowy brunette, bumps into Joe Cork and Minnie, who are enjoying the fruits of their ill-gotten settlement. Minnie, overjoyed to see her "unkie-punkie" again, starts to throw her arms around him and Uncle Cedric leaps through a porthole.

. . . Turn to Page 68 for additional Ruby Keeler Contest News

Do you know anybody who deserves this tag?

MEN avoid her. Girls refuse to bother with her.

"A careless, untidy person who is unpleasant to be with"—that's the way they think of the girl who carries the ugly odor of underarm perspiration on her person and clothing.

Too bad. For she misses so many good times. Her real friends would like to tell her what the trouble is, but after all, they feel, the girl of today should be alert to the danger of underarm odor in herself.

She should know that the underarms need special daily care. Soap and water alone are not enough.

And the modern girl knows the quick, easy way to give this care. Mum!

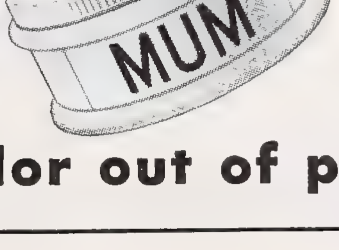
Half a minute, when you're dressing, is all you need to use Mum. Or use it after dressing, any time. For Mum is harmless to clothing.

It's soothing to the skin, too. You can use it right after shaving the underarms.

And you should know this—that Mum prevents every trace of perspiration odor without affecting perspiration itself.

Don't label yourself as "the girl who needs Mum." Use it regularly every day and you'll be safe! Bristol-Myers, Inc., 630 Fifth Ave., New York.

MUM



USE MUM ON SANITARY NAPKINS, TOO and you'll never have a moment's worry about this source of unpleasantness.

takes the odor out of perspiration

for SMART, AUTHENTIC Spring Dresses moderately priced . . . WEAR Fashion Frocks

WISE women who know style and value are selecting their new spring clothes direct from the great Fashion Frock dress factory through the local representative in their town.

Fashion Frocks are never sold in stores but only this one way — DIRECT to you. And because of this method you get the smartest dresses at substantial savings.

You can see the most stunning spring dresses and select the ones most suited to you, right in the comfort of your home. You are assured correctness in every detail of style, fabric and color because we have stylists in all the world's fashion centers who create in Fashion Frocks the authentic style trends for each season. Your satisfaction is guaranteed. Let your local Fashion Frock representative show you these lovely new spring dresses. Drop us a card and we'll have her call.

No. 671 FINE PEBBLE CREPE $6.98

Special Work for Women

Ambitious women can make good incomes as our representatives and get their own dresses without a penny of cost. No investment or experience necessary. If you are interested write us fully, giving dress size.

FASHION FROCKS, INC.
Dept. CC 250 Cincinnati, Ohio

How to make SWEET PEAS - JONQUILS - ROSES - 22 FLOWERS IN ALL 10c

Simply send for a copy of the fascinating new 32-page book, "How to Make Crepe Paper Flowers," and you can start at once making gorgeous bouquets of all your favorite flowers — so perfect your friends will insist they are real! The simple, step-by-step instructions show you how to make delicate sweet peas, golden jonquils, gay tulips — 22 different flowers in all — for home decoration, for friends, as gifts, to sell. Send for a copy of the book now — and remember, for best results, insist on Dennison Crepe Paper, obtainable at department, stationery and drug stores. Use coupon.

DENNISON'S
Dept. Q-192 Framingham, Mass.
Please send me the new book "How to Make Crepe Paper Flowers." I enclose 10 cents.
Name ....
Street (or R.F.D.) ....
City .... State ....
Why not let us include some of these other Dennison Books? Check those you want and enclose 10c for each.
__*New Dennison Crafts* __*New Crepe Paper Costume Book*
__*Party Games, Stunts & Decorations* __*Cellophane Craft Book*
__*New Showers and Announcements Book*

Dennison Crepe

Be Individual!

(Continued from page 23)

admit it, seductive, too. Let me remind you that it's the little girls who appeal to a man's protective instincts, that do more heart-smashing than any other type. Littleness, wistfulness, sweetness, these are Janet Gaynor's "personality trademarks." Her brown eyes, soft mouth, dimpled chin and curly copper-colored hair, are what we love best about Janet, but it's her wistfulness that makes her individual.

Yet another American sweetheart is Loretta Young. Right here I can imagine your challenging me with, "You can't say that SHE isn't beautiful." Yes, Loretta has moments of really breath-taking beauty. But it is the personality reflected through her beauty, rather than her beauty itself, which has made her outstanding. It's a radiance about her that shines through her eyes, and her smile. And to you who gaze at Loretta Young's loveliness, I would say this. You cannot tell what you may have in your own nature as it shines through your eyes or expresses itself in the curve of your mouth which may do much more for you than the possession of a conventionally beautiful face.

Loretta enhances that starry look of her eyes with the clever use of mascara, so that her eyelashes are like delicate fringes. Have you ever noticed how very wide open she keeps her eyes? None of this heavy lidded languor for her.

There's a softness about Loretta as much as a radiance which gives her a certain poetic loveliness. She wears ruffles and frills, flowers and picture hats; her wardrobe is all softness and femininity. Her hair is always arranged in loose waves and ringlets. Her lips look warm and "dewy." She confines her wardrobe almost entirely to blue for daytime, and white for evening. These are soft colors that complement the blue of her eyes and the delicacy of her charm.

And since it's around Valentine's Day, I might remind you that blue is the color accredited with creating an intimate "just you and me" atmosphere. It is the color of devotion, and if you have blue eyes, you might well remember that. But if you have brown eyes, you still have the old slogan to stand by, "Red and yellow, catch a fellow."

Here we've been so busy being individualistic, we haven't had time to flutter around about it's being Valentine time. Whatever your individual make-up problems may be, however, I'll be glad to consider them in a personal letter. Perhaps we can work out some sort of "personality trademark" for you, too. And because we haven't gotten around to any cosmetic news in the light of Valentine's Day, I've prepared a special bulletin for you, "The Valentine Vanity Case." I've always maintained that the way to a man's heart is through an appeal to his admiration, so I give you recipes for glamor in "The Valentine Vanity Case." I seem to be writing quite a puff about my own bulletin, but I'm anxious for you to take a peek into "The Valentine Vanity Case." See if it doesn't just about close my case for the individualist's way to a man's heart.

Mary Biddle,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 Madison Avenue,
New York, N. Y.
Kindly send me your bulletin, "The Valentine Vanity Case."
Name ....
Address ....
Kindly enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope. Personal questions always receive personal replies.

Reviews—a Tour of Today's Talkies

(Continued from page 14)

only time Hollywood sees Mr. Colman is on the set. Any spare moments are spent somewhere on the coast of Mexico, leading a sailor's life with his cronies, Richard Barthelmess, Clive Brook and Bill Powell.

★★★ Sylvia Scarlett

(RKO-Radio)

If you can accept the premise that Katharine Hepburn, in male attire, can be mistaken for a man by people as close to her as her travelling companions, "Sylvia Scarlett" is good entertainment. Katie appears quite mannish in some scenes, but keen observers could rightfully maintain that there are times when she swishes just a bit. Not-so-keen observers such as Cary Grant and Brian Aherne, however, accept her as one of them until the moment she appears before them in garments generally associated with her own sex. In the first place, Miss H. assumes masculine raiment in order to help her father (Edmund Gwenn) get from France to England. On the trip they meet Cary Grant, a minor racketeer, and the three of them decide to go into business—shady, of course—together. From there on the story is too complicated for complete description, so let us merely note that in their travels the trio meets a buxom servant girl (Dennie Moore) who marries Mr. Gwenn, the foursome gone straight, tours the English countryside in extremely amateur theatricals, and during this barnstorming Miss Hepburn meets Brian Aherne. Parts of "Sylvia Scarlett" are highly amusing, and it is our duty to report that Cary Grant, who furnishes most of the picture's better moments, walks away with the show.

Preview Postscripts

This is the first Hollywood picture to be regulated by the moon. Production was held up until the full moon in order to get those remarkable mountain scenes. Santa Monica Canyon, just outside of Hollywood, provided the mountains . . . Katharine Hepburn's cook and Director George Cukor's chef almost came to blows while the company was on location. It started with a friendly rivalry between the star and director regarding the merits of their respective cooks, but developed into a real mountain feud. For each day the irate defendants sent cars laden with their particular specialties to the company and demanded a vote on what was better and why . . . Miss Hepburn proved she could take it in this flicker. Besides having her titian locks chopped off, innumerable risks were undergone for the stunts which the plot required. . . . It is due to the Hepburn gallantry that Princess Natalie Paley is alive to tell this tale today. In a supposed rescue scene of the Russian actress from the wild waves, the rip-tide took it all too seriously and began carrying the two out to sea. Miss H.'s rescue scene was more realistic than comfortable. Natalie Paley is the daughter of Grand Duke Paul, who was uncle of Czar Nicholas. At the outbreak of the Revolution, she and her two brothers escaped from Russia with their nurse, disguised as peasant children. They travelled to Finland afoot in the dead of winter and awaited their mother, the Princess Olga, who escaped after her husband had been put to death. Tea rooms, millinery shops and various odd jobs were resorted to by Natalie until the opportunity presented itself for screen acting. She is now married to Lucien Lelong.

★★★★ Ceiling Zero
(Warners)

Ceiling zero, in case you don't know your aviation terminology, is that dread condition when the fog settles itself on the earth and makes landing as much a test of a pilot's good luck as it is of his skill. In this instance, it also serves as a title for a well-made and vigorously paced treatise on commercial aviation, which owes its success to the able direction of Howard Hawks and the expert and believable performances of a cast headed by Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien. Those of you, who feel you've already seen your quota of Cagney-O'Brien films, will do well to reconsider, for in this one the boys are allowed a respite from their usual bickering hard guy roles. Cagney is Dizzy Davis, an airmail pilot with a bizarre sort of recklessness both in the air and on the ground, and O'Brien is Jake Lee, traffic manager of Federal Air Lines. The problem of getting the mail through, which is not new to movie audiences, is handled so skillfully that even the technical end of it is made interesting. It's Cagney's show, aided considerably by O'Brien, Stuart Erwin, Isobel Jewel and June Travis, the latter one of the most attractive of the screen's newcomers.

Preview Postscripts

To the United Air Lines, as well as the brothers Warner, goes credit for this picture. Sanctioned by the U. S. Post Office Department, the United Air Lines loaned the studio all necessary equipment, including a number of Boeing planes, baggage trucks, dispatch forms, weather reports and maps, radio sets, head sets, helmets, mail bags, stewardess' equipment, Northrop and Lockheed planes. Every airline offered fullest cooperation on hearing of the Warner plans, being familiar with the Commander Wead stage play and the beneficial effects it was having on the air transportation industry. A life-sized radio room, augmented by a weather report bureau, was installed on stage 2 at the studio and further equipment with Paul Mantz, old-time flier and airport executive. The set was approved by Col. J. C. Cone, head of the national air regulations. Mantz had a pleasant way of instructing the cast. Each noon a group would have lunch served in a plane as they flitted over the state, tuning in on the various airports and learning flying technique first-hand. A dozen aviators and stewardesses were placed under contract, while a number of famed stunt flyers were given extra work during production. Largest collection of

NO WONDER SHE NEVER HAS A DATE _ SHE'S SO SKINNY!
I'M HAVING GRAND TIMES SINCE I GAINED 12 POUNDS

NO LONGER ASHAMED OF MY FIGURE

ALWAYS PLENTY OF BOY FRIENDS

Posed by professional models

How Thousands Quickly Gain 5 to 15 lbs. This New Way

THERE'S no excuse today for thousands of men and women to be "skinny" and friendless, even though in the past they could never gain an ounce. For here's a new easy treatment for them that puts on solid, naturally attractive pounds—in just a few weeks!

Doctors now know that the real reason why many find it hard to gain weight is they do not get enough Vitamin B and iron in their daily food. Now with this new discovery which combines these two vital elements in little concentrated tablets, hosts of people have put on pounds of firm flesh—the women normal curves—in a very short time.

Not only are thousands quickly gaining normal good-looking pounds, but also naturally clear skin, freedom from miserable indigestion and constipation, glorious new pep.

7 times more powerful

This amazing new product, Ironized Yeast, is made from special cultured ale yeast imported from Europe, the richest known source of Vitamin B. By a new process this yeast is concentrated 7 times—made 7 times more powerful. Then it is ironized with 3 kinds of strengthening iron.

If you, too, need Vitamin B and iron to build you up, get these new Ironized Yeast tablets from your druggist at once. Then, day after day, as you take them, watch skinny limbs and flat chest round out to normal attractiveness, skin clear to natural beauty—you're an entirely new person.

Results guaranteed

No matter how skinny and rundown you may be from lack of enough Vitamin B and iron, this marvelous new Ironized Yeast should build you up in a few short weeks as it has thousands. If you are not delighted with the results of the very first package, your money will be instantly refunded.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast tablets at once, cut out seal on box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health. "New Facts About Your Body." Remember, results guaranteed with very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists. Ironized Yeast Co., Inc., Dept. 33, Atlanta, Ga.

model airplanes ever assembled was found at the studio during the filming.

★★★ If You Could Only Cook (Columbia)

What would you do if you were a wealthy young man about to marry a young lady you didn't love—and who didn't love you? Herbert Marshall, the gentleman in the case, takes a stroll in the park. Here he has the good fortune to encounter Jean Arthur, a young lady in search of employment. Together they scan the want ads, and almost before Herbert realizes it he has joined Jean in a butler-cook job at the estate of Leo Carrillo, an ex-gangster of considerable notoriety. It will probably come as no surprise to learn that Herbert, who is the screen's most elegant butler, finds himself in love with the cook. Complications arise, as one might well suspect, but along with them you are witness to a bright and merry comedy which turns out to be the best of this month's lighter entertainment. For one thing, it retrieves Herbert Marshall from the self-sacrificing roles he's been handed lately and brings him back to sophisticated comedy, where he seems so much more at home. As for the rest of the cast, a round of applause is due Jean Arthur, Leo Carrillo and Lionel Stander.

Preview Postscripts

Bill Seiter had some gloomy moments while directing this picture. The cast had organized a "Laugh a Day" club, the idea being that each one must tell a story daily for the enjoyment of the others. So the cast would assemble and howl with glee at the tales told by everyone. By everyone, that is, but Director Seiter. The funnier his stories became the glummer the cast looked. He had developed an inferiority complex fit for an elephant by the time the hoax dawned on him. . . . Leo Carrillo rates as tops around Los Angeles, for his great-great-grandpappy was first provisional governor of California and his grandfather was first mayor of Santa Monica, where Leo has now built a home in exact duplicate of the adobe home where he was born. He was one of eleven children, all expert linguists, who made it a practice never to speak the same language at home at the same time that someone else might be using it. Which may account for Mr. Carrillo's first stage appearance. He told Chinese stories in Italian accent at a Spanish theatre . . . Jean Arthur knows what it means to fight your way up the old success ladder. Starting in two-reel comedies, she graduated to westerns. Then suddenly found herself in poverty row "quickies." She was "washed up" as far as Hollywood was concerned. Jean set her very nice teeth, blondined her locks, lost twenty pounds, fell in love and came back to town a new woman. She refused any but featured roles and was rewarded with stardom during this picture. The news was the studio's gift to her at a gala birthday party given Jean by the cast on the set . . . Acting was the last thing on Frieda Inescort's mind. In fact, it wasn't there at all. She wanted to be an ace secretary above all else. Having made the grade to the extent of being Lady Astor's right hand gal, she applied for a job with the British Consulate. In Washington Frieda couldn't resist the impulse to tell Winthrop Ames what was wrong with his plays. He offered her a role as a way of improving them and the British Consulate lost his office helper.

★★★ Whipsaw (M-G-M)

You'll like "Whipsaw" mainly because it brings Myrna Loy back to the screen. Another item is that it pairs her with Spencer Tracy, and they, surprisingly enough, emerge as a screen team worthy of further attention. As far as the story goes, it's merely another cops-and-robbers idea, strengthened considerably by the performances of Mr. T. and Miss L. Myrna is a crook who breaks away from her mob and decides to go straight, but the law, in the person of Tracy, pursues her, hoping to solve a diamond robbery. Spencer, impersonating a fugitive mobster, fools almost everyone but Myrna, who knows he's a federal agent. Just to show you how tough it is for a girl to go straight, the diamonds have been planted on Myrna by her former accomplices, which sort of has both sides out searching for her. However, the story is a minor item, for if you go to "Whipsaw" you go to see Loy and Tracy, and you can sue us if you don't think they make you forget any flaws in the plot department.

Preview Postscripts

All is sweetness and light between M-G-M and Myrna once more. Whatever pangs burying the hatchet cost both parties, it afforded the Loy fans nothing but pleasure. . . . Spencer Tracy has spent his life surprising people. He began with his parents. They thought Spence was being safely educated in a Milwaukee parochial school. On investigation of a hookey report they found the lad making a saloon his headquarters, with his boon companions "Mousie" and "Rattie," the saloon keeper's sons. Followed several futile attempts to get him educated, then Spence took matters in his own hands and enrolled in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, living on rice, pretzels and water for a couple of years. A job in Ethel Barrymore's "Royal Fandango" company made him feel that every pretzel was worth while. Until a caustic critic remarked that Mr. Tracy looked "like he had been picked up by a property man."

★★★ Riffraff (M-G-M)

Done in the hard-boiled manner, "Riffraff" at times becomes too consciously tough for its own good. Jean Harlow, a comely canner—or canstress, if you prefer it—is in love with Spencer Tracy, a guy who freely admits being the best tuna fisherman in the world. Their scenes together are invariably tempestuous, but their dramatic value would have been improved had director Walter Ruben toned down the shouting. Miss Harlow is, of course, as effective as the script allows her to be, although it's a pity that as gifted an actress as she should be confined to specializing in hussies. Spencer Tracy, who never gives a poor performance, is excellent as the flamboyant fisherman, and Una Merkel, portraying Miss Harlow's somewhat slovenly sister, steals the picture despite the fact that her role is a secondary one. Others in the cast whose work is exceptional are Joseph Calleia, Mickey Rooney and J. Farrell MacDonald.

Preview Postscripts

Jean Harlow's gone off the platinum standard for good. It's "brownette" now, all youse girls who would have the last gasp in shades. Music may soothe the savage breast, but it only causes Jean and Joan Crawford to weep. In fact, the two M-G-M lasses can't emote without it. Jean arrives every A.M. on the set with purse in one hand and portable "vic" in the other. It's white kidskin lined with mirrors. To go with it she has the largest collection of records extant in Hollywood. . . . The ugliest sets ever seen on the studio lot were constructed for

FOR PROMPT PLEASANT RELIEF THERE'S NOTHING QUITE LIKE
Alka-Seltzer
The sparkling, Alkaline drink, combined with an Analgesic (Sodium Acetyl Salicylate) for Sour Stomach, Colds, Headaches, and other common aches and pains, caused by excess acidity—(deficient alkalinity)
TUNE IN— The National Barn Dance On The Radio Every Saturday Night N. B. C. Network.
30¢ — 60¢ SIZES
ALL DRUG STORES
Seltzer

TYPEWRITER PORTABLES
10¢ a Day · Easy Terms
REMINGTON-UNDERWOOD, ETC., and easy terms on limited supply only. All brand new, up-to-date—4 row keyboard. Fully Guaranteed.
FREE! Complete HOME Typewriting COURSE
Brand New NOW ONLY $17.95 & UP
SEND NO MONEY—10 Day Trial
Send for special new literature and money-saving, easy pay plan with 10 day trial offer. Also amazing bargains in standard size, rebuilt office models on FREE trial offer. LIBERAL ALLOWANCE—on your old typewriter during this sale.
International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 361, Chicago

3 Perfumes
SUBTLE, fascinating, alluring. Sell regularly for $12.00 an ounce. Made from the essence of flowers:—
Three odors:
(1) Gardenia
(2) Esprit de France
(3) Perfection
A single drop lasts a week!
Send only 20¢
To pay for postage and handling send only 20c (silver or stamps) for 3 trial bottles. Only one set to each new customer. PAUL RIEGER, 210 First St., San Francisco, Calif.

this flicker. Tumbledown shacks, dilapidated buildings and gloomy street scenes occupied an acre of the lot. The property department had to scurry around and get worn out horsehair settees, junked cook-stoves, ragged carpets and similar trimmings. It costs practically as much to get sets like this constructed as it does to build those elaborate ones . . . Mickey Rooney had the time of his young life on this picture. For one thing he became enamored of Miss Harlow, for another he organized a football team among the players, and his third and greatest joy came from setting off those fire-crackers. There's always a gloomy side of a situation, though, and for Mickey it was the fact that a tutor sat on the set daily, waiting to snatch him the minute a scene was over. Then he had that haircut. And that was a real trial for him, since Mr. Rooney is a man-about-town at fourteen and felt too embarrassed by the length of his locks to appear much in public.

★★★ Collegiate

(Paramount)

It's a tuneful farce featuring Jack Oakie as a guy who inherits a girls' school from his aunt. The school is in the red until Jack runs into Joe Penner, an amnesia victim whose hobby is giving away $100 bills. Penner is immediately sold an interest in the school, and the Oakie influence makes itself known. History books are tossed out the window, and the young ladies are tutored in tap dancing, cosmetics, clothes and a few other practical subjects. It's one of Oakie's better performances, and he's ably assisted by songs from Frances Langford, comedy by Ned Sparks, the music of Gordon and Revel, and the lovely ladies of the Leroy Prinz ensemble.

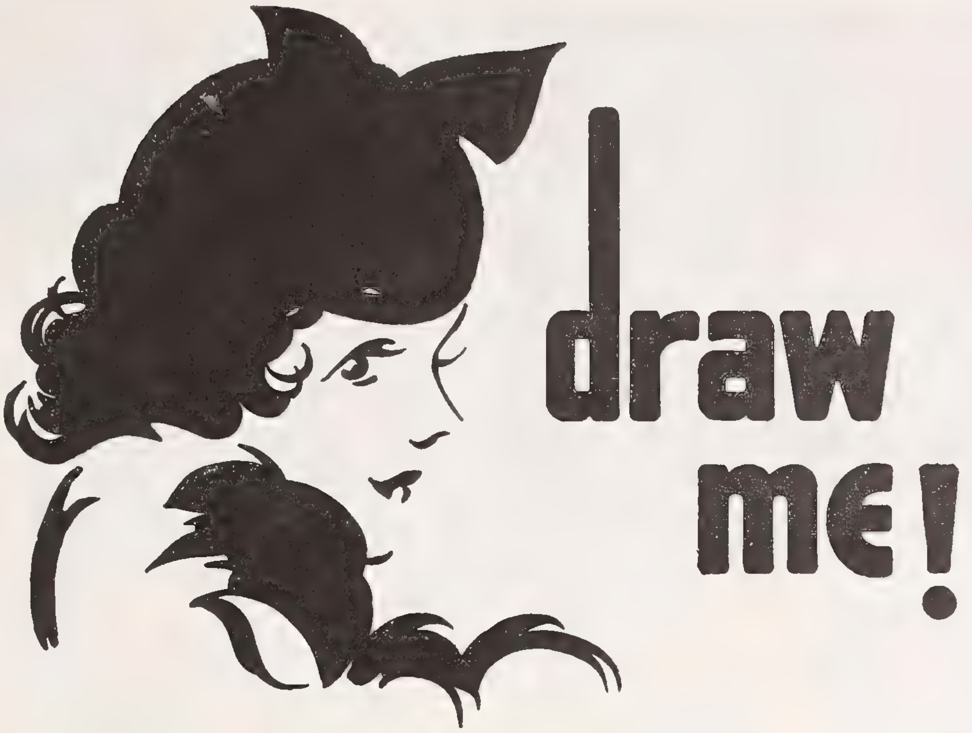
Preview Postscripts

With such a cast, there was bound to be excitement on the set. But the tops came when the studio announced a one-hundred-dollar bonus to anyone on the lot who could get a picture of Ned Sparks with a smile or even a suspicion of one lurking on his visage. Cameramen, cast and directors snooped around Mr. Sparks for six weeks with Leicas and Brownies hidden in vest pockets. But Paramount still has the cash . . . Joe Penner is a native Nagdbechkereckian. You'll find it on the map somewhere in the vicinity of Budapest. He arrived in America at the age of nine, not with a duck but with his grandfather. They both had tags affixed to their coat lapels bearing the information that they were to be forwarded to Detroit, where Joe's parents would claim them. His first real job came when he answered an ad for a mind-reader's assistant on the stage. The big chance came one night when the chief psychic was incapacitated and Joe's powers swung the act along. Jobs with less mental and financial strain followed for a few years, before he landed in the "Greenwich Village Follies." In 1934 Joe was voted America's outstanding ether artist by the radio fans. . . . Jackie Coogan was a constant visitor on the set. Reason being Betty Grable. They announced their intentions to wed following the picture's completion, and set off for a three months' personal appearance tour in order to feather the nest.

★★★ Professional Soldier

(20th Century-Fox)

The news that "Professional Soldier" concerns itself with a revolution in a mythical kingdom probably starts this review off on a note of alarm. If so it's unintentional, for despite a familiar theme "Professional Soldier," by virtue of intelligent dialogue and good casting, man-



COMPETE FOR AN ART SCHOLARSHIP

Copy this girl and send us your drawing—perhaps you'll win a COMPLETE FEDERAL COURSE FREE! This contest is for amateurs, so if you like to draw do not hesitate to enter. Prizes for Five Best Drawings—FIVE COMPLETE ART COURSES FREE, including drawing outfits. (Value of each course, $190.00.)

FREE! Each contestant whose drawing shows sufficient merit will receive a grading and advice as to whether he or she has, in our estimation, artistic talent worth developing.

Nowadays design and color play an important part in the sale of almost everything. Therefore the artist, who designs merchandise or illustrates advertising has become a real factor in modern industry. Machines can never displace him. Many Federal students, both men and girls who are now commercial designers or illustrators capable of earning from $1000 to $5000 yearly have been trained by the Federal Course. Here's a splendid opportunity to test your talent. Read the rules and send your drawing to the address below.

RULES

This contest open only to amateurs, 16 years old or more. Professional commercial artists and Federal students are not eligible.

1. Make drawing of girl 5 inches high, on paper 6½ inches square. Draw only the girl, not the lettering.

2. Use only pencil or pen.

3. No drawings will be returned.

4. Write your name, address, age and occupation on back of drawing.

5. All drawings must be received in Minneapolis by Feb. 26th, 1936. Prizes will be awarded for drawings best in proportion and neatness by Federal Schools Faculty.

FEDERAL SCHOOLS, INC.

3996 Federal Schools Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

Paula Stone, Tom Brown, Marie Wilson and Beverly Roberts having a gay time together.

THIS DIRT CAME OFF A "CLEAN" FACE

IN this picture you see a hand holding a pad of cotton. The dirt on the pad was removed from the face of a woman who thought her face was clean. It was removed by Ambrosia, the pore-deep liquid cleanser that gets out clogging dirt left by ordinary cleansing methods.

Get Ambrosia today. Test it once by using it after your regular method of cleansing. See what dirt it removes from your skin. You feel Ambrosia tingle, you know it is cleansing as nothing has done before.

You can get a trial size at your 10¢ store. Large size, 75¢ at drug or department stores.

AMBRŌSIA

THE PORE-DEEP CLEANSER

BACKACHES caused by MOTHERHOOD

Maternity puts a terrible strain on a woman's back muscles . . . frequently causes years of suffering. Allcock's Porous Plaster does wonders for such backaches. Draws the blood to painful spot. Pain goes quickly. Insist on Allcock's, the original. Lasts longer, comes off easy. 25¢ at druggists or write "Allcock Manufacturing Company, Ossining, New York." ALLCOCK'S

Skin Help When surface pimples spoil looks or eczema torments you

Send for FREE SAMPLE Poslam Co. STATION G NEW YORK

POSLAM WORKS FAST

The Best GRAY HAIR Remedy is Made at Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

ages to keep itself entertaining and swiftly paced throughout almost all of its unreeling. Top honors go to Victor McLaglen, who continues to be the expert performer the critics proclaimed him to be in "The Informer." As Colonel Michael Donovan, a soldier by nature and by trade, Victor is commissioned, at a handsome price, to kidnap the boy king of whatever-the-name-of-the-mythical-kingdom-happens-to-be, and hold him until the revolutionists take over the government. On his venture he takes Michael Whalen, a good-looking screen novice. You can picture their surprise when the boy king turns out to be Freddie Bartholomew. What's more, his guardian, Countess Sonia, is Gloria Stuart. Young Mr. Bartholomew goes with them willingly, being under the delighted impression that they are Chicago gangsters and heroes of his extra-curricular reading. There are several lively adventures before the young man returns to his throne—lively because of the presence of the lusty McLaglen. The entire cast can be credited with first-rate performances, even though it is our private suspicion that young Mr. B. is becoming just a trifle smug. Just around the edges, perhaps, but still and all, smug.

Preview Postscripts

Gloria Stuart claims she participated in the coldest love scene ever filmed in Hollywood. Director Tay Garnett is responsible for the chill. It was his idea to shoot the picture through one night and on into the sunrise. Though he doesn't claim to being particularly romantic, Tay can appreciate a good moon when he sees one. So, with a full moon on the program one night, he informed Gloria and Michael Whalen that they were due for a love scene in the 20th Century-Fox gardens that night. The fact that as the moon came up, the thermometer went down, didn't spoil the director's enthusiasm a bit . . . Problems were encountered in that firing squad scene, too. When the squad corporal gave the order for the customary manual of arms, a scene of utter confusion resulted. The soldiers snapped into the manual, but each in the manner to which he was accustomed. The squad consisted of a Russian, a Frenchman, a British "Tommy" and five former dough-boys of the A.E.F. Vic McLaglen saved the day and tempers by acting as drill sergeant and perfecting them in U. S. army maneuvers.

★★ Chatterbox

(RKO-Radio)

With this picture, Anne Shirley becomes the newest star on the Hollywood skyscape. She's worth it, too, having the ability to turn on a most amazing number of emotions at the slightest provocation. What's more, those facial calisthenics are sincere and attractive. In spite of a wobbly story, Miss Shirley has the audience entranced from start to finish. It is her picture, except for a grand scene between Edward Ellis and Granville Bates, grandfather and father respectively of the heroine and hero. With a little blackberry cordial and a little more imagination, they begin extolling the merits of their ancestors. That one episode is worth your money. Phillips Holmes is the earnest young artist who chooses to starve in a garret rather than subject his "spirit" to his father's money. Mr. Holmes does as well as could be expected with such a role. Margaret Hamilton is very good as the strait-laced boarding-house keeper, who tries to straighten out matters between Anne and Phillips and only manages to get them beautifully snarled up. Erik Rhodes is among those present, too, but in a part that doesn't give him a chance to show off the Rhodes' talents to any great extent.

Preview Postscripts

Anne Shirley's just celebrated her seventeenth birthday, but she's a veteran of fourteen years' standing in the moom pitchers. Ann spends every spare moment that can be wangled away from studios and studies at the movies. She's Hollywood's most ardent fan . . . Edward Ellis has also been a professional since the age of three. Brought up in a theatrical family, he made his debut on a Michigan threatre stage where his father was playing the bewhiskered villain, in a blood-chilling thriller. Newsboy, professional baseball player, salesman of a number of things, and a long list of other occupations has occupied Mr. Ellis' time since then, but always he comes back to the footlights. After a two-year run in "The Bat" on Broadway, he came to Hollywood for a trial job. He's been in constant demand ever since . . . This is Phillips Holmes' first American picture in two years. He's been visiting in Italy and England and making pictures in those countries. In Italy he was under the jurisdiction of Mussolini, who in case you don't know it, has full say-so about the movies, too. Those paintings in the picture, also in case you never suspected it, are painted by Phillips. At one time he planned to become an artist. His present plans are to make enough money in the movies to allow him to retire and live the life Boheme . . . Margaret Hamilton is really a kindergarten teacher on a tear. She taught for five years, then took to little theatre work in Cleveland to keep from passing out due to boredom. New York followed after one taste of the theatre, then "Another Language" and recognition. Paul Merserve, famed landscape artist, is her husband.

★ The Great Impersonation

(Universal)

The only thing great about this is the impersonation. For the rest we found it pretty dull stuff about a plot to blow up the world in order to prevent war. This basically sound idea is mixed up with all kinds of mysterious goings-on, blood-curdling screams, bat-infested ancestral halls and ladies who go out of what is termed their minds. In the midst of all this Edmund Lowe remains suave, handsome and unperturbed until the last five minutes when he gets busy and shoots the man who is just going to pull the trap which will blow up the universe. The cast on the whole is too competent to waste on such plotting. Mr. Lowe hasn't surprised us with a good role since we can't remember when. Wera Engels is a young lady who could do well by a fair chance, too. Valerie Hobson again gets the bad breaks. This time it is a husband, whom she finally gets rid of, only to have his spook back hanging around. If you like stories that dabble in political plotting, romance, pseudo-sophisticates, comedy, beautiful spies, sentiment, mystery, and murder, why then you'll like this.

Preview Postscripts

The bog from which the wild and wicked gent is driven in that exciting scene, was constructed on the studio lot. A three acre swamp with all the trimmings was built at a cost of several hundred dollars, then burnt to the ground to provide that real smoke and flame seen on the celluloid. The Los Angeles fire-department enjoyed themselves that day, having been called to stand around and prevent the fire from spreading to the studio . . . Alan Crosland had to think up all the spooky effects for this one. But the blood-curdling screams sometimes made him pale. Crosland directed the first talkie made—"The Jazz Singer"—in case you've forgotten history . . . Valerie Hobson has evidently dedicated herself to a life of horror. Since her arrival in the Hollywoods the gal has been in constant demand for chillers. Foremost horror experts claim that Valerie is the perfect foil for grewsomeness. Nothing scares her while making these epic pix, she claims, except the fact that her screaming apparatus may wear out . . . Wera Engels is known as Hollywood's League of Nations. Born in Keil, a German naval port, she was brought up in Tsing-Tao, where her father was governor. She vacationed in Japan and Russia, was educated in Paris and married a catain of the English flying corps in Constantinople. Wera is in demand in every country where pictures are made, since she personifies the studio exec's idea of a "typical girl" in every land. She's worked in Austrian, Russian and French pictures. English scouts were hunting for the ideal type, hired her and David Selznick spotted her in their production . . . In one scene Director Crosland became annoyed with Miss Engels. He didn't like the way she was kissing Edmund Lowe. "I'm trying to kiss him as I thought an Englishman would prefer," alibied Wera. "Forget his nationality, and get to work," directed the director.

★★★ King of Burlesque
(20th Century-Fox)

The monarch mentioned in the title is Warner Baxter. With Jack Oakie, he is proprietor of the most successful burlesque show on New York's 14th Street. With success comes ambition, and the former torso tycoon moves uptown to become Broadway's leading musical comedy producer. His burlesque days have taught him what the public wants, and he let's 'em have it. (What the public wants, it seems, is Alice Faye in tights.) Then comes the evil day when he falls for a society belle, puts art in his productions and loses his shirt. Park Avenue deserts him, but good old Broadway stands by. In fact it's Alice Faye, with a million dollars in limbs and almost a hundred thousand in cash, who puts both at Warner's disposal and with them he returns to his former glory. That's the story, and if you think it's a good one you're highly mistaken. What makes this a good picture is the fact that it gives Jack Oakie plenty of opportunity for his effective comedy—his impersonation of Al Jolson is one of the picture's highlights—and that it boasts several good tunes and a supporting cast which includes Arline Judge, Dixie Dunbar, Gregory Ratoff, Fats Waller, Kenny Baker and Nick Long, Jr.

Preview Postscripts

In anticipation of an accident which never occurred, a first-aid crew of a half dozen men and two trained nurses made their headquarters at Stage 16 for almost two weeks. 25 girls were on that set swinging from 40-foot high trapezes for a musical scene. This act was cited by veterans as the most dangerous and original performance ever seen on the screen. Difficult routines of dancing and acrobatics were indulged in by the gals as they swung through the air with the greatest of trepidations. Six cameras photographed the act . . . Sammy Lee, dance director for 20th Century-Fox, has some words of wisdom for all who would aspire to chorus jobs. First, of course, learning to dance would be a help, then a girl should color her hair to match her personality. "A redhead has a three-to-one chance over a brunette of getting a job," quoting Sammy, "and a

CORNS
CALLOUSES
BUNIONS
CORNS Or CALLOUSES Lift Right Out!

To loosen corns and callouses for quick, safe removal, use Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads with the separate Medicated Disks, included in every box. In a short time your corns or callouses will lift right out. This is the medically safe, sure way. One minute after you apply Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads on corns, callouses or bunions relief will be yours! Pressure on the sensitive spot ends at once and sore toes or blisters from new or tight shoes are prevented by these soothing, healing, cushioning pads. Made in sizes for Corns, Callouses, Bunions, and Soft Corns between the toes. Cost but a trifle. Sold everywhere.

LARGEST SELLING FOOT REMEDY IN THE WORLD!

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads

FREE SAMPLE AND BOOKLET. Mail coupon to Dr. Scholl's, Inc., Dept. 367, Chicago, Ill., for booklet, "The Feet and Their Care," and sample of Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads for ☐ Corns, ☐ Callouses, ☐ Bunions, ☐ Soft Corns. Please check size wanted. (You can paste this on government penny postcard)

Name.. Address..

. . . Knitters! Attention! There will be two new sweater styles in the April issue. Instructions for knitting them may be had for the asking. Lack of space prevented showing them this month, but you can still knit them in time for your new spring wardrobe.

Humiliated . . . Unpopular . . . because of

PIMPLES

60-second treatments bring quick relief
So needless . . . the heartbreak of a pimply skin!

Skin doctors know that tiny germs imbedded in the pores cause most of these eruptions. And now the antiseptic treatment they recommend is yours to use at home!

Beauty Magic—Nac Prescription Cream contains volatized sulphur . . . penetrates pore deep . . . clears up pimples by killing the pimple germ.

This medicated cream ends "periodic pimples" in 72 hours. Reduces large pores, normalizes oily skin, too. Nac Cream guaranteed to bring relief.

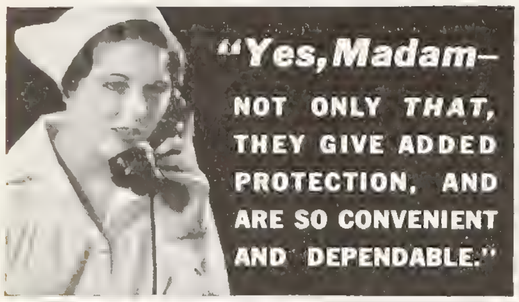
Stubborn Cases—Apply Nac Cream at night . . . and Nac Prescription Face Powder during the day. Nac Powder replaces regular make-up powder. Odorless, clings for hours.

Purse size of Cream and Powder at Woolworth, Kresge and Kress Stores . . . 20c. Large sizes at drug and department stores.

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

NAC... the Volatized-Sulphur Cream

© 1936, Dermalab Inc., Winnetka, Ill.



"Yes, Madam—
NOT ONLY THAT, THEY GIVE ADDED PROTECTION, AND ARE SO CONVENIENT AND DEPENDABLE."

PAR-I-O-GEN
(Pronounced PAR-I-O-JEN)
• TABLETS •

SOUND reasoning and commonsense recommend the form, the convenience, and the dependability of PAR-I-O-GEN Tablets, features which are often so difficult adequately to describe.

They are neatly packaged in tubes almost as small as the daintiest fountain pen, each tube containing twelve tablets, and may be conveniently carried in one's purse or hand-bag, for use while traveling or at home.

A tablet dissolves in a few moments and the solution thus formed has been found by thousands to be entirely adequate and dependable without the use of water or other accessories.

PAR-I-O-GEN Tablets are non-caustic, stainless, greaseless. They provide an effective deodorant although practically odorless. It is a long-acknowledged fact that they offer the practical, commonsense answer to the problem of

FEMININE HYGIENE

The Price of the Regular Size Tube of 12 Tablets Is $1.00

FREE OFFER: If you can find a Druggist who does not have PAR-I-O-GEN Tablets when you ask for them, send us his name and address and we'll send you a trial package FREE. Simply address:

AMERICAN DRUG & CHEMICAL CO.
Dept. 103, 420 S. Sixth Street
Minneapolis, Minn.

BUNIONS Reduced Quickly
Pain Stops At Once! Write for
Free Sample of Fairyfoot Treatment.
No obligation. Dept. 2713 Fairyfoot Company
1223 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

THE liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile onto the food you swallow every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c at all drug stores. © 1935, C. M. Co.

brunette has almost a ten-to-one chance over a blonde." So peroxide is becoming a drug on the Hollywood market . . . Important though seldom heard of, is the studio "stooge." Through a metamorphosis difficult to analyze, the Hollywood stooge has graduated from the ranks of cheerful simpleton to something a little hotter in the social scale. No star is without one of these necessities, who are a combination of valet, stand-in, companion, petty-cash disburser, buffer, court-jester and errand runner. The business is so serious to most of them, that after two weeks in a star's company, the stooge will take on the exact mannerisms, speech and even looks of his employer. Lowe "Cracker" Henderson, is so much like his boss, Jack Oakie, that they're often confused. Lowe is the brother of Eugene, Gary Cooper's man-of-all-things. Eugene was Oakie's first stooge, but Gary persuaded him to leave Freckles Oakie. So Jack hired the brother, paid him twice as much salary and to cinch it this time put "Cracker" under contract. Tops in the profession average around $50 per week.

★★ We're Only Human
(RKO-Radio)

Preston Foster is our nominee for tough-guy-of-the-month. Portraying a hard-boiled detective, he fears no one and his particular delight is wading into a gang of hoodlums single-handed. This pastime, for your information, also brings him harsh words from his superiors, for while his methods look fine in the papers, they do not conform to the department's idea regarding the pursuit of criminals. In his travels he meets Jane Wyatt, who is perhaps the world's most beautiful newspaper reporter. Jane takes our man in hand and informs him his bravery means nothing, since he has never known fear. Her statement is proven about half a reel later, when Preston gets himself a few bumps which make him temporarily blind. When he recovers he finds himself minus the old gusto for conflict, which is, of course, the proper moment for the supreme test to be introduced. Whether or not he meets the situation and emerges a genuine and authentic hero we shall leave to your imagination. Anyway, Foster makes his role believable and interesting, and it is good to see the lovely and talented Jane Wyatt on the screen again.

Preview Postscripts

That knock-down drag-out battle between Foster and Auer was the genuine article. There's nothing Preston Foster would rather get his teeth into than a good fight. Mischa Auer isn't that pugilistic but figured he'd rather take a sock at Foster than let his double have all the fun. So the battle was on. Director Jimmy Flood was the only one to remain unimpressed. "Just a couple of cream puffs," he opined . . . Preston started on the road to fortune via the newspapers. He sold them on New York street corners. Later he wrote them, but found it a dull life so joined up with a chorus. He graduated to the leading man class in "Two Seconds" and was an instant success. It was a good many years ago that James Gleason made his stage debut at four months. His parents were actors in the show and thought it as good a way as any to keep an eye on Jimmy. Since that time he has appeared on more stages than he can recall, served in the Spanish American War, spent two years in the Philippines, married Lucille Webster, had a son, Russell, and now has a three-fold movie contract to act, write and direct . . . When Jane Wyatt was asked her opinion of domesticity she replied, "I admire it profoundly in others." A week later Edgar Warren, writer, married her anyhow.

★★ Two in the Dark
(RKO-Radio)

A murder mystery which is novel only in the fact that its solution is obtained without the aid of a bibulous Philo Vance, it offers average entertainment to filmgoers who fancy themselves amateur detectives. When Walter Abel finds himself wandering in a park, his mind a complete blank, he encounters Margot Grahame, who happens to be there because it offers no rent problems. On their way to a police station to enlist the aid of the law in Walter's dilemma, they buy a paper and discover that the description of the suspect in a newly-committed murder mystery tallies neatly with the Abel features. From there on the story concerns itself mainly with Walter's pursuit of his identity, which leads him eventually to the answer to that ever-popular question: Who done it? Mr. Abel is satisfactory in the lead, and Miss Grahame is as lovely as she is miscast. Others are Wally Ford, who plays a newspaper man like an actor playing a newspaper man, Gail Patrick, and a pair of villains named Leslie Fenton and Erin O'Brien-Moore.

Preview Postscripts

Margot Grahame wanted to be a detective as a child, and hasn't forgotten that craving in spite of innumerable English stage appearances, 41 English pictures and our American ones. When she retires from the screen, Detective Grahame will come to life. Born in Capetown, South Africa, of theatrical parents, Margot was given a role on the stage at five years. Margot's as versatile an actress as has struck Hollywood in some time. Not only in screen roles but in off-screen life. She kept the cast highly entertained throughout the shooting of this one with a different set of antics every day . . . Eric Blore is one Englishman who's in Hollywood for keeps, providing he gets the chance. He thinks American pictures are superior to the English product. "Not that I don't think the English pictures are improving," explains Eric, "but I can't understand their bloody accent any more." . . . Erin O'Brien-Moore is a native daughter of Los Angeles, not the Emerald Isles. She wasn't going to be an actress at all, but a sculptress, according to early ambitions. Since the time she changed her mind, Miss O'Brien-Moore has appeared in more than eight hundred performances.

★★★ Whispering Smith Speaks
(20th Century-Fox)

Again we have George O'Brien proving that out in the West men are men and prefer women like Irene Ware. He's given up horseback riding this time and tears around the country in a locomotive. Wearying of papa's millions, made in a railroad game, George sets out to make his own fortune. It isn't long before Irene comes into his life. She's in the R. R. game, too, being manager of a one-train track in the sticks. Suspense, comedy and action follow, with the usual good dose of vim, vigor and vitality. O'Brien pictures can always be counted on for good entertainment and this is no exception. City folk should never miss one, for the directors seem to can oxygen right along with sound. Besides a good story and excellent work by the leads, the supporting cast is well chosen. Frank Sheridan gives a first-class characterization of the hero's father and Maude Allen is pleasing in the role of the heroine's mother. Spencer Charters and Vic Potel provide some real laughs as the engineer and fireman of the one train which the track can boast. You can take the whole family to this picture and enjoy it yourself.

Preview Postscripts

"Genevieve" is the star of this celluloider, though she wasn't mentioned on the credit sheet. She first saw service in 1895 and was the pride and joy of the Southern Pacific railroads, being the most modern engine on the roads. For the last twenty years "Gen" has been retired from active service but earns good money from the movie studios . . . George O'Brien refuses to use a double, though the studio has implored him to do so many a time. They even tried to get a clause in his last contract to the effect, but Mr. O'B. will have none of that softie stuff. That's an actual scene you see in the picture where the brave O'Brien jumps from the locomotive to the freight car. According to actual fact, the locomotive was whizzing along at thirty-five miles per hour and the freight at fifteen. Which makes a nice jump—to look at . . . Irene Ware is a former Miss America. She won the coveted title three years ago at Galveston, and forgot it three minutes later. She's one of the best sports around the studios, and no location trip stumps her. In fact, she prefers them rough and would rather act in outdoorsy pictures than any of the more sophisticated drawing-room epics. She'd rather handle a locomotive than a cup of tea any day.

★★ The Perfect Gentleman
(M-G-M)

As a vehicle for the ingratiating talents of Frank Morgan, this little number comes under the heading of satisfactory, if not exciting, entertainment. It is pleasant, mainly because Mr. Morgan with the screen practically to himself, manages to be consistently amusing. Although he is all that the title implies, he is also a blustering ne'er-do-well and a constant source of embarrassment to his son, who happens to be a young gentleman of the cloth. For instance, when dear old dad appears at the bishop's tea in a state of alcoholic enthusiasm the son, to put it mildly, is somewhat perturbed. Mr. Morgan, realizing the error of his ways, heads for London where he meets a robust queen of the music halls and joins her act. The vaudeville siren is Cicely Courtneidge, one of England's favorite comediennes, and, while some of her comedy is a bit broad for this side of the Atlantic, she is competent and even on occasions funny. Heather Angel and Herbert Mundin are excellent in supporting roles, but it's Mr. Morgan's show.

Preview Postscripts

A couple of weeks of work and this picture was ready for release. Such speed being the combination of good director, simple settings, snappy dialogue, experienced cast and colossal luck . . . Cicely Courtneidge makes her bow to American audiences in this one. As English as crumpets, she comes from a long line of theatre people. Rosie Knott, English actress, was her mother, and her father was a famed actor manager, John Courtneidge. Cicely could imitate before she could say ga-ga and vaudeville contracts were hers at ten years of age. Supposed to fall in love with Jack Hulbert in a stage play, she liked it so well that she soon became Mrs. J. Hulbert . . . Herbert Mundin's another Englisher. His rise as a comedian parallelled a general decline in the art of comedy. The stooge, or a dozen of them to every comedian, was becoming the vogue, but Herbert stuck to a one-man team and still swears by it. Sir Joseph Mundi, famed character actor, was his grandfather. His

SAD AND BLUE
Now dreams come true!
BLUE WALTZ
FACE POWDER
BLUE WALTZ

Sad and blue with "time on her hands" and nothing to do. Now she's in his arms and sees her dreams come true.

Perhaps you, too, find life passing you by. Why not discover for yourself the allure you can achieve through the fragrance of Blue Waltz Perfume, the satiny texture of Blue Waltz Face Powder, the tempting colors of Blue Waltz Lipstick? The fragrance of Blue Waltz invites caresses, thrills . . . and lingers on in his heart.

Remember to ask for Blue Waltz Perfume and Cosmetics if you want to be remembered. Certified pure, laboratory tested. 10¢ each at 5 and 10¢ stores.

Blue Waltz
FIFTH AVENUE • NEW YORK

BLUE WALTZ PERFUME · FACE POWDER · LIPSTICK · BRILLIANTINE · COLD CREAM · TALC

SHEET MUSIC
WHEN BUYING SHEET MUSIC
ask your dealer to show you
CENTURY CERTIFIED EDITION
IT COSTS ONLY 15¢ A COPY
Catalogue of 3000 Selections
FREE ON REQUEST
CENTURY MUSIC PUBLISHING CO.
233 W. 40TH STREET N.Y.C.
15¢ A COPY
15¢ A COPY

NEW EASY WAY
10¢
JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP
KEEP WIRES OFF FLOOR
(LAMPS AND RADIO)
A neat job instantly. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords. 10c.
At Kresge's

IF YOU HAD A TACK IN YOUR TOE

You'd take it out . . . being careful to avoid infection • A corn is hard, dead tissue with tack-like point. Shoe pressure forces the hard point into nerves, sending pain throughout your system. When soft felt Blue-Jay pad is centered over the corn, shoe pressure is lifted and pain ceases instantly. The mild Blue-Jay medication undermines the corn and in 3 days you lift it out completely.

BLUE-JAY
BAUER & BLACK SCIENTIFIC
CORN PLASTER

. . . mornings, it's MOTHER'S
Interesting recipes copied neatly in type, letters typed and carbons kept, all the household affairs kept business-like.

. . . afternoons, it's SISTER'S —or maybe young brother's—to type out those themes and other home work for the teacher. Typed lessons make a hit!

. . . evenings, it's DAD'S for catching up with office or personal work, studying, keeping records all shipshape, getting ahead in the world.

OWN A CORONA!
New Finance Plan Makes It Easy
. . . ONLY $1.00 PER WEEK!

Everybody knows Corona—the world's first successful portable—and every family needs one. They'll last for years. Now you can buy one on extremely liberal terms—brand-new, fully equipped, carrying case included. Mail the coupon for interesting booklet—it's free.

CORONA floating Shift
CORONA STANDARD

MAIL COUPON TODAY
L C Smith & Corona Typewriters, Desk 3
151 Almond St., Syracuse, N. Y.
Please send Corona booklet, also tell me where I can arrange free trial.
Name ....
Street ....
City .... State ....

Never wait a second day
take a Beauty Laxative

You simply can't expect to have sparkling eyes, a clear youthful complexion and plenty of pep, unless you insist on regular elimination. Never wait a second day. Take a beauty laxative.

Olive Tablets gently and safely help nature carry off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system; keep you looking and feeling fine and fit. And they're non-habit-forming.

Keep a box of these time-tried beauty laxatives handy for the times when nature skips a day. Three sizes, 15¢-30¢-60¢. All druggists.

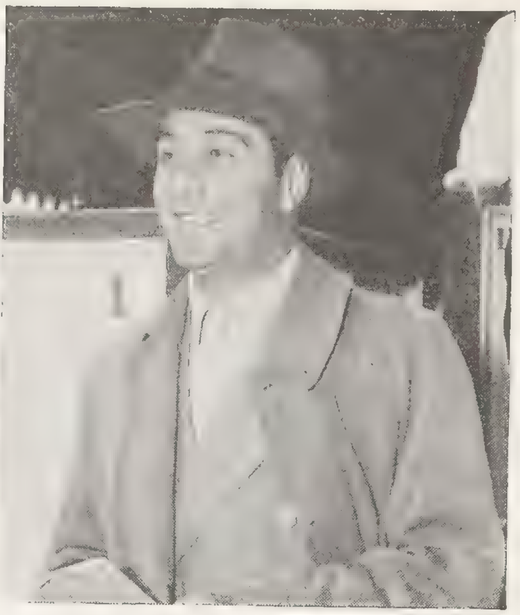
DR. EDWARDS'
OLIVE TABLETS
THE Beauty LAXATIVE

GRAY FADED HAIR
Women, girls, men with gray, faded streaked hair. Shampoo and color your hair at the same time with new French discovery "SHAMPO-KOLOR," takes few minutes leaves hair soft, glossy, natural. Permits permanent wave and curl. Free Booklet, Monsieur L. P. Valligny, Dept. 39, 254 W. 31 St., N. Y. C.

BLONDES with DARKENED HAIR

SHAMPOO-RINSE washes hair 2 to 4 shades lighter

BLONDES, has your hair darkened to an unattractive, brownish shade? Don't let it stay that way. Do what millions of other natural light blondes do. Bring back to dull, faded hair the fascinating, alluring lights so natural to the true blonde. Now the new shampoo-rinse, BLONDEX, washes hair 2 to 4 shades lighter—IN JUST ONE SHAMPOO. And safely, too, for Blondex is not a harsh chemical or dye. Try Blondex today. And once again have hair that gleams with radiance and beauty. Get the new shampoo-rinse today, BLONDEX. At any good drug or department store.



Snappy-looking Ric Cortez at the Santa Anita racetrack.

father turned to the church while son Herbert became a telephone engineer. He was assigned to install telephones in the Elstree studios. That was in 1920 and they're just getting the phones to work now. "I, myself," says Mr. M., "left the telephone company in a short time, for reasons the management didn't care to discuss with me." Frank Morgan started out in life to be a brush salesman. Ringing doorbells soon palled on him, so he decided to give higher education a try. After several years at Cornell, Frank abandoned his studies and went West to be a cowpuncher.

★★ Seven Keys to Baldpate

(RKO-Radio)

With the Messrs. Shakespeare and Dickens enjoying such a revival, the studio had an excuse for disinterring this classic. At least "Seven Keys to Baldpate" needs an excuse by this time. Or maybe just a new title—"The Bad Penny" f'rinstance. The only thing that sent chills down our spine was Gene Raymond's coy glances. In all justice to Mr. Raymond, though, he may have meant to look sinister or even scary. Bright spots in the picture are Henry Travers and Erin O'Brien-Moore. Mr. Travers does a choice bit of acting as the "spook" of Baldpate Inn and Miss O'Brien-Moore is good in the role of a gangster's moll. Margaret Callahan is right pretty for the romantic lead and Murray Alper looks vicious enough to make his gangster characterization convincing. He also provides some good laughs in his earnest desire to be true to the profession and wipe out everyone who might prove troublesome. The supporting cast is competent in every role, which makes it fair to middlin' entertainment if you are familiar with the plot or not.

Preview Postscripts

Baldpate Inn isn't entirely imaginary. At least not since an inn by that name has been built in Estes Park in Colorado. The proprietor has the greatest collection of keys in the country, too. Since he set about his collection, keys have been sent him from every corner of the globe, by former guests at the hotel and friends of theirs. One is over 5000 years old, another is the key to Mozart's wine cellar, besides countless keys to jails and the homes of prominent people the world over . . . One of the grandest sets ever to be built on the lot was the inn lobby. It was complete with stuffed fish, horse-hair furniture and all the trappings common to hostelries in bygone days. The set was closed to visitors almost all the time. Not due to temperamental actors this time, but because of the cobwebs, which had to be given the best of care . . . This is the first time Erin O'Brien-Moore has ever been done away with in a picture. And she doesn't like it. Not when it requires practicing with a revolver. Every time a "shot" of the shooting scene was to be made, she would insist on looking at the gun first to see if it was loaded. As a steady diet Miss O'Brien-Moore prefers other types of roles, thankin' ye . . . Margaret Callahan came to Hollywood from Little Theatre groups in the East. Now she thinks the fillums are a better expressive medium than the stage can ever pretend to be. She has the most unusual hobby in Hollywood—a jewelry mender-upper. Developed the talent at school on the watches, rings, etc., of her friends, and now has the complete equipment of a professional patcher.

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 21)

themselves is to place them in a drinking scene? If they are of this opinion, they are sadly mistaken. Naturally, there are a large number of theatre-goers who enjoy seeing people imbibing liquor, but there is a still greater number of people to whom these scenes are thoroughly disgusting. Why not give the latter class a break? It is becoming more and more difficult to find a film where no drinking is shown and I think it's high time something was done about it. What do you fans think about it?—Hiriam Holdridge, Lima, Ohio.

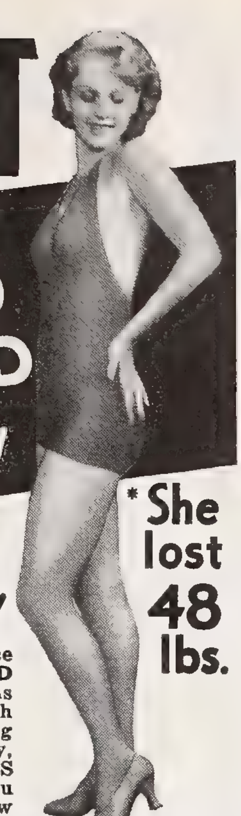
$1 Prize Letter To Shirley Temple

I'd paint of you a picture,
  But the difficulty lies
In finding just a color
  To match your smiling eyes.
And you are a living poem
  So wonderful and real,
A written one could never
  Such loveliness reveal.

You precious little girl,
  So full of joy and life,
You came into this world
  To help and mend its strife.
Your smiles and each dimple
  And every dance and song
Should teach us to be happy
  Our whole life-day long.

I have a lot of pictures
  Of you upon the wall.
With each expression different
  But sweet and perfect all.
And each and all resemble
  A perfect little star,
Our darling Shirley Temple
  That twinkles near and far.

—E. W., Brooklyn, N. Y.



LOSE FAT

By Safe FOOD METHOD

No More Drugs!

*She lost 48 lbs.

Just like Eating Candy!

● At last! You can reduce SAFELY by the new FOOD METHOD...no dangerous drugs. Losing fat with SLENDRETS is like eating candy! But unlike candy, delicious SLENDRETS take fat off, quickly! You lose weight by a safe new FOOD PRINCIPLE which converts accumulated fat into energy. You feel better, look years younger! SLENDRETS contain no drugs...no dangerous dinitrophenol, no thyroid. Not laxative.

Read How Others Lost Fat: *"I reduced 48 lbs., look 10 years younger," writes Mrs. Sims, Iowa. "36 lbs. of fat gone. Never felt better," writes Miss Angell, N. Y. "Lost 5 lbs. this week, leaves no flabby skin," writes Miss Nolan, Calif.

REDUCE QUICKLY...or NO COST!

● If you are not entirely satisfied with the wonderful results from the very first package, you get your money back in full. You can't lose one cent.

ACT ON THIS OFFER TODAY!

Don't give FAT another day's start... but be sure you reduce the safe SLENDRETS Food Method Way. Don't use drugs! Send $1 for generous-supply package containing 84 SLENDRETS. Or, $5 for 6 packages. (Currency, Money Order, Stamps, or C.O.D.) Sent to you in plain wrapper.

Scientific Medicinal Products Co. Dept. M336
Russ Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

Please send me on your money-back offer
☐ The $1 package containing 84 SLENDRETS
☐ 6 packages of SLENDRETS for $5
(Enclose payment. Or if C.O.D. send 10c fee)

Name..........
Address..........
City..........State..........

PIMPLES From External Causes

Relieve the sore, itchy spots and help heal the ugly defects with—the tested medication in

Resinol

Sample free. Resinol, Dept. 1a, Balto. Md.

Free for Asthma During Winter

If you suffer with those terrible attacks of Asthma when it is cold and damp; if raw, Wintry winds make you choke as if each gasp for breath was the very last; if restful sleep is impossible because of the struggle to breathe; if you feel the disease is slowly wearing your life away, don't fail to send at once to the Frontier Asthma Co. for a free trial of a remarkable method. No matter where you live or whether you have any faith in any remedy under the Sun, send for this free trial. If you have suffered for a lifetime and tried everything you could learn of without relief; even if you are utterly discouraged, do not abandon hope but send today for this free trial. It will cost you nothing. Address

Frontier Asthma Co., 112-A Frontier Bldg.
462 Niagara Street, Buffalo, New York

Loyal Friend

If Joan Crawford's critics would get out and work like she did, they would not have so much time to talk about her hair or her lips or her clothes. What we want is a good picture and any time you see a film with Joan in it, you get your money's worth. We can't find anything wrong with Joan Crawford. She is a self-made woman. If there were more like her there would not be any need for people, who are too lazy to work, to live on "relief."—A Fan, Philadelphia.

Muni Rates at Hen Party

At a tea which I gave recently for about twenty of my girl friends, Paul Muni's name came up for discussion. Believe it or not, all of them chose Mr. Muni as their favorite actor.

It is hard to realize that the kind doctor in "Dr. Socrates" and the cruel gangster in "Scarface" were one and the same person. Only a man of Muni's scope in acting is capable of such fine performances. "Black Fury" and "Bordertown" were also marvelous examples of his exceptional talent. He has the ability to handle any type of role given him with an utterly disarming naturalness—Ann Geese, Minneapolis, Minn.

Well—

Orchids to one Dick Powell for his last three pictures—"Shipmates Forever," "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Thanks a Million." You were just swell. And your voice? Need I say it. I don't care, Mr. Powell, if you aren't as slick and suave as George Raft or not as he-mannish as Clark Gable—you're the average American young chap.—Florence Blair.

Irate Fan

Where does Martha Thornton, in the January issue, get her scatter-brained ideas that "All we fans are tired of Gable, Crawford, Tone," and "Give us more of Eddy—but not too much"?

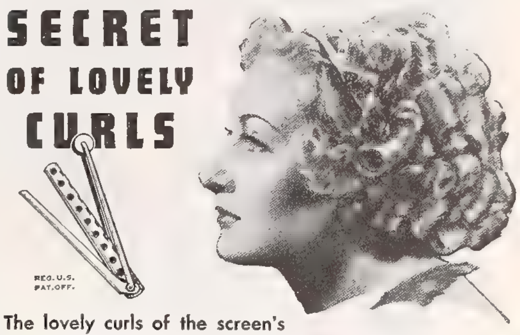
"Mutiny on the Bounty" carried Clark Gable to the heights where he rightfully belongs, and there is not a finer young actor in Hollywood than Franchot Tone. His stirring plea for justice in the latter part of "Mutiny on the Bounty" was a real masterpiece. And Mrs. Franchot Tone is a swell person (in spite of those prejudiced persons, who can find nothing better to do than to call her a "clothes horse"). Furthermore, who could ever tire of Nelson Eddy's voice?

And so, Miss Thornton, speak for yourself, but don't use the phrase, "we fans." You'll have more than one irate fan of the above stars down on your head if you do. —M. Franklyn, Montreal, Canada.

Hollywood's Newest Gamble

Warner Brothers, may I congratulate you for so brilliantly bringing to the screen that great epoch, "Captain Blood"? This immortal story of Rafael Sabatini transferred to celluloid, makes a most colorful and interesting photoplay. The picture is far above average from the standpoint of acting.

It introduces that handsome new star, Errol Flynn, in the role of a buccaneer. He resists the temptation to overact, justifying the producer's faith in him with this first important role of his. He appeals to men, and the feminine fans will rave about him.



REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

Millions of Women HAVE DISCOVERED THIS SECRET OF LOVELY CURLS

TALA BIRELL, Columbia Player

The lovely curls of the screen's smart stars can easily be yours... right in your own home. Use all-aluminum Hollywood Rapid-Dry Curlers. Easy to attach...comfortable to wear...simple to remove without spoiling curls. Patented features insure ample air circulation, rapid drying and better, more lasting curls. Send coupon for sample curler, free booklet.

Now 3 FOR 10¢
AT 5¢ AND 10¢ STORES
AND NOTION COUNTERS

HOLLYWOOD Rapid Dry CURLER

FREE ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

HOLLYWOOD RAPID-DRY CURLER
Box 800N, Hollywood, California

Please send FREE Hollywood Curler and booklet of smart Hollywood Hair Styles.

Name
Address
City State

Brush Away GRAY HAIR AND LOOK 10 YEARS YOUNGER

NOW, without any risk, you can tint those streaks or patches of gray or faded hair to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and BROWNATONE does it. Prove it—by applying a little of this famous tint to a lock of your own hair.

Used and approved—for over twenty-four years by thousands of women. BROWNATONE is safe. Guaranteed harmless for tinting gray hair. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Is economical and lasting—will not wash out. Simply retouch as the new gray appears. Imparts rich, beautiful color with amazing speed. Just brush or comb it in. Shades: "Blonde to Medium Brown" and "Dark Brown to Black" cover every need.

BROWNATONE—only 50c—at all drug and toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee, or—

SEND FOR TEST BOTTLE

The Kenton Pharmacal Co.
304 Brownatone Bldg., Covington, Kentucky
Please send me Test Bottle of BROWNATONE and interesting booklet. Enclosed is a 3c stamp to cover partly, cost of packing and mailing.
State shade wanted ....
Name..........
Address..........
City..........State..........
Print Your Name and Address

GRIFFIN-A·B·C

for a real shine

GRIFFIN
A·B·C
BLACK
SHOE POLISH
NEW CAN 2/3 LARGER

ALL COLORS
10¢

EASY OPENER

Griffin Manufacturing Co., Brooklyn, N. Y.

CATARRH AND SINUS CHART—FREE

Guaranteed Relief or No Pay. Stop hawking—stuffed-up nose—bad breath—Sinus irritation—phlegm-filled throat. Send Post Card or letter for New Treatment Chart and Money-Back Offer. 40,000 Druggists sell Hall's Catarrh Medicine. 63rd year in business. . . Write today!

F. J. CHENEY & CO. Dept. 33 TOLEDO, O.

KNO GRAY ENDS GRAY HAIR

If you are dissatisfied with your hair inquire for unique method KNOGRAY. Entirely different from anything you have known. Any shade from one bottle. Not a restorer. Colors roots perfectly. Free Booklet.

MADAME TURMEL, Dept. 8A, 256 W. 31 St., New York

ALWAYS CROSS PRAISES CHANGE

NEW BEAUTY THRILLS HUSBAND

Her husband marvels at her clear complexion, sparkling eyes, new vitality. She is really a different person since she eliminated intestinal sluggishness. What a difference a balanced combination of natural laxatives makes. Learn for yourself! Give Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) a trial. Note how naturally they work, leaving you feeling 100% better, freshened, alive. Contain no phenol or mineral derivatives. 25c, all druggists.

NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

FREE: Beautiful five-color 1936 Calendar-Thermometer. Also samples of NR and Tums. Send stamp for packing and postage to A. H. Lewis Co., Desk 68C-6, St. Louis, Mo.

But Flynn isn't the only performer who turns in a praiseworthy characterization. Applause is merited by Olivia De Haviland, Basil Rathbone, Guy Kibbee, Ross Alexander, and Lionel Atwill. I have no hesitation in commending it to the attention of every movie-goer.

Again, thanks for your vivid picturization of "Captain Blood."—Doris DeFabry, Newark, N. J.

A Tribute to Thelma Todd

Here's to the queen with laughing eyes,
Here's to the one who sneered at sighs,
Over the top she was ready to go
No matter who might be the foe.
With hair spun with gold
And a heart that way, too,
She made us take hold
When we thought we were through.

Yes, here's to a girl who knew sorrow and pain,
And yet never wilted in spite of the rain.
My lips cannot say what my heart would unfold
So richly deserved, this tribute I've told.
But yet there is more and more and still more
She did her part—down to the core.
Our darling of laughs is sleeping tonight,
Salute her, dear comrades, it's no more than right!—Ruth Bush, Detroit, Michigan.

Too Much Temple Publicity?

I quite agree with numbers of your fans as to the limited publicity and opportunities accorded to some of the so-called lesser stars.

I think that the singing, dancing and acting of Sybil Jason in "The Little Big Shot" was fully equal to anything done by the renowned Shirley, good as she is. Jane Withers and Edith Fellows, also, do quite as well.

It is positively sickening to have all of the applause directed toward one performer. Why can't we hear more of Sybil Jason?—George Nowlin, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Just a School Girl

I'm just a school girl, but I have very definite ideas about a star's acting. Well, Merle Oberon should receive loads of orchids in my estimation for her swell acting in "The Dark Angel," also for the way she wears her sport clothes. I will admit that she was just as beautiful as the Chinese wife in "Thunder in the East." Oh, heck, I can't praise her enough, so I will leave it to the rest of her fans to give her more orchids which still will not be enough. I'm sure an article about the one and only Merle Oberon would be greatly appreciated.—Virginia Calkins, Mason City, Iowa.

You Are Asked a Question

I would like to ask you MODERN SCREEN fans a question. Have you ever seen anyone more human and good-looking and yet minus that disgustingly "pretty face" that we meet up with so much these days? Have you ever seen anyone who was a more perfect example of masculinity than this Fred MacMurray chap?

We of Kentucky would like to see lots more of him—and also read lots more about him. Come on, gals, get busy and root for him.—Margaret Anderson, Louisville, Kentucky.

TRAPPED IN A HAREM!
SOLD AS A LOVE SLAVE!

He towered above her in the opaque blackness of the desert evening. A faint dry breeze brought to her from his flowing robes the scent of sandalwood and tobacco and the clean smell of well-kept Morocco leather. "Really," she murmured, "I've been in Egypt several months, but no one has taken the trouble to insult me." "Insult you?" repeated Ahmed Mahun quietly. His tone was spiced with scorn. "How is it possible to insult a girl of twenty who would marry a reprobate like Falconer? You don't know, of course, what he is, what he does for his living. Do you know that the man is a trader in women?" he wound up brusquely.

If Carlotta had heeded the stranger's warning, she might never have been sold into slavery, kept prisoner in a harem!

Read "I'll Follow You Forever." A thrilling complete novel of desert love in the March

SWEETHEART STORIES

Now on Sale
Everywhere
10c

QUICKEST WAY TO GET RID OF CORNS

no cutting . . . no pads

ONE DROP STOPS PAIN INSTANTLY

If you want to keep your feet free from aching corns just get a bottle of FREEZONE from any druggist. Put a drop or two on the corn. Pain stops instantly, and for good! Then before you know it the corn gets so loose you can lift it right off with your fingers, easily and painlessly. It's the safe way that millions use to get rid of hard and soft corns and calluses. Works like a charm! Try it.

FREEZONE

Bright Thoughts

I should like to see:

1. Fay Wray, Josephine Hutchinson and Erin O'Brien Moore as three sisters. Don't they look exactly alike, though?
2. Grant Withers and Joel McCrea as brothers. You can't tell 'em apart!
3. Edward Everett Horton as a wise-guy gangster.
4. Margaret Lindsay and Fred MacMurray co-starred.
5. Claude Rains as Napoleon.
6. Katharine Hepburn as Eustacia in Thomas Hardy's "The Return of the Native."

I should like to have:

1. Arthur Treacher as my butler.
2. Ginger Rogers as my kid sister.
3. Frank Morgan as an embarrassed uncle who visits me at least once a week.
4. Sybil Jason as the daughter of the folks next door who'd come over every night, to sit in my lap and sing to me, "I'm Rolling in Money."
5. Lionel Barrymore as a friend of the family in whom I could confide.
6. Merle Oberon as my slightly plump girl friend.—Mr. Fan, New York City.

Just a Thought

What right do all these so-called "movie fans" have to criticize so severely some of our best actors and actresses. After all, they are doing their best, trying to please us and a little friendly criticism is all very well. But when it comes to downright insults from certain "fans," I think it is time that they learned the good old saying, "If you can't say something good about a person, why say anything at all?"—Margaret Suttner, Columbus, Ohio.

A Plea

Year after year, patiently, quietly, anxiously I have waited and now the lid has flown off! I see that they have filmed "Resurrection" four times. They have made hundreds of mediocre "silents" into just as mediocre "talkies." But where are the eyes of the directors! Just think of what vitaphone and technicolor would do for "The Volga Boatman." Please give us "The Volga Boatman" again.—Frances Barnett, Newark, N. J.

Wise Suggestion

My suggestion to those who think that Shirley Temple has changed so radically in the last few months and those who think that she has made enough pictures, is for them to stay away the next time her films are shown in their cities, then they won't find anything wrong with her. To me, and no one can change my mind, she is still the sweetest, most adorable little actress on the screen.—A Shirley Temple Admirer, Bristol, Tennessee.

Anybody who couldn't enjoy seeing one Shirley Temple picture per week couldn't enjoy joy, and in all human fairness should be put out of the misery that living must be to them. Shirley is Hollywood's knockout for the depression. Bless her, and give us more and more of her.—M. McCaskill, Iowa City, Iowa.

Wotta Night

I have just about laughed myself sick at those merry mad Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera." I've never heard so many good gags and puns in one picture. Groucho tosses off enough wisecracks for two comedies. However, he is not my favorite. I like Chico best of all, he is so pathetic and that very pathos is the mark of real comedy.

If you go to see it—and you really owe it to yourself—get a seat on the aisle, for you will surely be rolling in it before the picture is over.—Bessie Toles, Colorado.

A Justified Complaint

Can't something be done to keep fine pictures like "David Copperfield" and "A Tale of Two Cities" from being cut? Mother and I saw "A Tale of Two Cities" in Omaha yesterday and when I read the resume, I felt that I had been "jipped." The prison scene with Lucie Manette and Sydney Carton had been deleted. Along with this picture were "Little America with Admiral Byrd" and a Walt Disney film, both very fine—lasting over an hour, though. Why let theatres that cut classics show them?

We would like to see Ronald Colman in another Dickens classic. I have never seen a finer character actor than Colman. Congratulations to the whole cast, too, for their fine acting.—Jane Cox, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

What's this, Paul Cavanagh holding hands with Binnie Barnes? It's all in fun, for Binnie's much devoted to her English spouse.

Skinny, Weak Rundown Nervous..!

How NATURAL IODINE Builds Worn-Out, Pale, Sickly Folks Into Strong, Red-Blooded Men and Women!

Kelpamalt, New Mineral Concentrate from the Sea, Rich in NATURAL PLANT IODINE, Feeds Starved Glands—Must Build Rich, Red Blood, Put on Lbs. of Solid, "Stay-There" Flesh, Give Steady Nerves and Day-Long Energy in First Week or Trial is Free!

Here's new hope and encouragement for thousands of even naturally skinny, weak, worn out, haggard-looking men and women whose energy and strength have been sapped by overwork and worry, who are nervous, irritable, always half sick and ailing. Science says the principal cause of these rundown conditions is "GLANDS STARVING FOR IODINE." When these glands don't work properly, all the food in the world can't help you. It just isn't turned into flesh. The result is, you stay skinny, pale, tired-out and rundown.

The most important gland—the one which actually controls body weight and strength—needs a definite ration of iodine all the time—NATURAL ASSIMILABLE IODINE—not to be confused with chemical iodides which often prove toxic. Only when the system gets an adequate supply of iodine can you regulate metabolism—the body's process of converting digested food into firm flesh, new strength and energy.

To get NATURAL IODINE in convenient, concentrated and assimilable form, take Kelpamalt—now recognized as the world's richest source of this precious substance. It contains 1,300 times more iodine than oysters, once considered the best source. 6 tablets alone contain more NATURAL IODINE than 480 lbs. of spinach or 1,387 lb. of lettuce.

Try Kelpamalt for a single week and notice the difference. See flattering extra pounds of "stay-there" flesh appear in place of scrawny hollows. Notice how much better you feel, and if you don't gain at least 5 lbs. in one week, the trial is free. 100 jumbo size Kelpamalt tablets—4 to 5 times the size of ordinary tablets—costs but a few cents a day to use. Get Kelpamalt today. Sold at all good drug stores. If your dealer has not yet received his supply, send $1.00 for special introductory size bottle of 65 tablets to the address below.

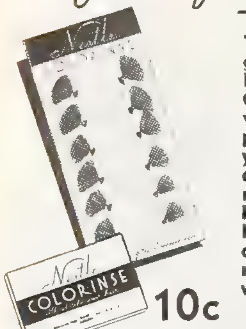
SPECIAL FREE OFFER

Write today for fascinating instructive 50-page book on How to Add weight Quickly. Mineral contents of Food and their effects on the human body. New facts about NATURAL IODINE. Standard weight and measurement charts. Daily menus for weight building. Absolutely free. No obligation. Kelpamalt Co., Dept. 682. 27-33 West 20th St., New York City.

Kelpamalt Tablets

Manufacturer's Note:—Inferior products—sold as kelp and malt preparations—in imitation of the genuine Seedol Kelpamalt are being offered as substitutes. Don't be fooled. Demand genuine Seedol Kelpamalt Tablets. They are easily assimilated, do not upset stomach nor injure teeth. Results guaranteed or money back.

Youthful looking HAIR



To be always well groomed, with youthful, lustrous hair, use Nestle Colorinse. This harmless vegetable coloring compound magically rinses youth into your hair . . . a gleaming, glinting, glamour that gives to any hair the perfect highlights of its own natural color. Colorinse is easily removed — a shampoo washes it away.

10c for a package containing 2 rinses at all 5 and 10 cent stores. To select your particular color, use the Nestle Shade Selector

Other Nestle Hair Aids

Henna Shampoo • Golden Shampoo • Superset Waving Lotion, Regular and Formula No. 2 (Faster Drying) • Liquid Shampoo • Oil Treatment and Shampoo.

Nestle COLORINSE
The NESTLE-LeMUR COMPANY, N.Y.

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

D. J. MAHLER
Beauty Specialist

The Mahler method positively prevents hair from growing again. Safe, easy, permanent. Use it privately, at home. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success.
Backed by 35 years of successful use all over the world. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for Illustrated Booklet.
We teach Beauty Culture.
D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 366C, Providence, R. I.

How to avoid LARGE PORES

■ TRANSPARENT, natural, beautifying—Mello-glo Face Powder is widely praised by leading beauty editors and by countless women who want a lovely skin. Mello-glo is vastly superior because it protects your skin from enlarged pores. Mello-glo also brings an utterly new Parisian effect—this super-powder smoothes on invisibly, is longer lasting and covers pores without clogging. Buy a box of Mello-glo today.

FREE . . . a generous sample of Mello-glo—also how to get a $1 bottle of exquisite perfume absolutely free. Just mail your name and address to Mello-glo Co., Dept. 112 Statler Building, Boston.

Modern Screen Movie Scoreboard

(Continued from page 8)

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Magnificent Obsession (Universal)	2½★
The Melody Lingers On (United Artists)	2★
Men of Tomorrow (London Films)	1★
Men Without Names (Paramount)	3★
Metropolitan (20th Century-Fox)	4★
A Midsummer Night's Dream (Warners)	5★
Millions in the Air (Paramount)	1★
Mississippi (Paramount)	3★
Miss Pacific Fleet (Warners)	1½★
Mr. Dynamite (Universal)	2★
Murder in the Fleet (M-G-M)	2★
Murder Man (M-G-M)	2★
Music Is Magic (20th Century-Fox)	1½★
Mutiny on the Bounty (M-G-M)	4★
Naughty Marietta (M-G-M)	4★
Nell Gwyn (United Artists)	3★
New Adventures of Tarzan (Republic)	1★
A Night at the Opera (M-G-M)	4★
A Night at the Ritz (Warners)	2★
No More Ladies (M-G-M)	3★
Oil for the Lamps of China (First National)	4★
Old Curiosity Shop (BIP)	2½★
One More Spring (Fox)	4★
$1000 a Minute (Republic)	2★
One Way Ticket (Columbia)	2½★
Orchids to You (Fox)	2★
O'Shaughnessy's Boy (M-G-M)	3★
Our Little Girl (Fox)	2★
Page Miss Glory (Warners)	3★
Paris in Spring (Paramount)	3★
The Payoff (Warners)	2★
The People's Enemy (RKO)	2★
People Will Talk (Paramount)	2★
The Perfect Gentleman (M-G-M)	2★
Personal Maid's Secret (Warners)	2★
Peter Ibbetson (Paramount)	3★
Princess O'Hara (Universal)	3★
Private Worlds (Paramount)	4★
Public Hero No. 1 (M-G-M)	3★
The Public Menace (Columbia)	1★
The Rainmakers (RKO)	1★
The Raven (Universal)	2★
Red Salute (Reliance-United Artists)	2★
Remember Last Night? (Universal)	2★
Rendezvous (M-G-M)	3★
The Return of Peter Grimm (RKO)	3★
The Right to Live (Warners)	3★
Roberta (RKO)	5★

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Sanders of the River (United Artists)	2★
Scrooge (Hagen-Twickenham)	2½★
The Secret Bride (Warners)	3★
Seven Keys to Baldpate (RKO)	2★
Shadow of Doubt (M-G-M)	3★
Shanghai (Paramount)	2★
She (RKO)	2★
She Couldn't Take It (Columbia)	2½★
She Married Her Boss (Columbia)	4★
Shipmates Forever (First National)	3★
A Shot in the Dark (Chesterfield)	2★
Show Them No Mercy (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Silk Hat Kid (Fox)	1★
Smart Girl (Paramount)	2★
Society Doctor (M-G-M)	3★
So Red the Rose (Paramount)	3★
Special Agent (Warners)	2★
Splendor (Goldwyn)	2★
Star of Midnight (M-G-M)	3★
Stars Over Broadway (Warners)	3★
Steamboat Round the Bend (Fox)	3★
A Tale of Two Cities (M-G-M)	5★
Thanks a Million (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
The 39 Steps (GB)	4★
This is the Life (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Three Kids and a Queen (Universal)	2★
The Three Musketeers (RKO)	3★
Thunder in the Night (Fox)	2★
Times Square Lady (M-G-M)	2★
Thunder Mountain (20th Century-Fox)	1★
To Beat the Band (RKO)	2★
Too Tough to Kill (Columbia)	1★
Top Hat (RKO)	4★
Transatlantic Tunnel (GB)	3★
Transient Lady (Universal)	2★
Traveling Saleslady (First National)	2★
The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes (GB)	2★
Two for Tonight (Paramount)	1★
Vagabond Lady (M-G-M)	2★
Vanessa (M-G-M)	3★
Way Down East (20th Century-Fox)	2★
The Wedding Night (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
We're in the Money (Warners)	2★
The Werewolf of London (Universal)	2★
West Point of the Air (M-G-M)	3★
Wings in the Dark (Paramount)	3★
The Woman in Red (Warners)	2★
Your Uncle Dudley (20th Century-Fox)	2★

Bill Tilden gives Patricia Ellis and Grace Durkin some coaching on the fine points of tennis.

FOR CHEST COLDS

Distressing cold in chest or throat should never be neglected. It generally eases up quickly when soothing, warming Musterole is applied.

Better than a mustard plaster, Musterole gets action because it's NOT just a salve. It's a "counter-irritant"—stimulating, penetrating, and helpful in drawing out local congestion and pain.

Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In 3 strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong, 40¢ each.

Tested and Approved 4867 Good Housekeeping Bureau

MUSTEROLE
BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

ITCHING Torture
STOPPED IN ONE MINUTE

For quick relief from the itching of eczema, blotches, pimples, athlete's foot, rashes and other skin eruptions, apply Dr. Dennis' cooling, antiseptic, liquid D. D. D. PRESCRIPTION. Its gentle oils soothe the irritated skin. Clear, greaseless and stainless—dries fast. Stops the most intense itching instantly. A 35c trial bottle, at drug stores, proves it—or money back.

D.D.D. Prescription

. . . The Quintuplets—yes, all five of them—will make their movie bow on the April cover of MODERN SCREEN.

AMAZING! SILK HOSE
GUARANTEED TO Wear Without Holes OR NEW HOSE FREE

Beautiful silk hose with Free Replacement Guarantee if they do not wear up to 8 months without holes. This amazing guarantee is real. Ringless, sheer chiffons, service weights, etc. 96 styles, colors for men, women, children. Sold through agents only, not in stores. Offers big money for agents.

AGENTS: UP TO $24 IN A WEEK

Men or women write for special full or part time plan. Give Hose Size.

Your own Hose Free of Extra Cost

WILKNIT HOSIERY CO.
67-C Midway, Greenfield, Ohio

NEW Quick Relief For ITCHING Skin

WHY writhe and squirm helplessly under itching torture? Millions have found in Hydrosal a veritable blessing for relief of rashes, eczema, athlete's foot, pimples, poison ivy. Itching stops almost instantly. Smarting and burning disappears. Angry redness soon vanishes. Successfully used by doctors and hospitals. Vitally different from common salves, lotions. Approved by Good Housekeeping. Get Hydrosal from your druggist now! Liquid or Ointment, 30c, 60c.

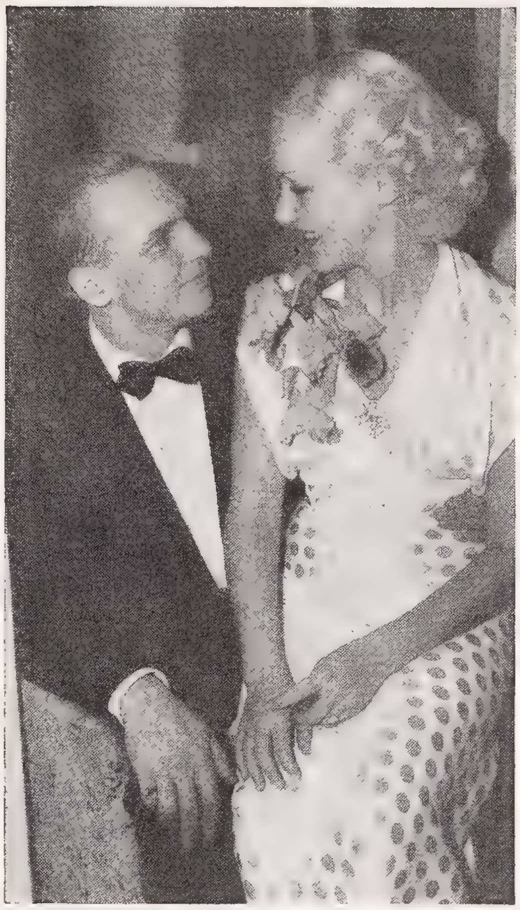
SKIN OUT-BREAKS

RASHES • ECZEMA

FOOT ITCH

Hydrosal

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau



This engaged pair, Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable, are touring the country together in vaudeville.

More Good News

(Continued from page 24)

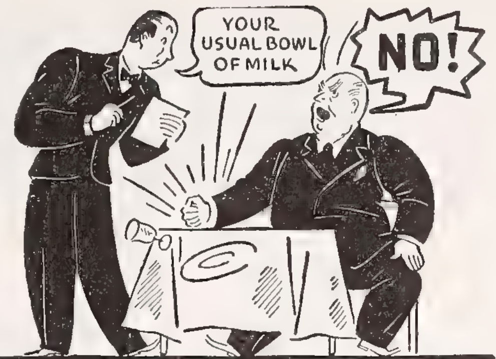
Come to think of it, there's been a dearth of Sam Goldwyn stories of late. Mr. G. has probably been too busy with other things to devote much time to his epigrams and retorts, but here's a brand new one you might like. It happened during the completion of the Cantor picture. At the finish, Sam was ecstatic. "It's the best Cantor picture we've ever made," he enthused. "Why, the comedy is positively unsuperb!"

■ ■ ■

It has long been a Hollywood policy to send party invitations to twenty people and expect a hundred, so Barbara Stanwyck should have known what to expect. Seems she was sponsoring a small party at a night club a few weeks ago, and had reserved two tables. On her guest list was a radio official and his wife, who turned up with four extra men—and two girls for each of the four gents. A lovely time was reported by all.

■ ■ ■

The opening of Max Factor's new make-up plant drew more guests than any Hollywood affair during the past year. Invitations, said to have cost $2.00 each, were delivered by special messenger, and the reception itself, scheduled from four to ten in the P.M., lasted well into the following morning. A complete tour of the plant was available for anyone wanting to know the secrets of cold cream, or what goes into your favorite lip rouge. (We still don't know what goes into it, but it looked awfully nice.) People lined the streets for a block on either



YOUR USUAL BOWL OF MILK
NO!

OLD KING COLE
IS A MERRY OLD SOUL
NOW THAT HE EATS ROAST BEEF . . .
HE HAS HIS TUMS
IF HEARTBURN COMES . . .
THEY GIVE HIM QUICK RELIEF!

LEARN HOW TO EAT FAVORITE FOODS
Without Heartburn . . . Gas . . . Sour Stomach

MAKE the test that has switched millions to Tums. Munch 3 or 4 of them after eating a meal of your favorite foods or when too much smoking, hasty eating, last night's party or some other cause has brought on acid indigestion, sour stomach, gas, belching or heartburn. See how food "taboos" vanish. You are not taking any harsh alkalies which physicians say may increase the tendency toward acid indigestion. Instead a wonderful antacid that dissolves only enough to correct stomach acid.

TUMS FOR THE TUMMY
TUMS ARE ANTACID . . NOT A LAXATIVE
EAT LIKE CANDY TUMS STOMACH DISTR 10¢
HANDY TO CARRY

FREE: Beautiful five-color 1936 Calendar-Thermometer. Also samples of Tums and NR. Send stamp for packing and postage to A. H. Lewis Co., Dept. 2C-51, St. Louis, Mo.

SEND FOR FREE CATALOG

FJH # 5400 36 CLASS PINS 35c

PINS handsomely silver plated, enameled 1 or 2 colors, any 3 or 4 letters and year. Doz. Price $3.50. Sterling or Gold Plate 50c; Doz. $5. RINGS, Sterling Silver, similarly low priced. Largest makers for 40 years. Over 300 designs. Write today!

RINGS $1.60

BASTIAN BROS. CO.
73 BASTIAN BLDG ROCHESTER, N. Y.

AVOID COLDS

MIFFLIN
Antiseptic
MOUTH WASH

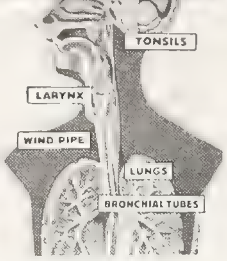
Large SIZE 20c

4 oz. SIZE 10c

AT LEADING 5c and 10c CHAIN STORES

Tested and Approved 3954 by Good Housekeeping Bureau Conducted by Good Housekeeping Magazine

COUGH STOPPED quicker by "Moist-Throat" Method



DID you know that when you catch cold the thousands of tiny moisture glands in your throat and windpipe dry or clog? Thick phlegm irritates your throat, making you cough.

It is necessary to stimulate those glands to pour out their natural moisture. Pertussin does this. It "unclogs" the glands—loosens phlegm—soothes your cough away.

Over 1,000,000 doctors' prescriptions for Pertussin were filled in one year,* according to Prescription Ingredient Survey issued by American Pharmaceutical Assn.

• • •

..."Pertussin stopped Jackie's bad cough next day!" writes Mrs. P. Fernandez, Providence, R. I. Get a bottle.

PERTUSSIN
"MOIST-THROAT" METHOD OF
COUGH RELIEF

Be an ARTIST

MAKE $50 TO $100 A WEEK!
Many of our successful students are now making big money. Our simple methods make it fun to learn Commercial Art, Cartooning and Designing at home, in spare time. New low tuition rate. Write for big free book "ART for Pleasure and Profit," today. State age.
STUDIO 423, WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART
1115–15TH STREET, N. W., WASHINGTON, D. C.

... Read "Jean Harlow Is Jealous Of You" in the April issue of Modern Screen

IF YOU HAD BEEN NANCY-

Nancy E——'s story could have been yours! Left with two little children to support . . . not much money to depend upon . . . unable to leave the children to work in shop or office—even if she could have been sure of getting a job! Yet, today Mrs. E— is making $30 a week as a C. S. N. graduate and plans to establish a rest home for convalescents! Those magic letters "C. S. N." are responsible for her success. They stand for

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING

This school for 35 years has been training men and women, at home and in their spare time, for the dignified, well-paid profession of nursing. Course, endorsed by physicians, prepares for all types of nursing. Equipment included. Lessons clear and concise. Easy Tuition Payments. Be one of thousands of men and women earning $25 to $35 a week as trained practical nurses. High school education not required. Best of all, you can earn while learning! Mrs. A. B. R. earned three times the cost of the course while studying. Doctors say C. S. N. graduates make their best practical nurses. Send coupon today and learn how you can become self-supporting as a nurse.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 233, 100 E. Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 32 sample lesson pages.
*Name*________________
*City*__________ *State*________ *Age*____

side of the establishment, and it was all much in the manner of the once-popular Hollywood premieres. As a matter of fact, most of the stars attended, and the belle of the evening was Jean Harlow with her brand new reddish locks. Miss H., it seems, knows a thing or two about make-up herself.

■ ■ ■

Maybe we're wrong, but we think we know why Lyle Talbot is so seldom seen twice with the same young lady. We think it's because Mr. Talbot is a wanderer. He will, on occasions, deposit his young lady at his favorite night club table and almost immediately saunter off to greet a few friends in various sections of the room. The other night we watched this routine just long enough to see a highly indignant blonde stomp out of a night club in one of the season's best huffs. She looked like a girl who wasn't planning on any more night-clubbing with the vagabond Mr. T.

■ ■ ■

Fred Keating is still trying to figure out a letter he received a few days before Christmas. It reads: "Dear Son: It's been a long time since we've seen you. Pa is still up and around. Mamie is married and has two children. I am enclosing two dollars, thinking it might come in handy at this time of the year.—Ma." Since it's not from his own mother, Mr. K. feels he has no claim on the two bucks, and wishes the anonymous donor would forward her name so he can return them.

■ ■ ■

The tragic death of beautiful Thelma Todd caused more genuine sorrow in Hollywood than the passing of any film personality in recent years, for Thelma had a quality about her that is rare out here—she was real. We saw her last at Paula Stone's cocktail party, just a week before her death, and she was, as always, lovely, radiant and full of the joy of living. Her eulogy wasn't shouted to the heavens by professional weepers, but her memory is held sacred by those she befriended—the prop boys, the extras and the has-beens of Hollywood. A florist, for instance, told us something about her just the other day. Whenever an extra girl of her acquaintance was ill Thelma sent a cheerful note, with a bouquet of roses—into which was tucked a $20 bill.

■ ■ ■

Shirley Temple isn't given to waxing temperamental, but the impulse almost overcame her at a recent charity bazaar. It seems they were raffling off a cocker spaniel puppy and a Shirley Temple doll. Shirley wanted the spaniel enough to buy a fistful of tickets on it, and just as a gesture, she purchased one ticket on the doll. You can guess what happened. Shirley won the Shirley Temple doll. Rumors are rife that both she and the spaniel shed a silent tear over the situation.

■ ■ ■

Everyone is giving advice on what to wear, but Paul Cavanagh, regarded in some circles as the Ten Best Dressed Men in Hollywood, has just come through with a list of what not to wear, so here it is:

"Don't wear brogue shoes with lounge suits. Brogues are worn only with sport clothes."

"Don't wear notched lapels on single-breasted suits. The peaked lapel is preferred because it is wider."

"Don't have your trousers made too long. They should just touch the shoes, but they should not break."

"Don't buy a lot of suits unless you can afford really good ones. With a few, made by a good tailor, a man will appear to better advantage."

■ ■ ■

Add Questions Without Answers: What recently married star, who has been the target lately of several mean cracks in a syndicated column, insists that the jibes are due, not to personal animosity, but to the fact that she has consistently refused to appear on the columnist's radio program?

■ ■ ■

Now that their troubles are all patched up, Joan Crawford and Clifton Webb are finally at work on their co-starring picture, "Elegance." Webb, for years one of Broadway's favorite dancing stars, was brought to Hollywood last year by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to do a picture with Joan. Personal differences arose regarding the script, and Mr. Webb spent a number of months basking in the sun on a comfortable salary, waiting for things to adjust themselves. And if hard work is any criterion, La Crawford's dancing may keep the elegant Clifton stepping, for she hired herself a private tutor and spent hours every day working out routines. We talked to her in the middle of her first lesson, and she took time out to gasp: "I'm stiff as a board right now—but just wait!"

■ ■ ■

Everything goes in cycles in Hollywood, which is a polite way of saying that everyone out here imitates everyone else. When one studio, for instance, steps out with a good historical picture, every other studio steps out with historical pictures, ranging from terrific to terrible. If Marlene Dietrich chooses to wear pants, so does Sophie Glutz. And now the cycle extends to watering places. Early last summer saw the debut of a cocktail bar known as The Beachcomber's, featuring tropical drinks in an Hawaiian setting. Stars began dropping in, the place became popular, and right now, by actual count, there are fourteen spas in Hollywood featuring bamboo bars and tropical libations. It's getting so anybody with a little grass and a ukulele is a prospective rum tycoon.

■ ■ ■

Playing in "Three Live Ghosts" may have been more or less a routine matter for most of the cast, but for Beryl Mercer her appearance in it was in the nature of an event. Previously she had played the same role on the stage and in silent pictures. Right now she's holding out for television.

■ ■ ■

Most followers of the cinema know that studio fog scenes are created by shooting mineral oil through a Flit gun until the atmosphere is heavy with a sticky, rather unpleasant mist. But here's something new we discovered on a recent visit to the "A Message to Garcia" set at 20th Century-Fox. They were filming a swamp scene, and we were surprised by the pleasant aroma of the fog. A prop man let us in on the secret. "Here," he said, proudly, "our fog is always perfumed." We drifted slowly away, turning once at the stage door for a final whiff of Chanel No. 5.

■ ■ ■

As for the newlyweds, Norman Foster and Sally Blane, it might interest you to know that Norman devotes most of his spare time to a thriving book store. It's so thriving, in fact, that even the great Alex Woollcott graced it with a personal appearance during his recent sojourn in these lands. Here is a copy of the Foster invitation to the affair: On Wednesday Afternoon, at 3 P.M., Mrs. Norman Foster will endeavor to teach Mr. Alexander Woollcott the art of selling books. Among the convulsed spectators will be you, we hope. The Secret Bookshop. P. S.—This lousy card is your invitation.

And here's Claudette Colbert with her Dr. Pressman, who got married in Yuma.

■ ■ ■

Heart Throbs Department: The beautiful romance of Addison Randall and Glenda Farrell seems to have gone the way of all Hollywood engagements. Last month Addison told friends the wedding would take place "any day now," but lately he's been confessing that there'll be no wedding bells . . . which may account for his being seen on several occasions with Irene Hervey, whose engagement to Robert Taylor has just been broken. Bob, according to reports, had to listen to the dictates of his fan mail, most of which insisted he remain single. After all, a guy has to please the customers.

■ ■ ■

The Taylor mail, incidentally, is responsible for a considerable addition to the weekly pay check of that young man. Bob's mail had become too heavy for the studio to handle, so he was requested to hire himself a secretary who could devote all her time to answering the fan missives. Robert promptly asked for a raise and got it.

Meet the heart interest in Kay Francis' life, Delmar Daves. It looks like love, doesn't it?

Guarantee of Satisfaction

The publishers of MODERN SCREEN guarantee that you will be satisfied with your purchase of every packaged product advertised in this magazine. If for any reason you are dissatisfied, MODERN SCREEN will replace the product or, if you prefer, refund your purchase price. In either case all you have to do is to send us the unused portion, accompanied by a letter outlining your complaint. This guarantee also applies if the product, in your opinion does not justify the claims made in its advertising in MODERN SCREEN

Careful examination before publication and rigid censorship, plus our guarantee, enable you to buy with complete confidence the products you see advertised in this issue of MODERN SCREEN.

Index of Advertisers

March 1936

Alka-Seltzer	80
Allcock's Plasters	96
American Drug & Chemical Co.	94
Barbo Compound	96
Bastian Bros.	105
Blondex	100
Bluejay Corn Remedy	99
Blue Waltz Cosmetics	99
Brownatone	101
Camay Soap	23
Camel Cigarettes	Insert
Carters Little Liver Pills	94
Century Music Co.	99
Cheney Medicine Co.	102
Chesterfield Cigarettes	4th Cover
Chicago School of Nursing	106
Colgate Toothpaste	73
Cutex Lipstick	8
Cutex Nail Polish	3rd Cover
DDD Company	105
Dearborn Supply Company	86
Dennison Manufacturing Co.	92
Dermolav Cream	97
Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets	100
Dr. Scholl's Zino Pads	97
Enterprise Dripolators	88
Exlax Company	15
Fairyfoot Products	94
Fashion Frocks	92
Federal Schools	95
Feenamint	6
Fels Naptha Soap	19
Fleischmann's Yeast	11
Fletcher's Castoria	79
Forhan's Toothpaste	66
Fox Films	26
Franco-American Spaghetti	69
Franklin Institute	84
Freezone	102
Frostilla Hand Lotion	86
Frontier Asthma Co.	98
Geppert Studios	66
Glazo Nail Polish	64
Greyhound Bus Lines	77
Griffin Shoe Polish	102
Hinze Ambrosia	96
Hollywood Curlers	101
Hubinger Starch	68
Hydrosal	105
International Typewriter Exchange	80
Ipana Toothpaste	3
Ironized Yeast	93
Irresistible Cosmetic	2nd Cover
Johnson & Johnson Baby Powder	71
Justrite Push Clips	99
Kelpamalt	103
Kool Cigarettes	21
Kurlash Products	62
Lady Esther Cosmetics	85
Lander Olive Oil Cream	90
Larkin Company	88
La Salle Extension University	88
Lever Brothers Company
Lux Toilet	63
Rinso	65
Lewis Medicine Company, A. H.
Nature's Remedy	102
Tums	105
Linit Beauty Bath	81
Mahler, D. J.	104
Maybelline	70
Mello-Glo Powder	104
Mennen Baby Oil	74
Metal Textile Company	88
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures	5
Midol	82
Midwest Radio Company	84
Mifflin Antiseptic Mouthwash	105
Mme. Turmel	102
Modess	25
Mum	91
Musterole	105
Nestle Colorinse	104
Northwestern Yeast Co.	78
Norwich Pharmacal Co.	72
Paramount Pictures	33
Pertussin	106
Platnum Nail Polish	87
Pond's Cleansing Creams	61
Pond's Powders	75
Pond's Vanishing Cream	83
Poslam	96
Resinol Medication	98
Rieger, Paul	80
Sani-Flush	68
Slendrets	98
Smith Typewriters, L. C.	99
SSS Company	76
Tangee Lipstick	24
Tattoo Lipstick	90
Tintex	67
United Artists	9
Valligny, Pierre	100
Warner Brothers Pictures	7
Washington School of Art	106
Wilknit Hosiery Co.	105
Winx	20
Wrigley Chewing Gum	89

Although we make every effort to insure the accuracy of this index, we take no responsibility for an occasional omission or inadvertent error.

Above left to right, Fritz Leiber, famous Shakespearean actor, who has just arrived to make pix in Hollywood, looks at a racehoss with Evalyn Knapp. Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller have a final date before Lupe left for Europe—they look glum about it all, don't they? And Mike Bartlett knows his stuff—arms about Mary Pickford and Florence Rice at the Countess Di Frasso's party!

The arrival in Hollywood of Lady Mendl, the former Elsie DeWolfe, brought on a barrage of parties, and a spirited competition for the honor of playing host. Grace Moore led off by meeting the titled visitor at the airport. Clifton Webb stepped in with a large reception for her, and Miss Moore came right back at Mr. W. with a formal dinner. Score: Moore, 2—Webb 1.

* * *

When Binnie Barnes went shopping for a new home in Beverly Hills she had only two requirements to submit to real-estate agents. She didn't want a swimming pool (those are fighting words in Beverly Hills, gals), but she insisted on a billiard room and, of all things, a horseshoe court. On her days of leave from the studio, Binnie thinks there is no better fun than tossing horses' footgear around the back yard, especially when it's topped off by a snappy evening of billiards. P. S.—She found the house.

* * *

Joe Von Sternberg, who has for several years been noted for his striking sets on most of the Marlene Dietrich pictures, has topped his most imaginative flight in his own home. The Von S. establishment, done up in silver, has walls of bullet-proof glass, which means you can see people in the next room, but you can't shoot at them. In direct contrast to all these super-modernistic trimmings, Joe's menage is separated from curious—or, as the case may be, alarmed—strangers by a moat.

* * *

In "Ceiling Zero" Stu Erwin portrays a courageous airmail pilot who crashes to his death rather than bail out of his ship. In and out of the picture, Stu despises and fears airplanes. His work in the picture was a constant thorn in his side, for it required him to be in and around planes for over a month, every day of which he was positive something dire was about to befall him. That last day ended, however, with no mishaps, and Stu ambled off the location field with a sigh of relief, jumped into his trusty automobile and slammed the door on his right hand. All of which proves nothing, except that he still hates airplanes.

* * *

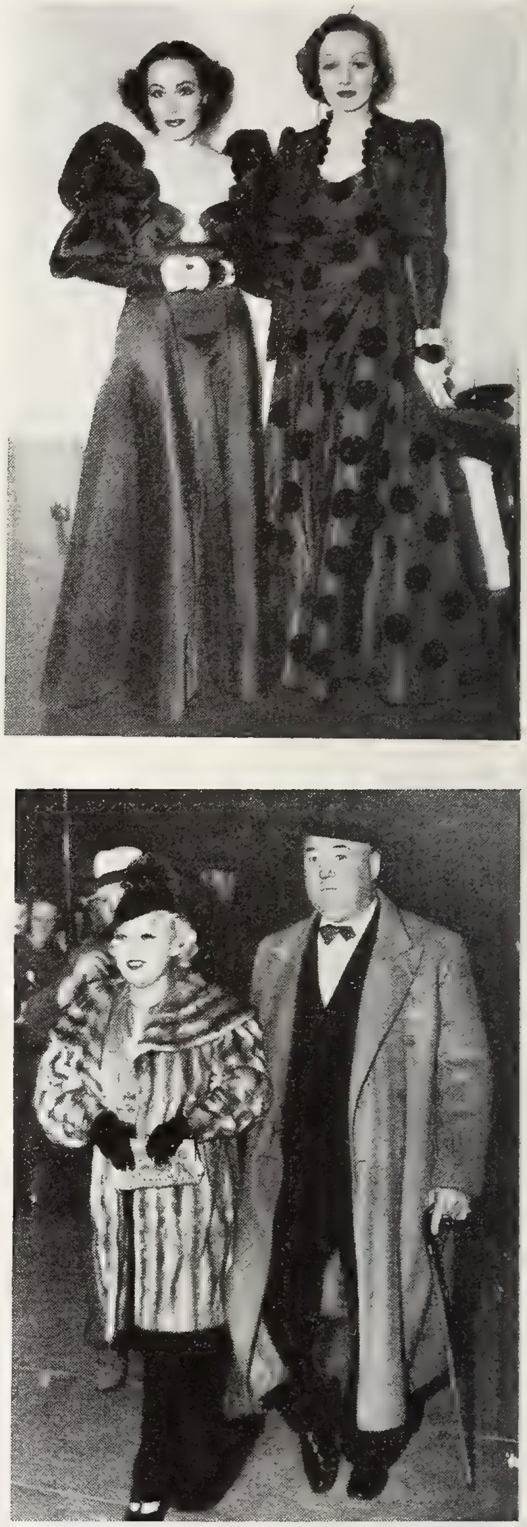
On her first wedding anniversary, Evelyn Venable returned from the hospital with a shiny, new daughter. To celebrate the event, hubby Hal Mohr handed her a diamond bracelet which tells the story of their romance. One bangle shows a tiny heart, and the next says, "I Love You." Then comes an engagement ring, a wedding ring, and a tiny house, over which a stork lingers. The next bangle is a baby buggy, and the next is a monogram of the baby's initials, followed by the date of her birth. The plot sounds familiar, but the story is interesting because all of the bangles are of diamonds strung on a platinum chain.

* * *

When they hang out a "No Visitors" sign on a Garbo, a Dietrich or a Hepburn set everyone takes it as a matter of course. The gals are artistes—you know, high-strung and all that—and the mere presence of a strange pan in the vicinity of their working arena is apt to throw them into a tantrum which, from a studio viewpoint, amounts to several thousand bucks worth of delay. But the surprise came recently when another prima donna joined their ranks. It was Irvin S. Cobb who expressed a desire to do his emoting for "Everybody's Old Man" behind closed doors. Irvin, however, doesn't feel that the mantle of Booth, somewhat enlarged, has fallen on his ample shoulders. He says he wants to be alone until he learns a few things about the technique of acting. Then, of course, there is always the suspicion that the "No Visitors" placard was nailed up by popular demand.

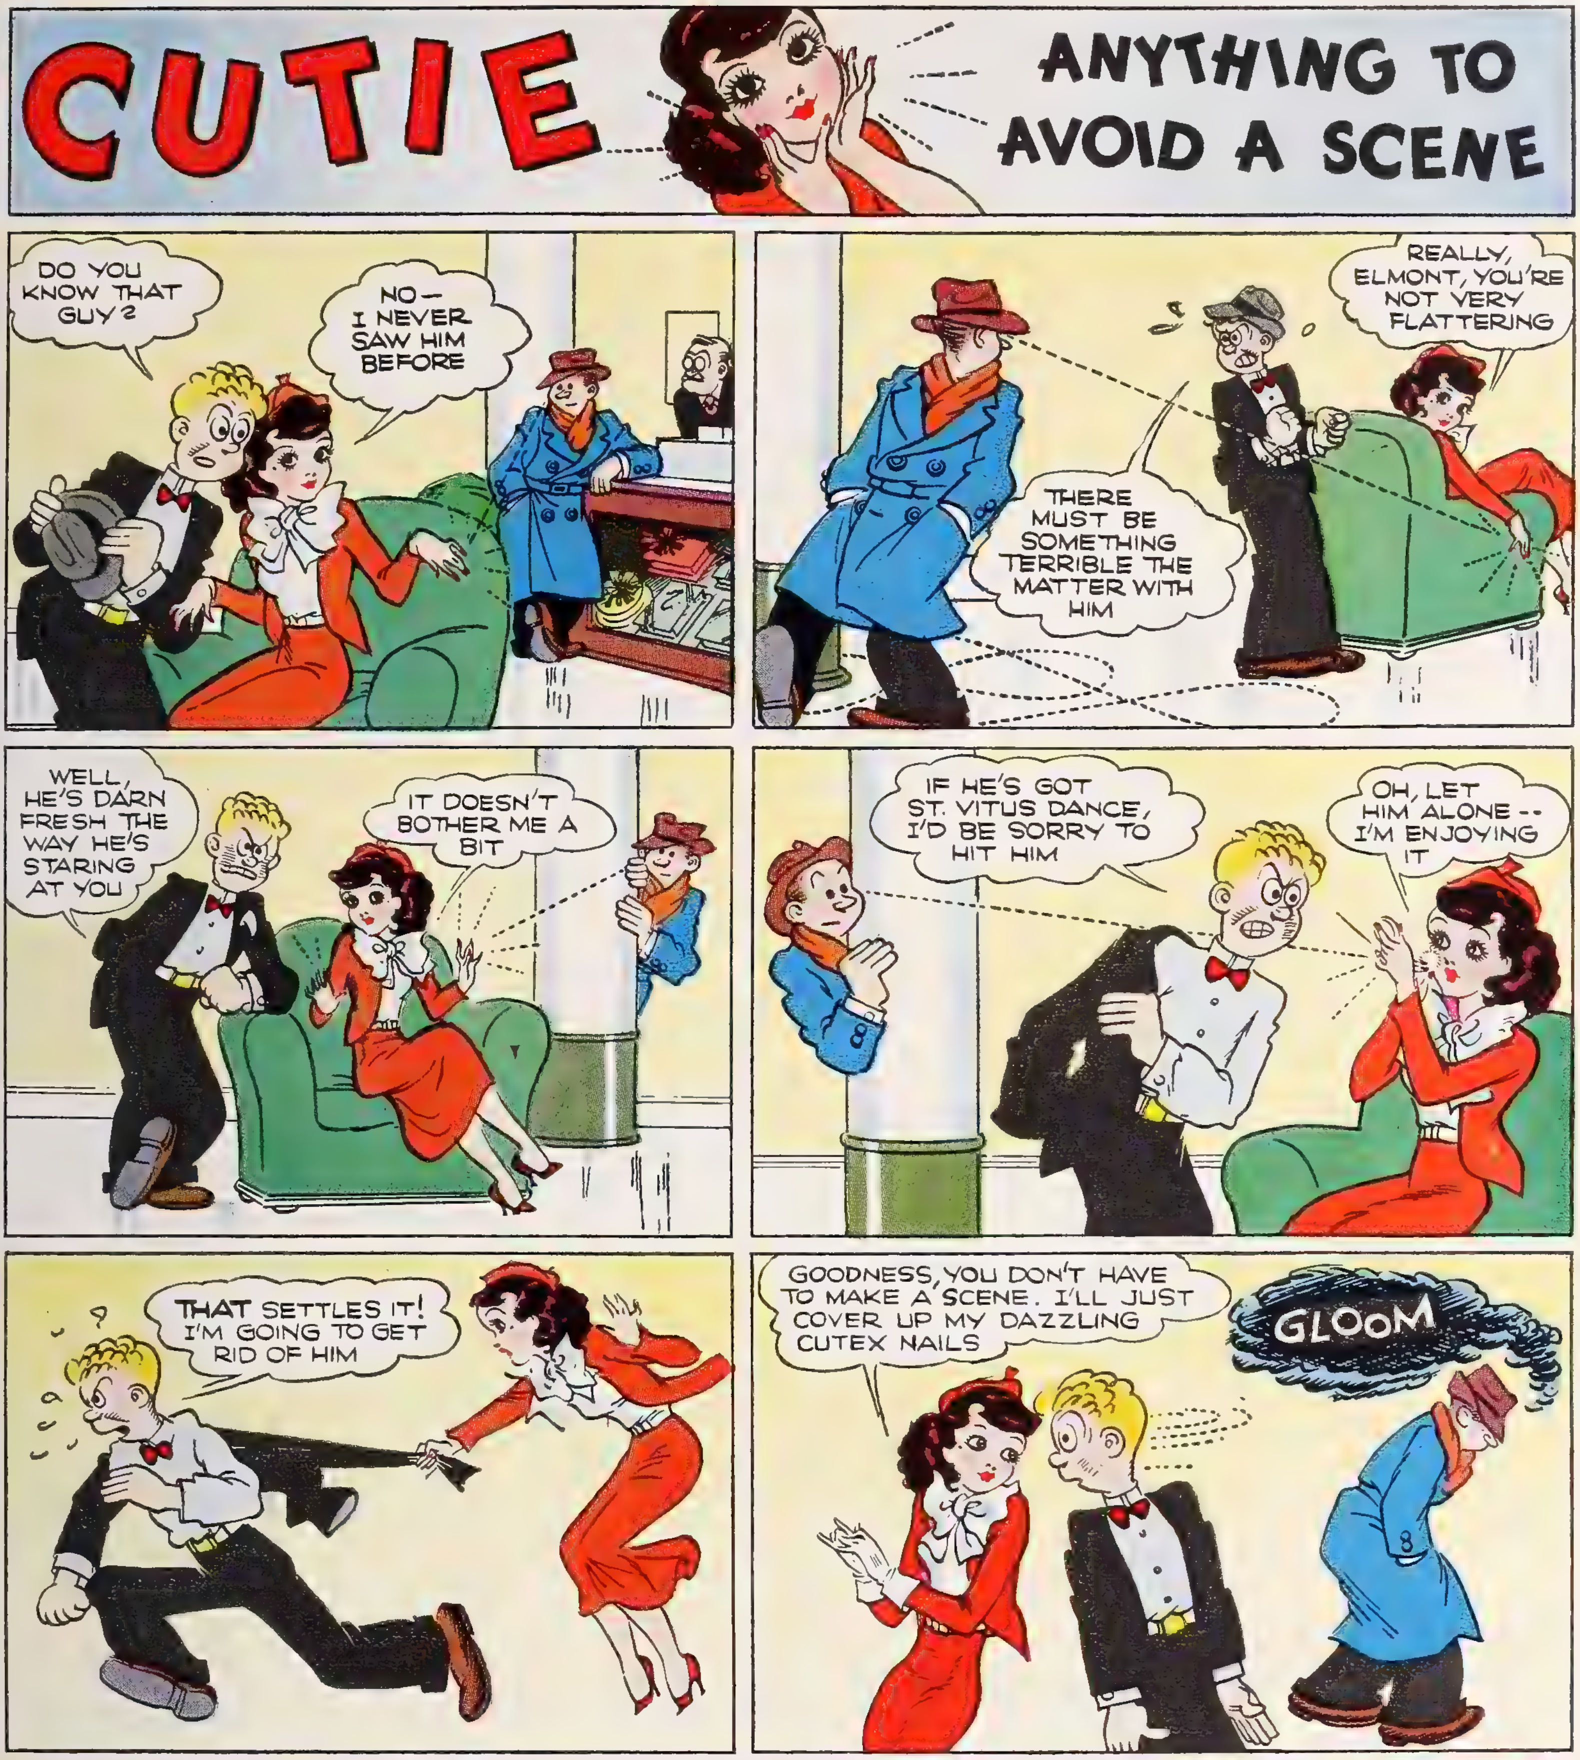
* * *

Patricia Ellis' maid, a colored matron named Helen, spends her spare time collecting good luck charms and lottery tickets. Recently she received a check for $40, won in a Chinese lottery. When Patricia asked her what she planned to do with the money the dusky Helen replied: "I ain't figurin' on havin' much of it left, time it's split up, on account of they's eighteen other ladies and gentlemen holdin' shares in that ticket."



Top row, Dolores Del Rio and Marlene Dietrich look decorative at a recent party. And below, Mae West arrives with her favorite escort, Jim Timony. Mae's all dolled up, too.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J



CUTIE
ANYTHING TO AVOID A SCENE
DO YOU KNOW THAT GUY?
NO— I NEVER SAW HIM BEFORE
REALLY, ELMONT, YOU'RE NOT VERY FLATTERING
THERE MUST BE SOMETHING TERRIBLE THE MATTER WITH HIM
WELL, HE'S DARN FRESH THE WAY HE'S STARING AT YOU
IT DOESN'T BOTHER ME A BIT
IF HE'S GOT ST. VITUS DANCE, I'D BE SORRY TO HIT HIM
OH, LET HIM ALONE -- I'M ENJOYING IT
THAT SETTLES IT! I'M GOING TO GET RID OF HIM
GOODNESS, YOU DON'T HAVE TO MAKE A SCENE. I'LL JUST COVER UP MY DAZZLING CUTEX NAILS GLOOM

Men can't take their eyes off you when you wear the New Bright Cutex Nails

● If you want excitement, try the new CUTEX MAUVE, CORAL, RUST or RUBY NAILS. The Cutex lustre will keep you in the limelight! And, remember, the 8 lovely Cutex shades are created by the World's Manicure Authority. They're absolutely FASHION-RIGHT. ● Cutex flows on smoothly, without blotching. Stays on for days and won't peel, crack or chip. In two forms—Crème or Clear. Rust is the newest shade—perfect with brown and green, and just right for sun-tanned fingers. Get the whole Cutex range of colors tomorrow, at your favorite store, 35¢!

Northam Warren, New York, Montreal, London, Paris

Your 2 favorite shades of Cutex Liquid Polish, Polish Remover and sample of Lipstick for 14¢

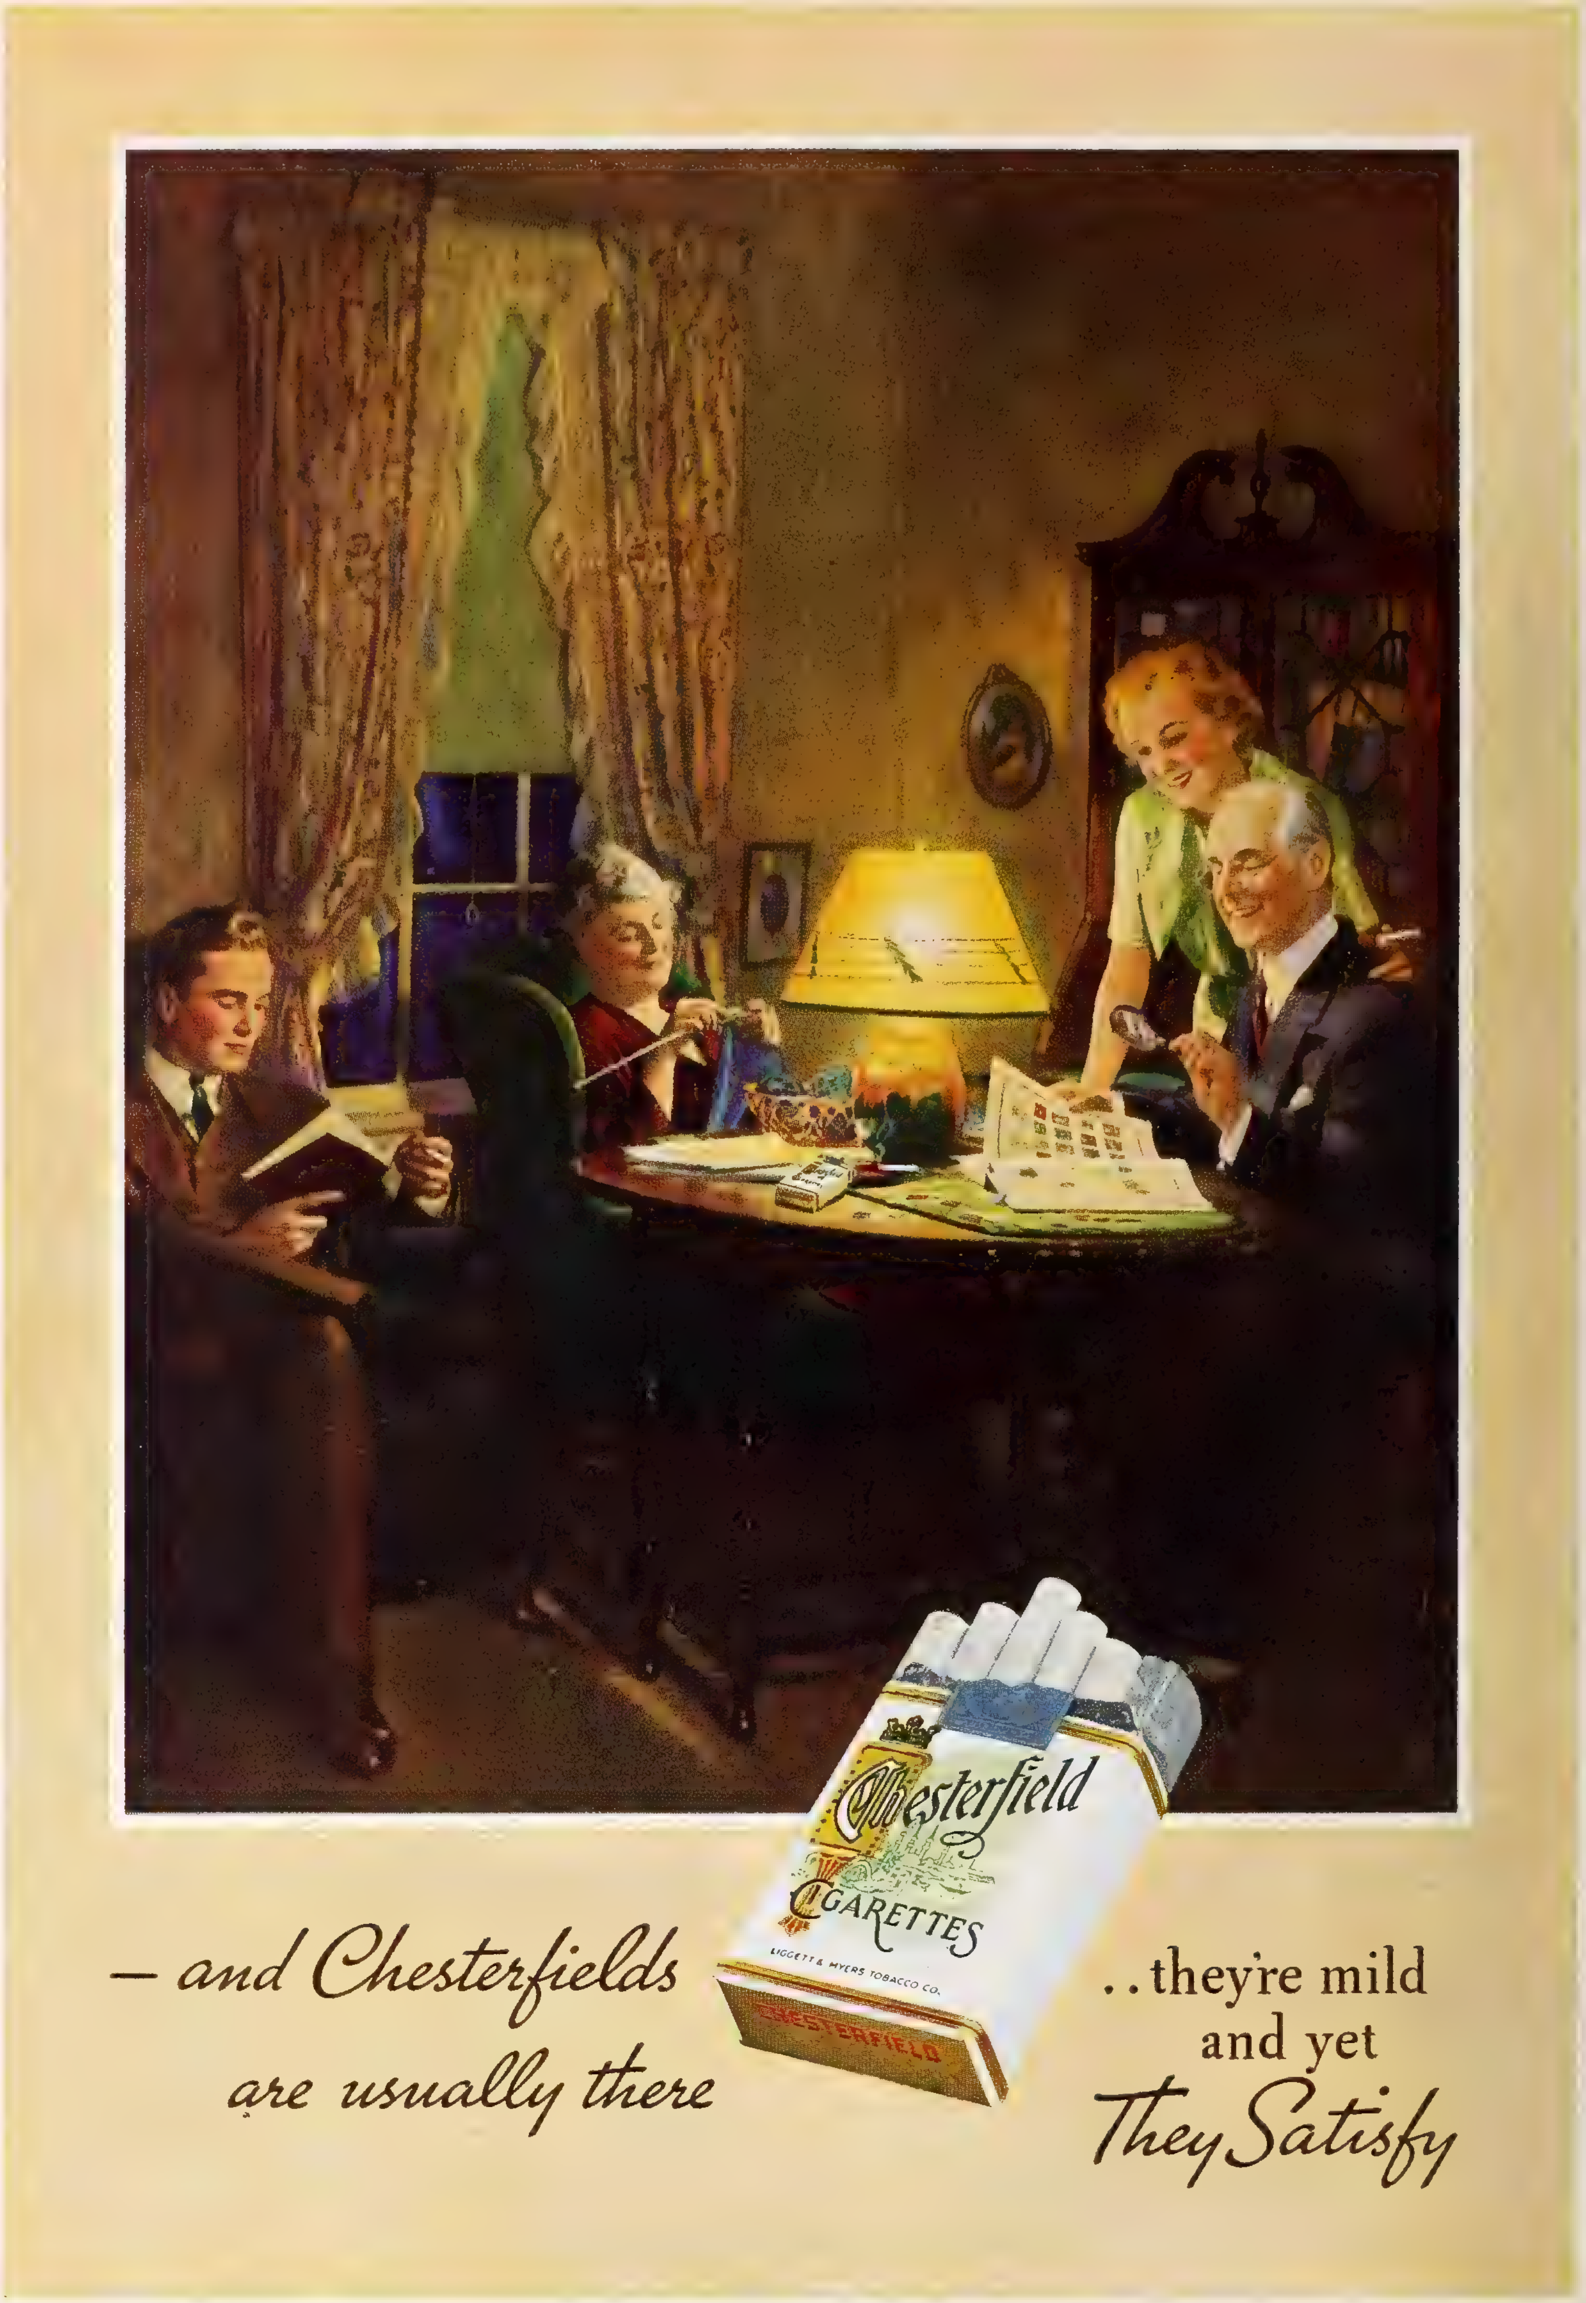
Northam Warren Sales Company, Inc.
Dept. 6-M-3, 191 Hudson St., New York
(In Canada, address P. O. Box 2320, Montreal.)

I enclose 14¢ for 2 shades of Cutex Polish, as checked below, sample of Lipstick and Polish Remover. Coral ☐ Cardinal ☐ Rust ☐ Ruby ☐

Name____________________

Address____________________

City____________ State________



Chesterfield
CIGARETTES
LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.
CHESTERFIELD
— and Chesterfields are usually there
..they're mild and yet
They Satisfy

© 1936, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co

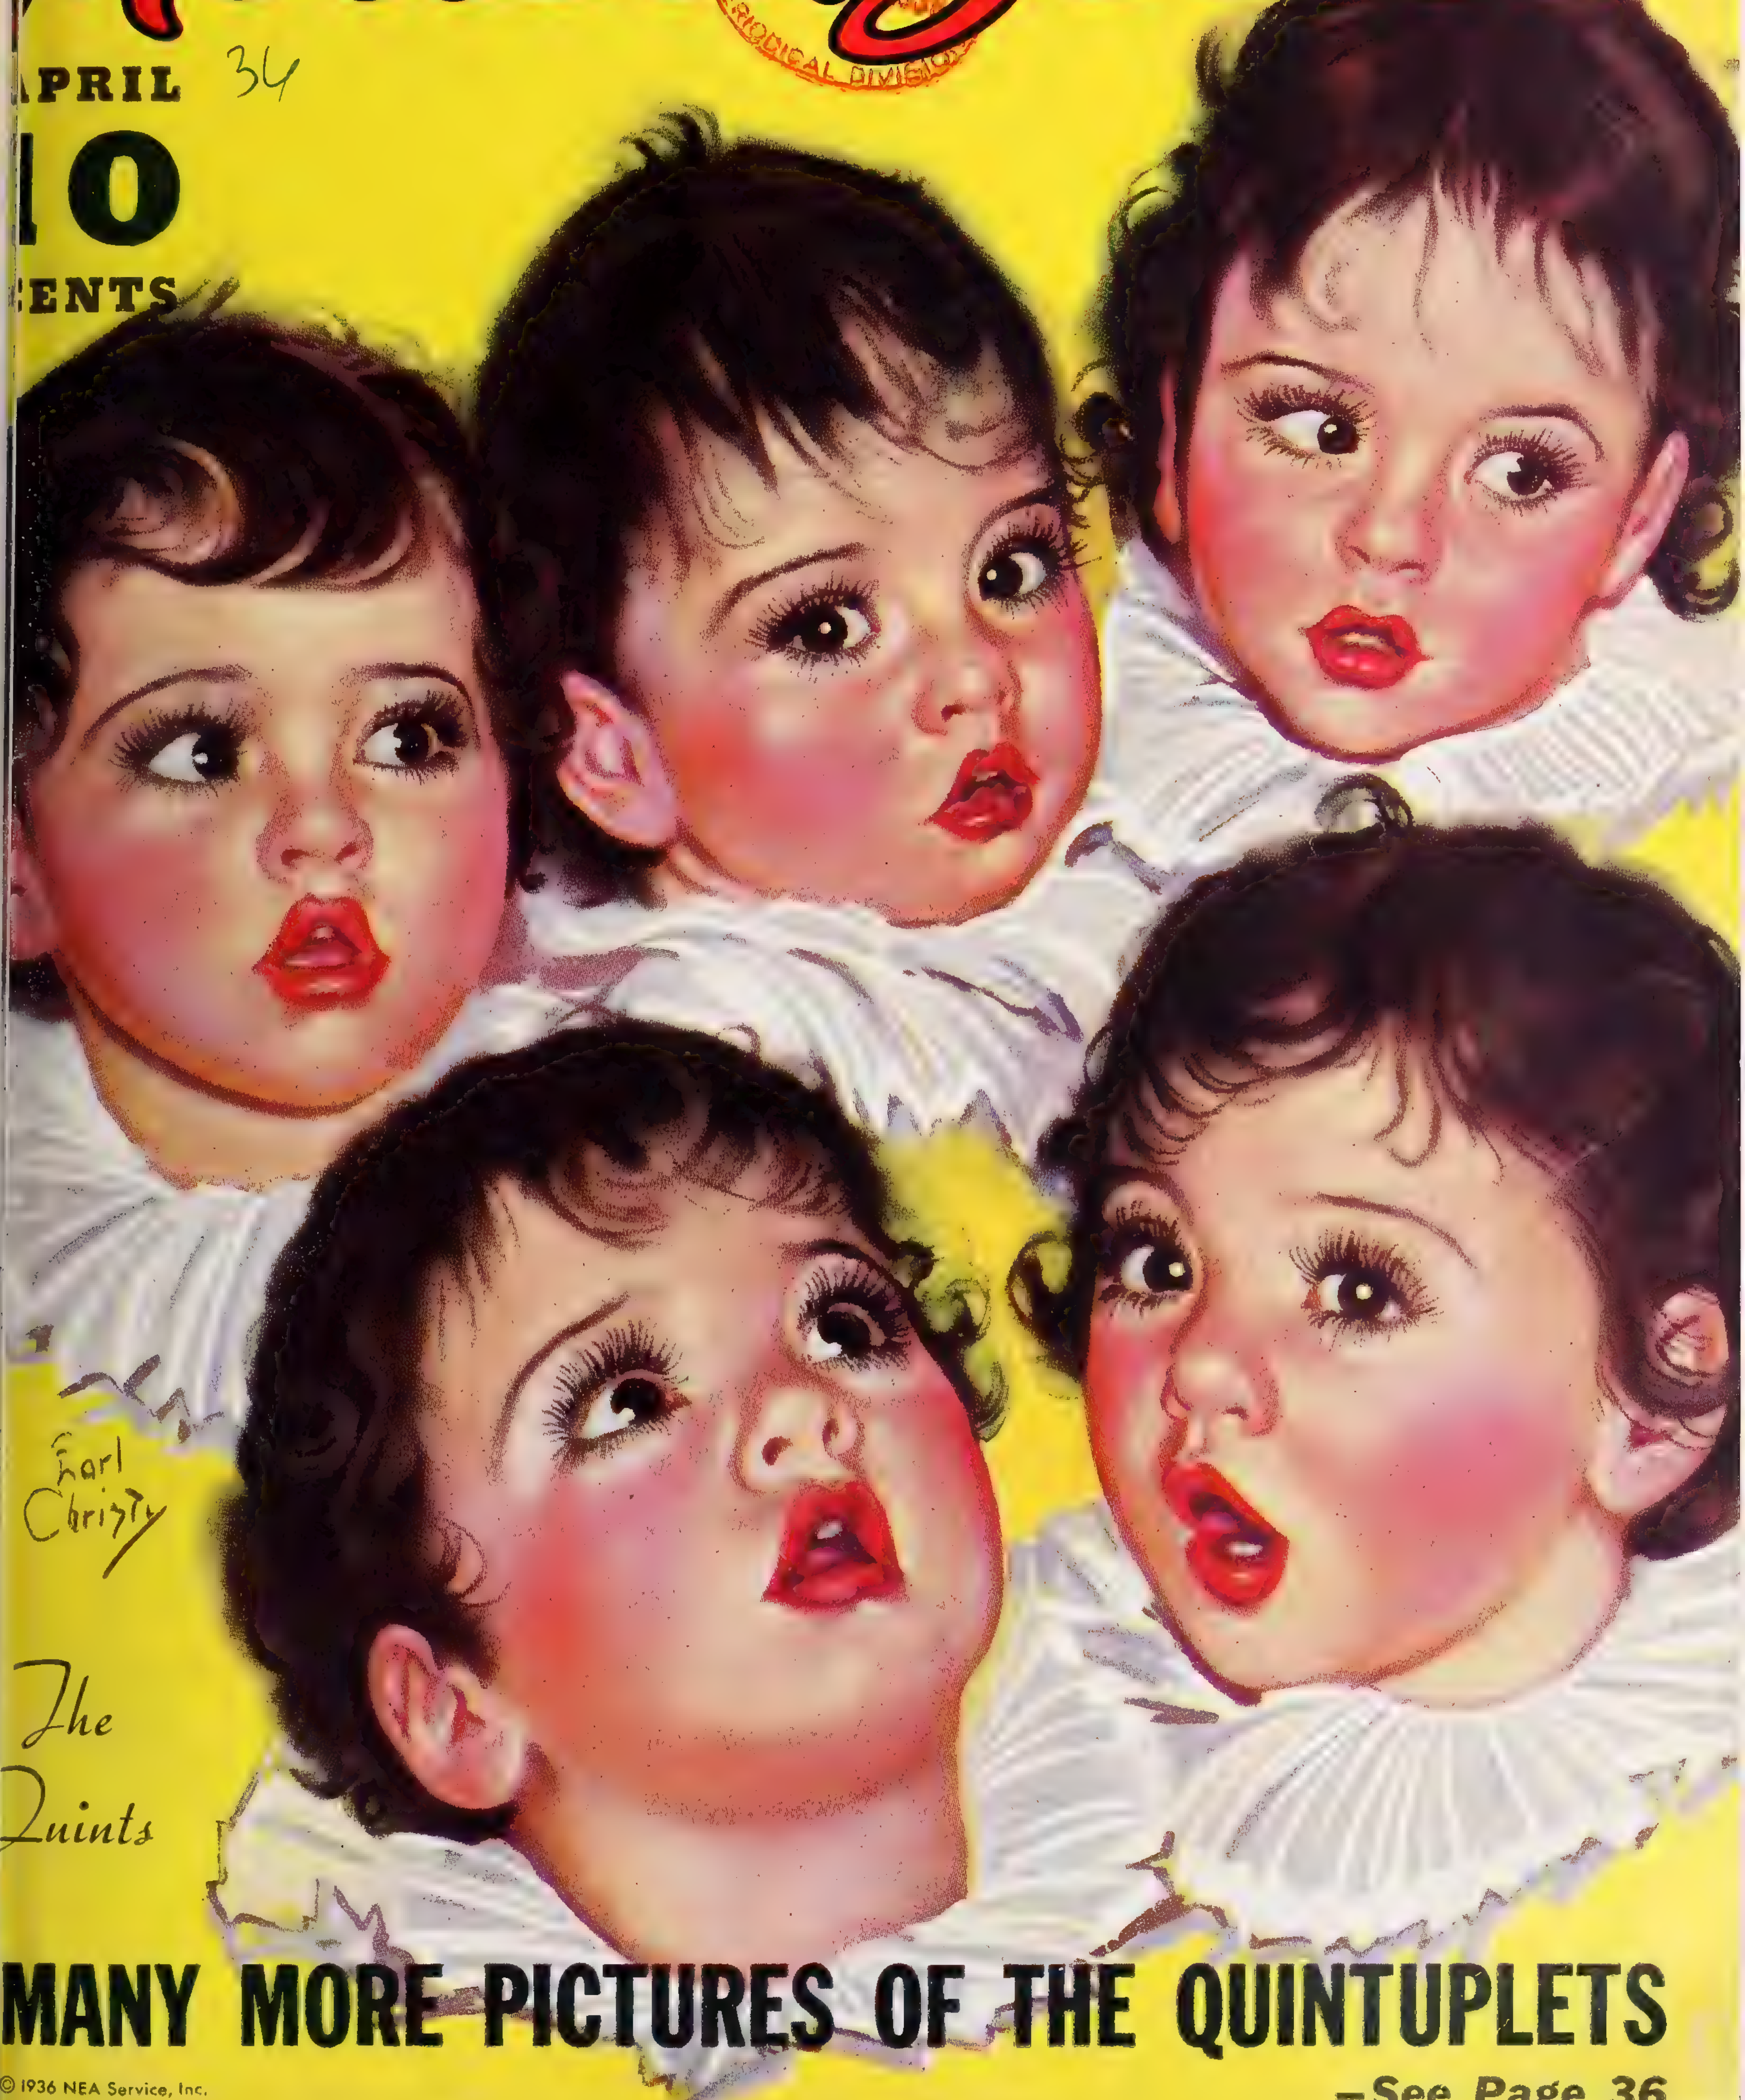
LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

Modern Screen

PERIODICAL DIVISION

APRIL 34

10 CENTS



Earl Christy
The Quints

MANY MORE PICTURES OF THE QUINTUPLETS

—See Page 36

© 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

IRRESISTIBLE
Irresistible LIP LURE VIVID
Irresistible FACE POWDER
Irresistible BRILLIANTINE
Irresistible TALC
Irresistible
Irresistible

HERE'S TO Irresistible YOU!

Here's to Irresistible YOU . . . a toast and a challenge! There IS an Irresistible YOU whether you have discovered it or not. To be irresistible, is the art of being a woman. To help you to be irresistible, is the art of IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME.

You'll discover your own allure through the thrilling emotional lift of IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME. It is lasting and as exciting as champagne, gay as cocktails for two. There is further allure in the tender texture of Irresistible Face Powder and in the provocative challenge of Irresistible Lip Lure, the new lipstick. Try all the Irresistible Beauty Aids. Each has some special feature that gives you glorious new loveliness. Certified pure, laboratory tested and approved.

BUY Irresistible
PERFUME and BEAUTY AIDS
ONLY 10¢ EACH AT ALL 5 AND 10¢ STORES

IRRESISTIBLE PERFUME FACE POWDER ROUGE LIP LURE MASCARA COLD CREAM COLOGNE BRILLIANTINE TALC

Savage!

SAYS DEBUTANTE

A DEBUTANTE AND A DENTIST QUARREL ABOUT A RIB OF BEEF Sensible!

SAYS DENTIST

(But the civilized way to combat "PINK TOOTH BRUSH" is IPANA and MASSAGE)

In this picture, you see a girl chewing vigorously on a rib of beef. Viewed from the angle of good manners, it's pretty bad . . . And the debutante is right when she says, "It's simply savage!"

But the dentist is right, too. And it needn't surprise you to hear any dentist say: "That's a good, common-sense demonstration of the healthy way to use teeth and gums."

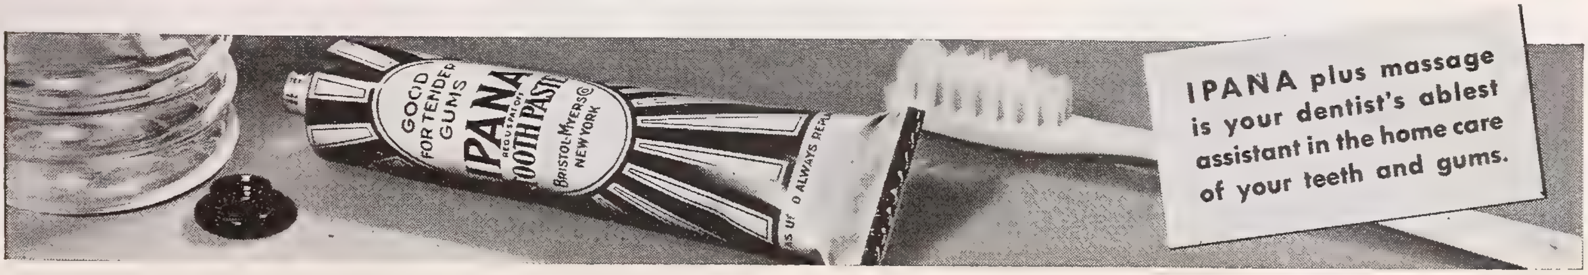
In modern dental circles, it is freely admitted that the lack of coarse foods and vigorous chewing is largely responsible for a host of gum disorders. Naturally, gums grow sensitive on a soft food diet. Naturally, they grow flabby, weak and tender. And, naturally, that warning "tinge of pink" eventually appears upon your tooth brush.

"Pink Tooth Brush" Tells the Truth

And the truth is—your teeth and gums need better care. You should change to Ipana plus massage . . . You should begin, today, the double duty you must practice for complete oral health. So start now to massage your gums with Ipana every time you brush your teeth. Rub a little extra Ipana into your gums, on brush or fingertip—and do it regularly.

For Ipana plus massage helps stimulate circulation. It helps your gums win back their firmness. It helps them recover their strength and their resistance. They feel livelier, better, healthier. And healthy gums have little to fear from the really serious gum troubles—gingivitis, pyorrhea and Vincent's disease.

So be reasonable. For your smile's sake, for the sake of your good looks and your good health—begin today with Ipana plus massage.



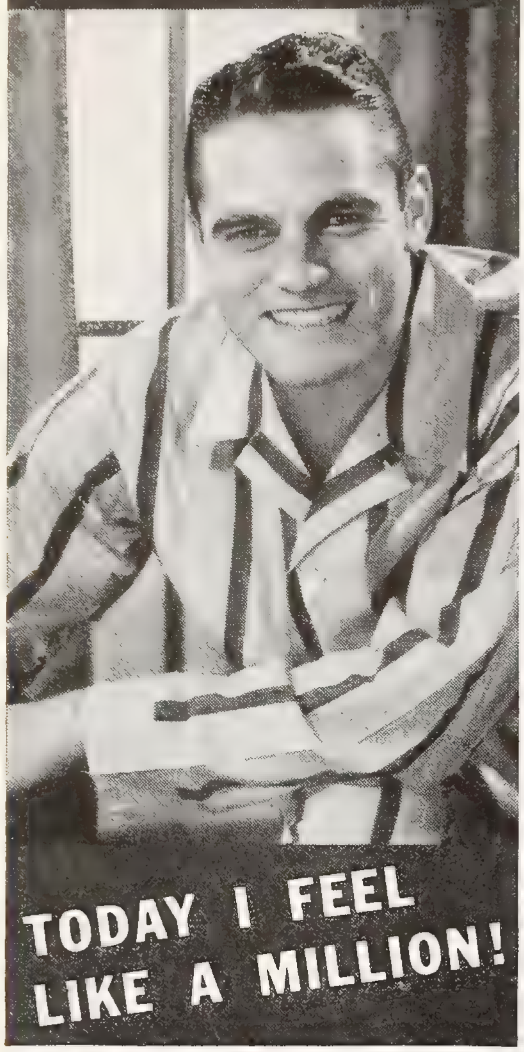
GOOD FOR TENDER GUMS
IPANA
TOOTH PASTE
BRISTOL-MYERS
NEW YORK
IPANA plus massage is your dentist's ablest assistant in the home care of your teeth and gums.

FEB 29 1936

©CIB 292181

©CIB 292181

OVERNIGHT
I LOST THAT DIZZY
AND BILIOUS FEELING

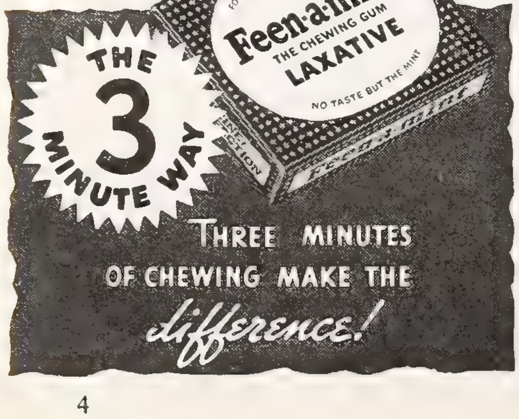


TODAY I FEEL LIKE A MILLION!

AND HERE'S HOW I DID IT!

When I went to bed last night, I felt dizzy and bilious. So I tried the FEEN-A-MINT 3-minute way that I've been reading about. I just chewed delicious FEEN-A-MINT for 3 minutes, and today I feel like a million dollars. What a difference from the harsh, griping action of old-fashioned "all-at-once" cathartics! It's good for the children too. They love its fresh, minty chewing-gum taste. And don't forget—FEEN-A-MINT is not habit-forming. Ask your druggist for FEEN-A-MINT today—15c and 25c a box.

Slightly higher in Canada.



MODERN SCREEN

NOW SHOWING

PAT'S PAL, "BANKSY" .... Jerry Asher 20
THE HOUSE OF MORGAN .... Adele Whitely Fletcher 22
JEAN HARLOW IS JEALOUS OF YOU .... Gladys Hall 34
AN OFF-SCREEN GLIMPSE OF THE QUINTS 36
BACHELOR AT LARGE .... Vivian Howard 38
HAS MAE WEST A DUAL PERSONALITY? .... Hilary Lynn 40
YOUR GIRL FRIDAY'S BUDDY .... Charles Darnton 42
"CHAWMED, I'M SURE" .... Katherine Albert 45
SHE KNOWS WIVES .... S. R. Mook 52
ALMOST AN OLD MAID .... Weldon Melick 53
SHE DOESN'T WANT FAME .... Rilla Page Palmborg 54
LESLIE HOWARD, PERENNIAL CHARMER .... Ruth Rankin 56
MIRACLE IN HOLLYWOOD BOWL .... Ramon Romero 58
BUTLERS ARE ONLY SKIN DEEP .... Faith Service 60
FAT? THIN? YOU CAN BE JUST RIGHT! .... Mme. Sylvia 62
HE'D RATHER BE A TEACHER .... Dora Albert 64
HER HERO .... Maude Lathem 65
SUITED TO HOLLYWOOD'S TASTE .... Adelia Bird 66

REGINA CANNON, EDITOR
ADELIA BIRD, Associate Editor
ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor
LEO TOWNSEND, Hollywood Editor

SHORT SUBJECTS

Modern Screen's Movie Scoreboard .. 6
Join the Hollywood Knitters 8
Reviews 10
Studio Addresses 13
Information Desk 14
Easy Meals Are Jeanette's Dish 16
Take Your Beauty Inventory 18
Between You and Me 24
Exclusive Portraits 27
Lucky in Love 44
Good News 46
The Black and White Ball 50
These Three 70

Published monthly and copyrighted 1936 by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, N. Y. Chicago, Ill., office, 360 N. Michigan Avenue. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 12, No. 5, April, 1936. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.00 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $1.00 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.50 a year. Entered as second class matter, September 18, 1930, at the Post Office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material. Sole Foreign Agents: The International News Company, Ltd., 5 Breams Building, London, E. C. 4, England.

THE GREAT ZIEGFELD

The Life and Loves of the World's Greatest Showman

2 YEARS IN PRODUCTION!
GREATEST MUSICAL HIT!

Now, in one flashing musical comes all that the great Ziegfeld gave the world in his crowded lifetime! American girlhood glorified . . . great Ziegfeld stars . . . the melodies he made immortal . . . and a new "Follies" with all the lavishness of Ziegfeld! You follow his fabulous private life . . . his tempestuous romance with Anna Held . . . his deep and ardent love for Billie Burke . . . All in M-G-M's biggest musical triumph!

WILLIAM POWELL
As "The Great Ziegfeld"
MYRNA LOY
As loyal, devoted Billie Burke
LUISE RAINER
As tempestuous, irresistible Anna Held
VIRGINIA BRUCE
A "Glorified" Ziegfeld girl
FRANK MORGAN
As Ziegfeld's life-long rival
FANNIE BRICE
The inimitable Fannie herself
LEON ERROL
With his trick knee
GILDA GRAY
The original "Shimmy" Girl, herself
RAY BOLGER
Eccentric Dancing Sensation
NAT PENDLETON
As Sandow, the Strong Man
ANN PENNINGTON
Herself, dimpled knees and all
HARRIET HOCTOR
Ziegfeld's Greatest Dancing Star
REGINALD OWEN
As Ziegfeld's Manager
A. A. TRIMBLE
As Will Rogers
BUDDY DOYLE
As Eddie Cantor
JOSEPH CAWTHORN
As Dr. Ziegfeld
W. W. DEARBORN
As Daniel Frohman
RAYMOND WALBURN
Sage, Ziegfeld's Press Agent
JEAN CHATBURN
Mary Lou, Ziegfeld's protege
HERMAN BING
Ziegfeld's Costumer
WILLIAM DEMAREST
As Gene Buck
200—GLORIFIED GIRLS—200
Costumes by ADRIAN
Screen Play by
WM. ANTHONY McGUIRE
Directed by ROBERT Z. LEONARD
HUNT STROMBERG
Producer
A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER PICTURE

MODERN SCREEN MOVIE SCOREBOARD

Picture and Producer	General Rating
Accent on Youth (Paramount)	3★
Age of Indiscretion (M-G-M)	2★
Ah, Wilderness (M-G-M)	4★
Alias Bulldog Drummond (GB)	2★
Alias Mary Dow (Universal)	2★
Alibi Ike (Warners)	3★
Alice Adams (RKO)	4★
Anna Karenina (M-G-M)	4★
Annapolis Farewell (Paramount)	2½★
Annie Oakley (RKO)	4★
The Arizonian (RKO)	3★
Bad Boy (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Barbary Coast (United Artists)	3★
Becky Sharp (RKO)	3★
The Bishop Misbehaves (M-G-M)	3★
Black Fury (First National)	4★
Black Sheep (Fox)	2★
Break of Hearts (RKO)	3★
Brewster's Millions (United Artists)	2★
The Bride Comes Home (Paramount)	3★
The Bride of Frankenstein (Universal)	3★
Bright Lights (First National)	3★
Broadway Hostess (First National)	1★
Broadway Melody of 1936 (M-G-M)	4★
Call of the Wild (20th Century)	3★
The Calling of Dan Matthews (Columbia)	1★
Captain Blood (Warners)	4★
Cardinal Richelieu (United Artists)	4★
Car 99 (Paramount)	3★
Case of the Curious Bride (First National)	3★
The Case of the Lucky Legs (First National)	2★
Ceiling Zero (Warners)	4★
Charlie Chan in Egypt (Fox)	3★
Charlie Chan in Shanghai (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Charlie Chan's Secret (20th Century-Fox)	2★
China Seas (M-G-M)	4★
Clive of India (20th Century)	4★
College Rhythm (Paramount)	3★
Collegiate (Paramount)	2½★
Coronado (Paramount)	1★
Crime and Punishment (Columbia)	3★
The Crime of Dr. Crespi (John H. Auer)	2★
The Crusades (Paramount)	4★
Curly Top (Fox)	3★
Dangerous (Warners)	3½★
Dangerous Waters (Universal)	2★
Dante's Inferno (Fox)	2★
The Dark Angel (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
The Daring Young Man (Fox)	2★
David Copperfield (M-G-M)	5★
Diamond Jim (Universal)	3★
Don't Bet on Blondes (Warners)	2★
Doubting Thomas (Fox)	3★
Dr. Socrates (Warners)	2★
East of Java (Universal)	2★
Escapade (M-G-M)	3★
Escape Me Never (United Artists)	3★
Every Night at Eight (Paramount)	2★
Exclusive Story (M-G-M)	2½★
Fang and Claw (RKO)	2★
The Farmer Takes a Wife (Fox)	3★
A Feather in Her Hat (Columbia)	2★
First a Girl (GB)	2½★
The Flame Within (M-G-M)	2★
Forsaking All Others (M-G-M)	3★
Four Hours to Kill (Paramount)	3★
Freshman Love (Warners)	2★
Frisco Kid (Warners)	3★
Front Page Woman (Warners)	3★
The Gay Deception (20th Century-Fox)	3★
The Ghost Goes West (United Artists)	4★
The Gilded Lily (Paramount)	3★
Ginger (Fox)	3★
The Girl Friend (Columbia)	1★
The Girl from 10th Ave. (First National)	2★
The Glass Key (Paramount)	3★
Goin' to Town (Paramount)	3★
Go into Your Dance (First National)	3★
Goose and the Gander (First National)	2★
Grand Exit (Columbia)	1★
The Great Impersonation (Universal)	2★
Hands Across the Table (Paramount)	3★
Harmony Lane (Mascot)	2★
Here Comes Cookie (Paramount)	3★
Here Comes the Band (M-G-M)	1★
Here's to Romance (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Hold 'Em Yale (Paramount)	3★
Hooray for Love (RKO)	2★
I Dream Too Much (RKO)	3★
I Found Stella Parish (Warners)	2★
If You Could Only Cook (Columbia)	4★
I Live for Love (Warners)	2★
I Live My Life (M-G-M)	2★
The Informer (RKO)	4★
In Old Kentucky (20th Century-Fox)	3★
In Person (RKO)	2★
The Invisible Ray (Universal)	1½★
The Irish in Us (First National)	3★
The Iron Duke (GB)	3★
It Happened in New York (Universal)	3★
It's in the Air (M-G-M)	2★
Jalna (RKO)	3★
Java Head (First Division)	2★
King of Burlesque (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
King of the Damned (GB)	1½★
King Solomon of Broadway (Universal)	1★
Laddie (RKO)	3★
Lady Tubbs (Universal)	2★
The Last Days of Pompeii (RKO)	4★
Last of the Pagans (M-G-M)	2★
The Last Outpost (Paramount)	2★
The Leavenworth Case (Republic)	2★
Let 'Em Have It (United Artists)	3★
Let's Live Tonight (Columbia)	2★
Life Begins at Forty (Fox)	4★
Little Big Shot (Warners)	2★
The Little Colonel (Fox)	3★
The Littlest Rebel (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Lives of a Bengal Lancer (Paramount)	5★
Living on Velvet (Warners)	2★
Love Me Forever (Columbia)	4★
Loves of a Dictator (GB)	3★
Mad Love (M-G-M)	2★
Manhattan Moon (Universal)	1★
Man of Iron (Warners)	1★
The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo (20th Century-Fox)	2½★
Mark of the Vampire (M-G-M)	2★
Mary Burns, Fugitive (Paramount)	3★
Magnificent Obsession (Universal)	2½★
The Melody Lingers On (United Artists)	2★
Men of Tomorrow (London Films)	1★
Men Without Names (Paramount)	3★
Metropolitan (20th Century-Fox)	4★
A Midsummer Night's Dream (Warners)	5★
Millions in the Air (Paramount)	1★
Mississippi (Paramount)	3★
Miss Pacific Fleet (Warners)	1½★
Mr. Dynamite (Universal)	2★
The Morals of Marcus (GB)	1★
Murder in the Fleet (M-G-M)	2★
Murder Man (M-G-M)	2★
The Murder of Dr. Harrigan (First National)	2★
Music is Magic (20th Century-Fox)	1½★
Muss 'Em Up (RKO)	2★
Mutiny on the Bounty (M-G-M)	4★
Naughty Marietta (M-G-M)	4★
Navy Wife (20th Century-Fox)	2★
New Adventures of Tarzan (Republic)	1★
Next Time We Love (Universal)	3★
A Night at the Opera (M-G-M)	4★
A Night at the Ritz (Warners)	2★
No More Ladies (M-G-M)	3★
Oil for the Lamps of China (First National)	4★
Old Curiosity Shop (BIP)	2½★
$1000 a Minute (Republic)	2★
One Way Ticket (Columbia)	2½★
Orchids to You (Fox)	2★
Our Little Girl (Fox)	2★
Page Miss Glory (Warners)	3★
Paris in Spring (Paramount)	3★
The Payoff (Warners)	2★
The People's Enemy (RKO)	2★
People Will Talk (Paramount)	2★
The Perfect Gentleman (M-G-M)	2★
Personal Maid's Secret (Warners)	2★
Peter Ibbetson (Paramount)	3★
Princess O'Hara (Universal)	3★
Professional Soldier (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Public Hero No. 1 (M-G-M)	3★
The Public Menace (Columbia)	1★
The Rainmakers (RKO)	1★
The Raven (Universal)	2★
Red Salute (Reliance-United Artists)	2★
Remember Last Night? (Universal)	2★
Rendezvous (M-G-M)	3★
The Return of Peter Grimm (RKO)	3★
Riffraff (M-G-M)	2½★
Roberta (RKO)	5★
Rose Marie (M-G-M)	4★
Rose of the Rancho (Paramount)	2★
Scrooge (Hagen-Twickenham)	2½★
The Secret Bride (Warners)	3★
Seven Keys to Baldpate (RKO)	2★
Shadow of Doubt (M-G-M)	3★
Shanghai (Paramount)	2★
She (RKO)	2★
She Couldn't Take It (Columbia)	2½★
She Married Her Boss (Columbia)	4★
Shipmates Forever (First National)	3★
A Shot in the Dark (Chesterfield)	2★
Show Them No Mercy (20th Century-Fox)	3★
Silk Hat Kid (Fox)	1★
Smart Girl (Paramount)	2★
Society Doctor (M-G-M)	3★
So Red the Rose (Paramount)	3★
Special Agent (Warners)	2★
Splendor (Sam Goldwyn)	2★
Star of Midnight (M-G-M)	3★
Stars Over Broadway (Warners)	3★
Steamboat Round the Bend (Fox)	3★
Strike Me Pink (Sam Goldwyn)	3★
Sylvia Scarlett (RKO)	2½★
A Tale of Two Cities (M-G-M)	5★
Thanks a Million (20th Century-Fox)	3½★
The 39 Steps (GB)	4★
This is the Life (20th Century-Fox)	2★
Three Kids and a Queen (Universal)	2★
Three Live Ghosts (M-G-M)	2★
The Three Musketeers (RKO)	3★
Thunder in the Night (Fox)	2★
Times Square Lady (M-G-M)	2★
To Beat the Band (RKO)	2★
Too Tough to Kill (Columbia)	1★
Top Hat (RKO)	4★
Transatlantic Tunnel (GB)	3★
Transient Lady (Universal)	2★
Traveling Saleslady (First National)	2★
The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes (GB)	2★
Two in the Dark (RKO)	2½★
Two for Tonight (Paramount)	1★
Vagabond Lady (M-G-M)	2★
Way Down East (20th Century-Fox)	2★
The Wedding Night (Sam Goldwyn)	4★
We're in the Money (Warners)	2★
We're Only Human (RKO)	2★
The Werewolf of London (Universal)	2★
West Point of the Air (M-G-M)	3★
Whipsaw (M-G-M)	2½★
The Widow from Monte Carlo (Warners)	2★
Wings in the Dark (Paramount)	3★
Your Uncle Dudley (20th Century-Fox)	2★

You'll find this chart simple to follow and a valuable guide in choosing film entertainment. Instead of giving you the individual ratings of Modern Screen and authoritative newspaper movie critics all over the country, we have struck an average of their ratings. You'll find this average under the heading, General Rating, beside each picture. Ratings: 5★, extraordinary; 4★, very good; 3★, good; 2★, fair; 1★, poor.

Look!—Ruby's got a new dancing partner! With Paul Draper, sensational Broadway importation, she does her dandiest dancing to date to the tune of Warren & Dubin's new hits, in this swell story which Alfred E. Green directed.

And what a comedy team this turns out to be! Yet Hugh and Louise are just part of a convulsing cast that includes Marie Wilson, Luis Alberni, Berton Churchill, and Olin Howard.

A DOZEN GREAT STARS

Go 'Round and 'Round in

COLLEEN

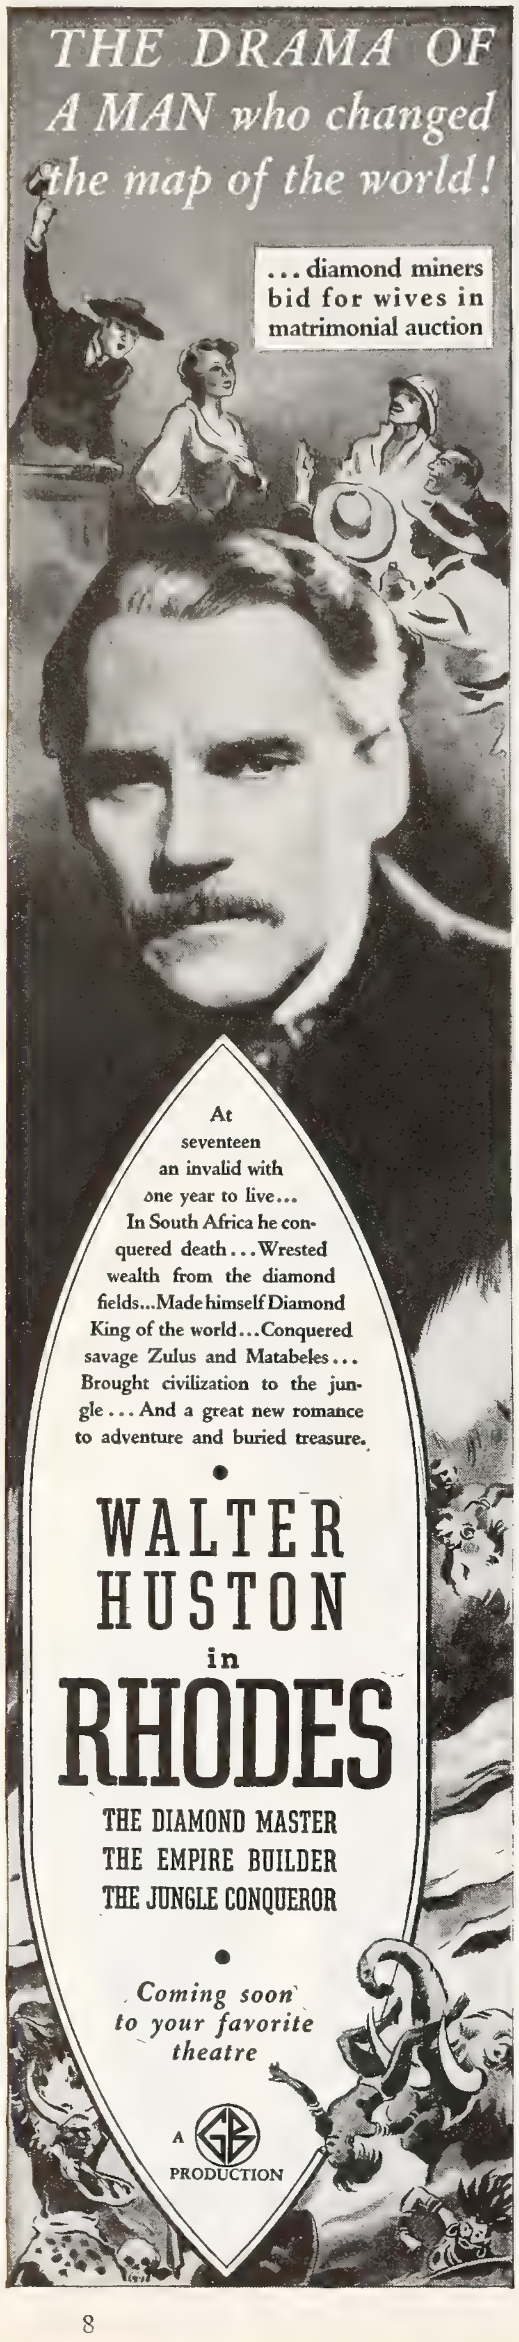
THE PICTURE OF THE MONTH

Warner Bros.' Stunning New Musical Displays the Terpsichorean Talents of Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie, Paul Draper and—of All People!—Louise Fazenda and Hugh Herbert, While the Rhythm of Four Swell New Song Hits Comes Out Here . . .

And just for good measure, 200 assorted Hollywood lovelies go to town in an up-to-the-second fashion show and other lavish dance numbers staged by Bobby Connolly!

Between love scenes with Ruby, Dick vocalizes "You Gotta Know How To Dance", "Summer Night" and "I Don't Have To Dream Again"

Everything's Oakie-Doakie when Jack and Joan "swing it" to the strains of "Boulevardier From The Bronx".



THE DRAMA OF A MAN who changed the map of the world!

. . . diamond miners bid for wives in matrimonial auction

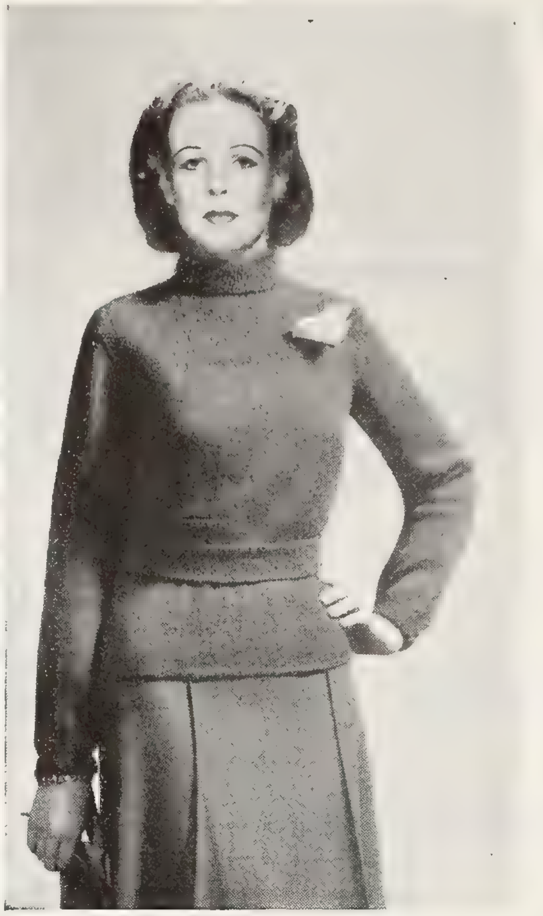
At seventeen an invalid with one year to live... In South Africa he conquered death . . . Wrested wealth from the diamond fields...Made himself Diamond King of the world . . . Conquered savage Zulus and Matabeles . . . Brought civilization to the jungle . . . And a great new romance to adventure and buried treasure.

WALTER HUSTON in RHODES

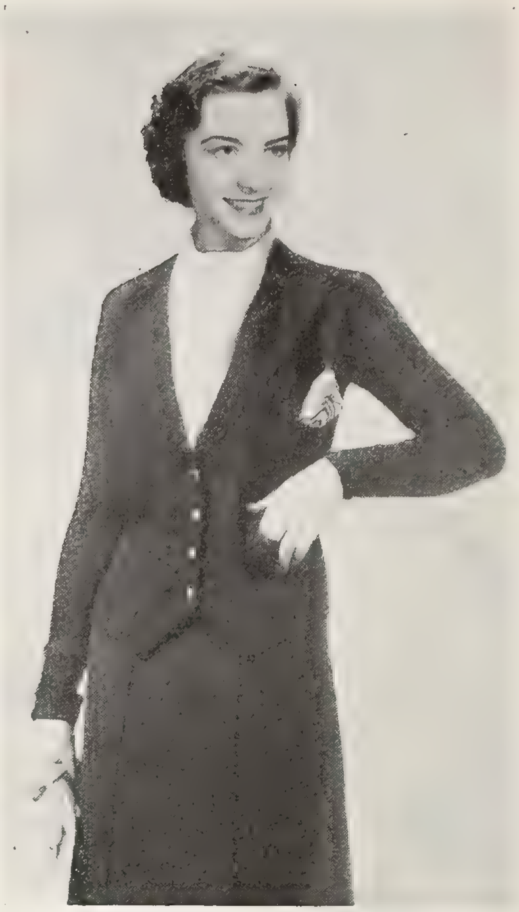
THE DIAMOND MASTER
THE EMPIRE BUILDER
THE JUNGLE CONQUEROR

Coming soon to your favorite theatre

A GB PRODUCTION



7—Wendy Barrie models a smart turtle-neck style sweater which has a new feature of buttoning down the back. Note the trick pockets and the cuff finish to the sleeves.



8—Marsha Hunt wears a trim jacket, cleverly knitted with wide revers and a vest-like cut. Instructions for making the long Ascot scarf are included in the pattern.

JOIN THE HOLLYWOOD Knitters

Here are two new star sweater styles

THERE'S twice as much kick to knitting something when you know that the finished article is an exact copy of a style sponsored by a Hollywood star.

This month, two of the younger Hollywood knitters, Marsha Hunt and Wendy Barrie, send you knitting instructions for their pet sweaters. One is a sporty looking turtle-neck style, just what you would expect an outdoorish English girl like Wendy to wear. And the other is one of those indispensable sweater jackets which Marsha Hunt declares she uses with a matching skirt to make a trim suit.

Sweaters are an important item in new spring wardrobes. And if you send in for instructions, promptly, you can have a smart new one finished in time for the first warm days when you can go without a coat or jacket. Wendy's sweater is perfect for sports wear and can be made in very light yarns, as well as the medium-weight one pictured. Marsha's jacket style can be combined with blouses or other sweaters, in the manner of the popular twin sets.

These are easy to make, because we will send you the full instructions as given to Wendy and Marsha by the famous yarn company who designed them. Just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Adelia Bird, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

And when writing in for the instructions, be sure to mention by number which style you wish—you may have both, if you like, but please send an extra stamped, self-addressed envelope if you want both. Remember instructions are free!

A SON...
PROUD OF HIS MOTHER

. . . worshipping the ground she walked on . . . loving her with a fierce loyalty . . . yet at the same time stealing his way into the flinty heart of a proud, tyrannical nobleman and teaching him the meaning of kindness.

Freddie Bartholomew breathes life into Frances Hodgson Burnett's beloved character, "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and gives a performance in the world-famous story that will indelibly stamp itself upon your heart. Dolores Costello Barrymore as "Dearest" his mother, returns to the screen lovelier and more radiant than ever. She will delight the millions of fans who have been eagerly awaiting her return.

We'd like to be modest in our statements about this picture — but the facts speak for themselves . . . It has a magnificent cast — a perfect story — was directed by John Cromwell who thrilled you with "Of Human Bondage" — produced by David O. Selznick who gave you "David Copperfield" and the screenplay was written by Hugh Walpole, noted English author.

It is a picture that is marked for major screen honors in 1936!

Selznick International Pictures, Inc., Presents

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY

with

FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW and DOLORES COSTELLO BARRYMORE

Mickey Rooney • C. Aubrey Smith • Guy Kibbee • Henry Stephenson
E. E. Clive • Una O'Connor • Jackie Searle • Ivan Simpson • Jessie Ralph
PRODUCED BY DAVID O. SELZNICK Released thru UNITED ARTISTS

(Above) The long-awaited "Rose Marie" won't disappoint the Nelson Eddy-Jeanette MacDonald fans. In fact, you'll like it as much as you did "Naughty Marietta." (Above, left) And "Anything Goes," another musical, in a different vein, with Bing Crosby and Ethel Merman, offers an hour's enjoyment. (Right) Margaret Lindsay, Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall do good work in "The Lady Consents."

REVIEWS

A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES

BY LEO TOWNSEND

See Modern Screen's Movie Scoreboard on page 6

★★★★ Rose Marie (M-G-M)

It probably comes under the head of good news for the Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy fans to report that their second co-starring venture is as appealing and as entertaining as was "Naughty Marietta," their first. As usual, La Belle MacDonald is as lovely to look at as she is pleasant to hear, and Nelson Eddy maintains the virility in both voice and appearance which won him so many feminine fans. If you are familiar with "Rose Marie," it is hardly necessary to inform you that Jeanette plays an opera star who falls in love with one of Canada's Mounted Police. The cop on horseback, of course, is Nelson Eddy, which is fortunate indeed, for their joint rendition of "The Indian Love Call," against a breath-taking north woods background, is one of the picture's most enjoyable moments. Other vocal numbers of note are Mr. Eddy's singing of "Rose Marie" and Miss MacDonald's humorous and catchy "Pardon Me, Madame." Others in the cast are Allan Jones, who sings with Miss MacDonald in a Romeo-and-Juliet scene, James Stewart, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray and Gilda Gray, who does things with her torso. In a word or two, it is a delightful screen musical.

Preview Postscripts

The fifty members of cast and crew who went on location for this picture agreed that it was like a six-weeks' vacation. Lake Tahoe was chosen for the location site, with Tahoe Lodge as headquarters. Members of the outfit had cabins surrounding the lodge, where all gathered for dinner. Until nine o'clock every evening they would gather around the fireplace, play games, tell stories and listen to Eddy and MacDonald practice duets. Nine o'clock was the unbroken bedtime rule, since 4:30 was the unbroken daily starting rule. In order to catch the first morning sun the company had to pack their way into the woods on mules for a few hours before dawn. So intent was the company on really roughing it, that beans were voted the favorite luncheon dish. Jeanette MacDonald is seriously considering doing over her delicate French blue and poudre pink dressing-room on the studio lot with bear skins and deer heads, now that she's back from the wilds. Bob Ritchie, the MacDonald heart interest for lo these many years, slew a wild-cat for a birthday gift for Jeanette while on a visit to the location set . . . Woody Van Dyke wielded the megaphone on this one. Van Dyke is a typical outdoor picture man, and is known as the best location director in the business. "Trader Horn," "Eskimo," and such epics are among his past work. Also "Naughty Marietta." Van Dyke admits he has only an average musical ear, but lays his success with musicals to the fact that movie audiences have only an average ear, too. Therefore he knows what they want. . . . Nelson Eddy was under contract to M-G-M for two years before facing a camera. Until the right picture came up, the studio wasn't going to risk their treasure. With "Naughty Marietta" the blonde baritone proved more than worth the gamble. In spite of setting every feminine heart aflutter, Mr. Eddy is one of Hollywood's most dyed-in-the-wool bachelors. Frances Marion, ace scenarist, seems to be the best gal in emergencies. Nelson's been touring the country in a series of song recitals.

(Continued on page 12)

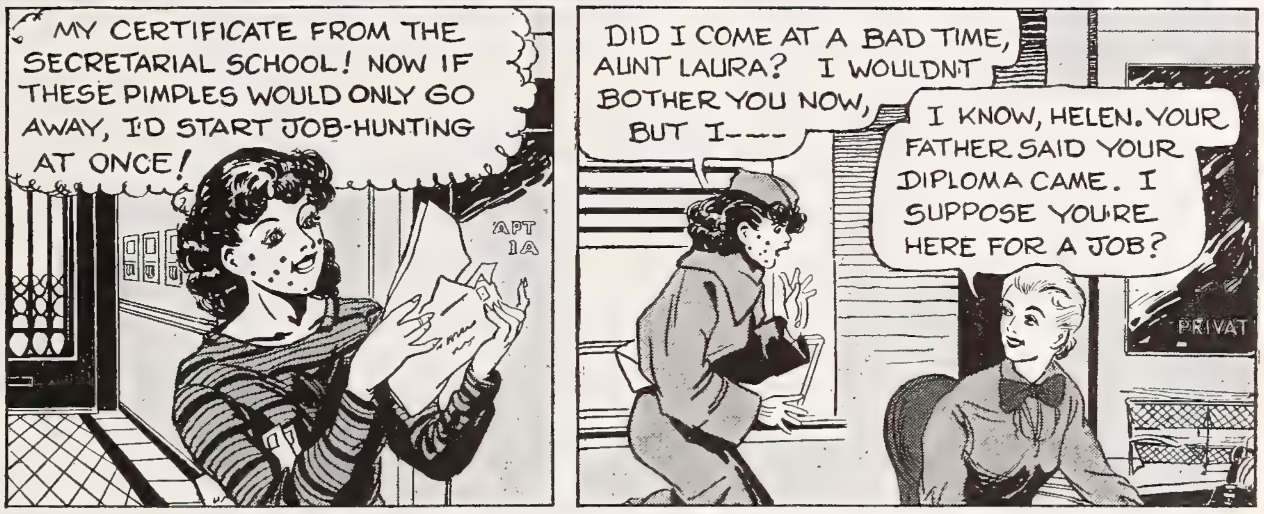
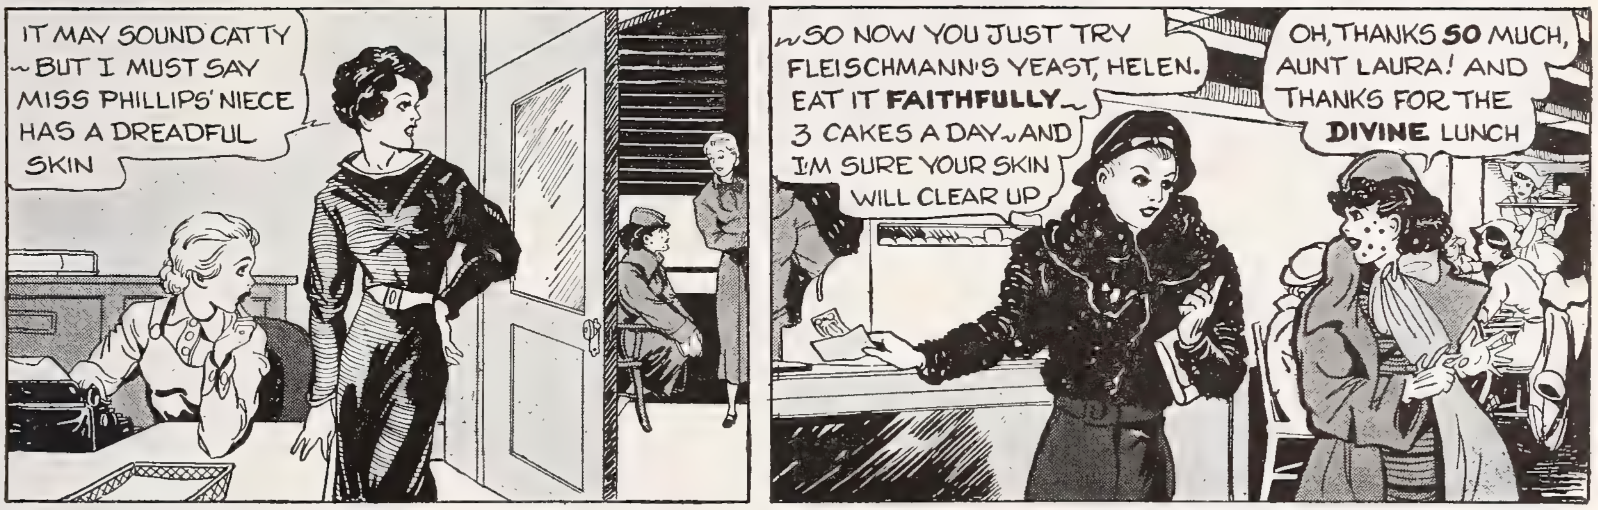
PIMPLES NEVER HELPED ANY GIRL TO GET A JOB!

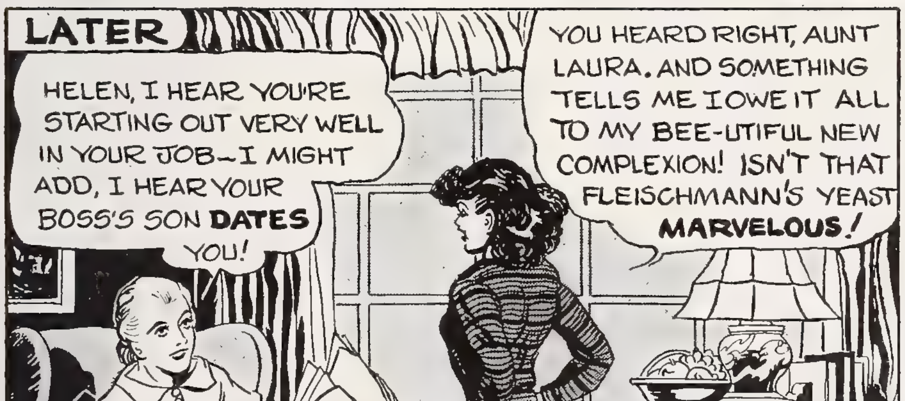
But Aunt Laura comes to the Rescue



MY CERTIFICATE FROM THE SECRETARIAL SCHOOL! NOW IF THESE PIMPLES WOULD ONLY GO AWAY, I'D START JOB-HUNTING AT ONCE!
APT 1A
DID I COME AT A BAD TIME, AUNT LAURA? I WOULDN'T BOTHER YOU NOW, BUT I---
I KNOW, HELEN. YOUR FATHER SAID YOUR DIPLOMA CAME. I SUPPOSE YOU'RE HERE FOR A JOB?
PRIVAT



IT MAY SOUND CATTY—BUT I MUST SAY MISS PHILLIPS' NIECE HAS A DREADFUL SKIN
—SO NOW YOU JUST TRY FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST, HELEN. EAT IT FAITHFULLY—3 CAKES A DAY—AND I'M SURE YOUR SKIN WILL CLEAR UP
OH, THANKS SO MUCH, AUNT LAURA! AND THANKS FOR THE DIVINE LUNCH



LATER
HELEN, I HEAR YOU'RE STARTING OUT VERY WELL IN YOUR JOB—I MIGHT ADD, I HEAR YOUR BOSS'S SON DATES YOU!
YOU HEARD RIGHT, AUNT LAURA. AND SOMETHING TELLS ME I OWE IT ALL TO MY BEE-UTIFUL NEW COMPLEXION! ISN'T THAT FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST MARVELOUS!

Don't let Adolescent Pimples give YOU a job problem

FROM the beginning of adolescence—at about 13 until 25, or even longer—young people are frequently worried by pimples.

Important glands develop and final growth takes place during this time. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin becomes oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin. Pimples pop out!

But you can overcome these adolescent pimples. Fleischmann's fresh Yeast clears the skin irritants out of your blood. Unsightly pimples disappear.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast 3 times a day, before meals—plain, or in a little water—until your skin is entirely clear. Start today.

Supplies Vitamins A B D G
FLEISCHMANN'S
YEAST

—clears the skin

by clearing skin irritants out of the blood

Copyright, 1936, Standard Brands Incorporated

The cinema offers you de luxe entertainment—it's a month of hits, folks

(Continued from page 10)

★★★★ The Petrified Forest
(Warners)

A combination gas station and lunch counter in a remote section of Arizona affords a setting for what many will herald as Leslie Howard's best picture. Certainly the quiet charm of his portrayal of the neurotic and ultra-sophisticated Alan Squier equals anything he has done on the screen, including his memorable work in "Of Human Bondage" and "Berkeley Square." "The Petrified Forest," with Mr. Howard in the lead, was one of Broadway's finest stage dramas a season or so ago. Fortunately for movie audiences, the Brothers Warner have seen fit to retain the intelligent Robert E. Sherwood dialogue almost in its entirety. Additional welcome news is that the cast includes Humphrey Bogart, who so skillfully played the villain of the piece in the New York production, and Bette Davis, one of the few young ladies of the screen who is not out of her class in the company of Mr. H. The story tells of a wanderer, jaded with life, who happens into a roadside lunch stand operated by Miss Davis. Another unexpected guest is killer Duke Mantee, an outlaw whose philosophy is strangely similar to that of the wanderer, in that they are both seeking something they know does not exist for them. The drama that follows at this lonely outpost becomes the most completely satisfying film of the month.

Preview Postscripts

The cast and crew on this one were hidden behind gas-masks for some seven weeks. It took that long to make the picture, and almost the entire play was filmed amid flying sands on Stage 8. Warners had transported about three tons of desert to the studio lot, several carloads of cactus and other desert vegetation. The outdoor set looked more like desert than the Sahara when the property execs finished their job. But what they hadn't reckoned with was a Hollywood gale. Windy weather is, of course, very unusual in these parts, but windy weather it was for the duration of the filming. Besides gas-masks, the cast resorted to ear muffs, blinders and gallons of throat spray . . . Except for the climate Leslie Howard could have sailed smoothly through this flicker. After several months in the Broadway version of the role he had the lines down pretty pat . . . Humphrey Bogart is the only other actor from the original cast. This marks Mr. Bogart's debut as a toughie. For years he's played the juvenile—the guy who comes on swinging a tennis racket and invites all superfluous ones on the stage for a jolly game . . . Dick Foran was initiated into a new role for this production, too. Known as the "Singing Cowboy," Dick has yodelled himself hoarse in almost every celluloider up to this one. Princeton, though, remembers him more for his half-backing than his warbling. Instead of landing a bond job for doing proud by his alma mater, Dick landed in the Philadelphia Symphony. A studio sleuth heard him there and thought he'd go over big in horse-operas. So westerns it was, until this, his first big chance at drammer . . . Genevieve Tobin and Leslie Howard staged a gala reunion first day on the set. Some years back, La Tobin graced a Howard play, "Murray Hill," on Broadway.

Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor in "The Magnificent Obsession."

Madge Evans, Franchot Tone and the promising Louise Henry in "Exclusive Story."

★★★ Anything Goes
(Paramount)

This country, which for two years found extreme pleasure in chanting "You're the top, you're the Coliseum, etc.," now has an opportunity to view the musical shenanigans to which those memorable lines belong. The fact that the screen version of Broadway's smash musical comedy is neither the top nor the Coliseum should not keep you from seeing it. The Hollywood edition of "Anything Goes" turns out to be average entertainment pointed up by two or three outstanding musi-comic sequences. Everything—well, practically everything—happens aboard a transatlantic liner which numbers among its passengers Bing Crosby, Ethel Merman, Ida Lupino, Arthur Treacher and Charlie Ruggles. Bing is a guy who climbed aboard at the last minute just to be near Ida Lupino; Ethel Merman is a night club chanteuse who has reformed and become a lady evangelist, mostly because there's more money in that sort of thing; and Charlie Ruggles is Moon-Face Martin, Public Enemy No. 13, who strolls about the deck in clerical attire, hoping thus to thwart the minions of the law. With such a passenger list, one is correct in expecting a lively comedy interspersed with the able chanting of Crosby and Merman. Our only disappointment is Charlie Ruggles' misconception of the role which Victor Moore made so hilarious on Broadway.

Olivia de Havilland and Errol Flynn in "Captain Blood."

Preview Postscripts

Oscar Lau, head of Paramount's prop department, should be given due credit for his part in this flicker. "I've been nursemaid to cockroaches, a chaperon to an elephant, dentist to a wild boar and wet-nurse to a colt," he moans, "but now—now!—I'm barber to a Pomeranian pooch!" That pooch is the one you see with Bing Crosby. Every time a retake was needed the purp had to be shaved. So many retakes were ordered at odd times during the day, that Lau finally decided to give the Pomeranian a shave every morning before himself . . . Miss Ethel Merman is one young woman who takes advantage of woman's prerogative to change her mind. Arriving here a few months back, Miss M. made one potent remark re. Hollywood. "Hick town," quoth she. But now says Ethel, "Hollywood is the most maligned town in the world. It's a nice comfortable place." From secretary to one of Broadway's favorite torch singers is apt to get a girl rattled . . . Bing Crosby has suppressed desires. He wants to be a combination newspaperman-novelist-short-story writer. Since he made his movie debut with Paul Whiteman in "King of Jazz," the lad with the strange growth in his throat which gives him that unique vocal quality, has come a long way. But he wants to work. Says singing is just fun and nothing else to him. Two Crosby brothers, Larry and Ted, are writers, so maybe there's a chance for Bing to amount to something.

★★★ Strike Me Pink
(Samuel Goldwyn)

"Strike Me Pink" is, as you probably know by now, the new Eddie Cantor picture. As a major comic, there are those who do not consider Cantor in the same league with the Chaplins, the Fieldses, and the Marxes, which may account for the fact that his producer always manages to surround him with a galaxy of other (Continued on page 105)

STUDIO ADDRESSES

Columbia Studios, 1438 N. Gower St., Hollywood, Calif.

Samuel Goldwyn Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., Hollywood, Calif.

Mascot Studios, 6001 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Calif.

Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Calif.

Republic Studios, 9336 W. Washington Blvd., Culver City, Calif.

RKO-Radio Studios, 780 N. Gower St., Hollywood, Calif.

20th Century-Fox Studios, Box 900, Beverly Hills, Cal.

United Artists Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., Hollywood, Calif.

Universal Studios, Universal City, Calif.

Walter Wanger Productions, 1040 North Las Palmas, Hollywood, Cal.

Warner Bros.-First National Studios, Burbank, Calif.

ABEL, WALTER: RKO-Radio.
AHERNE, BRIAN: M-G-M.
ALBERNI, LUIS: Free lance. Write him at 20th Century-Fox.
ALBERTSON, FRANK: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
ALBRIGHT, HARDIE: Free lance. Write him at Mascot.
ALEXANDER, KATHERINE: Free lance. Write her at M-G-M.
ALEXANDER, ROSS: Warner Bros.
ALLAN, ELIZABETH: M-G-M.
ALLEN, GRACIE: Paramount.
ALLEN, JUDITH: Paramount.
ALLEN, ROBERT: Columbia.
ALLWYN, ASTRID: 20th Century-Fox.
AMES, ADRIENNE: Free lance. Write her at Paramount.
AMES, ROSEMARY: 20th Century-Fox.
ANGEL, HEATHER: RKO-Radio.
ARLEDGE, JOHN: RKO-Radio.
ARLEN, RICHARD: Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
ARLISS, GEORGE: United Artists.
ARMETTA, HENRY: Universal.
ARMSTRONG, ROBERT: Warner Bros.
ARNOLD, EDWARD: Universal.
ARTHUR, JEAN: Columbia.
ASTAIRE, FRED: RKO-Radio.
ASTHER, NILS: RKO-Radio.
ASTOR, MARY: Warner Bros.
ATWILL, LIONEL: Paramount.
AUTRY, GENE: Republic.
AYRES, LEW: Republic.
BAKER, BENNY: Paramount.
BANCROFT, GEORGE: Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
BARBIER, GEORGE: Paramount.
BARKER, PHILLIP: Walter Wanger.
BARNES, BINNIE: Universal.
BARNETT, VINCE: Universal.
BARRAT, ROBERT: Warner Bros.
BARRIE, MONA: 20th Century-Fox.
BARRIE, WENDY: Paramount.
BARRYMORE, JOHN: M-G-M.
BARRYMORE, LIONEL: M-G-M.
BARTHELMESS, RICHARD: Warner Bros.
BARTHOLOMEW, FREDDIE: M-G-M.
BARTLETT, MICHAEL: Columbia.
BAXTER, ALAN: Walter Wanger.
BAXTER, JANE: United Artists.
BAXTER, WARNER: 20th Century-Fox.
BEAL, JOHN: RKO-Radio.
BECK, THOMAS: 20th Century-Fox.
BEECHER, JANET: Paramount.
BEERY, NOAH, JR.: Universal.
BEERY, WALLACE: M-G-M.
BELLAMY, MADGE: 20th Century-Fox.
BELLAMY, RALPH: Free lance. Write him at Columbia.
BENCHLEY, ROBERT: M-G-M.
BENEDICT, WILLIAM: 20th Century-Fox.
BENNETT, CONSTANCE: Free lance. Write her at M-G-M.
BENNETT, JOAN: Walter Wanger.
BENNY, JACK: M-G-M.
BERGNER, ELISABETH: United Artists.
BERNIE, BEN: Paramount.
BICKFORD, CHARLES: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
BIRELL, TALA: Columbia.
BLACKMER, SIDNEY: Free lance. Write him at RKO-Radio.
BLAKELEY, JAMES: Columbia.
BLANE, SALLY: Columbia.
BLONDELL, JOAN: Warner Bros.
BLORE, ERIC: RKO-Radio.
BLUE, MONTE: Free lance. Write him at M-G-M.
BOLAND, MARY: Paramount.
BOLES, GLEN: Warner Bros.
BOLES, JOHN: 20th Century-Fox.
BOYER, CHARLES: Walter Wanger.
BRADLEY, GRACE: Paramount.
BRADY, ALICE: Free lance. Write her at RKO-Radio.
BREAKSTONE, GEORGE: Free lance. Write him at Universal.
BRENDEL, EL: Warner Bros.
BRENT, EVELYN: Free lance. Write her at Paramount.
BRENT, GEORGE: Warner Bros.
BREWSTER, JUNE: RKO-Radio.

(Continued on page 115)

Blonde
Brunette
Yet—both should use a brunette powder

THE ONE—Flaxen-haired. Serene gray-blue eyes. A cool ivory skin.

THE OTHER—Soft brown hair. Eyes the same color, alight with mischief. Skin creamy, almost olive.

THE two girls are utterly different. Who would think they could use the same shade of powder?

But look!—the blonde's cool coloring would certainly fade with too light a powder shade. Her skin lights up, warms—only with a certain brunette shade. The very one the other girl uses to clear and freshen her creamy skin!

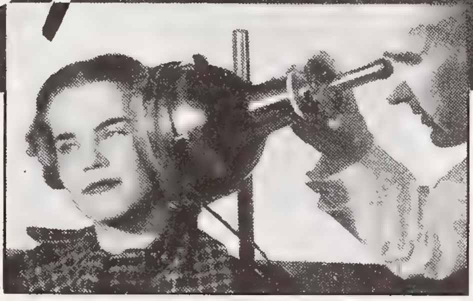
It's Pond's lively Brunette shade that gives each one what she needs!

New shades enliven skin

Which type are you? That's a thing for your skin to decide—not your hair. See whether your skin needs brightening, clearing or warming up. Then choose the Pond's shade that does that very thing!—one of the five offered at right.

Every one contains new important tints that add life to the skin. With an optical machine, Pond's discovered these tints hidden in skin itself. Among them, the bright blue that makes fair skin dazzling! The brilliant green that makes creamy skin glow!

Now, these beauty-giving tints are blended invisibly into Pond's new Powder shades. Thus, they bring transparency and glow to any skin!



Over 200 girls' skin color-analyzed!

BRUNETTE clears, brightens creamy skin
ROSE BRUNETTE warms dull, faded skin
ROSE CREAM gives fair skin a radiance
NATURAL brings a blonde transparency
LIGHT CREAM gives a cool, velvety finish

Fine textured, Pond's Powder feels smoother on the skin. Spreads softly, easily. Never cakes or clogs. The larger sizes come in lovely glass jars—to show shade and texture, keep the powder perfumed. Prices reduced, 35¢ and 70¢. 10¢ and 20¢ boxes, increased in size.

FREE 5 Lively New Shades Mail Coupon today

(This offer expires June 1, 1936)

POND'S, Dept. D94, Clinton, Conn. Please rush, free, 5 different shades of Pond's new Powder, enough of each for a thorough 5-day test.

Name____________________

Street____________________

City____________State________

Copyright, 1936, Pond's Extract Company

More CHIC for your Money
CORAL Chic NAIL POLISH

FASHION points to your finger tips and you answer with lustrous nails tinted by Chic. A deluxe polish in a large exquisite bottle that is a revelation in nail polish satisfaction. Chic is smooth, non-chipping and although instant-drying it refuses to thicken in the bottle. Chic applies so easily it makes changing your polish a pleasure. Chic wears, too, and with a variety of shades, either transparent or creme, you are ready to tone your finger tips to either a demure or dashing mood. There is a Chic Polish Remover and a Chic Cuticle Remover of equal value!

Chic Manicure Aids, at all Five and Ten Cent Stores. 10¢

?
Does Mae West use padding to give her curves ?
INFORMATION DESK
?
art helfant

Learn facts about your favorite players

NOTE: Since there have been so many requests for brief life stories of the following players, it will again be impossible to print the names of our readers. Please consider yourself automatically included.

HENRY WILCOXON: This very popular gentleman was born and raised in the British West Indies, his birth place, Dominica, the date September 8, 1905. After finishing his education at Harrison College, Bridgetown, Barbados, and at Woolmere College, Kingston, Jamaica, he went to England when he was sixteen and obtained a job as clerk in a milling firm. He rose to buyer on the Corn Exchange, but decided he wanted to become an actor. His rich, mellow voice so impressed an agent over the telephone that he was given a tryout and a part in a London show. He toured England six times with traveling troupes and was with the Birmingham Repertory Company for eight seasons. On the London stage he appeared in 25 shows, and during the day time played in movies. In January, 1934, he was brought to this country for the first time to play Marc Antony in "Cleopatra," his American picture debut. He is a very good artist, a capable amateur boxer and a fine swimmer. Aviation is one of his hobbies, and he is an avid collector of antiques. Mr. Wilcoxon stands 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 190 pounds, has blue-green eyes and brown hair. At present he is in England working in "A Woman Alone" in which he appears with Anna Sten. In all probability he will be assigned to the role of Samson in "Samson and Delilah," which may be made shortly. Your letters will reach him at the Paramount Studios, 5451 Marathon St., Hollywood, Cal., on his return to this country.

VIRGINIA SCHNEIDER, New York, N. Y.—The part of the little girl, Annabelle, in "She Married Her Boss," was taken by Edith Fellows. Joan Crawford was born in San Antonio, Tex.

JOHNNY DOWNS: And now, my children, let us consider the living example of what an "Our Gang" child actor can grow up to be. No kidding, Johnny crashed Hollywood in 1921 when he was 8 years old, and, decked out in curls and Lord Fauntleroy collars, became the original juvenile in the very first of the "Our Gang" comedies. Born John Morey Downs in Brooklyn, N. Y., on October 10, 1913, he went to Hollywood because his father, Lt. Morey H. Downs, U. S. Naval aviator, was stationed in San Diego. After he had outgrown his "Gang" roles, he clipped the curls and toured in vaudeville under the management of his father, who had retired from the Navy. Then Broadway beckoned and Johnny was prominently featured in a number of plays. In March, 1935, Paramount signed him to a contract, and his two most recent pictures for them are "Coronado" and "So Red the Rose." His next picture will be "Everybody's Old Man."

FRANCIS LEDERER: The story of his rise to fame is one of the most amazing in the history of the theatre. Son of a poor leather merchant, Frantisek Lederer was born in Prague, Czechoslovakia, on Nov. 6, 1906. He was born with the theatre instinct, and it was due to his insistent presence at a Prague theatre that he won his first engagement as super. Offered a dramatic course by an old actor for $2.50, Lederer showed such promise that he was awarded an acting scholarship at the Prague Academy. To help finance his schooling it was necessary for him to work at outside jobs such as washing windows, sweeping floors and making deliveries for a small department store. Then Lederer began to get small stage roles, from which he graduated to leading roles in the Moravian provinces. It was this experience, multiplied many times by appearances through Central Europe in stock companies in over 200 parts that brought out his amazing versatility. In Berlin he scored his first international success opposite Elisabeth Bergner in "Romeo and Juliet." Having repeated this triumph in London, he switched to musical comedy, "Wonderbar," and won even greater acclaim. Then to America where he became the outstanding matinee idol in "Autumn Crocus." Hollywood put in her bid and his first picture was "Man of Two Worlds." Shortly after arriving in Hollywood Francis launched his now famous World Peace Federation, which is financed entirely by him. Mr. Lederer lives in a modest home in Hollywood which is equipped with a complete gymnasium in which he keeps himself physically fit. He is 6 feet tall and weighs 156 pounds, has unruly dark hair and flashing dark eyes. He is divorced from Ada Mjedly, whom he married abroad, and is now seen most often in the company of Mary Anita Loos, niece of the well known writer. He loves music, literature and the arts. He has been selected as the leading man for "One Rainy Afternoon," the first Pickford-Lasky production. You may write him at the United Artists Studios, 1041 N. Formosa Ave., Hollywood, Cal.

MARY ELLEN McCRACKEN, Lincoln, Neb.—It's all an act! Harpo Marx is only dumb on the screen, and can speak perfectly when he wants to. Johnny Arledge (whose brief life story appears below) played the part of Coxswain, the boy who gave his life for the Navy in "Shipmates Forever." The very superior butler who played in "Curly Top," "Remember Last Night" and many others is Arthur Treacher—the gentlemanly gentleman's gentleman.

JOHNNY ARLEDGE: One of Hollywood's most promising young players, Johnson was born in Crockett, Texas, on March 12, 1907. Educated in Texas public schools and graduated from the University of Texas, Johnny was a capable pianist when quite young. Two years after graduation, he made his entry into the theatre world as an accompanist in vaudeville. He came to Hollywood, then, and worked in a mail order house and a creamery while waiting to crash the films. His first screen role was a bit in Paul Whiteman's "King of Jazz." On the stage, he got his first bit with Pauline Frederick in "Crimson Hour" and did so well that the same management cast him in "Up Pops the Devil." He also played the difficult role of the half-wit son in "Tobacco Road." Johnny is 5 feet 10½ inches tall, weighs 151 pounds, has blond hair and green-blue eyes and is married. He is under contract to RKO-Radio Studios, 780 N. Gower St., Hollwood, Cal., and his latest screen appearance is in "Thoroughbreds All."

JOSEPHINE HUTCHINSON: That is her honest-to-goodness name, and she was born in Seattle, Wash., on October 12, 1909. Her mother (Leona Roberts) is an actress and Josephine was educated for a stage career. As a child she played a small part in "The Little Princess," a Mary Pickford silent movie. Then she continued her education in the public schools of Seattle, winning a scholarship to the Cornish School of Music and Drama. Miss Hutchinson made her theatrical debut in Washington, D. C., where she played stock for three years. Her important stage work, though, was done with Eva Le Gallienne's New York Civic Repertory Company, in which she played a variety of roles. She has travelled a lot, hates prying people and names swimming and riding as her favorite outdoor sports. Miss Hutchinson was married to Robert Bell for three years and is now the wife of James Townsend. She is 5 feet 4½ inches tall, weighs 110 pounds and has red hair and golden brown eyes. Her first talkie appearance was in "Happiness Ahead" and her most recent is "The Story of Louis Pasteur." Following that she will probably be in "I Married a Doctor," for Warner Brothers Studios, Burbank, Calif., where you may write her.

DOLORES DEL RIO: Was born in the state of Durango, Mexico, August 3, 1905, the only child of J. L. and Antonia Asunsolo. Until she was 5 Dolores lived on her father's ranch, then the family moved to Mexico City where she entered the Convent of St. Joseph, and remained there for 8 years. In 1919 her parents took her to Europe where she was presented to the King and Queen of Spain, and on her return to Mexico reentered St. Joseph's Convent for another year. At a society bazaar she met Jaime del Rio and five months later they were married. After seven years they were divorced, and her husband died seven months after that. On an invitation from an American film producer who saw her dance at a social function, Dolores went to Hollywood in August, 1925. Her first picture was "Joanna" with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall starred. Her first starring picture was "Ramona," which followed shortly after "What Price Glory." She is now happily married to Cedric Gibbons, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer art director. Not the hot-house flower she appears. Dolores goes in heavily for sports—plays tennis, swims, fishes and hikes. She loves travel and beautiful clothes; she collects books and art objects; and likes to fuss around in her garden. Miss Del Rio is 5 feet 3½ inches tall, weighs 115 pounds and has shimmering black hair and black eyes. Her most recent picture is "The Widow From Monte Carlo." Write her at Warner Brothers Studio, Burbank, Cal.

(Continued on page 121)

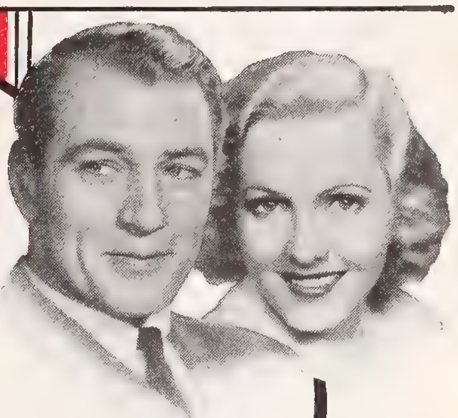
If you would like to see a brief synopsis of your favorite's life in this department, fill in and send us the coupon on page 122. General questions, of course, will be answered here, too. Those asked most frequently and the most interesting ones receive first preference. And not too many at a time, please. Address: The Information Desk, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

GRAND ENTERTAINMENT!



CAPRA'S NEWEST TRIUMPH!

Gary Cooper

A GENTLEMAN GOES TO TOWN

JEAN ARTHUR

George Bancroft • Lionel Stander • Douglass Dumbrille • Raymond Walburn • Margaret Matzenauer • H. B. Warner • Warren Hymer

A FRANK CAPRA PRODUCTION

Screen play by Robert Riskin From the story by Clarence Budington Kelland

GOLDEN-VOICED STAR IN HER GAYEST AND GRANDEST PICTURE!

Grace Moore

THE KING STEPS OUT

FRANCHOT TONE

Walter Connolly • Raymond Walburn
Victor Jory

Directed by JOSEF VON STERNBERG

Glorious Music by FRITZ KREISLER
Screen play by
Sidney Buchman
Lyrics by Dorothy Fields

WONDER SHOW OF 1936!

STORMING AMERICA IN A MIGHTY SONG CRESCENDO!

THE MUSIC GOES 'ROUND

HARRY RICHMAN
ROCHELLE HUDSON
WALTER CONNOLLY
FARLEY and RILEY
and their 'Round and 'Round Music
Douglass Dumbrille • Lionel Stander
Directed by VICTOR SCHERTZINGER

Screen play by Jo Swerling Story by Sidney Buchman

Music and Lyrics by Lew Brown-Harry Akst and Victor Schertzinger

COLUMBIA PICTURES

EASY MEALS ARE JEANETTE'S Dish

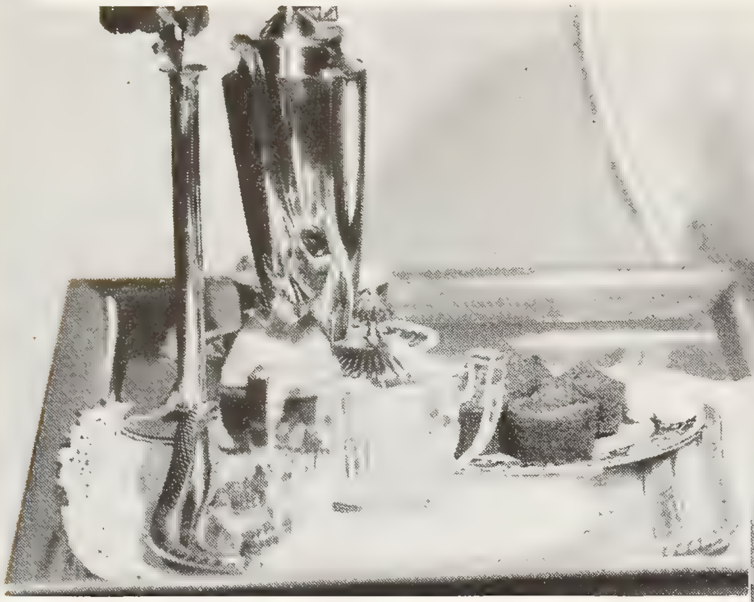
BY MARJORIE DEEN



Jeanette MacDonald breakfasts on banana bran muffins and stewed pears. Recipes for making these tempting muffins are yours for the asking.

"Even company meals need not be elaborate," La MacDonald observed to our Modern Hostess

THERE HAVE been countless stories and jokes which play up the sad culinary attempts of the young bride. If you have never been "a young bride" you would, most likely, laugh merrily at these tall tales of burned stews, solid concrete biscuits and India-rubber pie crusts, described, alas, with more accuracy than sympathy. But to the woman who has turned out a dish that was a complete failure, or a dinner that proved to be a "flop," I assure you it is no laughing matter.

"Why is it," moaned a young friend of mine recently, as she reviewed for my sympathetic ears the previous night's dinner fiasco, "why is it that it always seems to happen when you particularly want things to go right? Here I was entertaining such an important customer of my husband's, too, and everything went wrong! The fruit cup was too sweet, the soup curdled, the roast was overdone, the potatoes underdone, the vegetables watery, the salad limp and the dessert frightful! I could have screamed. Finally I did wash the dishes in salt tears. It was supposed to be such a fancy dinner, too; several courses, all with spiffy, odd dishes and lots and lots of extras."

Right then and there I understood what had happened to my young friend—what so often happens when we attempt to do more than our experience and our patience equip us to do successfully. It is far better, as I pointed out to the upset young woman, to attempt less and carry it through with éclat. And it is certainly much wiser to serve fewer things and have each one just right. Doubtless, it was a talk I had had recently with Jeanette Mac-

Donald that clarified my thoughts on this subject and inspired these words of advice.

For Jeanette, who, as you have had many an occasion to observe, is famous for her gay and easy singing, advises serving meals characterized by a similar effortless ease.

IN ORDER to make your guests feel welcome and at home," said Jeanette, "you must never let them realize that their visit caused frantic planning and hours of tiresome preparation with a final burst of nervous, irritating bustle and activity upon their arrival.

"It's just like singing and acting, when you stop to think of it," she went on. "A singer who announces an approaching high note, which is not within the range of her voice, by a frozen expression compounded of mingled determination and doubt; an actress who, without any genuine feeling for, or understanding of, a role, grabs a big scene like a terrier does a rat and proceeds to shake out every drop of emotion; a housewife who, at the sound of the word company kicks over the carefully built up budget, raids the market, nags her family and wrecks her nerves—they are much alike. For they are all attempting far more than they are able to carry out successfully and far, far more than is wise or necessary.

"We could learn a great deal from the French when it comes to meals," observed Jeanette, who has travelled extensively abroad and has closely observed the customs of other lands.

IN FRANCE each housewife prides herself on one or two dishes in which she excels," she informed me. "One such dish becomes the main feature of the meal, the outstanding culinary triumph for which that particular repast will be remembered by all who partake of it. It need not be elaborate, either—a simple pot-au-feu, a light omelette aux fines herbes, or perhaps only a salad. Ah, but it must be 'of a perfection' as they say. This featured dish is made of the best ingredients available. It is seasoned with skill and discretion and it is cooked with loving care. Then it is served with the utmost pride and an expression on the face that announces to all those present that here indeed is a masterpiece. For, to the French housewife, this is her big moment. However, with meals, as with singing or acting, there should never be any visible straining for an effect."

To illustrate her thought further, Jeanette outlined for me several menus for the type of meals she enjoys. Al- (Continued on page 86)

"Dolly . . . you've started a lot of gossip!"

1. "Look at these panties, Mother. They've got everybody on the block talking about dolly and you."

"Why, what's the matter? I wash dolly's clothes right in with my regular wash."

2. "I told 'em you do—and that nice new lady up the street said that's the trouble. She's afraid your washes have tattle-tale gray like hers used to. Even though you work hard, your soap leaves dirt behind and the clothes show it."

3. "Dear me! Is that all the new neighbor said?"

"Nope! She said you ought to change to Fels-Naptha Soap same as she did—'cause its wonderful golden soap and heaps of naptha chase out every teeny speck of dirt—and clothes look a million times whiter."

FEW WEEKS LATER . . .

4. At the new neighbor's house. "So Mother tried Fels-Naptha Soap just like you told me. And now her clothes look so swell she baked you this apple pie."

"Well! Well! Tell your mother that Fels-Naptha is a wonder for silk things, too—and maybe she'll bake me a big chocolate cake!"

© 1936, FELS & CO.

Banish "Tattle-Tale Gray"

with FELS-NAPTHA SOAP!

You need a good stock of brushes. Ann Darling shows you some of the many beauty lifts they give you. Left to right top of page: the complexion brush for finishing make-up, next a paint brush to point up lip rouge and the indispensable mascara brush. Below right: the hair brush, used vigorously, and clothes brush.

TAKE YOUR BEAUTY INVENTORY

First take stock of yourself, give credit where it's due, then work hard on your liabilities

BY MARY BIDDLE

HAVE YOU ever had a truth meeting with yourself? You know . . . the kind that you and your special chums used to have after school, with all of you sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, to any questions that you asked each other. Sometimes they said things that stung you cruelly and that you may have wept over a tiny bit in secret. Then again, maybe you just set your teeth and went to work to see what you could do about the criticisms.

Your mirror can give you the most thorough kind of a truth meeting, if you put it in the honest daylight, and let it be honest with you. The trouble is that we get so used to the same old face peering back at us, that we don't really see ourselves. And then we're soft, too, soft about our tender little egos. We love to alibi and excuse ourselves all over the place because we've let our complexions go, or because our hair is six-ways-for-Sunday. Oh, yes, "we've been too busy, we got in late last night, we'll do better tomorrow." There's not one of you so all-fired perfect that you can't improve, and there's not one of you so hopeless that you haven't some points, or at least one point, that you can work on for all you're worth.

This time of the year was just made for self-truth meetings and beauty inventories. It's still far enough away from summer and the beach for you to accomplish a lot before you get into that all too truth-telling bathing suit. You still have time enough, too, to do something about your hair, complexion and make-up before you go shopping for a brand new Easter bonnet.

WHAT DOES your skin need? Is it dry, and sort of wizened up into fine lines? Is it muddy, or sallow, or just generally dejected looking? How is your hair? Dull and lifeless after these months of tight-fitting winter hats? Untidy, because you've been making excuses to yourself about "waiting for a spring permanent"? Are your hands and nails grubby after daily sessions with the furnace, and with pulling the kids around on a sled? Is your make-up careless? Would your dress look the better for a good brushing and a change to fresh collars and cuffs? If the image in your mirror were your best chum, would she say, "You look positively smooth today, a regular Norma Shearer the Second!"? Or would she say, "You certainly are getting sloppy, Mary Ann. Why don't you fix yourself up a bit?"

I remember a girl who used to work in my office some years ago. She wasn't pretty exactly—no, I don't believe that she was pretty at all, but she was the cleanest, most radiant sort of a person you've ever met. Everyone liked her. Her boss always said, "She's such a nice, well-groomed girl, I like to have her around." And this youngster, who had a painfully small salary at that time, managed to be one of the outstanding assets of the office. I know for a fact that that girl never thought of starting out in the morning without a shower or tub bath, that every night before going to bed, she would douse her gloves and hose and lingerie in warm sudsy water, and have everything freshly clean waiting for her in the morning. She scrubbed, brushed and polished herself and her clothes until she positively radiated perfect grooming. That's what we want to be for spring, clean and gay! We want to turn in our old complexions and old make-up for new.

APPEARANCES, most of them, could all stand more brushing up. And when I say that I mean it, literally as well as figuratively speaking. My small brother had the right idea, even while I couldn't quite appreciate it, when he made very lavish use of my bath brush one day on a stray "mutt" dog he had corralled from heaven knows where. He told me enthusiastically that the brush was "swell." It really was, too, though I was hardly mollified by the compliment. It has a spray right down its middle section, so it's a hand spray and a bath brush all in one. It isn't particularly cheap, but if you haven't any regular shower apparatus, it's a nice solution to the quick bath problem. Personally, I like it for my hair, it's grand for getting all the soap out after an energetic shampoo.

Ann Darling, M-G-M player, has a positive fetish for brushes. She has a brush for every beauty chore, from an ample-sized clothes brush down to a tiny eyebrow brush. Do you want me to tell you what your beauty inventory should show when it comes to (Continued on page 79)

"Camay can bring Every Girl's Loveliness to Light"

BALTIMORE, MD.

Camay made my skin lovelier than I thought it ever could be. With Camay, every girl can bring her own loveliness to light.

Sincerely,

Leslie De Buské

(Mrs. Charles De Buské)

October 2, 1935

THERE'S a girl in the heart of Maryland—the former Leslie Condon. Athletic as a boy by day, she's unusually lovely across the dinner table. And how does she manage it—how does she keep her skin so smooth, so young, so alluring? Mrs. De Buske's own answer—is Camay!

And once you try Camay, your answer will be the same. For Camay's rich lather cleanses so thoroughly—but always very, very gently. It leaves your skin feeling fresh and smooth—leaves it with a flower fragrance--leaves it with a youthfulness that wins admiring eyes. Convince yourself that Camay is an efficient—a true beauty aid. Do it today—do it now. The price of a half-dozen cakes is surprisingly low.

Let Camay bring your loveliness to light.

CAMAY
THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN
CAMAY
CAMAY

CAMAY

The Soap of Beautiful Women

PAT'S PAL, "BANKSY"

BY JERRY ASHER

Pat is still young and giddy enough to need a guiding hand—"Banksy" is it! Pat's next picture is with George Brent in "His First Wife."

THE FRIENDSHIP existing between Patricia Ellis and "Banksy," her colored maid, is one of the untold stories of Hollywood. Over a period of ten years the loyalty, the friendship, the companionship and the kindly philosophy of her servant, have been the guiding powers in Pat's life.

"Banksy" is no ordinary servant and never has been regarded as such. A woman of amazing intelligence, she has hovered in the background while Patricia grew up. Never once has "Banksy" forgotten that her position is that of maid. And yet her tremendous understanding reveals a soul that seldom belongs to those who are destined to spend their lives in servitude.

" 'Banksy' is an angel," says Patricia. "I don't know how I would get along without her. In times of trouble she's always stood by me. I hate to think of some of the messes I might have been in if 'Banksy,' in her wise way, hadn't stepped in and saved the situation. For example, when I first started at the studio, being used to my own servants, I began by ordering the hairdressers and wardrobe women to do things for me. I didn't mean any harm. I thought they were there for that purpose. After the second day, 'Banksy' came to me. 'Patricia honey,' were her words, 'you'll never get along if you behave like that. I'm your maid and I work for you. But these people on the set are working with you—not for you.' I was so ashamed of myself but so grateful to 'Banksy' for teaching me a good lesson.

"Sometimes I think 'Banksy' is unusually hard on me, but everything she has ever predicted, has always come true. Whenever I make a new friend, 'Banksy' gives him the acid test. Her first impression is always lasting. Ofttimes I do not agree but later on I find out my mistake. 'Banksy' has an amazing knowledge of human character. She's so intuitive, no one can fool her. On her day off she goes to see five shows. She's my severest critic and the best audience in the world. Her suggestions are just and constructive. She never pats me on the back unless she feels I deserve it. I don't think she's ever yet told me that I've done my best work. If she did start to 'yes' me, I think I should lose all my faith in her.

"Everyone loves 'Banksy' on the sets. The electricians tell her the latest jokes, the hairdressers let her in on all the studio gossip. She can get anything she wants out of anyone. She has a wonderful way of handling people and making them respect her. And never once does she give the impression of being fresh or demanding anything that isn't coming to her. As a small child, I remember that she never tried to fool me. I grew up knowing I could trust her. For years she has been devoted to me and my family. She has a wonderful understanding of us all."

THE FRIENDSHIP between Patricia and "Banksy" started when Pat was a very little girl. (She is only eighteen today.) In those days her name was O'Brien. Her mother had divorced Mr. O'Brien with the understanding that during the summer months the children (Pat has two brothers) were to remain with their mother and the father was to keep them during the school year. Quite unexpectedly Alexander Leftwich, a famous New York producer, came on the scene and Mrs. O'Brien was swept off her feet. They were married soon after.

At the time of his marriage, Leftwich was producing a show. Quite unexpectedly his leading lady passed away. Her colored maid, named Helen Banks, came to him for a job. She was hired on the spot and with the new Mrs. Leftwich and her children, "Banksy" went to a Connecticut farm for the summer.

When it came time to return to school, Patricia suffered from a mastoid infection. While her mother took the other children back to their father, "Banksy" took You'd never guess who advises Pat Ellis on her most intimate, personal problems!

Patricia on to New York to see a specialist. From that moment on, she never left the little girl's side. Because both of her parents were so busy, Patricia would spend summer vacations and take long trips with "Banksy." Gradually a bond of friendship sprang up. Mrs. Leftwich went away every chance she could, but she knew Patricia was in safe hands. "Banksy," forced to go out and work at the age of fourteen and starving for affection, poured all her kindliness out upon Patricia.

AT THE RIPE old age of thirteen, Patricia became a leading lady. She had appeared in school plays and loved acting. At Christmas time, instead of going home for the holidays, she wrote to her mother and begged permission to go to Chamberlain Brown and apply for a job in his stock company. Reluctantly her mother consented. Patricia remained with the stock company for a year. Max Arnow, then an agent and now the Warner Brothers casting director, asked to make a screen test of Patricia. Her parents didn't take it seriously for a moment but Patricia made the test, nevertheless. Two weeks later, accompanied by her mother and "Banksy," she was on her way to Hollywood. Patricia celebrated

(Continued on page 114)

If you had X-Ray Eyes

you'd never again take a harsh, quick-acting cathartic!

Be sure the laxative YOU take is correctly timed

You don't need to be a professor of physiology to figure this out. When you take a harsh, quick-acting cathartic that races through your alimentary tract in a couple of hours, you're shocking and jolting your system. No wonder its violent action leaves you weak and exhausted.

Unassimilated food is rushed through your intestines. Valuable fluids are drained away. The delicate membranes become irritated. And you have stomach pains. Drastic purgatives should be employed only upon the advice of a doctor.

What a correctly timed laxative means:

When we say that Ex-Lax is a correctly timed laxative, this is what we mean: Ex-Lax takes from 6 to 8 hours to act. You take one or two of the tablets when you go to bed. You sleep through the night . . . undisturbed! In the morning, Ex-Lax takes effect. And the effects are thorough and complete, yet so gentle and mild you hardly know you've taken a laxative.

No stomach pains. No "upset" feeling. No embarrassment during the day. And Ex-Lax is so easy to take—it tastes just like delicious chocolate.

Good for all ages

Ex-Lax is equally good for grown-ups and children . . . for every member of the family. It is used by more people than any other laxative in the whole world. The next time you need a laxative ask your druggist for a box of Ex-Lax. And refuse to accept a substitute. Ex-Lax costs only ten cents—unless you want the big family size, and that's a quarter.

When Nature forgets — remember

EX-LAX

THE ORIGINAL CHOCOLATED LAXATIVE

TRY EX-LAX AT OUR EXPENSE!
(Paste this on a penny postcard)
Ex-Lax, Inc., P. O. Box 170 MM-46
Times-Plaza Station, Brooklyn, N. Y.
I want to try Ex-Lax. Please send free sample.
Name..............................
Address..............................
City.......................... Age.......
(If you live in Canada, write Ex-Lax, Ltd., 736 Notre Dame St. W., Montreal)

THE HOUSE OF MORGAN

BY ADELE WHITELY FLETCHER

It isn't Fate, but Alma, who makes Frank's important decisions

FRANK MORGAN insists he wouldn't be where he is today if it weren't for his wife, Alma. And I insist Alma Morgan wouldn't be where she is today if it weren't for Frank. Actually we're both right. And that's my story.

There was a time, years ago when Frank played in stock in Detroit, when the Morgans didn't find it any too easy to get along. They had to save half of Frank's salary against the between-engagement days inevitable in any actor's life. They lived in an inexpensive flat, but their living expenses always seemed to be more than they had anticipated. And there was their boy, who scuffed all decency out of his shoes within a single week and ruined his new pants sliding into the home plate of a sand lot.

Besides, Frank and Alma had the flavor of discouragement with which to contend. Frank didn't get along the way some did. Already Katherine Cornell and Kenneth McKenna, who once had been members of his supporting casts, had forged ahead, made Broadway. Sometimes Frank thought he might have been better off had he remained in the minor executive position made for him in the family firm when he left Cornell. Often enough, he used to wonder if he wasn't just another conservative business man gone wrong; if he hadn't overemphasized that creative strain he always had convinced himself he possessed.

This was the state of affairs in the House of Morgan when a letter came from Frank's mother asking him to return to New York and take the place in the firm which had been vacant since his father's death some months before. Mrs. Wupperman (that, as you probably know, is Frank's right name) wrote that the Board of Directors had voted to pay him fifteen thousand dollars a year and to give him an appreciable block of company stock yearly in lieu of a bonus. Mrs. Wupperman thought this an offer which Frank, grubbing along in the theatre, could hardly refuse, providing he was in his right mind.

I SAW myself sitting behind my father's desk," Frank told me, "interviewing men of affairs. Answering any one of the three desk phones. Pouring a drink of water from the vacuum bottle, clearing my throat, saying, 'As I see it . . .!' And while none of this jibed with the picture I had of myself, I was, nevertheless, mindful that it represented security, and also that security should be the prime consideration for a man who has a wife and son."

His excellent work in "The Perfect Gentleman," "Naughty Marietta" and "I Live My Life" has earned star ranking for Frank Morgan in his forthcoming pictures. Left, a typical Frank Morgan pose. Below, with Mrs. Morgan at a preview.

Frank wished that letter never had come. However, keeping his face free of any expression which might commit him one way or the other, he handed it across the breakfast table to Alma. She read it, and also keeping her face free of any expression which might commit her one way or the other, handed it back to him.

"It's your happiness," she said simply.

"But," he argued tenderly, "it's your happiness, too."

Alma Morgan brushed her son's unruly hair (Continued on page 118)

IVORY FLAKES
IVORY FLAKES

CINDERELLA* tags these dresses "Wash with Ivory Flakes"

These adorable dresses are the heart's-desire of every little girl who sees them. What a thrill for your own small darling to be decked out in one of these lovable Cinderella frocks!... And don't you worry! Although the materials are fine, the colors dainty, the trimming tricks bright—they'll stay that way, if you give them gentle Ivory Flakes care. These Cinderella Frocks may be washed by hand or washing machine—in lukewarm suds of pure Ivory Flakes. That's the finest way to wash dainty little girls' clothes (as often as you please)—and the safest!

* Makers of the famous Cinderella Frocks for children recommend that they be washed in Ivory Flakes. Exact washing directions are tagged on each dress.

99 44/100% pure

EYE MAKE-UP
done in good taste

Maybelline
Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau
Maybelline
HARMLESS TEAR PROOF WILL NOT SMART THE EYES
BLACK

Beautiful eyes are the most important feature of any woman's charm—that is why fastidious women who wish to be exquisitely groomed in eye make-up demand Maybelline eye beauty aids. They know that the modern magic of these fine cosmetic creations gives them the natural appearance of beautiful eyes. Not to use Maybelline eye beauty aids is sheer neglect of charm. When you see what lovely long, dark lashes, softly shaded lids, and gracefully formed eyebrows Maybelline eye beauty aids can give you, you'll adore these exquisite eye cosmetics. You will want the entire line of Maybelline eye beauty aids to effect a perfect harmony in your complete eye make-up. Try them today—they will open your eyes to new beauty—eye make-up done in good taste!

The Mascara in BLACK, BROWN, or BLUE.

Ten cent sizes obtainable at all leading Ten Cent Stores.

Maybelline

MASCARA
EYE SHADOW . . . EYEBROW PENCIL
EYELASH TONIC CREAM . . . EYEBROW BRUSH

BETWEEN YOU 'N' ME

Between you and me
THIS IS A PRECIOUS SPACE!

You can make some pin money, if you'll sit down and write us an interesting letter.

Cash prizes for your movie thoughts!

Let us have your frank opinions, pro and con, on films, players, or any phase of motion pictures that interests you. Ten dollars in prizes will be awarded each month for the six most interesting letters submitted—1st prize, $5; five 2nd prizes of $1 each. Be sure to send your full name and address. Modern Screen reserves the right to publish letters in whole or in part. Address: Between You and Me, Modern Screen, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

$5 Prize Letter
The Public Be Praised

Films have improved considerably of late, but so have audiences! They have proved this by taking more kindly to simple pictures such as "Alice Adams" and "Little Women"; by their appreciation of historical subjects such as "Henry the Eighth"; by their admiration for actors who have brilliant technique rather than good looks; by acclaiming the superb dancing of Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers and Eleanor Powell and so helping to banish the stupidities of the Busby Berkeley creations; and by welcoming operatic stars of the calibre of Lawrence Tibbett, Lily Pons and Grace Moore.

Hollywood is making bigger and better pictures and is finding a receptive movie public. No longer is the name of a big star relied upon to carry a picture to success. Particular attention is given to casting, with "bit" parts filled by prominent players.

British pictures are improving and finding favor in the eyes of American filmgoers. Hollywood, fired by strong competition from across the Atlantic, is putting on a big show. 1936 is going to be a banner year in motion pictures. Hail to a new era and farewell to cheap claptrap pictures!—Wiley Ballard, Charlotte, N. C.

(We agree with you—but heartily.)

$1 Prize Letter
A Code of Ethics for Moviegoers?

Have you ever ploughed your way gropingly over an assortment of knees, legs, and feet to locate a seat somewhere over there in the darkness of a movie audience? Have you ever sat in front of an excited youngster who kicked your chair leg with the rapidity and regularity of a native beating a tom-tom?

Have you ever glared indignantly at some disturbing menace who proceeded to open a cellophane-wrapped confection which crackled noisily right when the dialogue reached a new high in interest? Or worse yet, have you ever used all your will power to refrain from screaming when some thoughtless individual chewed and smacked relentlessly away on a piece of pungent and sickeningly scented gum?

Have you ever played peek-a-boo behind the heads of an amorous couple who cooed and petted during the entire performance? I say have you ever? Grrrrrrr.

Recently a code of ethics for safe driving has been highly publicized. Personally, I think a code of ethics, promoted by the theatre managements and embodying rules for silence and courtesy, would go a long way towards greater enjoyment for the movie public in general.—Harriet Bossard, Lynbrook, N. Y.

(You have nothing on a friend of ours cause t'other afternoon she was sitting next to a housewife who was busy shelling peas, of all things, during the entire show. Now, if you'd had that to cope with in your cinema travels, you'd have our deepest sympathy.)

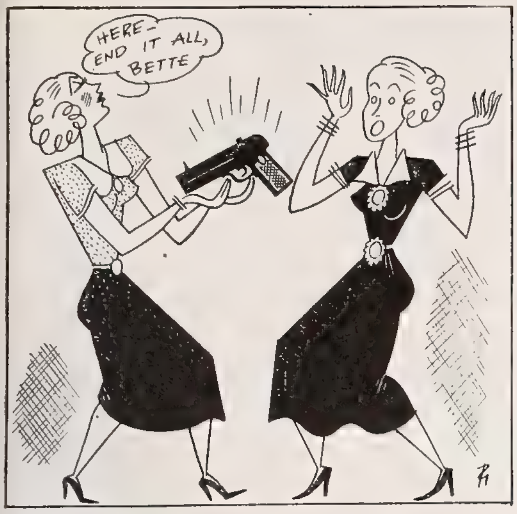
MOVIE
TICKETS
THE PATRONS OF THE MOVIES ARE MORONS

A young lady from Lynbrook turns up her nose at her neighbors at picture shows.

$1 Prize Letter
Them's Fightin' Woids

Between you and me, I'm fed up. I'm fed up with people who are fed up with



HERE—END IT ALL, BETTE

How an Indiana fan reacted after reading our recent interview with Bette Davis!

this actress or that actor. Granted that there are screen stars who, for the general good of the world, should be given the gate. But why must movie fans clutter up the columns of MODERN SCREEN with their demands that such stars be sent on a one-way trip to Siberia or other remote regions? Such demands will do more good in the producers' offices. If Moo V. Fan "just can't stand" Miss Whoozis or Mr. What's-his-name, he would be a lot happier and money ahead if, when his pet peeve came to town, he would stay home and play dominoes instead of spending money on a show that he knows he won't enjoy and then tear home and spend three cents more on a complaint to "Between You and Me."

I am sure that I'm not the only reader of MODERN SCREEN who is tired of people who take up space with their complaints that could better be filled with real news by Leo T. or more of those candid shots by Scotty.—James Elliott, Dallas, Texas.

(Come on, Modern Screen-ers, you're not going to let this gent from Texas get away with that, are you? Or are you?)

$1 Prize Letter
Blame Us for One Broken New Year's Resolution!

To think my favorite movie magazine would be the cause of my breaking my New Year's resolution. I had determined to "speak no evil, hear no evil, and see no evil" this year. And then came Bette Davis' enlightening remarks in your February issue consigning women with careers to be shot.

I have witnessed several of Miss Davis' screen performances and had just forced myself to recognize her ability in spite of my thorough dislike of her, when she makes these statements concerning women.

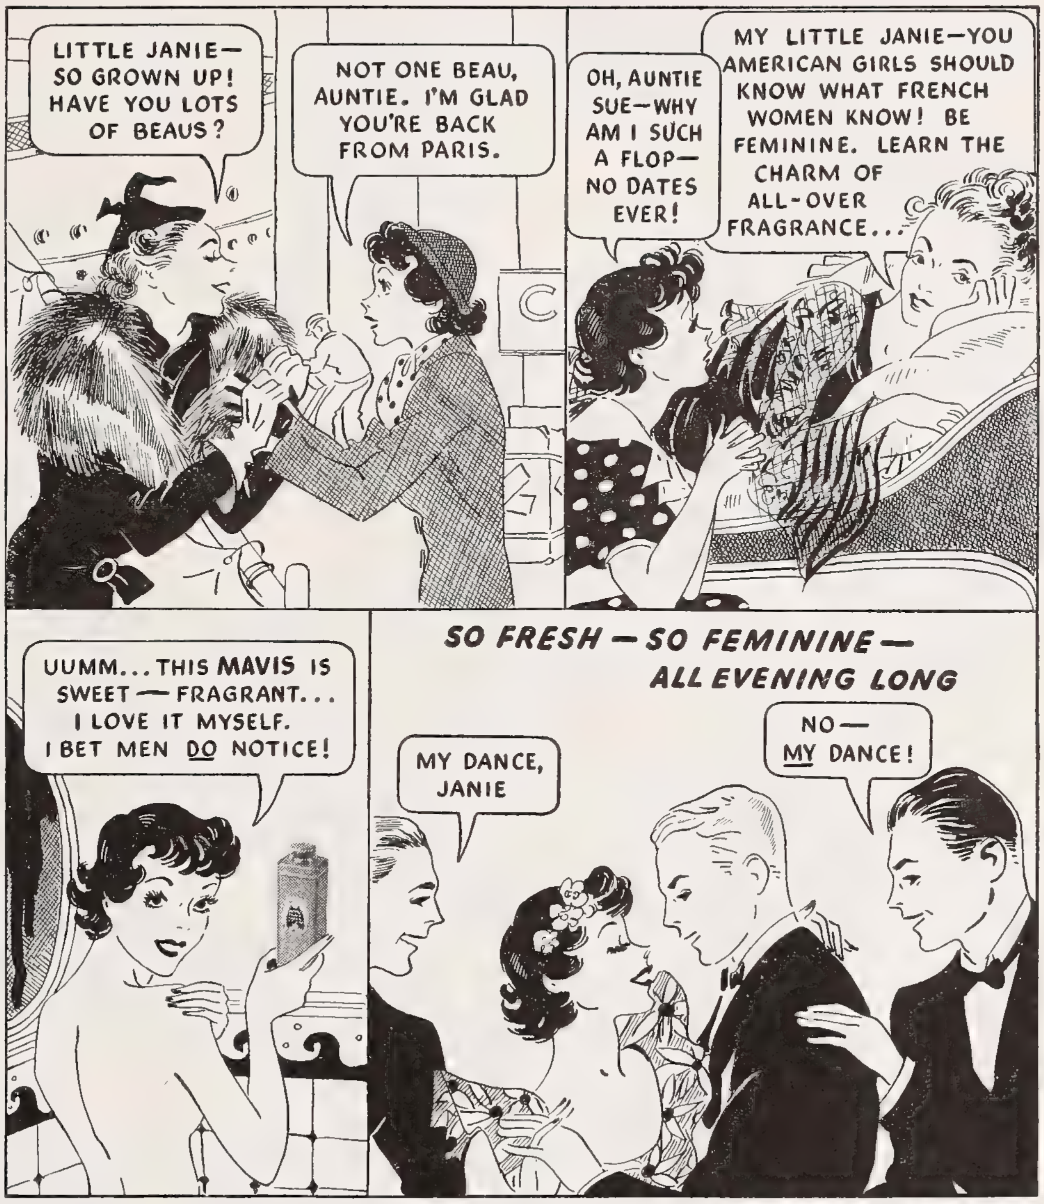
Don't you have a comic section that you could substitute when you receive such information from a conceited star like Miss D? I really believe she would find no trouble in retiring from her "career." I am sure her public would survive very well.

I've been a cat, but when I think of the many truly great women, who have given their lives to make this world a happier place to live in, being discussed by a young, conceited, intolerant person like Miss Davis, I wonder who has a right to live.—D. H. Conrad, Indianapolis, Ind.

(Gosh, but we're sorry! We had no idea that a few words from Miss Davis' lips would cause anyone any mental scruples.)

(Continued on page 91)

From Heartache to HEART-THROBS



LITTLE JANIE—SO GROWN UP! HAVE YOU LOTS OF BEAUS?
NOT ONE BEAU, AUNTIE. I'M GLAD YOU'RE BACK FROM PARIS.
OH, AUNTIE SUE—WHY AM I SUCH A FLOP—NO DATES EVER!
MY LITTLE JANIE—YOU AMERICAN GIRLS SHOULD KNOW WHAT FRENCH WOMEN KNOW! BE FEMININE. LEARN THE CHARM OF ALL-OVER FRAGRANCE...
UUMM...THIS MAVIS IS SWEET—FRAGRANT... I LOVE IT MYSELF. I BET MEN DO NOTICE!
SO FRESH—SO FEMININE—ALL EVENING LONG
MY DANCE, JANIE
NO—MY DANCE!

Before you dress! . . . clothe yourself with the lasting fragrance of MAVIS

Recipe for feminine charm . . . a daily dusting with the fragrant glamour of Mavis. Mavis is more than a talcum—so protective to your skin, but with the added allure of tantalizing Parisian fragrance. You'll love the velvety feel of Mavis, and the way it protects your skin from dryness. Be lovely, be feminine, keep the constant flower-like freshness that men adore—try Mavis!

Mavis Talcum in 25¢, 50¢ and $1 sizes at drug and department stores—convenient 10¢ size at 5-and-10¢ stores. We invite you to try Mavis—convenient coupon below.

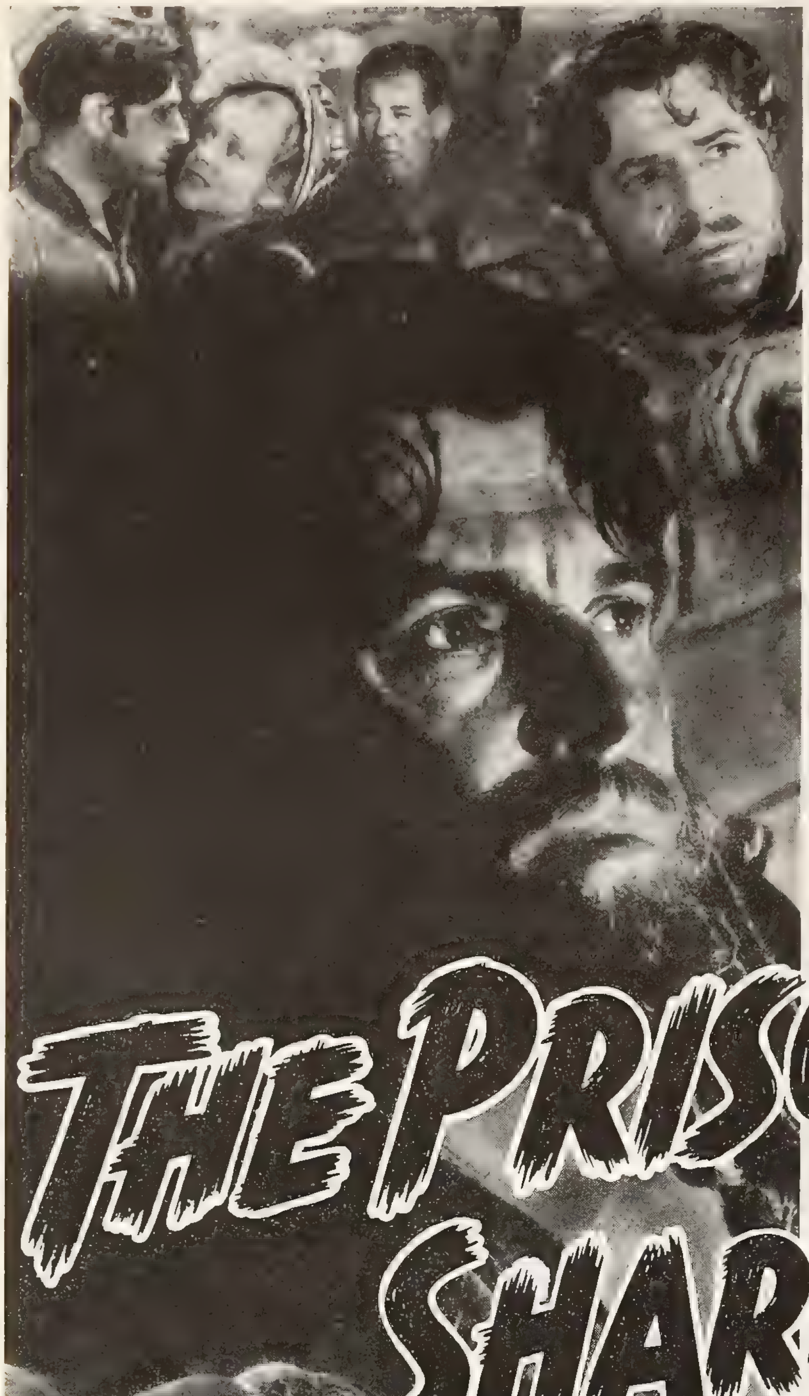
MAVIS
Genuine Mavis Talcum
IN THE RED CONTAINER

V. VIVAUDOU, INC.,
580 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

I enclose 10¢. Please send by return mail the convenient size of Mavis Talcum—so I can try its fragrant loveliness.

Name
Address
City
State

MM-4



TORTURED
BY A NATION FOR HIS ACT OF MERCY!

Tricked by fate into helping an assassin, an innocent man is torn from the woman he loves...shackled... condemned to a living death on a fever island where brutes are masters and sharks are guards!

THE STARK DRAMA
of "I am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang"

THE MIGHTY POWER of "Les Miserables"

THE PRISONER of SHARK ISLAND

Starring WARNER
BAXTER
with GLORIA STUART
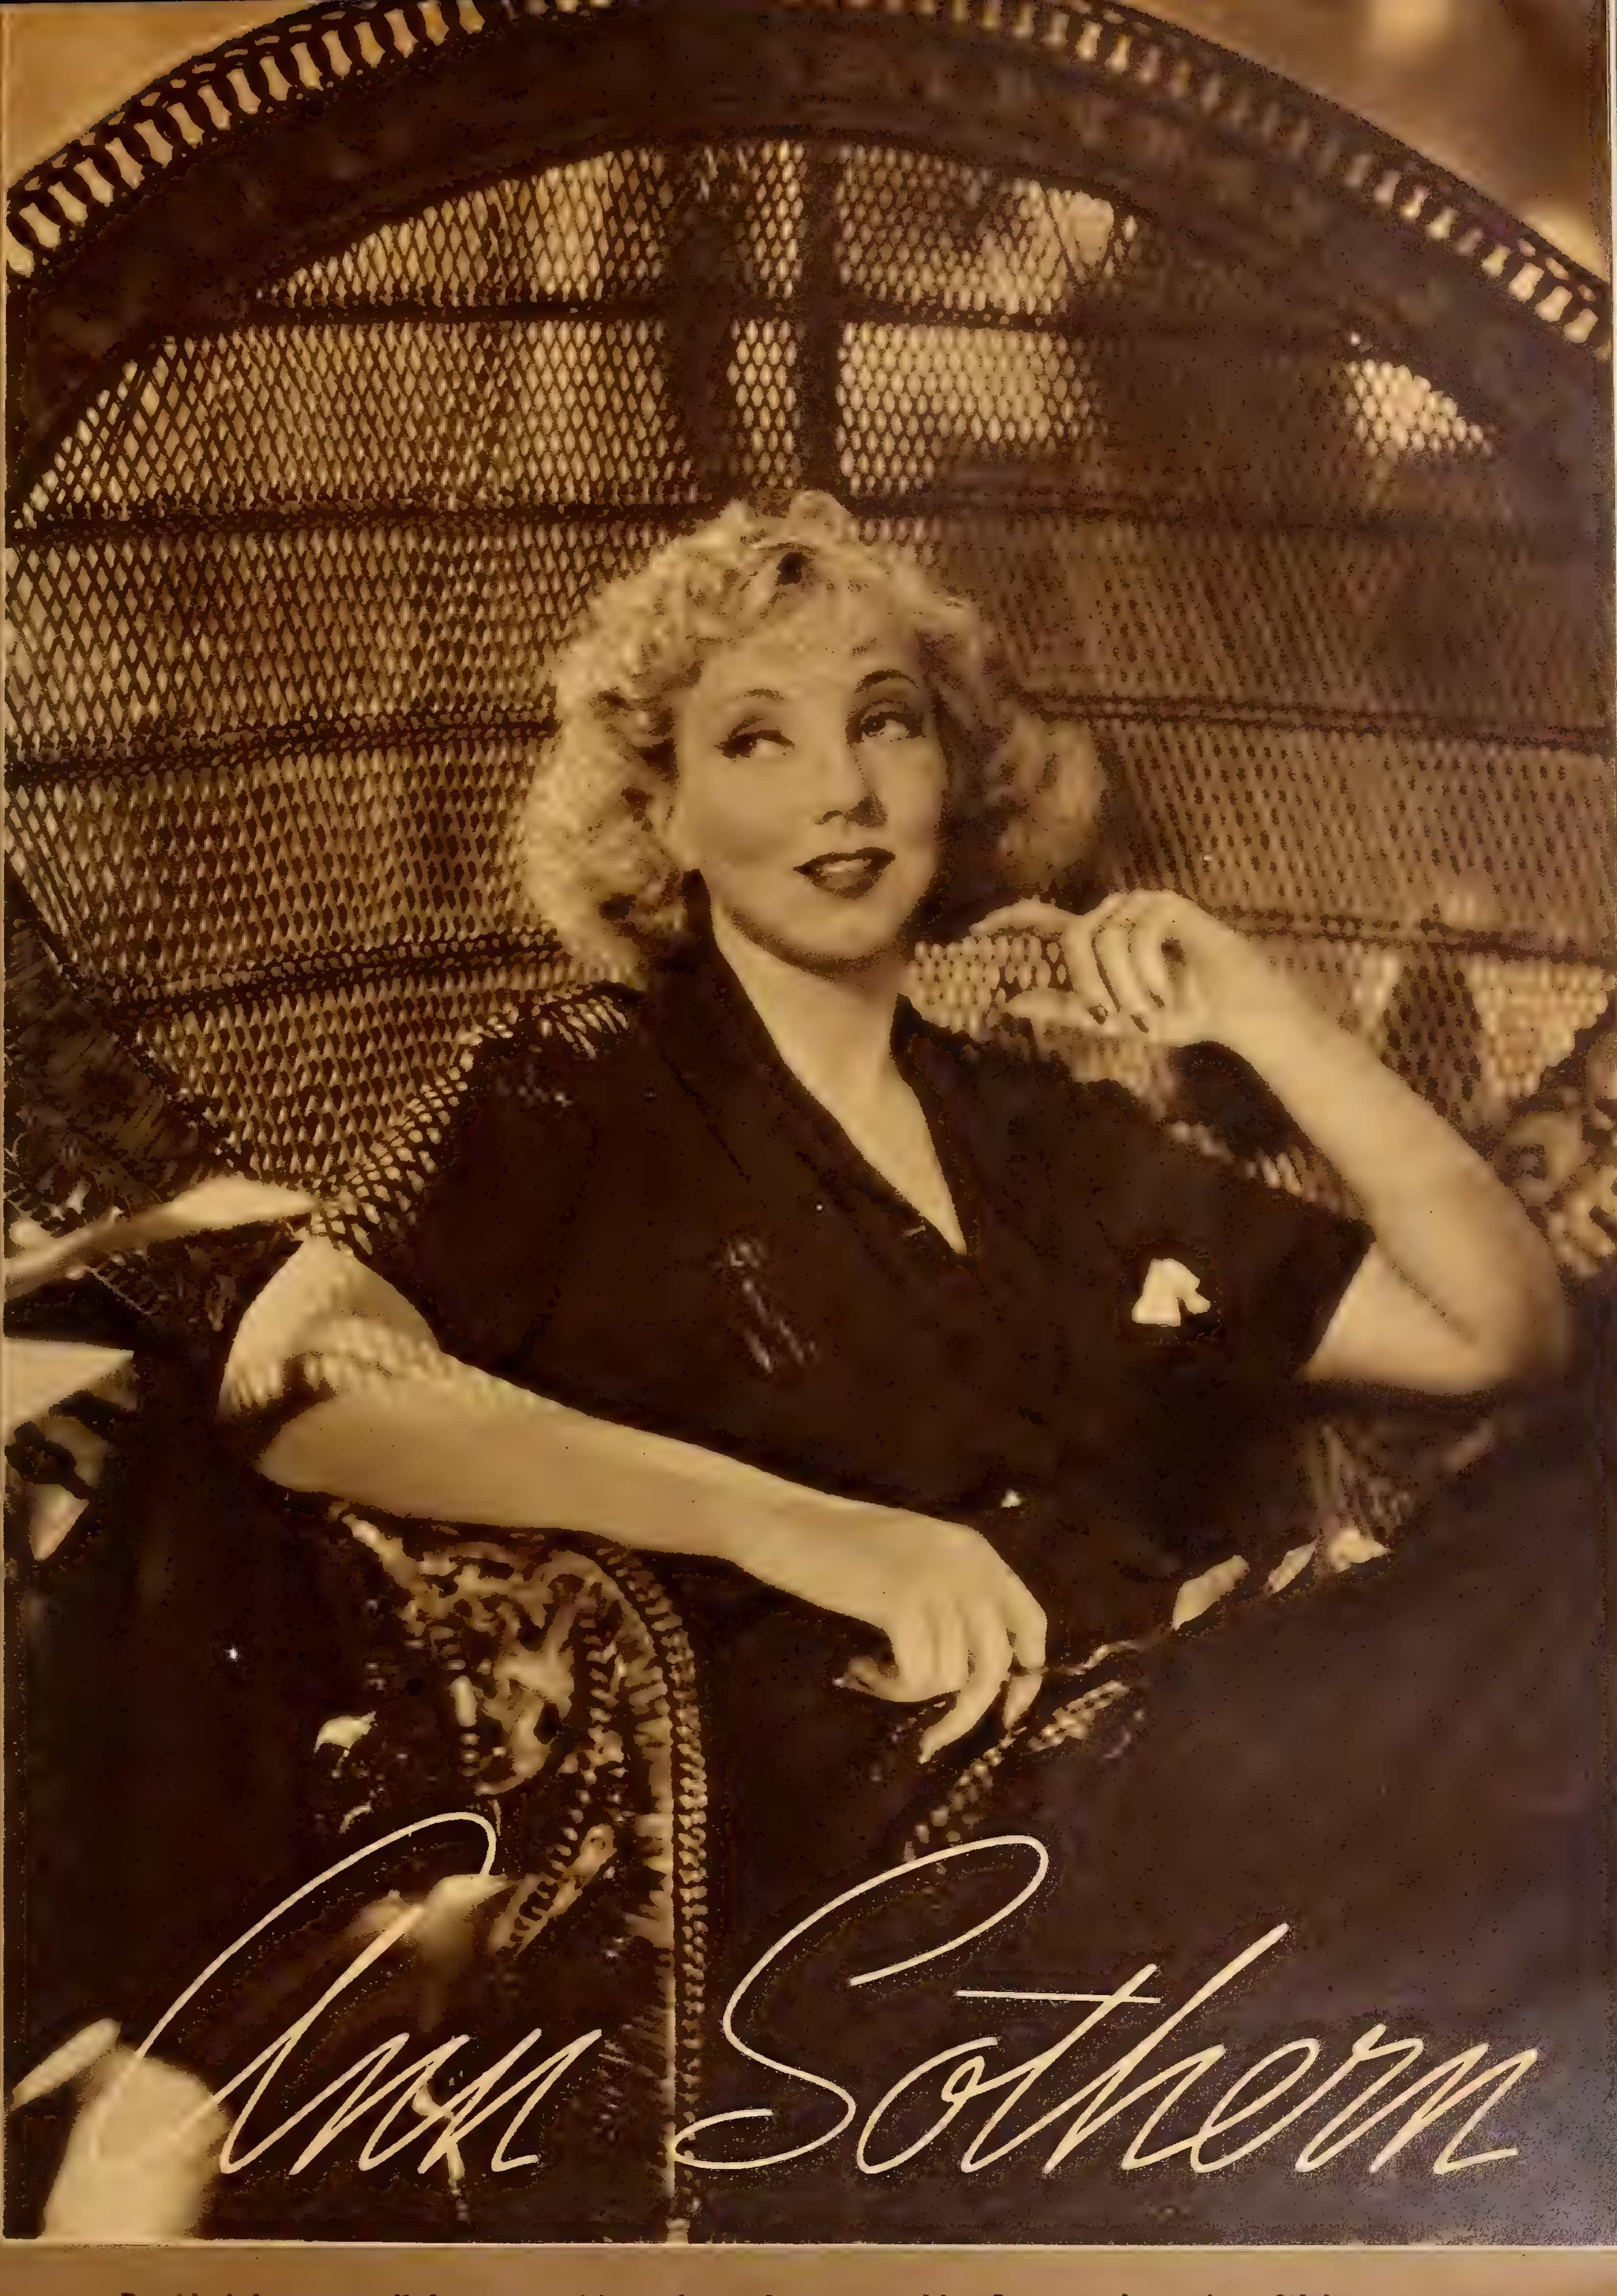
CLAUDE GILLINGWATER
ARTHUR BYRON
O. P. HEGGIE
HARRY CAREY
AND A CAST OF ONE THOUSAND

A DARRYL F. ZANUCK
20th CENTURY PRODUCTION

20th CENTURY FOX

Presented by Joseph M. Schenck
Directed by John Ford
Associate Producer and Screen Play by Nunnally Johnson
Based on the life of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd

The True Story of a Nation's Hidden Shame



Brief holidays are all that a capable and popular actress like Ann can hope for. With two pictures just completed, the Sothern hurried into still a third, "Don't Gamble with Love," in which Bruce Cabot is her teammate. The dashing, young Roger Pryor is still her constant interest.

Janet Gaynor, Dick Powell

Meet the charming "Small Town Girl!" Yes, it's Janet Gaynor again and looking gayer than she has in ages. Working at a new studio for the first time in a number of years, Janet seems to be keyed up to a new vivacity. Her leading man is none other than that young heartbreaker, Bob Taylor. This should be an exciting team. As for Dick Powell, this popular gent is twosoming again with his and the fans' favorite screen girl friend, Ruby Keeler, and the opus is "Colleen." Any songs in it? Well, with Dick, what do you think?

Nelson Eddy
Jean Parker

Nelson Eddy in "civies" again after days of wearing the uniform of the stalwart Canadian Mounted Police for "Rose Marie." Eddy shouldn't let so many months go by between pictures, especially when the fans clamor so loudly for him. And Jean Parker, having had the fun of a trip to England to play in "The Ghost Goes West" with Robert Donat, is back home and busy with Fred Stone in "Farmer in the Dell."

You won't recognize the smooth Tone head when you see him all curled up for "Princess Charming" with Grace Moore. And it gives him an unexpectedly dashing foreign air for one so American. Franchot works hard with excellent results, as usual.

Franchot Tone

Little Miss T. goes very nautical for her beguiling role of granddaughter in "Captain January." Guy Kibbee is the lighthouse keeper of that beloved old tale. And just wait 'til you see Buddy Ebsen and Shirley dance together. They're too swell!

Shirley Temple

JEAN HARLOW IS JEALOUS OF YOU

The world should be her oyster, but she thinks you are the people who have all the luck!

BY GLADYS HALL

JEAN HARLOW is jealous of all you girls, city-bred or small-town, who lead perfectly normal, natural lives—who do your jobs, close your desks when the work is done, relax, have a good time and are able to forget how your face looks, what the public is thinking of your most casual gestures and whether you should be getting nine hours' sleep instead of three.

She envies you your leisure, your chance to develop yourselves, your real selves and not your professional personalities. She envies you your right to live minus an audience which never closes its eyes and never goes home from a show on which no curtain of privacy ever drops.

Jean knows what you are thinking—that she has fame, success, luxuries, youth, beauty and love, and that upon her shining head the treasures of the earth are heaped in boundless good measure. . . .

For these things you envy her, and reasonably. Jean doesn't minimize these blessings. She doesn't say that she "longs to get away from it all." Not on your life. Jean's sane, crystal-clear mind functions far too honestly for that. On the contrary, she says she wouldn't get away from it if she could. The excitements of her life have become necessary to her. She couldn't live comfortably, now, without her half-hour engagement book, the continuous ringing of telephones, conferences, fittings, interviews, photographs, et al.

And she loves the work itself.

But—she does wish that she had never begun it at all. Now that she has begun she will never stop of her own volition—she can't. She doesn't know why, except that it is like a virus in the blood which cannot be ejected.

JEAN FEELS what all public characters feel, public characters who are really normal, private citizens at heart.

She is a simple person. And her envy of you other girls is predicated upon one thing—that she is completely natural and to be forced, however great the rewards, to lead a completely unnatural life just plain gets on the Harlow nerves.

(Continued on page 102)

Jean with the ever-devoted Bill Powell.

And with Spencer Tracy in a scene from "Riffraff."

Emilie
Yvonne

At right, no Hollywood night life for Emilie, Yvonne, Cecile, Annette and Marie! These five starlets retire early. Nor has their forthcoming debut in "The Country Doctor" made these screen ingenues even the least bit self-conscious. Cameras are just another toy to them!

AN OFF-SCREEN GLIMPSE OF THE Quints

The Mam'selles Dionne are completely unruffled by fame, stardom and riches

Copyright 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

Cecile
Annette
Marie

Below, left and right, the five-star babies have fun. That's Yvonne, the rascal, making eyes at the cameraman. And at the right, Cecile and Marie, on either end, look wistful, but Emile sniffs the food, Yvonne laughs gaily and Annette works on a leg!

Cary Grant, once married, again enjoys the freedom of a popular man-about-town. But does he like it?

Cary may skip trite social formalities, but he never fails to remember the little, thoughtful gestures to his friends. He's been making an English picture.

BACHELOR AT LARGE

BY VIVIAN HOWARD

WHEN I asked Mae West what she thought of Cary Grant, she was cryptic. "Cary Grant is a flash," she said and left me to figure it out. Looking at him gives one an immediate idea of what Mae meant: flashing black eyes, white teeth, a flashing smile over an unexpected dimple, all of which is backed up by boyish flashes of wit, and a continual over-supply of bubbling good spirits.

He doesn't walk, he bounds. His loping stride carries him to his destination far ahead of those earthbound souls who content themselves with walking. And while he waits for them to catch up with him, instead of marking time, he taps out an original routine and hums snatches of the latest popular song to restrain his natural impatience.

Despite his romantic appearance, this boyish impatience prevents him from playing the great and attentive lover in private life. Since details rather bore him, and since he's also apt to be somewhat absent-minded, his current lady friend (whoever she may be—for they change periodically) finds him a charming but somewhat irresponsible and unpredictable courtier. Should he be taking her out to dine, she's lucky if he arrives at her home only a half hour late. It seldom, if ever, occurs to him to send her a corsage to wear. And if the thought does strike him, as he's taking an opponent to town in a hot set of tennis or ping-pong (usually this happens five minutes before he's due to call for his charmer—and he not even shaved or showered!), he arrives, minus flowers. Then he and his lady, together, spend half an hour or so hunting for just the right florist.

IT'S NOT that Cary is lacking in natural courtesy or thoughtfulness. It is simply that this type of conventional behavior doesn't seem of fundamental importance to him. His natural spontaneity rebels at such stiff formalities. He far prefers to act on the spur of the moment.

So that, having planned to spend a week-end at some elaborate house party in Malibu, and having invited a girl to go along—the lady sits and waits for Cary for two hours—they being due at their host's house at, say—eight o'clock Saturday evening. Her temperature falls steadily and her ire rises. At ten o'clock, the telephone rings. It's Cary. He can't understand her frigid tone, because he and two other couples have just decided that it would be much more fun to ditch the boring affair and start off for Arrowhead, or Arizona, or Palm Springs or a Mexican fishing trip. And will she please throw some old clothes in her overnight bag, they'll be right over!

I've yet to meet the girl who hasn't! Despite her annoyance, her pride, and her vows never to see him again. For Cary has that fatal fascination, if you know what I mean!

Although Cary would deny it, emphatically, he is extremely idealistic in regard to women. He loathes blatancy, vulgarity, and scatter-brained butterflies. The women whom he truly admires are those who primarily are companionable, have great understanding and tolerance—particularly of impulsive chaps like Cary.

Capable of great and loyal friendship, he numbers among his closest friends, two or three women whose appeal is in no way dependent upon beauty or fame. And these go on being important to him through the thick and thin of his frequent romantic flare-ups with his changing heart interests. His tender thoughtfulness, toward these women, is very touching (Cary would writhe if he knew that adjective had been used to describe his perfectly natural impulses).

ONE OF these close women friends was a secretary at Paramount when Cary first arrived in Hollywood. He admired her sane intelligence, he depended upon her judgment. He constantly turned to her for advice.

Being new in Hollywood, and extremely sensitive, he feared people would misunderstand him. He dreaded that he might "do the wrong thing." When he first became mildly successful and his option at the studio had been taken up, he wanted to buy a new car. He had been driving an old sports model and had been very happy in it—but alas!—the top was now leaking and the whole thing was practically falling to pieces. But, until his secretary friend convinced him he was being supersensitive, he put off doing anything about a new one, because he was afraid people would think he'd "gone Hollywood."

To her also, he delegated the difficult task of first judging his performances in the previews of each new picture he made. Each (Continued on page 94)

Left, Betty Furness seems to be the girl fickle Cary is concentrating upon right now. And right, with Katharine Hepburn in "Sylvia Scarlett," his most successful picture to date.

Paul Cavanagh came to some amazing conclusions about Mae, playing with her in "Goin' to Town."

HAS MAE WEST A DUAL PERSONALITY?

Mae advises you to go after your man boldly, but Hollywood's smoothest gents claim she doesn't practice what she preaches

BY HILARY LYNN

THE PURPOSE of this story is to report two conversations. Just that. You can draw your own conclusions. They're bound to be interesting!

"The reason people go for my pictures in a big way is that I don't make 'em afraid of sex. Know what I mean?"

I didn't . . . quite. So Mae went on to elaborate.

"I take sex with a laugh. I don't let it get me. Get me?"

I was beginning to catch on.

In a turquoise satin negligee, very simple but very Patou, Mae was lounging in her boudoir—a perfect atmosphere for our conversation.

It was a gold and white boudoir—even to the telephone. White magnolias and gardenias in gold and white vases. A tantalizing scent like heavy tropical flowers touched with moonlight. Soft white rugs on the floor. The sparkle of crystal candelabra. Mirrors lining the walls. Even a mirror above the white, satin-covered bed on which Mae was relaxing, as disturbingly radiant as Cleo and Delilah all rolled into one.

For the first time I had a close-up of Mae's eyes. They're the poet's favorite dewy violet—and the lashes, like Garbo's (as was just recently revealed after all these years of silence) are not the handiwork of a make-up man—they're the real McCoy. Black, long, silky, and with that devastating upswing.

"Love and sex may be considered old-fashioned by some," continued Mae, "but they still come in for their quota of after-dinner conversation along with the Italo-Ethiopian situation and what John Barrymore's next move might be.

"Everybody has his pet theory about how sex should be presented on the screen. Some say it should be done away with entirely. Personally," and here Mae gave me one of those slow, smouldering glances and lazily stretched her white arms, "I think that might offer difficulties. Others say it should be camouflaged. I might go for that theory myself some day. Some say it isn't good for the kiddies. Well, not in overdoses.

AND WHO hasn't heard the old gag that, 'there's too much sex in the movies and not enough good, clean fun? Give us more Shirley Temple and Westerns by Zane Grey.'

"While others declare: 'We'll take a little sex with our movies, but we'll take it wrapped in orange blossoms and yards of Rosepoint lace. We'd like it set in a cottage for two, in a room with a view—.' You know, the way they staged it when Gaynor and Farrell were screen lovey-doveying.

"I've even met the kind of fellahs who like to see sex rear its wicked head in a cosmopolitan atmosphere, where ladies with foreign accents and husbands who don't understand them, slither in and out of art museums, officers' balls, and hot houses filled with orchids and tiger lilies.

"Then again, some folks like it sprinkled with tears, pale shining eyes and choking farewells. The 'it's-better-to-have-loved-and-lost-than-never-to-have-loved-at-all' sort of thing. Like those pictures, (Continued on page 98)

Courtesy N. Y. American

Buddy's Girl Friday is Walter Winchell's, too.

YOUR GIRL FRIDAY'S BUDDY

BY CHARLES DARNTON

Buddy Ebsen's fast feet are not this gent's only claim to fame

Pint-sized Shirley and six-foot Buddy tap their way through "Captain January."

BY ALL the rules of Horatio Alger this story really ought to be titled "Small Town Boy Makes Good." For droll Buddy Ebsen, slow of tongue but fast of feet, has made a dancing hit second only to that of the incomparable Eleanor Powell in "Broadway Melody of 1936." He is Hollywood's homeliest—and funniest—find in many a moon.

Orchids to Walter Winchell. Why? Well, you see, Buddy is a Winchell happy event. Not that my old friend Walter is his pappy. But that lynx-eyed columnist, once a hoofer himself, discovered him. Nor is this all. Because of that Columbusing a few years back, Buddy rates a double happy event. Believe it or not, this plain and simple newcomer to the screen is, of all things, the husband of no less a sophisticate than W. W.'s famed "Girl Friday"!

Imagine finding her sitting primly in their Westwood home while Buddy unlimbered himself on a sofa, when I dropped in for a neighborly call. Paradoxically, two persons farther apart couldn't possibly be closer together.

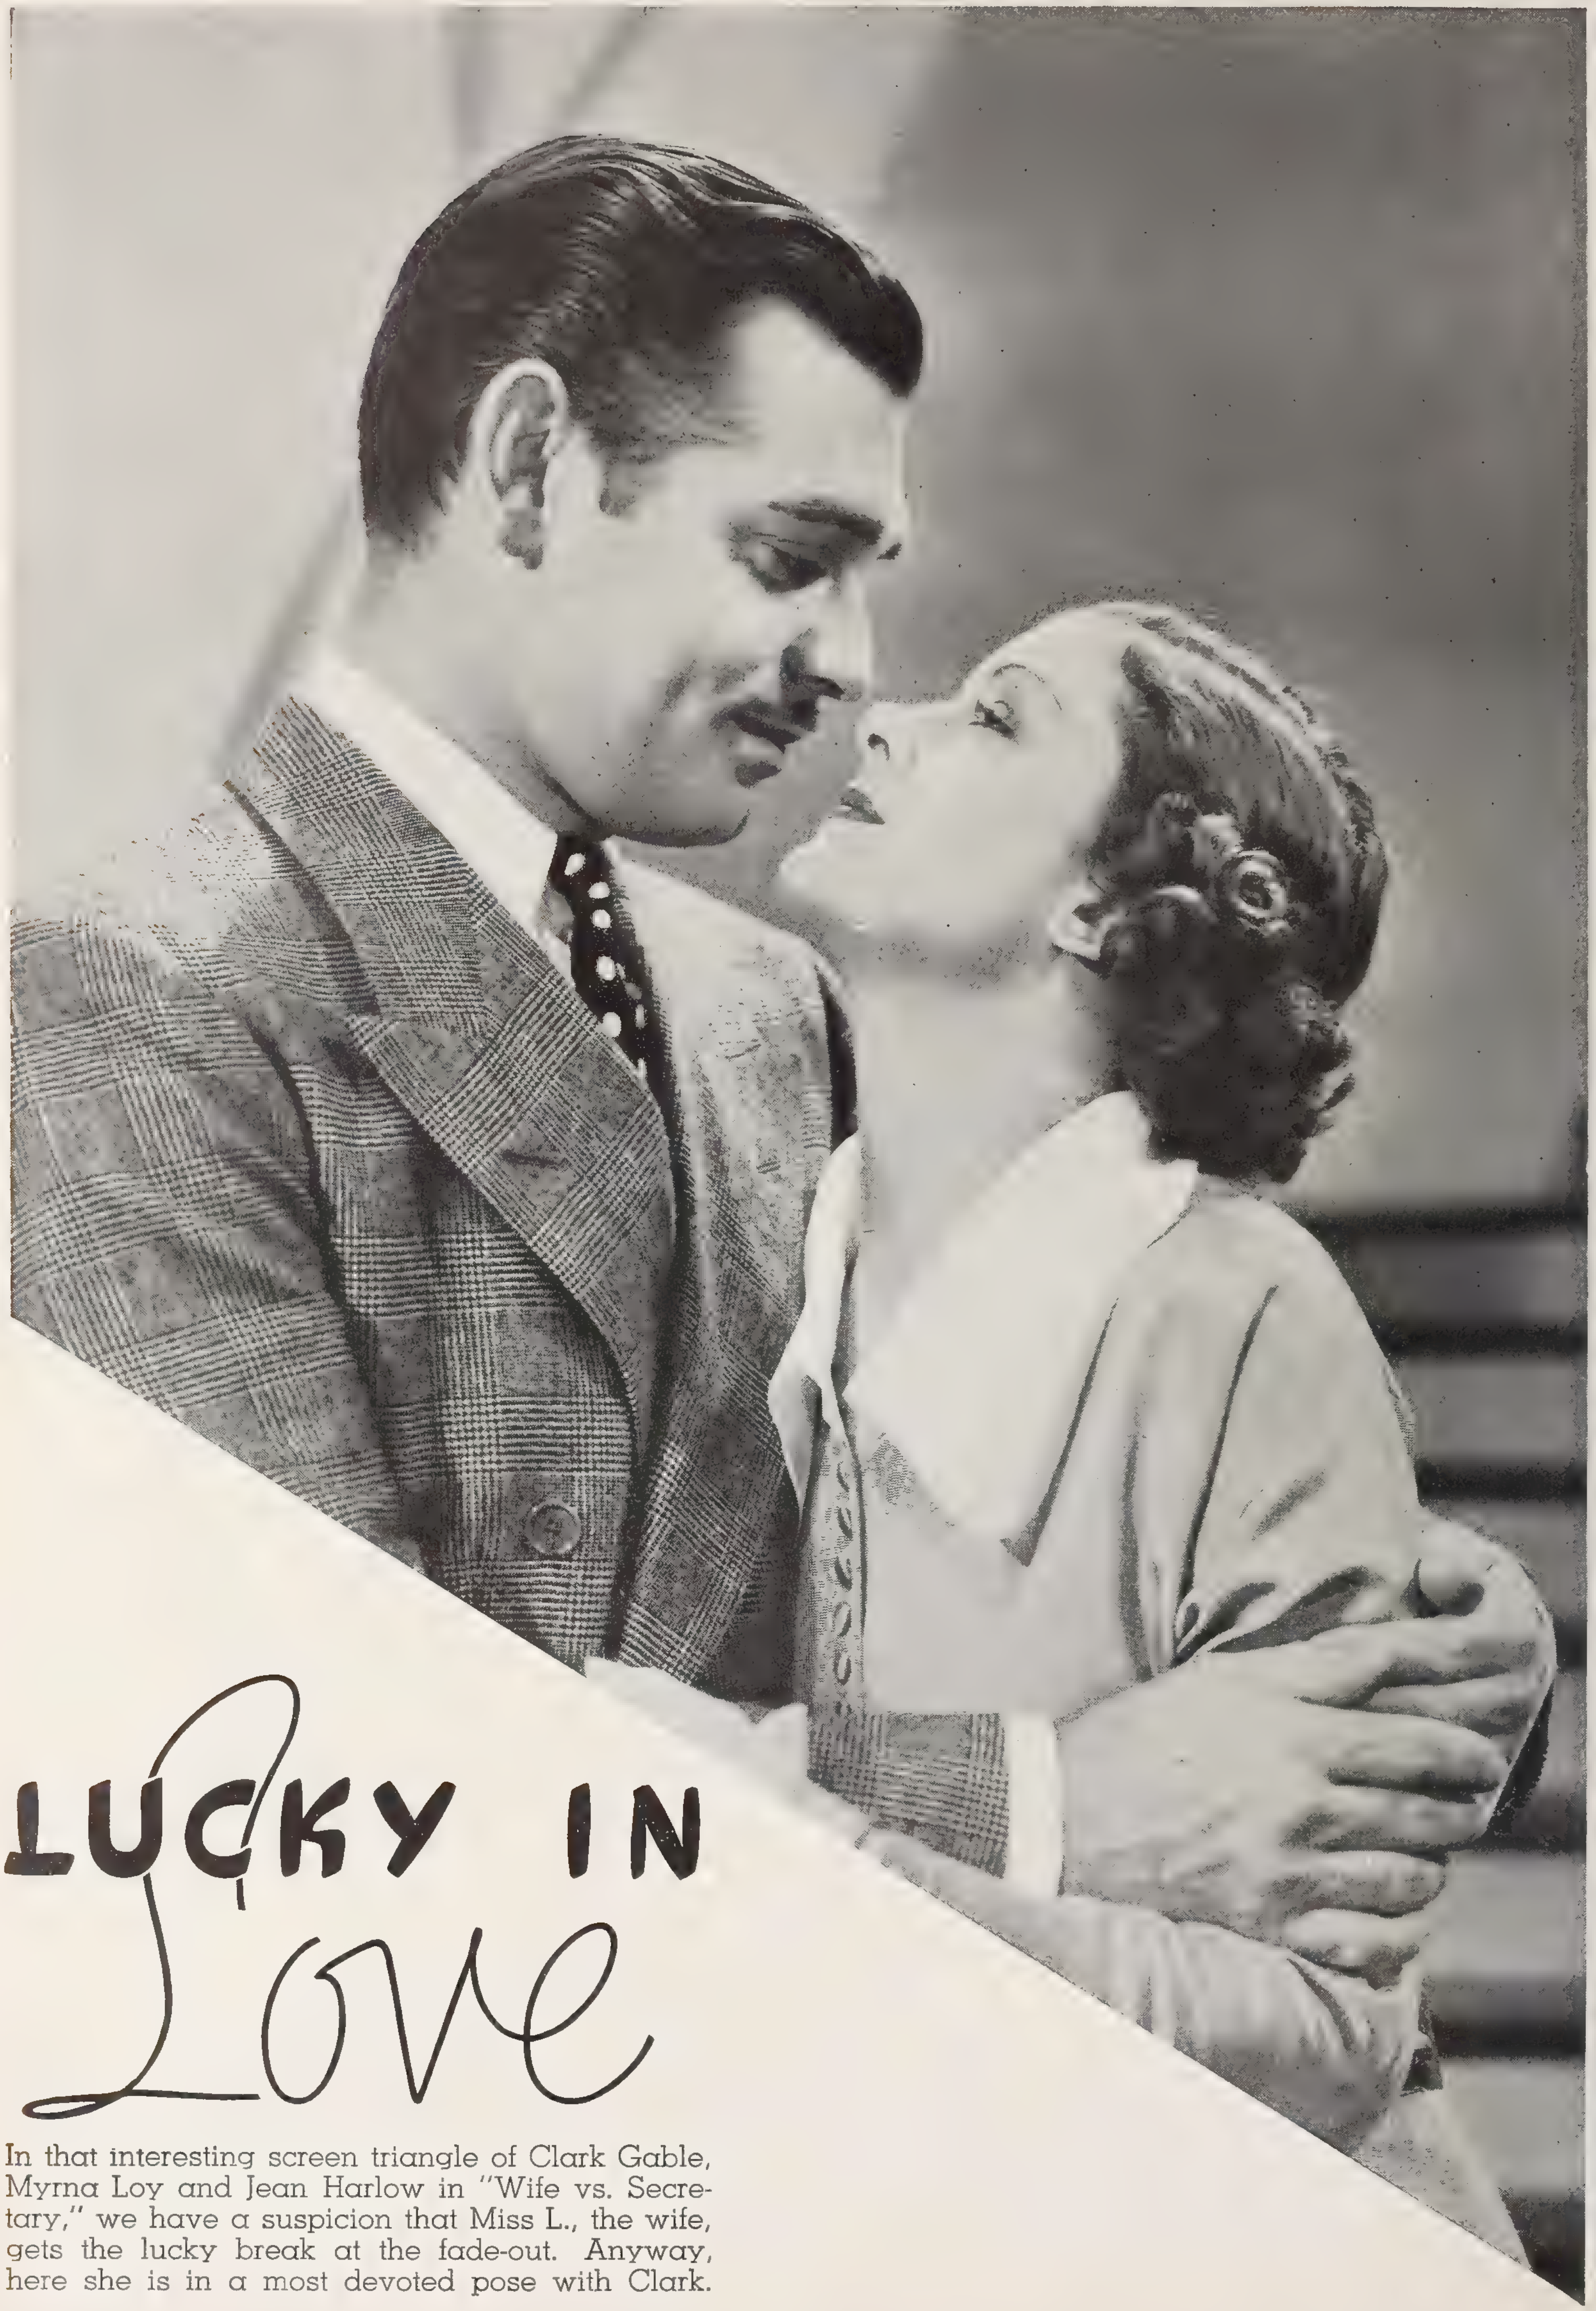
THAT UNIQUE domestic scene offered a rare study in contrasts. There was the little woman, as Buddy may call her if he's a brave man, with all Broadway at her finger-tips, and there was her hubby looking for all the world as though he'd never been off Main Street.

They had me blinking. It wasn't hard to recognize Buddy—for except that he'd had a hair-cut he was just as advertised. But Your Girl Friday, demure, wren-like, sheltered, didn't in the least suggest her worldly-wise alter ego, indeed she seemed (Continued on page 72)

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"

A new treat awaits movie fans, judging from Hollywood reports about Paramount's "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda have the star roles supported by Fred Stone, Nigel Bruce, Robert Barret, Fuzzy Knight and Little Spanky McFarland. Henry Hathaway, brilliant director of "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," has the directorial assignment. Walter Wanger produces. Most interesting, is the fact that "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is the first full-length outdoor romantic drama to be produced in natural color*. Those who have seen it say the scenes are breath-taking in their beauty.

* Technicolor process



LUCKY IN Love

In that interesting screen triangle of Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Jean Harlow in "Wife vs. Secretary," we have a suspicion that Miss L., the wife, gets the lucky break at the fade-out. Anyway, here she is in a most devoted pose with Clark.

"Charmed, I'M SURE"

What happens when star meets star in Hollywood? Several celebrities tell their funny experiences

Zasu Pitts didn't meet her next door neighbor, Claudette Colbert, for over a year—and when she did! Irene Dunne's maid had to introduce her to the star she wanted most to meet. And one of Joan Bennett's best friends today is a star who went out of her way to meet Joan. Below, left to right, Zasu, Irene and Joan.

BY KATHERINE ALBERT

MY FRIEND, who had never been there, and I were talking about Hollywood the other day. She asked me if Kay Francis and Janet Gaynor were good friends.

"I don't know," I said. "I don't believe they've ever met."

She was appalled at that. "Never met? But they are both products of Hollywood—both famous stars. Surely, no introduction would be necessary!"

She talked on. She could not believe that it was possible for one star in Hollywood not to know every other star. Certainly, she reasoned, they were just one big family. Not always a happy family perhaps—they might have their fights and feuds—but not to know each other . . . Well!

A few days later I was chatting with Claudette Colbert and I told her of my friend's misapprehension. "It is silly that we all don't know each other, isn't it?" Claudette said. "Often it causes embarrassing situations."

And that gave me the idea that it might be fun to discover just how these world-famous people, whom everybody knows, get to meet each other.

For a year Claudette Colbert and Zasu Pitts had been next door neighbors. Yet, except for the times when each had seen the other's likeness on the screen, they had never so much as caught a glimpse of each other. Hollywood etiquette did not demand that Zasu call on Claudette when she moved next door. Both were busy women. There is no time for this sort of social flubdubbery in the film capital. Of course, Zasu knew that Claudette was her neighbor. If there were any sugar borrowing or back-fence talk, it was done by the servants.

And then, after a year of such neighborly proximity, they actually saw each other on the Paramount lot. They both stared, curiously—just as you would stare if you saw Claudette Colbert or Zasu (Continued on page 122)

GOSSIP BY LEO TOWNSEND

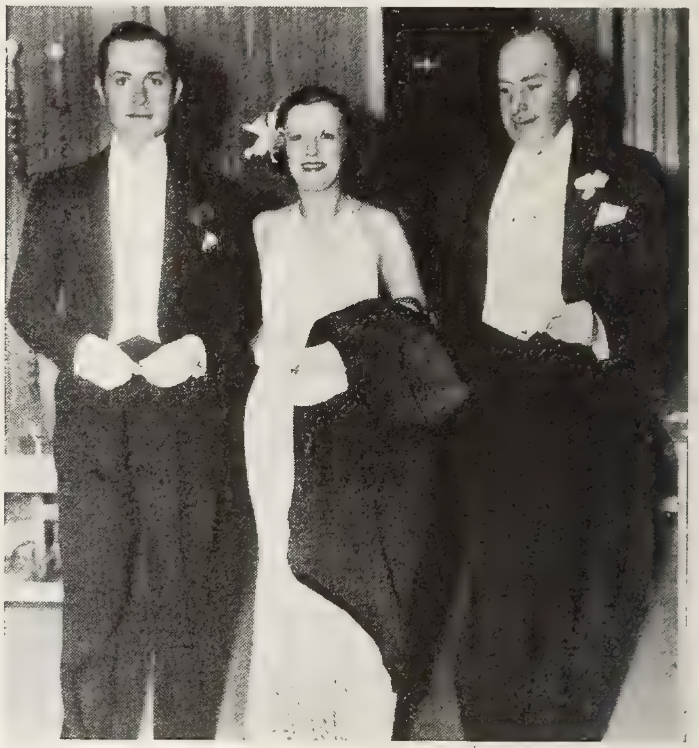
GOOD NEWS

Photos by Scotty
Illustration by Russell Patterson

The Ambassador was the scene of a swank dinner for H. G. Wells. Here's Bob Montgomery with the Alan Mowbrays.



Commotion amounting almost to a furor was created when Margaret Sullavan marched into the "Rose Marie" preview in the company of ex-hubby Henry Fonda. The two have always been friends, even during their married life, and they're co-starring in "The Moon's Our Home." So consider the lady's indignation when the ever-present Scotty stepped up and snapped their photo. It was an outrage, averred Miss Sullavan. Frankly, it's not an outrage. A photographer's business is to obtain pictures with news interest, and certainly a photo of a well-known star attending a preview with a former husband comes under the head of news, even in Hollywood. That's why Miss Sullavan's attitude strikes us as being a trifle absurd. If a girl wants privacy, a preview attended by half the movie colony is hardly a haven of solitude.

■ ■ ■

And what new foreign star tells every lady interviewer she is beautiful and lovely, and that her mere presence fills him with emotion? Now everyone knows that, while all lady interviewers are charming, intelligent and witty, not all of them are Dietrichs to look upon. What's more, they talk, and now they all know that the imported gentleman has whispered the same sweet nothings to each and every one of them. Half of the girls are beginning to think he isn't sincere.

■ ■ ■

Now that Irene Hervey has been seen out once or twice with Addison Randall, the rumor hounds are trying to link Bob Taylor with several other young ladies about town. Most persistent are the reports of a romance involving the handsome Mr. T. with Janet Gaynor. Just as a coincidence, Bob and Janet have recently finished making "Small Town Girl" together. You wouldn't be supposing this beautiful romance existed mainly in that idyllic domain known as a studio publicity department, would you?

Parties, previews, romances and rumors galore keep our gossip-purveyor on the run about Hollywood—and is the news hot!

Kay Francis and Delmar Daves leave the "Lady Consents" preview. Are they married everyone asks? They won't say.

H. G. Wells, noted English guest of honor, leaves his party with two fair gals. Paulette Goddard, left, and Anita Loos.

Speaking of beautiful romances—with the scent of ambrosia furnished by studio press agents—perhaps the most touching was that well-publicized rhapsody, the Courtship of Harry Richman. Harry, it seems, is co-starred with Rochelle Hudson in "The Music Goes 'Round." During the picture's production the local press was full of trivia concerning Mr. Richman's undying regard for Miss Hudson and Miss Hudson's romantic feelings toward Mr. Richman. The minute the picture was completed, however, something came to blight this beautiful alliance, and not another word was heard of their Great Love. In other words, the publicity goes 'round and around, and we try to keep it from coming out here.

■ ■ ■

Tragedy on the ice: During a big skating scene for "Wife vs. Secretary," which stars Jean Harlow, Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, Miss Harlow was scheduled to go into a rather fancy fall. She refused on the grounds that she had no woolens and wasn't in the mood for falling on practically nothing but Harlow, for which you can hardly blame her. Her director agreed, and for a full hour the studio was searched, but there wasn't a woolie in all of Culver City. So, for her art, and for her employers, Jean gritted her teeth and graciously did the fall. These days she winces when someone says, "Won't you sit down, Miss Harlow?"

■ ■ ■

While we're on the subject, here's a secret Binnie Barnes wouldn't want you to know. Seems that Binnie was on location for "Sutter's Gold" in a region noted for its fog and wind. Binnie's costume, to make things more uncomfortable, happened to be a blue organdie dress. But the Barnes ingenuity overcame such difficulties, and here is the secret. Under the organdie La Barnes is comfortably equipped with long pink woolen undies and a pair of high black Russian boots. These items hardly go with organdie gowns, but they do keep a girl from freezing.

■ ■ ■

Note to Producers: Please buy Ann Harding a new story. The one she's been wearing for the past several seasons is getting just a trifle frayed around the edges. Miss Harding has appeared in "sacrificing wife" dramas so often that the public must be weary of feeling sorry for her. Many things have happened in this world since that style of story first startled audiences—the airplane has supplanted the horse, Fulton has invented the steamboat, and Alexander Bell is working on a gadget called the telephone—and we think Ann would look swell in one of the newer models. Something streamlined, let us say.

■ ■ ■

Out here if someone tells you a certain star is terrific, he means the certain star is B. O. If you don't know what B. O. is, then we don't know why we're telling you all this. B. O. is Box Office, the wooden image worshipped by all good Hollywood pagans. If a star is Box Office, it simply means that his or her appeal is of such magnitude that vast quantities of citizens, the world over, pay tribute to see him, even though they must sit through a double feature bill, two shorts, a newsreel and five acts of vaudeville to do so. Hence it will probably be of interest to know that the great god Box Office has selected ten names from all the lists of 1935's bright stars, and dubbed them Terrific. They are, in the order of their B. O. importance: Shirley Temple, Will Rogers, Clark Gable, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, Joan Crawford, Claudette Colbert, Dick Powell, Wallace Beery, Joe E. Brown (surprise?) and James Cagney. Allah has spoken.

Ann Harding, vacationing in the big city, leaves New York's Gotham Hotel.

Fred MacMurray and his best gal, Lillian Lamont. These two are an inseparable duo.

Merle Oberon arrives with her current beau, David Niven, for an evening at the Club Seville.

Gladys Swarthout and the destined-to-be-popular Erin O'Brien-Moore at Basil Rathbone's.

Two sorrowing figures at Jack Gilbert's funeral, Leatrice Joy, former wife, and their daughter.

Here's something that would have made the $10,000-a-week sirens of the old silent days furious with envy. It seems that one of the items in Claudette Colbert Pressman's new home is a bed done up almost entirely in satin. We didn't see the price tag but we have it from unimpeachable sources that it was marked $3,000. Perhaps that would have been a mere couch in those golden days, but in these parlous times it's terrific. Did some one say "some bunk"?

■ ■ ■

Have you been wondering about Mary Brian? Well, we have, and here's what we discovered. Mary's in London, still starring in "Charlot's Revue," and still denying romantic rumors, just as she denied them in Hollywood. The young blades of London are decidedly Brian-conscious, and even the manager of her hotel sends her a daily offering of fresh flowers. Men, are we going to relinquish America's Girl Friend to the British? Think it over.

■ ■ ■

Stuart Erwin can't understand his prize-winning bulldog. After knocking off blue ribbons at severel dog shows, Stu readied his pride and joy for the Palm Springs show. The dog wandered out and stuffed himself with dates, and by the time the judges took a look at him he was a fine example of a dog with a hangover. The following week the dog got next to a plentiful quantity of rich food and came down with the gout. Right now he subsists on dog biscuit and water, and Stu hasn't any appetite whatsoever.

■ ■ ■

There's a new hoofer about to amaze screen audiences with her tapability, and she's none other than Irene Dunne! Irene took lessons in taps from LeRoy Prinz for her role in "Show Boat," and Mr. Prinz is telling his friends that Irene is a natural tapster, or is it tapstress? We can't imagine it, but Mr. P. swears by it, so you'll have to see "Show Boat" if you want his statement verified.

■ ■ ■

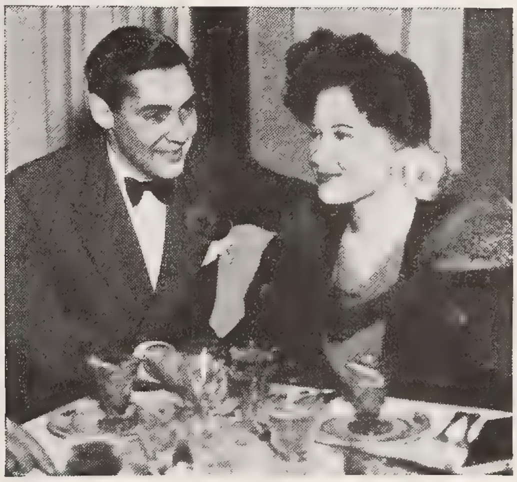
More Questions Without Answers: The wife of a prominent English star is constantly guarding her husband from the

GOOD

Grace Moore and husband Valentin Parera, snapped leaving "Rose Marie" preview.

Gertrude Michaels, Johnny Farrow and Maureen O'Sullivan make merry at the Club Seville.

Polly Ann Young, her fiance, Carter Herman, and Loretta Young at Wally Ford's party.



The much-beaued-about-town Mary Carlisle with Phil Reed at the Club Seville, too.

Mary Pickford dances gaily with Leslie Howard at a party she gave for Lady Mendl.

NEWS

wiles of the local sirens, but she topped all her previous efforts at an Assistance League luncheon the other day. A certain glamorous gal star rushed over to the couple, greeted the wife and planted a friendly kiss on the countenance of the blushing male. Since a kiss is not an unusual salute in Hollywood, you can imagine the young lady's embarrassment when she found herself on the receiving end of a violent push from the irate wife.

■ ■ ■

Fay Wray, just back from England, parked her bags at the Gotham in New York for a few days. And the same day the Melvyn Douglas's (Helen Gahagan) checked out of this popular hostelry on their way back to the coast. Poor Fay must feel like a gal without a country for she has spent the major part of the past year madly commuting back and forth across the briny to keep picture engagements in both England and Hollywood. Fortunately for her, her beloved spouse, John Monk Saunders, has been spending most of his time in England, too, thus saving them miserable separations and transatlantic phone bills!

■ ■ ■

And speaking of New York, who do you suppose stole into town without a single reporter catching sight of her? None other than Gloria Swanson. La Swanson, who used to stir up a peck of press excitement, must have felt a trifle forlorn to be the forgotten woman. It is whispered that Gloria and Herbert Marshall are only nodding these days.

And from Hollywood comes word that Herbert is transatlantic phoning his wife, Edna Best. So-o-o.

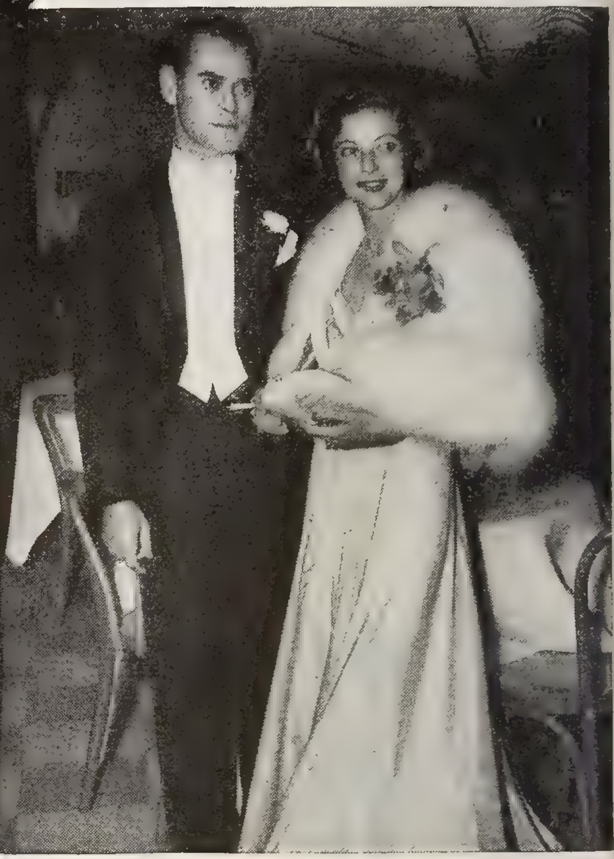
■ ■ ■

And what's this about Simone Simon? The little mademoiselle from gay Paree was brought to these waiting shores amid much publicity and much shouting of "Vive la France!" In a few short months her studio taught her English and placed her in "Under Two Flags," with Ronald Colman and Victor McLaglen. After two weeks of production it was announced that Mlle. Simon retired from the cast under doctor's orders. She was replaced by Claudette Colbert, by the way. Observers, however, point out a typographical error in the announcement. "Director's orders" would be more correct, they insist, for it seems that playing a Cuban girl in an American picture was a little too bewildering for the little French lady, so she retired from the cast—with a French-English dictionary under one arm and a tutor under the other.

■ ■ ■

The death of John Gilbert marks the end of an era in Hollywood, for he was one of the last of the glamorous names of the silent days. Always attractive to women, his constant companion during his last few months was Marlene Dietrich. That she felt his passing deeply is attested to by those who saw her on the Paramount lot the day after his death. Although she worked, so as not to hold up production, there were two nurses in constant attendance. (Cont'd on page 124)

And look who's walking into the party! None other than Jeanette MacDonald radiantly happy and squired by Henry Fonda.



Top above, the Harmon Nelsons (Bette Davis) pose for Scotty. And Bette, with her hair darker again, looks like a little girl. Below, Loretta Young steps out with Janet Gaynor's former husband, Lydell Peck.

Hollywood's gayest gals and lads have themselves a big time at

. . . THE BLACK

Top above, a jolly foursome consisted of David Niven with his best girl, Merle Oberon; Norma Shearer and husband, Irving Thalberg. Norma was one of the few who didn't observe the "black and white" dress edict. Below, Janet Gaynor, Gene Raymond, Marion Davies and Dolores Del Rio have fun.

Top above, Scotty snaps a fivesome—the Bill Gargans, the Harold Lloyds and Dolores Costello Barrymore in a fetching white wig. And below, the hostess, Carole Lombard, all done up in white tulle and violets. Cesar Romero is the lucky fellow who has her attention for the moment.

Carole Lombard's swanky Mayfair party. Here's how they looked!

AND WHITE BALL

SHE KNOWS Wives!

And Myrna Loy, unmarried herself, tells you all about them here

BY S. R. MOOK

ONE NIGHT, not too long ago, Jobyna and Dick Arlen, Bing and Dixie Crosby and I were sitting around gabbing.

Somehow the talk got around to "The Thin Man" and, naturally, to Myrna Loy's swell portrayal of the wife in it.

"There was a wife for you," Dick remarked with a meaning glance at Joby.

"Amen!" said Mr. Crosby devoutly, although he smiled when he said it.

Joby threw a pillow at Dick while Dixie fingered a marble ash tray more or less absently.

The conversation was hastily changed before there were any casualties. But, when I reached home, where I could meditate in peace and comfort on one of my favorite topics—marriage—I began thinking about Myrna again.

There is a girl who never has been married—or, if she has been, she's keeping very still about it—yet she probably has played more and different types of wife, and played them convincingly than (Continued on page 119)

Myrna, who has played a variety of screen wives, wonders how she would react to marriage off-screen. Below, with her constant beau, Arthur Hornblow.

ALMOST AN OLD MAID

BY WELDON MELICK

Ronald Burla, her better half, is just about perfect, thinks Miss Merkel.

Una has helped many of her fans with their problems on love and marriage.

HERE'S ONE I'll bet even Ripley wouldn't believe! Una Merkel was once resigned to the unwelcome fate of becoming an old maid! With millions of unattached males in the world, not one favored the shy, awkward little Kentucky girl with so much as a passing glance.

Although she is one of the most happily married girls in the movie colony today—the happiest, to hear her version of it—Una has known what it is to want companionship and see all the girls but herself receiving flattering attentions from young swains.

For other girls who have faced that problem, she feels a sympathetic kinship, and for them she has a heart-warming message which perhaps no other screen idol is qualified, by both experience and understanding, to give.

Picnics and parties given by the younger set in Covington and Philadelphia, where Una grew up, were not enhanced by the tinkling chatterbox voice which now makes a picnic of any picture to which it is a party. Even later, when Una was posing for illustrations in a confession magazine—illustrating stories in which she had illegitimate children by the score, during working hours—men didn't even offer her a seat on the subway.

THE STORY of the screen's most popular comedienne is the more unusual because the lives of models and actresses are supposed to be glutted with battalions of males, and the worries of a film beauty who tries to remember mother's advice are enough to turn her hair platinum blonde overnight. But in all of Una Merkel's cloister-like existence in the midst of plenty, she only got one opportunity to slap a man.

I hope I don't make her sound like the "before" half of the ad for freckle cream, or a course in "How You Too May Cultivate and Harvest Men." I'm sure it was the boys in Covington who were cross-eyed.

It's difficult to sit on a lounge with one of the most charming and delightful women of the screen and try to imagine her as a self-conscious wall-flower who was so afraid of boys that they thought she wanted to be that way. I wouldn't have believed that this personable young blonde had ever got a good start toward spinsterhood, if she hadn't admitted it. But when Una Merkel tells you something, you believe it. Her sincerity is the second thing you note about her. The first is how sleekly stunning she is in black. While the glamor gals affect aprons and organdie between sirening assignments, La Merkel, off the set, knocks your lamps out with the latest chic creations of New York and Paris—possibly a delayed compensation for drab days in a convent, and working days in New York, when an umbrella and outsize rubbers were the most striking accessories in her wardrobe.

But she is a homebody, for all her style, and wouldn't starve to death if you locked her in a kitchen with the makings. She'd know what to do if you got a cold in the chest. If you gave her a pile of socks to darn, she wouldn't do it with her (Continued to page 88)

Una Merkel's advice to the Misses who would be Missus

Will increasing screen success push Rochelle Hudson into the glamorous star class she now spurns?

MAYBE IT would be better if you didn't tell what I said on the set that day a year ago. People might misunderstand and think I was crazy."

Rochelle readily admitted the conversation I referred to. I was afraid that she wouldn't. Especially since she had, during the past few months, seen her name put in the column of the box office ledger that spells cash.

That's what you like about this Hudson gal. She has a mind of her own and she is not afraid to express it.

"After all," she went on, "why shouldn't I say that the glamor and glitter that goes with being a motion picture actress does not thrill me. It doesn't. That I am not eager for a career. It's the truth. That I am not reaching for fame. I have seen how disappointing that can be. That I don't want to be a star. I have seen too many stars take a tail spin.

Rochelle considers acting a job, not a career.

"A year ago I was so fed up with the whole business I was ready to quit. I don't want to quit now. I have a good job. And I am enjoying my work because I am making progress. I don't want to quit until I have become tops. I would want to be tops in anything I undertook."

To this veteran of nineteen, acting is a job, not a career. "Tops" is success, not stardom. Laugh if you want to, but here is a beautiful girl who would rather be looked upon as an industrious young person intent upon her work than a motion picture actress wrapped in glamor.

"I have been building for a career ever since I can remember," she said. "When I was born my mother vowed she was going to give me the opportunity to do the thing she had always wanted to do. 'Amount to something,' as she put it. I was to have the training, foundation, or whatever you want to call it to enable me to do something artistic—something fine, the chance to take myself out of the everyday humdrum existence. In other words, she wanted to see in me a reflection of what she had wanted to be. She never wavered in that purpose.

"At three I was studying the piano and taking dancing lessons. At six I was memorizing verse. Before long I was learning ten pages of drama a week. That taught me to concentrate. That is why today I learn lines so easily. When it was discovered that my voice had possibilities, I was given vocal training.

"Although I was considered precocious, I had to work. Mother often stood over me to keep me at the piano. How I hated to sit down to those cold keys." She made a wry face at the thought of it.

"MY TEACHERS used to warn my parents that I would have a breakdown. Mother was criticized for forcing me. But she knew what she was doing. I was active and quick to learn and it didn't hurt me a bit. At any rate I was never ill then—nor since then.

"Today when I see other girls in this business, many of them older than I, just starting on the piano, dancing or voice, I realize how lucky I am. After Mother put me on my own feet she left me to work out my own salvation."

Rochelle was fourteen when she signed a contract with RKO. Since she attended school on the lot, either her work or studies took her to the studio every day. And so, the studio became her world. She saw stars made and broken. She saw the effect of fame and money upon newcomers and old-timers. The excitement and glamor that surrounds a movie set was her daily fare. During those months her mental and physical training, her entire routine, was chosen to promote her career.

"Most people think that acting before the camera is fun," she said, "that the hours spent at a studio are gay and amusing. The dramatic roles I do are a responsibility. They weigh me down. (Continued on page 84)

BY RILLA PAGE PALMBORG

SHE DOESN'T WANT Fame

With Norman Foster in "Everybody's Old Man." Nice work by Rochelle

And with Harry Richman in "The Music Goes 'Round and [illegible]

LESLIE HOWARD—

There's great mystery in and serious, this blond chap has

BY RUTH RANKIN

LADIES AND gentlemen—especially ladies.

The following discourse, concerning a literate and articulate actor, contains not one word about his lovelife, per se. Intentionally, it omits speculation direct or indirect regarding his marriage, his amorous dalliance, if any, his preference for blondes or brunettes, also if any.

Mr. Leslie Howard entertains the controversial opinion that a man may be an actor and also have a private life. You will, one hopes, agree that he can at least try. Possibly you may even find it refreshing to discover an actor who wants a private life.

This explanatory digression has nothing to do with the subject matter, except as an early illustration of Leslie's rebellious nature. Imagine an actor daring to want a private life!

Those of you, who regard Mr. Howard and sex-appeal as interchangeably synonymous, will perhaps be pained, or anyway surprised, to find out that other things do go on in his mind.

But before we progress to his mind, how's about analyzing the appeal. (Did I hear cheers from the ladies?) What is it Leslie has which no other actor has? Where does he keep it? Does he put it on and take it off or is it always there?

Well, now you have me. It's that thing called charm. Without it, there is a not particularly personable, slightly skinny gent in an old loose tweed jacket and trousers with a patch on the seat and tortoise-rimmed glasses, pulling on a blunt pipe. With it, there is Leslie Howard.

IT WORKS in various ways its wonders to perform—but it always works. For instance, two very chic Upper-Crust young matrons arrive from New York and it is my pleasure to introduce them to a studio. Well, a studio is a studio, and I make arrangements accordingly. But no, I was wrong. They only want to go to the studio where Leslie Howard is making a picture—and the only actor they want to meet is Leslie Howard. Tie that. And here I figured they were pretty darn lucky to see any studio! And it seemed fairly reasonable that since Howard was working on a picture, he wouldn't send out any brass bands to meet us . . . Ha, I was wrong again.

The gals were fairly skeptical. This Howard now, he was just a legendary character who charmed people, willy-nilly, on the screen and (Continued on page 96)

PERENNIAL CHARMER

Howard's appeal. Unassuming something other stars envy

Left, Leslie, Jr., Howard's daughter, is so interested in her dad's career that she spent days writing a happy ending to "The Petrified Forest," because the producers thought they wanted it that way! Here they are.

Left, Leslie and Bette Davis in a scene from "Petrified Forest." Leslie had a way of quietly napping in his or Bette's car between scenes! And, like Garbo, he likes to sneak home early, much to the director's discomfort.

. . . MIRACLE IN

Little did the lovely Olivia de Havilland realize what Fate had (Above) This amazing night picture of the world-famous Hollywood Bowl, crowded to the very rim, was the scene of Max Reinhardt's outdoor production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in which Olivia de Havilland met Opportunity and Fame. Left, Olivia's first meeting with Reinhardt, and as she looks today.

BY RAMON ROMERO

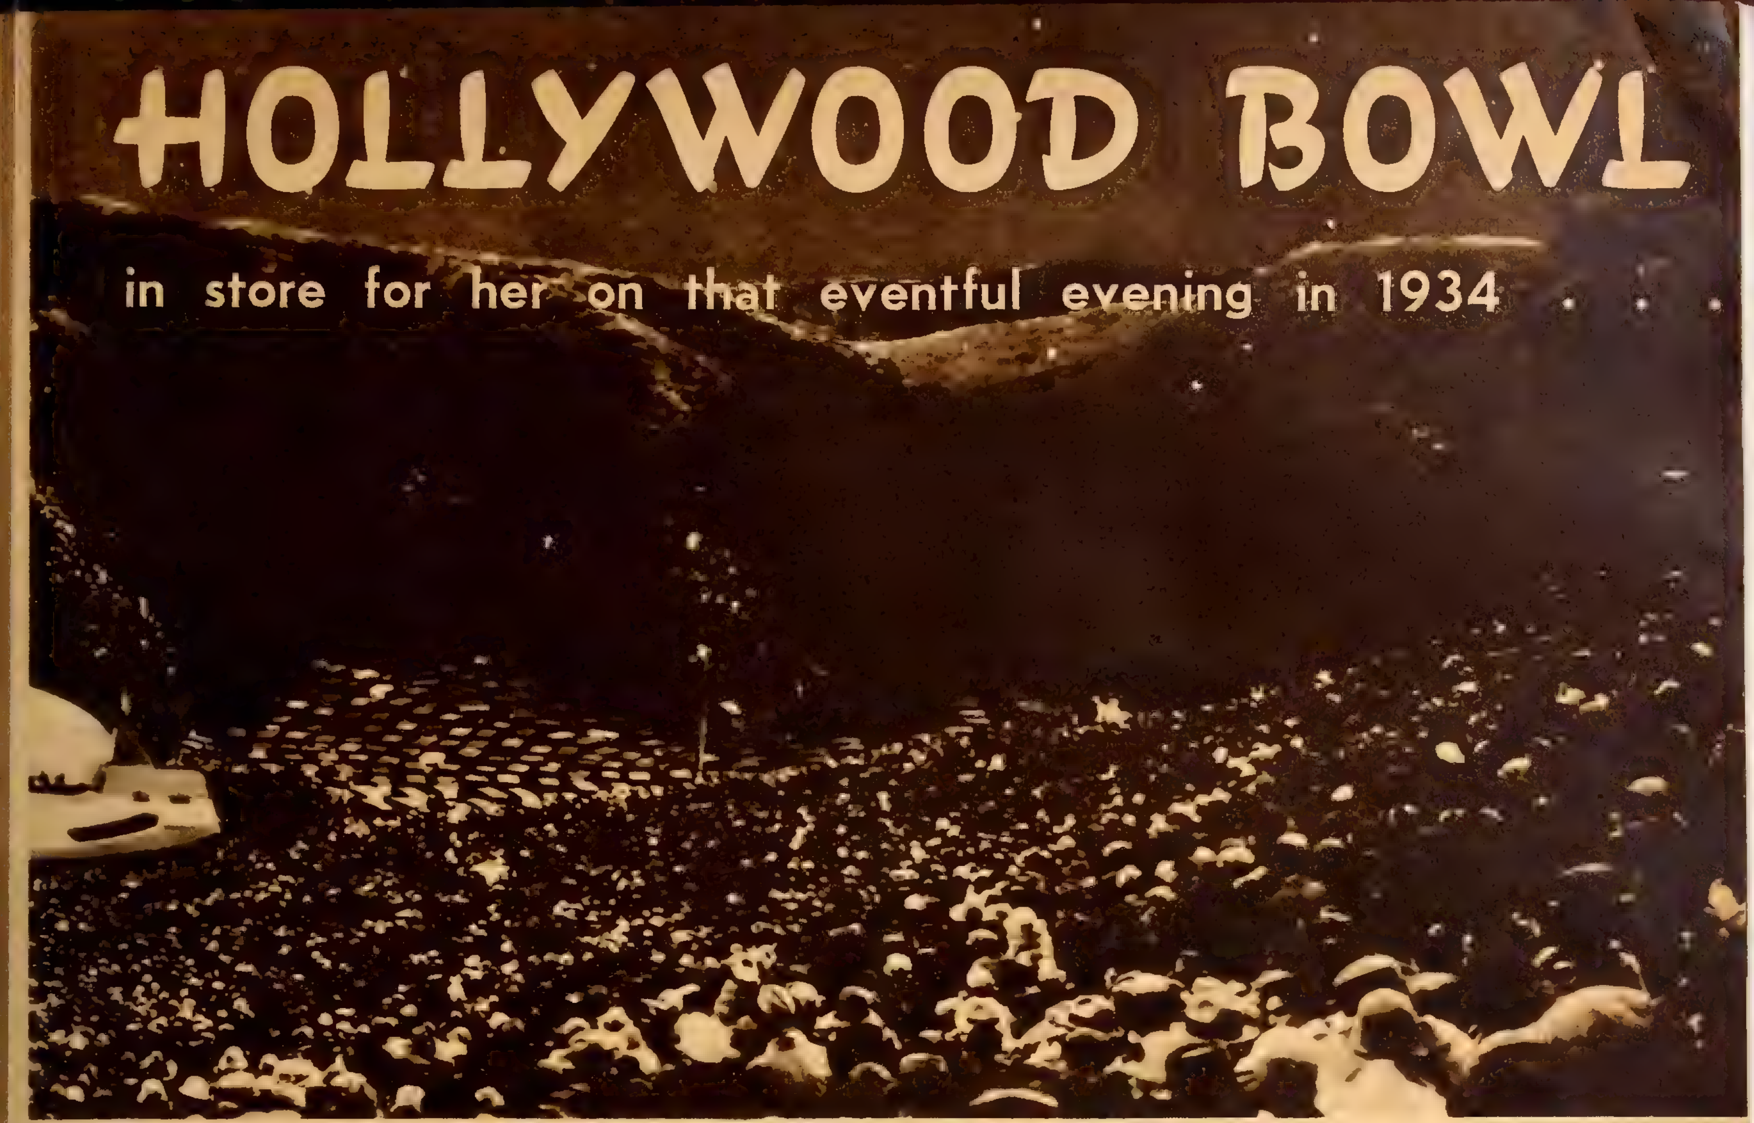
HOLLYWOOD BOWL

in store for her on that eventful evening in 1934 . . .



IN THE huge, egg-shaped orchestra pit of Hollywood Bowl, in the summer of 1934, a miracle occurred. In this cradle of immortal music a motion picture star was born. Not a new composer nor a master of the baton, but of all things, a cinema celebrity!

In the sight of forty thousand pairs of eyes this new actress emerged from the unknown, to be discovered by the largest single audience that has ever discovered a favorite upon whom to heap its plaudits. Out of the magical forest of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" she came—a vision as lovely as Dame Fame has ever bowed to. At the beginning of the eventful evening the program listed her merely as the "Hermia" of the Bard's play. But before the moon had risen much higher over the Bowl that night, it was Olivia de Havilland who was remembered. The next morning her fate was sealed. Hollywood came to bid.

More than a year has passed since that momentous evening when Olivia de Havilland's career was born in Hollywood's gigantic amphitheatre under the stars. In that incredibly short time Olivia has risen from an unknown "Little Theatre" actress to a picture personage. Her screen interpretation of Hermia, too, has won her praise.

Two of the most coveted roles of the new crop of pictures have been awarded Olivia on the strength of the critical reception accorded her in the Reinhardt fantasy. In "Captain Blood," Olivia and another newcomer, Errol Flynn, carried the burden of histrionic honors on their slim shoulders, with nary a big box-office name to bolster up production values. To add glory to glory, she is playing opposite Fredric March in "Anthony Adverse."

When I lunched with her recently, Olivia did not hesitate to express doubts as to her future in the Hollywood crazy-quilt. Although her charming rendition of Hermia had won for her the same role in the screen play, there was no way of foretelling what her camera-portrait of the same character would bring. Like a doctor who waits for the crisis in the illness of a patient, she waited for the day when she would know definitely whether her good fortune was merely a dream come to an end, or the beginning of a long screen life.

AS ANXIOUS as she was for the decisive answer, she was prepared not to be heartbroken should it mean that her efforts to be a movie actress had failed. Success had come too easily. It was not something over which she had brooded, planned, slaved. If ever a Cinderella story found its counterpart in actual life, it was true in this case. Unreasonable, because as she says herself, it seems almost unfair for anyone to walk into a motion picture career as painlessly as she did when Hollywood is full of talented girls wasting away waiting for a decent opportunity.

"Before all this happened I never seriously consideed a professional career," she confessed with her usual frankness. "I've never contemplated very much on the sacrifice involved in carving out a career for oneself. Of course, I've read dozens of biographies about the careers of great people, and of the tragic time they had. I cried myself sick over Katharine Hepburn's Eve Lovelace in "Morning Glory," but I've never had the same situations occur in my own life. I, personally, am going to let fate take its course."

"Even successful people must make sacrifices," I contended. "Should you be accepted as a success in the film version of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream,' there is every chance you will eventually become a star. As a star, you must be prepared to make more sacrifices than you would, say, if your present option isn't renewed, and you are turned out to find a place for yourself in some other studio."

"Should that happen," she (Continued on page 100)

BUTLERS ARE ONLY SKIN DEEP

BY FAITH SERVICE

Arthur Treacher, screen butler de luxe, with Ida Lupino in "Anything Goes."

BUTLERS BY ED GRAHAM

ARE BUTLERS, like beauty, only skin deep?

Scratch a butler and do you find the "gentleman's gentleman," his soul in the service of caviar, his heart in the honing of a razor strop?

In plain terms, if you should scratch Eric Blore as he draws the "bawth" for Edward Everett Horton or serves pigeons' hearts and puns to Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, if you should scratch Arthur Treacher as he draws back a chair for Shirley Temple, if you should scratch Ivan Simpson as he serves tea for Mr. Arliss—what would you find?

Messrs. Blore, Treacher and Simpson are Englishmen three. They hail from the Isle of Butlers. Of perfect butlers. For when is a butler not a butler might be answered thisaway—when he is not an Englishman. Still, it is reasonable to surmise that when Messrs. Blore, Treacher and Simpson were yet unbreeched they did not plan their future lives in terms of buttling for Astaire, Temple and Arliss. They doubtless expected to be buttled.

What is the man behind the screen butler like? Does servitude, even in films, nip the arrogant soul of the man until he instinctively passes the pâté de fois gras and says "Sir" to inferior young moppets?

Do Messrs. Blore, Treacher and Simpson resent being butlers? What are they like when the napkin is removed from their arms?

I scratched Eric Blore and found: A whimsical gentleman. A very charming gentleman. A most sophisticated gentleman. A gentleman who is no slouch with the ladies, who is, indeed, married to Clara Mackin, one-time actress and a celebrated beauty. The father of a son of eight. A father who disciplines his only son with Milne-esque poetry—Milne with a dark dash of Poe.

Mr. Blore read me one of his poems. He recited it with fire and fervor. He went further and gave us permission to print part of it. Eventually, it will be included in a book of Blore verse. For, among other things, I found, when I lunched with Mr. Blore, the gentleman, is that he is rated as the second best lyricist in all England. Before he recited the poem to me he said, "I recommend this to all fathers of sons. I find that it absolved me from the unpleasant duty of castigation!"

And here is a verse and chorus from "The Scroggins":

When I was quite a little boy,
And disobeyed my daddy,
He used to hit
Me where I sit
He hadn't ought to! Had he?
But then if I was very bad,
Too bad for Daddy's floggin's,
He'd frighten me
By saying he
Would send me to the Scroggins.
Then to the telephone he'd go
And ring up SCRANTON 0-0-0!

Oh! The Scroggins are terrible people,

Three famous screen gentlemen's "gentlemen," Eric Blore,

Eric Blore, outraged valet to Edward Everett Horton, in a "Top Hat" scene.

Ivan Simpson, the "old retainer" type, with Miriam Hopkins in "Splendor."

Such terrible people the Scroggins;
Especially Missus,
Who hisses and hisses.
She hates little boys and the reason for this is
She can't stand the smell of 'em.
Just hear her tell of 'em,
"Little boys smell, sir, and that is the hell of 'em."
Take it from me,
It is better to be
With Mummy and Daddy and floggin's
Than to stay for a day
In that house far away
With the terrible, terrible
  Scroggins!

And I wish you could have heard Mr. Blore doing "The Scroggins." The way he rolled his S's and his eyes when he "rang up Scranton 0-0-0" was a treat!

While delving into the Blore biography, I discovered that Mr. Blore is the only son of an English professor, a professor so learned in the classics that he reads Greek and Latin as we read Walter Winchell. A father who had predestined his only son for the law, for government service. It certainly never occurred to the scholarly elder Blore, the bibliophile, that his Eric would one day be "in service."

And what is more, Mr. Blore studied law. He passed his civil service examinations, though he tried not to. And he then passed into an insurance office, only to pass out of it as soon as possible and onto the stage. His first stage appearance was at the Spa Theatre, Bridlington, England, in the year 1908. He then toured Australia and the provinces and then did four years at the front. He was with the Royal Flying Corps and also conducted the 36th Divisional Concert Party in France, being unable to keep the theatre out of the trenches. And at the front he first met Herbert Marshall, his friend through the years.

After the War he reappeared on the London stage, at the Wyndham Theatre, in "His Little Widows," and audiences laughed him from one success to another, until his butler in the stage production of "The Gay Divorcee" brought him to Hollywood to repeat that character on the screen.

Eric Blore loathes buttling. He said, "I wouldn't mind, you know, playing a butler with character, such a butler, for instance, as Wodehouse's 'Jeeves.' But I do object, quite violently, to being typed. I do resent the once-a-butler-always-a-butler mold into which the movies seem to have hurled me.

"I have no objections to butlers on the grounds that might be supposed. I do not consider them inferior persons. On the contrary, a

(Continued on page 89)

Ivan Simpson and Arthur Treacher, reveal their real selves

BY MADAME SYLVIA

We believe that one of the most vital factors in the success of a motion picture is the physical attractiveness of its stars, and realize that instructive comment on this subject by a recognized authority will be of interest to our readers. MODERN SCREEN is, therefore, glad to announce the appointment of Madame Sylvia as its Beauty Critic of Motion Pictures.

Losing or gaining is a cinch, Sylvia claims, if you follow the rules—the same tips she gives the Hollywood stars

Carole Lombard has to keep an eagle eye on the thighs and hips. As a matter of fact, she has to diet and exercise all the time—or else.

FAT? THIN?—YOU

For those of you with scrawny necks, and shoulder blades that protrude noticeably—spots which the too-thin Loretta Young needs to round out—there are diets and exercises to build you up in no time.

Ann Dvorak is another one of those all-around skinny girls who could gain, if she went about it in the right way. Norma Shearer, on the other hand, has to work to keep slim—especially her waistline and arms.

RIGHT SMACK at the beginning, let me say this: you can have a good figure. You bet your sweet life you can. Barring out-and-out defects of bone structure and serious glandular disturbances, there is nothing that can keep you from being slim, graceful and decently proportioned. It will take time, determination, honesty (with yourself) and hard work. But, babies, you can have it and I'm not telling you any poetic beauty folderol when I say it. But it's up to you. What are you going to do? Be lazy and stay fat? Whine and stay thin? Or work and be beautiful? You're going to be beautiful? That's the stuff! And Sylvia will help you.

This month, I want to discuss really stubborn cases: the fat girl who has tried, honestly, to lose and can't; and the thin girl who has tried, honestly, to gain and can't.

On these pages, are the pictures of four Hollywood stars whom I shall use to illustrate certain points in this article. Norma Shearer and Carole Lombard have had considerable difficulty in their lives in keeping off excess weight. Norma's trouble is a tendency to heavy upper arms and a thickness through the waist. Carole's trouble is a tendency to heavy thighs and derriere. Ann Dvorak and Loretta Young have had difficulty in putting on weight. Ann is thin all over. Loretta must fight against that gaunt look around the collar bones and a too-thin neck. I'm going to take up more extreme cases than these girls illustrate, too.

OH, YES, I've heard all the excuses! I don't want to be too hard on you, but, truly, some of the reasons women give me for not improving their figures make me so mad I could pop!

"Fat runs in our family," is a prize one. So! Your Aunt Tabitha looked like a blimp . . . therefore you must look like a blimp. "I have a weak heart . . . I can't exercise." If you really have a weak heart—if a doctor has told you that you have a weak heart—you can't, of course, play tournament tennis or run the 100-yard sprint in nothing flat. But you needn't eat mashed potatoes, need you? "I'm anemic—I can't diet." Oh, yes, you can, baby. Yes, you can! Leave it to mama. I'll give you a diet—right here in this article—just as soon as I get a couple of statements down on paper that I don't want to forget.

First of all, let's take a really extreme case: the girl who is just plain fat. Not merely hefty or bulgy in spots, but fat. She thinks she

(Continued on page 92)

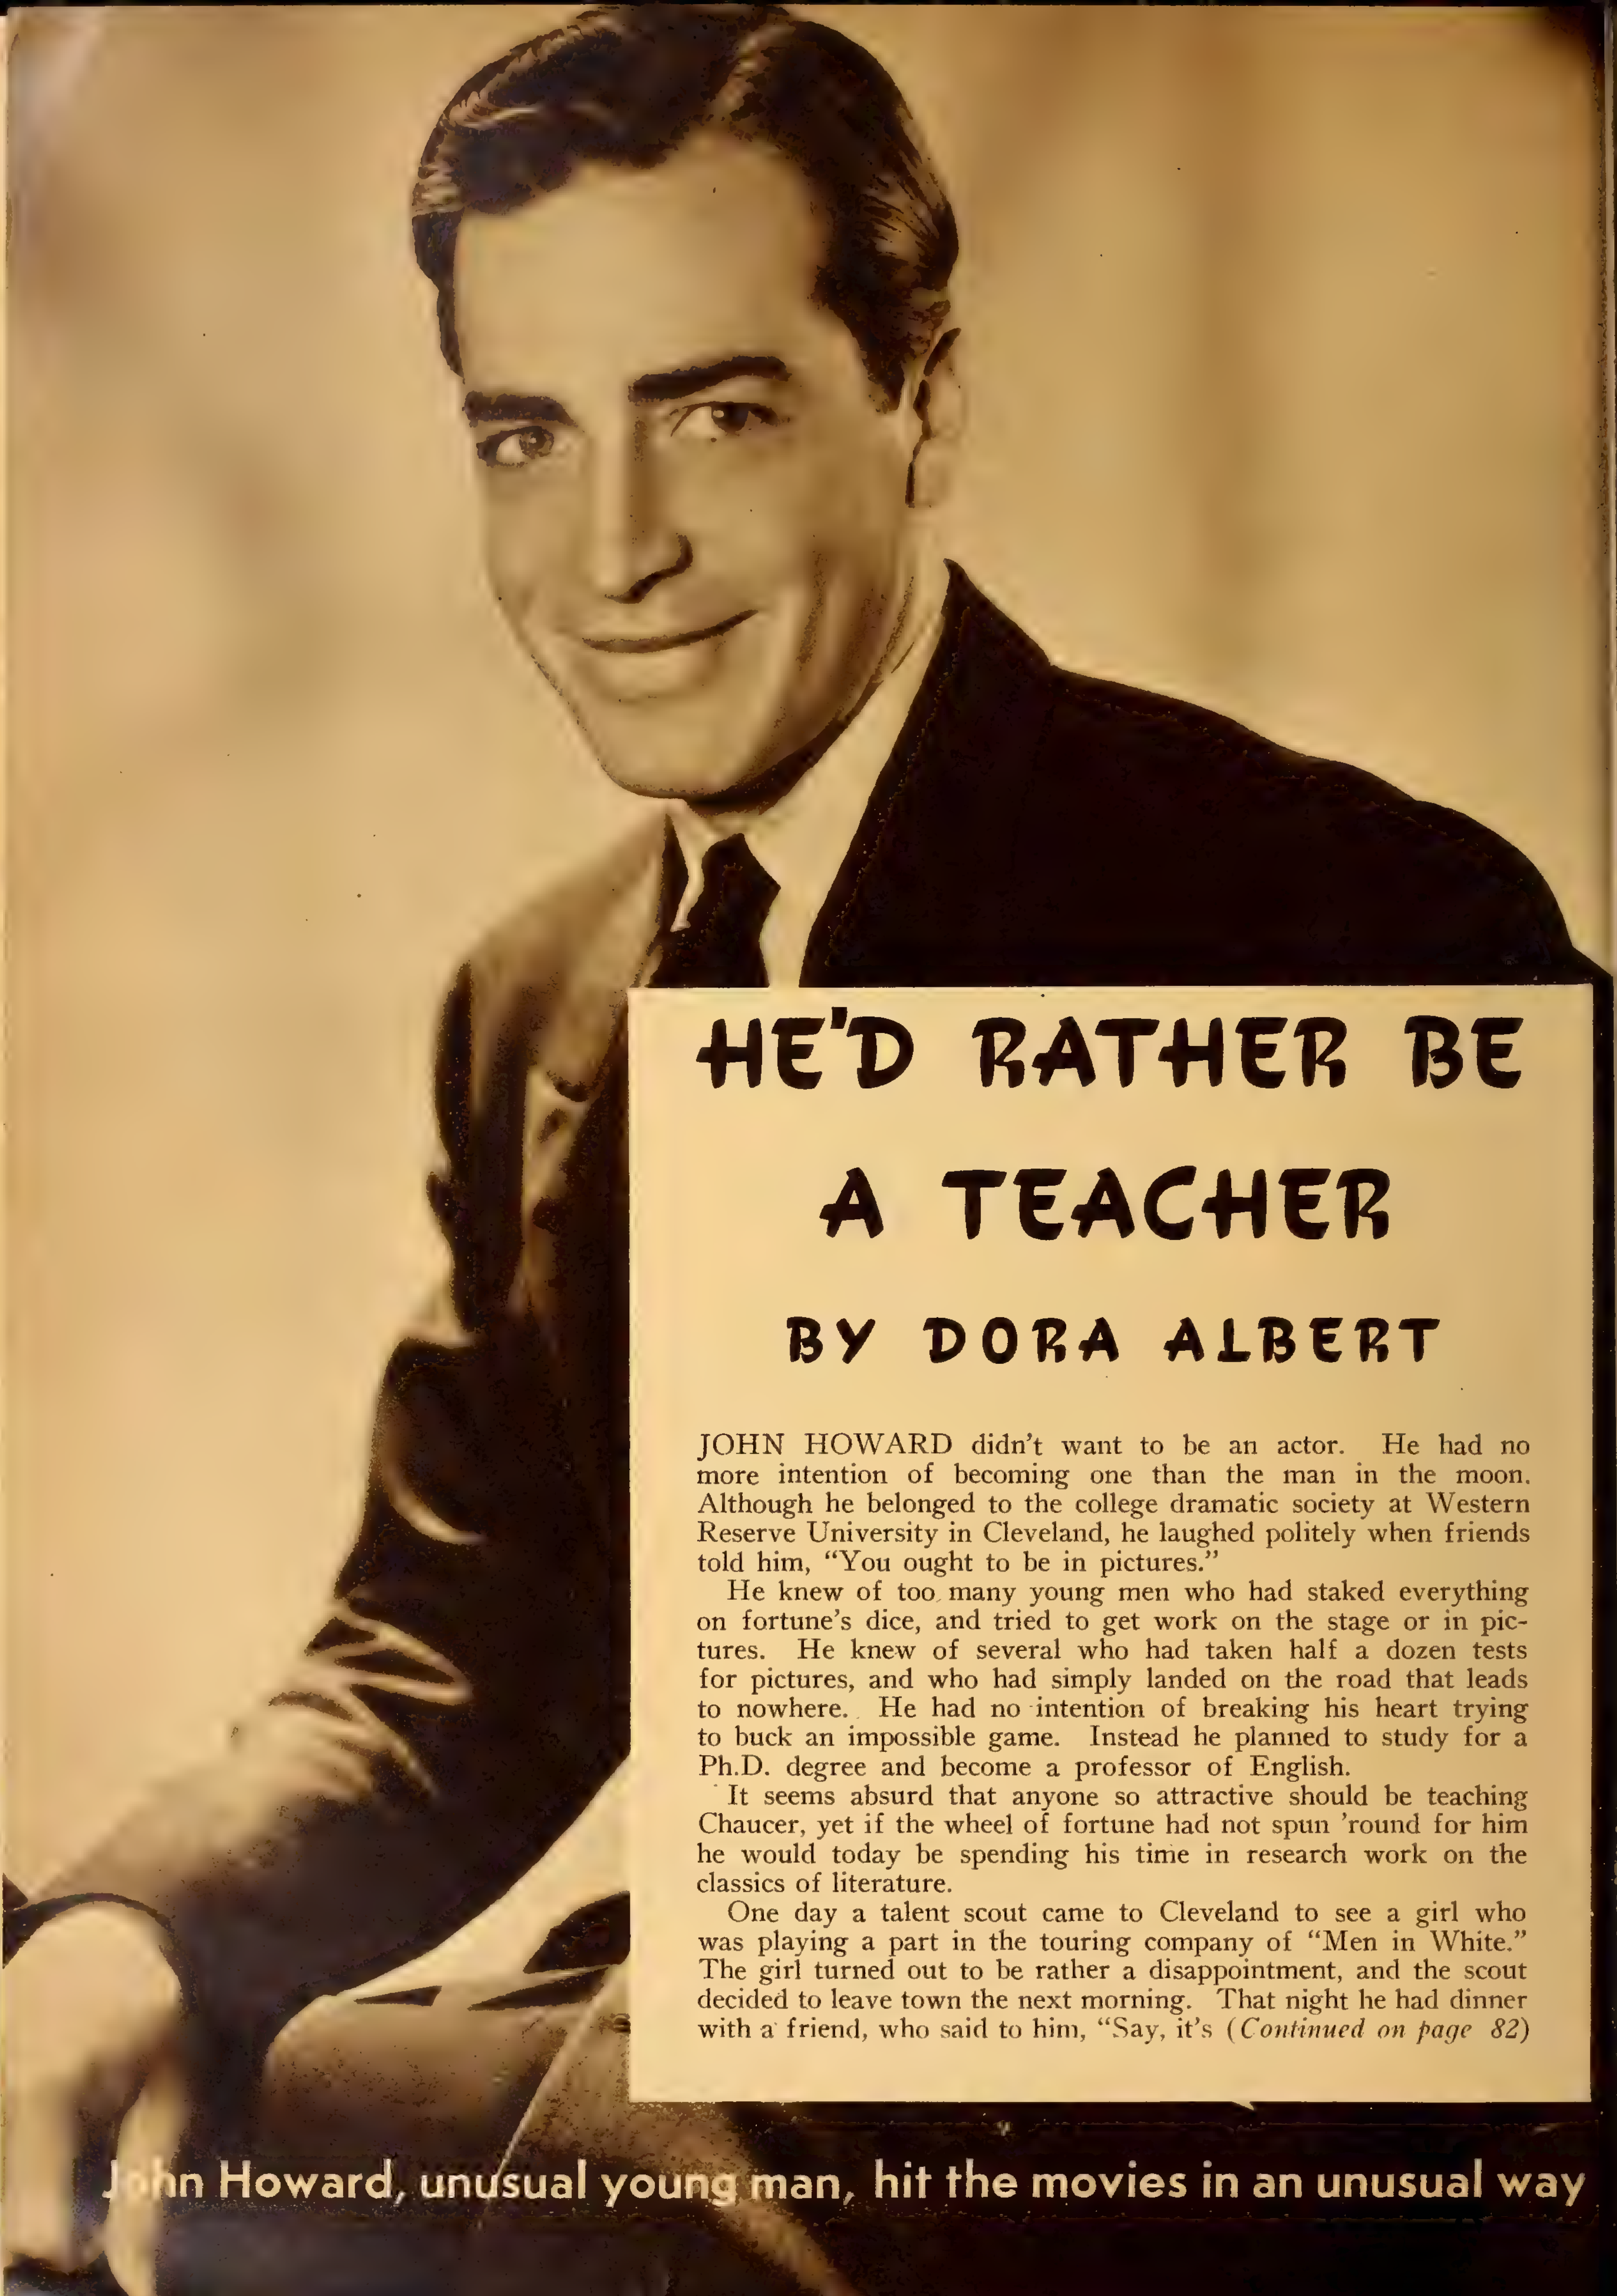
CAN BE JUST RIGHT!



HE'D RATHER BE A TEACHER

BY DORA ALBERT

JOHN HOWARD didn't want to be an actor. He had no more intention of becoming one than the man in the moon. Although he belonged to the college dramatic society at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, he laughed politely when friends told him, "You ought to be in pictures."

He knew of too many young men who had staked everything on fortune's dice, and tried to get work on the stage or in pictures. He knew of several who had taken half a dozen tests for pictures, and who had simply landed on the road that leads to nowhere. He had no intention of breaking his heart trying to buck an impossible game. Instead he planned to study for a Ph.D. degree and become a professor of English.

It seems absurd that anyone so attractive should be teaching Chaucer, yet if the wheel of fortune had not spun 'round for him he would today be spending his time in research work on the classics of literature.

One day a talent scout came to Cleveland to see a girl who was playing a part in the touring company of "Men in White." The girl turned out to be rather a disappointment, and the scout decided to leave town the next morning. That night he had dinner with a friend, who said to him, "Say, it's (Continued on page 82)

John Howard, unusual young man, hit the movies in an unusual way

HER HERO!

You don't know Robert Donat unless you've seen him through Jean Parker's idolizing eyes

BY MAUDE LATHAM

IF YOU have envied Jean Parker at different steps in her career, you will be actually "green" now, for she has spent four months in England playing opposite Robert Donat in "The Ghost Goes West." And Jean has never been so thrilled in her life!

"If anyone had told me," she said, "that I would play a lead with Robert Donat, I should have been positive that Santa Claus had come to stay twelve months a year."

Of course, you are jumping to the conclusion that Jean has fallen in love with Donat. And you were never more right in your life! But perhaps in not the exact manner you suspect. She is in love with him as she is in love with Chopin and Leonardo da Vinci, for she believes that Donat is as much an artist in his line as these men were in theirs, that he brings to the screen something indescribable that sets him apart from all other actors.

Jean is changed since she worked with Donat. No longer is she so serious, worried, and eternally wondering about the outcome of everything she does. She is like someone who has visited a psychoanalyst and had her inhibitions released, like a college girl who has received A Double Plus on her first examinations. She explains:

"Mr. Donat made me realize how important relaxation is while portraying a character. 'You must get yourself out of the way,' he would say, 'while you are giving the public someone else.' Furthermore, he insisted that I must play every scene, whether tragedy or comedy, with a sense of humor. Often he stopped rehearsals and said something to make me laugh, then said, 'Now, open your hands; drop them; relax. You can never play a scene when you are tense like that.'

"That sounds simple enough, but I did relax for the first time, and I believe I learned even more from watching every move he made than I could possibly explain to you."

Jean Parker and Robert Donat in that gay comedy, "The Ghost Goes West."

BUT DONAT'S influence on Jean didn't begin with her picture work with him, rather it began at the time she had her first glimpse of him on the screen in "Henry the Eighth." From that moment, she had no difficulty in answering the eternal question, "Who is your favorite actor?"

When Jean was notified that she would do a picture in London, there were hundreds of details to be attended to, so she had no time to make inquiries about the picture she was to make.

Imagine her delight, on arriving in London, in being told that she was to play opposite Robert Donat! It took her breath away. She and her guardian, Mrs. Jessie Wright, were taken to the Claridge. When shown to her suite, Jean found awaiting her the most gorgeous box of flowers she had ever seen. When her surprise and nervousness abated sufficiently for her to open it, she found the card reading, "Hoping your stay in London will be a happy one. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Donat."

As she began meeting people connected with the production, one after another said, "You are going to love working with Robert Donat." As if she hadn't dreamed of this for ages!

"And then, would you believe it," she continued, "everything went badly. My work was unbelievably stiff and both of us were so shy and without any

(Continued on page 78)

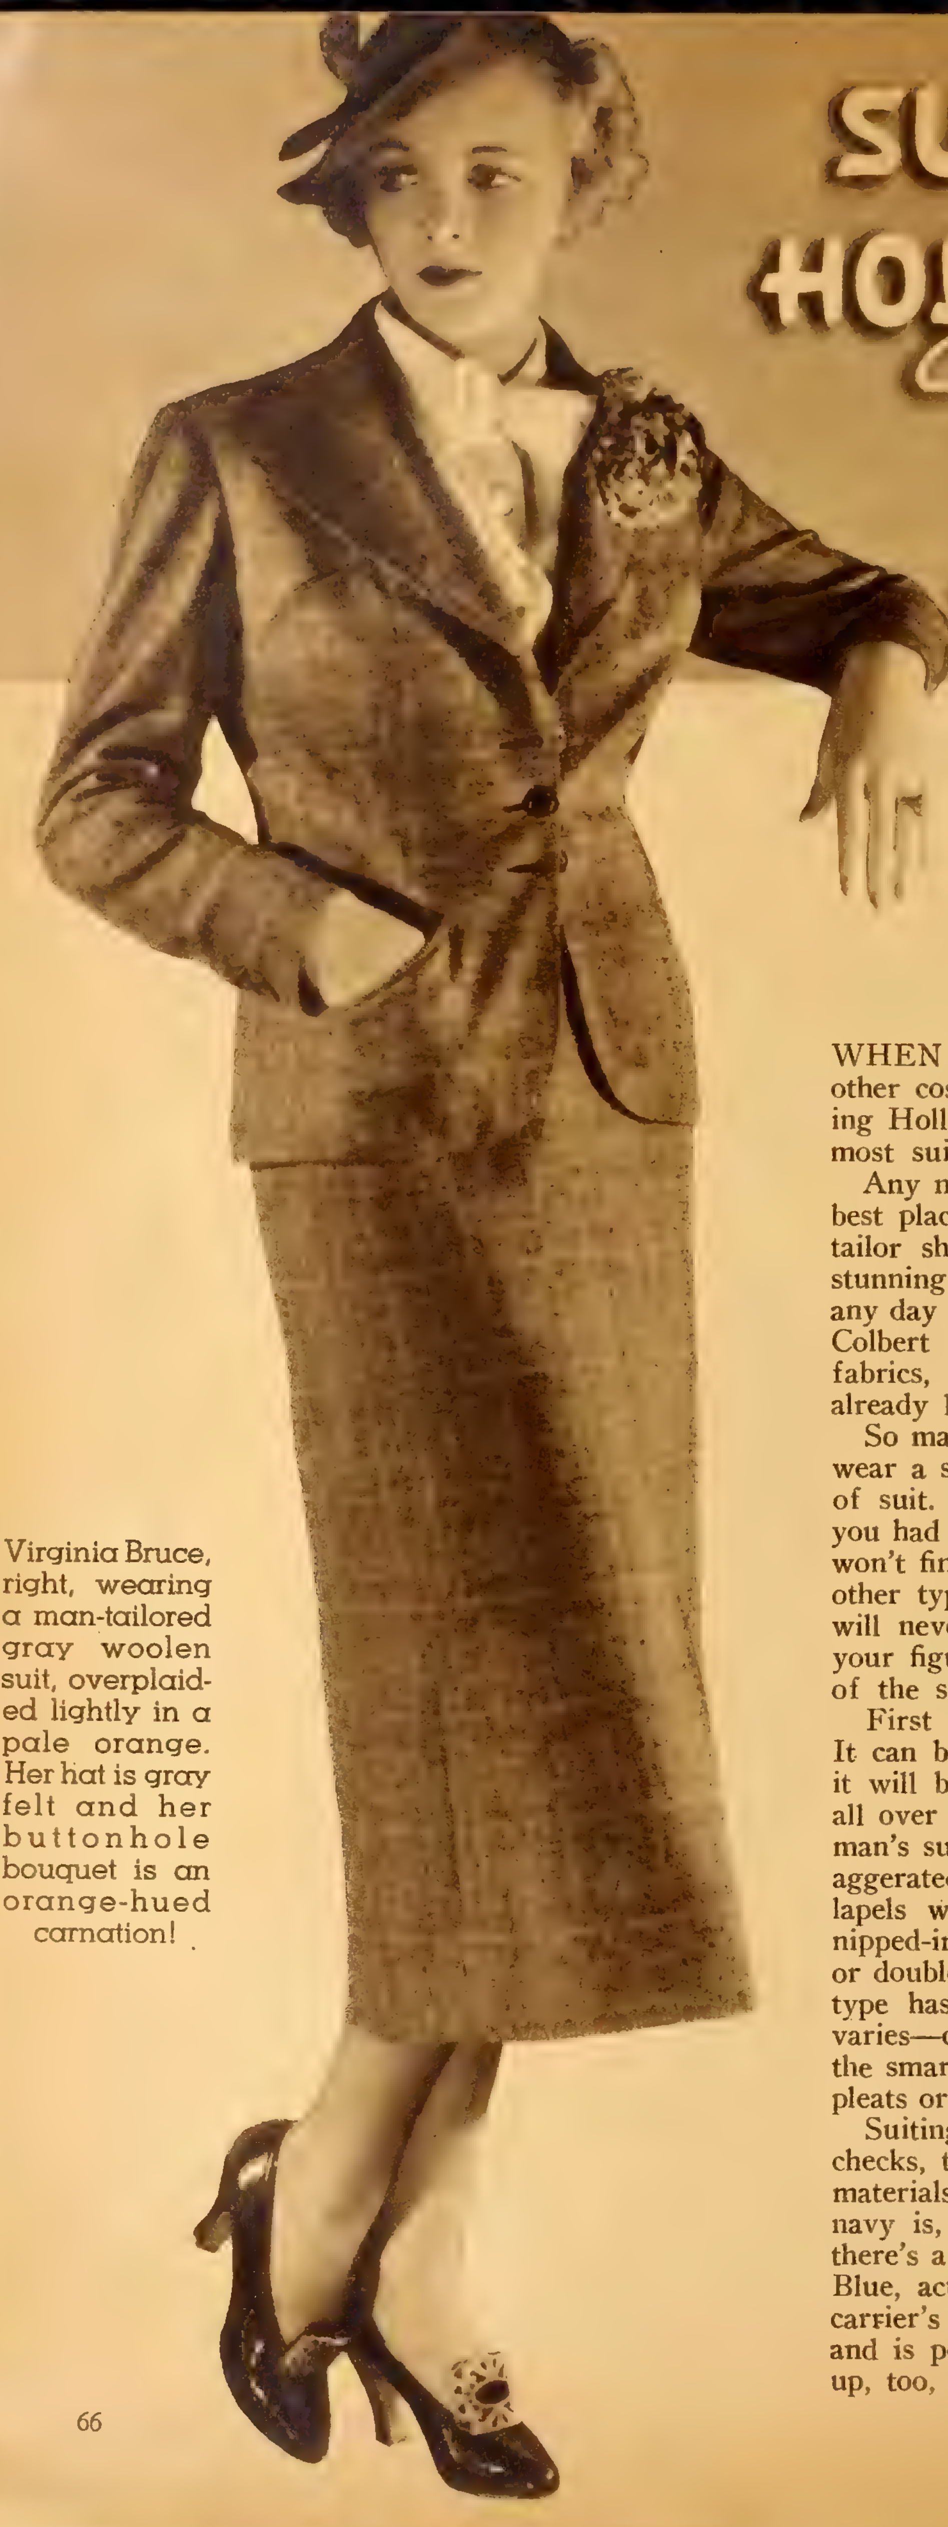
SUITED TO HOLLYWOOD'S Taste



Easter favorites you'll see smart cinema-ites wearing

Virginia Bruce, right, wearing a man-tailored gray woolen suit, overplaided lightly in a pale orange. Her hat is gray felt and her buttonhole bouquet is an orange-hued carnation!

WHEN FASHION dictators say, "Suits lead every other costume in importance this spring," they are talking Hollywood's language. For Hollywood is one of the most suit-conscious towns in the country.

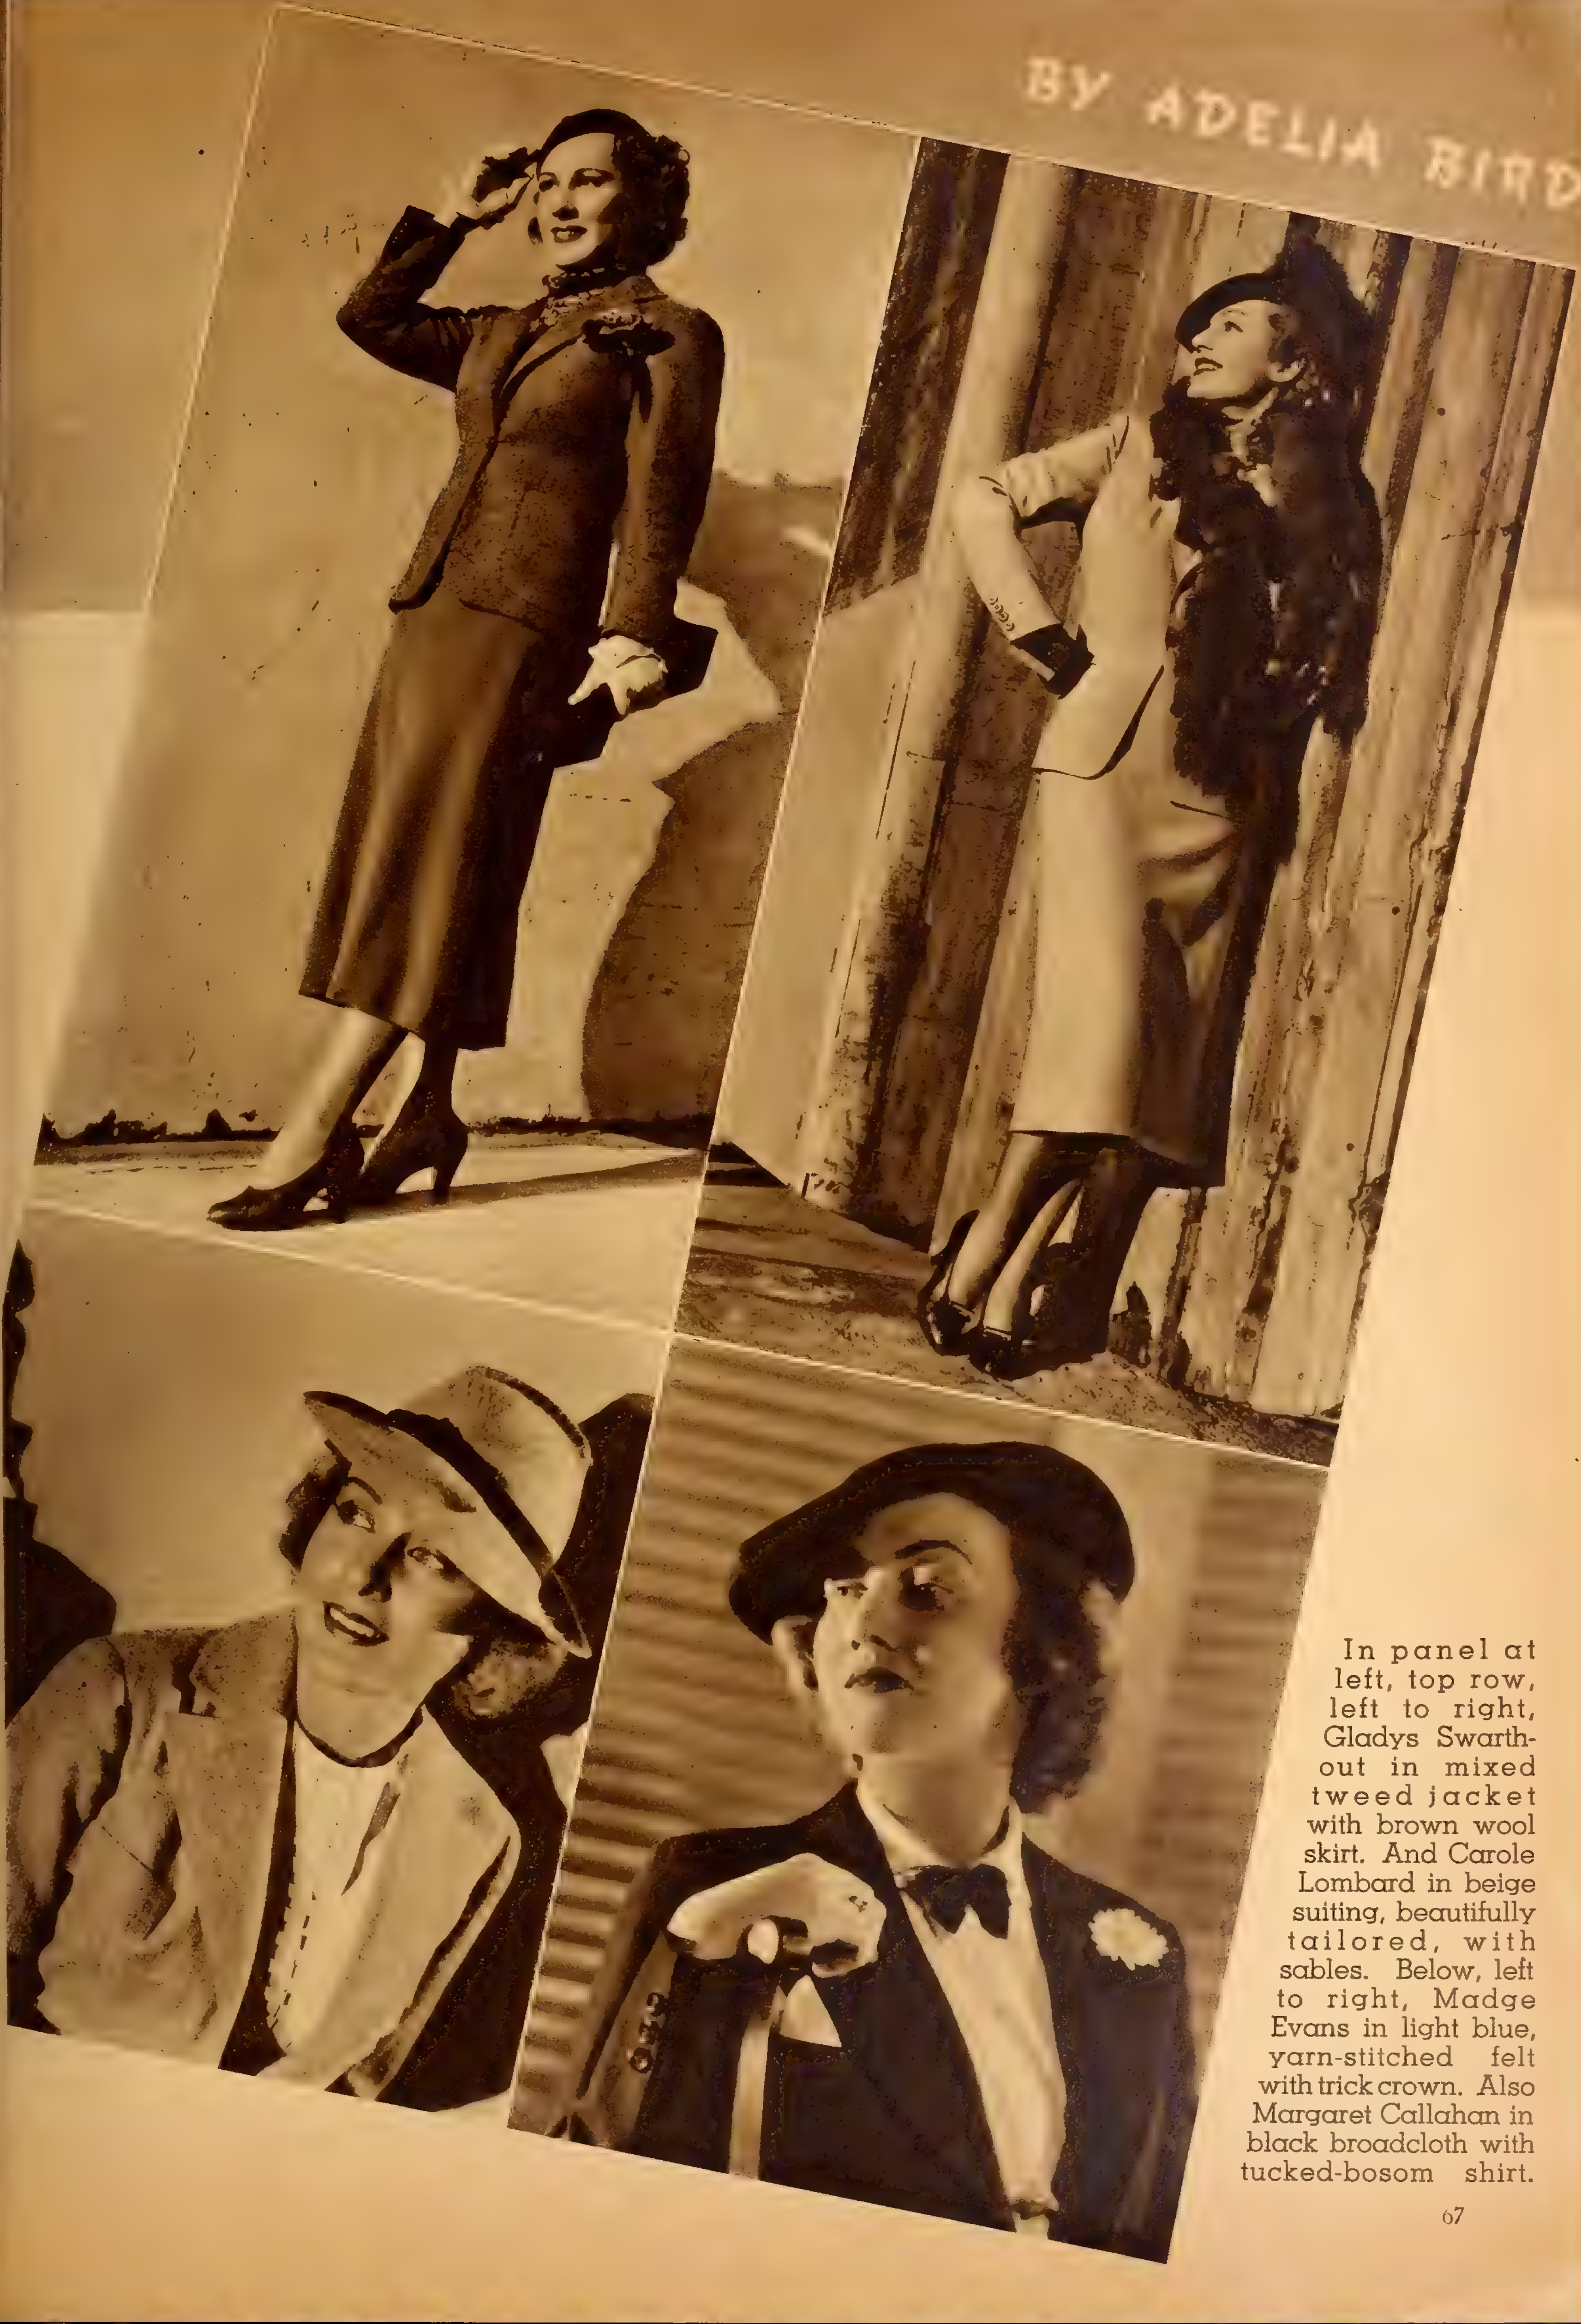
Any native Hollywoodian will tell you that one of the best places to track down celebrities is at Watson's, the tailor shop that supplies the smartest stars with their stunning hand-tailored suits. You can go in there almost any day and run a pretty good chance of seeing Claudette Colbert having a fitting, Marlene Dietrich picking out fabrics, or Carole Lombard adding another suit to her already large wardrobe.

So many of you worry about whether or not you can wear a suit. I think most of you can wear some form of suit. Unless you are moderately slender, however, you had better pass up the mannish tailored suit. You won't find that a hardship, because there are so many other types of suits from which to choose that you will never mind not wearing the more trying (for your figure), strictly tailored style. Here are some of the suit types that will be popular this spring.

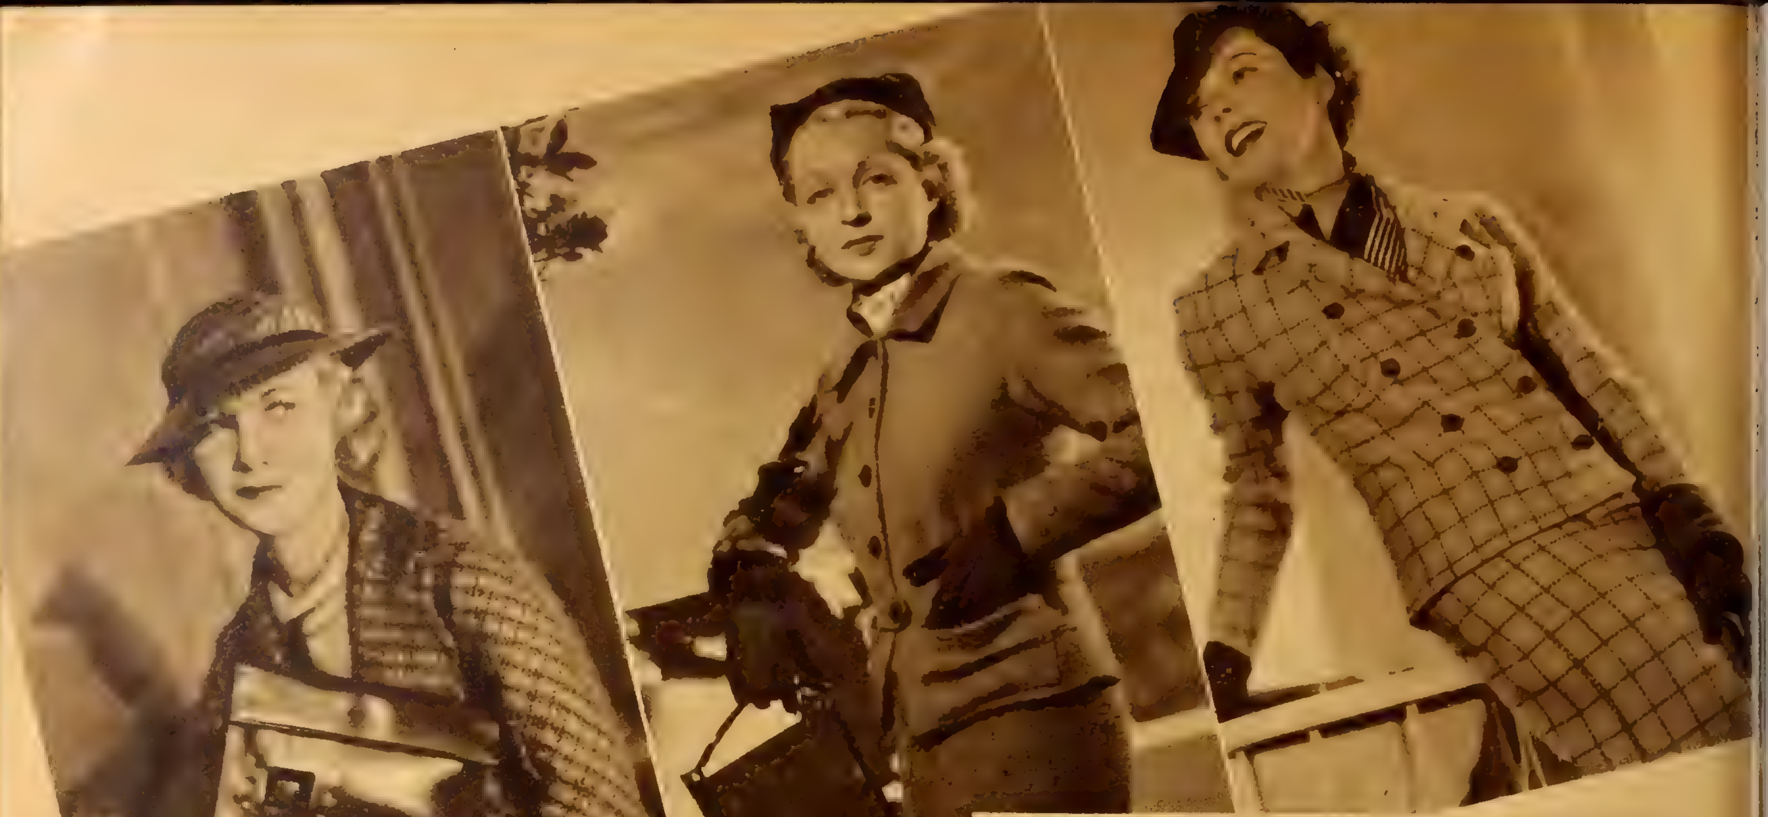
First is the classic tailormade, just mentioned. It can be called the most important style because it will be more generally worn by smart women all over the country. It is a direct steal from a man's suit. It should have shoulders slightly exaggerated in their squareness. It has notched lapels with a buttonhole, trick pockets and a nipped-in effect at the waist. It can be single or double-breasted, although the single-breasted type has an edge on the other. Its length varies—cuff length, like a man's jacket, being the smartest. The skirt is slender, with only pleats or tucks for detailing.

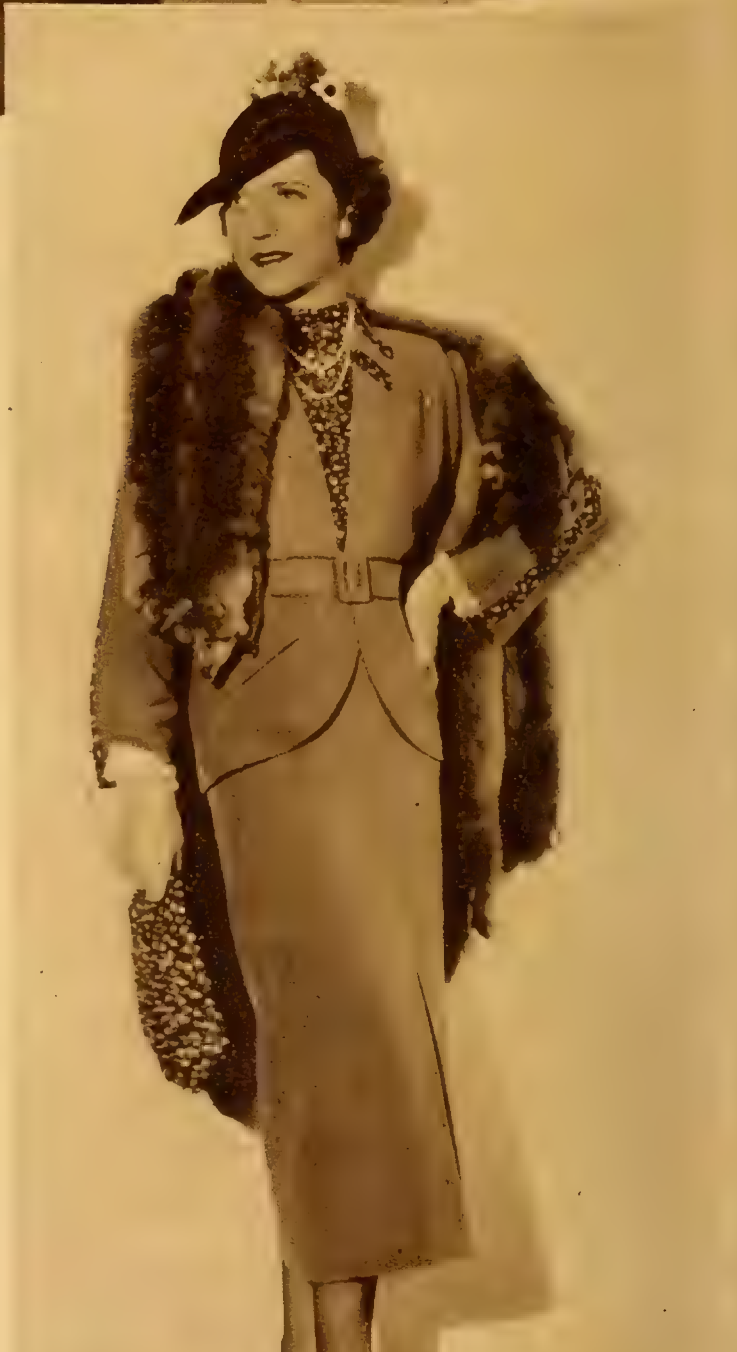
Suiting fabrics, hairline striped worsteds, checks, tweeds and worsted flannels are the materials for these suits. As to colors, navy is, of course, a big favorite. Then there's a grand new color called Postman's Blue, actually the shade that your letter-carrier's uniform sports. It has a rather military air and is perfect for the tailormade suit. Gray is looking up, too, as a suit shade, although a lot of you probably will pass it up for the more generally becoming beige and brown tones.

BY ADELIA BIRD



In panel at left, top row, left to right, Gladys Swarthout in mixed tweed jacket with brown wool skirt. And Carole Lombard in beige suiting, beautifully tailored, with sables. Below, left to right, Madge Evans in light blue, yarn-stitched felt with trick crown. Also Margaret Callahan in black broadcloth with tucked-bosom shirt.





Above, left to right, Una Merkel prefers knitted suits with smart matching hats. Hers is a tweed knit jacket with a plain hairy wool knit skirt. That bag is a tricky affair in oxblood brown calf with a watch that really works and nailheads to point out the time. Next a young English star, Lillie Palmer, wears a hopsack green tweed suit with well-chosen black accessories. That big bag is a very new size and style for suits this season. Jane Wyatt wears a beige woolen sports suit overplaided in brown—the jacket is made on reefer lines, double-breasted. The Ascot scarf is a smart finishing touch. And at the right, Mona Barrie wears the dressmaker type of spring suit—this cleverly combines a plain woolen with gaily printed blouse, trimming and handbag. The suit is gray, the print blue, white and gray and her hat and shoes in navy.

And I can hear you all crying now, "What about the length of our suit skirts?" Well, according to the fashion-powers-that-be and one of Hollywood's well-known designers, Lambert, you can make your hemline between thirteen and fourteen inches from the ground. Lambert advocates the shorter length of fourteen inches. He says, "Fourteen inches will not be too much for day-time lengths. This means, I think, that waistlines will stay put. In spite of rumors that rise wraith-like now and then in favor of lowered waists, women so far have refused to take them seriously. And with shorter skirts, the tendency toward shoes with lower heels will remain, especially for spectator sports and country wear."

Carole Lombard follows the Lambert prediction with a very short skirt for the beige suit shown on page 57. This is a perfect example of the man-tailored type in a smooth suit fabric. Note the (Continued on page 74)

Unless Camels thoroughly please you—they cost you nothing!

Camels are mild in the best sense of the word—mild in flavor and, even more important, so mild you can smoke all you want.

To emphasize our confidence that you will recognize the superiority of Camel's costlier tobaccos...we want you to try them at our risk.

See if you don't agree with Mrs. Allston Boyer, Miss Dorothy Paine, Mrs. William Wetmore, and the other discerning women throughout the country who have learned that in cigarettes the cost of the tobaccos and the skill with which they are blended are all-important.

MRS. ALLSTON BOYER (Above): "I notice that if I'm tired a Camel freshens me up. Lots of people have told me the same thing. I can smoke all I want, too, and they never upset my nerves."

MISS DOROTHY PAINE (Above right): "Of course I smoke Camels. They have such a grand, smooth flavor. And they never make my nerves jumpy. When I'm all tired out, a Camel sets me right again."

MRS. WILLIAM T. WETMORE (Right): "Everywhere you go they're smoking Camels. Their smoother, richer flavor seems to fit in with the gayer life we are leading again. They are made from more expensive tobaccos."

CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND CIGARETTES
QUALITY

Costlier Tobaccos!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

Money-Back Invitation to try Camels

Smoke 10 fragrant Camels. If you don't find them the mildest, best-flavored cigarettes you ever smoked, return the package with the rest of the cigarettes in it to us at any time within a month from this date, and we will refund your full purchase price, plus postage.

(Signed)
R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY
Winston-Salem, North Carolina

© 1936, R. J. Reynolds Tob. Co.

THESE THREE

Behold three charming people who have their lives very much messed up by an evil-minded child. Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea and Miriam Hopkins in "These Three." Miriam looks as if she might be destined to be the loser. Yes?

WIN BACK Smooth Line-Free Skin QUICKLY

LINES, DRY SKIN say: "Getting on in years"
COARSE PORES
say: "Slim chances for good times!"

Miss Isabel Parker has that exquisite but delicate type of skin which often gets lined early: "Pond's Cold Cream actually ends dryness—smooths away little lines."

—rouse that faulty Under Skin

A PRETTY skin always wins friendly glances! It's not surprising that a coarse or dull skin is the reason many a nice girl is hardly noticed. Blackheads, blemishes draw positive criticism. Men seem to think that a good skin comes naturally!

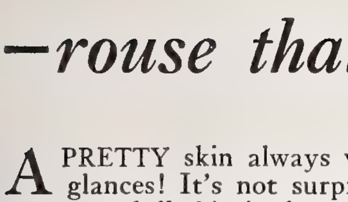
But actually that good skin is something most of us have to work for—And can win!

When lines come—blackheads, blemishes—it's a sign that under the skin you see, something has gone wrong.

How to reach the under tissues

Look at the diagram of the skin below. See the nerves, fibres, glands in the under layers. In your teens, these busily carry nourishment to your skin. When they slow, skin faults begin.

You've got to fight these skin faults off . . . rouse that faulty underskin. And you can!—by faithful use of Pond's invigorating deep-skin treatment.



Where Skin Age begins..

Just below that dark layer, tiny glands, cells, muscle and nerve fibres keep outer skin young. When they slow—skin dries out, ages!

Pond's Cold Cream, with its specially processed fine oils, travels deep into the pores. Right away it softens dirt—Floats out the clogging matter.

Eleanor Gould

now Mrs. Ludlow W. Stevens, daughter of the late Jay Gould: "Even the first treatment with Pond's Cold Cream made my skin seem finer textured."

Now your pores are free! Your skin is ready for a fresh application of this youth-giving cream. Pat it in smartly. Feel the blood tingling. Your skin alive! Glowing. You have wakened that sleepy underskin!

Do this regularly—note the improvement. Color livened. Skin smoother. In time, pores refined. Lines softened.

This famous Pond's treatment does more than cleanse. It brings to skin that fresh vital look that we all call beauty . . .

Every night, pat in Pond's Cold Cream to bring out dirt, make-up, skin secretions . . . Wipe it off! Pat in more cream briskly . . . to rouse that faulty underskin, to win back smooth, line-free skin!

Every morning, and during the day, repeat this treatment—Your skin becomes softer every time. Powder goes on beautifully.

Pond's Cold Cream is pure. Germs cannot live in it.

SPECIAL 9-TREATMENT TUBE
and 3 other Pond's Beauty Aids

POND'S, Dept. D-50, Clinton, Conn. Rush special tube of Pond's Cold Cream, enough for 9 treatments, with generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ to cover postage and packing.

Name______________________________
Street______________________________
City__________________State__________

Copyright, 1936, Pond's Extract Company

Your hands

WILL LEAD A LOVELIER LIFE
ALL . . WEEK . . LONG!

GLAZO IS WORLD-FAMOUS FOR BEAUTY AND LONG WEAR

WOMEN are becoming more critical, more discriminating in the beauty preparations they use. They expect a nail polish not only to be outstandingly lovely but to apply easily without streaking and to wear for days longer than polishes they used to know.

Because Glazo has these virtues, its fame has circled the world. It is famous for its glorious fashion-approved shades. It is famous for solving the streaking problem and for amazing ease of application. It is famous for giving 2 to 4 days longer wear, without peeling or chipping.

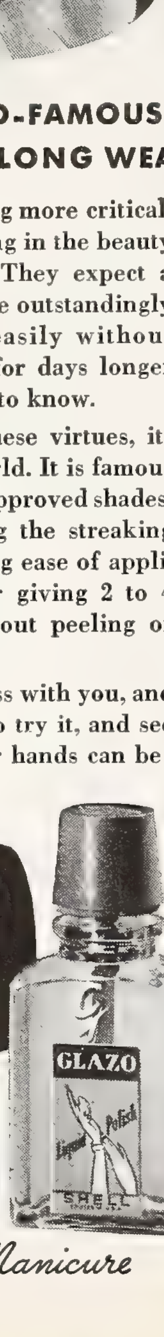
Glazo shares its success with you, and is now only 20 cents. Do try it, and see how much lovelier your hands can be!

Just 20 CENTS

IN CANADA 25 CENTS

GLAZO

. . The Smart Manicure



Your Girl Friday's Buddy

(Continued from page 42)

just the type of girl who might at any moment go out into the kitchen and come back with a plate of home-made fudge.

Under the circumstances the only thing to feel absolutely sure about was Buddy's unmistakable Hollywood success, so obvious that the preview audiences had laughed him immediately into the studio's good books.

"You—don't—have—to—be—polite," he drawled, unwinding a slow smile, at my mention of his hit.

Shy. Evidently this diffident Southerner couldn't be drawn without feeling he was also being quartered.

"You're billed as Buddy, but what's your real name?"

"I'd rather not tell you," he grinned sheepishly.

"It embarrasses him," considerately added Your Girl Friday.

Percy, Claude, Cecil, Rollo, Cuthbert . . . oh, well, never mind!

"How long have you been dancing?"

"Since I was four. Kept it up for seven years, till I was old enough to object to it."

"Why did you object?"

"Thought it was sissy," he rumbled, hanging his shaggy head.

A smothered laugh caused me to turn sternly to Your Girl Friday.

"You're getting more out of Buddy than I ever knew about him," she explained.

It was a good beginning, but I had to keep working on him.

"Guess I couldn't take it when the boys kidded me. That happened in my home town, Orlando, Florida, where my father ran a dancing school. My sister Vilma and I were taught classical dancing. From seeing her in 'Broadway Melody' you can imagine how good she was right from the start. But I wasn't so hot. Somehow, I couldn't go for that sowing the seed stuff—you know—"

Raising his hands, he fluttered them over his head in imitation of the Spring Dance, and almost fell off the sofa.

SO I gave it up and didn't go back to dancing till I was nineteen or twenty. My father didn't want me to dance for a living. He thought it would be better for me to raise oranges. But I decided to study medicine, and I did for two years at the University of Florida and Rollins College. Then the bottom dropped out of the land boom and everybody was broke. There were only two things I knew anything about, dancing and jerking sodas. I'd worked in a drug store at home after hours in high school. But I decided there was more money in dancing, and that New York was the place to do it. That summer my father had a camp in North Carolina, and I went there because it wasn't so far from New York as Orlando. My older sister, who worked in a bank—she's the only practical one in the family—gave me fifty dollars, and I headed for the big town. Say," he broke off, "I guess I'm making quite a hero of myself."

"Go on, Buddy," I said.

"Well," he gulped, "when I got to New York I had just twenty-four dollars left. I put the money in my sock and began pounding the pavements. I didn't know a soul there. But a second cousin of mine had given me a letter of introduction to a third cousin of his who was a boy in the chorus of a Broadway show. He took me up to his rooming-house in Eighty-eighth Street and let me bunk with him. It was darn nice of him. Next day I went out looking for a job, but when I got back at night I couldn't find the place. All the houses looked alike to me. I kept hunting for the one that fitted the key I carried till I almost got arrested for being a burglar. So I gave it up and slept in a car parked along the curb. In the morning I found I was right in front of the house I'd been looking for."

Your Girl Friday had another attack of throat trouble and seemed to be strangling.

"I sure felt a fool," confessed Buddy. "But I felt even worse when all my money was gone. Then I got a job, or thought I had one, in the chorus of 'Present Arms,' which Lew Fields was putting on. But we'd just started rehearsing when Fields walked in and, getting his eye on me, said, 'He won't do, he's towering over all the others.' Just my luck to be too tall. I must have looked kind of sad, because the stage manager, Teddy Hammerstein, dug into his jeans and said, 'Sorry, kid, but here's two bucks.' I've never seen him since, but if he reads this I'll bet he'll get a kick out of it. Well, I knocked around till I'd spent those two bucks and was busted. So I borrowed a quarter from my roommate and went downtown. I was in a drug store at Forty-eighth Street and Seventh Avenue buying myself two chocolate bars for lunch—another dime gone—when somebody back of me called out, 'Hello, Buddy!' Darned if it wasn't a boy from my home town! He was employed in the place, and when I told him I was looking for work he got me a job there jerking sodas. After awhile I got a better one doing the same thing on the Long Island side of the Pennsylvania Station. And that's the fastest fountain in the world."

Pride, for the first time, glowed in Buddy's eyes. Shaking his feet, apparently, was no great shakes to him. But to hit the gait of the world's fastest soda fountain was going some.

I'M not fast by nature," he admitted, "but I stuck it out for two months taking those commuters as they came, and believe me they came a-running. Then Ziegfeld had a chorus call for 'Whoopee,' and I got my first stage job."

"'Whoopee' was the first musical show I saw in New York," remarked Your Girl Friday, "but I didn't know Buddy then."

"Just as well," he commented. "I wasn't making enough to support a canary. But later on, when I was doing a run show, I brought my sister Vilma to New York, and she went into the chorus with me. After eighteen months of that we sneaked back home. Then Vilma had an offer from Atlantic City, and when she got enough car fare I joined her there in a little honky-tonk. One night Winchell walked in and spotted me. He gave me a big plug in his column, and two days later we had seventy-eight offers. Benny Davis, a song writer who had a vaudeville act, had been with Winchell the night Walter blew in, and he signed us up on the spot. We had two years in vaudeville before I met my wife, and by that time she was working for Winchell. Funny how it all came about through Walter."

This time Your Girl Friday, who had come to New York from Pittsburgh as Ruth Cambridge, didn't laugh. Both she and Buddy were lost in a sentimental moment before he pulled himself out of

(Continued on page 74)

"I've found a simple beauty care that really works"

LORETTA YOUNG
Star of the 20th Century-Fox Production
"Lightning Strikes Twice"

"LUX Toilet Soap guards against Cosmetic Skin..."

"USE ROUGE AND POWDER? Like most girls, I do," says lovely Loretta Young. "But I never risk Cosmetic Skin."

Avoid dangerous pore choking Loretta Young's way. Use the soap with ACTIVE lather that goes deep into the pores—removes every trace of dust, dirt, stale cosmetics. Then you guard against Cosmetic Skin—dullness, tiny blemishes, enlarged pores.

Before you put on fresh make-up during the day—ALWAYS before you go to bed, use gentle Lux Toilet Soap. This simple care keeps skin lovely—as you want yours to be.

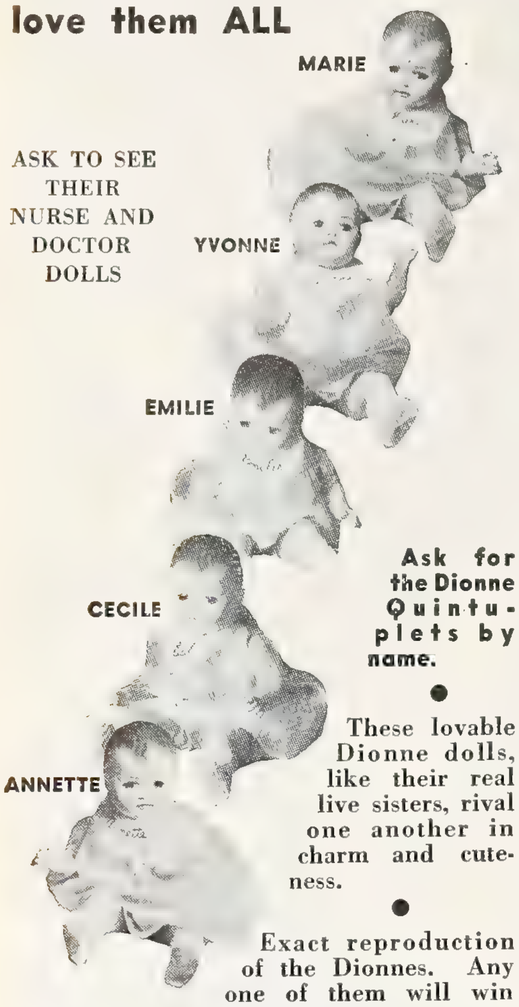
LUX
TOILET SOAP

LITTLE MOTHERS OF THE WORLD ADOPT FAMOUS DIONNE QUINTUPLET DOLL FAMILY

EVERY ONE ADORABLE

BUT—

You'll want and love them ALL



ASK TO SEE THEIR NURSE AND DOCTOR DOLLS

Ask for the Dionne Quintuplets by name.

●

These lovable Dionne dolls, like their real live sisters, rival one another in charm and cuteness.

●

Exact reproduction of the Dionnes. Any one of them will win your heart. But you can get them all at any department store or toy shop in your city.

REMEMBER—

The Dionne Quintuplet dolls are the only Quintuplet dolls and are made in the exact image of these famous babies by permission of the Canadian Guardians.

If stores in your city do not have these dolls available, write direct to

The Alexander Doll Co.
20 West 22nd Street
New York

NEWS FLASH

Watch for the 20th Century picture featuring the Dionne Quintuplets in "The Country Doctor"—to be released in March.

Johnny Downs and Cecilia Parker look interested in one another at the surprise party given by Tom Brown's parents for all the younger Hollywood screen boys and girls.

(Continued from page 72)

it and continued.

"We were married on the Fourth of July. I said it was just for a gag, so that in subsequent years the whole country could celebrate our wedding anniversary. But I really did it," he shamelessly chuckled, "so I wouldn't forget the date."

Your Girl Friday took this with the amiable tolerance of a joke that had been in the family since the day they'd ankled down the aisle strewn with beautiful firecrackers.

"But I really did forget all about dancing," solemnly resumed Buddy, "till one day in Orlando when I went to a vaudeville show and saw some tap dancers called 'The Swanee Four.' That was something new to me, and when I got home I asked my father about it. He got out a book on clog dancing, but that didn't help much. I picked up a few of the steps here and there, then put in some of my own. I practically learned taps by myself, and found it easy because I'd had a classical education in dancing. Taps are pretty much a matter of lifting and shifting of weight, and I'd learned how to do that as a kid. I didn't think much about it at the time."

"And what do you think of it now?"

"Oh," was his casual reply, "it's a good way to make a living. The trouble with me was that at the start I took it seriously. That was wrong. When people look at me I know they want to laugh. I'd never pictured myself as a serious guy, although I always thought seriously. I looked on myself as a big hick, and finally realized I'd have to clown my dancing to put it over. But it was a shock to me to see what I really looked like in my first Hollywood picture. When I saw myself on the screen at that preview I couldn't believe my eyes. It gave me an awful jolt."

"Otherwise how does Hollywood strike you?"

"Like a combination of Florida and Monte Carlo. I danced in the Casino there," he explained. "Yeah, I've hoofed around a bit."

He certainly gets a lot of mileage out of those clever feet of his. And they're bound to carry Your Girl Friday's Buddy far in the screen world.

Suited to Hollywood's Taste

(Continued from page 68)

cut of the jacket and the single button closing—very smart details. It's too bad that you can't see the perfectly cut lapels but Carole's own luxurious fur scarf obscures them. As you see, Carole chooses dark brown accessories, a rather dashing felt hat, plain brown gloves and opera pumps decorated with amusing tubular buckles.

Another excellent example of the mannish suit is Virginia Bruce's gray woolen with an almost invisible plaid in a pale orange tone. Her jacket has a three-button closing, single-breasted. And her slender skirt has a center front inverted pleat. With this suit, Virginia wears a white silk blouse, very tailored, too, the bosom tucked and the turnover collar with small self tie. Her buttonhole bouquet is an orange carnation—quite a whimsy but effective in the way it matches the faint plaid in her suit. Her gray felt has a becoming roll to its brim and a tiny feather in orange also.

Gladys Swarthout is another suit fancier. In talking with her recently, she said, "Any woman who can afford three simple costumes could dress as well as the best-dressed woman in America." And Gladys should know because she was recently selected as one of the best-dressed in this country. And what do you suppose she puts first on her list of three simple costumes? You're right, a tailored suit, of course! The other two, in case you are curious are: a combination afternoon dinner dress and evening gown.

Gladys, at the time of our talk, was wearing the very good looking suit of unmatched pieces which you can see on page 67. The jacket of brown and white heather mixture tweed, with one-button closing and patch pockets, tops a skirt of smooth brown serge. One thing particularly, which I like about her costume,

(Continued on page 76)

"Change for Five"...

LAUNDERED WITH "LYSOL"

Photograph, World Copyright. NEA Service Inc.

EMELIE
ANNETTE
MARIE
CECILE
YVONNE

THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS BABIES On May 28th, 1934, in the wilds of northern Ontario, far from modern hospital facilities—these now famous quintuplets were born. In all medical history only 33 cases of quintuple birth had been recorded. In no other case had the babies survived more than a few hours. Yet today these five little Dionnes are as healthy as any normal youngsters of their age. "Lysol" helps protect them from Infection.

GETTING to be big girls now—those famous Dionne babies! Almost 2 years old! But not an instant's relaxation is permitted in the scientific care with which they are surrounded.

The very first registered nurse to reach the Dionne home on that exciting morning in 1934 when the quintuplets were born, had "Lysol" in her kit, as part of her regular equipment, and made that simple cottage hospital-clean with it.

Today "Lysol" is still an essential aid in the care of EMELIE, ANNETTE, MARIE, CECILE, and YVONNE. Since the day of their birth, "Lysol" has been the only disinfectant used to help guard the quintuplets against the dangers of Infection.

You ought to give your baby the same scrupulous care the little Dionnes get. Use "Lysol" to keep your baby's surroundings hospital-clean, to help fight Infection in your home.

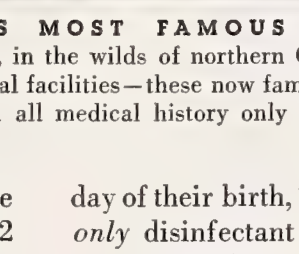
"Lysol" is a reliable disinfectant. For nearly 50 years it has enjoyed the confidence of the medical profession all over the world, and is regularly used in leading hospitals. In the home "Lysol" should be used, according to directions on each bottle, in your cleaning water, on brooms, mops, cloths.

Danger spots such as stair rails, door knobs, bathrooms, garbage pails, should be washed with "Lysol". Walls, floors and furniture—especially in the children's room—should be cleaned with a "Lysol" solution. And launder handkerchiefs, towels, bed-linen, underclothes, with "Lysol" in the water.

This wise precaution is so easy, costs so little, makes cleaning so much cleaner—and may save you the heartaches of vain regrets. Disinfect as you clean, with "Lysol".

NEW!... LYSOL HYGIENIC SOAP

...for hands, complexion, bath. A fine, firm, white soap, with the added deodorant property of "Lysol". Protects longer against body odors, without leaving strong after-odor. Washes away germs and perspiration odors. Get a cake at your favorite drug counter.



Lysol Disinfectant

GUIDANCE FOR WIVES AND MOTHERS

LEHN & FINK, INC., Bloomfield, N. J., Dept. M.S.4
Sole Distributors of "Lysol" disinfectant

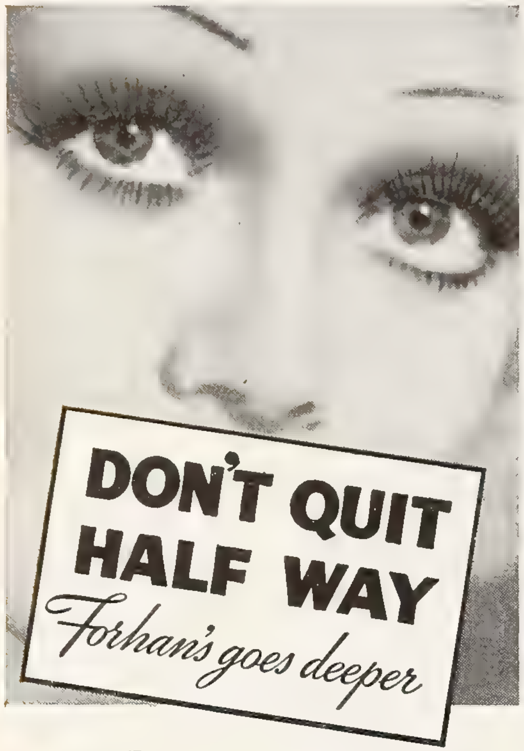
Please send me the book called "LYSOL vs. GERMS", with facts about Feminine Hygiene and other uses of "Lysol".

*Name*__________

*Street*__________

*City*__________ *State*__________

© 1936, Lehn & Fink, Inc.



DON'T QUIT HALF WAY
Forhan's goes deeper

DOES BOTH JOBS

CLEANS TEETH

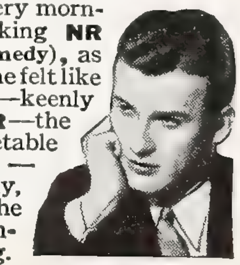
Half way care of the teeth is fooling thousands of people. They clean their teeth regularly. Yet they leave the door wide open to the greatest cause of dental trouble—soft, spongy, bleeding gums. Why run this risk? Forhan's costs no more than most other tooth pastes and gives you double protection —whitens teeth and safeguards gums at the same time.

SAVES GUMS

Forhan's is different from all other tooth pastes. No other tooth paste brings you the famous Forhan formula—long used by dentists everywhere to combat gum troubles. You can feel its healthful effects as soon as you begin to use Forhan's. Shortly you see its benefits, too —whiter teeth, firmer gums. Ask for Forhan's today.

Forhan's

The ORIGINAL TOOTH PASTE for the GUMS and TEETH by Doctor R. J. Forhan SPECIALIST IN DENTAL SURGERY NEW YORK



What SHE TOLD WORN-OUT HUSBAND

She could have reproached him for his fits of temper—his "all in" complaints. But wisely she saw in his frequent colds, his "fagged out," "on edge" condition the very trouble she herself had whipped. Constipation! The very morning after taking NR (Nature's Remedy), as she advised, he felt like himself again—keenly alert, peppy, cheerful. NR—the safe, dependable, all-vegetable laxative and corrective — works gently, thoroughly, naturally. It stimulates the eliminative tract to complete, regular functioning. Non-habit-forming. Try a box tonight. 25c—at druggists.

NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

FREE: Beautiful five-color 1936 Calendar-Thermometer. Also samples of NR and Tums. Send stamp for packing and postage to A. H. Lewis Co., Desk 68D-4, St. Louis, Mo.

(Continued from page 74)

is the choice of a gay paisley print neck scarf and matching handkerchief, the latter tucked into an upper breast pocket. Her gloves are an item, too, hand-sewn chamois ones with the buttoning on the back of the hand.

FOR you gals, who want to pass up the too tailored look, the next choice is the more feminine type of tailormade. This has softer, fuller lines through the jacket—often the jacket is much shorter, giving a more youthful and less severe air. Two good examples of this style are the suits worn by Mona Barrie and Rosalind Russell. Mona's suit, shown on page 68, was designed by Gwen Wakeling and she has cleverly combined a soft gray woolen with a gay printed silk in lapis blue flecked with white and gray. The collarless jacket is longer than most of this type and is cut away to show the printed blouse, fastening only by the wide self belt. The print also trims the jacket—broad stripes of it down the sleeves and tabs of it appliqued upon the upper part near the neck. Miss Wakeling also designed a bag in the print to match and Mona chose a felt hat in deep blue ornamented high on the crown by a giddy bunch of flowers.

Another Wakeling model is Rosalind Russell's suit, not illustrated, which is a three-piece affair. A nubby beige woolen for the jacket and skirt and a plaid beige and brown woolen for the three-quarter length which accompanies them. The suit jacket is uniquely fastened by shoelaces run through metal eyelets. Two pockets with large flaps and a turnover collar are interesting added details. Rosalind wears either a white pique blouse or a light sweater with this. Her hat, of suit fabric, has a small bird's wing clipped into the center fold. The new shorter length to the topcoat and the revers of lynx, make it a good topcoat for cool days and may be worn with a variety of sports and daytime costumes besides the suit. Broad strap alligator shoes in brown and a huge matching envelope purse complete the perfect appointments of the outfit.

A youthful sports suit is that of Jane Wyatt's on page 68. This is grand for all you young things, who like the casual suit better than either the more formal tailormade or the mannish two-piece. Jane's suit is gay with its overplaid of brown on beige. This suit is double-breasted with the buttons marching up the suit in the manner of reefer jackets. With this she wears a brightly striped scarf tucked into the neckline, and a perky brown felt hat with green quills.

The three-piece ensemble with a straight coat, rather than the full swagger of last spring, is a runner-up for popular favor. The jackets of these suits are usually a little longer than three-quarter length. The smoother woolens in oxford gray, navy blue and black are smart, especially when bright contrasting accessories are adroitly used by the wearer.

The cape suits which you will see and want to wear are those that have long capes made rather straight and slightly military — little collars, shoulder yokes and such trappings. These are popular for travel and sports rather than for active daytime use in town.

HOLLYWOOD has a multitude of answers on what to wear with your Easter suit. Most of the stars favor a brimmed hat, the rather simple sporty type with the brim rolled up in back or at the side to give it dash. Madge Evans wears a very becoming brimmed felt with her tailored suit—light blue in color, it has slight crown height achieved by a crease across the top. Light blue yarn stitches a pattern over both brim and crown and a navy blue band gives the hat a dark accent. Note the good looking pique blouse Madge wears with her suit, it is tailored yet has a feminine fillip with the row of flat fabric bows up the front.

Una Merkel is crazy about knitted suits, so much so that she picks one in preference to any other for daytime wear. You can see one of her pets on page 68. It's knitted like a tweed and has a matching brimmed hat—she wears a soft cashmere turtle-neck sweater with it. And how do you like her trick bag? It's oxblood calf to match her shoes and the watch, which actually works, is outlined by nailheads indicating the hours. These large calf bags, either in envelope style or with handles, are perfect accessories for suits of all kinds.

Margaret Callahan likes the dark cloth suit which can be made to look more formal by adding dress-up accessories. You can see, on page 67, what she chooses to complement a black broadcloth tailleur, made very much like a man's dinner jacket. The silk blouse is finely tucked like a man's tuxedo shirt bosom and has a small turnover collar set off by a tiny black silk tie. A white daisy for her buttonhole and a charming black felt hat with a cuff brim. And, I almost forgot, Margaret's skirt boasts silk stripes down each side, à la evening trousers!

It's fun to vary boutonnieres with your suit. You can have real flowers or artificial ones. In early spring I think it is gay to have real ones and especially the first spring blooms that are so inexpensive. You can gain a real reputation for the originality of your buttonhole bouquet. Carole Lombard, for instance, has become famous for her carnations dyed in all colors to match her various costumes. Bachelor buttons and daisies are great Hollywood favorites, too. In fact, except for Easter morning when all the gals like to strut their best flowers, most of the stars use the simpler garden or hothouse flowers rather than the more exotic blooms such as gardenias and orchids. Camellias are lovely, too, but they are harder to get.

Scarfs—you can have a field day with them. Almost any kind can be used with your suits, especially the bright plaid and striped silk ones worn Ascot fashion. The 'kerchief is right with sports suits, and it can be silk, knit or wool. Handkerchiefs tucked into pockets are a nice way to point up your suit with a contrasting color.

I have included a picture of a young English star in my group this month because I thought you would like to see a smart example of a semi-sports type of suit accented with perfect accessories. Lilli Palmer is the gal and her suit is a youthful two-piece affair in bright green hopsack tweed. The small collar and the single breasted lines with a file of black buttons for fastening are nice details. Lilli wears black hand-sewn pull-on gloves, black plain pumps and carries a stunning square black calf bag with a top handle. A little of her black and white striped Ascot shows at the neckline.

And before I close the suit subject for now, remember that you can wear tailored yet feminine blouses with your tailleur—taffeta, wash silks or cottons. And you will like sweaters or thin flannel shirts with your sports tweeds. With your ensembles and more formal suits, you can pick those blouses that have frills, jabots and all sorts of feminine fripperies.

I'm going to tell you all about shoes next month, so standby till then!

A Movie Princess sticks to LUX

"The best care for washables I have ever found," says glamorous

BINNIE BARNES

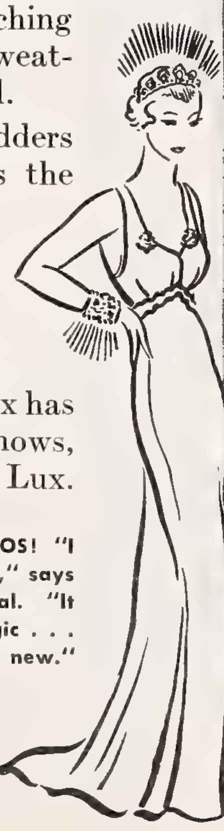
"LUX is like a fairy godmother," declares this lovely but intensely human British star, who has acquired a Texan drawl, and a store of American slang!

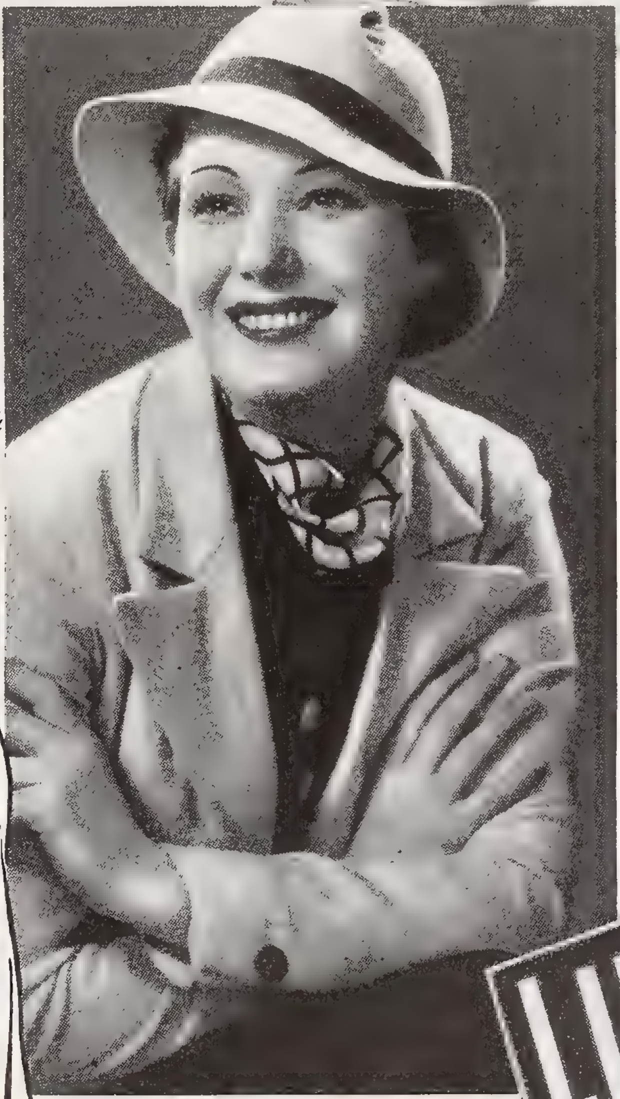
"Getting the breaks may be luck, but looking like a million dollars is a cinch with Lux. I've had so much experience pinching pennies, I know! My blouses and sweaters are wows after they're Luxed.

"And, boy, does Lux stymie ladders—runs, as you say. Lux saves the elasticity of stockings, so they last longer."

Binnie doesn't think cake-soap rubbing is "so hot." Rubbing, or using soaps with harmful alkali weakens threads, fades colors. Lux has no harmful alkali. As Binnie knows, anything safe in water is safe in Lux.

SPECIFIED IN ALL THE BIG HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS! "I take care of all washable costumes with Lux," says Vera West, wardrobe supervisor at Universal. "It cleanses even badly soiled fabrics like magic . . . colors come out of their Lux bath as lovely as new."





Universal's "Sutter's Gold" is another triumph for Binnie. In her Hollywood home (above), she is devoted to country-house simplicity and Luxables—ranging from her own smart clothes to crisp organdie and chintz.

Binnie is keen about active sports, tailored clothes, and Lux! "It's a honey for woolens," she says. "Lux leaves them so soft! And little silk scarfs and lingerie Lux like hankies."

Hollywood says—

DON'T TRUST TO LUCK — TRUST TO LUX

Exquisite but not Expensive

CHERAMY April Showers Talc

IT'S thrilling to use only the softest, finest, imported talc . . . It's exciting to enjoy the refreshing fragrance of April Showers, "the perfume of Youth" . . . And it's satisfying to get this luxury at so low a price.

No wonder April Showers Talc is the most famous and best loved talcum powder in the world!

Her Hero!

(Continued from page 65)

understanding of each other. One day, in desperation, he said, 'Do you like music?' trying to reach some side of me. 'I'm simply starved for it,' I replied. And the ice was broken. My inhibitions were suddenly released. 'No matter how great an actor he is,' I said to myself, 'here is another soul to whom music means a lot,' and I no longer felt afraid.

"When Mr. and Mrs. Donat learned I adored music, they sent me an exquisite phonograph in blue leather, with a dozen such records as we discovered all of us loved. How I treasure this gift! From then on, we called each other by our first names, 'Ella,' 'Bob,' and 'Lassie,' as they called me.

"No one has quite the calm outlook about his career that Robert Donat himself has," she went on. "Remember last year how all England became excited at the news of the marvelous offer that had been made him to come to America to play in 'The Count of Monte Cristo'? But do you think he was excited? Not a whit. He admitted that the offer was good, but just a good offer would not tempt him to leave England. So he insisted that his salary should begin the date that he embarked at Southhampton and continue until he reached the same spot on his return trip. And, in addition, he proposed to take his wife, at the company's expense. And it was done!

"Hollywood didn't get excited about Donat until 'The Count of Monte Cristo' was previewed. By the time the public had seen his picture, seventeen writers were wanting to interview him. And he had quietly returned to England.

ONE day, he said to me, 'Lassie, don't fool yourself. Unless you love acting better than any material comfort, you shouldn't be in the profession. As a child, I spent all my pennies visiting the Repertory Theatre in the town of Manchester, England, where I was born. The plays meant more to me than food. It was a great day in my life when I became a Provincial Repertory Player, and I felt like a Rothschild or a Rockefeller when I drew my first weekly salary check of thirty-five dollars, as you would count it.'

"It has been understood that Mr. Donat met Ella Voysey while she was playing his lead in this very theatre, but that is a mistake. He says he fell in love with her when he was only sixteen years old and she wouldn't give him a look. It was eight years later that he persuaded her to give up her class in dancing, and play in the theatre with him. This was his lucky break and soon he persuaded her to marry him.

"After playing in Manchester, both Robert and Ella felt they should move where the opportunities would be greater. Naturally, they hadn't saved money enough to speculate with, so they took a tiny flat in the theatrical district in London, and soon Robert got a West End part. After Alexander Korda saw him, he signed Donat on a long-time contract.

"I wish you could see the darling home the Donats own now. It is not the most pretentious house in London, but if you love substantial things that make for comfort and a 'homey' atmosphere—much copper everywhere, exquisite china, beautiful woodwork, harmonious color schemes and rare paintings—you will revel in the Donat home. Everything centers around the man of the house, despite the fact that Mrs. Donat was a professional before her marriage and with her beauty would be in great demand now, if it were possible for her to think of anything except her husband and children.

"The children are adorable. Joanna is four, thoroughly feminine and charming, with the same copper-colored hair as her mother. Johnny is only two years old and a roughneck like his father. I know you will exclaim at that, but back of the polished actor you know as Robert Donat is the little boy whom his playmates used to call 'roughneck.' My hair-dresser, on the boat, had a brother who went to school with Robert and the boys then were as proud of young Donat's physical prowess as they are of his acting now. Wasn't I pleased to hear this about him!

"You see, I had suspected it, for I never knew an actor with such a sense of humor, nor one who gets more delight in playing practical jokes on his co-workers. Just to give you an example, there was in our company a splendid actress, Miss Eliot Mason, to whom Robert is devoted, and this is the turn his joke took with her. He procured the names and addresses of the perambulator manufacturers in London and wrote them in her name, asking if they had any up-to-date baby carriages for triplets. It goes without saying, Miss Mason was about frantic from the solicitors and letters that came in prompt response.

TO GET back to the Donat home, for a minute. One thing you will never forget is their phonograph. It is built in the wall at one end of the room. There is a beautiful love seat nearby, and as you sit there, you think you are seeing on the wall a large linen plaque or tapestry with something resembling a cylindrical opening. I have never heard such music!

"The Donats' Irish cook, Mary, is a character. She calls Bob 'Count' and says he is the world's greatest lover. She makes the most tempting cakes and sends them to the studio for Bob's tea hour. The night I first went to dinner at the Donats', Bob whispered, 'Tell Mary how good her cakes are.' She is so devoted to him that she has a hot dinner for him, no matter what hour of the day or night he finishes work. He sends a message from the studio the minute the last scene is shot and Mary has dinner on the table by the time he gets home.

"When we had finished dinner, the night of my first visit, Bob stretched out full length on one side of the fireplace, Ella sat on the other side knitting, and I sat on the floor and drew pictures for the children. The children are with their parents as much as can be arranged. Bob gets up very early when he is working, about five o'clock, and Ella and the children are up at the same time. While he has his first cup of tea, the children come in and have their fruit juices with him. Then the four have breakfast together. Not many American wives breakfast so early with their husbands!

"I have talked all this time," Jean laughingly remarked, "without describing Bob, and the reason is that no words accurately convey an impression of him. He is very like he appears on the screen—tall, well-proportioned, and handsome—but without seeing him personally you could have no conception of how striking looking he is with his rich coloring and eyes exactly the color of his auburn hair.

"The whole expression of his countenance is manly, frank and prepossessing.

Dick Arlen, aviator, gets a send-off from his son, Dick, Jr. And isn't the young heir growing up to look like his old man?

He sings beautifully and plays with skill. With his friends he is all ardor and enthusiasm, brilliantly witty, but to the world at large he is reserved. He is just thirty and looks younger.

"With all this, he is without conceit. He rides a great deal and is always tanned and rugged looking. I remarked that this riding in the wind would bring pin wrinkles in his skin, and suggested the use of an oil on his face to prevent it. And did he laugh! 'As if anyone cares how my face looks,' he exclaimed. This frank, unpretending simplicity of demeanor is especially winning.

"By this time, you may have guessed that I am proud to number Ella and Bob Donat among my friends. When it comes to his ability, my feeling is that if the art of acting were completely forgotten, like the ancient art of making pottery, it could be learned anew by studying one of Robert Donat's screen portrayals."

Take Your Beauty Inventory

(Continued from page 19)

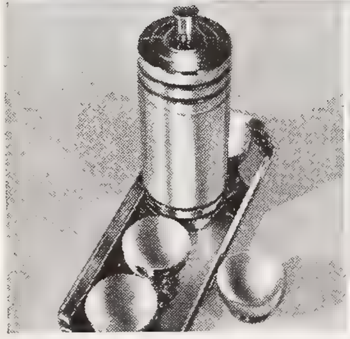
listing brushes alone? First, there should be a hair brush, not a fancy, worthless one, but a plain one with stiff and sturdy wide-set bristles that will stand up under frequent washings in lukewarm sudsy water (to which has been added a couple of drops of ammonia). Then, in the bathroom, there should be a neat little hand brush that will get into all the cracks and crevices of your hands. Good hand brushes may be obtained at any of the better ten cent stores. Then there is your tooth brush (or tooth brushes, we hope you have two) and your complexion brush. One well-known house has put out tooth brushes in a range of different sizes and colors; they're shaped to fit the mouth, and they're not expensive. The same house puts out an egg-shaped complexion brush which fits easily into the hand, and is neither too stiff nor too flimsy to do a good skin cleansing job. Of course a bath brush is always desirable in the interests of a peppy circulation; a rough crash washcloth or bath mitt may be substituted, however.

Then in your clothes closet you'll want: a long-handled clothes brush (that's the kind tailors always use), a shoe brush,

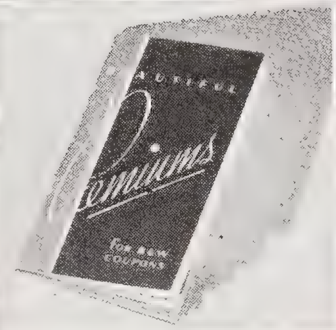
HOW'S THIS FOR BALANCE? We've blended KOOLS to suit your tongue. We've mildly mentholated them to cool your throat. We've cork-tipped KOOLS to save your lips. And we've added a valuable B & W coupon in each pack, good for handsome, nationally advertised merchandise. (Offer good U.S. A. only.) So try KOOLS . . . they've got what you need. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., P. O. Box 599, Louisville, Ky.

KOOL
MILD MENTHOL
Cigarettes
CORK TIPPED
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
SAVE THIS VALUABLE B&W COUPON
REDEEMABLE
COUPON
15¢
25¢ in Canada

SAVE COUPONS . . . MANY HANDSOME NEW PREMIUMS



Chase Cocktail Set—Shaker, 300 coupons; 4 cups, 175; tray, 200; set, 650



FREE. Write for illustrated 28-page B & W premium booklet, No. 11

Sheer Silk Hosiery—Full length. Run-stop band. Newer shades. 125 coupons

RALEIGH CIGARETTES...NOW AT POPULAR PRICES...ALSO CARRY B & W COUPONS

ANY NOSE IS CONSPICUOUS

without moisture-proof powder

Combat shine, floury streaks, clogged pores with Luxor, the truly moisture-proof and shine-proof face powder 6,000,000 women use!

● So many women are cheated of poise and charm by shiny nose, floury streaks, clogged pores! Yet a simple change to Luxor, the moisture-proof face powder, often clears up these conditions like magic!

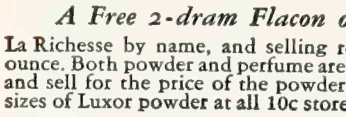
The secret is simple. Tiny pores on your face give off moisture. If face powder absorbs this natural skin-moisture, a paste results. Nose and face look shiny, floury streaks form, and often pores themselves clog up.

So discard, today, whatever face powder you may be using. And try Luxor on our money-back guarantee.

Make this test. Put a little Luxor powder in a glass of water. Note how it stays soft and fine—won't mix into paste. Thus you know Luxor won't mix with skin moisture and cause shine and blemishes. To induce you to try this marvelous face powder in a range of smart modern shades, we offer this gift at any cosmetic counter:

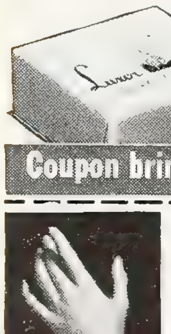
A Free 2-dram Flacon of Perfume

La Richesse by name, and selling regularly for $3 an ounce. Both powder and perfume are wrapped together, and sell for the price of the powder alone, 55c. Small sizes of Luxor powder at all 10c stores. Try it today.



55c moisture-proof FACE-POWDER Luxor

Coupon brings 4-piece make-up kit!



Try Amazing New Luxor Hand Cream

This marvelous new skin softener keeps hands soft, white, smooth. It is guaranteed non-sticky and dries instantly. At all cosmetic counters.

LUXOR, LTD., 1355 W. 31st Street
Chicago, Illinois Dept. J-2

Please send me your 4-piece make-up kit including generous amount of Luxor Moisture-Proof Powder, Luxor Rouge, Luxor Special Formula Cream and Luxor Hand Cream. Here is 10c to help cover mailing. (Offer not good in Canada). Check,

POWDER: Rose Rachel ☐ Rachel ☐ Flesh ☐
ROUGE: Radiant ☐ Medium ☐ Sunglow ☐ Pastel ☐ Vivid ☐ Roseblush ☐

Name ....
Address ....
City ....

The Warren Williams go for a stroll on their beautiful Encino estate.

especially if you're wearing suede shoes, and a hat brush, if you wear the kind of fragile hat that won't take the stiff bristles of the clothes brush.

On your make-up table will be: your powder brush, for smoothing and blending your powder; an eyebrow brush for grooming your eyebrows, and a couple of mascara brushes. Always have a dry mascara brush with which to brush up your lashes after you have applied your mascara with the regular mascara brush. This keeps your eyelashes from looking "beady".

Now to put the brush system to work. Take a good look at your skin. Maybe it has developed nasty little spots, or tiny, hard lumps which, despite the fact that they are colorless, show quite plainly in the light. These may be ingrowing blackheads. It may be an awful temptation to squeeze them out, but don't do it. What you need is to get that circulation so stimulated that the blood in the delicate traceries of veins under the skin will be stirred up to the point of carrying away the poisons it should carry away. Get your complexion brush into action, or your rough crash washcloth. Be lavish with the soap, and work it into the pores. Cleanse your skin more thoroughly than you've ever cleansed it before. Finish by splashing on lots and lots of cold water; it's a grand tonic and pore-closer. Haven't you ever watched the facial contortions men go through when they shave—your father or husband, for instance? They lather the soap in for all they're worth, drag down the corners of their mouth when they shave, lift up their chins, do everything but facial acrobatics. And I'll bet they have swell complexions, too, haven't they? Well, you don't have to go on treating your skin like a lily, either, give it some exercise!

AFTER you have done a complete job of your facial cleansing, then you can use a new kind of stimulating cream for those tiny under-skin bumps. It is put out by a well-known cosmetic house that describes it as a "skin-excitant". It activates the circulation so that the skin may more easily and quickly throw off its impurities and become clear and radiant. You apply it all over your face and throat, and you leave it on until the skin shows a pink glow. The cream itself is a nice warm beige color, and it smells good enough to eat. The pink glow it works up makes your skin fairly tingle, and just see if you don't get excited with the results when you look in the mirror.

Of course, a several-day diet of fruit juices is always helpful in working miracles. But not if you follow it by going back to your winter taste for too many gravies, hot rolls and sweets. Drink a glass of water and lemon juice with a dash of sodium bicarbonate every morning before breakfast; if that's too Spartan, a glass of hot water, anyway.

When you get to feeling young and pink-cheeked again, you can change to a lighter shade of powder, perhaps, a more delicate shade of rouge, and a more vivid shade of lipstick. What with your new navy blue tailored suit, the effect should be dazzling by Easter.

You will want silken, shining vital hair that will make a lovely pattern around your face, too. So brush your hair. Bend from your hips, throw your head forward, and brush with long, firm sweeping strokes from the back hair-line forward over the top of the head, touching the scalp all the way; then on to the ends of the hair. Every four or five strokes wipe your brush off on the towel. If you're really in earnest, you'll part your hair into small strands, and brush each strand out from the scalp. That's real brushing. That's treating hair right.

Soapless oil shampoos are excellent, especially if your hair is dry, and feels for all the world like the back of a brush. There is one particular soapless oil shampoo, really the original of its kind, that I've done some right-in-the-factory investigation about for you. In a large, scrupulously clean room off one of the immaculate factory laboratories, they keep rabbits—yes, ma'am, white, pink-nosed rabbits. I was even more surprised than the rabbits over their part in the oil shampoo business, until the technician told me that a rabbit has the most sensitive skin of any living creature. They test out the oil shampoos on the rabbits' skins in order to prove the reaction of the shampoos on even the most sensitive human scalp. And I want you to know that this particular soapless oil shampoo leaves the rabbit's skin as pink and fresh as it ever was, while certain other preparations positively shrivel it up? Now I'm going to be cagey and have you write to ask me about this shampoo, so that I can continue my rabbit tangent, and tell you other fascinating things I learned about this grand shampoo.

NOW, after drilling you on everything from brushes to rabbits, we're going to call a recess, and assemble around a community mirror, all of us. It's funny how having the same number of features, still we're all so different. Sally has an oval face, Mary has a broad, round one, and Connie a long, thin one. Most of us would like to remodel our faces in one way or another, wouldn't we? Well, here's your chance. I have a booklet for you, absolutely free, with colored photographs that are perfectly gorgeous, and it's all about remodeling your faces through the skillful application of rouge. The results, as illustrated by actual photograph, are amazing. If your chin recedes, or your nose is too pointed, or your cheeks are too hollow, or, well, name your own facial fault, there is something you can do about it. You can send in for this rouge guide, pick out the face that is most like yours, and re-style your own face according to the model in the booklet. And as if that weren't enough incentive in itself, you will get four samples of rouge along with the booklet so that you not only have the guide but the working materials for your experiments.

Popular Joe E. Brown and his wife snapped leaving the "Rose Marie" preview.

---

The rouge itself is as soft and fine as silk. It's really a new color discovery and I don't want you to miss this opportunity to try it, and to find out what actually is your shade of rouge. There is enough rouge in each sample to give you a fair trial of that particular shade. All you have to do is to drop me a line requesting the new rouge guide, and the samples and the booklet will be yours long before it's time to make your new Easter appearance. Your beauty inventory should certainly include finding out the right shade of rouge for you. And if there are any other problems that reveal themselves after your truth meeting rears its ugly head, remember that's what I'm here for, to help you with those very problems to the best of my ability. I have bulletins on complexion loveliness, care of the hair, and almost every other beauty inventory subject you can think of . . . sit right down and send me a list of what you need today.

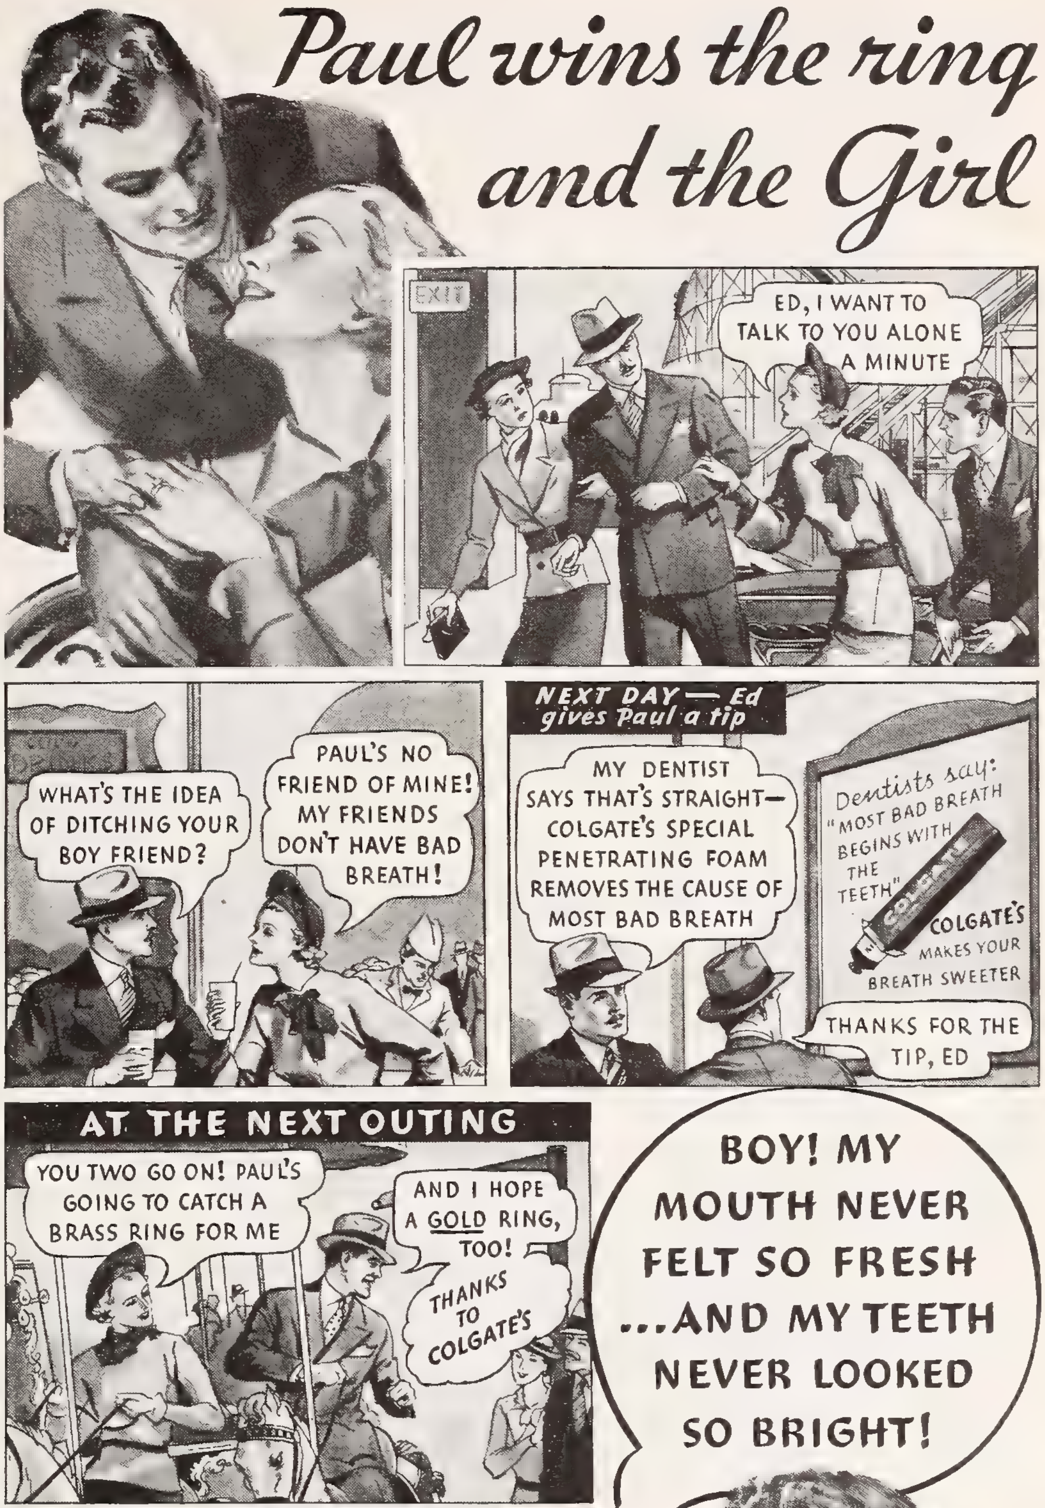
Mary Biddle,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 Madison Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Kindly send me a copy of "Your Rouge Guide and Samples."

Name...

Address...

Personal questions always receive personal replies when accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.



Paul wins the ring and the Girl
EXIT
ED, I WANT TO TALK TO YOU ALONE A MINUTE
WHAT'S THE IDEA OF DITCHING YOUR BOY FRIEND?
PAUL'S NO FRIEND OF MINE! MY FRIENDS DON'T HAVE BAD BREATH!
NEXT DAY — Ed gives Paul a tip
MY DENTIST SAYS THAT'S STRAIGHT— COLGATE'S SPECIAL PENETRATING FOAM REMOVES THE CAUSE OF MOST BAD BREATH
Dentists say: "MOST BAD BREATH BEGINS WITH THE TEETH" COLGATE'S MAKES YOUR BREATH SWEETER
THANKS FOR THE TIP, ED
AT THE NEXT OUTING
YOU TWO GO ON! PAUL'S GOING TO CATCH A BRASS RING FOR ME AND I HOPE A GOLD RING, TOO!
THANKS TO COLGATE'S
BOY! MY MOUTH NEVER FELT SO FRESH ...AND MY TEETH NEVER LOOKED SO BRIGHT!

Most Bad Breath Begins with the Teeth!

MAKE sure you don't have bad breath! Use Colgate Dental Cream. Its special penetrating foam removes all the decaying food deposits lodged between the teeth, along the gums and around the tongue—which dentists agree are the source of most bad breath. At the same time, a unique, grit-free ingredient polishes the enamel—makes teeth sparkle.

Try Colgate Dental Cream—today! Brush your teeth . . . your gums . . . your tongue . . . with Colgate's. If you are not entirely satisfied after using one tube, send the empty tube to COLGATE, Jersey City, N. J. We will gladly refund TWICE what you paid.

Now-NO BAD BREATH behind his SPARKLING SMILE!

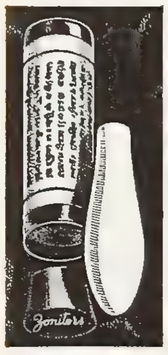
20¢ LARGE SIZE
Giant Size, over twice as much, 35¢
COLGATE RIBBON DENTAL CREAM
Tested and Approved 2273 Good Housekeeping Bureau

You've waited years for a dainty

GREASELESS

way to

FEMININE ANTISEPSIS



NOW IT IS HERE! Zonitors, snowy-white, antiseptic, greaseless, are not only easier to use than ordinary preparations but are completely removable with water. For that reason alone, thousands of women now prefer them to messy, greasy suppositories. Soothing—harmless to tissue. Entirely ready for use, requiring no mixing or clumsy apparatus. Odorless—and ideal for deodorizing. You'll find them superior for this purpose, too!

● More and more women are ending the nuisance of greasy suppositories, thanks to the exclusive new greaseless Zonitors for modern feminine hygiene.

Each in individual glass vial

There is positively nothing else like Zonitors for daintiness, easy application and easy removal, yet they maintain the long, effective antiseptic contact physicians recommend.

Zonitors make use of the world famous Zonite antiseptic principle, favored in medical circles because of its antiseptic power and freedom from "burn" danger to delicate tissues.

Complete instructions in package. All druggists. Mail coupon for informative free booklet.

Zonitors
FOR FEMININE HYGIENE
Snowy White • Greaseless

Zonitors, Chrysler Bldg., N.Y.C. Send, in plain envelope, free booklet,* "The New Technique in Feminine Hygiene"
MS-64

Name..................................

Address..................................

Keep Skin
Young
with Mercolized Wax

● Mercolized Wax gently melts off faded, discolored outer skin. Reveals the velvety-smooth, soft, beautiful underskin. Blemishes disappear.

Mercolized Wax is a complete beauty treatment in a single cream. Contains everything your skin needs. Cleanses. Softens. Beautifies. Protects.

Start using Mercolized Wax tonight. Win new skin loveliness. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of any complexion.

USE Saxolite Astringent—a refreshing stimulating skin tonic. Smooths out wrinkles and age lines. Refines coarse pores, eliminates oiliness. Dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel. Use daily.

TRY Phelactine—the "different" hair remover. Takes off superfluous hair quickly and gently. Simple to use. Odorless. Thoroughly reliable.

At drug and department stores everywhere.

He'd Rather Be a Teacher

(Continued from page 64)

a pity you can't stay to see John Cox. (That's John Howard's real name.) He's a college boy, but we think he's good. A group of the students at Western Reserve are putting on a show tomorrow night, and he's going to be in it."

"I guess he'll be like a thousand other college boys I've seen," thought the t. s. But since talent scouts hate to pass by any possibilities, he stayed over till the next day. He was impatient when he heard that the boy was going to recite that hackneyed poem that is the pet of so many elocutionists, "John Brown's Body." It was such an obvious schoolboy choice. He stirred restlessly in his seat, waiting for John to begin.

And then suddenly he sat up straight, for there on the platform was a lad who was decidedly easy on the eyes, tall, with deep-set blue eyes and dark brown hair. John Cox. And when the young man began to recite, the talent scout didn't have to choke an impulse to laughter, as he had half expected to. Instead he found himself strangely touched by the poem.

When the performance was over, he sought the boy out. "It looks to me as if you really have some talent," he said. "How would you like to take a test for Paramount?"

Naturally he expected John to be completely bowled over, as 999 out of a thousand boys are. But John looked at him rather coolly. He smiled at his mother, who was standing nearby, beaming.

And then he said, "That's very kind of you, but I have other plans, plans that have nothing to do with moving pictures. You see, I want to become a professor of English."

"But man alive, do you realize what you are doing? Thousands of boys beg for such a chance and here it's being offered to you."

But nothing he could say would shake the boy's decision.

"When you've laid your plans for a lifetime," John said recently, "you don't change them in a minute because a stranger comes along and asks you to try something you've never even considered."

BUT young John did change his mind. Why? When he graduated he learned that he could get no scholarship that would pay more than half his tuition for his graduate work at Western Reserve. And he couldn't afford to pay half the tuition himself. If it were not for that little circumstance, he would not be in the movies today.

Shortly after graduation, this incredible young man wrote to the talent scout to tell him that if he was still interested he would like to take a test in New York.

"I suppose your letter was apologetic," I said.

John shook his head. "I'm afraid not. I was very snooty about the whole thing. I would take the test if they'd pay my expenses to New York and back. Looking at the letter later, I was amazed that they had bothered to answer it, I was so independent. But in Hollywood they have no use for false humility. If you come begging favors, they are likely to turn you away."

At any rate, the executives at Paramount, instead of resenting John's independence, respected it. They agreed to his terms and wired him the money to come to New York. But even after he had made a test, he wasn't too hopeful, for he was thinking again of the legion of young men who have taken endless tests and have never gotten anywhere.

When Paramount offered him a contract, he was slightly incredulous. Even then, though, his pessimism persisted. He was quite certain that at the end of six months they would decide to dispense with his services.

"But even so," he said coolly, "I figured I had nothing to lose. I decided that if I didn't last in pictures, I could save enough to pay the tuition on the graduate courses I wanted to take."

Since the name John Cox was not a very fascinating one for an actor, the studio obligingly submitted a list of names for him to choose from.

"They were all very highfalutin'" he told me, "so I got up my own list. From that list they chose the name John Howard. At the time I wrote it down I never stopped to think that the name might be confused with that of Leslie Howard. When I thought of it later, I investigated and discovered that there were about twenty Howards in the moving picture business. Now if anyone is kind enough to confuse me with an actor of Leslie Howard's experience, I shall be very grateful and not at all put out! How Leslie Howard may feel about it is a different matter."

The young man drove 2700 miles to Hollywood. At first everything that happened seemed to justify his pessimism. For two months he sat around and waited. All the stories he had heard concerning the callous way in which Hollywood treats newcomers came to his mind. So this was going to be his fate, too! And then at the end of six months he'd be shipped home ignominiously branded a failure when he hadn't even had a chance!

While he was speculating bitterly, he was called for a tiny bit as an elevator boy in "One Hour Late." Bits as a policeman in "Car 99" and as an electrician in "Four Hours to Kill" followed.

"At the time," he confessed, a dimple flashing in his cheek as he spoke, "I was indignant because they had dragged me all the way from Cleveland to play such measly bits. But later I realized that it was best for me to get my first experience that way. I had so little work to do that I spent most of my time walking on other people's sets and watching experienced actors emote. I visited every set on the lot, I think, except Mae West's and Marlene Dietrich's, which are closed to visitors."

FINALLY John got his first real chance in "Annapolis Farewell." While he was appearing in this picture, his company went to Annapolis on location. And there he and Richard Cromwell had an amazing experience. They insulted an admiral!

Dressed in the midshipmen's uniforms they wore while filming the picture, they strolled around the grounds outside the Academy. And while they walked, they passed an admiral and his wife. Naturally, they didn't salute the admiral, for they had been told that they wouldn't have to salute any of the officers, since they didn't know an admiral from a lieutenant and wouldn't know whom to salute anyway.

As Richard and John passed him, the admiral turned purple with rage, his hands clenched at his sides. These insolent young pups! He glared at them, and just when a storm of invectives was about to descend on their heads, his wife tapped his shoulder and took him aside to whisper that these weren't midshipmen but movie actors. She had recognized Richard Cromwell. The next day Richard and John were told that thereafter they must not stroll around the grounds of the Academy while in uniform.

John Howard and Mary Taylor in the Hecht-MacArthur opus, "Soak the Rich," which was filmed in Paramount's Long Island studios.

John seems well on the road to success now. But he is taking nothing for granted. If his option weren't taken up tomorrow, he would find a new career for himself. He is an extremely versatile young man. He has written several plays; he paints a bit, plays tennis and swims, and plays the piano.

His background? There's nothing amazing about that, nothing that isn't in the backgrounds of other college men, except one thing. The ambition of the mother who longs all her life to go on the stage and achieves her ambition through her daughter is not rare. But John Howard is the first young man I ever met who in becoming a star is fulfilling the dream which his father had many years ago for himself. Only his father never did anything about it. The dream alone remained, a dream that faded into dusty nothingness as time went on.

John, however, appeared in amateur theatricals from the time he was three years old. He played such roles as the third angel at Christmas time and the fourth page boy in King Arthur's Court in pageants directed by his father. It was hardly the sort of stage experience that movie executives say a young man must have in order to get along in Hollywood.

An only child, John was inclined to be a rather solitary, precocious boy. He read Jane Austen and Charles Dickens instead of the usual dime novels relished by boys. He might have turned into a rather dull young man except for two things. He is very much of an outdoor person and he has an elegant sense of humor.

"When I was seventeen," he told me, "I decided to earn some money during my vacation. Every boy is supposed to do that, isn't he? I got a job jerking sodas. Those were boom days and I was paid about five times what I should have been, but even so, I abhorred the work, and was very glad when the summer ended."

When he was sixteen he fell in love with a dark-haired, dark-eyed co-ed who attended the Shore High School in East Cleveland at the same time John did. How was John to know that the devastating emotion he felt for this sultry beauty was only puppy love? Puppy love, indeed! He walked around the campus in a daze, and counted only those moments

10 OFF
Modess
This is the New Modess its "CERTAIN-SAFE"

JITTERY?

It's upsetting to every woman—that haunting fear of embarrassment. It hampers you at work or at play.

And yet—there's no excuse for "accident panic" now. The new Modess is certain-safe. It's one sanitary pad that can't betray you!

HAVE YOUR FUN WITHOUT A FEAR!

It stays safe—it stays soft—the new Modess.

No striking through—as with many ordinary reversible pads. Modess has a specially treated material on sides and back. No chafing—the edges stay dry. Wear blue line on moisture-proof side away from body—and sure protection is yours!

End "accident panic"—ask for Certain-Safe

Modess!

The Improved Sanitary Pad

Try N-O-V-O—the safe, easy-to-use, douche powder in its new Blue and Silver Box. Cleanses! Deodorizes! (Not a contraceptive.) At your drug or department store

LAXATIVES? I NEVER NEED THEM ANY MORE!

Don't Be a Slave to CATHARTICS

Try This Improved Pasteurized Yeast That's* Easy to Eat

If you take laxatives to keep "regular," you know from experience that drugs and cathartics give only temporary relief from constipation. Such remedies merely cause a drastic purging action. They do not correct the cause of your condition.

Doctors now know that in many cases the real cause of constipation is a shortage of the vitamin B complex. This precious factor is sadly deficient in the typical everyday diet. In many foods it is entirely lacking. When this factor is added to the diet in sufficient amounts, constipation goes. Elimination again becomes regular and complete.

Yeast Foam Tablets are pure pasteurized yeast and yeast is the richest known food source of vitamins B and G. They should stimulate your weakened intestinal nerves and muscles and quickly restore your eliminative system to normal, healthy function.

With the true cause of your constipation corrected, you will be rid of the evil cathartic habit. Your energy will revive. Headaches will go. Your skin will be clearer and fresher.

Don't confuse Yeast Foam Tablets with ordinary yeast. These tablets cannot ferment in the body. Pasteurization makes this yeast utterly safe for everyone to eat. It has a pleasant, nut-like taste that you will really enjoy. And it contains nothing to put on fat.

All druggists sell Yeast Foam Tablets. The 10-day bottle costs only 50c. Get one today. Refuse substitutes.

YEAST FOAM TABLETS

Free! MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY
You may paste this on a penny post card

NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO. MM-4-36
1750 North Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free introductory package of Yeast Foam Tablets.

Name ____________________

Address ____________________

City ______________ State ________

of the day happy ones when he could be with Dolores. But Dolores never pretended to be in love with him. When she was sixteen she married another youth, and when John heard what had happened, it seemed as though the stars had been blotted out of the sky for him.

"For days I went around with an empty feeling in my heart," he told me. "Of course, I hadn't really lost anything, for I had never won Dolores, yet that made no difference. At that time I believed that no one would ever matter as much to me as she. It was all very sad while it lasted, but I must confess that all my poignant grief endured only about two weeks."

If John Howard has known real love since that day, he refuses to talk about it. But I do happen to know that one of his closest friends is Margo who appeared in "Crime Without Passion."

Even when talking about love he is eminently sane and practical. He said, "It's stupid to make rules about love and marriage. I would never dream of saying that I will or will not marry while I'm in Hollywood, for how can you make plans about such things? No doubt, from a business viewpoint it's wise to keep single as long as you're able to, but if you fall madly enough in love you forget all that.

"I hope that I won't have to play the stock juvenile parts, the football heroes and roles in the 999 Hollywood plots that are as familiar as certain brands of pickles. But I'm not making any plans about it. Hollywood is just like marriage. Only a fool dares to make plans about it."

But Hollywood has definite plans for him. And the studio, rejoicing in his success, is casting a weather eye out for other young men in college dramatic societies who may have the talent that John Howard has. Today it's no longer true that you have to beg with outstretched hands for a chance to make good in the movies. If you have any talent, no matter where you live, the movie scouts may get you, just as they got John Howard.

She Doesn't Want Fame

(Continued from page 55)

"Don't think that I don't like work. The tougher the role the better I like it. I hate cinch jobs. But the general idea that working in pictures means having a good time is all wrong.

"And then I got to thinking. What if I do become famous? What am I going to do when I am through? Where will I go? The most awful thing I could think of would be to have been a big star and then no longer be one.

"I thought about marriage, too." Rochelle has been engaged twice during her brief span in pictures. "I couldn't see how I was to find happiness in marriage while working in pictures.

"If two successful actors marry they are constantly clashing, no matter how deeply they are in love. One has a good day at the studio, the other a bad day. One feels gay and wants to go out and do things, while the other is tired and wants to be alone. Nothing in the world is so annoying as to have someone gay around when you want to be quiet.

"If an actress marries outside the business her husband is soon peeved at the irregular hours, jealous of her leading men, impatient with overwrought emotions.

"I haven't been able to figure out how screen work and marriage can be successfully combined. So, for the present, I have given up all idea of matrimony."

Rochelle confessed that it is the case of "A burned child shunning the fire."

"I fell in love twice and was very badly hurt both times. I don't intend to do it again."

From now on Rochelle intends to keep all her associations with the male sex on a strictly platonic basis.

"As soon as I like a boy he seems to think that he is in love with me," she sighed. "If, after I explain to him that I cannot let my work become all upset with a romance, he doesn't put his feelings on a friendship basis, I don't see him again."

A pretty tough spot for the young men, I should say.

"There is a boy now," she said. He had telephoned twice since my arrival.

"This boy and I—he is not in pictures—are pals. He understands. That is why I admire him so. Right now he is helping me select furniture and we are having fun doing it."

Out at the studio where Rochelle is under contract they had told me how she had bought her nine-room home with her savings. How she had refused to go into debt. That she was furnishing one room at a time.

"You know mother and I lived here three months with only a kitchen stove, a breakfast room table, a few chairs and two beds to sleep in," she laughed.

"I am getting a great thrill out of furnishing this house. We sat up until two this morning making the net curtains in the dining room. The table and chairs are coming this afternoon.

"We just had to get some more furniture. Friends would come over, look around and say, 'A lovely house, but when are you going to furnish it?' We live here in the library. I don't intend to do a thing to the living room for six months."

Sure enough. There was the spacious living room as empty as a deserted ball room. Against the white mantel stood a painting that Rochelle had just finished. A bowl of gay morning glories against a bright blue background. The lovely entrance hall with its graceful sweep of white banistered stairway was carpeted in a soft, deep blue—Rochelle's favorite color.

"I must have a wedding here some day," she smiled. "Just so a bride can throw her bouquet as she runs up these stairs."

We looked at each other and smiled.

"I know what you are thinking," she said shaking her head.

"I am much happier now that I am a home owner," she went on. "This place will always satisfy me, even if I should become a star," she grimaced. "And if I should ever get married," I felt sure that she hadn't given up the idea entirely, "this will be my mother's home."

Hollywood never sees Rochelle's name in the society columns of the doings of the movie folks.

"I don't like big parties," she said. "I have turned down so many invitations that I am not invited any more. But I do love to dance. At least twice a week I go to the Trocadero or the Cocoanut

(Continued on page 86)

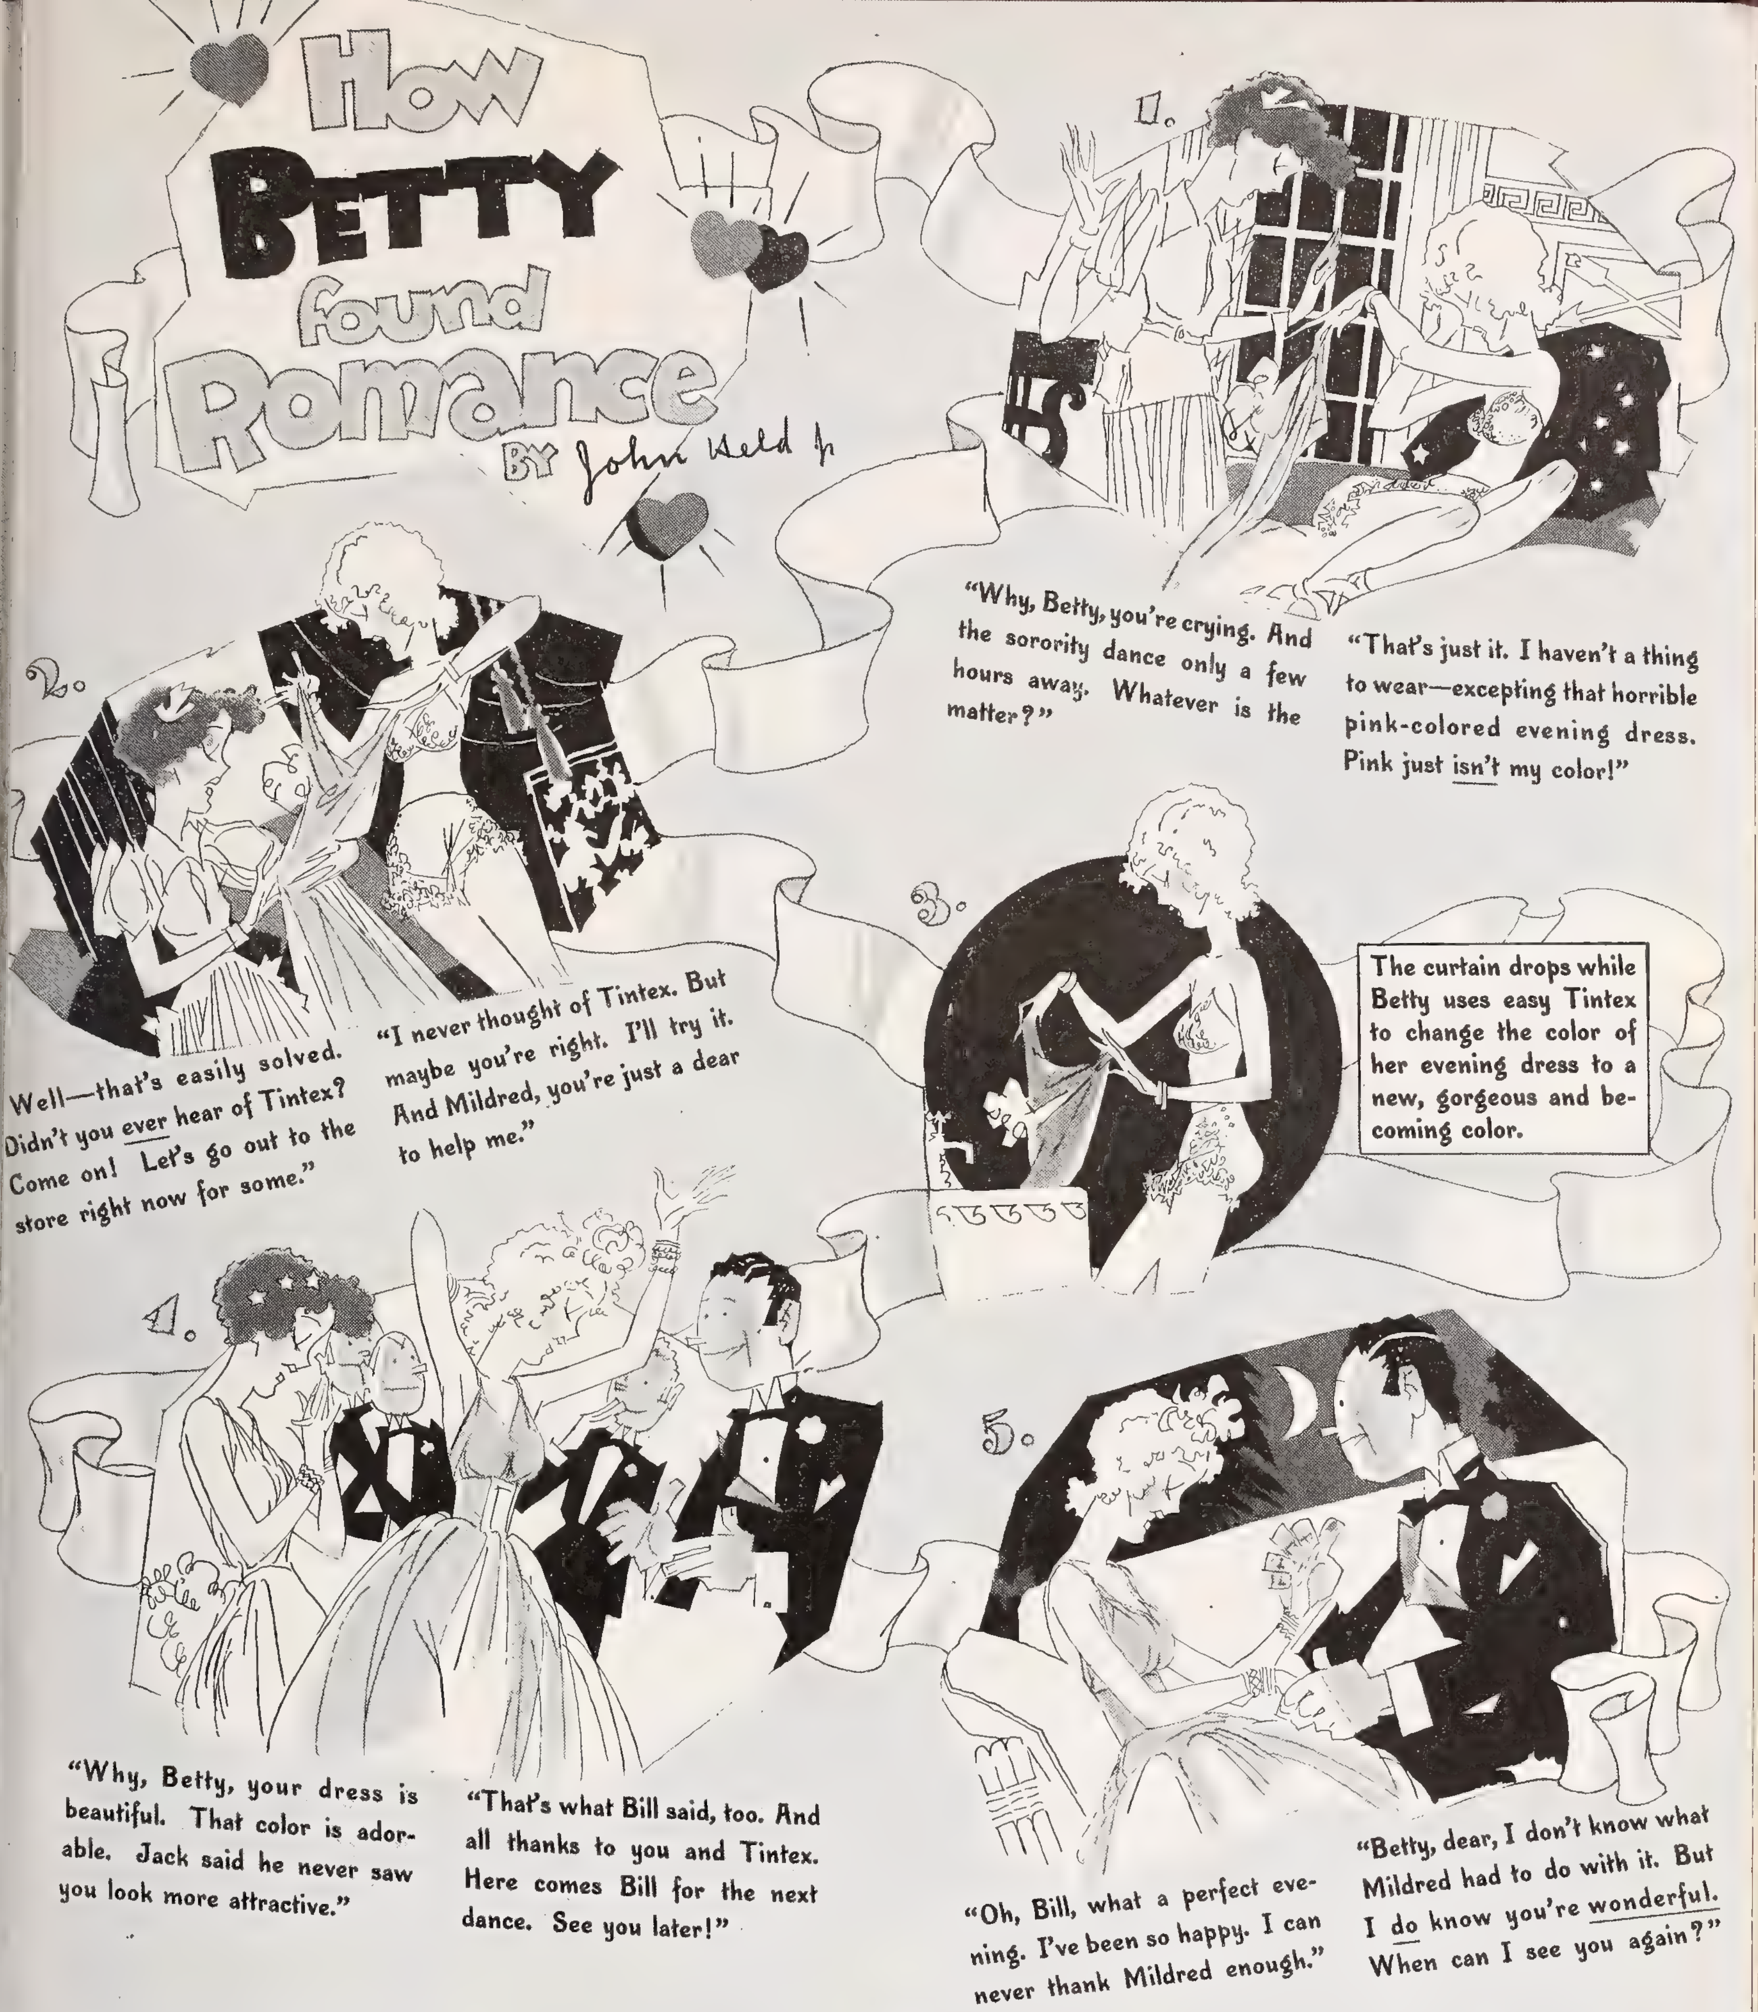
How Betty found Romance

By John Held Jr



"Why, Betty, you're crying. And the sorority dance only a few hours away. Whatever is the matter?"

"That's just it. I haven't a thing to wear—excepting that horrible pink-colored evening dress. Pink just isn't my color!"

Well—that's easily solved. Didn't you ever hear of Tintex? Come on! Let's go out to the store right now for some."

"I never thought of Tintex. But maybe you're right. I'll try it. And Mildred, you're just a dear to help me."

The curtain drops while Betty uses easy Tintex to change the color of her evening dress to a new, gorgeous and becoming color.

"Why, Betty, your dress is beautiful. That color is adorable. Jack said he never saw you look more attractive."

"That's what Bill said, too. And all thanks to you and Tintex. Here comes Bill for the next dance. See you later!"

"Oh, Bill, what a perfect evening. I've been so happy. I can never thank Mildred enough."

"Betty, dear, I don't know what Mildred had to do with it. But I do know you're wonderful. When can I see you again?"

Millions of girls find Tintex supreme in restoring faded color or giving new color to everything in wardrobe or home decorations. Its utter simplicity—its perfect results—its range of 41 brilliant, long lasting colors—make Tintex the world's favorite Tints and Dyes. Always insist on Tintex—at all drug stores, notion and toilet goods counters.

PARK & TILFORD, Distributors

Tintex
TINTS AS YOU RINSE

Tintex Tints and Dyes

Give me the ANTISEPTIC kind --that scares germs away!

"Honestly now—do you think I'm askin' too much when all I want is protection 'gainst germs and infection? I know Mummy doesn't mean to neglect me . . . but I do wish she'd get the kind of powder that's Antiseptic. And I mean Mennen Powder. Gee, but it's great! When your Mummy sprinkles it on you—nasty germs just naturally scram. Seems it keeps what they call an antiseptic condition all over your skin. Then, too, I know it keeps a feller drier and comfier all day long. No more chafing and rawness. Gosh . . . it's wonderful! So please excuse me for gettin' mad . . . but from now on I'm going to see that I get Mennen Powder."

America's first baby powder is now Antiseptic. But it doesn't cost a penny more. How foolish to use any other!

W. G. Mennen

MENNEN
Antiseptic
POWDER

(Continued from page 84)

Grove. And I go to the theatre and the movies.

"To be honest, I like to stay at home. Just sit and talk with my friends. When I am not working I get spells of painting. And I go on reading sprees. Read everything good that I hear about. I just finished 'The Green Light' and I think it is one of the finest books I have ever read. I am still taking vocal and dancing. The days are never long enough."

Rochelle says that she is not so sure about her singing. That her voice needs considerable training. But dancing! "I think I will really do something with my dancing some day," she says. "I love it so."

THIS young girl seems to have a way of analyzing herself and the world she lives in. When I asked her to give me more details about her change in attitude about her career, she said, "I guess the main reason I was discouraged was because I was so fed up and tired of being continually told, 'You are too young.' I had heard it for six years.

"Whenever I went to a director about a part that I knew I could do, it would be the same old story, 'You haven't had enough experience, my dear. But don't be discouraged. With your looks and your talent you are bound to go far in the future. I got so tired of the future.

"Actually, I acquired an inferiority complex from being told I was too young. I had to see myself on the screen in older parts before I commenced to get over it. Confidence is the most important thing in this business. You can't go very far without it.

"And this snooty, upstaging that goes on among some of the players almost got me down. I had a taste of it again on a recent picture I just made.

"The leading lady, when she wasn't working, would sweep onto the set dripping in silver fox. The next day she would come swathed in mink. She would sit there so elegant, with scarcely a nod to me. Again I felt that 'Too, too young' complex stirring.

"I really am glad now that I am so young." An ailment she will find all too soon remedied.

"Another thing I have learned is that you must be constantly sorting. People tell you you are beautiful, you are terrible, your performance was fine, that it was lousy, that you are divine, that you are stubborn, etc., etc. You can't accept everything and you are foolish if you throw it all out. So I have learned to try to accept the part that is helpful and not be hurt by the other."

They say in Hollywood that Rochelle is on her way to stardom. That in spite of herself she is being carried up to that dizzy height where glamor, glitter and fame will be her daily fare.

Easy Meals are Jeanette's Dish

(Continued from page 17)

though quite simple, you will find on each menu some one outstanding dish which lends distinction to that particular meal. I've placed a star beside each of these and I have recipes for every one of the "starred" dishes which I shall be pleased to send you, absolutely free. The coupon, at the end of this article, will provide you with a nice, easy way to get your copy. Here are the menus in which these special dishes are featured—beginning, as one should, with breakfast, and going on through the day.

JEANETTE'S PET BREAKFAST

Stewed fruit
Banana Bran Muffins*
Cocoa

This is daintily served on a tray wherever inclination or time requirements dictate. Jeanette is pictured on page 16 eating just such a breakfast—the photographer having caught her, rushed but radiant, before she left for the studio where she was doing re-takes of her newest co-starring feature with Nelson Eddy, "Rose Marie."

JEANETTE'S FAVORITE LUNCH

Salad of Shredded Cabbage, molded in Tomato Aspic
Cottage Cheese and Chives
Crisp Crackers
Fresh Fruit Cup
Jeanette's Golden Sponge Cake*
(unfrosted)

When Miss MacDonald is not at the studio and friends drop in during the afternoon at her home in Beverly Hills, afternoon tea is always served. The tea hour is one of England's most delightful customs, Jeanette thinks, so she conforms to the English mode and serves wafer-thin slices of buttered bread instead of fancy sandwiches. Occasionally Tea Treats*, crisp pastry bites flavored with devilled ham, are included. Cake of some sort is served for those with a sweet tooth. Possibly the same sort of sponge cake that was served at lunch makes its second—and equally welcome—appearance of the day, only this time its deliciousness is further enhanced by a bittersweet chocolate frosting.

One might think that dinner in Jeanette's home would be quite elaborate, especially when company is expected, but such is not the case. Here is a typical menu featuring two of her favorite dishes. The first is Timbales Vertes and the entire meal is planned around these.

JEANETTE'S FAVORITE DINNER

Clear Consomme, Melba Toast
Timbales Vertes,* served with Creamed Chicken (either Mushrooms or Shrimps may be used instead of Chicken)
Crisp Julienne or Lattice Potatoes
Endive and Avocado Salad, French Dressing Refrigerator Cake*
Demi-tasse

At first glance this dinner may not seem as simple as those we have been recommending, but actually it becomes easier the more you study it. The consomme, for instance, may be of the canned variety. The Timbales Vertes are made of cooked peas, either fresh or canned, which can be sieved and in the refrigerator ready for eventual use in the recipe. The creamed chicken, mushrooms or shrimps which accompany these Timbales, can be prepared in the morning and reheated in your double boiler, without last minute fuss or worry. The avocados are served in halves on endive, with the French Dressing poured into the cup-like depressions after the large seed is removed. And the delicious Refrigerator Cake must be made up well in advance—so you may be sure that your dessert course will only require a moment's attention to make it as festive in appearance and delectable in flavor as anyone could desire.

DINNER, generally, is the last meal of the day for Jeanette. But occasionally when she has company a late supper is in order, Jeanette thinks that a meal served at this late hour should be of the simplest sort imaginable and suggests scrambled eggs as the all-time favorite with both men and women. But there are scrambled eggs and scrambled eggs! By using the method described below you will find them at the peak of their golden perfection.

SCRAMBLED EGGS à la CRÊME

- 6 eggs
- 6 tablespoons cream
- ½ teaspoon salt
- a few grains pepper
- 2 tablespoons butter

Beat eggs slightly, until whites and yolks are mixed. Stir in cream and seasoning. Melt butter in frying pan (being careful that butter does not get brown). Pour in the egg mixture. Set pan containing egg mixture into a larger pan containing boiling water. Continue cooking over boiling water, scraping eggs gently from the bottom of the pan as they cook so that the uncooked mixture can flow to the bottom of the pan. Serve immediately when cooked, garnished with a dash of paprika and a sprig of parsley. Sufficient for four average servings.

Bread in some form should accompany the eggs—either triangles of buttered toast, rusks, Ry-krisp or hot buttered rolls. And for all late-at-night meals it is well to serve caffeine-free coffee since many folks feel that just ordinary coffee keeps them awake if partaken of in the wee sma' hours. Be sure and tell your guests of your thoughtfulness along those lines, too, for imagination is a powerful factor and you don't want people to lie awake worrying about the effects of the coffee they relished, not knowing that you had taken care of that contingency as a good hostess should.

And so to bed—with plans for future entertaining in the easy, Jeanette MacDonald manner going "'round and around" in your head—and the further assurance that you can try out some of her favorite easy-to-make dishes just by sending for the recipes, adding to your pleasant anticipation. Jeanette's Golden Sponge Cake, Tea Treats, Jeanette's Refrigerator Cake and those tempting looking Banana Bran Muffins, all are included in this month's leaflet. Send for your free copy now.

THE MODERN HOSTESS,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 MADISON AVENUE,
NEW YORK, N. Y.

Please send me a free leaflet containing Jeanette MacDonald's easy-to-make company dishes.

Name..............................

Street..............................

City..................State.........

"THE CLUE"
A MINUTE MOVIE WITH BETTE DAVIS
WARREN WILLIAM
Stars of the Warner Bros. Picture
"MEN ON HER MIND"
AH, A CLUE! WHOEVER ATE HERE MUST LIKE QUAKER PUFFED WHEAT
NEXT DAY
NICE OF YOU TO LUNCH WITH ME
NICE OF YOU TO ASK ME, MR. DETECTIVE
I SEE YOU LIKE MY FAVORITE CEREAL, QUAKER PUFFED WHEAT
YES, I HAVE IT OFTEN. IT'S MADE OF WHOLE WHEAT, YOU KNOW
SORRY WE'RE ON OPPOSITE SIDES OF THE LAW
WELL, AT LEAST WE BOTH AGREE ON PUFFED WHEAT AMAZING BUT TRUE!
SPINACH SUPPLIES YOU WITH IRON, BUT PUFFED WHEAT GIVES YOU MORE!

SPINACH .... 1.02 MILLIGRAMS PER OZ.
PUFFED WHEAT.. 1.30 MILLIGRAMS PER OZ.

(SOURCE: "LABORATORY HANDBOOK FOR DIETETICS" AND "FOUNDATIONS OF NUTRITION" BY DR. MARY SWARTZ ROSE.)

QUAKER PUFFED WHEAT TASTES SO CRISPY AND DELICIOUS YOU'D NEVER DREAM HOW GOOD IT IS FOR YOU but look—

IT'S THE SPECIAL QUAKER PROCESS THAT GIVES QUAKER PUFFED WHEAT ITS DOUBLE-CRISPED PERFECTION. TO GET THE FULL FLAVOR OF THIS DELICIOUS TASTE TREAT, GET THE RED AND BLUE PACKAGE .... TRIPLE SEALED TO GUARD FRESHNESS!

INNER WAX BAG
SEALED CARTON
OUTER WAX WRAPPER
QUAKER BRAND PUFFED WHEAT
LOOK FOR THE RED AND BLUE PACKAGE

QUAKER PUFFED RICE IS DELICIOUS, TOO.. TRY IT!

Almost an Old Maid

(Continued from page 53)

vocabulary—and she might even know how to knit the traditional "tiny garments" if she weren't so busy keeping everybody else in stitches.

Yet nobody thought of marrying her. All the men were busy thinking of marrying Garbo. And can you imagine Garbo running around in bedroom slippers and curl papers with an eggbeater in one hand and quintuplets in the other?

UNA MERKEL never went out with a boy until after she was seventeen. It wasn't because of parental restrictions—it was just because she wasn't asked. But she is proud of the fact that the friendships she does make are indestructible. "I still see or correspond with every boy friend I ever had before my marriage," she told me.

"And have time left for a picture career?" I inquired incredulously.

"Well, there were only four or five of them," she laughed.

I wanted to know about the first time Cupid had done her wrong.

"I was nine or ten," Una recalled in her captivating Southern accent which Hollywood has modified but not obliterated, "when I suffered the big thrill. And I mean it really was tragic at the time. I was the studious type, so the boys were leery of me. You know how boys are—they think there's something wrong with a girl if she knows her lessons.

"I was already hopelessly infatuated with the handsomest boy in the class when, for some reason which I don't know to this day, he gave me his scout pin to wear. I nearly swooned with delight and embarrassment. The pin was as big as a house. It was the shape of an anchor and pulled my dress down like the real thing. But I would have worn it proudly till doomsday—till the weight of it had made me stoop-shouldered—if he hadn't sent another girl to ask for it back the following morning. I was probably just the unsuspecting instrument of a well-laid scheme to arouse jealousy in another feminine heart.

Una grew to womanhood without inspiring the serious attentions of any young man. Not that she was unpopular. Everyone liked her—she was loyal, sympathetic, sensible, efficient. But that spelled "pal," not "sweetheart." She couldn't have been safer if she had used kiss-proof lipstick.

So what did the disappointed damsel do after collecting wedding announcements from all the girls her own age and younger? Did she study the art of make-up, or set out to tailor herself a new and devastating personality calculated to bring the men to her feet in droves? Did she clip coupons and send for love potions and brochures by the famous Peggy Hopkins Joyce?

NOT a bit of it. Una didn't do a thing but remain her own sweet self—reticent, methodical, conscientious and tidy. A prim, long-haired, Sunday-School-teaching little lady. She just decided that some people were better off without marriage, and if no one asked her, she would pretend she was one of those people.

She had been surrounded with so much love and understanding in her home life that marriage could hardly improve on the happiness she had already known, anyway. She would rather not be married, never be married, she told herself, unless the union promised to be as perfect as that of her parents.

But she didn't have to stay and be a spinster where everyone knew her and would pity her. She went to New York, and because an unattached woman should have a career of some sort, studied at a dramatic school. She had no illusions about a great talent—she merely thought teaching dramatics in some high school would be pleasant work—if she could get it. But the first work she got was as a professional model.

She soon discovered that teaching and posing were not the only fields open to her. She began getting insignificant parts in stage plays. She became a comedienne quite accidentally. She took her work very seriously, so seriously that the audience laughed at everything she said. This could have been a tragedy to a less shrewd player. But just as calmly and philosophically as she had decided she might not be cut out for marriage, Una let the audience decide that she wasn't cut out for highly dramatic portrayals.

She had hoped to inspire tears. What if they were tears of laughter? That was entertainment, too. Instead of sulking over her failure of intention, Una quickly adapted herself to the role of comedienne. And again proved her shrewdness by not even trying to be funny. Realizing that it was her spinsterly conscientiousness that was so amusing, she capitalized on it by adopting a more studied serio-comic mien than ever, and audiences have been rolling in the aisles ever since.

"I must have been a scream when I was real small—I was such a serious little busybody," Una said. "While I was still young enough to squeeze handfuls of mashed potatoes through my fingers behind my chair when no one was looking, I was a hundred years old in other ways. When my parents were out late, I worried constantly over the disasters that might befall them before they returned. And whenever my folks had a little spat such as provides spice in any normal marriage, I ran back and forth from one to the other, arguing, cajoling, pleading, until I had succeeded in patching things up. Our relationship was just reversed. I behaved as if I were the parent and they were the children."

IN private life, Una Merkel is about the most genuine and warm-hearted person you ever met. She is careful about what she says in an interview, especially regarding any sort of advice, because "People read what you say and maybe it will influence someone to do something or not do something. I'd so hate to give anyone a wrong steer."

But if any advice she is able to give from her girlhood experiences is able to save a few heartaches such as she knows can be caused by a scarcity of dates and masculine attention, Una Merkel would like to broadcast it far and wide. She has an unquenchable urge to help everybody. Many fans write her their personal trouble, and a cheerful word from her has lightened many a sorrow.

At first consideration, it seems unusual that a comedienne should be the recipient of lovelorn letters. But it's easy to understand. Somehow, Una Merkel seems more human—closer to the common herd—than the unapproachable Garbos and Dietrichs. You seem to sense that she isn't a great movie star at all, or even an actress. She's just a small-town girl who has thought the same thoughts, suffered the same agonies as every other small-town girl, and then through a quirk of fate got mixed up in an artificial sort of life that isn't a part of her.

One girl, in a tearful letter, poured out a disconsolate story when her beau walked out on her. Una pointed out to her that she was much better off to have it happen then than later. Long correspondence with the girl has proved her right. It has been interesting to Una to watch this girl's emotional development and stabilization, and to feel that she had a part in it.

"Don't get panicky, and resort to all sorts of artifices," Una advises girls who are approaching a marriageable age without any noticeable results. "If the boys see you setting a trap for them, that's the quickest way to lose them. Try to get interested in something else. If possible, go so far as to fool yourself, as I did, into believing that you can get along entirely without men. Don't think of them at all. If it isn't a life and death matter when you meet a man, you won't be self-conscious in his presence, and will therefore appear at your very best advantage.

"It goes without saying, of course, that you should always appear dainty and well-groomed, whether you're interested in men or not.

"The best approach to marriage is a sense of humor, a conservative attitude of not expecting too much, and an unselfish love. Just plain unvarnished love isn't enough. Without a willingness to make sacrifices, love is just a one-way ticket to misery."

WELL, that's Una Merkel's system, and you have to admit it has worked marvels for her. After she went off to New York and embarked on a stage career in order to be independent of men, she acquired, quite without trying, a succession of suitors. She even fell in love with one of them—an actor in the same show with her. And he recognized the rare and beautiful qualities in Una's character which the boys in Covington and Philadelphia had overlooked.

But as their romance blossomed, Una made the discovery that they really had very little in common. And holding true to her conviction that love is not enough, she decided it would be better to break the engagement than risk an unhappy union. Before she could do so, however, the boy took ill. Una postponed the ordeal of blighting his hopes and resolved to wait until his health could better stand the shock. But he died without knowing the disappointment that was in store for him.

Now Una has been married four years to Ronald Burla, an aeronautical engineer. She still says he is perfect. He is proud of her work, as she is of his, and neither makes possessive demands on the other's time or is jealous if the other one lunches with a former sweetheart. They don't even call each other up three or four times a day because, Una says, their love is too fundamental and permanent to have to be confirmed every few hours.

Knit Yourself a Star Sweater for Spring—See Page 8

Butlers Are Only Skin Deep

(Continued from page 61)

'gentleman's gentleman' is often the gentleman of the two. I learned about butlers from my batman during the War. A perfect butler he was, having buttled for one of the oldest houses in England for years. And in the stilly nights he used often to regale me with the mysteries of his profession, never dreaming, either of us, that one day his profession would become mine. He told me of how the art is handed down from father to son. He told me, proudly, that being a butler to a noble house is to be a king in one's own domain, with many underlings who are very under.

AND so, when I do my buttling on the screen, I think of the trenches and of my batman. I realize that a butler has indeed all of the characteristics of a perfect gentleman. He is quiet of voice and manner. He is never obtrusive. He is the soul of reticence and honor. The butler I played in 'Top Hat' was modelled definitely from my batman (now a banker, I believe). For it is literally true that the butler will say, from his heart, 'We have lumbago this morning,' or 'We are riding to hounds today.' The identification of master and man is absolute. In other words, in 'Top Hat' Edward Everett Horton and I were not two men, but one. And a kinder gentleman than Mr. Horton I never served!"—and Eric gave me the Blore smile that we have all come to know so well.

"Even so," said Mr. Blore plaintively, over his sardine sandwich, "I resent perpetual buttling. Not because it does anything to me. Not because I find myself passing the mustard off the set. No, I am still master in my own home. But because it bores me. Buttling bores me. Buttling bores me horribly. I must be the same butler, movies without end. I am an actor, not a butler. I want to act. I should like to do, let us say, 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips'—characters. To play a type incessantly is not acting. It is, indeed, monotony to the point of madness. I shall go berserk one day and anoint one of my gentlemen with the onion soup, I'm very much afraid."

And wouldn't Mr. Blore make a perfect Mr. Chips? And ah, there, fans, look out for that onion soup . . . for the Blore smile conceals a k-nife!

I SCRATCHED Ivan Simpson and found: A charming, elderly man with the Queen's English beautiful and rich at the tip of his tongue. A man who has played Shakespeare in England, in the provinces, on Broadway. A man who, at the age of eight, learned by heart the first eight pages of Macaulay's "History of England."

Mr. Simpson has played with John Drew and with George Arliss. And it was with Mr. Arliss that he first "went into service." For he played the butler in the stage production of "The Green Goddess" and when, later, Mr. Arliss did the play in pictures he would have Mr. Simpson and none other buttle for him. And Mr. Simpson has buttled for Mr. Arliss ever since.

In between he has tutored several of our screen stars in the use of the English language for their screen roles. He first tutored Frances Howard, who became Mrs. Sam Goldwyn. He coached Loretta Young. He knows all there is to know about the theatre. He loves the stage with the authentic passion of the old-time actor to whom grease paint is incense and backstage the holy of holies.

He is married. He has a grown daughter. He is, he says, almost at the end of the road, where nothing is very important any more and life begins to appear in retrospect. He recently appeared in "Splendor" and the successful "Mutiny on the Bounty."

I asked him how buttling affected him and he said:

"I should know. I have probably opened and shut more doors than anyone in Hollywood. And constantly I have been asked, 'Can't you shut that door without making so much noise?' Why in thunder studios don't build the jambs of beaver board I cannot understand. It would minimize sound considerably and spare me many a round rating, I can tell you.

"I hate playing butlers for several reasons. One is the studios want to pay me a butler's wage no matter how important

HEY, YOU KIDS FROM 6 TO 60—HERE'S SKIPPY!

Everyone loves the funnies, and everyone will want to read the new POPULAR COMICS, the magazine of funnies, bringing you the latest antics of your favorites.

Skippy is just one of the many popular comic characters who are brought to you in the pages of America's favorite funnies . . . Dick Tracy • Toonerville • Smitty • Moon Mullins • Tailspin Tommy • Pam and Donald Dare • Ripley • Mutt and Jeff • Winnie Winkle • The Gumps • Don Winslow of the Navy • Ben Webster's Page • Orphan Annie • King of the Royal Mounted • Harold Teen • Little Joe • Terry • Gasoline Alley • Bronc Peeler • Tiny Tim . . . all your favorite funny-paper friends are in POPULAR COMICS.

SPECIAL NOTICE—There's a new stamp department starting in the April issue. If you're a stamp collector, you won't want to miss it . . . if you're not, then here's your chance to get acquainted with this fascinating hobby.

Get the April issue today!

POPULAR COMICS

America's Favorite Funnies

On Sale Everywhere.................................10c

Delightful entertaining in the quaint Alpine Grill (Switzerland on the Avenue) the new Gold Room Cocktail Lounge with Raoul Lipoff and his orchestra and the splendor of the Renaissance Room contributes to the universal popularity of the Gotham. The spacious rooms and suites have been tastefully furnished for comfort and luxury. Up-to-the-minute service and a delicious cuisine that is without a peer in New York . . . The sensible rentals assure not only a pleasant but an economical visit. Single rooms from $4.00.

The Gotham
Max A. Haering, Res. Mgr.
FIFTH AVE. at 55th ST., NEW YORK

Ralph Forbes and wife, Heather Angel, snapped by Scotty, leaving "Rose Marie" preview.

the part may be. If they have a king in the picture, and even though he says only a couple of lines, they pay him a royal salary. But I have to be satisfied with much less.

THEN, I have little sympathy with the person who is willing to be a subservient character. Of course, I do believe that a person who does his job well, whether he be president or cobbler or butler is a gentleman. Doing your job to the best of your ability, loving the job you are doing, is the essential thing in life. If a waiter waits upon me perfectly I bow reverently to him when I leave. If I happen to be waited upon by a waitress I try to curtsy properly, even though my limbs are now too stiff to do this with any dignity.

"It is my luck to be cast always as the loyal old retainer who goes on working for years without salary. I often wonder who is supposed to pay my laundry bills as my linen has to be impeccable in spite of the family poverty. I also save my employers from suicide on more than one dramatic occasion, and that is absolutely contrary to my conscientious convictions which are that any person who wants to drop the responsibilities given him to shoulder should be permitted to do so without hindrance.

"Another reason I dislike playing butlers is that," Mr. Simpson smiled, "I never had one. Also, so few, so very few of my friends ever had butlers. To be absolutely truthful, I don't really know what a butler looks like. I surmise that he has two arms, two legs, a mouth and a nose. Perhaps a soul. Who knows? Come to think of it, R. C. has a butler, also B. A. But these butlers were never given such lines as we have to speak when we buttle on the screen. If they dared to speak the lines we put into the mouths of our movie butlers their lives would be short, and their employers and relatives immediately relieved of them.

"My screen butlers," said Mr. Simpson, with a wave of his very fine hand, "put me, like Christian, in the Slough of Despond. I carry them, like burdens, upon my back."

I scratched Arthur Treacher and found: Mr. Treacher is six foot three. Mr. Treacher is droll. Mr. Treacher is bored. He has an apartment here in Hollywood He lives alone. He does not entertain nor does he allow himself to be entertained. He plays golf on his few off moments—alone. He seldom reads. He is the only son of a widowed mother, who still lives in Brighton, England, where Arthur was born. The elder Treacher was a lawyer and hoped that his son would eventually serve the people legally, too.

He chose the stage. And very early he built up a London reputation. He played with Charles Cochrane for three years. He appeared with Sir Alfred Butt. The Shuberts brought him to America and he made his Broadway debut at the Winter Garden in New York. He scored a six-foot-three hit in "The Cat and the Fiddle." He played for over a year in the Barrymore revival of "The School for Scandal" and appeared with Mary Ellis in "The Man Who Came Back."

He thinks almost everything is rather silly and quite awfully unimportant. Marriage, for instance. He was once burned and is thrice shy. He does not date girls nor spend time at the late spots of Hollywood. He says, "Oh, dear, no!" to all such things.

Mr. Treacher revealed himself to me over the luncheon table in the Paramount commissary. He was appearing in "Anything Goes," at that time.

HE said, "I am a bit of a recluse by nature. I am, also, a bit of a tyrant. I expect preferential treatment. That is to say, when I dine out, in a cafe or a hotel dining room, I expect waiters and maitre d'hôtels to stand about a bit. I expect at least as competent service as I fancy I give on the screen.

"Hollywood takes its actors at their face value. Which means that I am frequently taken at my butler value. When I am working on a set, for instance, I am never given a chair marked 'Arthur Treacher.' No, indeed. I have to stand. I am expected to stand. I am a butler and butlers do not sit down in the presence of their superiors. When, on rare occasions I dine out, and am seated next to some reigning star I find him, or her, glancing at me slightly askance. They are so used, you see, to seeing me pass the soup or pull out chairs for them. They don't quite know what they should say to me.

"I shouldn't dream of having a man servant in my home. Seeing him open and shut doors would be a postman's holiday and nightmare combined.

"Buttling is excessively boring. For the first butler we play on the screen is the last butler we play on the screen. We may timidly suggest some slight characterization. But the answer is, inevitably, 'Oh, no, we want you to be the same butler as you were in 'Curly Top,' or whatever the last picture chanced to be. You can readily appreciate what a vicious circle it is.

"If one has not the soul of a slave. . . ." sighed Mr. Treacher.

From which you may deduce that butlers, like beauty, are only skin deep. For we have removed the napkins from Messrs. Blore, Treacher and Simpson and we have seen what we have seen—men of might and majesty who are liable to spill the onion soup at any moment!

Between You 'n' Me

(Continued from page 25)

$1 Prize Letter
The Unsung Players

I trust we who enjoy motion pictures will always feel a personal loss in the death of screen favorites. Just as I hope we always will be on hand to boost the new faces worthy of our plaudits. But, please, in indulging in these two noble motives, don't let us forget the consistent work of such splendid bit and featured players as Jane Darwell, Edna May Oliver, Eric Blore, Jessie Ralph, Margaret Hamilton, Ernest Cossart, Reginald Owen, Robert Barrat, John Eldredge, Harvey Stephens, Henry Travers, Louise Dresser, Louise Fazenda, Louise Beavers, Guinn Williams, Clarence Muse, Alison Skipworth, Alan Dinehart, Sara Haden, and Helen Westley.

Despite the fact that this may appear a mere recitation of names, these people are some of the personalities without whom pictures would be lacking in much of the vigor and appeal they now possess.—Robert Downing, Hollywood, Calif.

$1 Prize Letter
Thrashing Out the Double-Feature Question

How many more times when we enter a theatre must we be forced to watch third-rate actors play in those quickies which compose the second half of the double-feature programs? The whole cheap composition of these films is evident. The poor photography, drab sets, and ham acting constantly remind the critical members of the audience of the better films which they have seen. The programs should consist of one long feature running about two hours, a newsreel and a cartoon, preferably one of Disney's.

The double bill causes a loss to all concerned: the audience loses by viewing an inferior product, the exhibitor loses by having an infrequent turnover of audiences, the producers lose by being forced to have individual production crews, directors, cutters, etc., for each film no matter how bad it is. The discontinuance of the double bill will stimulate the producers of cartoons and shorts to improve offerings.

As soon as the great producers such as M-G-M and Paramount abandon their new policy of making Class B pictures, the whole double bill will collapse of its own weakness, when left to the producers of Poverty Row. If the intelligent part of the audience will cease to patronize theatres showing double bills, the exhibitors will soon realize that they must obtain better pictures—Charles Vogt, Jersey City, N. J.

(Why don't those of you who feel strongly on this subject cast a ballot on it and send it in to us? Perhaps the exhibitors and producers will be persuaded to take your advice! Please fill out the following form and mail to):

BETWEEN YOU AND ME,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 MADISON AVENUE,
NEW YORK, N. Y.

I like the double-feature program.......
I dislike the double-feature program.....
Reason for opinion, in 20 words or less
....
....
....
....

She was a ONE-DATE Girl

Most of her engagements were "blind" dates. Later, these men found excuses when her name was brought up. Somehow, she never seemed to click.

They thought she was dull, when really she was constantly tired. She had a good figure, and a naturally lovely skin. But pimples marred its surface. Her eyes lacked the liveliness of a girl in good health. So night after night, she sat by the phone and waited for calls that never came.

She might have been such a different girl if she had only known the importance of regular habits, and the harm that common constipation can do. This condition may cause headaches and loss of appetite. Wrinkles and pimples may appear. Energy is sapped. Personality becomes flat.

Common constipation is usually caused by lack of "bulk" in meals. Scientific tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a fine source of gently acting "bulk." ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

Serve as a cereal, or cook into muffins, breads, waffles, etc. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Isn't it better to enjoy this natural food than to take pills and drugs—so often harmful?

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN corrects only common constipation, makes no claim to be a "cure-all." But it has proved effective in so many thousands of cases that you should certainly give it a trial. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek, Mich.

The natural food that corrects constipation

Kellogg's
ALL-BRAN
DELICIOUSLY FLAVORED WITH MALT, SUGAR AND SALT
FOR CONSTIPATION DUE TO INSUFFICIENT "BULK"
MADE BY KELLOGG IN BATTLE CREEK MICH U.S.A.

"TO ME . . HER LIPS LOOKED Irresistible"

SAID

CHARLES FARRELL

Famous screen star tells why he picked the girl with Tangee Lips

The Tangee girl won when CHARLES FARRELL chose loveliest lips while filming Universal Picture, "Fighting Youth".

● If you met Charles Farrell wouldn't you want to have tender, soft lips . . . the kind of lips that would appeal to him . . . that he would want to kiss?

Three girls were with us when we visited Mr. Farrell. One wore the ordinary lipstick . . . one no lipstick . . . the third, Tangee. "Your lips look irresistible," he told the Tangee girl, "because they look natural."

Tangee can't make your lips look painted, because it isn't paint. It simply intensifies your own natural color. Try Tangee. In two sizes, 39c and $1.10. Or, send 10c for the 4-Piece Miracle Make-Up Set offered below.

● BEWARE OF SUBSTITUTES . . . when you buy. Don't let some sharp sales person switch you to an imitation . . . there is only one Tangee. But when you ask for Tangee . . . be sure to ask for TANGEE NATURAL. There is another shade called Tangee Theatrical . . . intended only for those who insist on vivid color and for professional use.

World's Most Famous Lipstick

TANGEE

ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

New FACE POWDER now contains the magic Tangee color principle

TANGEE
TANGEE ROUGE
TANGEE
TANGEE CREME ROUGE

★ 4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP SET

THE GEORGE W. LUFT COMPANY MM46
417 Fifth Avenue, New York City

Rush Miracle Make-Up Set of miniature Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge, Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ (stamps or coin). 15¢ in Canada.

Check Shade ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Light Rachel

Name ____________________
Please Print

Address ____________________

City ____________ State ____________

Fat? Thin? You Can Be Just Right!

(Continued from page 63)

has tried to reduce sensibly—and, according to her lights, she is being honest. Yet she still buys a size 42 dress.

Nine cases out of ten, she has done something like this: she has started out with a nice, brand new resolution to get thin. She does without breakfast entirely—maybe a glass of tomato juice or a cup of coffee for lunch. Or a "choc malt." Gosh, how many times I've heard them order that, and they can hardly sit on the stool at the counter. By dinner time, naturally, she is so hungry she could eat the side of a house—and does practically. Furthermore, she is so out of sorts from starving herself that nothing tastes good or does her any good.

Then no doubt she has puffed and blown her way through a lot of incorrect and useless exercises, which have merely made her hot and cross and haven't helped her a particle. At the end of two weeks—or three or four—her scales heartrendingly tell her that she has lost a measly two pounds. Or maybe she hasn't lost at all. Now I ask you? And for this—for this!—she has starved herself into a state where she can't sleep at night; her digestion and elimination are all out of order; she can't speak a civil word to anyone and life is a pretty flat, stale and unprofitable affair. And what happens? She says, "The heck with it!"

Listen to me, big girl: never starve yourself on black coffee. Use your common sense about eating. You must cut down on your food, or change to the proper food. Go easy on the liquor, too. And for the love of Pete don't nibble and fill up on candy and sweets between meals.

Several months ago I gave my excellent diet for general, healthful reducing. If you missed it get it now. It's yours for the asking. Just write to me, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and you'll have the diet at once. If you follow my instructions faithfully and conscientiously, along with my exercises, you will be thrilled at your looks and, more important, you will find that the weight you have taken off hasn't left you with sagging and flabby skin and muscles, as quack reduction methods are apt to do. And certainly you'll be grateful that your innards aren't all out of kilter from crazy, get-slim-quick stunts.

HERE are some good tips when reducing: it isn't how little you eat, but how intelligently. The preparation of food is vitally important. The heavy starches are out—the fancy starches are out. That means no potatoes that are mashed with butter and cream and more butter. You may eat a baked potato, preferably the skin with only that part of the potato that clings to the skin. You may have a moderate seasoning of salt and pepper — I said moderate! If you can eat it without butter, so much the better. No griddle cakes or crackers—except an occasional whole wheat or rye wafer . . . no soft, soggy bread, heavy rolls, rich pastries or cakes. And be choosy about your sandwiches, too. Don't eat fried or greasy scrambled eggs—you may have a coddled egg occasionally. Avoid fried foods. Broiled meats for you, and no cream sauces. Don't drink liquids with your meals; afterwards you may have clear tea or coffee. Don't drink a lot of extra water. You get your water in fresh fruits and vegetables. Do not boil your vegetables for hours—a few minutes (just until tender) is enough, and in as little water as possible. (Save the liquid for further use.) Eat slowly and chew your food well. And remember this, "If you take plenty of time to live, there won't be any time left to die.

As for exercise, being "pretty active" isn't enough. Doing housework isn't enough. You must exercise scientifically and do it on schedule. Concentrate on the parts you want to reduce and work on them systematically. Ask me for help whenever you need it. I want to help you all. The fleshiness of the face and the extra chins will, to a remarkable extent, disappear with sensible diet, then with my own system of facial treatment we can keep the muscles firm and the skin tight. But we'll take that problem up in a later article. However, if you can't wait, you can write to me in the meantime.

The rear of the hips is one spot where fat has a nasty habit of settling. Here is a good exercise for that particular problem. Work at it. It will do the trick. Don't get bored and discouraged after a few trials. Go to it and show some gumption. I can't be there to help you in person and bawl you out—but I will if you don't get busy. I know you can do so much for yourselves and it is my sincere wish to see all of you as happy and lovely as possible.

Sit on the floor with legs stretched out in front of you. Use your hands only to balance your body. Now, keeping the legs stiff, and together, raise them slightly off the floor, and keep them off the floor. Then begin to hitch yourself along on the floor by swinging the legs over to the left, and as you do this roll on the left hip. Then swing the legs over to the right and roll over on the right hip. You are really walking in a sitting position. Do this back and forth across the floor at least six times to begin with, and later increase to ten. Incidentally, this exercise will also strengthen the stomach muscles.

That is an exercise I recommended to Carole Lombard not so long ago when she was known as "Carole of the curves." Lombard was designed by nature to be a pretty big girl. (All the more credit to her that she is slim and svelte now.) I remember an executive at Pathé pointed her out to me one day, and said, "Can you do anything for her?" Without looking a second time, I said, "Plenty!" They wanted her beautifully modeled face in a picture, but they didn't want the Mae West effect below the waist. So I went to work and in three weeks I had Carole down to where her nether parts looked less like a Rembrandt and more like a modern girl.

Carole, like all my babies in Hollywood, must keep slender and graceful. Their jobs depend upon it. And take it from me, so does yours, whatever it is. Some of the stars have a very bad habit. They "cram" their reducing and beauty, like college students "cram" before an examination. When they are not working they loll around in bed too much, go to parties and eat and drink a lot of things they shouldn't. Then all of a sudden they get a call to start work on a picture. One look at themselves and they get frantic. Then they want miracles! When mama is around, they get'em. Otherwise they go the way all flesh. I want you all to be smarter than that.

NOW a word about Norma Shearer. Norma's life has been one long trek along the hard road of ambition, as you all know. She's fundamentally a small person and every extra pound is magnified and as you know the camera makes you look ten pounds heavier. When Norma was a youngster, she wanted to do all the athletic things brother Douglas did and as a result, she developed a pair of husky arms. Her legs were muscular, too. When I first knew Norma she also had to fight anemia. Anemic people are often inclined to be bumpy. Norma has to work hard to keep slim, but she has never been daunted by difficulties. Any star that takes on "Romeo and Juliet" must, you'll admit, have a large percentage of gumption.

It's harder sometimes to get rid of localized flesh, — especially the solid, muscular kind, than to drop from a 42 to 34. If you are troubled with stubborn bulges of fat in certain spots—upper arms, legs, waistline, whatever, let me know about it and I'll help you.

Oh, before I forget, here's a diet for those of you who are anemic or have a tendency to be so:

Breakfast

Start with a half-glass of water with juice of half a lemon
Baked apple, without sugar
Portion of brown rice flakes, with a small glass of skimmed milk
When berries are in season, alternate with the the baked apple
Small cup of coffee, clear

At Eleven O'Clock

A glass of orange juice or tomato juice

Luncheon

Vegetable soup
Cream cheese and lettuce salad
Whole wheat toast, thin butter
Coffee, clear, or tea with lemon

Dinner

Beef Broth (if possible, occasionally put in an egg yolk)
Boiled celery roots for salad or plain lettuce
Choice of one meat: 2 slices of rare roast beef. 2 slices of broiled calves liver. 3 broiled kidneys, or in a ragout. Eat sparingly of the sauce if it is thick
Choice of one vegetable: Steamed celery, asparagus, carrots, okra, green peas or stewed tomatoes
You may have the skin of a baked potato
For dessert: fresh fruit, gelatine or plain cup custard
You may drink the juice made from boiling turnip tops. It is excellent. Also spinach juice or use the leaves of celery that you usually throw away. Coffee

No, my thin darlings, I'm not neglecting you. First a caution: although you don't hear thin girls using the alibi of glandular disturbances as often as fat girls, it frequently is true that glandular faults keep one from gaining weight. In such cases, see a reliable and competent doctor. He will advise you. Most of the time, however, your inability to gain comes from not knowing what to do. You may eat a great deal, but not the right things. There are exercises, too, which thin girls should perform. Exercises to gain weight? But, certainly!

THIN girls should get at least nine hours sleep every night. If possible, have your breakfast in bed. I know, I know. You can't always do this, maybe not at all. I'm merely mentioning it as a good idea. Lie down for half an hour after lunch. If you're a working girl, you can't, of course, lie down after lunch, but you can, perhaps, find a quiet place where you may sit and do nothing—just sit. After dinner, you can certainly lie down for a bit.

It's a good idea for thin girls to have a soothing massage twice a week. Not rough or vigorous, but a gentle, light and relaxing massage.

Drink as little alcoholic stimulant as you can. At parties, it is sometimes more convenient and pleasant for everyone concerned to take one cocktail and string along with it than to cause fuss and palaver by refusing. But don't take a drink unless social usage makes it advisable. A little wine is all right, but strong liquors are inclined to make you nervous and over-excited. Drink malted beer or a good malt tonic with your meals. If you want the name of a good one, I'll give it to you if you'll write to me.

The good old sun is an excellent tonic. Get as much as you can and plenty of gentle exercise in the open air. Did you know that you can get panes of vitaglass put in ordinary windows for a very moderate sum? Two panes of this glass in the lower part of any window where the sun strikes—and you can have yourself a sun bath in the cold winter months.

Swimming is an excellent developer. Learn to swim if you don't already know how. In cold weather, maybe you could go to an indoor pool a couple of times a week.

I have some wonderful exercises that I use for building-up thin spots. Let me know what you need, and I'll send them to you.

Here is a little exercise for rounding out the neck—an exercise which Loretta Young could take up with profit, if I'm not being too impertinent! Inhale quickly. Keep the air up in your throat as much as possible. Fill your wind-pipe and hold it. Now, make every muscle in your neck tense as you distend your throat. Keep your chin relaxed. Exhale. Repeat ten times, and do it every day.

Perhaps some of you are thin all over like Ann Dvorak, who claims she can't

Melt ROUGHNESS
BRING OUT NEW FRESH SKIN —SMOOTH FOR POWDERING

HATE TO MEET TOM WITH THIS ROUGH SKIN
GRAND! POND'S VANISHING CREAM FIXES THAT
1 SECOND LATER
WE'LL HAVE A SWELL TIME. SKIN'S HEAVENLY NOW

Miss Mary Augusta Biddle: "The minute Pond's Vanishing Cream touches my skin—roughness goes!"

EVEN when your skin is rough "just in spots"—it's enough to spoil your whole make-up. And ruin your evening, too! You feel so self-conscious—you just can't be your own gay self.

Yet you can melt rough spots smooth!

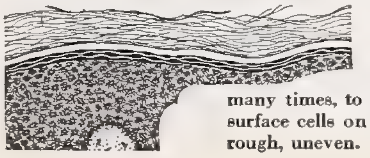
That roughness is only a dead layer hiding the smooth skin beneath. Look at skin magnified—you see the flaky particles sticking out. Really old dead skin cells!

As a leading dermatologist says: "Surface skin is constantly drying out, thickening with horny cells. Yet, once the old dead cells are melted away, the young underlying cells become the surface skin—smooth and soft. This melting can be done with a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream)."

Try Pond's Vanishing Cream to see this melting principle in action. The instant it touches your skin, roughnesses melt away. New skin comes out—smooth, nice to touch! This shows why Pond's Vanishing Cream is such a perfect powder base.



Outer Skin The epidermis, magnified many times, to show how dead surface cells on top make skin rough, uneven.

For a smooth make-up—Put on Pond's Vanishing Cream—just enough to film your skin faintly. You can't help but like the new pearly softness of your skin—and the smooth way powder clings!

Overnight for lasting softness—After cleansing, leave Pond's Vanishing Cream on overnight. Greaseless, it won't smear the pillowcase. All night long, it brings your skin a finer softness, a more youthful look!

8-Piece Package POND'S, Dept D136, Clinton, Conn. Rush 8-piece package containing special tube of Pond's Vanishing Cream, generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10¢ for postage and packing.

Name____________________

Street____________________

City____________ State________

Copyright, 1936, Pond's Extract Company

"—don't try to get well in a day..."

no appetite? nervous?
losing weight? pale?

—there is usually a definite reason for these

Don't try to get well in a day . . . this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried.

But there is a certain scientific way you can assist by starting those digestive juices in the stomach to flowing more freely and at the same time supply a balanced mineral deficiency the body needs.

Therefore, if you are pale, tired and rundown . . . a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve—by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Much more could be said—a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road of feeling like yourself again. You should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food . . . sound sleep . . . steady nerves . . . a good complexion . . . and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today. © S.S.S. Co.

SSS TONIC

Makes you feel like yourself again put on an ounce of weight. To those of you who have this complaint to make, I would suggest the following good, workable and practical building-up diet. Try it. You'll feel good and look good.

Breakfast

Large glass of orange or grapefruit juice. Alternate the juices
Dish of ripe, sliced bananas, milk and tablespoon of brown sugar
Whole wheat toast with plenty of butter, and jam if you like Coffee or tea with cream. Sweeten with a little honey, if you desire
Two hours later you may have a glass of tomato juice

Luncheon

Bowl of thick soup (chicken gumbo, cream of tomato, lentil, etc.)
Green salad (lettuce, endive, watercress, etc.)
Or salad of half an avocado
Vegetable plate or baked beans or spaghetti or creamed cod fish or broiled sweetbreads
For dessert: cup custard, fruit gelatine, ice cream, puddings, Boston cream pie or layer cake
Large glass of milk or bottle of malt beer

Dinner

Celery (eat all you want)
Ripe olives
Bowl of soup (vegetable or cream soups)
Choice of any broiled or roasted meat, except pork. Eat the meat juices, but first skim off the fat
Two vegetables
Baked potato (skin and all)
For dessert: tapioca pudding, baked apple and cream, cake, pie, or ice cream. Fresh or stewed fruits or gelatine
Glass of milk, malt beer or coffee

Well, there you are, children. I think you'll have enough to keep you busy until next month. But be sure you do it. By the way, have you sent for my special weight-control chart? It's absolutely free, you know. Just send in the little coupon below, and it's yours. Cheerio!

Madame Sylvia,
Modern Screen,
149 Madison Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Madame Sylvia:

Please send me your SPECIAL CONSULTATION and MEASUREMENT CHART for weight control.

Name................................

Street..............................

City................State.............

(Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope)

Bachelor At Large

(Continued from page 39)

time he would go through the same agony of expecting to be a terrific flop. Not having the courage to look at the picture himself, he would rush into the secretary's office a few hours before the preview, extract a promise from her to see it for him and relay the bad news. Meanwhile he'd jump into his car and race off to Arrowhead, or any other point where he couldn't be reached by film executives. And invariably, at midnight, the secretary would receive a long distance 'phone call from Cary asking for her judgment of his performance. He had implicit faith in her criticisms.

For months these two met daily in the studio commissary for lunch. Ensued an hour of good-natured ribbing with a lively group of young actors, promising directors, and several members of the publicity department. More sedate lunchers moved as far away from this gay table as possible.

Joining his friends later than usual one day, Cary commented on the strange silence of his secretary. He tried his usual ribbing to bring her back to earth, but when she failed to meet wisecrack with wisecrack, and he noticed tears in her eyes, he, too, grew silent. Later he whispered to her to stop by his dressing-room after lunch.

"What's happened to you?" he said when they were alone. "I don't like this going serious on me all of a sudden. You're worried about something—what is it? If it's money, please stop being a goose and ask me for some. Won't you please tell me what's wrong?" But she only shook her head.

Worried by her obvious unhappiness, Cary managed to ferret out the secret several days later. Her mother was ill and an expensive operation might be imminent. She insisted she didn't have to take advantage of his offer of financial aid. He wasn't satisfied.

Despite her protests, he continued to refer to the subject. If the operation was necessary, he, Cary, was the logical person to take care of it.

When she finally consented, he refused to take her note for the money. Why should she deprive him of this little thing? He was anxious to do something in return for all the sound and practical advice she had given him since the day he arrived in Hollywood.

The operation was successful, but the girl's mother was confined to her bed for some weeks thereafter. Mother's Day rolled around, and with it, a huge box of flowers, which this invalid mother opened curiously. Now who on earth would be sending her flowers besides her daughter. . . .? Inside was a simple card, "from Cary Grant," whom she never had met.

The card was found, after her death some years later, among her most treasured possessions.

AND here is another example of that thoughtfulness in little things.

I walked into his dressing-room one day to find him busily wrapping up a large bundle of funny papers.

"What on earth are you doing with those, Cary?" I asked.

"Oh, I'm just sending them to my young brother. He's crazy about American funnies. I send him all I can find every week."

Cary, by the way, recently has been seeing his young English brother, having gone over to make "The Amazing Quest of Mr. Ernest Bliss," with Mary Brian, for a British company.

And what seems to tie in with his kindness and sensitiveness for other people's feelings is his natural modesty. He has no distorted conception of his own importance, though he is one of the most popular leading men on the screen, and certainly one of the most popular young bachelors in the film colony. "But why should this give one a swell head?" Cary would say. "I'm just trying to do my job as well as I can."

He came bouncing out of his dressing-room the other day, just as a studio guide approached with a party of important visitors. The young office-boy-guide, overwhelmed by the glamor of his present duty, called to Cary, and that gentleman

Alice White, as cute and pert as ever, sailed recently for England to make a picture at Gaumont-British. She and Cy Bartlett have called it a day, maritally speaking. George Givot seems to be her current heart interest.

sauntered over to meet the anxious little group.

"I'd like you to meet George Brent," said this new-to-the-studio boy in an official voice. (As if hobnobbing with the film colony's George Brents was part of the day's routine for him!)

"I'm more than flattered," replied Cary, chuckling. "If I didn't think you'd find out later that I was an impostor, I'd like to answer to that name. Unfortunately, I'm not George Brent. I'm just Cary Grant. Sorry to disappoint." And he shook hands all around, thereby causing several ladies to skip a heart beat.

He's still ribbing the office boy about his mistake.

His crony, Randolph Scott, recently observed wistfully, "I wish I could fall in love so completely that everyone else was shut out of my sight and mind."

"Not many men do," said a skeptic acquaintance.

"You're wrong there," replied Randy, "Cary does. Why, when he was so in love with Virginia Cherrill, he couldn't think of anything or anyone else. Even when they were quarreling, which was frequent both before and after their marriage, Cary would be miserable with worry and Virginia occupied even his wrathful thoughts!"

And probably that accounts for Cary's footloose affections at the moment. He's one of the most sought after gents about the town, but aside from his constancy in beauing Betty Furness about, he hasn't really concentrated on a gal, not the Grant way, since Virginia and he parted some time ago.

He may be irresponsible about keeping dates on time, sending flowers and such trivialities, but when the Grant mind and heart become fixed upon a girl, she can be sure she's the main thought in his head all day, every day!

HOW THESE THREE HOLLYWOOD Make-Up Secrets Can Give You Beauty

READ how Hollywood's new make-up originated for screen stars by Max Factor, make-up genius, can give you youthful loveliness too.

Hollywood's Powder Secret Gives Skin New Beauty

IN CREATING make-up for screen stars Max Factor originated new color harmony shades in powder, rouge, and lipstick which have proved by rigid camera tests to reveal more beauty in each type of face than any others. In powder, Max Factor has created color harmony shades for blondes, brunettes, redheads, brownettes. Your color harmony shade will instantly enliven your skin with youthful radiance, and give you a lasting, satin-smooth finish. Max Factor's Powder, one dollar.

Rouge That Gives an Exquisite Lifelike Color

LIKE the powder, Max Factor has created rouge in color harmony shades for every type. When you use rouge in your color harmony shade you will agree with Virginia Bruce who says, "The creamy-smooth texture makes the rouge look natural, and the color has a magic way of making the whole face beautiful." Max Factor's Rouge, fifty cents.

New Lip Make-Up Gives Lips Alluring Color

TO GIVE the lips an alluring, lasting color, Max Factor has created a Super-Indelible Lipstick in color harmony shades for all types. Being moisture-proof, it may be applied to both the inner and outer surface of the lips, giving them an even, lasting color. Max Factor's Super-Indelible Lipstick, one dollar.

VIRGINIA BRUCE
in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's
"THE GREAT ZIEGFELD"

Max Factor ★ Hollywood

SOCIETY MAKE-UP: Face Powder, Rouge, Lipstick in Color Harmony

Mail for POWDER, ROUGE AND LIPSTICK IN YOUR COLOR HARMONY

MAX FACTOR, Max Factor's Make-Up Studio, Hollywood:
Send Purse-Size Box of Powder and Rouge Sampler in my color harmony shade; also Lipstick Color Sampler, four shades. I enclose ten cents for postage and handling. Also send me my Color Harmony Make-Up Chart and 48-page Illustrated Instruction book, "The New Art of Society Make-Up" . . . FREE.

24-4-1

NAME____________

STREET____________

CITY____________ STATE____________

COMPLEXIONS	EYES	HAIR
Very Light ☐	Blue ☐	BLONDE
Fair ☐	Gray ☐	Light ☐ Dark ☐
Creamy ☐	Green ☐	BROWNETTE
Medium ☐	Hazel ☐	Light ☐ Dark ☐
Ruddy ☐	Brown ☐	BRUNETTE
Sallow ☐	Black ☐	Light ☐ Dark ☐
Freckled ☐	LASHES (Color)	REDHEAD
Olive ☐	Light ☐ Dark ☐	Light ☐ Dark ☐
SKIN Dry ☐ Oily ☐ Normal ☐	AGE	If Hair is Gray, check type above and here ☐

I CAN'T COME:
IT'S THE WRONG
TIME OF THE MONTH

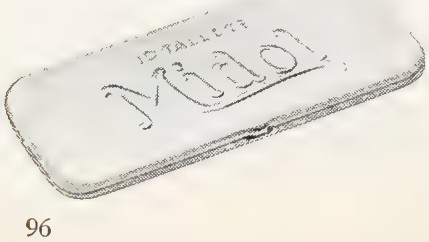
NONSENSE!
TAKE SOME MIDOL
AND YOU'LL BE YOURSELF

Don't Suffer From "REGULAR" Pain

It's an old-fashioned girl who still suffers each month when there is really no need to! It's just too bad for the girl who doesn't know she can keep her dates and keep comfortable. For painful periods, you need simply do this:

Watch the calendar. At the first sign of approaching pain, take a Midol tablet and drink a glass of water, and you may escape the expected pain entirely. If not, a second tablet should check it within a few minutes. Midol often helps women who have always had a very hard time. And the relief is lasting; two tablets see you through your worst day. Yet they contain no narcotic and form no habit. They do not interfere in any way with the normal and necessary menstrual process. But don't be fooled by ordinary pain tablets offered as a specific for menstrual pain! Midol is a special medicine offered for this special purpose.

Must you favor yourself, and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol might give you back those days you have had to be so careful. You can get these tablets in a trim little aluminum case at any drug store.



Leslie Howard, Perennial Charmer

(Continued from page 57)

stage—but in person, well they were very polite about it, but they wished to be shown.

You're way ahead of me, of course. In half an hour, Leslie made it awfully tough for the other men in their lives. I always feel sorry for the guys who have to follow Leslie. On the screen or on the hoof, he leaves 'em with that far-away don't-touch-me-right-now look.

What did he say to them? Well, he talked about some technical details of the picture, he compared Hollywood with New York and managed the gargantuan feat of not disparaging either place. He said directors had all the fun making pictures, and some day he wanted to be a director.

It was not what he said, my pets, it was the way he said it.

So far as the mind can see and the naked eye reveal, charm is not visible. But one small clue to Leslie's charm is his quiet but superb confidence. Oh no, don't go off half-cocked like that. Confidence is not something that pounds its chest and swaggers and talks loud and uses no pronouns except the personal "I." Confidence like the Howard's is something quiet and infinitely sustaining. It doesn't give a damn for praise or criticism— it just goes serenely on, buoyed and confirmed by some inner source of strength.

This kind of confidence is so rare in Hollywood that the natives are a little afraid of it. You see, it selects its friends among whomever it finds interesting or amusing, and fails to note if they come within the same salary bracket. It gets in no panics about being seen in the right places with the right people. It dares to wear comfortable old clothes and glasses, not just around the studio but anywhere and everywhere. This sort of confidence actually estimates the worth of a restaurant by the quality of food it serves, and not to whom it is served. Thus you will sometimes discover the Howard in little out-of-the-way joints which no other actor would think of entering, because he will not be seen by the right persons.

MAYBE right now gently but firmly you are saying I am nuts to define charm as being nine parts confidence and one part Leslie Howard. All right, you define it. And anybody who quotes Barrie and refers to "that damned charm" he mentioned will have to stand in the corner till school's out.

Another thing about how Leslie's charm works. You know, of course, that interviewers are not supposed to be women while on duty. The usual thing is, when you make an appointment, you say "three o'clock at the studio," and that's that. Well, when you make an appointment with Leslie, you go and have your hair done. Then you have a long silent debate whether to wear flat heels and a tweed suit and look practical, or wear high heels and the Lily Daché hat and look as frivolous as possible, so he won't expect too much in the way of an interview . . . Which reminds me. There was an interview, wasn't there?

It was noisy on the set, so we drifted outside and sat in Leslie's English car—half a block long, with more gadgets on the dash than a fancy airplane. Howard loves to give demonstrations with them. You press something and a jack promptly lifts one wheel. Press something else and signals snap out. Whenever an electrician or a prop man passes and looks interested, Leslie shows him the works. Knows what goes on under the hood, too.

In between working the gadgets, Howard told me he was bored with acting. He wants to be a director. Directors have all the fun. The only use for actors is to exploit a story. The actor has no control over his medium. Directing is an exacting business.

"The measure of a picture's greatness is in direct ratio to the greatness of the director. He is the man who brings it together, it depends absolutely upon the unity of his mind."

A family group—Ruth, Ronald and Leslie Howard attend the Ted Lewis opening at the Cocoanut Grove. Ronald is certainly a double for his famous Dad, isn't he? Scotty caught Mrs. Howard unaware.

Ensued a long technical discussion on the creation and production of pictures. Evidently, Howard had given the subject a great deal of thought. He talks in a remarkably easy manner. His words are understated, his voice unraised under any circumstances—even when a truck went by. He presents his views with utter detachment, leaving the listener to sort and emphasize them.

Only his eyes refuse to be detached. Amusement, gay and flickering, looks out of them. Amusement at the picture he is painting of himself as a rebel, as a profundity, as a shrewd businessman. And by the way, he is a shrewd businessman, whether or not the idea amuses him. He is a rather forceful person in a calm way, who wishes to make no outward to-do about anything, least of all his rather daring plan to desert acting for directing.

He wishes to leave the known and the proven, which has become stale to him ("I'm tired of doing bits and ends as one must do on the screen"), for a sporting chance at bigger game.

"And by that I do not mean money," he added, "I would be satisfied to show my pictures in ten or twelve selected cities, and find ample audience for the things I could do without shame.

"It is a very good thing to make up your mind about whom you are going to please. One cannot hope to appeal to everyone who attends the film theatres, that is obvious insanity. I prefer to please those who think along the same line as I do. Why not? Certainly I can understand better what they want. Naturally, it is a limited field."

I edged in a faint note of wonder as to how this could be accomplished, in the face of his acting contract with Warners, the "Romeo and Juliet" being made at M-G-M. . . .

"Oh yes, my contract provides only for acting. Yes, indeed. But you see, I have various identities. There is the stage actor, the stage director, the writer, the picture actor—and now the picture director!" He regarded my bewilderment with the air of one gently teasing a small child. (Charm Note: that's another angle on this charm business. When you wish to avoid telling something to a woman, look at her gently, as if she were a very small child. It's marvelous.) He turned on that mischief-mysterious smile, the smile that implies so much and tells nothing, the "you leave it all to me" smile.

SO don't ask me how he will work out his plan, in the face of contractual obligations. Something tells me, beyond a doubt, he will. And it will happen after the most serene one-man rebellion ever staged.

While he was making "Petrified Forest" at Warners, that studio had urgent need for a good determined brace of bloodhounds, due to their star's insouciant habit of disappearance. He was located eventually in any of several odd places. Possibly asleep in the back of a truck, or prowling around the rafters high over the set. Assistant Director Frank Shaw tried to follow him every place, but Howard became expert at losing him.

Howard always arrived late on the set and flew into a simulated bustle of activity right away, "Well, old chaps, what's holding us up?" What can you say to a man like that?

One day he made off on an electrician's bicycle. It happened to have all the man's tools in a leather bag on the back. The electrician waited, fuming, and bawled hell out of Howard when he finally got back. Howard took it beautifully. (I can think of several pretentious actors who might have had the man fired.) When he

WRIGLEY'S
DOUBLE MINT
CHEWING GUM
PEPPERMINT FLAVOR
PEPPERMINT FLAVOR
Same girl
Before and after
Q-96
Small Picture typifies the girl who neglects her looks • • Larger Picture—the same girl after she has been to the Beauty Shop • • GO TO YOUR BEAUTY SHOP EVERY WEEK • • AND, IT HELPS BRING LIFE AND SPARKLE TO YOUR FACE TO ENJOY DOUBLE MINT GUM DAILY finished, Howard shook hands with him and remarked, "Old chap, I'm afraid you take life much too seriously."

At every possible opportunity, Leslie went to sleep. He just calmly put his head in Bette Davis' lap and fell asleep, or he went out into her car or anybody's car. After four in the afternoon, he begins to fade. It's very strange how Leslie knows exactly when to begin fading. He doesn't like to work after four, and any scenes taken later than that have to be made over in the morning, anyway.

He put in days with Humphrey Bogart figuring out a happy ending for "Petrified Forest." The studio decided he shouldn't be shot, for a while there, and everybody was writing happy endings. Leslie and Humphrey played it on the stage and were firmly convinced there was no logical way to end it happily, so some of their finis were hilarious. One was: Leslie was not to die, he was to go to Paris with Bette. There they would be, Bette painting, and Leslie happy because he was working for Paramount! The studio turned it down.

Then Howard's daughter, Leslie, wrote an ending—very seriously. Bogart was to say, "I can't kill you." So Howard grabs the gun and says, "All right, let me do it." Instead of which, he sticks them all up, gets a big reward and lives happily ever after, with Bette and lots of children. Leslie says his daughter ought to be writing scenarios for Warners.

Leslie's son, Ronnie, looks exactly like his father, and has lots of fun going around autographing. That accounts for two sets of Leslie Howard autographs all over town.

Howard likes to see pictures and goes often to the small neighborhood theatres with his daughter Leslie.

The night of the "Petrified Forest" preview, scheduled for eight-thirty, I was there at eight twenty-five, and the house was jammed. Arrived then a pleasant simply-dressed family group, a man in glasses and an old somewhat faded polo coat, small daughter in her school clothes, and mama minus furs or swank. The Howards. There were no seats. I think they stood up for the performance. I went upstairs and sat on the balcony steps (don't tell the fire department) in some obliging gentleman's lap, as there wasn't any room left on the steps. (Yoo hoo, thanks mister.) Apparently, neither of us minded, it was such a grand picture. Never has such a crowd turned out for a preview in this, our preview-mad village.

Any way you look at it, seeing his pictures or interviewing Leslie Howard, it's Lovely Work, I wouldn't lie to you!

Has Mae West a Dual Personality?

(Continued from page 41)

'Dark Angel' and 'Shanghai.' It's surprising how, in so many pictures you see nowadays, sex is something which causes suffering.

"And what does the audience do after seeing something like that? Has a good cry, and leaves the theatre feelin' shaky, and not so sure whether there's any percentage in emotions that make you suffer like that. And figurin' if this is so, then love like that is somethin' to be afraid of—to avoid.

"But you don't have to be afraid of your emotions—if you have your head on your shoulders, and know the definition of control—only don't carry that too far!

"Know what you want, and go after it like a man. Put your cards on the table. If you like him, tell him to come up and see you sometime. Don't be coy. Don't be elusive. You don't have to keep him guessing.

"I've learned, from experience, that any man can be had—if a girl just acts natural and kinda down to earth!"

WELL, that was that-a. As I walked away, a wiser, saner girl, hoping for an opportunity to put Mae's educational advice into practice, she called after me: "Remember—be yourself! And laugh! Take it from me, they love it.

"Don't try to be a great mystery or a tragedy queen. Don't be too demure and little-girlish. And let a man know what you're thinking about once in a while. You'd be surprised how often they're thinking just the same thing!"

With this admonition ringing in my ears, I went to tea one day with Paul Cavanagh.

"Compared to the vultures and harpies who pass for ladies in fashionable society, and whom I've met in droves on both continents," said Paul Cavanagh, balancing a piece of toast and strawberry jam in mid air and gazing into space, "Mae West is a cooing dove!"

With that, my toast and the strawberry jam fell into my cup of tea! I must have looked rather astonished, because the gentleman from Cambridge leaned across the tea table.

"Was that a shocking thing to say?" he asked, quite alarmed. "Will people misunderstand me?" He hesitated for a moment. "But it's true, you know," he said.

"And I'll tell you another thing which will amaze you as much . . . Mae West is the most non-committal member of a sex which spends half its life committing itself! She'll never admit anything! You never know what she's thinking."

OUR screen paragon of female frankness, our straight-from-the-shoulder, beautiful-but-bolder "Klondike Annie" non-committal? "Will you pardon me, please, Mr. Cavanagh," I stammered, "while I take time out to readjust my values?"

This little business done, Mr. Cavanagh proceeded to explain a few things about our one-of-a-kind Miss West which probably you, and certainly I, never heard before.

Now the Lillian Russell-ish, big bustle-ish Mae West of the screen is frank. She says so herself. Direct and to the point. She never wastes time in flimsy, feminine shenanigans. If Mae shilly-shallies or vacillates, she does it with her hips and shoulders—never with her mind.

Off-screen, Mae West is different, difficult to know. She's built a smoke screen of reserve about herself.

To Paul Cavanagh, who looks, acts and is suave with the physical and mental pattern of the English gentleman, learning to know Mae West was a staggering surprise. Having nothing more intimate than an audience-screen acquaintance with her, before he became her leading man in "Goin' to Town," Paul (who's slightly on the conservative side) drew his own conclusions. He expected her to be a pretty formidable Amazon—the hard-boiled dame from Broadway with a twang in her voice and a bludgeon in her manner. The kind of woman who

I HATE TO KEEP BLOWING AND SNEEZING ALL DAY
I TAKE ALKA-SELTZER TO KEEP COLDS AWAY
COLDS
MY HEAD-ACHE'S GONE! MY HEAD IS CLEAR!
MUST BE YOUR ALKA-SELTZER DEAR-
HEAD ACHE
ALKA-SELTZER, YOU'RE A BLESSING
FIXED ME UP WHILE I WAS DRESSING
HANGOVER
Be Wise— Alkalize
Alka-Seltzer

This sparkling alkaline drink combined with an analgesic (sodium acetyl salicylate) gives prompt, pleasant relief for Sour Stomach, Colds, Headaches. Also other common aches and pains associated with excess acidity (alkaline deficiency).

TUNE IN THE NATIONAL BARN DANCE SATURDAY NIGHT NBC-NETWORK

Alkalize with Alka-Seltzer AT ALL DRUGGISTS 30¢-60¢

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

D.J. MAHLER
Beauty Specialist

The Mahler method positively prevents hair from growing again. Safe, easy, permanent. Use it privately, at home. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success.
Backed by 35 years of successful use all over the world. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for Illustrated Booklet.
We teach Beauty Culture.
D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 366D, Providence, R.I.

KEEPS WHITE SHOES new!
SNO-KIST
for all white shoes

A lasting white that penetrates without rubbing – softens leather. Makes a high polish or dull finish. Does NOT rub off. Large 3 oz. bottle or tube....10c. At 5 and 10 cent stores.
SNO-KIST . . . PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SNO-KIST
SHOE WHITENER

made you feel unpleasantly conspicuous in a crowd. And if you know Englishmen, there's nothing that can give them a nice quiet case of mental dyspepsia sooner than feeling conspicuous.

When Paul discovered that Mae was not only not what he thought, but on the quiet, even shy side of things, he was flabbergasted. He repeated the word "shy" and this made me drop another strawberry in my tea. Not that she hasn't poise. She has enough to meet the King of England at a moment's notice—and to feel perfectly at ease. Or to look as if she'd never done anything, but sit behind a silver urn and pour tea at four o'clock of an afternoon—which she did every afternoon during the filming of "Goin' to Town." Even poured it with just the right British accent for Lord and Lady Byng, when they came to visit Paul on the set.

Now Paul calls himself the only unrepentant reactionary in Hollywood.

I mention it because it seems to connect up with his admiration for Mae.

I imagined at first, when he said this, that he was referring to a secret longing for that noble decade, when curves belonged elsewhere than on piano legs or race tracks, and when billows were confined not only to the deep, dark sea.

BUT no. There's something old-fashioned about Mae, says he, but in another way. She has a quality that our emancipated, restless young women fail to have. Mae's soothing. Mae's cozy. She lets the man do the talking while she listens, raptly. Even submerging her own personality to his. No need to mention how well that goes with a man. Especially a traditional and slightly sentimental Englishman, who has been taught, Isabel Jewell cuts Sidney Blackmer a piece of Tom Brown's birthday cake. Isabel is one of Hollywood's cleverest actresses.

3 annoying problems solved because Kotex

CAN'T CHAFE—CAN'T FAIL—CAN'T SHOW

CAN'T CHAFE

The sides of Kotex are cushioned in a special, soft, downy cotton — chafing and irritation are prevented. Thus Wondersoft Kotex provides lasting comfort and freedom. But sides only are cushioned — the center surface is left free to absorb.

CAN'T FAIL

Kotex has a special "Equalizer" center whose channels guide moisture evenly the whole length of the pad. Gives "body" but not bulk — prevents twisting and roping. The filler of Kotex is actually 5 times more absorbent than cotton.

CAN'T SHOW

The ends of Kotex are not only rounded, but flattened and tapered besides. Absolute invisibility — no tiny wrinkles whatsoever. Even the sheerest dress, the closest-fitting gown, reveals no telltale lines.

● THREE DISTINCT TYPES OF KOTEX

Choose the one for your intimate comfort

REGULAR—IN THE BLUE BOX
For the ordinary needs of most women. The choice of millions.

JUNIOR—IN THE GREEN BOX
Somewhat narrower—for some women when less protection is needed.

SUPER—IN THE BROWN BOX
Extra layers give extra protection, yet no longer or wider than Regular.

WONDERSOFT KOTEX A SANITARY NAPKIN made from Cellucotton (not cotton)

BATHROOM SANITATION
Begins here!

Let science take the place of scrubbing and scouring a toilet. Sani-Flush is made scientifically to clean closet bowls. It puts an end to all unpleasant labor. Just sprinkle a little in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Flush the toilet.

Spots and incrustations are carried away. The porcelain glistens—white as snow. Odors and germs are killed. Sani-Flush even purifies the hidden trap that no amount of scrubbing and rubbing can reach. Try Sani-Flush for new cleanliness in the toilet. New sanitation. It cannot injure plumbing. Sani-Flush is also effective for cleaning automobile radiators (directions on can). Sold by grocery, drug, hardware, and five-and-ten-cent stores—25 and 10 cent sizes.

The Hygienic Products Co., Canton, Ohio.

Sani-Flush

CLEANS TOILET BOWLS WITHOUT SCOURING

NEW EASY WAY 10¢ JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP

KEEP WIRES OFF FLOOR (LAMPS AND RADIO)

A neat job instantly. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords. 10c. At Kresge's

260 A BROAD CLOTH
98¢
14-44
BROWN OR COPEN.

LARKIN invites You!

HERE'S an invitation to be a Larkin Club Secretary. Just by introducing our new Edna May Dress Club you can earn charming frocks for yourself, as well as other big Rewards. Get our new Edna May Dress Folder just off the press! It brings you America's greatest dress bargains like the smart little street frock in this advertisement.

Mail a postcard to-day. Just say: 'Send me the Edna May Dress folder and Club information."

Larkin Co Inc
664 Seneca St., Buffalo, N. Y.

along with his Latin verbs, to beware of aggressive, talkative women. And what a relief Mae must have been after those bevies of dashing young things, all cut out of the same mold. Slim as bronze statues, and twice as hard.

Compared to them Mae is a retiring, demure, lady-like soul—imagine that!

Paul and Mae became good friends. Through this friendship he learned to know many of the unsuspected facets to Mae's nature. For example—that she's so soft-hearted, it's impossible for her to put her foot down on the continued and tiresome demands of hangers-on, who have been taking advantage of her good nature for years. If she's given her friendship and her help, she never lets a person down. No matter how much a drag that person has become upon her.

Shrewd as she is in business—and they don't make the female of the species any shrewder or more successful—she's a babe in arms when it comes to coping with those parasites who cling with a desperate grip to the lapels or skirts of successful celebrities. She hasn't the heart to say "No."

The oft-repeated story about her seriousness, her complete absorption in her work, is quite true. She seldom goes out at night, except to the fights at which she's a regular attendant. And that isn't due to any desire to keep up a good publicity yarn. Mae doesn't care whether you do or don't believe that her private life is as uneventful as that of an old-maid teacher in a girl's finishing school. She doesn't gallivant about because it usually bores her.

During all the time of their work together on the set Mae went to dinner with Paul Cavanagh only once. And he admits he asked her nearly every other day. And he'll never stop ranting at Fate which put an unbreakable engagement in the way of his going to the fights with Mae on that one precious evening when she did him the rare honor of asking him to be her escort. Because an invitation from the real Mae West is as rare as a "come-hither" from Garbo!

Well—there's no doubt about it, knowing Mae West is an education in itself. You always learn something new, interesting and contradictory about her.

Miracle in Hollywood Bowl

(Continued from page 59)

fixed her eyes upon me with serious resolution, "I doubt if I should try again. Not that it would take more courage than I could give to it, for it would really take more courage to just quit. I simply feel, quite honestly, that there is just as much happiness to be had outside of Hollywood. Perhaps more. I've been trained to appreciate many things; books, travel, music. Motion pictures could never make up the greatest part of my life under any conditions. I just shouldn't be interested in struggling, starving, searching for a chance to perform in front of a camera.

"It might take only a year to get another break such as Max Reinhardt gave me. It might take years. Even then the immediate future would be problematical. It's too big a gamble to take with youth you can never get back. Being a success as a human being is still more important than being a success as an actress. There's more scope. More latitude. One needs always to be bigger than the thing one wants to be."

THAT was a year ago, an eternity in the rapidly shifting hour-glass of Hollywood. Today, Olivia de Havilland need speculate no longer about her future in the motion picture industry. The Rubicon is crossed, and lies behind with all the doubts of yesterday. On the threshold of stardom, she knows definitely now that for at least the next few years she must mold her life to fit the demands and standards of a career which grows increasingly important.

I was curious to revive the discussion of careers and personal ambition of our last meeting; to check the change of mental attitude, which swift success may have brought. Fame which comes so quickly wrecks the weak, the headstrong and the egotistical. The intelligent and strong readjust themselves to the new life with clear-eyed perception. But unfortunately they are rarely geniuses.

From our introduction I suspected Olivia of more intelligence than genius. It made it easy to believe her resolution about willingly giving Hollywood back to the Chamber of Commerce if she didn't click with her first picture. Enthusiastic public response has now made her a cinema citizen; otherwise she might be back home now, in the little town of Saratoga in Northern California, playing Shakespearean heroines in the community's Little Theatre, as she did before her appearance in Hollywood Bowl.

"It wouldn't be easy to run away from Hollywood now," she admitted from the sidelines of one of the huge "Anthony Adverse" sets. "A taste of fame gives one an Oliver Twist appetite, a greedy desire for more."

"Then your viewpoint of Hollywood has changed?" I asked.

"Naturally," she admitted. "The higher one climbs the more different things look below. The viewpoint changes, not necessarily the person. I haven't changed, really. It makes me angry for people to think that I have, simply because I'm looking down instead of up."

"Do people think so?" I wanted to know.

"Yes, they do. Old friends back in Saratoga, and even in Hollywood, who have known me for years, and always called me 'Livvy' or just plain 'de Havilland,' (that's what I like being called), now write fan letters and address me as Miss de Havilland. It's the formality that stifles me. I'm exactly the same person I was in Saratoga when I played Hermia there with a group of non-professionals. Personally, I don't enjoy living on a pedestal. It becomes only Garbo.

"Being a celebrity is no fun if one can't share good fortune with old friends. There's that old devil Sacrifice you were warning me about. I guess the idea is, when you gain something, you must give up something in return. The question is —what to give up?"

"Love, for instance?" I prompted.

"Nonsense," she protested. "Read the columnists. They'll tell you in print every day that romance flourishes in Hollywood with all the abundancy of weeds. I feel love and romance can be great stimulants for a career," she spoke with intensity. "They oil the emotions and excite the imagination. They create an acting machine. But marriage is something else again."

From one who looks the ingenue so much as Olivia such a statement is noth-

Margaret Sullavan was very annoyed that Scotty snapped Henry Fonda and her at the "Rose Marie" preview. But since when isn't it news to be seen publicly with an ex-husband, especially the current spouse not being along?

---

ing short of astonishing.

"You mean you don't believe in the sacred institution of marriage!"

"Not unless it is going to be kept sacred," she answered. "I'm just old-fashioned enough to believe marriage in itself is a career. For me the two wouldn't mix. But there is an exception to every rule," her tone became reassuring. "Hollywood has many happy unions. Particularly where husband and wife belong to the same profession. I don't profess to be an authority on love and marriage, because in the first place I've never been seriously in love, and in the second place I've never been married. However, I do have a pretty good conception of every girl's dream of a beautiful and idyllic mating with the man she loves.

"If the girl is honest," Olivia continued in her fervent way, "she'll tell you it means having a home of her own and children, and the protection of someone she can look up to and idealize. It doesn't include long separations on studio location trips, constant exposure to public censure in the public prints, earning a salary larger than her husband's with demoralizing results.

"What good is a husband on the other side of the continent whom you visit once a year? What point is there in acquiring a married name only to have the columnists continually trying to take it away from you? Of what use is an independent income gained through earning an enormous salary if it is going to defeat your eventual happiness?. You can't take the real romance out of life. The world wants that kind of romance. They pay to go and see it on the screen. There's a whole lifetime to reap the happinesses a family can give one. An average career in Hollywood is only good for five years at the most."

Rarely has a screen celebrity retired willingly in the midst of fame. Dorothy Jordan and Dolores Costello stand out as two exceptions. Dorothy gave up a lucrative contract to marry Meriam Cooper. The angel-faced Dolores forsook one of the brightest spots on the Hollywood Glory Road for the name of Mrs. John

As swift as light—

The Magic of the

LINIT BEAUTY BATH

Modern life demands much of women—in business, in the home, the club—and in social duties that are a part of her daily life. To meet every occasion, with a consciousness of looking her best, the smart woman tirelessly strives to cultivate every feminine charm. Today, one of the outstanding essentials of charm is a soft, smooth skin.

For many years, fastidious women have relied on the Linit Beauty Bath to give their skin the feel of rare velvet.

To those who have not tried the Linit Beauty Bath, why not do this today: Dissolve some Linit in the tub while the water is running. Bathe as usual and, after drying, feel your skin. It will be delightfully soft and smooth. And the Linit bath does away with the damp or semi-dry feeling of the skin that usually follows an ordinary bath.

Make it a habit to use Linit in your tub water and join the thousands of America's loveliest women who daily enjoy its refreshing luxury.

The Bathway to a Soft, Smooth Skin

LINIT IS SOLD BY ALL GROCERS

for Fine Laundering

● Don't overlook the directions on the Linit package—recommending Linit for starching. Linit makes even ordinary cotton fabrics look and feel like linen.

LINIT
FOR THE BATH
LINIT FOR THE BATH

Barrymore. Only now that marriage has left her a disillusioned divorcée, is she returning to the screen. So it isn't at all unlikely that Olivia de Havilland will disappear from public life as suddenly as she came, when and if she finds the man she wants to marry.

"If the time should ever come that I shall want to retire from professional life, there is one performance I should love to play before the farewell," she ventured mentally into the future. "It is a part I've played twice—Hermia. Yes, I'd love to play Hermia again in Hollywood Bowl for a last performance. You see," she explained, "I not only believe in perfect marriages, I believe in perfect circles as well. I should like it to end just as it started."

So Olivia de Havilland isn't satisfied with just a miracle in Hollywood Bowl. She wants a super-miracle!

Jean Harlow Is Jealous of You

(Continued from page 35)

She likes to feel that she can do what she likes without the magnifying-glass eye of the Press distorting the simplest act. She enjoys flopping around in a pair of old slacks. She likes to tie a ribbon 'round her hair and forget it. She is letting her famous blonde hair go back to natural primarily because it is too much of a darned nuisance to "keep it up." She would prefer never to see the inside of a beauty parlor again. She likes picnics, camping and window shopping.

We were talking in Jean's beautiful, chiffon-draped dressing-room. She was waiting, on tip-toe as usual, to be called back to the set of "Wife versus Secretary"—she being the secretary and Myrna Loy the wife of Clark Gable in the picture of that name.

She was talking not only to me, but also on the telephone to the publicity office and trying, patiently, to put Nosy to sleep on one of her evening gowns, dropped on the floor for bedding purposes. Nosy is a very infantile dachshund given to her at Christmas by Walter Wanger. Jean brings him to the studio with her every day, feeds him, gives him his naps, all by hand, so to speak.

SHE wore dove gray with a white organdie collar and her new, soft brown hair framed a face which is very solemn when she is talking about serious matters.

"It always sounds so silly," Jean said, rising in despair and rocking the recalcitrant pup in her arms (he's no fool, that Nosy!), "for me to be yelling about being jealous of other girls. They probably say, 'Oh, yeah?'—and don't believe a word of it. They doubtless figure, skeptically, that, 'It makes a good story but she can't fool us!' For, of course, I do seem to have everything. And in a way, I have. I'm happier right now than I've been in a long, long time. And I've got good reasons to be—I know it—I'm not quarreling with my luck.

"But the funny part of it is, it's so. I envy other girls for the things I haven't got. And the things that they envy me for are things that, being me, I don't want!

"You see, there are a few elements in life which are precious to everyone, vitally so. Time is one of them, privacy is another and self-preservation is a third. And I mean self-preservation, not the preservation of the star personality. Like an unjaded interest in the small delightful details of living. A rest from responsibility now and again with the ability to finish a job and be done with it for a time. These elements are as necessary to the spirit of any man or woman as are water and food to the body. Without them we may perish.

"Now, let's see—take clothes, for instance. I'm really envious of the girl who can get a kick out of a new dress, because I can't. I can imagine how other girls sigh when they see me on the screen, decked out to the nines in clinging gowns, opulent furs and all the fixin's. But why envy anyone something they don't enjoy? Most of the things I wear on the screen aren't mine anyway. They are screen clothes and the property of the studio. They are designed by Adrian, not for Jean Harlow, but for the character she is playing at the time. My own wardrobe would make the average girl laugh. I have fewer gowns and accessories than most of the women I know, who are merely social. The real reason being that I've lost all interest in clothes—they've become part of the day's work. I have too much of them, too many sketches to okay, too many fittings to endure. When I'm not working on the set, I want to get as far away from clothes and the thought of them as I possibly can. The very sight of a new dress to be tried on would turn my stomach!

"And yet, I can't really get as far away from them as I could wish. For, if I don't make an appearance, the postman or the grocer boy is apt to see me and soon the report will circulate that I am either dying of a broken heart and 'letting myself go,' or that I'm really not all I'm cracked up to be on the screen. See what I mean?

"I can't ever be myself (I often am, but I shouldn't be!). I can't develop myself. I like to think that I have certain latent abilities which it might be fun to do something about. Abilities and interests in no way connected with the 'star personality.' But I haven't time. I must spend all of my time developing the girls I play on the screen. No sooner am I through with one than I must begin to figure out the characterization of another. I can try to perfect the parts I play, but I can never perfect the person I am.

I DON'T know how many people know this, but apart from doctors and dentists, I think we of the screen are the only professionals in the world who keep half-hour engagement books. We not only keep them when we are working in the studio, but when we are working out of it. The actual work of this business, the time spent learning lines, the time spent on the sets is only a fraction of the whole. There would be nothing much to it if making pictures were all—but it isn't. It's all work—even when we play. For when I'm not in the studio, I'm having fittings for the next picture, photographs taken, giving interviews, conferences about the next production, dentist appointments and so on.

"I am always and unremittingly—Jean Harlow!

"When a doctor leaves his office to walk upon the streets, people do not pause and point to him, saying, 'There is Doctor So-and-So, hasn't he got a funny topcoat on?' Few people know who he is, he is just another man. When a secretary closes her desk and takes the subway home, her job is done and her life

That + + + something extra: fragrance!

You can have a Martini without an olive—but the olive adds something extra to your enjoyment.

There are many lotions for your hands—but Frostilla has something extra—fragrance! Its lovely scent is an extra touch of luxury and niceness—an irresistible addition to its unequalled soothing, smoothing qualities. Choose and use Frostilla; it has everything you seek in a hand lotion—plus fragrance!

35c, 50c and $1.00 sizes everywhere. Travel size at better ten-cent stores.

fragrant
FROSTILLA
Lotion

IF YOU HAVE GRAY HAIR
and DON'T LIKE a MESSY MIXTURE.... then write today for my
FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

As a Hair Color Specialist with forty years' European American experience, I am proud of my Color Imparter for Grayness. Use it like a hair tonic. Wonderfully GOOD for the scalp and dandruff; it can't leave stains. As you use it, the gray hair becomes a darker, more youthful color. I want to convince you by sending my free trial bottle and book telling All About Gray Hair. ARTHUR RHODES, Hair Color Expert, Dept. 3, LOWELL, MASS.

BE A NURSE
MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK
You can learn at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. Est. 37 years. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy tuition payments. Write us now.
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 234, 100 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 32 sample lesson pages.
Name
City State Age

Anna May Wong, just before sailing for China, with Cesar Romero at Basil Rathbone's recent party.

becomes her own.

"But I am still working wherever I am. If I go away for a vacation—well, my idea of a vacation would be to let down my hair, burn up my make-up box, wear slacks, go fishing or swimming, read a lot and relax. Where can I go and find that possible? I don't know.

"I can't, as a matter of fact, make the simplest move without appearing in the public prints. Here's a little inside stuff which illustrates what I mean: One evening we were working on "Riffraff" until almost nine o'clock. My director suggested that we have a bite to eat together before going home. Bill was out of town. 'Why not?' would have been the normal reply. But I knew that if we appeared together, the papers would have a Harlow holiday on the morrow. I went, of course. There was no reasonable reason, why not. But the point is that I had to give thought and worry to so perfectly insignificant a move. I had to figure out whether it would be better to dine in some slightly out of the way place or at the Trocadero, where we would be conspicuous. I finally decided, with pursed mouth and knitted brow, that the Troc' would be preferable. At least no one could say that we were trying to 'hide out.' We went to the Troc' and—the next day the papers carried the 'news' that 'all was over' between Bill and me; that I had been seen dining with my director, etc., etc., ETC. The absurdest part being that I mean no more to that director than you do, and you never have met him.

"Ye gods!" groaned Jean, squeezing Nosy until he became slightly noisy, "no wonder I'm jealous of girls who can be themselves. I hate to be forced into being calculating and artificial in everything

JOAN MARSH and EDDIE NUGENT as they appear in "DANCING FEET," a REPUBLIC PICTURE

FASCINATING EYES lead the way to LOVE and ROMANCE

THEIR EYES MET . . . he saw . . . she conquered. It's the romantic story of another girl who learned the importance of attractive, fascinating eyes.

You, too, can have that fascinating loveliness that leads the way to romance. Bring out the natural beauty and charm of your eyes with a touch of WINX Mascara. It works wonders. Your lashes immediately appear longer, softer, and more lustrous . . . your eyes sparkle . . . your whole appearance radiates life and beauty.

Once you try WINX you readily understand why so many smart, well-groomed women use WINX regularly for both daytime and evening make-up. You will like the way its emollient oils keep your lashes luxuriantly soft at all times.

WINX Mascara is offered in three colors—black, brown and blue—and in three convenient forms—the new Creamy WINX (which is gaining in popularity every day), and the old favorites, Cake WINX and Liquid WINX. All are harmless, smudge-proof, water-proof, non-smarting, and easy to apply.

Your local drug and department stores carry WINX Mascara in the economical large size. You can also obtain the complete line of WINX Eye Beautifiers in Introductory Sizes at all 10¢ stores.

WINX
Eye Beautifiers

CREAMY MASCARA
WINX
CREAMY MASCARA
EYE SHADOW
WINX
LIQUID MASCARA
EYEBROW PENCIL
CAKE MASCARA
WINX

I'M NOT AN EXPERT YET.
But I CAN MAKE Excellent Coffee the Drip-O-lator way

Drip-O-lator

Not even the very young home manager need marvel at the expert, just-right coffee making skill of the experienced hostess. With the genuine Drip-O-lator, any one can be an expert. Many smart new models are available at popular prices. But be sure you get the genuine with the name Drip-O-lator in the base.

THE ENTERPRISE ALUMINUM CO.
MASSILLON - - - - - OHIO

THE GENUINE DRIP-O-LATOR IS SOLD BY ALL LEADING CHAIN, DEPARTMENT & RETAIL STORES

Are you guilty of certain sins? If so, Madame Sylvia tells you how to atone for them in the May Modern Screen

APPROVED WAY TO TINT
GRAY HAIR
...and Look 10 Years Younger

Quickly and safely you can tint those streaks of gray to lustrous shades of blonde, brown or black. A small brush and BROWNATONE does it. Used and approved for over twenty-three years. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent purely vegetable. Cannot affect waving of hair. Economical and lasting—will not wash out. Imparts rich, beautiful color with amazing speed. Easy to prove by applying a little of this famous tint to a lock of your own hair. BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug or toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee.

U. S. GOVERNMENT JOBS!

START
$1260 to $2100 Year

MEN—WOMEN
New 40 hour Week Means Many City Postal Appointments
Mail Coupon today sure.

COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. G-323, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush to me without charge, (1) 32-page book with list of many U. S. Government Big Pay Jobs, (2) Tell me how to get one of these jobs.
Name..............................
Address..............................

Tune in, folks, and get the latest Modern Screen gossip every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening at 7:15 over Station WOR. Sam Taylor interviews your favorite stars and tips you off on the Hollywood lowdown. Pictured with Sam is Dennie Moore of the "Sylvia Scarlett" cast.

I do just because the most harmless moves in the world are ridiculously misconstrued.

ALL of the natural experiences become unnatural. Marriage is a bedroom farce played on a lighted stage, floodlighted. If I were to marry again, which is extremely unlikely for a very long while to come, I wouldn't dare to have a child. If I did and didn't have it photographed, for instance, people would hint that it was malformed or something. If I did have it photographed, I would be accused of cheap publicity via an infant in arms. When marriage and motherhood are forced into unnatural attitudes, it's time to do a little moaning, all of the advantages notwithstanding.

"Romance itself, that perfectly normal flowering of interest between a man and a woman since the world began, is distorted into shapes we don't recognize as us at all. Like Bill and I—we are reported engaged, not engaged, not married, secretly married, deeply in love, completely out of love—with the cards stacked differently every day. You girls, when you are interested in a boy, can take time out to find whether you really are suited, the one to the other. You can let your own hearts dictate to you. You really can be alone. You know, almost as well as I do, how much chance Bill and I have to be alone. I don't mean so far as other people being present is concerned, rather alone, so far as the insistent pressure of public curiosity is concerned. And after awhile, that public pressure becomes a tangible thing, a third party at every tête-à-tête, an intruder on every rendezvous. A thing which should be sacredly private becomes sensationally public.

"I'm jealous of you and your beaux . . . the privacy and the sweetness of it.

"I'm envious of the time you have to be attractive to the men you care about. I make a date. Ha! Maybe I can keep it. It's more likely that I can't. If I can, I have to rush like a mad thing. It takes me a good hour to scrub the make-up off my face, get out of costume and into street or dinner clothes. I've been making up all day. I can't take a very intense interest in how I look when the day is done. And that reminds me, Blanchie," said Jean suddenly, laughing and turning to her faithful and indispensable maid, "call my Old Man, will you (Bill Powell to us, girls) and tell him that we will go to the Troc' tonight, thanks. Well, anyway, when I have managed to get ready I am usually exhausted. And after all the effort, I don't dare to stay out for more than a couple of hours because the camera will register the time I got home the next day!

"All of you can be just young girls in love, having a good time, forgetting all else.

"But can I? Now, honestly. . . . ?

"And then," said Jean, "there's the responsibility. In ordinary jobs if something goes wrong, if you make a mistake or even lose your job, only a comparatively few people will be let down. You yourself, your family perhaps. But a star, if she fails in any particular either in her work or in her private life, lets down her studio—producers, directors, cameramen, sound men, publicity departments—the whole complex, highly expensive personnel. She also lets down her public. Millions of dollars are affected—and millions of people. A nightmare thought."

The telephone rang. Miss Harlow was wanted on the set, please. Blanchie hovered. Nosy tenderly was disposed among the laces of the gown on the floor. Jean seated herself at her dressing-table. Things were done to the Harlow hair and face. Jean made a face at her own reflection.

"Well, there you are," she said, "and it's true.

"If I could have remained just Harlean Carpenter, if I could have put on the Harlow personality like a mask while working and could take it off again when the day was done, that would be Heaven. But to be in the public eye all of the time—at home, awake, asleep, in love or out of it, married or single—well, don't be too jealous of me, you other girls, after all fun's fun, you know. . . ."

Read all about Shirley Temple, Bob Taylor, Grace Moore, Jeanette MacDonald and many other picture personalities in the May issue of Modern Screen interests. There are the usual beautiful girls, plus some swell songs by Ethel Merman, a couple of stand-out vaudeville acts, and a well-gagged story. Most of the gags, as a matter of fact, bring memories of Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd, but Eddie and his associates must be admired for handling them so well that they appear as fresh and as funny as ever. The story has Eddie as a timid soul who becomes a man of action after studying a pamphlet which asks him point blank whether he's a man or a mouse. Around that theme are built several swell comedy sequences which include one of the best chases the screen has offered in several seasons. The cast includes Sally Eilers, William Frawley, Jack LaRue, Brian Donlevy, Rita Rio and Parkyakarkus.

Reviews—A Tour of Today's Talkies

(Continued from page 12)

Preview Postscripts

Being funny twenty-four hours a day leaves you feeling anything but, according to Eddie Cantor. In addition to starring in this giggle-getter, Eddie wrote a large part of the script and thought up most of the laughs. He worked on all the main characterizations, assisted Director Taurog and helped in the choice of the Goldwyn Gals. Between times, on the set and in the cold gray hours of the dawn, Eddie works on radio laughs for himself and Parkyakarkus. Then there's the Cantor radio agency, and the contracts for stories and a book soon to come out. Between these times, Eddie writes songs, rehearses with his radio cast and orchestra several days each week, dress rehearsals every Sunday and puts two programs on the air that night. Where he got the reputation of being a family man we wouldn't be knowing . . . Samuel Goldwyn sinks more of his millions into a Cantor picture than any other venture. This one is rumored to have set Samuel back over a million and a half. The "Club Lido" set alone cost in the neighborhood of $12,000. Some 500 yards of gossamer silk was bought from a Japanese firm for the backdrops, and thousands of metal stars, encrusted with brilliants were hung from the flies. The mirror-like club floor was made entirely of glass blocks, backed with ebony. A battery of over a hundred and fifty great arc lights lit the scene . . . Parkyakarkus was born Harry Einstein, later simplified to Parke, then to its present form. He went on the air several years ago, having tired of being a Boston news sleuth. Parke, etc., lays all his success to his mastery of the Greek dialect and his meeting Eddie Cantor . . . Gratitude is far from a scarce item in Hollywood. Sally Eilers thanks Mack Sennett for her success. Lunching with her pal, Carole Lombard, one day at the studio commissary, Sally was spotted by Mack and given a screen test. Mack Sennett comedy roles followed, then bigger and better chances. Movie Producer Harry Joe Brown is Sally's husband, and Harry Joe Brown, Jr., her son . . . Scouting for the Goldwyn Girls begins each summer, when Mr. G. begins lining up material for the annual Cantor epic. Special representatives are sent to cover night clubs, revues, shows, etc. Screen tests are personally supervised by the High Mogul, then twenty girls selected from the thousands of prospectives.

Bette Davis and Leslie Howard in "The Petrified Forest."

★★★★ Captain Blood

(Warners)

Tops for excitement in the screen parade is Sabatini's blood-and-thunder account of Doctor Peter Blood, who broke away from slavery to become the terror of the seas. Captain Blood may not possess all the epic

Spreads farther—

Clings loyally for hours!

DOES NOT CLOG THE PORES!

This smart new face powder, prepared by skin scientists, covers shine and imperfections perfectly. Spreads farther.* Does not clog the pores!

Smooth a pinch of Woodbury's on your arm. Do the same with the powder you now use. Woodbury's spreads so far and evenly, because it stays on the skin's surface. Does not disappear into the pores—hence will not clog them.

Six flattering skin-bloom shades. $1.00, 50c, 25c, 10c.

*Determined by Gar-Baker Laboratories, Inc., New York

★ This Test will convince You!

Woodbury's
facial powder

Free!

SIX SKIN-BLOOM SHADES

(Enough for a Week's Trial)

John H. Woodbury, Inc., 9164 Alfred Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. (In Canada) John H. Woodbury, Ltd., Perth, Ontario.

(Paste on postcard or mail in envelope NOW)

*Name*____________________

*Street*____________________

*City*__________ *State*__________

© 1936, John H. Woodbury, Inc.

Love told to the fingertips groomed Nails
10c

Lovely hands and dainty, well groomed finger nails are difficult to resist . . . and it's so easy to keep them just that way. Use Wigder Manicure Aids. Wigder Nail Files are specially Triple Cut with even, fast-cutting teeth for smooth and fast-filing so as not to jar the nails. The Improved Cleaner Point, a Wigder feature, conforms to the finger nails and enables you to clean easily and quickly. Wigder Cuticle Shaper and Cleaner and Cuticle Scissors have equally-good features. On sale at all drug and 5 and 10 cent stores.

Wigder—quality costs no more
NEWARK NEW JERSEY
NAIL FILES • TWEEZERS • NAIL CLIPS • SCISSORS

Be a Hotel Hostess

Enjoy Your Work! Good positions in hotels for women as Hostess, Housekeeper, Manager, etc. Train at home, in leisure time. One Lewis student writes: "Business Manager and Hostess in Fraternity House. Have attractive suite in addition to salary, thanks to Lewis Training." Write for Free Book.

LEWIS HOTEL TRAINING SCHOOLS, Sta. MD-8101, Washington, D.C.

Girls! GET THIS Free Art test

If you like to draw, test your sense of design, color, proportion, etc., with our Art Ability Test. Get a frank opinion, free, as to whether your talent is worth developing.

